what to buy next: World out of Time Volume II: Henry Kaiser and David Lindley in Madagascar ♪♪♪♪ (Shanachie, 1993, prod. Birger Gesthuisen, Henry Kaiser) offers more cross-cultural tomfoolery. Mr. Dave ♪♪♪½ (WEA International, 1985, prod. David Lindley, Greg Ladanyi, Danny Kortchmar) is only slightly less fun than his other solo records.

what to avoid: Steer clear of Lindley's early trippy albums with the late '60s psychedelic folk group Kaleidoscope; they have all the direction of a bad acid trip.

the rest:

The Sweet Sunny North: Henry Kaiser and David Lindley in Norway ♪♪♪½ (Shanachie, 1994) worth searching for: David Lindley and Hani Naser Live in Tokyo Playing Real Good ♪♪♪♪½ and David Lindley and Hani Naser Live All over the Place Playing Even Better!! Official Bootleg ♪♪♪♪, both self-produced with no official imprint, are available only at the duo's live shows.

influences:

- Clifton Chenier, Gabby Pahinui, Pioneers, Yellow Magic Orchestra, Ry Cooder, Duane Eddy, Ventures, Fendermen, James Burton, Huey "Piano" Smith, King Curtis, Sam the Sham and the Pharoahs

» Black Crowes, Bottle Rockets, Hooters, Chris Whitley

Leland Rucker

Mance Lipscomb

Born April 9, 1895, in Navasota, TX. Died January 30, 1976, in Navasota.

When researchers Chris Strachwitz and Mack McCormick came upon Mance Lipscomb in 1960, they found a man who had spent most of his life as a sharecropper, working a plot of land in Brazos County, Texas. But they heard much more when he picked up a guitar and began to sing; Strachwitz began Arhoolie Records around recording the then-65-year-old farmer and laborer. They knew they had something special. Lipscomb was hardly another blues musician—the closest anyone has come to describing his work is as a "songster." His somewhat limited guitar skills and commanding voice interpreted a repertoire that was a virtual catalog of early twentieth-century Americana: children's ditties, country blues, reels, folk ballads, chanteys, poems, popular tunes of the day, gospel tunes, and spirituals. For Lipscomb, anything was fair game, and his material and performances have an earthiness and simple humanity that comes only from someone who worked as hard as Lipscomb had. Fortunately, there are plenty of records and films that capture Lipscomb's particular and unique skills.

what to buy: Recorded in 1960 and 1964, Texas Songster ♪♪♪♪♪ (Arhoolie, 1993, prod. Chris Strachwitz) captures the essence of Lipscomb in his early recordings, including "Sugar Babe," "Jack O' Diamonds," "Baby Please Don't Go," "Mama Don't Allow," "Bout a Spoonful," and "Motherless Children." Songs about life. Recorded in Berkley, California live in 1964, Texas Songster Volume II: You Got to Reap What You Sow ♪♪♪♪♪ (Arhoolie, 1964, 1993, prod. Chris Strachwitz) includes "Charlie James," "Cocaine Done Killed My Baby," "Joe Turner Killed a Man," and "The Titantic" and the marvelous stories he wove around them.

what to buy next: You can't go wrong with any Arhoolie Lipscomb album, but Texas Blues Guitar ♪♪♪♪½ (Arhoolie, 1994, prod. Chris Strachwitz) is another down-to-earth delight.

best of the rest:

Texas Songster Volume II ♪♪♪♪ (Arhoolie, 1994)
Texas Songster Volume III ♪♪♪½ (Arhoolie, 1994)
Texas Songster Volume IV ♪♪♪♪ (Arhoolie, 1994)
Texas Songster Volume V ♪♪♪ (Arhoolie, 1994)
Texas Songster Volume VI ♪♪♪♪ (Arhoolie, 1994)
Mama Don't Allow ♪♪♪ (Magnum America, 1996)

- Blind Lemon Jefferson, Memphis Minnie

» Bob Dylan, Grateful Dead, Janis Joplin

Leland Rucker

A.L. Lloyd

Born February 29, 1908, in London, England. Died in 1982.

Albert Lancaster Lloyd was born into a working-class London family. By the time he was 15, most of his family had died of tuberculosis and he was unable to find work. He therefore arranged to ship to Australia to work on sheep stations. It was during his nine years in Australia that Lloyd first became interested in traditional songs. He began to sing, and he kept the words of the songs he knew in composition books; unfortunately, he lost the books, which would have been an invaluable document of Australian song in the 1920s. During these years, Lloyd also began a program of self-education that would last the rest of his life; he discovered a system whereby bush workers could borrow library books by mail, and devoured as many as he could. When he returned to England in the early 1930s, he was a budding intellectual and a confirmed Marxist. He had several jobs, but he also spent part of the 1930s unemployed. Rather than remain idle, he visited the British Museum reading room where he began to study folk music seriously. Finally, his financial situation became so bad that he signed onto the factory ship Southern Empress, and spent a season as a whaler. As always, he took the opportunity to learn whatever songs he could, and he later traced some of his seafaring songs to his season at sea. Upon returning to land, Lloyd had the idea of writing a radio documentary about sailors' lives. The piece, which made Lloyd's Marxist beliefs obvious, was well received. He followed it with several more radio programs for the BBC, including their first folk-song field recordings, but was ultimately let go because of his communist beliefs; ironically, it was an anti-Hitler documentary, broadcast in 1938, that probably did him in. After leaving the BBC, he was employed as a journalist for a number of years, but by 1950, the Cold War had made self-avowed communists into pariahs in the journalism trade. Lloyd decided to become a freelance folklorist.

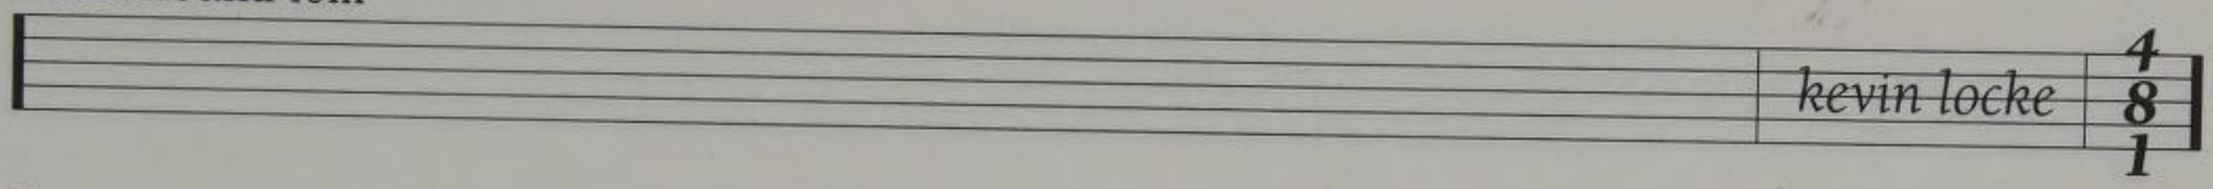
Lloyd's activities in the 1950s were diverse, but always came back to folk songs. He became one of the editors of the Folk Music Journal, joined the English Folk Dance and Song Society, and founded a band called the Ramblers with Ewan MacColl and Alan Lomax. He compiled a book of coal-mining songs, founded folk clubs, collaborated with singer/activist MacColl on recording and performing projects, and generally established himself as Britain's leading expert on folk songs. He appeared in John Huston's 1956 film Moby Dick, playing the part of the ship's singer or shantyman. Most importantly, he was appointed artistic director of Topic Records, a record company dedicated to folklore and to Marxist causes. Although he had already recorded for many labels in Britain and Australia, most of Lloyd's recording projects from that time on would be for Topic. During the 1960s and 1970s, politics were less of a problem for him, and his status as an authority on folk music made him once again desirable to the BBC. He continued making radio documentaries on folk music, and later made the transition to television. At the same time he was in demand as a scholar. He toured many of the world's universities as a visiting lecturer, and wrote folk music articles for the Encyclopedia Britannica. He published his most important book, Folk Song in England, in 1967. During the folk boom, when many younger singers and groups began performing professionally, Lloyd became an elder statesman and teacher, providing advice, encouragement, and songs to all the important singers of the younger generation. More than anything else, that influence has been his legacy.

what to buy: Although he never considered himself a performer, Lloyd did leave behind many recordings. A few compilations have been released on CD. Classic A.L. Lloyd ♪♪♪♪½ (Fellside, 1994, prod. Paul Adams) was compiled from 11 records in the Topic catalog, as well as several unreleased tapes. It includes 24 songs that represent a cross-section of Lloyd's recorded work. From Lloyd's several albums of Australian songs, the compilation includes "The Cockies of Bungaree" and "Flash Jack from Gundagai," the latter of which features the well-known Fairport Convention/Fotheringay/Redgum singer Trevor Lucas playing the concertina. From Lloyd's forays into maritime songs, Classic A.L. Lloyd features several fine sea shanties and foc'sle songs. The rest of the songs on Classic A.L. Lloyd were selected from some of his general albums of English folk songs. It is here that his influence on the folk revival is most apparent. If you want to hear versions of "The Weaver and the Factory Maid," "John Barleycorn," "Skewball," "Jack Orion," "Byker Hill," "The Widow of Westmoreland's Daughter," "Two Magicians," and "Reynardine" that are curiously reminiscent of those recorded by such groups as Steeleye Span and Fairport Convention, this is the place. It's particularly interesting to hear Dave Swarbrick's fiddle accompanying Lloyd on "Jack Orion," a song that Swarbrick would later sing and play with Fairport Convention. For the most part, though, it's simply enjoyable to hear Lloyd's voice, once described as "unmistakably creaky," interpreting a slew of magnificent songs. Although Lloyd was not gifted with a strong, clear voice, he had an unaffected, often tender style of singing that makes each song delightful, each ballad an instance of masterful storytelling. Lloyd's voice is accompanied on some tracks by Swarbrick on fiddle, Alf Edwards on concertina, Steve Benbow on guitar, and several other musicians and singers. The recording quality is inconsistent, due to the different sources used, but the singer and the songs are uniformly excellent.

what to buy next: The Bird in the Bush ♪♪♪♪½ (Topic, 1996, prod. Tony Engle) is a reissue of a 1966 compilation LP that focused on the theme of "erotic songs." The performers on the original

a.l. lloyd

LP included Lloyd, Anne Briggs, and Frankie Armstrong; the CD reissue contains several cuts by Armstrong that were not on the original LP as well as material from Louis Killen and Norman Kennedy. First and foremost, this is an excellent recording of brilliant singers and great songs. Armstrong and Briggs were two of the revival's most sublime voices and their contributions are outstanding. In particular, Armstrong's rendition of the title song is a masterful performance of a rarely heard song with a haunting and unusual tune, and Briggs's version of the comic song "The Stonecutter Boy" is a gentle tale of seduction sung to a richly ornamented tune. Killen sings three songs, including a beautiful version of "The Cock" and a lively jocular piece called "One May Morning." Kennedy's one song is the well-known Scottish "Night Visiting Song" that begins, "I must away, love, I can no longer tarry." Almost half of the songs are sung by Lloyd. On some tracks he is accompanied by Swarbrick on fiddle and Alf Edwards on concertina, but several are unaccompanied. Due to his influence on a whole generation of English singers, many of Lloyd's versions were featured on well-known albums by other singers; his "Widow of Westmoreland's Daughter" and "Bonny Black Hare," both featured on this disc, made it into Fairport Convention's repertoire via Swarbrick. Listening to Lloyd will therefore be interesting to anyone with an interest in the English folksong revival. The intellectual impetus for the recording also came from Lloyd, and he edited the original album. In the liner notes, he disguises his personal preferences as academic judgments, justifying his own choice of tender, loving erotic songs over bawdy or sexually explicit material by the principle that "downright pornographic song with its proliferation of gross sexual detail is very rare in folk tradition proper." His reasoning here is unsound, based first and foremost on a romantic idea of "the folk," as happy peasants busy communing with nature and with the delights and fruitfulness of their own bodies; in the notes to individual songs, he makes facile arguments connecting sexual lyrics to ancient fertility rituals. But despite the romantic liner notes (which he himself came to view as outdated and naive by the time he died), The Bird in the Bush remains a seminal album. English and Scottish Folk Ballads ♪♪♪♪ (Topic, 1996, prod. Tony Engle) is also a classic that deserved its CD release. Like The Bird in the Bush, this 1964 LP was beefed up with new tracks for its digital debut. The new version features many of the same performers as The Bird in the Bush, including Lloyd, Briggs, Killen, and Kennedy. In addition, it includes tracks by Mike Waterson and the great Ewan MacColl. The accompanists are also mostly the same as on Bird: Edwards on concertina and Swarbrick on fiddle, with the addition of Anne Briggs and Johnny Moynihan, who both play bouzouki on one track. The Scottish material, sung by MacColl and Kennedy, includes stories of warfare among clans ("The Baron o' Brackley" and "Hughie Graeme," both sung by MacColl) and bothy songs (Kennedy's "Drumdelgie"), as well as various broadside ballads and the great old song "Lord Randall," delivered superbly by MacColl. Once again, Lloyd's distinctive voice dominates the English material, providing a third of the CD's tracks. Among them is the classic "Jack Orion," which Lloyd re-wrote from the Child ballad "Glasgerion." Once again, this would later be performed, much as Lloyd wrote it, by Fairport Convention, the link again being Swarbrick, who accompanies Lloyd on the track. "The Bitter Withy," another of Lloyd's ballads, could potentially offend Christians (which was why it was left out of Child's canon of ballads); it's about the child Jesus causing serious mischief and getting punished with a serious spanking. More English ballad material is provided by Briggs ("Reynardine," "Willy O' Winsbury"), Waterson ("The Cruel Ship's Carpenter"), and Killen ("The Bramble Briar," "Young Edwin in the Lowlands"). The Old Bush Songs ♪♪♪♪ (Larrikin, 1994, prod. Warren Fahey) is a compilation of Lloyd's Australian songs and the only CD besides Classic A.L. Lloyd filled entirely with Lloyd's charmingly tentative singing. On it, Lloyd treats a variety of songs, from the quintessentially Australian "Waltzing Matilda," "Bold Jack Donahue," and "The Kelly Gang" to Australian versions of older British folk songs like "Rocking the Cradle" and "The Derby Ram." Accompanists vary; on some tracks Edwards's concertina and Swarbrick's fiddle are the main instruments, while others feature Peggy Seeger's guitar and Ralph Rinzler's mandolin. In general, the experienced and professional musicians who back Lloyd do a fine job of providing the mostly upbeat and light and environments in which his singing flourishes. Unfortunately, at 48 minutes, the CD is too short; it could easily have held five or six more songs. Lloyd did record a number of other fascinating and funny bush ballads, notably an outback version of "Seven Drunken Nights." For the sake of both interest and posterity, more of Lloyd's recordings could have been included. Blow Boys Blow ♪♪♪ (Tradition, 1996, prod. Patrick Clancy) is a reissue of an old LP of sea shanties recorded by Lloyd and MacColl. The dramatic interpretations of seafaring material provided are stirring, and backing is once again provided by Edwards, Rinzler, and other instrumentalists. The only drawback is the length; since this was a single LP now made available on CD, it clocks in at only 35 minutes. Still, it's priced low, so it's definitely worth the purchase. Interestingly, Frank Zappa once commented on how much he liked this album; unfortunately, he loaned it to Captain Beefheart, who never returned it!



influences:

Ernest Lloyd, Harry Cook, Phil Lumpkin

Sandy Denny, Dave Swarbrick, Trevor Lucas, Martyn Wyndham-Read, Warren Fahey, Martin Carthy, Maddy Prior, Roy Harris, Frankie Armstrong, Ashley Hutchings, John Kirkpatrick, Louis Killen, Anne Briggs, Watersons, Shirley Collins, Fairport Convention, Steeleye Span, Albion Band, New St. George

Stephen Winick

Kevin Locke

Born 1954, in SD.

Among Native American Indian artists, none is more acclaimed than Kevin Locke, a Lakota dancer and indigenous flute player. A member of the Standing Rock Sioux Nation (Hunkpapa Band of Lakotas) and resident of the sovereign Standing Rock Reservation in South Dakota, he spent his teen years with an elderly uncle whose first language was Lakota. It was from this uncle, Abraham End of Horn, that Kevin received his initial training in the traditions of his culture, though he is quick to point out that he learned much from many others in the community. Among those teachers are Arlo Good Bear, Ben Black Bear Sr., Charles Wise Spirit, William Horn Cloud, and Margaret One Bull. Locke's Lakota name is Tokeya Inajin, which means "The First to Arise." He holds a M.A. in educational administration from the University of South Dakota, where he was admitted to law school before realizing that music and dance are his destiny. Locke is an exquisite player of the indigenous cedarwood flute. Many older Lakota say he is even better than those they remember from long ago. He is certainly a musical hero and role model to many American Indian youth across all of North America, and younger players are frequently waiting backstage, eager to ask questions.

That a musician of his skills could also be a famous dancer may seem improbable, but it is so. Locke came to national attention first as a hoop dancer, a brilliant performer in another ancient and honorable Lakota tradition. In this amazingly complex and acrobatic dance, the dancer whirls within twirling hoops, explicating the native view of the world as hoops intersect and grow into ever more revealing designs that show the way of life. He was awarded a National Heritage fellowship by the National Endowment for the Arts in 1990. His performances draw from a rich repertoire of story, song, flute music, and dance. Prominent are his songs and stories of the eagle because of the qualities it possesses: nobility, loftiness, and serenity. In Locke's words, "These are qualities that each one of us has by our birthright. The power we have, on our wings, is much more powerful than that of the eagle. We have the wings of our minds and thoughts. We have the wings of our heart. As we exercise them, they will carry us upward. How often do we send our children into the world with only one wing? We must exercise our hearts as well. Young eagles must have two strong wings." Locke's performances conclude with the hoop dance that reflects his belief in the unity of humankind. Using 28 hoops to tell a story, he depicts such things as flowers, butterflies, stars, the sun, and an eagle. The hoops represent unity, while the four colors of the hoops—black, red, yellow, and white—represent the four directions, four seasons, four winds, and four complexions of people's skin. At the end of the dance all 28 hoops have been interlocked in a spherical shape as fragile as the balance Locke works toward in human affairs.

what to buy: Open Circle ♪♪♪♪ (Makoché Records, 1996) is Locke's latest release and is a fine introduction to the power in his performances.

what to buy next: Dream Catcher ♪♪♪ (EarthBeat!/Warner Bros, 1992) and Love Songs of the Lakota ♪♪♪ (Indian House, 1982/reissued on CD, 1995) are calming collections of natural sounds and flute songs of the Lakota, Dakota, and Meskwaki that portray his subtle artistry. Included in Love Songs are ancient and contemporary songs and laments, including a composition by famed Indian leader, Chief Sitting Bull, who was renowned within his tribe as an honored composer and singer.

the rest:

The Hash in the Mirror ♪♪ (Meyer Creative Productions/Makoché Productions, 1992)
The Flood ♪♪♪ (Parabola Books, 1993) (storybook & tape)
Wopile, the Giveaway ♪♪♪ (Yellow Moon Press, 1993) Keepers of the Dream ♪♪♪ (EarthBeat!/Warner Bros., 1994) worth searching for: Several of Locke's releases are either available on cassette only or are currently out of print entirely, including "make me a hollow reed..." ♪♪♪ (Kevin Locke/Meyer Creative Productions, 1990); Lakota Love Songs & Storks ♪♪♪ (Kevin Locke/Meyer Creative Productions, 1990); The Seventh Direction ♪♪♪ (Kevin Locke/Meyer Creative Productions, 1990); Lakota Wiikijo Olowan, Volume II ♪♪♪ (Featherstone Records, 1986); Journey to the Spirit World ♪♪♪ (Tatanka Records, 1983); and Lakota Wilkijo Olowan, Volume I ♪♪♪ (Featherstone Records, 1983). He has also appeared on Tribal Voices ♪♪♪ (EarthBeat!/Rhino, 1996), Lullaby ♪♪♪ (Music for Little People,

4/8/2 jack logan

bouzouki

Originally a Greek folk instrument belonging to the family of long-necked lutes, the bouzouki was introduced into Irish traditional music in the early 1970s by Johnny Moynihan, who was at the time with the band Sweeney's Men and later on a member of Planxty and De Danann. Now made by local instrument makers, the bouzouki and its relations, alternatively called octave mandolins, citterns, or (improperly) mandocellos, and typically strung with four or five courses, have since become the instrument of choice for accompanying traditional music throughout the British Isles, Ireland, and further afield. Early Irish exponents of the instrument who contributed to its success include De Danann's Alec Finn, who still plays a three-course, bowl-back Greek instrument, Andy Irvine, formerly with Sweeney's Men, Planxty, and now with Patrick Street, and Dónal Lunny, of Planxty and Bothy Band fame, who introduced the five-course blarge (i.e., "bouzouki large," covering the range of the mandocello and bouzouki) during the second Planxty period and the electric, solid-body bouzouki while a member of Moving Hearts. The instrument is generally tuned an octave below the mandolin (GDAE) or in related open tunings (GDAD, ADAD), and can be used to pick melodies or counter-melodies, strum chords, or play combinations of all of the above.

Philippe Varlet

1994), and Tribal Winds ♪♪♪ (EarthBeat!/Warner Bros., 1996), "various artists" compilations of possible interest.

influences:

◀◀ Richard Fool Bull, Arlo Good Bear, Ben Black Bear

Neal Walters

Jack Logan

Born February 8, 1959, in Greenville, MS.

Imagine that, as the '70s were winding down, Elvis Costello was an amateur songwriter/professional mechanic living in Georgia, and the Attractions were some backwater galoots who'd join him on the weekends to swill beer and cut songs on cheap recording gear. Imagine, too, that Costello was too self-deprecating to presume that anyone would actually want to hear the first 600 songs he'd recorded over the course of 14 years. And then someone came along and selected 42 of them for his two-disc introduction to the world. Substitute Jack Logan for Costello and the Liquor Cabinet (actually, a loose configuration that's abetted Logan since 1979) for the Attractions and you pretty much have the story behind Bulk, a 1994 underground magnum opus that inspired widespread acclaim in the pop press. Peter Jespersen, best known for his role in developing the Replacements, learned of Logan through Peter Buck of R.E.M. After seeing Athens, Georgia-based Logan perform, Jespersen asked him to send along some tapes. Following repeated requests, a package finally arrived containing three 90-minute cassettes full to the brim with rootsy, literate material Jesperson found absolutely dazzling. From those tapes, Logan's new patron culled Bulk, which quickly garnered critical hosannas that continued with his second release. When last heard from, however, Logan was holding on to his day job as a pool-equipment mechanic.

what's available: Bulk ♪♪♪♪ (Medium Cool-Twin/Tone, 1994, comp. prod. Peter Jesperson) is an expansive aberration from an artist who specializes in terse, finely detailed lyrics framed by basic bar-band rock. For point of reference, think the late American Music Club, whose Mark Eitzel is a vocal and visceral dead-ringer for Logan. Recorded in various settings using different supporting casts, the 42-song-strong Bulk is an unselfconscious snapshot of a crew of music-lovers at play. As such, it has a rare charm. The two-hour-plus Bulk is a tough album to top, and, indeed, Mood Elevator ♪♪♪ (Medium Cool/Restless, 1996, prod. Peter Jesperson, Kelly Keneipp) doesn't have the sweep of its predecessor. As with his earlier songs, Logan remains fixated with the little horrors that put souls to the test. "Ladies and Gentleman" is set in a crowd of people prepared for bad news; "What Was Burned" kicks through the ashes of a blazed home. Logan's foreboding side, which reared up in several Bulk songs, returns with "Estranged," where a jilted lover muses: "The very sound of her voice is a blow to my head/I don't want her alive, and I don't want her dead."

influences:

◀◀ Elvis Costello, Mark Eitzel, Eric Andersen

Steven Stolder

Loggins & Messina /Kenny Loggins

Formed 1972, in Los Angeles, CA. Disbanded 1976.

Kenny Loggins (born January 7, 1948, in Everett, WA), guitar, vocals; Jim Messina (born December 5, 1947, in Maywood, CA), guitar, bass, vocals.

Kenny Loggins, whose claim to fame at the time was the Nitty Gritty Dirt Band's recording of his "House at Pooh Corner," was fortunate to have Jim Messina produce his first solo album. The result, Sittin' In, was the first of what was to become a highly successful partnership. Messina's credentials include playing bass, assembling the material and producing Buffalo Springfield's final record, Last Time Around; he was also a founding member of Poco and remained for the group's first three superb albums. A fine technician with a great ear, Messina probably curtailed Loggins's penchant for overly sensitive mush. Together they spun out a long string of hits, including "Danny's Song," their own treatment of "House at Pooh Corner" and "Your Mama Don't Dance." On his own—following the duo's 1976 split-up—Loggins parlayed his personable image and talent into a successful, if creatively middling, solo career marked by excessively romantic songs, ultra-slick production, but also numerous hits, particularly soundtrack smashes such as "Footloose," "Nobody's Fool," and "Danger Zone."

what to buy: Loggins and Messina's debut, Sittin' In ♪♪♪♪½ (Columbia, 1972, prod. Jim Messina), is their best, most fully realized recording. Practically every song is a charmer, from the tight rockin' country-guitar accents on the opening track, "Nobody but You," to Loggins's sweet ballad, "Danny's Song." On Stage ♪♪♪♪ (Columbia, 1974) features an excellent backing band and a definitive, extended version of "Angry Eyes."

what to buy next: Loggins & Messina ♪♪♪ (Columbia, 1972), the duo's sophomore effort, has the tiresome single "Your Mama Don't Dance" but also the studio version of "Angry Eyes." Loggins's solo album Nightwatch ♪♪♪ (Columbia, 1978, prod. Bob James) includes the hit "Whenever I Call You Friend" (a duet with Stevie Nicks when she could still sing).

what to avoid: The duo's Native Sons woof! (Columbia, 1976) and So Fine ♪ (Columbia, 1975) suffer from severe lapses in songwriting originality. Loggins's Vox Humana woof! (Columbia, 1985) is so overblown that it leaves one speechless.

the rest:

Loggins & Messina:

Full Sail ♪♪½ (Columbia, 1973)
Mother Lode ♪♪♪ (Columbia, 1974)
Best of Friends ♪♪½ (Columbia, 1976)

Kenny Loggins:

Celebrate Me Home ♪♪♪ (Columbia, 1977)
Keep the Fire ♪♪½ (Columbia, 1979)
Alive ♪♪½ (Columbia, 1980)
High Adventure ♪♪½ (Columbia, 1982)
Back to Avalon ♪ (Columbia, 1988)
Leap of Faith ♪ (Columbia, 1991)
Outside: From the Redwoods ♪½ (Columbia, 1993) Return to Pooh Corner ♪♪♪½ (Columbia, 1994)
Yesterday, Today, Tomorrow: The Greatest Hits of Kenny Loggins ♪♪ (Columbia, 1997)
The Unimaginable Life ♪ (Columbia, 1997)

worth searching for: The 20 songs on the Japanese Loggins and Messina collection Star Box ♪♪♪½ (CBS/Sony, 1989) offer a better overview than the domestic Best of Friends.

solo outings:

Jim Messina:

Watching the River Run ♪♪♪ (River North, 1996)

influences:

◀◀ Simon & Garfunkel, Poco, Bread

▶▶ Captain & Tennille, Fleetwood Mac see also: Buffalo Springfield

Patrick McCarty

Lonesome River Band

Formed 1983, in VA.

Ronnie Bowman, bass, guitar, vocals (1990–present); Sammy Shelor, banjo, guitar, vocals (1990–92, 1993–present); Don Rigsby, mandolin, vocals (1996–present); Kenny Smith, guitar, vocals (1996–present); Tim Austin, guitar, vocals (1983–95); Dan Tyminski, mandolin, vocals (1988–92, 1993–94); Adam Steffey, mandolin (1983–88); Dale Perry, banjo, vocals, guitar (1983–89); Jerry McMillan, bass, vocals (1983–89).

The Lonesome River Band has had a revolving door bringing in and releasing some of the best talent in the world of '80s and '90s bluegrass, by the late 1990s ending up with a foursome considered one of the strongest instrumental and vocal bands playing. One of this band's main strengths is that they can blur the line between traditional and modern and leave you with a set of songs that are both powerful and exciting.

lonesome standard time

what to buy: With the release of One Step Forward ♪♪♪♪♪ (Sugar Hill, 1996, prod. Lonesome River Band) the Lonesome River Band, once again with a new lineup, had really settled into being one of the most hard driving and powerful vocal and instrumental bluegrass bands of the '90s. Combine IBMA award-winning Sammy Shelor on banjo with two top-notch vocalists (Ronnie Bowman and Don Rigsby) and you have one of the most exciting bands in modern bluegrass today.

what to buy next: Old Country Town ♪♪♪♪ (Sugar Hill, 1994, prod. Lonesome River Band) was the last album to include Tim Austin and Dan Tyminski. Carrying the Tradition ♪♪♪♪ (Rebel, 1991, prod. Lonesome River Band) was recorded right about the time when the Lonesome River Band made the jump from being a good bluegrass band to becoming one of the best bluegrass outfits around.

the rest:
Looking for Yourself ♪♪♪ (Rebel, 1989)
Lonesome River Band ♪♪♪ (Rebel) (cassette only)

solo outings:
Ronnie Bowman:
Cold Virginia Night ♪♪♪½ (Rebel, 1994, prod. Lonesome River Band, Ronnie Bowman)

Sammy Shelor:
Leading Roll ♪♪♪♪ (Sugar Hill, 1997, prod. Sammy Shelor)

Kenny Smith:
Studebaker ♪♪♪♪ (Sugar Hill, 1997, prod. Kenny Smith)

Don Rigsby:
A Vision ♪♪♪♪½ (Sugar Hill, 1998, prod. Don Rigsby)

influences:

◀◀ Stanley Brothers, Earl Scruggs, J.D. Crowe & the New South

▶▶ Alison Krauss & Union Station

Steve Gardner

Lonesome Standard Time /Larry Cordle

Formed 1990, in Nashville, TN.

Larry Cordle (born November 16, 1949, in Cordell, KY), guitar, lead vocals; Glen Duncan, fiddle, guitar, vocals; Butch Baldassari, mandolin; Wayne Southards, bass, vocals (1991–92); Billy Rose, bass, vocals (1993–94); Robin Smith, bass (1994–95); Mike Bub, banjo, bass (1991–92); Larry Perkins, banjo (1993–94); Keith Little, banjo, guitar, vocals (1994–95).

Formed by songwriter Larry Cordle and ace fiddler Glen Duncan (who's worked with most of the top country and bluegrass acts), Lonesome Standard Time was one of the bluegrass success stories of the early '90s. Cordle's mountain-inflected lead singing and Duncan's strong tenor harmonies give the band a potent vocal sound, most often put to the service of Cordle's distinctive original songs. With a stage presentation and musical ethos reminiscent of 1950s-era Flatt and Scruggs, LST has played many of the major festivals and venues, recorded a trio of well-received albums, and has had a few singles reach the top ranks of the bluegrass charts. By 1996, however, the band had scaled back its personal appearances and has since been largely inactive. In addition to his work with Lonesome Standard Time, Cordle has been a successful Nashville songwriter since the early 1980s, when boyhood friend Ricky Skaggs had a Number One country hit with Cordle's "Highway 40 Blues." A CPA in east Kentucky until he became a full-time songwriter, Cordle has had songs recorded by such artists as Garth Brooks, Trisha Yearwood, George Strait, Reba McEntire, Alison Krauss, Kathy Mattea, and John Anderson. He also shared the International Bluegrass Music Association's 1993 Song of the Year award with co-writer Jim Rushing for their song "Lonesome Standard Time."

what to buy: Larry Cordle, Glen Duncan & Lonesome Standard Time ♪♪♪½ (Sugar Hill, 1992, prod. Glen Duncan, Larry Cordle) introduced the band and got a ton of radio airplay, thanks to "Lonesome Standard Time," "Lower on the Hog," and "Kentucky King," the last a tribute to Bill Monroe that featured the bluegrass patriarch guesting on mandolin. Mighty Lonesome ♪♪♪ (Sugar Hill, 1993, prod. Lonesome Standard Time), which includes the top bluegrass hit "The Bigger the Fool (The Harder the Fall)," showcased some of Cordle's more poignant songs, notably "The Tracks We Leave" and "Kentucky Thunder." Covers of tunes by Flatt and Scruggs and the Stanley Brothers honor the band's roots. Lonesome As It Gets ♪♪♪ (Sugar Hill, 1995, prod. Glen Duncan, Larry Cordle) is sparked by a pair of Duncan-penned instrumentals, "Duncan's Blues" and "Blue Field," a handful of Cordle originals, and covers of Jimmie Rodgers and John Prine classics.

what to buy next: Mandolinist Butch Baldassari has recorded at least three solo albums, including a Christmas collection; the most easily located is probably the all-instrumental Old Town ♪♪♪ (Rebel, 1990, prod. Butch Baldassari). Multi-instrumentalist Larry Perkins recorded the star-studded A Touch of the Past ♪♪♪ (Pinecastle, 1993, prod. Butch Baldassari, Larry Perkins), which pays tribute to such musical idols as Uncle Dave Macon and Mississippi John Hurt.

influences:

Flatt & Scruggs, Bill Monroe

Wyatt Rice & Santa Cruz, Blue Highway

Jon Hartley Fox

Larry Long

Born 1951, in Des Moines, IA.

A self-professed "father, educator and troubadour," Larry Long sings of clean air, fair prices, workers rights, and the struggle of Native Americans. Although Woody Guthrie provided an early inspiration, Long has taken the folk process a step further and is currently involved with writing and performing songs honoring what he calls "the unsung heroes of America." The son of a coffee salesman who died when Larry was 13, Long was raised by his mother and two sisters. Although initially influenced by the rock and folk-rock of the Beatles and Bob Dylan, he became increasingly absorbed with the songs and social consciousness of Guthrie and Pete Seeger. As a student at St. Cloud State College, Long joined student protests against the Vietnam War and marched in three Washington, D.C. rallies. Meeting disgruntled Vietnam veteran Max Siegrist, he helped to set up draft information centers in St. Cloud. In collaboration with "Fiddlin'" Pete Watercott, Long began to use music as a persuasive tool; during the six years the pair performed together, they became mainstays at coffeehouses and clubs in Papal Creek, Iowa, and hosted weekly hootenannies and open mics. When Watercott was drafted for conscientious objector duty in California, Long relocated to the Sierra Nevada. His compositions have paralleled his growing political involvement: "Pope County Blues" was written for farmers protesting the intrusion of power lines in 1976; "Run for Freedom" was composed for Kimberly Rose Means (Wanbi Wakan Win'), who was struck and killed by a drunk driver during a freedom run across South Dakota by Dakota and Lakota children. Long has performed during many Woody Guthrie tribute concerts. Together with the Children of Okemah, he recorded a live album It Takes a Lot of People in Guthrie's hometown—Okemah, Oklahoma. Long's 1995 album, The Psalms, was based on the Biblical works of the Old Testament and the King James version. In addition to his "officially-released" albums, he has recorded many cassettes to benefit striking workers.

what to buy: Run for Freedom, Sweet Thunder ♪♪♪♪ (Rounder, 1997, prod. Billy Peterson) combines Long's first two albums—Run for Freedom and Sweet Thunder. Accompanying his rustic tenor vocals on guitar and joined by Michael Johnson on guitar, Peter Ostroushko on fiddle, and Claudia Schmidt's vocals, Long sings of the struggles of Native Americans ("Sacred Black Hill," "Anna Mae," "American Hymn," "Water in the Rain," and "Run for Freedom") and of his quest for freedom ("Love Will Lay Hate Down" and " Road to Freedom."

what to buy next: Living in a Rich Man's World ♪♪♪♪ (Atomic Theory, 1997, prod. Larry Long) reflects the work of a modern American troubadour. With the aid of acoustic instrumentalists and vocalists who include Butch Thompson, Paul Cotton, John Hammond, and Prudence Johnson, Long takes a powerful look at the pride of the "common folk" with songs including "Matthius Dahl—The Violin Maker," "Uncle Mel," "Dr. Massey," "Hennessey's Bar," and "Farm Song."

the rest:

Run for Freedom ♪♪♪♪ (Flying Fish, 1984)
Sweet Thunder ♪♪♪½ (Flying Fish, 1987)
It Takes a Lot of People ♪♪ (Flying Fish, 1989)
Troubadour ♪♪♪½ (Flying Fish, 1992)
The Psalms ♪♪♪½ (Stellar, 1995)
Here I Stand: Elder's Wisdom, Children's Song ♪♪♪½ (Smithsonian Folkways, 1997)

influences:

Woody Guthrie, Pete Seeger, Joe Hill, Bob Dylan

Jon Gailmor, Bruce U. "Utah" Phillips, Billy Bragg

Craig Harris

Longview

Formed December 1995, in North Brookfield, MA.

Dudley Connell, guitar, vocals; Glen Duncan, fiddle; James King, vocals, guitar; Joe Mullins, banjo, vocals; Don Rigsby, mandolin, vocals; Marshall Wilborn, bass.

Longview, with members Dudley Connell, Glen Duncan, James King, Joe Mullins, Don Rigsby, and Marshall Wilborn, can easily be described as a "supergroup." One common problem with supergroups, in any type of music, is that the sum often does not equal the sum of its parts. That certainly is not the case with this group, however. With this combination of musicians, whose resumes list some of the best names in bluegrass music history (Bill Monroe and His Blue Grass Boys, Ralph Stanley and the Clinch Mountain Boys, J.D. Crowe and the New South, Jim and Jesse, the Osborne Brothers, the Johnson Mountain Boys, the Seldom Scene, etc.), we have not only a great group of individuals, but a fabulous band. One listen to King and Rigsby singing together will knock your socks off, as will the King–Connell duets.

what's available: Longview ♪♪♪♪ (Rounder, 1997, prod. Ken Irwin, Longview) is the first, but hopefully not the last, from this supergroup. Don Rigsby alone, brings a lot to this group. His love for everything Stanley becomes quite clear as you hear him pull an old Ralph Stanley/Ricky Skaggs duet "The River Underground" out of hiding and, with King, give it new life with their powerful harmonies. The trios on this album, sung by King, Rigsby, and Connell, are especially strong, helping once again to take a group of bluegrass individuals and blend them into a band.

influences:

◀◀ Stanley Brothers, Bluegrass Album Band

see also: Lonesome River Band, Johnson Mountain Boys, Seldom Scene, James King Band, Lonesome Standard Time, Lynn Morris Band, Bluegrass Cardinals, J.D. Crowe & the New South

Steve Gardner

John D. Loudermilk

Born March 31, 1934, in Durham, NC.

After trying his luck and largely failing as a pop recording artist during the 1950s (under the name Johnny Dee), John D. Loudermilk settled in Nashville, hooked up with Chet Atkins, and began penning songs in earnest. "Tobacco Road"—his most enduring piece of work—was a gritty country-blues tune that became a pop smash for England's Nashville Teens. Though Loudermilk would continue to put out records, he would find more success as a songwriter during the 1960s. The Everly Brothers' "Ebony Eyes," Stonewall Jackson's "Waterloo," The Casinos' "Then You Can Tell Me Goodbye," and the Raiders' Number One pop hit "The Lament of the Cherokee Reservation Indian (Indian Reservation)" are among his more notable songs (the latter was covered in excerpted form as the coda to Tim McGraw's "Indian Outlaw," giving Loudermilk his most recent country credit).

worth searching for: Don't expect to find Loudermilk's albums easily in the United States. Best of John D. Loudermilk ♪♪♪ (RCA, 1973), now out of print, reprises 1962's 12 Sides of, including "Tobacco Road," "Road Hog," and "Big Daddy," and includes Loudermilk's rendering of "The Lament of the Cherokee Reservation Indian (Indian Reservation)." Blue Train ♪♪♪ (Bear Family, 1994) and Sittin' in the Balcony ♪♪♪ (Bear Family, 1995) are reissues available from a German label.

influences:

◀◀ Hank Williams

▶▶ Tony Joe White

David Simons

Louvin Brothers /Charlie Louvin

Brother duo from AL. Disbanded 1963.

Lonnie Ira Louvin (born April 21, 1924, in Rainesville, AL; died June 28, 1965); Charlie Elzer Louvin (born July 7, 1927, in Rainesville, AL).

Without question, the Louvin Brothers are country music's most successful and most influential brother duo. Their two complementary voices, in contrast with their divisive personal battles, made for some incredible music and have cemented their place in the annals of country music history two decades after the Blue Sky Boys and the Delmore Brothers paved the way. Growing up in Henegar, Alabama, the pair began singing together as boys and had a radio program on WDEF in Chattanooga in 1942, where they were known as "The Radio Twins." Charlie went into the army while Ira worked with Charlie Monroe, elder brother of Bill. In 1946 the Louvins were reunited, making their first record the following year on the Apollo label. Recordings followed in fairly rapid succession for Decca and MGM and, finally, Capitol in 1952. For three years they remained on the label without a hit until they scored with "When I Stop Dreaming" in 1955. Their next hit, 1956's "I Don't Believe You've Met My Baby," was their only chart-topper. By this time the brothers were established stars on the Grand Ole Opry, where they performed off and on until 1959. Their last Top 10 hit was "My Baby's Gone" in 1959. Although their music continued to showcase their harmonies, their relationship became quite strained during the next few years. In 1963, they broke up the act, both going on to pursue solo careers. As tragic as if it were torn from one of their songs, Ira was killed in a car accident in 1965, on his way back to Alabama from a show in Missouri. Today, Charlie continues to perform on the Grand Ole Opry, and has benefited from the admiration of such fans as Emmylou Harris, whose first chart hit was the Louvins' "If I Could Only Win Your Love." Alison Krauss, along with Jerry Douglas, recorded a gorgeous version of "I Don't Believe You've Met My Baby," which she included on her double platinum Now That I've Found You: A Collection. The Everly Brothers and many other acts have also acknowledged the debt they owe to the Louvins. As a solo artist, Charlie Louvin had a pair of Top 10 hits and recorded duets with Harris, Roy Acuff, and Melba Montgomery, also pairing with Louvin aficionado Charles Whitstein. In addition to appearances on the Grand Ole Opry, Charlie has opened the Louvin Brothers Museum in Bell Buckle, Tennessee.

what to buy: When I Stop Dreaming: The Best of the Louvin Brothers ♪♪♪♪♪ (Razor & Tie, 1995, comp. Marshall Crenshaw) is just what it says, an extensive collection of hits and standout tracks, with comprehensive liner notes.

what to buy next: Tragic Songs of Life ♪♪♪♪♪ (Capitol, 1996) is stark and beautiful. If you make it through any of these tracks without choking up, see your doctor; there's something seriously wrong with you. Radio Favorites 1951–57 ♪♪♪♪ (Country Music Foundation, 1987) spans more years than any of the other radio-show discs, and the sound quality, as expected from the CMF, is superior.

the rest:

Satan Is Real ♪♪♪♪½ (Capitol, 1959/1996)
Tribute to the Delmore Brothers ♪♪♪♪ (Capitol, 1960/1996)
Songs That Tell a Story ♪♪♪½ (Rounder, 1991)
Live at New River Ranch ♪♪♪♪ (Copper Creek, 1996) Christmas with the Louvin Brothers ♪♪♪♪ (Razor & Tie, 1997) worth searching for: Unless you've just got to have it all, the exhaustive eight-CD Close Harmony ♪♪♪♪½ (Bear Family, 1992) is more Louvin Brothers than you'd get through in one sitting. For completists only.

solo outings:

Charlie Louvin:

(With Charles Whitstein) Hoping That You're Hoping ♪♪♪½ (Copper Creek, 1992)
The Longest Train ♪♪♪ (Watermelon, 1996)
Louvin Brothers Music Celebration—Live In Holland ♪♪♪½ (Strictly Country, 1995)
Fifty Years of Makin' Music ♪♪♪ (Playback, 1991)
And That's the Gospel ♪♪♪ (Playback, 1990)

influences:

Delmore Brothers, Blue Sky Boys

Whitstein Brothers, Flying Burrito Brothers

Stephen L. Betts

Love

Formed 1965, in Los Angeles, CA.

Arthur Lee, lead vocals, rhythm guitar, piano, harmonica, percussion; Bryan Maclean, lead vocals, guitar (1965–67); John Echols, lead guitar; Ken Forssi, bass; Michael Stuart, drums, percussion (1967–90). Other members include Alban "Snoopy" Pfisterer, drums, harpsichord, organ (1967);Tjay Cantrelli, sax, flute (1967); John Donnellan, lead guitar; Frank Fayad, bass; Gary Rowles, lead guitar, vocals (1970); Rusty Squeezebox, guitar (1990); Henry Liu, bass (1990); David Green, drums (1990); Mike Randall, lead guitar (1990).

Originally named the Grass Roots, the group quickly became Love when another band called the Grass Roots signed to Dunhill Records. Blending the folk-rock delicacy of the Byrds with the bluesy thrash of the Rolling Stones and Yardbirds, Love became a hugely popular band on the Los Angeles club scene at a time when new, experimental, and outrageous psychedelic bands were the rage in a rapidly changing culture. With their long hair and colorful fashion sense, the members of Arthur Lee's band quickly came to symbolize the upheaval and tension in U.S. society while never losing sight of the omnipresent beauty and mystery. Besides being the first successful multiracial rock band, Love was also the first rock band signed to the then-folky Elektra label (Love's first album bears the catalog number EKL-4001). From the start, Love fashioned itself as a dynamic, hard-edged band with a soft touch. Bryan Maclean, who contributed a song or two to each of the band's first three albums (he left after Forever Changes) complimented Lee's edgier, powerful side with his own lighter songs. Despite a couple of moderate radio hits with "My Little Red Book," (1966) and "7 and 7 Is" (1967), Love never rose above underground status. That lack of overexposure has kept the band's records sounding particularly fresh to this day. At the heart of a regularly changing cast of group members, Lee was at his creative peak between 1965 and 1970. The group's first four albums (Love through Four Sail) are its best, with Forever Changes, the last with the heart of the original line-up, released at the tail end of 1967, standing as one of the recorded highlights of the rock era. But even after Four Sail, subsequent albums have their moments, like the stinging Jimi Hendrix lead guitar on False Start's lead track, "The Everlasting First." After years of hibernation, Love again surfaced on record in 1994 with a still-smiling Lee leading a marvelously retro-sounding band on the single "Girl on Fire" on the small Distortions Records label.

what to buy: Every bit as poignant, melodic, lush, and timeless as Pet Sounds and Revolver, Forever Changes ♪♪♪♪♪ (Elektra, 1967, prod. Arthur Lee, Bruce Botnick) brings back both the shiver and the hippie-warmth of the late '60s with every listen. The band's folkiest album, it never cracked the Billboard Top 150 and marked the end of the group's original line-up. Still, it continues to be cited by music lovers and critics as one of the best albums of all-time. More than a 30-year trip back in time, Forever Changes is the definite musical trip of its time. The two-CD Love Story 1966–1972 ♪♪♪♪½ (Elektra Traditions/Rhino, 1995, compilation prod. Gary Stewart, Andrew Sandoval, Bill Inglot) contains Forever Changes in its entirety, as well as a generous selection of highlights from each of Love's first four album, great non-album B-sides, the Hendrix track from False Start, various other curiosities, and excellent liner notes. An essential, beautifully assembled collection for anyone wishing to go deeper than Forever Changes.

laura love

what to buy next: While six of the best tracks on Love's fourth album, Four Sail ♪♪♪½ (Elektra, 1969, prod. Arthur Lee) appear on Love Story 1966–1972, Four Sail heralded Lee's new Love lineup and has more than a trace of the grace and feel of its predecessor, Forever Changes.

the rest:
Love ♪♪♪½ (Elektra, 1966)
Da Capo ♪♪♪ (Elektra, 1967)
Out Here ♪♪♪ (Blue Thumb, 1969/One Way, 1990)
False Start ♪♪♪ (Blue Thumb, 1970/One Way, 1992)
Studio/Live ♪♪½ (One Way, 1991)
Comes in Colours ♪♪♪½ (Raven, 1994)
Out There ♪♪½ (Big Beat, 1994)

worth searching for: Love's most recent single, "Girl in Fire," recorded with "Midnight Sun," sounds like it could've been a great lost Love single from the '60s, especially with the crafty quote from "7 and 7 Is" during the break.

solo outings:
Arthur Lee:
Vindicator ♪♪♪ (A&M, 1972)

influences:
Byrds, John Coltrane, Beethoven
Doors, Led Zeppelin

David Sokol

Laura Love

Born January 5, 1960, in Omaha, NE.

If Laura Love weren't a singer, she'd be a weaver. She is anyway, but her material is sonic instead of tactile, containing snippets of everything from old spirituals and traditional folk songs to Broadway show tunes and good ol' rock 'n' roll. It's an amazingly rich blend, a technicolor dreamcoat created from a unique musical voice. She's one of those artists whose style is impossible to brand, drawing as it does from so many idioms. To Love, though, it don't mean a thing if it ain't got that funk, and throughout her musical weavings, you'll hear threads of her funky bass-playing snaking around her melodic vocals. To quote her manager, "Take the folk melodies she learned from the Weavers and float them on top of the pop-funk of Sly and that's what informs her." One of the more intriguing performers to emerge out of the Seattle scene, where she now lives, she's about as far from grunge as Oklahoma! (which she quotes from in her delightfully catchy song, "I Am Wondering"), yet she also pays homage to Kurt Cobain with a lovely vocal and bass rendering of "Come as You Are"—and delivers an a cappella/zydeco "Amazing Grace"—on her major-label debut, Octoroon.

what to buy: No one's done anything as intriguingly adventurous as Octoroon ♪♪♪♪ (Mercury, 1997, prod. Laura Love) in quite a while. Taking her title from a term meaning of one-eighth African ancestry, Love throws that heritage and whatever else she's got coursing through her veins into this stellar effort. "I Am Wondering" is partly credited to Richard Rodgers and Oscar Hammerstein II; on "Bad Feeling," she lists one Sylvester Stewart as co-author. But she doesn't sample, she "interpolates," as the liner notes say—with terrific results. Love gently slides her politics in there, too, managing to make her points without bludgeoning. On Helvetica Bold ♪♪♪½ (Octoroon Biography, 1994, prod. Laura Love, Linda Severt, Rod Cook), only Love would combine Jackie DeShannon, Hank Williams, and the traditional "Wayfaring Stranger" and "Five Hundred Miles" on the same disc—and pull it off so cleverly. Her reggae version of "Put a Little Love in Your Heart" is better than the original, and her "I'm So Lonesome I Could Cry" pays sweet homage while distilling it through her singular vocal sensibilities. This was the last of four albums she released on her own label before signing with Mercury. Trivia alert: The uncredited song she quotes from in "A Ha Me a Riddle I Day" is "Who Will Buy" from the musical Oliver.

what to buy next: From Indian rhythms to the spiritual "Swing Low, Sweet Chariot," to good ol' funk and soul, and with such obscurities as the Japanese tune "Sakura" snuck in here and there, Love proves she's an original talent on Z Therapy ♪♪♪♪ (Octoroon Biography, 1990, prod. East Side Flash). And Pangea ♪♪♪½ (Octoroon Biography, 1992, prod. Laura Love, Michael Lord) contains vivid lyrics and terrific vocalizations.

worth searching for: They're difficult to find, but Love fans should try to hunt down Menstrual Hut (Octoroon Biography, 1989), her first album, now out of print, and Laura Love Collection (Putamayo, 1995), a compilation. As part of the girl group Venus Envy, Love also contributed to a novelty Christmas album titled I'll Be a Homo for Christmas (De Milo, 1988).

influences:

◀◀ Sly & the Family Stone, Weavers, Jackson Five, Laura Nyro

Lynne Margolis

Lyle Lovett

Born November 1, 1957, in Houston, TX.

Originally a Houston folkie, Lyle Lovett went to Nashville during the mid-1980s, when alternative-leaning country acts like Steve Earle, k.d. lang, and Lovett could get a fair hearing. While he did have some country hits and won a country Grammy, Nashville never could figure out what exactly was so intriguing or funny about a guy who wore an "Eraserhead" hairdo instead of a Stetson and sang Tammy Wynette's "Stand by Your Man" with a straight face. It's their loss; Lovett's albums have surveyed jazz, Texas swing, folk, and country. Stylistically, he is, to use his own words, "What Hank Williams is to Neil Armstrong." But Lovett's lyrical bent—witty, ironic, and sometimes unsettlingly direct—is his music's most memorable quality.

what to buy: Pontiac ♪♪♪♪½ (MCA/Curb, 1987, prod. Tony Brown, Lyle Lovett) is quintessential Lovett. Few could turn the subject matter of a wedding that ends in double murder or a surreal seagoing horseback rider to their advantage, but that's what he accomplishes on "L.A. County" and "If I Had a Boat," respectively. "She's No Lady" and "She's Hot to Go" earned him charges of misogyny, but the songs are as self-deprecating as they are chauvinistic. Lyle Lovett ♪♪♪♪ (MCA/Curb, 1986, prod. Tony Brown, Lyle Lovett) is a spectacular debut featuring the utterly unsentimental "God Will" and Lovett's wry reportage of nuptials held at a funeral parlor, "An Acceptable Level of Ecstasy (The Wedding Song)." On Joshua Judges Ruth ♪♪♪♪ (MCA/Curb, 1992, prod. George Massenburg, Billy Williams, Lyle Lovett) the melancholy streak that has run through Lovett's music from the beginning nearly takes over on such songs as "North Dakota" and "She's Already Made up Her Mind," but injections of fiery gospel ("Church") and Lovett's arid wit ("Since the Last Time," which is narrated by a corpse) make the album one of his deepest and most diverse.

what to buy next: The Road to Ensenada ♪♪♪♪ (MCA/Curb, 1996, prod. Lyle Lovett, Billy Williams) is Lovett's most country-flavored album in a while, and while it contains plenty of upbeat humor ("That's Right (You're Not from Texas)") it's also his most somber album, perhaps reflecting obliquely on his split with ex-wife Julia Roberts. Lyle Lovett and His Large Band ♪♪♪½ (MCA/Curb, 1989, prod. Tony Brown, Billy Williams, Lyle Lovett) spotlights his quirkiness with a string of non-sequiturs ("Here I Am") and plays the country numbers strictly for yuks ("I Married Her Just Because She Looks like You," "Stand by Your Man").

what to avoid: Lovett's weakest album, I Love Everybody ♪♪♪ (MCA/Curb, 1994, prod. Lyle Lovett, Billy Williams) is the musical proof of your high-school football coach's imprecation that "women weaken legs." Lovett's only recording made during his brief tenure as Mr. Julia Roberts has its moments of wry humor, but it mostly consists of stale leftovers and trifles like "La to the Left" and "Penguins," which are more strange than funny.

worth searching for: The Oscar-nominated hit "You've Got a Friend in Me" from the Toy Story soundtrack ♪♪♪ (Disney, 1995) is a boisterous duet with Randy Newman.

influences:

◀◀ Townes Van Zandt, Guy Clark, Ray Charles, Randy Newman, Al Green

▶▶ Robert Earl Keen Jr., Walter Hyatt, Eric Taylor, Vince Bell

Daniel Durchholz

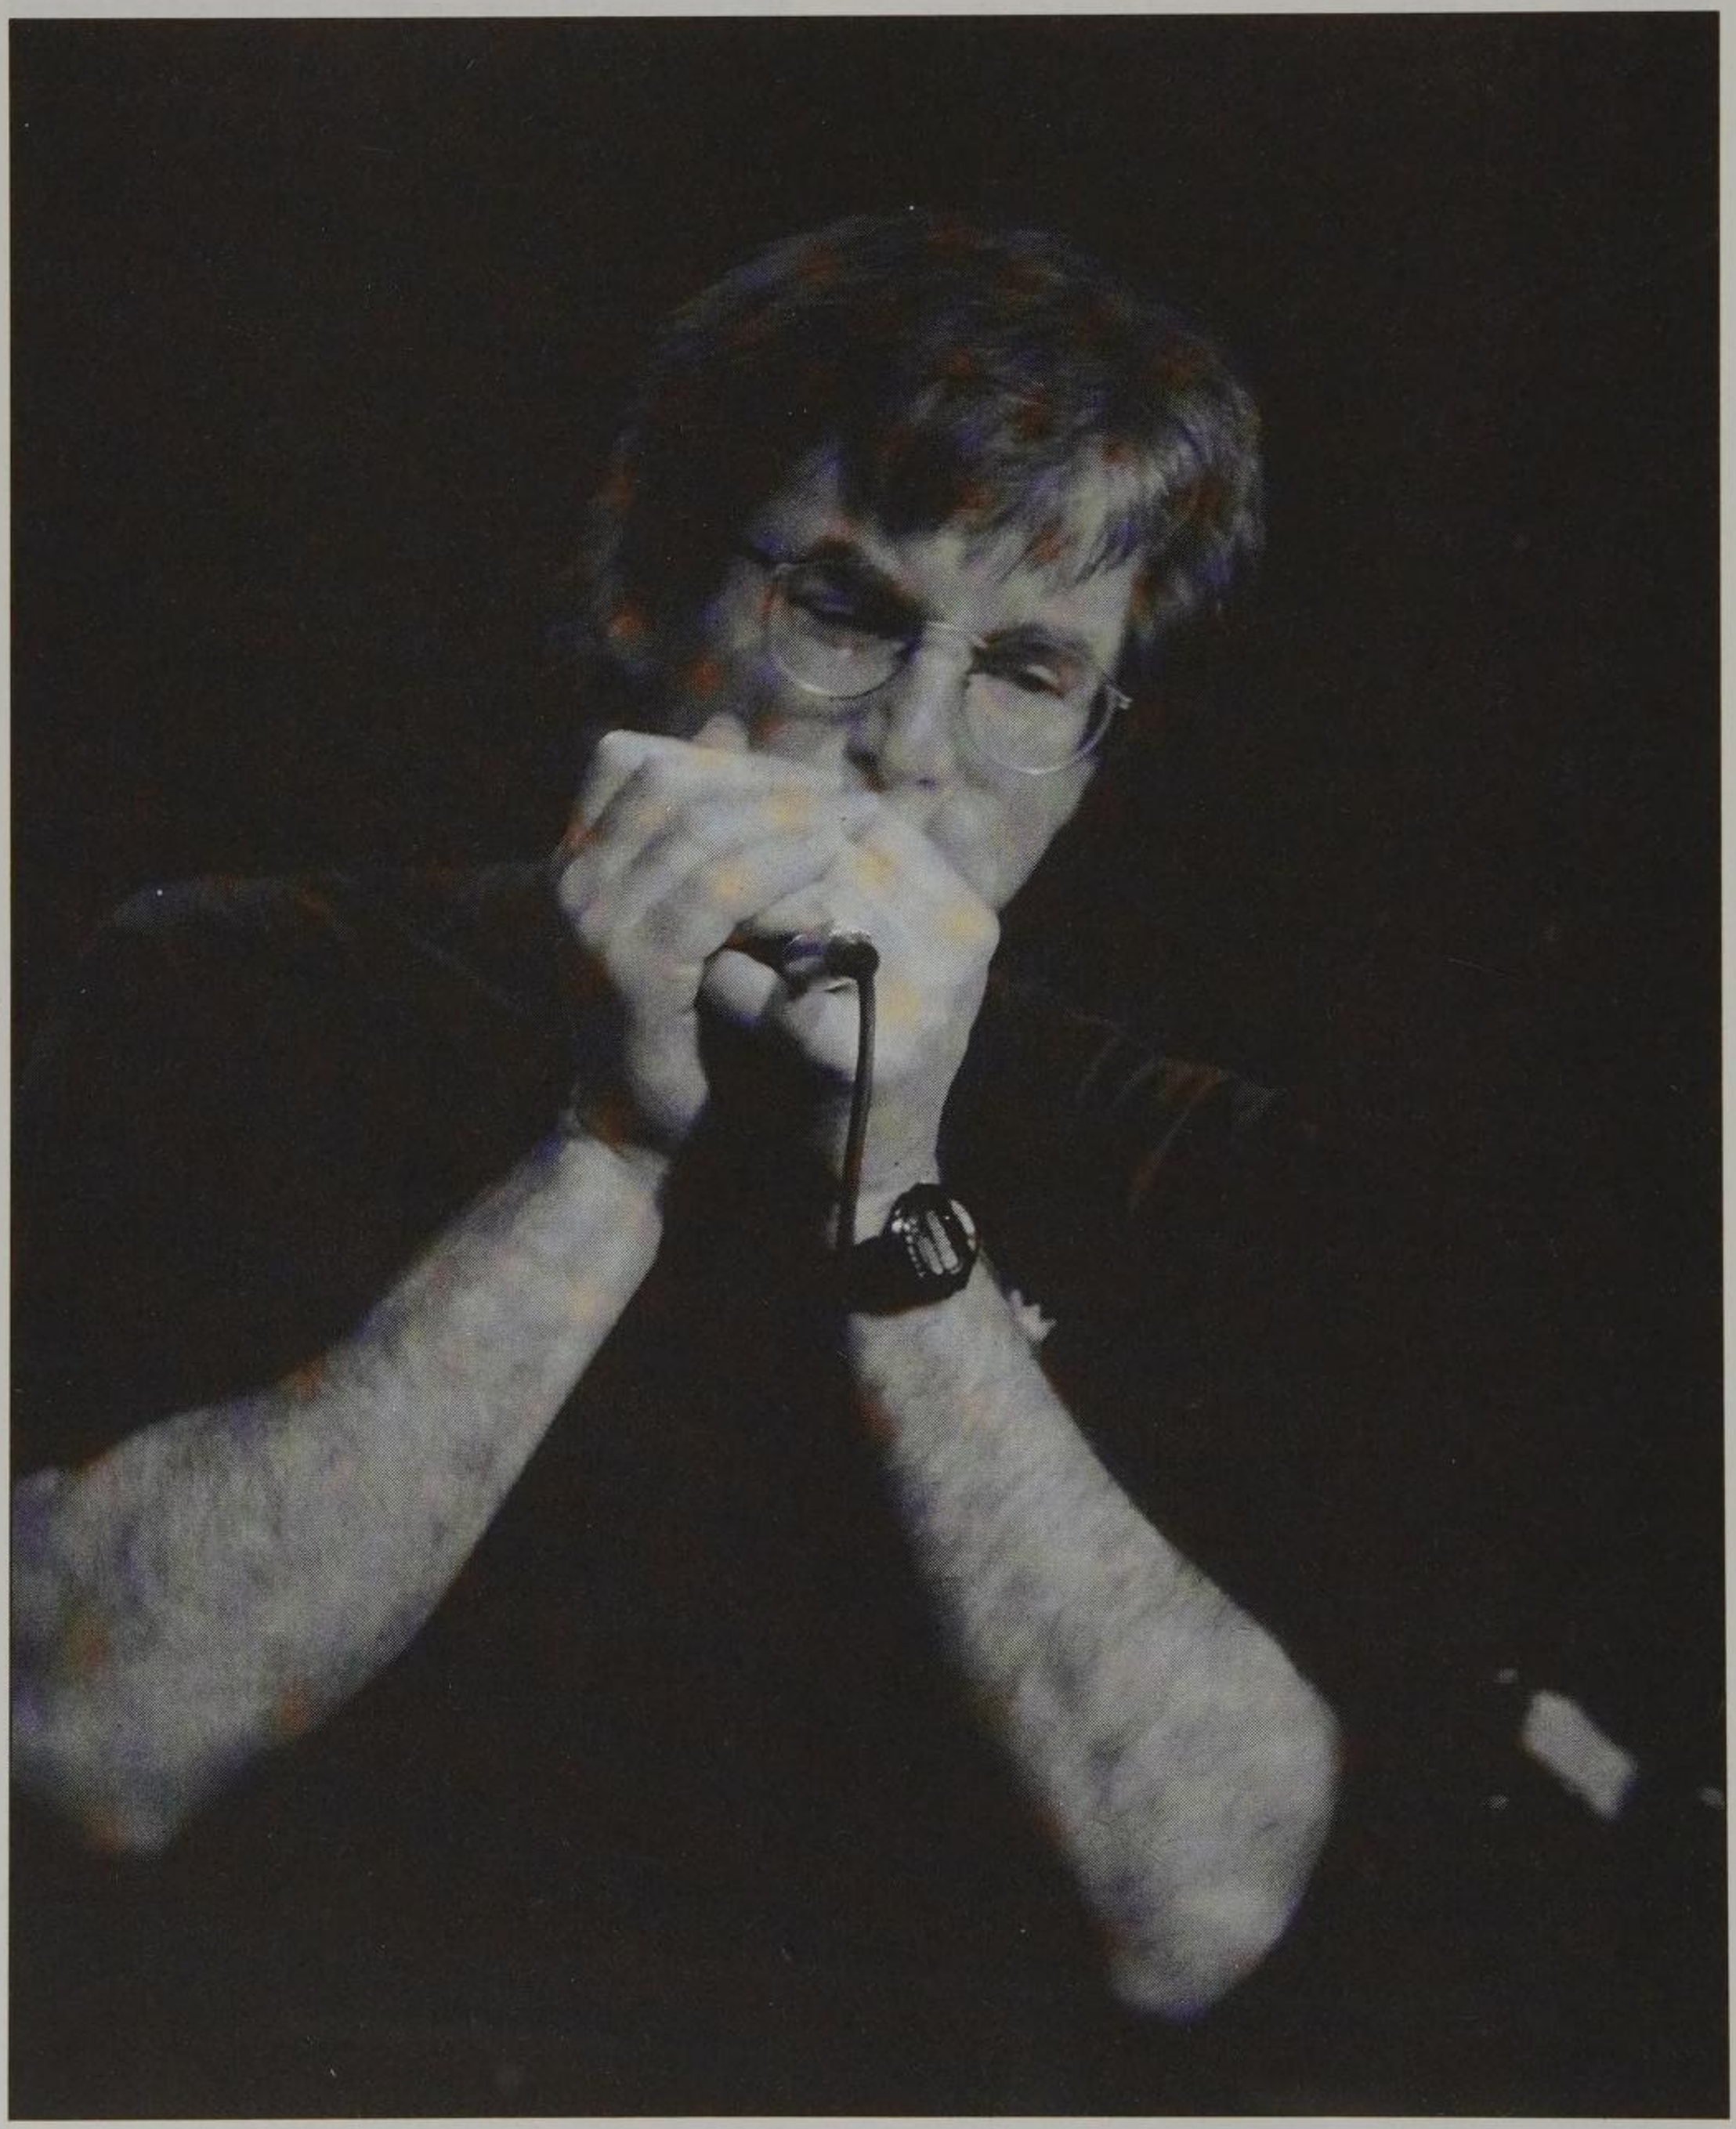
The Lovin' Spoonful

Formed 1965, in New York, NY. Disbanded 1968. Re-formed 1991.

John Sebastian, autoharp, harmonica (1965–68), vocals; Steve Boone, bass, vocals; Zal Yanovsky, guitar, vocals (1965–67); Joe Butler, drums, vocals; Jerry Yester, guitar (1967–68, 1991–present); John Marrella, drums (1991–present); Lena Yester, keyboards, guitar (1991–present).

Dressed in colorful comic-book duds, singing good-timey folk and love songs and plugged-in country blues in Greenwich Village coffee houses, the Lovin' Spoonful—named after a Mississippi John Hurt lyric—were the darlings of Greenwich Village and the country between 1965–67. (The band's early days at the Night Owl Cafe are recounted in the Mamas and the Papas' "Creeque Alley.") The Spoonful's loosey-goosey, youthful innocence and engaging folk-rock caught on like a giant happy-day smile; its first seven singles went Top 10, including "Do You Believe in Magic?," which used as its lead instrument John Sebastian's electrified Appalachian autoharp, and "Summer in the City," which helped define the summer of 1966 as it rose to Number One. The hits ended as quickly as they had begun, and Zal Yanovsky left the group in 1967, replaced by Jerry Yester. Sebastian, who sang and wrote most of the songs, left soon afterward. With Joe Butler as the new lead vocalist, the group managed another record, but the original spirit of the group had already dissipated its energy.

4 9 0 the lovin' spoonful



what to buy: The Spoonful was a singles group, which means Anthology ♪♪♪♪♪ (Rhino, 1990, prod. Erik Jacobsen)—which includes all the hits in chronological order and enough album sides to keep everyone but the most fanatical happy—is a must-have.

what to buy next: Hums of the Lovin' Spoonful ♪♪♪♪ (Kama Sutra, 1967, prod. Erik Jacobsen), Do You Believe in Magic? ♪♪♪½ (Kama Sutra, 1966, prod. Erik Jacobsen), and Daydream ♪♪♪½ (Kama Sutra, 1966, prod. Erik Jacobsen) contain all the big hits. So do Best of the Lovin' Spoonful ♪♪♪½ (Kama Sutra, 1967, prod. Erik Jacobsen) and Best of the Lovin' Spoonful Volume II ♪♪♪½ (Kama Sutra, 1968, prod. Erik Jacobsen). Sebastian, meanwhile, released some highly worthwhile solo albums. John B. Sebastian ♪♪♪♪ (Reprise/MGM, 1970, prod. Paul Rothchild) is a logical extension of Spoonful ideas along with the hit "She's a Lady." Tarzana Kid ♪♪♪♪ (Reprise, 1974, prod. Erik Jacobsen, John Sebastian) is Sebastion's best solo effort, with Lowell George helping on guitar. And I Want My Roots ♪♪♪♪ (Musicmasters, 1996, prod. Jimmy Vivino, John Sebastian), recorded with the J-Band, is a real jug-band album that reaches back to early Spoonful influences with blues legend James "Yank" Rachell as special guest.

what to avoid: Beyond John Stewart's "Never Goin' Back," there's nothing to recommend on Revelation: Revolution '69 ♪ (Kama Sutra, 1968, prod. Bob Finiz).

the rest:
What's up Tiger Lily ♪♪ (Kama Sutra, 1966)
You're a Big Boy Now ♪♪ (Kama Sutra, 1967)
Everything Is Playing ♪♪♪ (Kama Sutra, 1967)

worth searching for: Many of the masters for Spoonful recordings have long been destroyed, which makes more reissues unlikely. The only way to actually hear the group as it originally sounded is to find their records on the original vinyl.

solo outings:
John Sebastian:
Four of Us ♪♪♪½ (Reprise, 1971)
Real Live John Sebastian ♪♪ (Reprise, 1972)
Welcome Back ♪♪♪ (Reprise, 1976)
The Best of John Sebastian ♪♪♪½ (Rhino, 1989)
Tar Beach ♪♪♪ (Shanachie, 1993)
King Biscuit Flower Hour Presents ♪♪♪½ (King Biscuit Flower Hour, 1996)

John Sebastian of the Lovin' Spoonful (© Jack Vartoogian)

influences:

⏪ Mississippi John Hurt, Fred Neil, the Weavers, Rev. Gary Davis

⏩ Crosby, Stills & Nash, Poco, the Eagles

Leland Rucker

Jez Lowe /Jez Lowe & the Bad Pennies

Born July 14, 1955, in County Durham, England. Bad Pennies formed 1990.

Jez Lowe, vocals, guitar, cittem, harmonica, whistle; Bev Sanders, vocals, whistle, percussion; Bob Surgeoner, double bass, keyboard, slide guitar, accordion, banjo, vocals; Billy Surgeoner, fiddle, keyboard, whistle, double bass, vocals.

Jez Lowe had been playing around his native northeast England for several years before his first solo album, Jez Lowe, was released in 1980. He went on to record eight more solo albums for the British label Fellside, all the while developing his talents as vocalist and songwriter who vividly described life in the declining mining towns of northeast England. Lowe's songs always have unforgettable melodies and he delivers them in a friendly tenor. In 1990 Lowe began working with the Bad Pennies, a sympathetic backing group with whom he's now recorded three albums. Lowe also finished a new album, The Parish Notices, with a slightly different set of "Bad Pennies": Jez Luton, on vocals, bass, and keyboards, and Judy Dinning, on vocals, guitar, keyboards, and percussion.

what to buy: Tenterhooks ♪♪♪♪ (Green Linnet, 1995, prod. Paul Adams) is the third album Lowe recorded with the Bad Pennies and is an excellent display of their group sound: full group harmonies and well-thought-out instrumental arrangements. There's also a trace of jazz in "Aloysius" and the catchy "Workhouse." The album also includes a lovely a capella song, "The Crake in the Morning." If you'd like a taste of Lowe's solo, more pared-down sound, then check out Galloways ♪♪♪♪ (Musics Pangaea, 1995, prod. Thomas Hurst), a compilation that includes all of Lowe's 1985 Galloways and half of his first album, Jez Lowe.

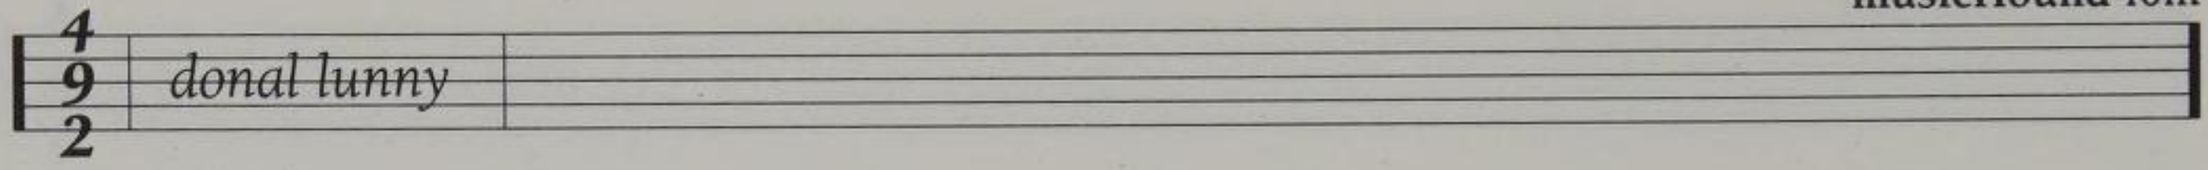
the rest:
The Parish Notices N/A (Green Linnet, 1998)

worth searching for: All the rest of Lowe's albums are available only as imports. He and the original Bad Pennies did contribute a track to the a capella collection Voices ♪♪♪♪ (Fellside, 1992/ Musics Pangaea, 1996).



influences:

Richard Thompson, Pete Coe, Watersons, Dick Gaughan

Pete Morton, Billy Bragg, Oyster Band, Andy M. Stewart

Ken Roseman

Donal Lunny

Born in Ireland.

Guitar and bouzouki player Donal Lunny has been called "the Quincy Jones of Irish music" for his multiple roles as musician, producer, organizer, presenter, and catalyst for high-quality musical collaborations. After beginning his musical career as the drummer in a high school rock band, Lunny discovered the guitar and got hooked on music. A couple of years ahead of him at school in Newbridge, there was a young man named Christy Moore, with whom Lunny teamed up to form a singing group, the Rakes of Kildare. The music they played, he says, was a pretty close copy of the Clancy Brothers, but they had the advantage of a nearby pub where real traditional music was played. Before long, the idea of combining the ballad-group sound of singing and guitar with the traditional tunes he heard in the pub began to dawn on him. When he finished school, Lunny went to Dublin to study art. There he met up with new friends, some of whom shared his musical ideas. He played in a group called the Emmet Folk with Mick Moloney, who later joined the Johnstons. He then ran a folk club with Andy Irvine, who had played with Sweeney's Men. All of these groups had one thing in common: the desire to blend the more accessible style of the ballad groups with the lyrical beauty of real traditional music. All of them were successful to an extent, but none fulfilled this dream as thoroughly as Lunny's next group, Planxty. Planxty grew out of the sessions for Christy Moore's 1972 LP, Prosperous. Moore was returning to Ireland after a stint on England's folk club circuit, and he wanted his album to be a celebration; he asked eight musical friends to come to Downing's Pub in Prosperous, the same pub where Lunny first experienced traditional music. There they arranged and recorded the LP. When the album was done, Lunny, Moore, Irvine, and Liam O'Flynn, who had worked out many of the arrangements together, decided to form Planxty, a new kind of Irish band. At the time Lunny was making a living by making jewelry, but he quit his job to pursue his musical career with Planxty. In 1975 Lunny left Planxty to join a group that never got off the ground. His career, however, bounced back nicely. He joined a band that was first known as Seachtar and then as 1691. After Lunny joined, they changed their name to the Bothy Band, and quickly gained a reputation as the most phenomenal group ever on the Irish folk scene. While Planxty had delivered sweet lyricism, the Bothy Band traded in pure power; the combination of driving flute, fiddle, and uilleann pipes accompanied by guitar, bouzouki, and keyboards left audiences absolutely stunned. Lunny toured with the Bothy Band and recorded four albums with them. When the Bothy Band broke up, Planxty took the opportuity to reunite, and several tours plus three more albums ensued. From the last version of Planxty, Lunny and Moore built Moving Hearts, an Irish traditional-rock fusion group. Moving hearts involved Moore and Lunny as well as Declan Sinnott (later Mary Black's musical director), Declan Masterson, and Davy Spillane. Lunny remembers it as a time of powerful performances as well as a great learning experience, combining bass and drums with traditional music in new ways. Since Moving Hearts broke up in the early 1980s, Lunny has been more active as a producer, organizer, and presenter than as a musician. He has produced records by many of the top groups in Ireland and Scotland, including Altan, Capercaillie, and Sharon Shannon. He has served as musical director for many television series, including two documentary series about traditional and contemporary Irish music. He has recently put together a group and has toured, though there is still only one Donal Lunny album, recorded in 1983. Lunny's name as a musician, compiler, or producer, however, virtually assures a high-quality album.

what's available: Donal Lunny ♪♪♪ (Gael-Linn, 1987, prod. Donal Lunny) is really not a solo album, but a live ensemble record of Lunny's 1987 band. Lunny's collaborators include Arty McGlynn (guitar), Nollaig Casey (fiddle), Cormac Breatnach (flute), and Sean Og Potts (uilleann pipes). It's all great, high-energy music, expertly played and produced. There's only one problem: it's just 27 minutes long, and priced like a full album. If you're willing to pay the price, it's a fine set. If not, you're better off exploring Lunny's work as a band member and producer.

influences:

Christy Moore, Andy Irvine, Mick Moloney

Planxty, Bothy Band, Moving Hearts, Altan, Capercaillie, Sharon Shannon see also: Planxty, Bothy Band, Moving Hearts

Steve Winick

Bascom Lamar Lunsford

Born 1882, in Mars Hill, NC. Died 1973, in Asheville, NC.

Known to many as the "Minstrel of the Appalachians," Bascom

Lamar Lunsford was an Asheville, North Carolina lawyer and a virtually inexhaustible source of Southern culture and folklore. Lunsford wrote, collected, and performed dozens of ballads, banjo tunes, and sacred songs during the years immediately preceding and following World War II. His most famous compositions include "Old Mountain Dew" and "I Wish I Was a Mole in the Ground," a song that employs surrealistic imagery to convey vague but almost unbearably intense emotions.

what's available: Smokey Mountain Ballads ♪♪♪½ (Folkways, 1953) is a charming collection of field recordings, including "Old Mountain Dew," made for the Smithsonian Institution. Ballads, Banjo Tunes, and Sacred Songs of Western North Carolina ♪♪♪♪ (Smithsonian/Folkways, 1996) is an exemplary single-disc collection of Lunsford's best-known material recorded for the Archive of American Folk Song in March 1949.

influences:

◀◀ Charlie Poole, Clarence Ashley, Vernon Dalhart

▶▶ Dock Boggs, Bob Dylan, the Band, Holy Modal Rounders

Bill Friskics-Warren

Claire Lynch /The Front Porch String Band

Born February 20, 1954, in Poughkeepsie, NY.

Singer/songwriter Claire Lynch, along with her Front Porch String Band, has brought a touch of gentle grace to each of her recordings, combining powerfully performed bluegrass with gentle gospel tunes and acoustic country music. Born in upstate New York, Lynch relocated to Alabama at age 12, and has remained there. In 1973 she became a member of Hickory Wind, a band that included her future husband, mandolin and fiddle player Larry Lynch. By 1975 they were called the Front Porch String Band. By the time the Front Porch disbanded in 1981, they'd recorded three albums. Claire soon became acquainted with Nashville, and began writing songs and pitching them to several artists. Among those who discovered her talent early on were Kathy Mattea, who recorded "Hills of Alabam," and Patty Loveless, who cut "Some Morning Soon" in 1990. These days, with her Rounder album earning a Grammy nomination, and the Front Porch String re-formed, playing numerous festivals, and appearing on the Opry frequently, Lynch has also been in demand as a back-up vocalist for Pam Tillis, Dolly Parton, and Linda Ronstadt, among others.

editor's choice

4 more pipe albums you can't live without

Kathryn Tickell, The Gathering (Park)

Hamish Moore, Stepping on the Bridge (Greentrax)

Kathryn Tickell, On Kielder Side (Saydisc)

Hamish Moore & Dick Lee Farewell to Decorum (Greentrax)

what to buy: Moonlighter ♪♪♪♪ (Rounder, 1995, prod. Bil VornDick) explores bluegrass, folk, and Cajun music with great success. The title track is a testament to the busy life of a working mother, something to which Claire—and millions of other women—can easily relate.

what to buy next: Silver & Gold ♪♪♪♪ (Rounder, 1997, prod. Claire Lynch, Rich Adler) covers a lot of ground in the bluegrass/folk arena. The haunting "Death Angel" and a re-working of Joe Cocker's "Hitchcock Railway" are among the many highlights here. Friends for a Lifetime ♪♪♪♪ (Brentwood, 1993, prod. Bil VornDick) is an inspiring collection of bluegrass/gospel tunes that could convert just about anyone!

solo outings:

Front Porch String Band:

Lines and Traces ♪♪♪♪ (Rebel, 1991)

Front Porch String Band ♪♪♪½ (Rebel, 1991)

influences:

◀◀ Emmylou Harris, Linda Ronstadt

▶▶ Forbes Family

Stephen L. Betts

Mabsant

See: Robin Huw Bowen

4/4 joel mabus

Joel Mabus

Born September 13, 1953, in Belleville, IL.

Upon hearing Joel Mabus for the first time, one might be surprised to hear of his "pedigree": His parents (and an uncle or two) played hillbilly music in a family band (the White Star Rangers) that played on a weekend road show of the WLS Barn Dance, one of the Depression-era's radio-powerhouse counterparts to the Grand Ole Opry. You'd think he'd grow up to be some kind of hotshot picker, and he is—but it's not often you hear all that technical skill take a back seat to a good story, a well-timed joke, a vivid phrase—especially not in a single artist. The headline on his website reads: "He's a singer/songwriter, but he doesn't sound like one." Indeed, asking a DJ, promoter, or booking agent if they want to hear another songwriter's CD is akin to asking your dinner guests if they want to see a slide show of your home remodeling. The fact is, Joel Mabus doesn't sound like one. It's hard to imagine another artist on the folk scene who combines the same concise, deceptively understated, lyrical insight and sometimes devastating wit with such world-class instrumental prowess. Imagine Garrison Keillor judging the Flatpicking Guitar Championship at Winfield, or John Prine releasing a banjo album—but such comparisons don't do Mabus justice; his music is as distinctive and identifiable as it is hard to pigeonhole.

what to buy: If you can only get just one by Mabus, it's got to be The Naked Truth ♪♪♪♪½ (Fossil, 1988, prod. Joel Mabus)—one of the rare times a live album will be put at the top of an artist's recommended list. It contains the only recorded version of "Duct Tape Blues," a staple of Mabus's live shows for many years and certainly his most requested song. Add to the list "Touch a Name on the Wall," his song about Vietnam era veterans, the memorable "Hitler Was a Vegetarian, Too," the original clawhammer banjo tour-de-force "Tom Paine's Dream," and many other delights.

what to buy next: There are no real clinkers in Mabus's discography; try the more up-to-date Promised Land ♪♪♪♪ (Fossil, 1994, prod. Joel Mabus), a polished studio album to match the above live set. It's a good example of the home-grown effort Mabus produces on his own label—you may not achieve the splash of fame you'd achieve on a more high-profile label, but when an artist like this controls every aspect of the project from beginning to end, you sure make better records.

the rest:

Firelake ♪♪½ (Fossil, 1990)
Short Stories ♪♪♪ (Fossil, 1992)
Flatpick and Clawhammer ♪♪♪½ (Fossil, 1993)
Western Passage ♪♪♪♪ (Fossil, 1996)
Rhyme Schemes: New Words and Music (Fossil, 1997)

worth searching for: Of his two out-of-print LPs on the Flying Fish label, the second one, Fairies and Fools ♪♪♪ (Flying Fish, 1984, prod. Joel Mabus, Gary Reid) is worth a listen if you can find it. It was his first instrumental album (except for one unaccompanied vocal), and one of the earliest explorations of the American-Celtic connection, a musical well that's been visited by many artists since. It's beautifully recorded also.

influences:

Doc Watson, John Hartford, Newgrass Revival, Tom Paxton, Art Thieme

Dan Crary, Robin & Linda Williams

Chris Rietz

Margaret MacArthur

Born May 7, 1928, in Chicago, IL.

The traditional folk songs of Vermont have been resurrected through the music of folklorist, harp player, and vocalist Margaret MacArthur. Her albums are unadorned celebrations of the working and farming class of the Green Mountain state. MacArthur's love of folk songs was inherited from her mother who sang her nursery rhymes. Her musical education continued after she and her mother moved temporarily to Utah, where her mother, who had been divorced, was re-married to a forest ranger who sang cowboy songs. She spent her childhood years in Arizona and the Ozark Mountain region of Missouri. She has collected songs in many areas of the country, most notably in western Kentucky and in Vermont where she has lived since 1948. MacArthur's music has continued to reflect the rural simplicity of her lifestyle. After moving to southern Vermont in 1948 to be married, she lived without electricity for many years. She began collecting folk songs in Vermont after volunteering to teach music at the school that her three children—Dan, Gary, and Megan—attended. Her first album, Folk Songs of Vermont, was released in 1962. She also sings songs of Arizona, where she lives and performs during the winter. Her music rings true with years of research and fieldwork and her ability to paint pictures with words gives her songs unusual poignancy and humor. Through her concern for authenticity, she has helped revive the use of "old" instruments. In 1962 her husband John restored a small harp-zither made in Columbus, Ohio in 1896. This has been widely copied by instrument makers who call it the "MacArthur Harp." In 1985, New England

Arts Biennial officials of the University of Massachusetts, Amherst named Mrs. MacArthur one of seven "New England Living Art Treasures." They lauded her for her voice and for having "uncovered the core of New England life through her research and performance of traditional music." In 1997 she was selected to appear at the John F. Kennedy Center for Performing Arts as the sole representative of Vermont in an annual celebration that hosts artists from across the country. Although she's primarily performed as a soloist, accompanying herself on dulcimer and harp-zither, MacArthur recorded three albums with support from her family: Make the Wildwoods Ring, MacArthur Road, and On the Mountains High. Her 1976 album, Old Songs, features the vocal and guitar accompaniment of Gordon Bok. MacArthur is often joined by sons Dan and Gary and daughter Megan, and are billed as the MacArthur Family. Their concerts are musical explorations of rural life, with Dan and Megan adding contemporary compositions to their mother's traditional songs. Their rich vocal harmonies are complemented by the sensitive accompaniments of Dan's guitar, Megan's acoustic bass, and Gary's fiddle or mandolin (home-made). Sing Out! magazine reported "the younger generation displays an easygoing musicality born of lifelong exposure to their mother's repertoire, tempered with an affinity for more contemporary country styles. . . . Megan's voice is a clear fluid instrument." Megan MacArthur is also part of the group Trillium, which includes Ellen Gawler (fiddle, guitar, vocals) and Elisabeth Wolfe (banjo, guitar, vocals). This excellent trio has been playing and singing together since the early 1990s.

what to buy: A wide range of traditional sources are explored on Them Stars ♪♪♪♪ (Whetstone, 1996, prod. MacArthur Family). Accompanying herself on harp and dulcimer, and joined by members of her family, MacArthur interprets several tunes—"Penny Portion," "Black Eyed Susan," "Half Hitch," and "Molly Bawn"—from the H.H. Flanders Collection of Vermont folk songs as well as songs by Pete Seeger ("O Had I a Golden Thread"), Pete Sutherland ("Endless Chain"), and Dan Berggren ("Old Green Sweater"). The title track is a musical adaptation of a Native American legend. MacArthur displays her instrumental skills with a solo harp rendition of a traditional fiddle tune, "Opera Reel for Harp Zither," and a solo dulcimer interpretation of "Droning Mrs. Gobier/Old Christmas." Megan joins her mother for a duet version of the Irish ballad, "Molly Bawn," while son Dan sings his original tune, "Leaving Scotland."

what to buy next: Vermont Heritage Songs ♪♪♪♪ (Vermont Folklife Center, 1994, prod. Margaret MacArthur) is a collection of 15 songs that were written over several years when MacArthur was an artist-in-residence at elementary schools around Vermont. She worked with dozens of students who researched their town's history through interviews with town elders and studying old records. With Mrs. MacArthur as editor and composer, they developed their findings into song. A Vermont Heritage Songbook was also published that contains 42 songs, 15 of which are recorded on this CD with the help of her children and grandchildren. Vermont Ballads & Broadsides ♪♪♪ (Whetstone, 1989) (cassette only) is a further sampling of the folk music of the Green Mountain state. Alternating unaccompanied singing with songs backed by her solo dulcimer and harp-zither, MacArthur explores the state's past with re-workings of traditional tunes including "The Marlboro Medley," "The Ballad of Runaway Pond," "The Legend of Duncan Campbell," and "The West Rutland Marble Bawn." MacArthur Road ♪♪♪ (Front Hall Records, 1989, prod. MacArthur Family) is a MacArthur Family recording featuring Megan's vocals and several of Dan's original compositions such as "Yucky Bugs," a song often requested in the family performances. One unique selection is "Kitchen Dance," a poem from an old newspaper clipping (1934) which Margaret narrates in between several snippets of fiddle tunes played by the rest of the family. Any of these recordings can be ordered from the family at Box 15, MacArthur Road, Marlboro, Vermont 05344.

the rest:

Folksongs of Vermont ♪♪♪ (Folkways, 1962) (cassette only) (With the MacArthur Family) On the Mountains High ♪♪♪ (Alcazar, 1972) (LP only) (With Dan MacArthur and Gordon Bok) Old Songs ♪♪♪ (Rounder, 1976) (cassette only) (With the MacArthur Family) Make the Wildwoods Ring ♪♪♪ (Front Hall, 1981) (LP only) Almanac of New England Farm Songs ♪♪♪ (Whetstone, 1982) (cassette only) How to Play the MacArthur Harp ♪♪♪ (Front Hall, 1987) (cassette and manual)

solo outings:

Trillium:
The Sun She Rises ♪♪♪♪ (Lady Moon Productions, 1993, prod. Trillium) Wild Flowers ♪♪♪♪ (Lady Moon Productions, 1994, prod. Trillium)

influences:

◀◀ Helen Hartness Flanders, Alan & John Lomax

▶▶ Trillium, Sally Rogers, Claudia Schmidt

Heidi Cerrigione and Craig Harris

4 9 6 ewan maccoll

Ewan MacColl

Born Jimmy Miller in 1915, in Auchterarder, Perthshire, Scotland. Died October 22, 1989.

Ewan MacColl was one of the main forces behind the folk revival that swept Britain in the 1950s and 1960s. Born Jimmy Miller in Scotland, he was brought up in Salford, greater Manchester. At the age of 15 he changed his name to Ewan MacColl, memorializing a little-known nineteenth-century Lallans poet. He became a poet himself, and a laborer, working at various menial jobs while indulging in his first love, the theater. In 1931, he founded a street theater company called the Red Megaphones, and in 1934 he formed Theatre in Action, an influential precursor to the Theatre Workshop. MacColl's theatrical activities continued through the postwar period. In 1945 he wrote his first full-length play, and was ultimately hailed by George Bernard Shaw as "the only significant post-war British dramatist." But he was also coming to be more and more interested in folk song. Both of his parents sang traditional Scottish songs, and he had been exposed to them at an early age. He had always collected and sung traditional songs, and the success of Jazz clubs in the 1950s gave him a new venue for the songs he loved. He began to appear at various jazz clubs, a practice that accelerated during the skiffle craze of 1956–57. Because of the skiffle bands' reliance on American material, MacColl felt there was not enough native British music being sung among the younger generation. He began to advocate a policy whereby English singers would sing English songs, Scottish singers would sing Scottish songs, and so forth. MacColl found many ways to spread his ideas about folk song during the 1950s. In 1953 he began a club—the Ballads and Blues Club—which became the model for the English folk-club phenomenon. He later founded the Singer's Club, a folk club organized on socialist principles, and the Critics Group, a collection of young singers who met regularly to discuss folk song, and who also performed and recorded. This group nurtured many important performers of the younger generation, including Sandra Kerr, John Faulkner, Frankie Armstrong, and Brian Pearson. During the same period, MacColl created a series of radio programs that utilized folk songs, under the rubric The Radio Ballads. These programs and others frequently teamed him up with other singers, including A.L. Lloyd.

They were a great success, and made MacColl relatively famous despite the same socialist politics that had harmed Lloyd's radio career. For these programs, he began to write songs, and he became an accomplished songwriter as well. Throughout the 1960s, 1970s, and 1980s, MacColl was an influential force. He provided encouragement and advice to all manner of performers, from folk-rock stars like Maddy Prior, whose band Steeleye Span performed many songs she learned from MacColl, to Elvis Costello, whose first public appearance was a floor spot at an Ewan MacColl concert. He continued to perform and record, releasing over 150 LPs in his lifetime. He provided both traditional songs and his own songs to generations of folk performers; from the Johnstons and the Dubliners in the 1960s to the Pogues in the 1980s. In the 1970s, "The First Time Ever I Saw Your Face," which MacColl wrote for his third wife and musical partner Peggy Seeger, was recorded by Elvis Presley and by Roberta Flack; Flack's version topped the U.S. pop charts and won a 1972 Grammy award. MacColl continued to perform until shortly before his death on October 22, 1989.

what to buy: The Real MacColl ♪♪♪♪½ (Topic, 1993, prod. Tony Engle) was compiled from five original albums recorded for Topic between 1958 and 1966. The songs it presents reflect MacColl's varied relationships with song traditions. They include older Child ballads, Jacobite ballads, modern songs of industrial disasters, and original MacColl compositions. Notable tracks include a detailed version of "Van Dieman's Land," an excellent "Minorie" (a.k.a. "The Two Sisters"), and a wonderful take on Hamish Henderson's World War II song "Farewell to Sicily." MacColl's wife, Peggy Seeger, accompanies him on many of these songs, playing guitar and five-string banjo. The accompaniments are mostly subtle, tasteful, and unobtrusive, and many of the most effective tracks—like the devastating "Bramble Briar"—are sung unaccompanied in MacColl's supple and unique voice. Of MacColl's original songs, the best-known included on The Real MacColl is "Dirty Old Town," his ode to Salford, which has been covered by a whole stable of folk artists including the Pogues. The traditional material includes the original recordings from which Steeleye Span learned "Rogues in a Nation," "Sheepcrook and Black Dog," and "Come Ye O'er Frae France," testifying to MacColl's influence on the generation that followed him.

what to buy next: Black and White ♪♪♪♪½ (Green Linnet, 1991, prod. Neill & Calum MacColl) is a CD compiled by MacColl's family from privately owned studio and live tapes. It gathers together a good number of MacColl's favorite traditional songs, such as the "Highland Muster Roll," which he used at the beginning of concerts to test the hall's acoustics and his own voice. It also features many of his best-known compositions, including "Dirty Old Town," "The First Time Ever I Saw Your Face," "The Ballad of Accounting," "The Shoals of Herring," and "Kilroy Was Here." One of MacColl's first songs, "The Manchester Rambler," is given a particularly spirited arrangement by MacColl and many of his friends and family, including his daughter, pop star Kirsty MacColl. This is an excellent and unusual album. Ewan MacColl and Peggy Seeger: Folk on Two ♪♪♪♪ (Cooking Vinyl, 1996, prod. Geoffrey Hewitt) is another interesting and unusual CD. It is not primarily an album of MacColl's singing. Instead, it is better seen as an album about MacColl, featuring some songs sung by him and many of the songs he wrote sung by his friends and disciples. The first six tracks come from a 1986 concert of MacColl's songs in honor of his 70th birthday. Singers include Ian Campbell, Belle Stewart, Ray Fisher, Peggy Seeger, and MacColl; MacColl himself sings only one of these tracks. The other five songs are from another concert honoring MacColl, this one from 1987. Here, Seeger sings two songs and MacColl three. "Joy of Living," the last song on the disc, is a loving farewell to the world from a man nearing the end of his life; the fact that MacColl died only a few years later makes it a poignant moment in retrospect. The album concludes with a fascinating 10-minute interview in which MacColl speaks about the origins of the British folk revival. Classic Scots Ballads ♪♪♪♪ (Tradition, 1997, prod. Anton Glovsky), a reissue of a 1959 LP recorded by MacColl and Seeger, contains another fine selection of songs from the duo; MacColl sings and Seeger provides vocal harmonies and guitar, banjo, concertina, and Appalachian dulcimer backup. This album focuses exclusively on traditional songs, and on songs sung in the lowland Scots tongue; titles include "Aikendrum," "The Maid Gaed Tae the Mill," "Hughie Graeme," and "I Loved a Lass." The arrangements are tasteful and low-key, and allow MacColl's expressive voice as much freedom as it needs. Although it is short, this CD has the advantage of state-of-the-art sound restoration, which makes it sound better than most of the duo's reissues. The Jacobite Rebellions ♪♪♪½ (1962) was one of the albums from which The Real MacColl was compiled. It has also been reissued as a stand-alone CD containing the entire 1962 LP, no more or less. The disc features many stirring performances not found on The Real MacColl. Most of the well-known Jacobite ballads appear on this album. (This is not surprising; they are well known partly because they appeared on this album.) MacColl's rich voice was one of the revival's defining sounds, and his sense of drama informs such songs as "Cam Ye o'er Frae France" and "Donald MacGillivray." The deep loss and unfulfilled longing of many Scots is expressed beautifully in many of these songs, such as "Wae's Me for Prince Charlie" and "Bonnie Moorhen." As on most of his releases, MacColl is accompanied by Seeger on guitar and banjo and also sings many songs unaccompanied. Bothy Ballads of Scotland ♪♪♪½ is an entirely unaccompanied affair. It contains songs of the rural laborers of the last century, which were sung in the bothy or farm barracks. Most of the songs are therefore about farm life, farm work, and love among the fields. Many of the songs show hired laborers in direct conflict or at least disagreements with their employers, a frequent theme of bothy songs. Others treat the classic themes of folk song: unrequited love, premature death, good whiskey, and bawdy fun. MacColl is in fine voice on this disc, which suffers only from being relatively short and rather lo-fi.

the rest:
(With Peggy Seeger) Lover's Garland ♪♪½ (Pye, 1962)
(With Peggy Seeger) At the Present Moment ♪♪½ (Rounder, 1973)
Songs of Robert Burns ♪♪♪ (Ossian, 1996)
Scottish Traditional Songs ♪♪♪ (Ossian, 1996) Traditional Songs and Ballads of Scotland ♪♪♪ (Ossian, 1996) worth searching for: MacColl made more than 150 LPs, so used record bins are bound to have some of his material. One set that was particularly important was the nine-LP The English and Scottish Popular Ballads (Riverside, 1956, prod. Kenneth Goldstein), which was produced and annotated by folklorist Kenneth S. Goldstein and featured both MacColl and A.L. Lloyd. MacColl also recorded three volumes of The English and Scottish Popular Ballads (Folkways, 1961–64) and two volumes of Broadside Ballads (Folkways, 1961). Indeed, MacColl is the main performer on about 20 Folkways albums, all of which are available as custom cassettes or CDs from Smithsonian Folkways Records at the Smithsonian Institution.

influences:
◀◀ Betsy Miller, Jeannie Robertson, Belle Stewart

▶▶ Dolores Keane, John Faulkner, Sandra Kerr, Brian Pearson, Frankie Armstrong, Mick Moloney, Johnstons, Dubliners, Clancy Brothers, Steeleye Span, Archie Fisher, Ray Fisher, Cilla Fisher, Tannahill Weavers, Dick Gaughan

see also: Peggy Seeger

Stephen Winick

Pat MacDonald

See: Timbuk 3

Rod MacDonald

Born August 17, 1948, in Southington, CT.

Poetic vision and journalistic insight are combined through the songs of Rod MacDonald. A graduate of the law school at Columbia University in New York and a former reporter for Newsweek, MacDonald is one of contemporary folk music's most prolific songwriters. His song, "American Jerusalem" was covered by Garnet Rogers and Shawn Colvin, while "Sailor's Prayer" has been interpreted by Suzie Burke, Free Hot Lunch, Jean Redpath, Lisa Neustadt, Gordon Bok, and the Hudson River Sloop Singers. His naturalistic anthem, "Every Little Thing," was covered by the Bitchin' Babes on their 1991 debut album, Buy Me, Bring Me, Take Me: Don't Mess My Hair!!!. One of the spearheads of Greenwich Village's folk scene since the early 1970s, MacDonald recorded many songs for The Fast Folk Musical Magazine and booked musicians for the influential Speakeasy Coffeehouse on Bleeker Street between 1984 and 1987. Although he maintained an apartment in the Village until 1997, MacDonald spent most of his time on the road. He spent several years living in Italy in the late 1980s, and currently calls south Florida home.

what to buy: MacDonald was spending most of his time in northern Italy when he recorded Highway to Nowhere ♪♪♪½ (Shanachie, 1993, prod. Mark Dann, Rod MacDonald). With most tracks originally released in Europe as Bring on the Lion ♪♪♪ (Brambus, 1989, prod. Rod MacDonald, Mark Dann), the album focuses on the more romantic side of MacDonald's repertoire with such songs as "Moonlight and Fire," "Love at the Time," and "The Coming of the Snow." MacDonald's balladeering skills are exemplified by two additional songs included on Highway to Nowhere—"Norman" and "The Way to Calvary." The opening tune, "Norman," is a haunting, darkly humorous look through the eyes of Norman "Psycho" Bates. "The Way to Calvary" is a lengthy tale of two runaway slaves at the time of Christ. "After the Singing" was recorded and originally broadcast during a performance for the National Public Radio in-concert show Mountain Stage.

what to buy next: Although The Man on the Ledge ♪♪♪ (Shanachie, 1994, prod. Rod MacDonald, Mark Dann) includes two songs, "For the People (Song for Czechoslovakia)" and "Auschwitz," the focus reflects MacDonald's views of his homeland in the United States. In addition to a new recording of "American Jerusalem," the album includes politically tinged tunes "Some Things I Like about America," "Dallas," and "Hey, Mr. President," a humorous spoof of President Clinton's pot-smoking experiences. MacDonald's second album, White Buffalo ♪♪♪ (Autogram, 1985/Mountain Railroad, 1985/McDisk, 1987/Gadfly, 1996, prod. Rod MacDonald, Mark Dann), remains a powerful document of the early 1980s Greenwich Village folk scene. With instrumental support from co-producer Mark Dann (bass, guitar), John Kruth (mandolin), Seth Farber (organ), and the late Howie Wyeth (drums) and vocal harmonies by Nikki Matheson and Steve Eriksson, MacDonald successfully showcases his politics-meets-romance songs. "Stop the War" recalls MacDonald's steps towards being a conscientious objector and "The Aliens Came in Business Suits" takes a rocking, witty look at interplanetary invasion. "Ode to the Pretty Girls" and "Cross Country Waltz" offer more romantic views. The title track reflects MacDonald's visits to the Hopi and Sioux reservations.

the rest:
And Then He Woke Up ♪♪♪½ (Gadfly, 1996)

worth searching for: MacDonald's debut album, No Commercial Traffic ♪♪♪♪ (Cinemagic, 1983, prod. Moogy Klingman, G. Parker), is a masterpiece of modern folk-rock. With MacDonald's soft-spoken vocals, acoustic guitar and harmonica accompanied by New York musicians including John Kruth (mandolin, flute), Dann (bass, 12-string guitar), John Lewis (piano), Chuck Hancock (saxophone), and background vocalists including Dave Van Ronk, Tom Intondi, and Lucy Kaplansky, the album documents the power of MacDonald's early work. In addition to the original recordings of "American Jerusalem," "A Sailor's Prayer," and "Every Little Thing," the album includes the folk-rocking tunes, "The Unearthly Fire" and "On the Road (in New York Town)." Many of MacDonald's early songs were featured on issues of The Fast Folk Musical Magazine. A live version of "The Road to Calvary" is included on Circles in the Stream—Volume I ♪♪♪ (WUMB, 1993, prod. Tom Callahan), a collection of folk and acoustic music recorded live at WUMB Public Radio at the University of Massachusetts in Boston.

influences:
◀◀ Bob Dylan, Phil Ochs, Roger McGuinn, John Lennon ▶▶ Jack Hardy, Richard Meyer, Shawn Colvin, Cliff Eberhardt

Craig Harris

Ashley MacIsaac

Born February 24, 1975, in Creignish, Cape Breton, Nova Scotia, Canada.

Young Ashley MacIsaac's success in the music industry shouldn't come as much of a surprise. The teenage fiddle phenomenon has been exposed to music all his life—his father, a fiddle player, would play around the house, and Ashley himself got a rather early start learning to step dance at age five and beginning formal fiddle instruction at the tender age of nine. He began touring Canada as well as U.S. cities such as Detroit and Boston by the time he was 13 and has filled venues ranging from local Cape Breton sites to New York's Carnegie Hall. Does the term "prodigy" come to mind? MacIsaac has won numerous awards, including Best Live Act at the 1995 East Coast Music Awards, and Best New Solo Artist and Best Roots and Traditional Album–Solo at the 1996 Juno Awards. Keep your eyes and ears open as MacIsaac is certainly just scratching the surface of a wealth of talent.

what to buy: MacIsaac was the subject of a major label feeding frenzy while still in his teens, with his major label debut, Hi How Are You Today? ♪♪♪♪½ (A&M, 1995) receiving critical and commercial acclaim. This album, which sold more than 50,000 copies in three weeks, reflects both his Celtic/Canadian heritage and his youthful exuberance in its driving, aggressive instrumentation, a perfect if unlikely combination of ancient Celtic folk songs with modern rock arrangements and attitude.

the rest:
Close to the Floor (Independent, 1992)
A Cape Breton Christmas (Independent, 1993)

influences:
◀◀ Chieftains

Christopher Scanlon

Kate MacKenzie

Born April 25, 1952, in IA.

Kate MacKenzie first gained notice as a regular performer on Garrison Keillor's Prairie Home Companion, where she was both a solo performer and a member of the Hopeful Gospel Quartet alongside Keillor and Robin and Linda Williams. She sang lead with the Minneapolis-based bluegrass band Stoney Lonesome for more than 15 years. Her solo recordings mix bluegrass with honky-tonk, country blues, and swamp music.

what's available: Backed by the likes of Emmylou Harris, Alison Krauss, Béla Fleck, Sam Bush, and the Fairfield Four, the all-acoustic Let Them Talk ♪♪♪♪ (Red House, 1994, prod. Nick Forster), MacKenzie's debut solo album, dances on the line between country and bluegrass. Age of Innocence ♪♪♪½ (Red House, 1996, prod. Nick Forster) is similar in style to her first album, though it also demonstrates MacKenzie's growth as a songwriter. It is very similar to the sort of rootsy country/bluegrass blend for which Emmylou Harris was once noted.

influences:
◀◀ Stoney Lonesome, Emmylou Harris

◀◀ Claire Lynch, Laurie Lewis

Douglas Fulmer

Dougie MacLean

Born in 1954, in Perthshire, Scotland.

Heralded as Scotland's premier folk singing troubadour, Dougie MacLean writes finely crafted songs that are inspired by self-discovery, nature, love, and Gaelic history. Whether he's singing about the Australian outback in "Singing Land" or coming to grips with self-doubt in "Ready for the Storm," his lilting melodies are bright and beautiful lullabies in these troubled times. An exceptional performer who tours the world over, MacLean's concerts are highlighted by his enthusiasm and knack for storytelling between songs. Born a gardener's son in a family where his father played fiddle and his mother the mandolin, MacLean was busking around Scotland in his teens when he was picked to be a member of the Tannahill Weavers, a popular traditional folk group. MacLean, anxious to perform more of his own compositions, teamed up with Alan Roberts, a Scottish guitarist, for two albums, Caledonia and C.R.M. (the latter also with Alex Campbell). Looking to broaden his playing skills further, MacLean joined Silly Wizard, another notable Scottish folk group, and spent six months touring Europe and America with the band. Since 1983 he has been releasing his own songs on his own private label, Dunkeld Records, and enjoying immense popularity as a consummate performer who champions issues such as Scottish independence and protecting the environment. Dunkeld Records can be described as "Scotland's new heritage music" and the roster of folk musicians signed to the label include Hamish Moore, Sheena Wellington, Freda Morrison, Gordon Duncan, and Blackeyed Biddy. In 1989 and 1990, MacLean toured the States and did concerts for the popular public radio series Thistle & Shamrock. He also played the Shetland and Orkney music celebrations, and was a featured performer at the Edinburgh Festival. In 1993 the BBC presented The Land: Songs of Dougie MacLean on television. In the last few years he has made Nashville an important spot on his itinerary, performing in concert with country star Kathy Mattea, and co-producing her Time Passes By album. In the other extreme, 1996 saw one of his songs, "The Gael," given the Techno/Dance treatment by Galleria and played in discos in Europe. MacLean has a special knack for drawing large crowds and devoted fans to his concerts who seem to know every word of every song he's written, and his live appearances are memorable events for all. With the release of the highly successful Riof in 1997, MacLean's popularity only seems to grow in time. Thanks to MacLean starting his own record company, Dunkeld Records, just about all of his albums since 1983 are now available in stores or can be mail-ordered through Dunkeld Records, Cathedral Street, Dunkeld, Perthshire PH8 OAW Scotland. Tel: (01350) 727686; Fax: (01350). 728606. His website, www.dunkeld.co.uk, is divided into "The Studio," "The Gallery," "The Office," and "The Store," with other sites that explain his guitar tunings, tour dates, and guitar and fiddle preferences. There is also an excellent newsletter called Contact (available at the address above) which keeps Dougie fans updated with news and album information.

what to buy: The best compilation of MacLean material can be found on Putamayo Presents the Dougie MacLean Collection ♪♪♪♪♪ (Putamayo, 1995, prod. Dan Storper) and includes songs from seven MacLean albums. Singing Land ♪♪♪♪♪ (Dunkeld Records, 1986, prod. Dougie MacLean, Jennifer MacLean) is the ultimate MacLean experience; it best represents his stylistic brilliance with songs teetering between pure joy ("This Love Will Carry") and destruction ("Guillotine's Release"). Another heavy hitter for best MacLean album would be Riof ♪♪♪♪½ (Dunkeld, 1997, prod. Dougie MacLean, Graeme Hughes, Jennifer MacLean), a fine mix of haunting instrumentals, finely crafted traditional songs, and contemporary songs that whisk you away to the Scottish highlands in a blink of an eye. Also quite good and highly recommended are Real Estate ♪♪♪♪ (Dunkeld, 1988, prod. Dougie MacLean, Jennifer MacLean), Indigenous ♪♪♪½ (Dunkeld, 1991, prod. Dougie MacLean, Graeme Hughes), and Whitewash ♪♪♪½ (Dunkeld, 1990, prod. Dougie MacLean, Jennifer MacLean).

what to buy next: The Plant Life Years ♪♪ (Osmosys, 1995, prod. Nigel Pegrum) is a compilation of songs taken from MacLean's early records Caledonia, C.R.M., and Snaigow, and demonstrates MacLean's fondness for traditional tunes. If you're looking for mainly instrumentals with the MacLean magic touch, then you can't go wrong with Fiddle ♪♪♪ (Dunkeld, 1984, prod. Dougie MacLean, Jennifer MacLean), The Search ♪♪ (Dunkeld, 1990, prod. Dougie MacLean, Graeme Hughes), and Sunset Song ♪♪ (Dunkeld, 1993, prod. Dougie MacLean, Graeme Hughes). All three are rooted in traditional Scottish folklore, and provide plenty of opportunities for MacLean's masterfully played guitar and fiddle to shine. If you like Scottish poets Robert Burns, Neil Gow, and Robert Tannahill, then you'll enjoy MacLean's wonderful song interpretations on Craigie Dhu ♪♪ (Dunkeld, 1983, produced Dougie MacLean, Roy Ashby) and Tribute ♪♪ (Dunkeld, 1995, prod. Dougie MacLean, Graeme Hughes, Jennifer MacLean). Don't forget to wear the tartan! Then again, if you want to hear more of Dougie's own passionate early songwriting in the style of Riof, you should buy yourself Butterstone ♪♪ (Dambuster, 1989, prod. Richard Digance) and Marching Mystery ♪♪ (Dunkeld, 1994, prod. Dougie MacLean, Graeme Hughes, Jennifer MacLean).

what to avoid: If you're thinking of hearing a lot of MacLean on the soundtrack of The Last of the Mohicans (Morgan Creek, 1992, prod. Michael Mann), forget it. With only ten minutes of music by MacLean, there's far too much symphonic trembling to contend with to make it worth the money.

worth searching for: Four MacLean albums are rare and quite worth the treasure hunt. The wonderful Caledonia ♪♪♪ (Plant Life, 1978, prod. Nigel Pegrum) features the original version of "Caledonia," which was later made into a mega-hit by Frankie Miller and which is the nearest thing to a Scottish national anthem in the last 20 years. This early version of the song uses the swirling sounds of the Delme String Quartet to offset MacLean's homesick longing for the mother country. The songs on the album are firmly rooted in tradition, but have the familiar MacLean trademark: jangling guitar and passionate voice. Ace guitarist Alan Roberts is featured throughout. C.R.M. ♪♪♪ (Plant Life, 1979, prod. Nigel Pegrum) is a spirited and rollicking romp with Scottish music legends Alex Campbell and Alan Roberts (again). More of a Celtic hootenanny than other MacLean efforts, C.R.M. has a pub-like feel on numbers like "Rattlin' Roarin' Willie" and "Leis a Lurighan." Snaigow ♪♪ (Plant Life, 1980, prod. Nigel Pegrum) and On a Wing and a Prayer ♪♪ (Plant Life, 1981, prod. Nigel Pegrum) showcase MacLean's early songwriting talents as he refines his personal style.

influences:

- Jackson Browne, James Taylor, Joni Mitchell, Cat Stevens, Frazer McGlen & His Scottish Country Dance Band
- Kathy Mattea, David Wilcox, Martin Simpson, Dick Gaughan

TJ McGrath

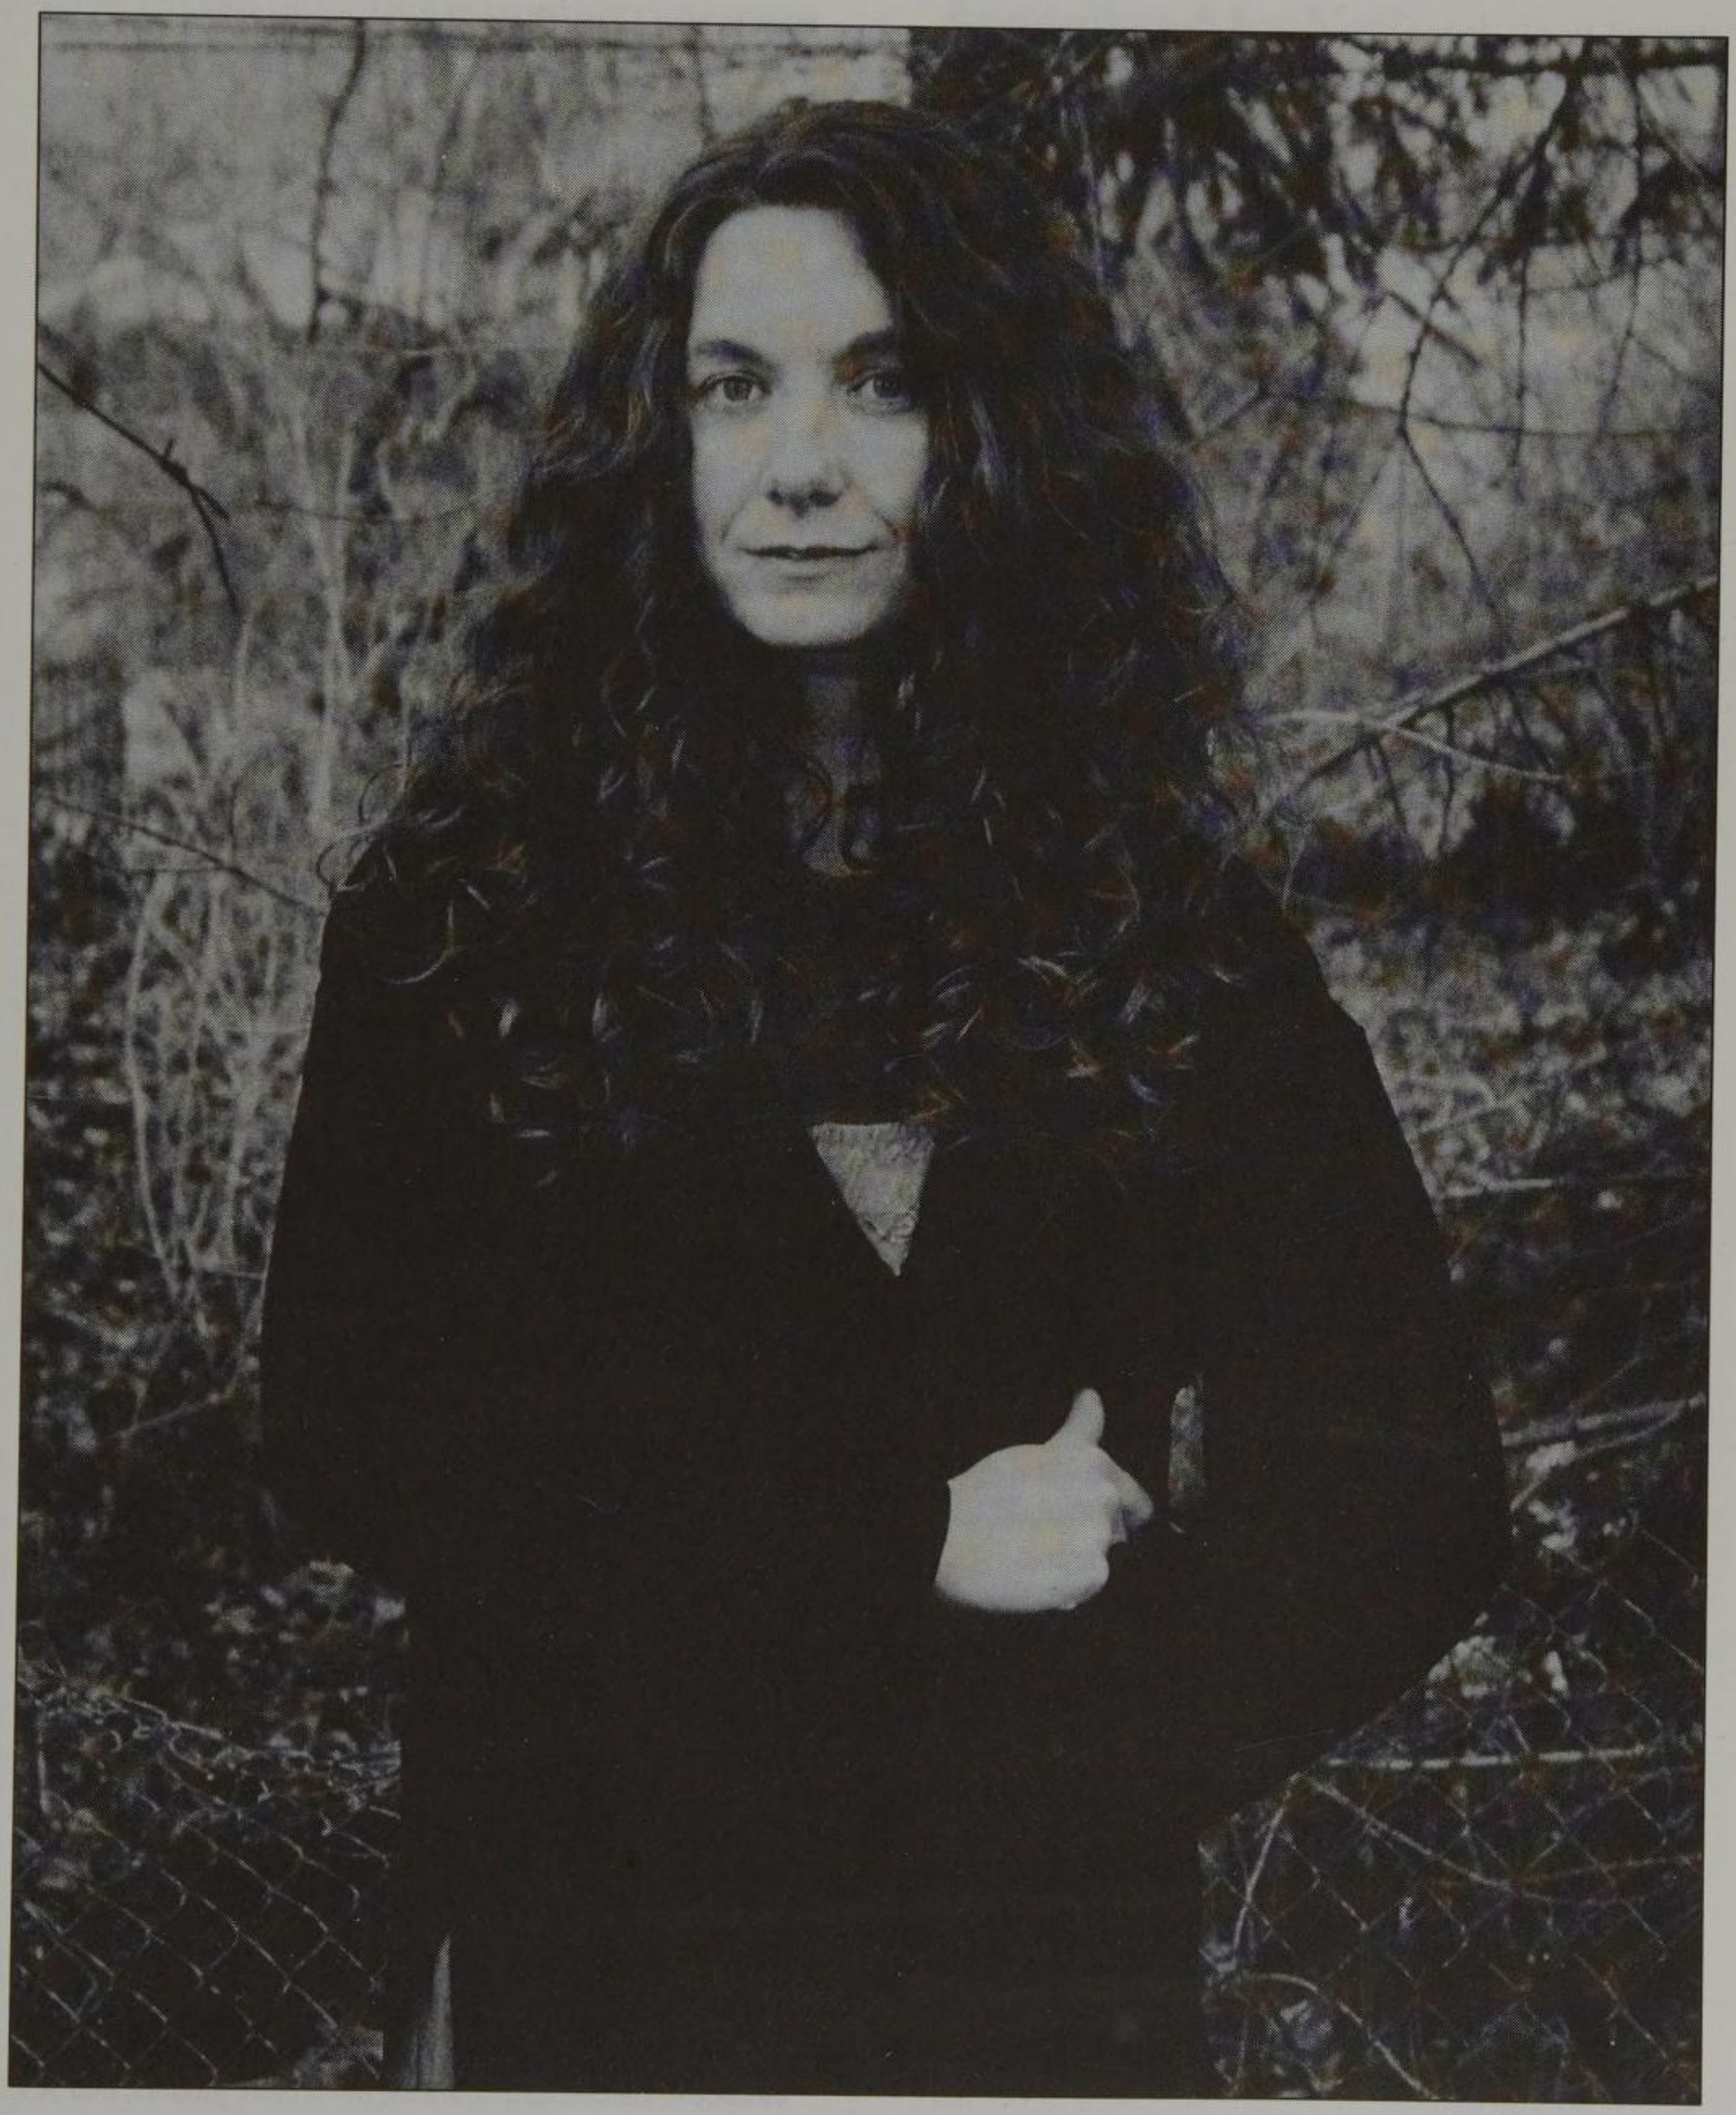
Kate MacLeod

Born March 8, 1961, in Baltimore, MD.

Kate MacLeod is a living argument for the voice as a bluegrass in-

Kate MacLeod

kate macleod 501



strument. Hers is reedy, a bit uneven, like Robin Holcomb's but stripped of many of Holcomb's mannerisms. She's a fine songwriter as well, and one of the best additions to Andrew Calhoun's Waterbug label. A native of Maryland, MacLeod now makes Utah her home, and there's definitely a western feel to her music. Celtic music is a subtler but no less important influence on her music, and she still perfcrms with a Celtic band in Utah.

what's available: Trying to Get It Right ♪♪♪♪ (Waterbug, 1994, prod. Charles Sawtelle) is wonderfully eclectic; it includes a song inspired by William Least Heat-Moon, "PrairyErth," Jean Ritchie's "None but One," and "Alaska," a travel song that uses the 49th state as a metaphor for distant peace. Constant Emotion ♪♪♪♪ (Waterbug, 1997, prod. Charles Sawtelle) has an impressive bluegrass pedigree; it features Peter Rowan and Sally Van Meter. Her songs here have a deceptive naiveté, epitomized by "The Child," which was adapted from the traditional song "False Knight on the Road." (The child comes out as the winner.)

influences:
◀◀ Norman Blake, Jean Ritchie, Mary McCaslin

Pamela Murray Winters

Buddy MacMaster

Born October 18, 1924, in Timmins, Ontario, Canada.

Buddy MacMaster is one of the grand men of Cape Breton fiddle music. Long a legend at parties and dances in Nova Scotia, MacMaster has in recent years begun to take his muscular, elegant fiddling to audiences in Europe and the United States. MacMaster is known throughout Nova Scotia as a dance fiddler, and his strong, rhythmic playing will surprise fans used to the more sedate fiddle style of Scottish musicians like Alasdair Fraser. He grew up in a musical household, first in Ontario, then in the town of Judique, Nova Scotia where his parents moved when he was four. A natural musician, MacMaster began fiddling at age three, played his first concert at age 12 and has been performing regularly ever since. Like many great folk fiddlers, MacMaster for most of his life played music in his off-hours while working a day job to support his family. After his retirement from the Canadian National Railway in 1988 he rededicated himself to music and began to perform regularly outside of Nova Scotia. He has since recorded two albums and performed and taught all across the United States and in Scotland. In 1995, MacMaster received an honorary doctorate from St. Francis Xavier University in Cape Breton for his contributions to Scottish culture.

what to buy: Although MacMaster's profile within the United States has risen slightly over the past few years, his recordings are still rare. They are, however worth searching out as excellent examples of down-home Cape Breton fiddle music. Judique on the Floor ♪♪♪♪ (Sea-Cape, 1989, prod. Allister MacGillavry) is the only one of MacMaster's recordings available on CD. It is an excellent collection of airs, reels, jigs, and strathspeys played with a great deal of drive. Particular highlights are the closing medley begun by "R.P. Cummings' March" and continuing through a brace of strathspeys and reels, and his version of the slow air "Da Slockit Light" composed by Shetland fiddler Tom Anderson.

what to buy next: Glencoe Hall ♪♪♪½ (self-released, 1991, prod. Buddy MacMaster) is a cassette-only release. It, too, is an excellent recording of lively Cape Breton dance music, if a little stiffer than the first album, and deserves release on compact disc. Both recordings are graced by the solid, lively piano playing of John Morris Rankin.

worth searching for: Buddy MacMaster, produced by Peter Murray in 1995, is an excellent video documentary about MacMaster's life and music, and contains several great performances.

influences:
◀◀ Winston "Scotty" Fitzgerald, Bill Lamey, Angus Chisolm ▶▶ Natalie MacMaster, Ashley MacIsaac, Tracey Dares

Tony Ziselberger

Natalie MacMaster

Born June 13, 1972, in Cape Breton, Nova Scotia, Canada.

Natalie MacMaster is at the top of a talented class of young musicians bringing the traditional Scottish fiddle music of Cape Breton, Nova Scotia, to the world. An excellent young fiddler and dancer with undeniable charisma and stage presence, MacMaster is well-known to audiences in the United States from frequent performances at festivals and on tours. She has appeared on the Celtic Fiddle Festival tour with Martin Hayes and Brian MacNeill and toured with the Chieftains, Carlos Santana, and others. She grew up in a musical family, getting her first fiddle at age three and learning to play from some of the greats of Cape Breton music, including her uncle, legendary fiddler Buddy MacMaster. She recorded her first album at age 16 and soon after was performing at major festivals in Canada and the States. MacMaster's career has continued to develop over countless concert appearances, three more albums, and several awards from the Canadian music industry. She is among Canada's best-known traditional performers and has a great future ahead of her.

what to buy: What to buy from MacMaster's small catalog depends on your tastes. For someone just beginning to explore Cape Breton's music No Boundaries ♪♪♪♪ (Rounder, 1997, prod. Chad Irschick) would serve as a fine introduction. A mixed bag of tunes and songs from Cape Breton and beyond, set in both very traditional and contemporary settings, this record was released in Canada by Warner Bros. and was designed to bring Natalie's music to as wide an audience as possible. As with all of her recordings, the playing is flawless and filled with energy, particularly when she works with long-time partners Dave MacIsaac and Tracey Dares. Although some of the contemporary arrangements strain a little too hard at a Sharon Shannon-ish crossover style, Natalie's good taste keeps things pretty well under control. Rounding out the collection are two songs, one sung by Cookie Rankin of the Rankin family, and one by Cape Breton songwriter Bruce Guthro, that provide a nice change of pace from the fiddle tunes. For those music fans who like their coffee black, their scotch neat, and their fiddle music straight, Fit As a Fiddle ♪♪♪♪ (Rounder, 1997, prod. Glen Meisner, Dave MacIsaac) is the recording to choose. MacMaster powers through a solid set of traditional Cape Breton dance music, accompanied by MacIsaac and Dares. The arrangements are more simple than on No Boundaries and the forays into outside styles less adventuresome. This is a simple, powerful album showcasing Natalie at what she does best, Cape Breton fiddling with a lot of drive, swing, and power, an awesome technique wedded to great taste, and a thorough understanding of the tradition.

what to buy next: Previously available only in Canada, A Compilation ♪♪♪½ (MacMaster Music, 1996/Rounder, 1998, compilation prod. Paul MacDonald) is a reissue of selected tracks from MacMaster's first two albums, Four on the Floor and Road to the Isle, both originally on cassette and now out of print. Natalie was just a teenager when she made these strong, self-assured recordings. Her playing is excellent as always, with great swing and lift on the dance tunes and a solid touch on the slow airs. Although she has matured as a musician since these early recordings, the feel, the technique, and most important, the taste were all there from the beginning as this fine CD shows.

influences:

◀◀ Buddy MacMaster, Brendan Mulvihill, Jerry Holland

▶▶ Ashley MacIsaac, Richard Wood

Tony Ziselberger

Madeline MacNeil

Born January 17, 1940, in Norfolk, VA.

Madeline MacNeil is well known for her talents as a singer and performer on the hammered and fretted dulcimers. She is equally well known for the warmth and generosity with which she shares her music and encourages others to play and sing. Her angelic voice, full of power and precision, combined with the gentleness of her dulcimer playing, casts a magical spell over her audiences. The silver-haired woman with the golden voice has won the admiration of countless fans across the country. MacNeil's 25 years as a professional musician have included performances at the Smithsonian Institution, the National Cathedral in Washington, D.C., and many folk festivals across the country. She is recognized by the Virginia Commission for the Arts as a Touring Virginia Artist and has received an Arts on the Road grant from the commission. The Summer Solstice Traditional Music Festival honored her for her contributions to acoustic music through performing, books, and recordings, as did the California State Legislature. MacNeil has received an Artie award in music from Virginia's Shenandoah Valley Arts Council and she also won an Indie from the National Association of Independent Record Distributors for her recording Heart's Ease. Since 1975 MacNeil has published the Dulcimer Players News, a quarterly magazine, which has guided players, builders, and dulcimer enthusiasts (both fretted and hammered) on their musical journey.

what to buy: A Place Apart ♪♪♪♪½ (Turquoise Records, 1991, prod. Seth Austen) is a premier example of MacNeil's work and stands just slightly above the rest of her catalog as it contains the most beautiful rendition of "Shenandoah." This collection of contemporary and traditional songs is stitched together by "meaningful words and enchanting melodies which transcend time." Hammered and fretted dulcimers are featured with accompaniment by talented musicians, Seth Austen (guitar) and Ralph Gordon (bass, cello).

what to buy next: Soon It's Going to Rain ♪♪♪♪ (Roots & Branches, 1992, prod. Seth Austen) has a theme of water flowing through this recording, creating a sense of tranquillity. In addition to Austen's guitar, Frances Lapp Averitt joins on flute and Flawn Williams adds harmony vocals, including a wonderful duet on "Your Song," written by Elton John and Bernie Taupin. All through the Night ♪♪♪♪ (Roots & Branches, 1995, prod. Seth Austen) is music for eventide with songs telling of healing and peace, inspired by visits to her neighbors at the Holy Cross Abbey. Several talented musicians and singers lend harmony on this recording, including Allen Dec (harp). Lone Wild Bird ♪♪♪♪ (Roots & Branches, 1993, prod. Seth Austen) features MacNeil with her voice, hammered dulcimer, and fretted dulcimer accompanied by the beautiful guitar music of her long-time friend Austen. "Who Knows Where the Time Goes?" is absolutely captivating. Heart's Ease ♪♪♪♪ (Turquoise Records, 1989, prod. Seth Austen) focuses on traditional Celtic and classical pieces. The hammered dulcimer is joined by guitar, cello, flute, harpsichord, and piano in duets and trios playing beautiful traditional music of Ireland and England, along with compositions by Bach, Beethoven, O'Carolan, Chiesa, Sor, and Austen. All MacNeil recordings are available from Roots & Branches Music, P. O. Box 2164, Winchester, Virginia 22604.

the rest:
The Holly and the Ivy ♪♪♪½ (Kicking Mule Records, 1995)
Christmas Comes Anew ♪♪♪½ (Kicking Mule Records, 1995)
The Crowning of the Year ♪♪♪½ (Roots & Branches, 1996) worth searching for: Strawberry Fair ♪♪♪½ (Troubadour Music, 1977, prod. Madeline MacNeil, Phillip Mason) is a recording of singing with accompaniment on Appalachian dulcimer but is now out of print.

influences:
◀◀ Peter, Paul & Mary, Judy Collins, Ralph Lee Smith, Russell Fluharty, Sam Herrmann

▶▶ Steve Schneider, Sam Rizzetta

Heidi Cerrigione

Uncle Dave Macon

Born David Harrison Macon, October 7, 1870, in Smartt Station, TN. Died March 22, 1952.

David Macon became better known as simply "Uncle Dave," but was also called "the Dixie Dewdrop." In his 50s Macon began performing banjo and, in 1925, joined the Grand Ole Opry, becoming one of its first real star attractions. Today he is a true legend in country music and was an early member of the Country Music Hall of Fame, elected in 1966. Born near McMinnville, Tennessee, Macon moved with his family to Nashville at age 13. Inspired by banjoist and comedian Joel Davidson, he took up the banjo at 15. He moved to a farm near Readyville, Tennessee, and married Matilda Richardson. By 1900 Macon regularly hauled produce (and liquor) under the auspices of the Macon Midway Mule & Wagon Transportation Co., taking his banjo along to entertain folks in the towns of Woodbury and Murfreesboro and points in between. With the advent of the automobile, which he detested (Macon never learned to drive), his company went out of business. By age 53, Macon had begun performing at parties and other gatherings, and he soon received an invitation to play at a theater in Birmingham, Alabama. He began making records for the Vocalion label and, along the way, charmed audiences everywhere with his freewheeling banjo picking and wild storytelling. At 56 he joined the Opry and remained its brightest light for the next 15 years. In 1939 Macon made his motion picture debut in Grand Ole Opry, performing alongside his son Dorris. Legends like Uncle Dave Macon are few and far between; the quintessential showman, he was revered by those who knew him and will continue to be by those who've only heard the many stories that are told about him to this day.

what to buy: In spite of the lesser sound quality of some of its tracks, Country Music Hall of Fame Series ♪♪♪♪½ (MCA, 1992, prod. Country Music Foundation) contains a spectacular selection of Macon's best-loved work. The notes are thorough and entertaining.

what to buy next: Travelin' down the Road ♪♪♪♪ (County, 1995, prod. Gary B. Reid) duplicates some tracks on the CMF set, but these were all recorded, with fiddler Charlie Arrington, during 1937–38.

the rest:
(With the Fruit Jar Drinkers) Go Long Mule ♪♪♪♪ (County, 1972/1994)

worth searching for: Several LPs or cassette-only releases of Macon material, most on Old Homestead Records, are still floating around and may be of interest once you get hooked on Uncle Dave's music.

influences:
◀◀ Joel Davidson, Sam & Kirk McGee

▶▶ Stringbean

Stephen L. Betts

Mad Pudding

Formed 1989, in Vancouver, British Columbia, Canada.

Amy Stephen, vocals, accordion, pennywhistle; Andy Hillhouse, vocals, guitar, mandolin, bouzouki; Cam Wilson, fiddle, vocals; Richard Ernst, fretless bass, vocals; Boris Favre, electric bass, piano, vocals, pieds (feet); John Hildebrand, drums & percussion (1993–present).

Many of the great bands—the Beatles, Silly Wizard, Steeleye Span, Oyster Band, Fairport Convention, Capercaillie–worked because of core members who established a special chemistry. Mad Pudding, formed around Andy Hillhouse, Amy Stephen, and Cam Wilson who met as college students at the University of British Columbia, Vancouver, in the late 1980s, may be joining that illustrious company. Hillhouse and Stephen began playing as a duo but expanded to a trio when they met Wilson, who brought with him Ottawa Valley fiddle tunes he'd learned from his father. Original bassist Richard Ernst joined in 1989, but the band decided to "get serious" when drummer Hildebrand completed the quintet in 1993. With Hildebrand, Mad Pudding became a full tilt Anglo-Celtic/Canadian roots folk-rock band whose repertoire included traditional and self-penned material. That line-up completed two albums and toured throughout Canada, also visiting the United States and Great Britain. Emst left the band and was replaced by French-born Boris Favre, whose interest in French-based folk music is reflected in Mad Pudding's third album, Rattle on the Stovepipe, which includes his original song "Le Beaujolais Nouveau," a celebration of the arrival of the new Beaujolais wine. It's not essential, but you may enjoy the music more with a glass of same in hand.

what to buy: Mad Pudding's eclectic tastes are well showcased on Rattle on the Stovepipe ♪♪♪♪½ (Iona, 1997, prod. Bil VornDick), which includes hot fiddle and accordion led instrumentals, Amy Stephen's "Punjabi Marker"—which sounds like a centuries-old British ballad—and even two catchy pop country numbers: "Rowena" and "Whew Were You." Favre and Hildebrand form a swingin', funky rhythm section, and Stephen's and Hillhouse's vocals are more assured (great harmonies). This album also proves that Mad Pudding is a band whose exuberant live presence can be captured in the studio!

the rest:
Bruce's Vegetable Garden ♪♪♪½ (Fiendish Records, 1994) Dirt & Stone ♪♪♪½ (Fiendish Records, 1995)

influences:
◀◀ Capercaillie, Stan Rogers, Silly Wizard, Spirit of the West, Moving Hearts

▶▶ Seelyhoo, James Keelaghan, Sharon Shannon, Kathryn Tickell

Ken Roseman

Joanie Madden

Born May 26, 1965, in NY.

Best known in her role as leader of the group Cherish the Ladies, Joanie Madden is rapidly developing the reputation as a fine solo artist as well. Her strong and compelling Irish whistle and flute performances have inspired many to take up the instruments. Her outstanding, energetic performances and creative improvisation have earned Madden a reputation for being one of the best Irish flute players of all time. Born to Irish parents in America, Madden has called on her heritage when creating her own sense of musicality. She studied whistle with Jack Coen, and had soon earned the title of World Champion on both whistle and concert flute. In 1984 she won the Senior All-Ireland Championship, the first American ever to do so. Despite her youth, she is already recognized as a prime mover in preserving Irish heritage in America, and has won the Wild Geese award and been inducted into the Irish-American Musicians Hall of Fame. She has appeared as a guest on numerous recordings, including such artists as Sinead O'Connor, Sheila Noonan, Pete Seeger, and Eileen Ivers.

what's available: Song of the Irish Whistle ♪♪♪♪ (Hearts of Space, 1996, prod. Brian Keane) is an exciting collection of Irish tunes performed with passion by Madden. Filling the album with a wide variety of textures, Madden is joined by fine musicians Jerry O'Sullivan on uilleann pipes, Carol Thompson on Celtic harp, Brian Keane on guitars and keyboards, and others. From the evocative "Women of Ireland" to the fantastically rhythmic "The Legacy Jig/Tar Road to Sligo," Madden has created a picture of Ireland as varied as the landscape itself. Predominantly a whistle recording, Madden does pick up her flute for a lilting Turlough O'Carolan tune. On her earlier album, A Whistle on the Wind ♪♪♪½ (Green Linnet, 1994, prod. Joanie Madden, Gabriel Donohue), Madden's flute and whistle front a wide array of instruments, including accordion, guitar, cello, and fiddle. The title track, "A Whistle on the Wind/The Jug of Punch/The Dogs among the Bushes," combines three terrific tunes into one exciting medley. Madden's personal version of O'Carolan's "Blind Mary" is quite inspired. She ends the album accompanying a touching story-poem recited by Liam Clancy.

influences:
◀◀ Joe Madden, Jack Coen, Mike Rafferty

▶▶ Emer Mayock

see also: Cherish the Ladies

Jo Hughey Morrison

The Maddox Brothers & Rose /Rose Maddox

Formed 1937, in Modesto, CA.

Cliff Maddox, vocals, guitar, mandolin; Cal Maddox, vocals, guitar, harmonica; Fred Maddox, vocals, bass; Don Maddox, vocals, fiddle; folk rock in the u.s.

Bob Dylan once said folk-rock was an ugly word. It may be ugly, but it's about the only term that fits the hybrid of folk music and rock and roll that made pop stars of the Byrds, Simon & Garfunkel, Sonny & Cher, the Turtles, and Mr. D. himself. A little less danceable than rhythm and blues–derived rock and roll, folk-rock still depended on the drive of the backbeat. Two major strains emerged in the United States in the 1960s. One contingent was singer-songwriters, who came up through Greenwich Village and East Coast coffeehouses and went electric after Dylan turned on his amplifiers at the Newport Folk Festival. The West Coast contingent was more diverse and more likely to be influenced by the Los Angeles pop-music machine. They usually favored vocal harmonies and guitar-group formats—the Byrds and the Beau Brummels were among prime examples. Coming out of the same stew of influences, the Jefferson Airplane and Grateful Dead can rightly be called folk-rock groups, although they were known as psychedelic or acid-rock bands. There's nothing tidy about these divisions—the Mamas and the Papas and the Lovin' Spoonful had ties to both coasts. Folk-rock was the first of many hyphenated rock hybrids, and the term connotes a '60s relic. The style has never really died, though—it just goes by different names. It would be easy to make a case that Bruce Springsteen, Shawn Colvin, Ani DiFranco, and R.E.M. are folk-rockers.

Salvatore Caputo

Henry Maddox, vocals, mandolin, guitar; Rose Maddox (born August 15, 1925, in Boaz, AL), vocals, bass, snare drum.

Favorites in California from the time they formed until they finally disbanded in 1957, the Maddox Brothers and Rose were a raucous bunch who billed themselves as "the most colorful hillbilly band in America." They played a loud, infectious mix of country boogie, rockabilly, Western swing, honky-tonk, and even gospel, were famous for their outrageous outfits, and recorded for 4 Star Records and Columbia. When the band broke up, Rose, who was a mere 11 years old when the family formed its band as an alternative to the itinerant fruit-tramp life that had been their lot since they had immigrated to California from Alabama, continued to perform as a soloist, a path she continues to this day. She's recorded for Columbia, Capitol (cutting several hit duets with Buck Owens during the 1960s), Portland, Starday, Takoma, Varrick, and, most recently, Arhoolie, which has also released several volumes of Maddox Brothers and Rose reissues over the years. She is popular in the United States at bluegrass festivals and has quite a reputation in rockabilly circles in Europe. Ill health has slowed Rose down, but hasn't kept her from touring and recording extensively.

what to buy: America's Most Colorful Hillbilly Band—Their Original Recordings 1946–1951 ♪♪♪♪½ (Arhoolie, 1993, prod. Chris Strachwitz) and Maddox Brothers & Rose, Volume II ♪♪♪♪½ (Arhoolie, 1995, prod. Chris Strachwitz) offer the most comprehensive overview of the band at its peak.

what to buy next: On the Air: The 1940s ♪♪♪♪ (Arhoolie, 1996, prod. Chris Strachwitz) presents intriguing live broadcasts from 1940 to 1949, including the band's 1949 appearance on the Grand Ole Opry. A Collection of Standard Sacred Songs ♪♪♪ (King, 1960) reissues Starday gospel material.

worth searching for: Rockin' Rollin' Maddox Brothers & Rose ♪♪♪♪½ (Bear Family, 1981, prod. Richard Weize) is a German reissue of the band's more rockabillyish material. Columbia Historic Edition ♪♪♪♪ (Columbia, 1985) is an excellent reissue of the band's Columbia material.

solo outings:

Rose Maddox:

Rose Maddox Sings Bluegrass ♪♪♪♪½ (Capitol, 1962)
Rose of the West Coast Country ♪♪♪♪ (Arhoolie, 1990)
The One Rose: The Capitol Years ♪♪♪♪½ (Bear Family, 1993) Thirty-Five Dollars and a Dream ♪♪♪ (Arhoolie, 1994)

influences:

◀◀ Hoosier Hotshots, Patsy Montana

▶▶ Ranch Romance, BR5-49

Randy Pitts

Alan Mager

Born December 25, 1943, in Leominster, MA.

This Virginia-based autoharp recording artist was the 1993 International Autoharp Champion in the contest at Winfield, Kansas. Alan Mager has also earned several top honors at the Mountain Laurel Autoharp Championship. He's a precision player who skillfully adds "color chords" to his music in tasteful array. He is generally thought of as a chromatic autoharp player and his use of diminished seventh and suspended fourth chords is unique of his style. Mager performs and teaches at numerous folk festivals each year and regularly contributes articles and musical arrangements to various music publications.

what's available: Hear the Colors ♪♪♪♪ (Alan F. Mager, 1996, prod. Alan F. Mager, Russ Birch) is an instrumental recording that will appeal to a broad range of listeners. The variety of material includes "Over the Waterfall," a traditional reel; "The Hundred Pipers," a Scottish jig; "How Great Thou Art," a hymn; "Harvest Home," a hornpipe; "Polka Tsia-Tsia Lya-Lya," a Russian polka; and "Planxty Fanny Power," a Turlough O'Carolan piece. The diversity of the selection of tunes is not at all disconcerting, but is rather an interesting collection of music played expertly on the autoharp. Mager's precise melody leads are nicely supported throughout the recording by Charley Groth (guitar, mandolin, bass), Jan Milner (Appalachian dulcimer, guitar), and Doug Travers (guitar). The "Friendship Waltz" and "March of the 10,000 Autoharpers" are compositions by Groth, a talented songwriter from Florida who was named a Florida Master Artist in 1991 by the Bureau of Florida Folklife. Hear the Colors is available from the artist at P.O. Box 1221, Annandale, Virginia 22003.

worth searching for: The Fairhaired Boy ♪♪♪ (Sonority Records, 1990, prod. Alan F. Mager) is available on cassette tape and is a solo autoharp recording that includes some nice vocals.

influences:

◀◀ Mike Seeger, Bryan Bowers, Mike Fenton

▶▶ Les Gustafson-Zook, Tina Louise Barr

Heidi Cerrigione

Magical Strings

Formed 1980, in Seattle, WA.

Pam Boulding, hammered dulcimer, Celtic harp, piano, pennywhistle, lyre, harmonium, field organ; Phil Boulding, hammered dulcimer, nylon- and wire-strung harps, lyre, valiha (a bamboo harp from Madagascar), whistles.

Phil Boulding was building harps and dulcimers during the late '70s, when future wife Pam took a dulcimer class from him. Married in 1980, they started recording the same year and eventually built a formidable cottage business focused on teaching, building, and performing. They also had five children, who began performing with them too. In 1988 the Bouldings toured with Dan Fogelberg and subsequently played on his album River of Souls. They were the among the first to pioneer the blended "magical" harp and dulcimer string sound. Irish tunes, particularly the harp music of eighteenth-century musician Turlough O'Carolan, were their initial core sound but, like many other artist, they have since gravitated towards primarily original compositions. In 1984 they started using Windham Hill greats Michael Ó Domhnaill and Billy Oskay as producers, effectively raising the technical level of their recordings to match their always impressive musical skills. Over the years, the music of Magical Strings has matured and become much more innovative—most likely a reflection of the Boulding's musically rich and diverse lives. Their life together as a family with five children and their deep attraction to Ireland inspires much of their original material, but they also incorporate elements of harp and harp-like traditions from many cultures, with Islands Calling perhaps the best example. The Washington Post describes their music as being "warm, graceful and sonically gorgeous."

what to buy: Crossing to Skellig ♪♪♪♪♪ (Flying Fish, 1990) opens with the classic Magical Strings sound of a cascade of ringing, rhythmic strings. Irish bodhrán great Tommy Hayes joins them on some jigs. Oskay adds fiddle, and son Brenin adds cello on a Welsh set. There is also a haunting Norwegian air that Philip skillfully plays on the whistle. The title cut, "Crossing to Skellig"—Skellig is a rock pinnacle eight miles off the coast of Ireland that was home to a sixth-century monastery—is a tone poem that begins with spacious whistle and harp tremolo, moves into a tripping jig that marks their journey, and then melts back into the open sounds of peace and wind. You can imagine them standing atop the rocks! Islands Calling ♪♪♪♪♪ (Earthbeat! Records, 1996, prod. Cary Black) stretches their musical directions away from Celtic towards other "island-based" musical traditions, including Hawaiian slack-key guitar, Jamaican joviality, Madagascar's harp-like "valiha" music, and Bahaman guitar.

what to buy next: For a more Celtic sound, Above the Tower ♪♪♪♪ (Flying Fish, 1985) is a good selection. If the newer, world music–inspired sounds appeal to you, then definitely buy Bell off the Ledge ♪♪♪♪½ (Flying Fish, 1993). Also of interest to fans is Harp (Flying Fish, 1988, prod. Billy Oskay), a Phil Boulding solo that is more of a new-age, gentle, reflective CD. Some unique techniques he has developed can be heard on "Spiral Suspension." The sitar-like sounds and bends he gets out of the harp are amazing.

the rest:
Springtide ♪♪♪ (Flying Fish, 1982)
On the Burren ♪♪♪½ (Flying Fish, 1984)
Good People All ♪♪♪½ (Flying Fish, 1992)

worth searching for: Dan Fogelberg's CD River of Souls ♪♪ (Full Moon/Epic, 1993, prod. Dan Fogelberg) features the Bouldings. It is a somewhat unusual collaboration for Magical Strings and may not be of specific interest to their fans unless they also know and like Fogelberg, a singer songwriter in the vein of James Taylor or Scotland's Dougie MacLean.

influences:
◀◀ Chieftains, Jolly Boys, West African kora player Moussa Kanoute, Keola Beamer

▶▶ Ceoltoiri, Sileas, Kim Robertson

Karen Ashbrook

Magnolia Sisters

Formed 1994, in Faiquitaique, LA.

Ann Allen Savoy, fiddle, accordion, guitar, triangle, frattoir, vocals; Jane Vidrine, fiddle, guitar, vocals. Guest "sisters" have included: Tina Pilione, fiddle, guitar; Lisa McCauley, guitar, triangle; Deborah Helen Viator, guitar, vocals; Christine Balfa, guitar.

Years ago, Cajun accordion maker Marc Savoy expounded that there was much more to Cajun cuisine than just spices and that people overlooked that Cajuns consumed more than just hot and spicey foods. The same can be said for Cajun music: people expect the driving accordion or flashy fiddle or pulsing zydeco band, not the complicated old-time music in which the Magnolia Sisters specialize. The Sisters are the continuing work of Ann Allen Savoy and Jane Vidrine. They specialize in something very rare to Cajun music—harmony singing. Both women are excellent musicians, trading between guitar, accordion, and fiddle. Savoy is better known as the singer and guitar player in the Savoy-Doucet Band.

what to buy: Prends Courage ♪♪♪♪ (Arhoolie, 1995, prod. Chris Strachwitz) has a great tune section that pulls from all eras of Cajun music and styles and brings the songs into the present without forsaking the past. Savoy's accordion playing reminds one of Joe Falcon, whose simple direct style was extremely popular in the 1920s. Vidrine's fiddling evokes the warmth of Will Balfa, and together Savoy and Vidrine fiddles intertwine in the same manner as their voices. Their voices are front and center on the recordings, whether it's Savoy's solo voice on "Les Fils a Nonc Hilaire" and the title tune, the almost Celtic style of unaccompanied singing on "Sept Ans Sur Mer (Seven Years on the Sea)" and "Derrier chez Nous," or the hot, string-band laughter of "Un' Piastre Ici, Un' Piastre La-Bas." Each song is picked with care and placed in an arrangement that brings it to fruition—like D.L. Menard's "Il savait pas j'etais mariée," which is revealed as a Carter Family song in Cajun French!

what to buy next: Cajun Music: A Reflection of a People, Volume I (Bluebird Press, 1984), Ann Savoy's excellent book, brings together transcriptions of hundreds of Cajun songs, with historical photographs, discographies, biographies, and interviews with all the important makers of Cajun and zydeco music.

worth searching for: The documentary Marc and Ann (Flower Films, 1991), directed by Les Blank, Maureen Gosling, and Chris Simon, takes an in-depth look at Marc and Ann Savoy and their musical friends.

influences:
◀◀ Cleoma Falcon, Wallace Cheese Read, Dewey Balfa

▶▶ California Cajun Orchestra, Balfa Toujours, Horace Trahan

Jared Snyder

Magpie

Formed 1973, in Kent, OH.

Greg Artzner, guitar and vocals (born July 16, 1952 in Canton, OH); Terry Leonino, dulcimer, harmonica, mandolin, rhythm guitar, vocals (born September 23, 1951 in Akron, OH).

In September of 1973 Terry Leonino and Greg Artzner began to play music together in their home base in industrial Ohio. They chose the name Magpie for their band originally on a whim, but through all the lore they collected, the name grew in personal significance for them as years went by. Leonino was a student in her senior year at Kent State University in the fall of '73, and when she graduated the following spring the couple piled into Artzner's VW bus and moved to the Washington, D.C. area where they've resided ever since. Magpie has traveled and toured extensively, playing at folk clubs and festivals throughout the United States and Canada, touring Mexico twice in a cultural exchange program through the USIA and the Mexican government, and touring throughout England and Scotland five times. From the beginning, the duo's interest in various musical styles has led them to be eclectic in their repertoire. Rather than confine themselves to a single style, Magpie has always embraced a musical rainbow, and with impressive proficiency in each different genre. From classic country, swing, and blues of the 1920s and '30s, to contemporary songs written by themselves and others, they cover a lot of musical ground. With the power of their delivery, Magpie is well known for lending their voices to struggles for justice, whether it be for the rights of Native peoples, the quest for peace, on behalf of the homeless, or to help heal our environment. They walk their talk, and their performances of hard-hitting topical songs are second to none. Leonino's voice is a truly impressive instrument, not only because of its natural power, but also because of her versatility. She is a gifted singer of jazz and blues in the tradition of Connie Boswell and Billie Holiday, but is equally comfortable with the subtle beauty of traditional folk and contemporary songs. Add to this her uncanny ability to find the perfect harmony line, and, in a powerful blend of two voices, you have a real treat for the ear. As if this weren't enough, she also plays excellent harmonica, mandolin, fretted dulcimer, and rhythm guitar. Artzner is a truly outstanding guitarist whose fingerstyle approach owes a lot to his heroes, guitar legends such as Reverend Gary Davis, Big Bill Broonzy, Nick Lucas, and Rolly Brown. His playing is the solid foundation of Magpie's sound, providing a hard-driving rhythm or a ringing lyrical beauty as needed. From a slow Scots air or a plaintive ballad to rollicking ragtime blues or infectious swing, he covers it all and his high baritone voice has equal range, giving power and beauty to a growling blues, a Chilean lament, or a sweet croon. Over the years, Magpie has produced thematic programs of music for museums (including many for the Smithsonian Institution), schools, and other special events. They are master artists with the Wolf Trap Institute for Early Learning through the Arts, and have many years of experience working in schools, performing for children and families. Magpie has released six recordings. Their first, Magpie & Friends, and their third, If It Ain't Love, showcase their broad range of styles and themes. Their second album, Working My Life Away, is an excellent collection of songs about working people. Their fourth and fifth albums, Living Planet and Circle of Life, address the subject of the earth and the need for environmental healing. Circle of Life is Magpie's first album for children, and has been greeted with great acclaim by children, parents, educators, and such environmental notables as the National Audubon Society. A portion of the proceeds from both these albums is donated to environmental action groups. Magpie's sixth album, Seed on the Prairie, is a showcase for their songwriting. CDs and tapes can be ordered direct from Magpie at P.O. Box 5467, Takoma Park, Maryland 20913.

what to buy: Seed on the Prairie ♪♪♪♪ (Long Tail Records, 1994, prod. Greg Artzner, Terry Leonino, Ronnie Freeland) is full of songs that tell stories and weave a spell. There are stories of struggle and celebration, songs of the political and the spiritual, of love, loss and rebirth, songs of Mother Earth. It's also the first album on their own label, Long Tail Records, and marks 20 years of joint music-making for the duo. Although each song is contemporary, virtually every one has a somewhat traditional feel and most are oriented to political, humanitarian, or community concerns.

what to buy next: Circle of Life ♪♪♪ (Long Tail Records, 1997, prod. Terry Leonino, Greg Artzner, Jim Ebert) is Magpie's children's album originally released in 1992 and re-released on the group's own label. No Magpie album is neutral on subjects such as the environment, and this is no exception. Songs like "Habitat," "It Really Isn't Garbage," and "Song of the Whales," will educate as well as entertain. Spoken in Love ♪♪♪ (Long Tail Records, 1995, prod. Reggie Harris, Terry Leonino, Chris Andersen) was recorded in concert with longtime Magpie collaborators Kim and Reggie Harris at the Walkabout Clearwater Coffeehouse. The "quartet" has been in great demand at festivals and this album will give you a chance to hear why. Pete Seeger describes it as "a wonderful group of new and old songs woven together by four wonderful singers. They'll have you singing along with them."

the rest:
Magpie & Friends ♪♪½ (Folkways/Smithsonian, 1978) (cassette only) Working My Life Away ♪♪♪ (Collector, 1983)
If It Ain't Love ♪♪♪ (Philo, 1986)
Living Planet ♪♪½ (Collector, 1990)

worth searching for: Magpie contributed the original music to Out of the Egg, a children's video that follows the adventures of three curious junior rangers who set out, with Ranger Bill, to solve the mystery of what's inside an egg that the children find hidden in the grass. Could it be a box turtle or a barn owl? How about a snake? Freedom Is a Constant Struggle ♪♪♪ (Folk Era, 1994, prod. various) is a compilation of songs of the Mississippi Civil Rights movement with artists such as Eric Andersen, Judy Collins, Richard and Mimi Fariña, Bob Dylan, and Tom Paxton. Magpie has one cut. Similarly, The Long Walk to Freedom Reunion Concert ♪♪½ (Revolt in Records, 1996, prod. Susie Erenrich, Cultural Center for Social Change) was recorded live at a reunion concert for singer-songwriters from the civil rights movement. Magpie has two cuts on this album. Magpie's first LP Live at the Dunham Inn 𝅘𝅥𝅯𝅘𝅥𝅯 (Folkways, 1978, prod. Randy Knapp) is an early example of the Magpie sound. It's probably impossible to find, but completists will want it. Long Tail Records' CDs and tapes can be ordered direct from Magpie at P.O. Box 5467, Takoma Park, Maryland 20913.

Taj Mahal (© Ken Settle)

influences:

⏪ Phil Ochs, Boswell Sisters, Billie Holiday, Victor Jara

⏩ Kim & Reggie Harris, Cathy Fink & Marcy Marxer

Neal Walters

Taj Mahal

Born Henry St. Claire Fredericks, May 17, 1942, in New York, NY.

Although he grew up in Brooklyn and went to college in Massachusetts, Taj Mahal extends his hands to other musical cultures and soaks them up like a sponge. His father was a jazz musician, his mother a gospel singer, and his 30-plus years of exploring the blues, ragtime, and Caribbean rhythms show those and many other influences. If his music seems like a history lesson at times, those didactic leanings are matched by his boundless enthusiasm and a formidable instrumental versatility. Mahal's journey began during the mid-1960s with the equally eclectic Ry Cooder in a short-lived assemblage called the Rising Sons. Mahal's first albums dug into standard blues in a manner that presented him as a guardian of tradition, then abruptly veered toward African rhythms, Caribbean reggae, and even children's music before venturing into the then-untested waters of world music. Uncharacteristically quiet during the 1980s, Taj returned to a blues approach in the '90s. Whether he's with a full band playing pop arrangements or stripped-down roots, Mahal has asserted himself yet again as a keeper of the faith and a still vital force that continues to roam past musical boundaries.

what to buy: Two albums on one disc, Giant Step/De Old Folks at Home ♪♪♪♪ (Columbia, 1969, prod. David Rubinson) tosses up distinctively different sides of the blues coin, the former lightly rocking with a down-home band while the rural solo blues of the latter reveal a surprisingly adept multi-instrumentalist and vocalist. For a harder-edged entry into his early work, Taj's Blues ♪♪♪♪ (Columbia Legacy, 1992, prod. David Rubinson, Taj Mahal) is a handy sampler of some of his more celebrated moments, such as the classic stomper "Statesboro Blues" and "Dust My Broom."

what to buy next: The ease with which Mahal slips into third-world rhythms is disarming, as the easy-fitting reggae beats of World Music ♪♪♪♪ (Columbia Legacy, 1993, prod. Lawrence Cohn) demonstrate. Since it contains nearly all of Mo' Roots plus other tracks in re-mastered form, it gets the slight edge over Mo' Roots itself. In a welcome paradoxical twist, the Grammy-winning Phantom Blues ♪♪♪♪ (Private Music, 1996, prod. John Porter) deserves the attention it received. Save for the rolling, country soul of the opening cut, he didn't pen a single tune, instead paying a charging homage to mentors like Fats Domino and Ray Charles, his vocals as muscular as ever. His clear love for the material provides an extra shot of energy.

what to avoid: If you have kids, by all means go for Shake Sugaree—Taj Mahal Sings and Plays for Children ♪♪½ (Music for Little People, 1988, prod. Taj Mahal). If your largest responsibility is a goldfish, there are plenty of others to get first.

the rest:
Mo' Roots ♪♪♪½ (Columbia, 1974)
Best of Taj Mahal, Volume I ♪♪½ (Columbia, 1981)
The Natch'l Blues ♪♪♪ (Columbia, 1987) (cassette only) Like Never Before ♪♪♪½ (Private Music, 1991)
Live & Direct ♪♪½ (Thunderbolt, 1991)
Mule Bone ♪♪½ (Gramavision, 1991)
Dancing the Blues ♪♪♪ (Private Music, 1993)
The Rising Sun Collection ♪♪½ (Just a Memory, 1994)
Taj ♪♪♪ (Gramavision, 1994)
An Evening of Acoustic Music ♪♪♪ (Ruf, 1996)
Live at Ronnie Scott's, London ♪♪½ (DRG, 1996) Señor Blues ♪♪♪ (Private Music, 1997)

worth searching for: The divergence that led to the band's split is spelled out on Rising Sons Featuring Taj Mahal and Ry Cooder ♪♪♪½ (Legacy, 1992, prod. Amy Herot, Bob Irwin), a collection of the fledgling group's only recordings. Half the time is devoted to Mahal and Cooder's raw-boned blues temperament, while a good portion contains pop and folk sunshine brought by the group's other half. And Mumtaz Mahal ♪♪♪♪ (Water Lilly Acoustics, 1995, prod. Kavichandran Alexander), a jam session with master Indian string musicians V.M. Bhatt and Narasimhan Ravikiran, offers strong evidence that all blues didn't come from the Delta.

influences:
◀◀ Robert Johnson, Fats Domino, Howlin' Wolf, Ray Charles ▶▶ Robert Cray, Eric Clapton, Ry Cooder

Allan Orski

Tommy Makem

Born 1932, in Keady, Country Armagh, Ireland.

In the annals of folk, Tommy Makem is generally associated with the Clancy Brothers, the group that gave Irish and Celtic music a face on U.S. soil. But Makem is an accomplished performer in his own right, a singer and multi-instrumentalist who plays banjo, pennywhistle, piccolo, and guitar. Makem has also embraced several areas of the entertainment world, starring in theatrical productions in New York and even dabbling in management for a time. By the time he was 15, he had already formed his own Irish county dance band. Around the time of the early 1950s, Pat Clancy had asked his brother Liam to collect material for Tradition Records, a label he was starting. That led Liam to Makem, and, in 1953, the two new-found friends came to the United States. Makem began as a solo act, securing an early break by playing at Greenwich Village's famed Circle in the Square. He also supported himself with theatrical roles on Broadway, A Hatful of Rain and a revival of the musical Finian's Rainbow among them. In 1961, with brothers Liam, Pat, and Tom Clancy all living in New York, Makem was asked to join the Clancy Brothers act. That same year, he performed on two albums, the first a solo effort on the Tradition label titled Songs by Tommy Makem. The second, The Clancy Brothers and Tommy Makem, was produced on a much more prestigious label, Columbia, which had signed the Irish boys to a contract. Makem appeared with the Clancy Brothers on several more Columbia albums, including Hearty & Hellish (1962), In Person (1963), First Hurrah (1964), and The Irish Uprising (1966). The act forged its success through performances on American television, mainly the weekly folk series Hootenanny and the Ed Sullivan Show. They were also featured in concerts all over the world. From the late 1960s to the early 1970s, Makem returned to solo performing and released one album, Tommy Makem, Love Is Lord of All, on GWP Records. For a brief period during the late 1970s, Makem and Liam Clancy formed a duo, which was short lived until they reunited for a pair of albums during

5 1
2 david mallett

Tommy Makem (© Jack Vartoogian)

the mid-1980s. Makem's more recent recordings have been with the Shanachie label. Both as single performer and member of the Clancy Brothers, Makem has been a welcome, unique addition to the American folk scene; he is certainly among the best-known purveyors of traditional Irish and Celtic music. By helping introduce audiences to the Celtic legacy, Makem forged a strong contribution.

what to buy: Songs of Tommy Makem ♪♪♪♪ (Tradition, 1997) is the obvious starting point. It's particularly known for the depth and quality of recording, considering that Makem was playing most of the instruments in a small studio.

what to buy next: Evening with ... ♪♪♪ (Shanachie, 1993)

the rest:
(With Liam Clancy) Tommy Makem & Liam Clancy ♪♪♪ (Shanachie, 1987)
(With Liam Clancy) Two for the Early Dew ♪♪♪ (Shanachie, 1987)
Rolling Home ♪♪♪ (Shanachie, 1990)
Songbag ♪♪♪ (Shanachie, 1991)
Live at the Irish Pavilion ♪♪♪ (Shanachie, 1993)
Lonesome Waters ♪♪♪ (Shanachie, 1993)
From the Archives ♪♪♪ (Shanachie, 1995)
Tommy Makem's Christmas ♪♪♪ (Shanachie, 1997)

influences:
◀◀ Clancy Brothers
▶▶ Irish Rovers, Chieftains

see also: The Clancy Brothers

Bob Paxman

David Mallett

Born 1951, in Sebac, ME.

The cool winds of northern Maine are reflected in the Gordon Lightfoot–like vocals and well-crafted songs of David Mallett. His best known tune, "The Garden Song," has become a modern folk classic with more than 100 cover versions, including recordings by Pete Seeger, Arlo Guthrie, Liam Clancy and Tommy Makem, John Denver, Dolores Keane, and the Muppets, and even inspired a children's book, Inch by Inch, that was published by HarperCollins. Mallett's songs have also been covered by Emmylou Harris, who recorded his romantic ballad, "Red Red Rose," and Kathy Mattea, who interpreted his plaintive tune, "Summer of My Dreams." Mallett began his musical career at an early age. By the time he was 11, he was already attracting attention with the songs he sang in a sibling country band, the Mallett Brothers. As a student at the University of Maine, he became enchanted by singer-songwriters and began to perform as a soloist. He was encouraged by Noel Paul Stookey of Peter, Paul & Mary, who produced his first three albums. During the early 1990s, Mallett sought success as a songwriter in Nashville. Although he co-wrote songs with such Nashville songwriters as Hal Ketchum and recorded several memorable albums including the Jim Rooney–produced This Town, he returned to his childhood home in Sebac, Maine, in 1993.

what to buy: Mallett's first live album, Parallel Lives ♪♪♪½ (Flying Fish, 1997, prod. David Mallett, Rich Adler), surveys his recording career. In addition to new interpretations of "The Garden Song," "My Old Man," "Daddy's Oldsmobile," "Summer of My Dreams," and "When the Battle's Over," the album introduces new six songs.

what to buy next: Inches & Miles 1977–1980 ♪♪♪ (Flying Fish, 1990, prod. Noel Paul Stookey) reprises songs from Mallett's first three albums, including the original recordings of "The Garden Song" and "The Last Time I Saw Annie."

the rest:
Dave Mallett ♪♪½ (Neworld, 1978)
Pennsylvania Sunrise ♪♪½ (Neworld, 1979)
Hard Light ♪♪½ (Neworld, 1981)
Open Doors and Windows ♪♪♪ (Flying Fish, 1983)
Vital Signs ♪♪½ (Flying Fish, 1986)
For a Lifetime ♪♪½ (Flying Fish, 1988)
This Town ♪♪♪ (Vanguard, 1993)
In the Falling Dark ♪♪½ (Vanguard, 1995)

influences:

◀◀ Peter, Paul & Mary, Gordon Lightfoot, Leonard Cohen, John Denver, Pete Seeger

▶▶ David Massengill, Kathy Mattea, Tim O'Brien

Craig Harris

The Mamas & the Papas

Formed 1965, in New York, NY. Disbanded 1968. Reunited 1971, 1981.

John Phillips, vocals, guitar; Dennis Doherty, vocals; Michelle Phillips (born Holly Michelle Gilliam), vocals; Cass Elliot, vocals (died July 29, 1974); Mackenzie Phillips, vocals (1981–present); Elaine "Spanky" McFarlane, vocals (1981–present).

It's ironic that the original vision for what was to become the Mamas and Papas was a New York folk act named the Journeymen, since the Mamas and the Papas were second only to the Beach Boys in their celebration, with glorious harmonies, of the freewheeling fun and romance of the California lifestyle. Beginning in 1966 the hits rolled in like a Pacific coast surf: "California Dreamin'," "Monday, Monday," "I Saw Her Again," "Look through My Window," "Dedicated to the One I Love," and "Creeque Alley." Just as quickly, the sun set on the group's career. Most recently John and Michelle Phillips published their confessional memoirs, while John Phillips and Dennis Doherty stage occasional tours with a new version of the Mamas and the Papas featuring Phillips's daughter Mackenzie and Elaine McFarlane, formerly of Spanky and Our Gang. The group was inducted into the Rock and Roll Hall of Fame in 1998.

what to buy: Creeque Alley: The History of the Mamas and the Papas ♪♪♪♪½ (MCA, 1991) is a comprehensive two-disc set that includes all the hits and good selections from their albums, plus earlier work from the Mugwumps and Elliot's group Cass and the Big Three.

what to buy next: If You Can Believe Your Eyes and Ears ♪♪♪♪ (Dunhill/MCA, 1966) and Deliver ♪♪♪♪ (Dunhill/MCA, 1967) contain sparkling harmonies, superb arrangements, and terrific songs.

what to avoid: People like Us ♪ (Dunhill/MCA, 1971) is devoid of any redeeming value. Sixteen of Their Greatest Hits ♪½ (Dunhill/MCA, 1969) is plagued by terrible digital transfers. For a few bucks more, buy the definitive Creeque Alley.

the rest:
Monterey International Pop Festival ♪♪ (One Way, 1969)
Best of the Mamas & the Papas ♪♪♪ (MCA, 1987)
The Papas & the Mamas ♪♪♪ (MCA, 1989)
California Dreamin' ♪♪½ (MCA Special Products, 1994)
EP Collection (See for Miles, 1994)

worth searching for: John Phillips's John the Wolfking of L.A. ♪♪ (Dunhill, 1969), an eclectic solo debut, provides some inspiring moments, uneven songwriting, and quirky indulgences. Given his past writing style, it's a true oddity.

5/4 mamou playboys

influences:

Rick Nelson, Weavers, Everly Brothers, Beatles

Manhattan Transfer, Wilson Phillips

Patrick McCarty

Mamou Playboys

See: Steve Riley

Mando Mafia

Formed May 1989, in Charlottesville, VA.

Kelly Perdue, mandolin, fiddle, mando-cello, mandola, vocals; Lewis Prichard, mandolin, octave mandolin; Bill Giltinan, mandolin, guitar, mandola; Pete Marshall, octave mandolin, mandolin; Rick Friend, guitar, fiddle, banjo-mandolin, vocals; Vaughan Mairs, bass, vocals.

The Mando Mafia is a group of musicians that takes traditional string-band music from North America, Ireland, Europe, and elsewhere and adapts the arrangements to fit into their band of mandolins, mandola, octave mandolin, bass, and guitar (with an occasional mando-banjo and fiddle thrown in for good measure). The ensemble sound of this group is quite exhilarating. The two lead mandolins bob and weave around each other like prize fighters, sometimes taking the lead and other times dropping in some beautiful harmonies.

what to buy: Mando Liniment ♪♪♪♪ (Black Rose, 1997, prod. Mando Mafia), their first recording to be put on CD, catches the band at their best. With all the energy of one of their powerful live performances the band tackles some traditional tunes such as "Lost Indian," "Booth Shot Lincoln," "Glory in the Meeting House," and "Rye Straw" and adds in some of their own compositions such as the fabulous "Split the Ticket/Dark Clouds." One of the band's trademarks is taking an old fiddle tune and transforming it into an ensemble situation with mandolins taking the lead, instead of a fiddle, and never letting the audience think for a second that it should be done any other way.

what to buy next: Take Two ♪♪♪♪ (Black Rose, 1993, prod. Mando Mafia) (cassette only) worth searching for: Worth a hunt for Mando fans is Mando Mafia, a cassette of out-of-print live recording.

influences:

David Grisman, Clark Kessinger, Bothy Band

Steve Gardner

Cindy Mangsen

See: Steve Gillette & Cindy Mangsen

Bob Margolin

Born May 9, 1949, in Boston, MA.

Steady Rollin' Bob Margolin very self-consciously bears the stamp of Muddy Waters—that nickname, for example—but Margolin has a better claim to the legacy than most. He spent seven years as a sideman in Waters's band, appearing on nine of his albums as well as alongside him in the Band's 1978 concert movie The Last Waltz. He has since parlayed that into a decent journeyman's career, seemingly content to keep Muddy's memory alive.

what to buy: While Margolin has always been a fine guitarist, his first two albums suffer from vocals too similar to old mentor Muddy—and they can't help but suffer by comparison. His more recent work is vastly better, especially My Blues & My Guitar ♪♪♪½ (Alligator, 1995, prod. Bob Margolin, Mark "Kaz" Kazanoff). He's not much of a roarer, but he can croon just fine. On the instrumental side, My Blues & My Guitar shows some unexpected range with the jazzy overtones of the amusing original "Maybe the Hippies Were Right."

what to buy next: Down in the Alley ♪♪♪ (Alligator, 1993, prod. Bob Margolin, Mark "Kaz" Kazanoff) isn't far behind My Blues & My Guitar, a solid meat-and-potatoes effort and also Margolin's first real attempt to get beyond Waters's daunting shadow, with seven originals among its 15 songs.

the rest:

The Old School ♪♪½ (Powerhouse, 1989)
Chicago Blues ♪♪♪ (Powerhouse, 1991)
Up & In ♪♪♪ (Alligator, 1997)

influences:

Muddy Waters, Eric Clapton, Freddie King

Carl Weathersby

David Menconi

Marley's Ghost

Formed 1986, in Santa Barbara, CA.

Ed Littlefield Jr., steel and six-string guitars, Highland pipes, keyboards, vocals; Mike Phelan, fiddle, guitar, vocals; Dan Wheetman, fiddle, banjo, guitar, harmonica, bass, vocals; Jon Wilcox, mandolin, guitar, vocals.

The eclectic folk quartet Marley's Ghost cuts a wide musical swath. Trying to define this baby-boomer folk-rock party band's style is impossible; suffice to say that Marley's Ghost specializes in well-crafted, soulful arrangements of rock, reggae, Celtic, folk, country, and bluegrass songs and tunes, infusing each with a wry combination of sincerity and lightheartedness. In addition, three of the four (Dan Wheetman, Jon Wilcox, and Mike Phelan) are excellent songwriters who draw freely from all of these influences. Marley's Ghost took its present form when Wheetman, recording at Ed Littlefield's Washington studio, brought in two friends from Santa Barbara, California—Wilcox and Phelan—to play and sing on his solo album. The foursome hit it off so well that Wheetman's album ended up getting put on hold while the four men instead recorded the first Marley's Ghost album, Haunting Melodies. Prior to this, Wheetman had played with the Colorado-based folk group, Liberty, and was a mainstay of John Denver's band from the late '70s until the mid-'80s. Wilcox had graduated from Stanford Law School, but left his work as an attorney for VISTA to become a traveling folksinger. During the early 1970s, he made a critically acclaimed album for the tiny Connecticut label Folk-Legacy. Littlefield spent five years on the cowpoke circuit with the western swing outfit Lance Romance, while Phelan was a veteran of countless gigs with various bluegrass, country, and rock bands in the San Francisco Bay area.

what to buy: Four Spacious Guys ♪♪♪♪ (Sage Arts, 1996, prod. Nick Forster) taps old-time country, Celtic, reggae, and folk sources and includes some terrific originals, the most compelling of which is Wheetman's "Sugar Trade," a chilling song that subtly links together the businesses of dealing in sugar, drugs, and sex. Richard Thompson's "How Will I Ever Be Simple Again" (which has been subjected to some awful scenery-chewing covers by other artists) is sung unpretentiously by Wilcox, perfectly backed by Celtic superstars the Boys of the Lough. The a cappella rendition of Mark Graham's "I Can See Your Aura" showcases the quartet's vocal strength (and also their fun-loving spirit).

what to buy next: Haunting Melodies ♪♪♪ (Sage Arts, 1989, prod. Marley's Ghost, Ed Brooks) is the group's debut album, and reflects the newfound joyful friendship of the four musicians. Highlights include a powerful unaccompanied vocal quartet on Dylan's "Lay Down Your Weary Tune," toe-tapping folk-reggae covers of Jimmy Cliff's "Sitting in Limbo" and Bob Marley's "One Love," and an extremely affecting rendition of "Bob Dylan's Dream" sung by Wheetman. There's some lighthearted material as well, including an over-the-top version of the old Delta blues standard, "I'm a King Bee," complete with screaming slide guitar. Let de Groove Rise Up ♪♪♪½ (Sage Arts, 1989, prod. Marley's Ghost, Ed Brooks) focuses on a Caribbean theme, with reggae-inflected songs like Wheetman's "Streets of Babylon" (which could have come straight from a Jimmy Cliff record), the New Orleans standard "Meet Me Boys on the Battlefront," and Sarah Elizabeth Campbell's evocatively wistful "Mexico." How Can I Keep from Singing ♪♪♪ (Sage Arts, 1992, prod. Marley's Ghost, Daniel Protheroe) won Honorable Mention for Best Gospel Album of 1992 from the National Association of Independent Record Distributors' Indie awards. Marley's Ghost gives a wide interpretation to the spiritual theme, with far-flung sources ranging from the Soulstirrers to Ralph Stanley to the Golden Gate Quartet to the Carter Family. Also included are sacred songs unattached to any particular religious tradition, such as the anthemic "How Can I Keep from Singing," a staple of '60s folk revivalists, and "Amazing Grace," featuring Ed Littlefield Jr.'s droning Highland pipes.

worth searching for: Wheetman's solo album, Honey Be There ♪♪♪♪ (Sage Arts, 1992, prod. Dan Wheetman), which was put on the shelf for years when Marley's Ghost began recording, is a great showcase for his skills as a multi-instrumentalist, songwriter, and mellow-voiced singer. It includes many excellent original songs, with stellar backup by many of the industry's finest studio musicians, including James Burton, Pat Flynn, and Glen D. Hardin.

influences:

- Ralph Stanley, Jesse Winchester, Van Morrison, Bob Marley, Boys of the Lough, Bob Dylan, Hank Williams, John Landry, Golden Gate Quartet, Grateful Dead, Toots & the Maytals, John Starling, Bob Wills
- Tim O'Brien, Nashville Bluegrass Band, Blue Flame String Band, Rincon Valley Ramblers

Suzy Rothfield Thompson

Evan Marshall

Born in Los Angeles, CA.

California-based Evan Marshall is a mandolin player with astonishing technique. A performer who moves easily between orchestral concerts and folk festivals, Marshall started studying classical violin as a child. He changed instruments at 14 when he heard his first mandolin. He's been a frequent guest on A Prairie Home Companion, and guitarist Chet Atkins calls him "one of the few great musicians of our time."

what's available: Both of Marshall's albums available on CD contain solo performances of mostly familiar tunes ranging from the Beatles to Brahms. For Mandolin Magic ♪♪♪½ (Rounder, 1990, prod. David Grisman) that's "Do You Want to Know a Secret?," "Mother Nature's Son," "Michelle," "You Won't See Me," and "Hungarian Dances" #5 and #6. On Evan Marshall Is the Lone Arranger ♪♪♪½ (Rounder, 1995, prod. Evan Marshall) it's "P.S. I Love You," "Here, There, and Everywhere," and "Hungarian Dance #7." Additionally, each album contains standards, movie themes, and assorted transcriptions of a European nature—all well-suited to Marshall's instrument. Mandolin Unlimited ♪♪♪ (Rounder, 1995, prod. Mark O'Connor), now available only on cassette, is a more ambitious project with an extremely live sound, as Marshall plays both solo and multitracked. Sam Bush and Mark O'Connor play mandolins on one track; John Knowles plays guitar on two others.

worth searching for: Marshall appears along with fellow mandolinists David Grisman, Radim Zenkl, and others on Rudy Cipolla: Portrait of an American Original (Acoustic Disc, 1997).

influences:

◀◀ David Grisman, Dave Apollon, Jascha Heifetz, Chet Atkins

▶▶ Chris Thile, Peter Mix

Brian Mansfield

Mike Marshall

In 1979, as a teenager, Mike Marshall moved from Florida to California to take the second mandolin/guitar slot in the David Grisman Quintet. During his four years with Grisman, he established a partnership with violinist Darol Anger that has continued through groups like Montreux and Psychograss. In 1987 he founded the Modern Mandolin Quartet. His most recent aggregations are Choro Famoso, a sextet specializing in Brazilian music, and a trio also featuring Edgar Meyer and Béla Fleck. Marshall has also produced albums by the likes of Tony Furtado, Tony Elman, and Laurie Lewis and Tom Rozum.

what to buy: Brasil (Duets) (Earthbeat! Traveler, 1996, prod. Mike Marshall) emphasizes Marshall's current passion, Choro, the dynamic and emotional instrumental music of Brazil. As the title suggests, it consists of a series of duets with long-time collaborators including Fleck, Andy Narell, Edgar Meyer, and Kaila Flexer. The program consists mostly of Choro classics that Marshall and company attack with verve.

what to buy next: Recorded with his Modern Mandolin Quartet, Pan American Journeys also reveals Marshall's infatuation with Latin American music, both through covers of pieces by Gershwin ("Piano Preludes 1–3"), Piazzola, and Jacob de Bandolim, as well as guest percussionist Tom Miller's breezy "Redonda."

the rest:

(With Darol Anger) The Duo (Rounder, 1983)
Gator Strut ♪♪ (Rounder, 1984)
(With Montreux) Live at Montreux (Windham Hill, 1984)
(With Darol Anger) Chiaroscuro (Windham Hill, 1985)
(With Montreux) Sign Language (Windham Hill, 1986)
Modern Mandolin Quartet (Windham Hill, 1987)
(With Montreux) Let Them Say (Windham Hill, 1988)
(With Modern Mandolin Quartet) Intermezzo (Windham Hill, 1989) (With Modern Mandolin Quartet) Nutcracker Suite (Windham Hill, 1990)

influences:

◀◀ David Grisman, Bill Monroe, Tony Rice

▶▶ Matt Flinner, Chris Thile

see also: David Grisman, Psychograss

Michael Parrish

Jimmy Martin

Born August 10, 1927, in Sneedville, TN.

Despite the fact that his impetuous stage behavior often overshadows his considerable musical skills, guitarist Jimmy Martin is almost universally recognized as among the finest lead singers and most influential bandleaders in bluegrass music. His unabashedly brash "good 'n' country" approach to his material and penchant for corny novelty fare can sometimes obscure the fact that he has contributed to many classic bluegrass records over the years, first as lead singer with Bill Monroe, later with the Osborne Brothers, and, since 1955, with his own Sunny Mountain Boys, a band that has employed such up and coming talents as J.D. Crowe, Bill Emerson, Alan Munde, Doyle Lawson, and Paul Williams. From 1956 to 1974 Martin recorded many classic tracks for Decca; since then he has recorded for Starday/Gusto, mostly revisiting old hits.

what to buy: You Don't Know My Mind ♪♪♪♪♪ (Rounder, 1990, prod. Ken Irwin, Hazel Dickens), a collection of material licensed from MCA, is the best one-disc overview of Martin's genius, featuring the original versions of 14 of his classic hits and bands that include a young J.D. Crowe on banjo and Paul Williams on mandolin.

what to buy next: The handsomely boxed, 146-song, five-CD set Jimmy Martin & the Sunny Mountain Boys ♪♪♪♪♪ (Bear Family, 1994, prod. Paul Cohen, Owen Bradley, Harry Silverstein, Steve Sholes) is the fanatical Jimmy Martin fan's dream, containing all the material he cut with the Osborne Brothers for RCA and everything he cut for Decca between 1956 and 1974. The box also contains a lavishly produced, comprehensively annotated, 42-page book with a complete discography of the years covered.

the rest:

Me 'n' Ole Pete ♪♪♪ (Hollywood, 1978)
Greatest Bluegrass Hits ♪♪ (Hollywood, 1978)
One-Woman Man ♪♪ (Hollywood, 1995)
Will the Circle Be Unbroken ♪♪♪½ (Hollywood, 1995) Jimmy Martin & Ralph Stanley—First Time Together ♪♪♪♪½ (Hollywood, 1995)

influences:

Roy Acuff, Bill Monroe

John Duffey, Little Roy Lewis

Randy Pitts

Dave Mason

Born May 10, 1946, in Worchester, England.

An excellent guitarist with a smoothly distinctive voice that has just enough strain to suggest emotional intensity, Dave Mason quit Traffic in 1968 (returning briefly in 1971) and eventually moved to California. After hooking up with Delaney and Bonnie for their 1969 tour, he went into the studio the next year with them, fellow tour member Leon Russell, Traffic drummer Jim Capaldi, and others and made by far his best album, Alone Together. The same year he made a forgettable duet album with Cass Elliot of the Mamas and the Papas; in 1971 he appeared in George Harrison's benefit Concert for Bangladesh. But he did little to build on the success of Alone Together aside from touring with his crack quartet. Switching to Columbia, Mason's albums appeared more regularly, but the music was so mellow that it left little impression even when it was well done. Despite several catchy tunes on Let It Flow, his style had come to seem irrelevant, and during the '80s he could be heard singing in Miller beer commercials. Mason continued touring but has released just one album of new material since 1980. In 1994 he joined the revolving cast of the post-Buckingham/Nicks Fleetwood Mac, joining Delaney and Bonnie's daughter Bekka and performing on the 1995 album Time, which includes two songs he co-wrote.

what to buy: Alone Together ♪♪♪♪½ (Blue Thumb, 1970, prod. Tommy Li Puma, Dave Mason) is a bit deficient in the lyric department (always a Mason problem) but offers music so perfect that here, for once, that shortcoming can be overlooked.

editor's choice
20 bluegrass albums

Stanley Bros. & the Clinch Mountain Boys, 1953–1958 & '59 (Bear Family)

Bill Monroe & the Bluegrass Boys, The Music of Bill Monroe 1936–1994 (MCA)

Lester Flatt, Earl Scruggs & the Foggy Mountain Boys, Complete Mercury Sessions (Mercury)

Joe Val, Diamond Joe (Rounder)

Peter Rowan & Jerry Douglas, Yonder (Sugar Hill)

Gibson Brothers, Spread Your Wings (Hay Holler)

Front Range, Ramblin' on My Mind (Sugar Hill)

Longview, Longview (Rounder)

Kate MacKenzie, Age of Innocence (Red House)

Rickie Simpkins, Dancing on the Fingerboard (Pinecastle)

Johnson Mountain Boys, Let the Whole World Talk (Rounder)

Country Gentlemen, Joe's Last Train (Rebel)

Hot Rize, Take It Home (Sugar Hill)

Alison Krauss & Union Station, Two Highways (Rounder)

Seldom Scene, Old Train (Rebel)

Lynn Morris, The Lynn Morris Band (Rounder)

Nashville Bluegrass Band, Waitin' for the Hard Times to Go (Sugar Hill)

Del McCoury, A Deeper Shade of Blue (Rounder)

Tony Rice, Tony Rice Plays and Sings Bluegrass (Rounder)

Traditional Grass, Songs of Love and Life (Rebel)

There's more forward momentum here than on all his Columbia work combined.

what to buy next: Some of Mason's Columbia albums are decent, but Long Lost Friend: The Best of Dave Mason ♪♪♪ (Columbia Legacy, 1995, prod. various) contains all the high points you'll need.

what to avoid: The Best of Dave Mason ♪ (Blue Thumb, 1973, prod. Tommy LiPuma, Dave Mason) is a shameless rehash of far too much of Alone Together when what's really needed is Headkeeper ♪♪♪½ (Blue Thumb, 1972, prod. Tommy Li Puma, Dave Mason) and Dave Mason Is Alive ♪♪♪♪ (Blue Thumb, 1972, prod. Tommy LiPuma, Dave Mason) combined on one CD (they'd fit easily).

the rest:
Dave Mason & Cass Elliot ♪♪ (Blue Thumb, 1971)
It's Like You Never Left ♪♪ (Columbia, 1973)
Dave Mason ♪♪½ (Columbia, 1974)
Split Coconut ♪♪ (Columbia, 1975)
Certified Live ♪♪ (Columbia, 1976)
Let It Flow ♪♪♪ (Columbia, 1977)
Mariposa de Oro ♪♪½ (Columbia, 1978)
Old Crest on a New Wave ♪♪ (Columbia, 1980)
Very Best of Dave Mason ♪½ (MCA, 1987)
Two Hearts ♪♪ (MCA/Voyager, 1988)

worth searching for: The half-studio, half-live Headkeeper and Dave Mason Is Alive may be a bit redundant, but Mark Jordan's electric piano work and Mason's electric guitar solos are very sharp, and both versions of Mason's Traffic classic "Feelin' Alright" cook.

influences:
◀◀ Beatles, Jimi Hendrix, Stephen Stills, Eric Clapton ▶▶ Joe Cocker, Delaney & Bonnie

Steve Holtje

David Massengill

Born 1951, in Bristol, TN

Singer, guitarist, and dulcimer player David Massengill has played an important role in the growth of folk music in New York's Greenwich Village since the mid-1970s, and can be heard on many albums produced by the Fast Folk Musical Magazine. On his own, however, Massengill has been far from prolific. Although he recorded two self-produced cassettes—The Great American Bootleg Tape in 1987 and Kitchen Tape in 1987, he didn't release his first commercially available album, Coming up for Air, until 1992. Born in the border town that separated Bristol, Tennessee, and Bristol, Virginia, Massengill was raised on the Tennessee side. Although he studied piano and French horn, he was drawn more to sports as a youngster. It wasn't until he began attending the University of North Carolina that he learned to play the dulcimer. He subsequently added acoustic guitar. After honing his skills during college jam sessions, Massengill moved to New York with hopes of becoming a musician. Arriving in Greenwich Village, he found a thriving acoustic music scene. Becoming a regular performer at open mics, he began to attract attention with his southern-tinged balladry. When the Songwriter's Co-Op evolved into the Fast Folk Musical Magazine, Massengill became one of its most frequent contributors.

what to buy: Massengill spent more than a decade hoping for a major-record label contract. After finally agreeing to sign with indie label Flying Fish, he threw everything that he had held back into a memorable, award-winning debut, Coming up for Air ♪♪♪♪½ (Flying Fish, 1992, prod. Steve Addabbo). Produced by Suzanne Vega's producer Steve Addabbo, Massengill sparkled in the studio with long-awaited treatments of such songs as "On the Road to Fairfax County," which had previously been covered by the Roches and Joan Baez, and "My Name Joe," a modern ballad of worker solidarity.

what to buy next: Massengill's second nationally released album, The Return ♪♪♪♪ (Plump, c. 1995), is less produced than Coming up for Air. But Massengill's melodic dulcimer and acoustic guitar playing prove a fitting instrumental setting for his songs, while his Southern-tinged vocals are enhanced by harmonies sung by the Roches and Jane Siberry. The high point of the album is a solo rendition of one of Massengill's most popular tunes, "The Great American Dream."

the rest:
The Great American Bootleg Tape ♪♪♪½ (Bowser Wowser, 1986)
The Kitchen Tape ♪♪♪ (Bowser Wowser, 1987)

worth searching for: Although Massengill didn't record a nationally released album until 1992, he made frequent appearances on editions of The Fast Folk Musical Magazine. While he's subsequently re-recorded such songs as "On the Road to Fairfax County," "The Great American Dream," and "Number One in America," others, including "Sightseer" and "Derry Down," remain buried treasure.

influences:
◀◀ Bob Dylan, Jack Hardy, Steve Forbert ▶▶ Roches, John Gorka, Cliff Eberhardt

Craig Harris

Kathy Mattea

Born June 21, 1959, in Cross Lanes, VA.

Originally a bluegrass singer and guitarist, Kathy Mattea's music found a home on country radio during the 1980s' return to traditional sounds. A double Grammy winner, Mattea also was twice named female vocalist of the year by the Country Music Association. With her bluegrass-shaded country increasingly leaning on Scottish and Celtic influences, Mattea also organized the Red, Hot & Country AIDS benefit album project in the mid-1990s.

what to buy: A Collection of Hits ♪♪♪½ (Mercury, 1990, prod. Allen Reynolds) features most of her early hits, including her versions of Nanci Griffith's "Love at the Five and Dime" and Tim O'Brien's "Untold Stories" and "Walk the Way the Wind Blows."

what to buy next: Walk the Way the Wind Blows ♪♪♪ (Mercury, 1987, prod. Allen Reynolds), Mattea's first real breakthrough, includes the title cut, "Train of Memories," and "Love at the Five and Dime." Other tracks include the big hits "Eighteen Wheels and a Dozen Roses" and "Goin' Gone."

the rest:

Kathy Mattea ♪♪ (Mercury, 1984)
From My Heart ♪♪ (Mercury, 1985)
Untasted Honey ♪♪♪ (Mercury, 1987)
Willow in the Wind ♪♪½ (Mercury, 1989)
Time Passes By ♪♪½ (Mercury, 1991)
Lonesome Standard Time ♪♪½ (Mercury, 1992)
Walking away a Winner ♪♪½ (Mercury, 1993)
Good News ♪♪♪ (Mercury, 1994)
Love Travels ♪♪♪½ (Mercury, 1997)

influences:

◀◀ Nanci Griffith

▶▶ Suzy Bogguss, Deana Carter

Bill Hobbs

Matthews Southern Comfort

See: Iain Matthews

Iain Matthews /Matthews Southern Comfort /Plainsong /Hamilton Pool

Born Iain Matthew MacDonald, June 16, 1946, in Lincolnshire, England.

Iain Matthews has had two careers, really. The first began during the late '60s when he co-founded the influential British folk group Fairport Convention. He left Fairport after two records and in 1970 started Matthews Southern Comfort, which recorded three albums and had a Top 40 hit with Joni Mitchell's "Woodstock" (a year after Crosby, Stills and Nash's version had charted). In 1971 Matthews embarked on a moderately successful and quite prolific solo career as a singer (and occasional songwriter) of easygoing folk/country-pop songs; he released 10 albums in 10 years, plus a couple with the singers' collective Plainsong. He then vanished from the record bins for eight years, though he spent some time in Seattle playing in a band called Hi-Fi with David Surkamp. His second career began in 1988 with the release of Walking a Changing Line, an album of Jules Shear covers that was Windham Hill's first all-vocal project. Counting various retrospectives and live collections, Matthews has released over 12 records since then, including a new disc with a reunited Plainsong and a one-off with a band called Hamilton Pool (named after a swimming hole just outside Austin, Texas, where Matthews has lived since 1990).

what to buy: CD retrospective collections have been a welcome development for both Matthews and his fans, as his extensive '70s catalog is rather spotty in quality. The Soul of Many Places: The Elektra Years, 1972–1974 ♪♪♪♪ (Elektra, 1993, prod. Iain Matthews, Michael Nesmith, Sandy Roberton) gathers the best tracks from what was probably his strongest artistic period; included are richly melodic covers of classics such as Tom Waits's "Ol' 55" and Jesse Winchester's "Biloxi," as well as Matthews's own hauntingly beautiful "For the Second Time" and "You Fell through My Mind." Documenting the best tracks from a slightly earlier period in his career is The Best of Matthews Southern Comfort ♪♪♪½ (MCA, 1992, prod. various). As for actual albums, his most recent efforts are his best; their cohesiveness reveals a significant artistic growth from the hit-and-miss nature of his '70s records. Particularly strong is The Dark Ride ♪♪♪½ (Watermelon, 1994, prod. Mark Hallman); a close second is Skeleton Keys ♪♪♪ (Mesa, 1992, prod. Mark Hallman).

what to buy next: Walking a Changing Line ♪♪♪ (Windham Hill, 1988, prod. Mark Hallman) is an intriguing attempt to bring mainstream accessibility to the brilliant pop songs of Jules Shear, though the record didn't quite live up to its potential. Also of interest to serious fans are four collections of demos and live tracks from throughout Matthews's career: Orphans and Outcasts Volume I: Demos 1969–1979 ♪♪♪ (Dirty Linen, 1991), Orphans and Outcasts Volume II: Demos 1981–1989 ♪♪♪ (Dirty Linen, 1993), Intimate Wash ♪♪♪ (Perfect Pitch, 1993), and Camouflage ♪♪♪ (Perfect Pitch, 1996).

what to avoid: Stealin' Home ♪♪ (Mushroom, 1978) contains "Shake It," Matthews's highest-charting hit single to date, but that song is also one of the shallowest things he's ever recorded and is indicative of the lack of creativity in his late '70s work—which likely led to his extended sabbatical during the '80s.

the rest:

(With Matthews Southern Comfort) Matthews Southern Comfort ♪♪♪ (Sire, 1970)
(With Matthews Southern Comfort) Second Spring ♪♪♪ (Decca, 1970)
(With Matthews Southern Comfort) Later That Same Year ♪♪♪ (Decca, 1970)
If You Saw thro' My Eyes ♪♪♪ (Vertigo, 1971)
Tigers Will Survive ♪♪♪ (Vertigo, 1972)
(With Plainsong) In Search of Amelia Earhart ♪♪♪ (Elektra, 1972) (With Plainsong) Plainsong II ♪♪♪ (Elektra, 1972) Valley Hi ♪♪♪ (Elektra, 1973)
Some Days You Eat the Bear and Some Days the Bear Eats You ♪♪♪ (Elektra, 1974) Journeys from Gospel Oak ♪♪♪ (Mooncrest, 1974)
Go for Broke ♪♪ (Columbia, 1976)
Hit and Run ♪ (Columbia, 1977)
Siamese Friends ♪♪ (Mushroom, 1979)
Spot of Interference ♪♪ (RSO, 1980)
Pure and Crooked ♪♪♪ (Gold Castle, 1990/Watermelon, 1995)
(With Plainsong) Dark Side of the Room ♪♪ (Mesa, 1993)
(With Hamilton Pool) Return to Zero ♪♪ (Watermelon, 1995)
God Looked Down ♪♪♪ (Watermelon, 1996) Seattle Years 1978–1984 ♪♪ (Varese Sarabande, 1996)

influences:

◀◀ Simon & Garfunkel, Peter & Gordon, Jimmy Webb

▶▶ Seals & Crofts, England Dan & John Ford Coley, America

see also: Fairport Convention

Peter Blackstock

June Maugery

Born October 1948, in Des Moines, IA.

June Maugery is a superb autoharp player and vocalist who began performing during the late '70s in Seattle as part of the group Mountain Oysters. She worked and traveled in both Thailand and Africa over the years and is now settled in France where her husband is a physician. Maugery spends each summer in the United States, attending, teaching, and performing at various music festivals. In July of 1996 Maugery won first place in the contest at the Mountain Laurel Autoharp Gathering. Autoharp Clearinghouse credits her with "beautiful and unique approach to playing, full of rich chord textures, expressiveness and virtuosity." Her unique style includes playing up close to the bridge pins as well in as the full body of the 'harp. Her warm vocals draw the listener close and her autoharp accompaniment is full of improvisation, warm counterpoint harmonies, and open pentatonic chords.

what's available: Shining Bright Like Gold ♪♪♪♪ (Studio du Mont-Blanc, 1997) features an excellent mix of vocal and instrumental selections. On all but a few cuts, Maugery is joined by Betsy Doriss, her longtime friend and an incredible English horn and oboe player. Their interaction on such tunes as "Beaucatcher Farewell" and "Farewell to the Hollow" are quite literally worth the price of the CD, as they develop achingly rich harmonies on the somewhat unusual combination of autoharp and oboe. Doriss also lends some clear vocal harmonies, nicely evident on "Rivers Keep Rolling," a beautiful Maugery original. Ronnie Crutchley adds guitar and vocals, Peter Even contributes guitar and banjo, and Yves Cassagnettes completes the sound with bass. Traditional favorites such as "Shady Grove" and "Big-Eyed Rabbit" display Maugery's talent for playing fiddle tunes, and her slower, lyrical playing of "Midnight on the Water" shows off her use of suspended and pentatonic chords. Shining Bright Like Gold is available from the Corliss Institute, 292 Main Street, Warren, Rhode Island 02885.

influences:

◀◀ Marty Schuman

▶▶ Judy Austin

Heidi Cerrigione

Mac McAnally

Born July 15, 1957, in Belmont, MS.

Most country fans know Mac McAnally as the composer of such hits as Alabama's "Old Flame," Sawyer Brown's "All These Years," Shenandoah's "Two Dozen Roses," and Linda Davis's "Company Time," to name but a few. But before his behind-the-scenes Nashville success, the former Muscle Shoals session guitarist with the James Taylor–like baritone and Randy Newman–like wit was on the cutting edge of the singer/songwriter movement. McAnally became the first artist David Geffen signed to his then-fledgling Geffen Records roster during the early 1980s, but he proved to be a hard sell: The Mississippi-reared redhead delivered his Southern small-town character studies and biting examinations of life's unfair, ever-changing rules with a droll delivery and a melodic breeziness that cloaked the irony and darkness of his deliciously devious sense of humor. Among his early subjects were the revenge of a rape victim ("Bad Boy"), society's indifference to death ("Real People"), how guilt can be assuaged by writing a check ("Hush Money"), and a definition of life as "nothing more than to eat and excrete and die" ("Cuttin' Corners"). In between session stints with longtime supporter Jimmy Buffett (who covered his "It's My Job" on 1981's Coconut Telegraph and hired him to play in his Coral Reefer Band), McAnally continues to write disarmingly lovely hit songs for Nashville's gold and platinum elite. Even though age has tempered his edge, he remains one of country music's warmest, most insightful clutch composers.

what to buy: All of his pre-MCA albums for Ariola, RCA, Geffen, and Warner Bros. are out of print, but Knots ♪♪♪½ (MCA, 1994, prod. Mac McAnally, Tony Brown) is an accurate snapshot of his humanity and humor. It includes a remake of "Miracle," originally recorded on his 1980 album, Cuttin' Corners. Live and Learn ♪♪♪ (MCA, 1992, prod. Tony Brown, Mac McAnally) features his own version of "All These Years." The polite production and introspective ruminations on mortality are livened up by two colorful road songs, "Socrates" (about a philosophy-spewing mechanic) and the chugging "Junk Cars."

worth searching for: McAnally's best albums never made it to CD, so used record stores are the most likely place to uncover his marvelous 1977 debut Mac McAnally ♪♪♪♪½ (Ariola America, prod. Clayton Ivey, Terry Woodford). It is highlighted by his Top 40 hit, "It's a Crazy World," and the bittersweet "Barney," perhaps the weirdest and most accurate song ever written about the aging process.

influences:

◀◀ John Prine, Randy Newman, James Taylor

▶▶ Sawyer Brown, Beth Nielsen Chapman

David Okamoto

Kimberly M'Carver

Born December 16, 1957, in Dallas, TX.

Kimberly M'Carver seems to know her Mesquite, Texas upbringing has provided her with a mother lode of material and experience as big as the Lone Star State itself, but, like fellow Texan Nanci Griffith, she has the rare ability to write songs from that experience that resonate well beyond the shores of the Sabine, the Pecos, and the Rio Grande. Moreover, like San Antonio's Tish Hinojosa, she delivers them in a clear soprano that carries home the poetry and emotion of her music. In the liner notes for her debut Philo release she writes lovingly of the grandfather at whose knee she came to know and love "the finer things in life"—M&M's, the Three Stooges, good strong coffee, and the sound of a train whistle going just about anywhere—and it shows in her songwriting. She loves to write songs that tell the stories of people who travel the road, ride the range, dance their dances, and follow the wind wherever it takes them. What makes M'Carver stand out from the pack of modern-day singer-songwriters is that her songs are remarkably absent of cliché, and where many modern writers tend to write the same song over and over with little more than slight variation, M'Carver never writes the same song twice—each one takes a fresh look at something different. Both of her current releases are decidedly on the mellow end of the spectrum, the tempo never so fast that the poetry of each song can't be savored, with instrumentation and arrangements that make this some of the better acoustic country music available on record. Since her backup musicians are top-notch, this is no surprise, but their willingness to appear with her is also a good sign that M'Carver is not just another run-of-the-mill singer.

what to buy: Although both her currently available releases are strong statements, her more recent effort Inherited Road ♪♪♪♪ (Philo, 1994, prod. Ken Irwin) shows substantial growth as both a writer and vocalist in the four years following her debut. From the opening title track, a fond recalling of the wanderlust of her grandfather and father that made its way into her own being, the 12 tracks of the album are deeper and more varied than her previous recording, and none stand out as a weak link. The three-song sequence of "This Cold Night," "Dancin' Fools," and "Blue Norther" is especially rewarding. With the exception of the final track, "San Luis" (written by husband Dennis M'Carver), all the songs are Kimberly M'Carver originals. Both albums feature a core of backup musicians who are among the best and most respected acoustic musicians around: Stuart Duncan (fiddle), Jerry Douglas (Dobro), Jeff White (guitar), Dennis M'Carver (guitar), Barry Bales (bass), and Viktor Krauss (bass). With the people involved with this album on both sides of the glass (Irwin and engineer Steve Chandler), Inherited Road could hardly miss.

what to buy next: Breathe the Moonlight ♪♪♪ (Philo, 1990, prod. Ken Irwin) is not quite as assured and confident as Inherited Road, but her talent for telling a good story is demonstrated on cuts like "Borrowed Time," "Carnival Man," and the opening track, "Silver Wheeled Pony," a poignant tale of a one-time rodeo cowboy now wheelchair-bound and left with only memories of the glory days. M'Carver wrote all 11 tracks. With essentially the same backup cast (the late Roy Huskey Jr. on bass, the well-respected Bill VornDick engineering), this can't help but be a solid album, and Kimberly shows the promise realized later on Inherited Road.

influences:

◀◀ Nanci Griffith, Guy Clark, Kate Wolf, Bev Doolittle

▶▶ Terri Allard, Tish Hinojosa

John Lupton

Cormac McCarthy

Born in OH.

There are two famous Cormac McCarthys. One is a critically acclaimed author; the other is a singer-songwriter on the Green Linnet label. The singing McCarthy, born in Ohio and now living in New England, plays harmonica and piano and sings in a classic country style. A lifelong music fan, he sang "Davy Crockett" on Cincinnati Radio at the age of three. His college roommate was the similarly talented Bill Morrissey. Known for his humorous stage presence, McCarthy headlined at the Somerville Theatre's Night of Humor and Songwriters in Boston in 1996.

what to buy: Picture Gallery Blues ♪♪♪½ (Green Linnet, 1995, prod. Peter Gallway) is beautifully produced and creates a somber yet vibrant mood, but it could use more grit and less mellowness. "Map of Your Heart," with clever lyrics and upbeat bluegrass backing, suggests McCarthy's richest gifts. The title song is a slow, atmospheric blues that brings out the depth of McCarthy's voice.

the rest:

Troubled Sleep ♪♪♪ (Green Linnet, 1998)

influences:

◀◀ Stan Rogers, Bill Morrissey

▶▶ Stephen Fearing

Pamela Murray Winters

Mary McCaslin

Born December 22, 1946, in Indianapolis, IN.

Mary McCaslin was making musical Americana—in her case, a beguiling mix of mountain music and singer/songwriter folk—long before the term became the name of a catch-all radio format. McCaslin's dulcet soprano and lilting acoustic guitar-based melodies are the perfect foil for her wry, incisive social commentary.

what to buy: Way out West ♪♪♪♪ (Philo, 1974, prod. Mary McCaslin, Bill Schubart) features three-quarter-time ballads and clear-eyed proto-feminist explorations of the lure of the Western frontier. It also boasts the definitive version of Randy Newman's "Living without You."

what to buy next: Things We Said Today ♪♪♪♪ (Philo, 1992) is an almost flawless career retrospective even though it doesn't supplant the near-classic Way out West.

the rest:

Prairie in the Sky ♪♪♪ (Philo, 1976)
Old Friends ♪♪♪ (Philo, 1977)
(With Jim Ringer) The Bramble and the Rose ♪♪♪½ (Philo, 1978)
Sunny California ♪♪½ (Mercury, 1979) Broken Promises ♪♪♪ (Philo, 1994)

influences:

◀◀ Marty Robbins, Joni Mitchell

▶▶ Anne Hills, Priscilla Herdman

see also: Jim Ringer

Bill Friskics-Warren

Debby McClatchy

Born 1945, in San Francisco, CA.

Debby McClatchy grew up influenced by many diverse regional heritages. Her mother, originally from the Smoky Mountains near Knoxville, Tennessee, traces her family back seven generations to Thomas Jefferson's sister, sang Carter Family songs as lullabies, and yodeled after too much creme de menthe. Her great, great grandfather on her father's side was originally from Northern Ireland and immigrated to the United States during the potato famine, ending up a 49er in the gold rush. He was also the founder of Sacramento's leading newspaper, the Sacramento Bee. In 1968 impromptu musical sessions with friends in college led to the formation of the Sunshine Ceili Band and the beginnings of McClatchy's professional music career. After three years of working in pubs and a one-year tour to Stockholm and back, she heeded the call of "Go east, young woman" and moved to New York City where she ran the Focus II Traditional Coffee House and worked for such national agencies as Young Audiences and Hospital Audiences. She was awarded a two-year grant from the National Endowment for the Arts to bring music to the public schools of New York. After 12 years of touring full time, McClatchy moved to the Appalachian mountains of central Pennsylvania in 1980. She now splits her time evenly between performing and the Trails End Kitchen, her own catering business for folk festivals and camps. She also spends an increasing amount of time in Great Britain, fueled by the country's fervent interest in the old-time banjo and a steadfast respect and popularity for her work based largely on the release of three critically acclaimed albums on U.K. labels. McClatchy is an expert entertainer, equally at home with old-time mountain music and contemporary material, all of which she performs with wit and imagination. An outstanding songwriter, she is also an accomplished instrumentalist. Known primarily as one of the finest banjo players in the old-time "frailing" style, she also excels on flat top guitar and concertina, as well as such "lost" folk instruments as the ukelin, tremaloa, and marxaphone. The Boston Globe called her "one of a vanishing breed, a bona fide American folk singer, accompanying her lovely, honest voice with an array of acoustic instruments, spicing her repertoire of old-time country music with her own witty and moving topical writing."

what to buy: Light Years Away ♪♪♪½ (Plant Life, 1994/Marimac, 1995, prod. Martha Duffy) and 'Til the Good Times Come (Trail's End, 1998, prod. Debby McClatchy) are the only CDs available of her work. Light Years Away, like most of McClatchy's best work, is a mixture of old-time songs and tunes coupled with newer material by the likes of Si Kahn, the Red Clay Ramblers' Tommy Thompson, and one of her own compositions. Her fine banjo playing allows her to stretch out on tunes like "Abe's Retreat" and "Big Siota" (also commonly called "Big Scioty" after the Scioto River in Central Ohio) and her singing is first rate as usual.

what to buy next: Radio Land ♪♪♪ (Plant Life, 1988, prod. Paul James) and Someday Cafe ♪♪♪ (Green Linnet, 1986, prod. Dakota Dave Hull) are both available only on cassette and are probably the only other McClatchy recordings you're likely to find still in print. These may be purchased directly from McClatchy at Sunhearth, R.D. 1, Box 74, Roaring Spring, Pennsylvania 16673.

worth searching for: All of McClatchy's LPs are worth searching for, particularly if you're interested in songs of the California Gold Rush, a recurring theme in her work. Of particular interest are Debby McClatchy with the Red Clay Ramblers ♪♪♪ (Innisfree/Green Linnet, 1976, prod. Lisa Null), Lady Luck ♪♪♪ (Innisfree/Green Linnet, 1979, prod. Debby McClatchy, Lisa Null), and Off to California ♪♪♪ (Wildebeest, 1981, prod. Vaughn Lofstead). Apples in Winter ♪♪♪ (Plant Life, 1983, prod. Debby McClatchy, Lisa Null) is a compilation of Debby McClatchy with the Red Clay Ramblers and Lady Luck. Homemade Goodies ♪♪♪½ (Fretless, 1974), her first album, while worth searching for, is nearly impossible to find.

influences:

◀◀ Robert W. Service, Bob Coltman, Red Clay Ramblers

▶▶ Cathy Fink, Anne Hills

Neal Walters

Carol McComb

Born December 16, 1944 in Baltimore, MD.

Carol McComb's talent as a singer and songwriter is clearly no secret to those who have heard her work with the Gryphon Quintet in the 1980s and as a solo performer with a critically acclaimed album on Kaleidoscope. By the age of 19, she had already recorded an album on Elektra Records—Kathy and Carol—with high school chum, Kathy Larisch, and subsequently went on to tour with Mimi Fariña and perform in concert with folk icons James Taylor, Arlo Guthrie, and Pete Seeger. Over the years both her voice and guitar playing have matured. She is at ease with gentle love songs, classic country, bluegrass, and swing, and her songs have been recorded by Bill Staines, Laurie Lewis, the Good Ol' Persons, and many others. She toured with the Gryphon Quintet for eight years as lead singer and primary songwriter, as well as playing terrific guitar and Dobro. She's a nationally known guitar teacher and has taught more than 7,000 people to play guitar through her workshop series in Palo Alto, California. In 1986 Klutz Press published her Country and Blues Guitar for the Musically Hopeless and it's now sold over 100,000 copies and is still going strong. In 1991 she formed the California Coast Music Camp with several other like-minded people from the Bay area, and has also been on the staff at the Puget Sound Guitar Workshop. McComb and long-time musical cohort Ed Johnson have led the Gryphon Carollers now for over two decades, and she scored the music for two award-winning documentary films: Quilts in Women's Lives and Moonchild. Laurie Lewis described her as "a songwriter and a singer whose songs don't mess around—they're filled with clean, strong, sinewy lines, a lean and fluid use of imagery and melodies that cry to be given voice . . . she doesn't just sing, she communicates."

what to buy: Tears into Laughter ♪♪♪♪ (Kaleidoscope, 1990, prod. Carol McComb, Nina Gerber) is a terrific album that Billboard described as "remarkably well written, well played, and emotionally moving. McComb is wise without being preachy, and she sings with quiet conviction and urgency." The backup band includes Nina Gerber, Ed Johnson, Barbara Higbie, Sally Van Meter, David Balakrishnan, and Laurie Lewis.

what to buy next: Any of McComb's albums with the Gryphon Quintet are worth a listen. Try Undecided ♪♪♪♪ (Mayfield Records, 1985, prod. Gryphon Quintet) for a healthy sampling of hot licks and cool vocals, including McComb's own "Secret Garden," which Bill Staines covered to popular acclaim.

the rest:

Love Can Take You Home Again ♪♪♪ (Bay Records, 1975)

(With the Gryphon Quintet) They All Laughed ♪♪♪½ (Mayfield Records, 1983)

(With the Gryphon Quintet) Gryphon Quintet Live ♪♪♪½ (Mayfield Records, 1987)

worth searching for: Kathy and Carol (Elektra Records, 1965, prod. Jac Holzman) is a classic album that deserves to be released on CD—listen up, Elektra! You can hear what you're missing on Folk Music Newport Part One ♪♪♪♪ (Vanguard, 1995, prod. Mary Katherine Aldin) which has one cut—the Fariña's "Swallow Song"—by the duo.

influences:

◀◀ Carter Family, Mike Seeger, Joan Baez, John Renbourn, Pierre Bensusan

▶▶ Nanci Griffith, Cheryl Wheeler

Neal Walters

Billy McComiskey

Born December 21, 1951, in NY.

Brooklyn-born Billy McComiskey is one of the leading Irish button-accordion players of our time, known not only for his skillful interpretations of dance tunes but also for his tasteful use of harmony, in particular in the accompaniment of songs. McComiskey grew up musically on the recordings of Martin Mulhaire (now himself a New York resident), Joe Burke, and Bobby Gardiner. Gardiner's stay in the United States in the early 1960s was a chance for the young McComiskey to hear and observe his playing of the B/C box in person. But it was the arrival in New York of accordionist Sean McGlynn, from Tynagh, County Galway, that would prove most influential on McComiskey's musical development. McComiskey credits McGlynn for having introduced him to the music and "logic" of Tipperary accordion legend Paddy O'Brien, and for having instilled in him an appreciation for understated interpretation in the Galway style. In the mid-1970s, McComiskey, together with fiddle player Brendan Mulvihill and singer/guitarist Andy O'Brien, moved to Washington, D.C., to start performing as the Irish Tradition at the Capitol Hill–area pub, the Dubliner. The band's constant presence there for several years was a decisive factor in the emergence of a local Irish music scene. After three albums and many years of performing together, Irish Tradition parted ways and McComiskey moved to nearby Baltimore, where he has lived since. While he continues to perform locally, he also appears at festivals and in concert far and wide. Since the early 1990s, he has been touring and recording with the group Trian, accompanied by dazzling Chicago fiddle player Liz Carroll and Donegal-born singer and guitar player Dáithí Sproule.

what's available: Makin' the Rounds ♪♪♪♪ (Green Linnet, 1981, prod. Mick Moloney, Billy McComiskey) was recorded at the height of the Irish Tradition heyday. McComiskey's playing is typical of his high standard of performance: technically perfect, with great attention to detail, but rarely flashy and always tasteful. An especially thrilling track is McComiskey's duet with his former teacher Sean McGlynn on the classic Galway reel medley "Johnny Allen's/Sporting Nell." Irish Tradition colleague Andy O'Brien provides the guitar accompaniment in his usual understated way. Also appearing on the album are New York fiddle player Pat Keogh and celebrated dancer Donny Golden. McComiskey is heard solo and in duet with Chicago fiddle player and Trian member Liz Carroll on the excellent Dear Old Erin's Isle—Irish Traditional Music from America ♪♪♪♪ (Nimbus, 1992, prod. Mícheál O' Súilleabháin, Robin Broadbank), recorded live on the occasion of the eighth annual Éigse na Laoi festival of traditional music at University College, Cork.

worth searching for: McComiskey is one of many great Irish musicians featured on Irish Traditional Instrumental Music from the East Coast of America, Volume I ♪♪♪½ (Rounder, 1977, prod. Mick Moloney) and Ed Reavy ♪♪♪♪ (Rounder, 1979, prod. Mick Moloney), two "must have" albums for anyone interested in Irish music in America.

influences:

◀◀ Martin Mulhaire, Joe Burke, Bobby Gardiner, Sean McGlynn, Jack Coen

▶▶ Irish Tradition, Trian, Ellis Island

see also: The Irish Tradition, Trian

Philippe Varlet

The Del McCoury Band /The McCoury Brothers /Ronnie & Rob McCoury

Formed as Del McCoury & the Dixie Pals, 1967, in TN; changed name to Del McCoury Band in 1987.

Del McCoury (born Delano Floyd McCoury, February 1, 1939, in Baker-sville, NC), vocals, guitar; Ronnie McCoury, mandolin, vocals (1981–present); Rob McCoury, banjo (1987–present); Jason Carter, fiddle (1992–present); Mike Bub, bass (1992–present); others.

They don't get any more bluegrass than Del McCoury. With a voice that will unhinge every last good nerve within, Del takes "high lonesome" to a whole new level. Watching him perform with his young band is an education in how to sing with pure conviction, and how to wring the most out of every note, every phrase. Del is a genius, and if there's any justice, he will someday (very soon) be held in the same high regard as Bill Monroe. McCoury spent most of his growing up years in York County, Pennsylvania. As a teenager he worked in a quartet with his brother, playing banjo with the Blue Ridge Ramblers and the Virginia Playboys during the 1950s and 1960s. A move to the Blue Grass Boys in 1963 found Del thinking he'd be playing banjo for lead man Monroe—until he learned that Bill Keith had been hired at the same time, leaving Del with guitar-playing and vocal duties instead. However, McCoury's real talent came through once he joined Monroe and started singing lead. His voice, the very epitome of "high lonesome," has aged like the finest of wines. Today, McCoury is probably the most soulful singer on the planet, although his own son Ronnie, who joined his father's band in 1981, is running a close second. Ronnie, a multi-award winning mandolin player, has every bit of his father's bluesy voice, and shows even more control and emotion than his Dad did at his age. The talent hardly stops there, however, as another acclaimed instrumentalist rounds out the McCoury clan. Rob, who made his debut with his Dad in 1987, is a banjo player every bit as skillful as his older brother, and as dedicated to his craft as any of the McCourys. The tradition continues with young Jacob, Ronnie's preschool-aged son, who frequently steps on stage with Dad, Uncle, and Granddaddy McCoury, to "play" a small toy fiddle. The band's real fiddler, Kentuckian Jason Carter, is an amazing young player who is expected to begin making his own solo recordings soon. The group is immeasurably aided by Mike Bub, their bass player from Arizona.

The current configuration of the Del McCoury Band has been together since 1992 when the group was signed to Rounder, but the bandleader's recording career stretches way back into the early 1960s. Several Del McCoury albums are available, as is a duet album with brother Jerry McCoury and some by his former band, the Dixie Pals. Ronnie and Rob have also recorded their own album, and Ronnie was previously a member of the Nashville Station Inn–based Sidemen. The International Bluegrass Music Association awards the band has racked up, the perfectly constructed and executed records they've released, and the impression they've left with countless fans have gone a long way toward keeping the Bill Monroe–based bluegrass tradition alive, even when the Del McCoury Band dares to include some non-bluegrass tunes in its uniformly excellent performances.

what to buy: A Deeper Shade of Blue ♪♪♪♪♪ (Rounder, 1993, prod. Ronnie McCoury) contains one great track after another, including Del's not-soon-forgotten take on "What Made Milwaukee Famous." For an intense understanding of the everlasting between the blues and bluegrass, start here. The early years of Del & His Dixie Pals are distinctly documented in Classic Bluegrass ♪♪♪♪♪ (Rebel, 1991, prod. various), an 18-song set covering Del's 11 years with the Rebel label.

what to buy next: The young brothers McCoury have taken their roles seriously as keepers of the bluegrass flame passed down from Dad. But they're individuals, too, as Ronnie & Rob McCoury ♪♪♪♪½ (Rounder, 1995, prod. Ronnie McCoury) shows. Well-chosen covers and kicking originals; this is fantastic stuff! And with Tom Petty and Robert Cray covers to fan the flames, Cold Hard Facts ♪♪♪♪½ (Rounder, 1996, prod. Jerry Douglas, Ronnie McCoury) is a real barn-burner.

the rest:
Live in Japan ♪♪♪½ (Copper Creek, 1980/1992)
Don't Stop the Music ♪♪♪♪ (Rounder, 1990)
Blue Side of Town ♪♪♪♪ (Rounder, 1992)

worth searching for: The Del McCoury Band, along with Doc Watson, Mac Wiseman, and Dobroist Gene Wooten, created a country version of the dance hit "Macarena" (Imprint, 1996, prod. Scott Rouse) ♪♪♪ as the Groovegrass Boys. It's good, strange fun hearing McCoury sing the tune, and, what's more, it actually sold pretty well.

solo outings:
Del McCoury:
I Wonder Where You Are Tonight ♪♪♪½ (Arhoolie, 1968)
Livin' on the Mountain ♪♪♪½ (Rebel, 1971/1992)
(With the Dixie Pals) High on a Mountain ♪♪♪♪ (Rounder, 1972/1995)
(With the Dixie Pals) Sawmill ♪♪♪ (Rebel, c. 1975)

5 2 6 the del mccoury band

The McCoury Brothers:
The McCoury Brothers ♪♪♪♪ (Rounder, 1978/1995)

influences:
◀◀ Bill Monroe
▶▶ Sidemen

see also: Jason Carter

Stephen L. Betts

John McCutcheon

Born August 14, 1952, in WI.

A fixture on the folk scene for more than 25 years, John McCutcheon has been called "Virginia's rustic Renaissance Man" by the Washington Post. A multi-instrumentalist who plays virtually every stringed instrument well, he is particularly adept at the hammered dulcimer, fiddle, and five-string banjo played in the clawhammer style. He grew up in the Midwest and attended college at St. John's University in Minnesota. Even before he had graduated, he headed for the hills, foregoing the college lecture hall for the classroom of the eastern Kentucky coal camps, union halls, country churches, and square dance halls. An excellent singer and prolific songwriter, he began as a string-band musician performing traditional music that he learned directly from various Appalachian musicians. After several all-acoustic albums of mostly traditional music on the June Appal, Front Hall, and Green Hays labels, he joined Rounder Records and began to focus on his own compositional skills and a continuing collaboration with grass roots activist and songwriter Si Kahn. Subsequent releases range from award-winning and Grammy-nominated children's material to social commentary on issues ranging from Central America, the plight of rural farmers, and the lives of working people everywhere. His last several projects lean towards more pop-oriented, world-music arrangements in a successful effort to reach a broader audience.

what to buy: Sprout Wings and Fly ♪♪♪♪½ (Rounder, 1997, prod. John McCutcheon, Bob Dawson) is not McCutcheon's most recent release but it did mark his return to an all-acoustic format. The arrangements are somewhat eclectic, "marrying Aboriginal didgeridoo with old-time banjo, African drums, and mountain dulcimer." Joined by an all-star cast of Iris DeMent, Tim and Mollie O'Brien, and Robin and Linda Williams, this is a very fresh and musically satisfying performance of traditional Appalachian material.

what to buy next: Water from Another Time ♪♪♪♪ (Rounder 1989, prod. Paul Reisler) is a retrospective of McCutcheon's career featuring the best of his early albums as well of some of his children's material. Winter Solstice ♪♪♪♪ (Rounder, 1984, prod. Paul Reisler) is an outstanding sampling of holiday music on hammered dulcimer. Howjadoo! ♪♪♪♪ (Rounder, 1983, prod. Paul Reisler) is perhaps the best example of his children's material and even contains a coloring book.

the rest:
How Can I Keep from Singing ♪♪♪ (June Appal, 1975)
The Wind That Shakes the Barley ♪♪♪ (June Appal, 1977)
Wry Straw ♪♪♪ (June Appal, 1978)
Barefoot Boy with Boots On ♪♪♪½ (Front Hall, 1980) Fine Times at Our House ♪♪♪ (Greenhays, 1982)
(With Si Kahn) Signs of the Times ♪♪♪ (Rounder, 1986)
Nothing to Lose ♪♪♪ (Rounder, 1986)
Step by Step ♪♪♪ (Rounder, 1986)
Gonna Rise Again ♪♪♪ (Rounder, 1987)
Mail Myself to You ♪♪♪♪ (Rounder, 1988)
What It's Like ♪♪♪ (Rounder, 1990)
Live at Wolf Trap ♪♪♪ (Rounder, 1991)
Family Garden ♪♪♪♪ (Rounder, 1993)
Between the Eclipse ♪♪♪ (Rounder, 1994)
Summersongs ♪♪♪½ (Rounder, 1995)
Wintersongs ♪♪♪½ (Rounder, 1995)
Bigger than Yourself ♪♪♪½ (Rounder, 1997) Doing Our Job ♪♪♪½ (Rounder, 1997)

influences:
◀◀ Si Kahn, Trapezoid, Paul Van Arsdale
▶▶ David Holt, Tom Chapin

Neal Walters

Country Joe McDonald

See: Country Joe and the Fish

Megon McDonough

See: Four Bitchin' Babes

Mississippi Fred McDowell

Born January 12, 1904, in Rossville, TN. Died July 3, 1972, in Memphis, TN.

One of the last of the great Mississippi Delta bluesmen, Fred McDowell's moaning vocals were the perfect companion to his

The Del McCoury Band (© Jack Vartoogian)

528 mississippi fred mcdowell

concertinas

A small but special member of the free-reed family is the concertina. This portable musical powerhouse was developed in 1830 by Charles Wheatstone, whose company sold concertinas for the next 150 years. The concertina became popular because of its portability. It was especially useful for accompanying dancers and for traveling groups such as Salvation Army bands. It could be played everywhere, from music hall to sailing ship to camp meeting. The British folk revival brought a new interest in the instrument. The two main types of concertinas are the Anglo-German, or Anglo, and the English. All concertinas are played by pressing buttons, or keys, and expanding and compressing the bellows. English concertinas are fully chromatic: that is, they can play all the notes of the chromatic scale. Their sound is relatively smooth. They are often used for parlor music. Anglo concertinas are a bit larger and quite a bit livelier. They depend on the push and pull of the bellows to play different notes. They have the bouncy sound desired for polkas, morris dance, and other lively steps. Enjoy the sound of the Anglo concertina on the many albums by John Kirkpatrick, especially the dance-oriented Plain Capers (Free Reed, 1976/Topic, 1996).

Pamela Murray Winters

eerie bottleneck slide guitar. McDowell grew up a sharecropper toiling in various parts of the Delta. In 1928 he was at a work camp near Cleveland, Mississippi, where he saw Charley Patton perform and was impressed by what he heard. He began to learn how to play the guitar, but was too poor to afford his own until his boss gave him an instrument in 1941. McDowell continued to work in the fields but on weekends he played dances and country suppers near his Como, Mississippi, home for a few dollars and a bottle. In 1959 folklorist Alan Lomax "discovered" McDowell and recorded several of his songs, which were released on the Southern Folk Heritage LP series. These recordings installed McDowell on the folk circuit and led to mid-1960s recordings on Arhoolie and Testament. Unaffected by his fame, by the early 1970s McDowell had visited Europe several times and had recorded extensively, playing the same blues he heard as a youth in the Delta.

what to buy: Straight-up blues recorded in 1964 and 1965, Mississippi Delta Blues ♪♪♪♪½ (Arhoolie, 1989, prod. Chris Strachwitz) also includes two tracks from McDowell's mentor, Eli Green. I Do Not Play No Rock 'n' Roll ♪♪♪♪ (Capitol, 1996, prod. Tommy Couch) won a Grammy in 1971 and features McDowell on electric guitar with a small band. Amazing Grace ♪♪♪♪ (Testament, 1995, prod. Pete Welding) features the Hunter's Chapel Singers and presents the spiritual side of McDowell's repertoire. Mississippi Fred McDowell ♪♪♪♪½ (Rounder, 1984) consists of some of the earliest McDowell recordings.

what to buy next: My Home Is in the Delta ♪♪♪♪ (Testament, 1995, prod. Pete Welding) includes some vocals by McDowell's wife, Annie Mae. Good Morning Little School Girl ♪♪♪♪ (Arhoolie, 1994, prod. Chris Strachwitz) and This Ain't No Rock 'n' Roll ♪♪♪♪ (Arhoolie, 1995, prod. Chris Strachwitz) consist of mid-1960s recordings. Standing at the Burying Ground ♪♪♪½ (Sequel, 1996, prod. Pete Gibson, Alex Hooper) is a live recording of McDowell in London dating from 1969. Never one to slack on stage or in the studio, other interesting McDowell CD releases include Steakbone Slide Guitar ♪♪♪♪ (Rykodisc, 1996), Long Way from Home ♪♪♪♪ (OBC, 1968), and Mississippi Fred McDowell ♪♪♪♪ (Flyright, 1990).

what to avoid: The poor sound of Ain't Gonna Worry ♪½ (Drive Archive, 1994) makes this collection dramatically inferior to others featuring the same recordings.

the rest:
Mississippi Blues (Black Lion, 1993)
This Train I Ride (New Rose, 1993)
Live at the Mayfair Hotel (Warner Bros., 1995)
Wat's the Matter with Papa's Little Girl (Iris, 1996)
First Recordings (Rounder, 1997)

worth searching for: The original "Southern Folk Heritage Series" LP anthologies The Blues Roll On ♪♪♪♪♪ (Atlantic, 1959, prod. Alan Lomax) and Roots of the Blues ♪♪♪♪♪ (Atlantic, 1959, prod. Alan Lomax) introduced McDowell to the masses. He can also be heard on several blues anthologies.

influences:
◀◀ Charley Patton, Eli Green, Sid Hemphill, Blind Lemon Jefferson, Robert Johnson, John Lee Hooker
▶▶ R.L. Burnside, Bonnie Raitt, Jo Ann Kelly, Junior Kimbrough

Jeff Hannusch

John McEuen

See: Nitty Gritty Dirt Band

Eleanor McEvoy

Born in Dublin, Ireland.

That the roots of country and Celtic music are entwined is well known, although contemporary exponents of both Irish and Nashville sensibilities are few and far between. Eleanor McEvoy is one such artist, combining the Celtic-tinged pop/rock of her homeland with the brand of smart, singer/songwriter country-pop in the Mary Chapin Carpenter mold. Her overall sound may be too rockish for country radio, but someone in Nashville should seriously consider covering her songs, particularly the feminist anthem (and huge Irish hit) "Only a Woman" from her debut album.

what's available: On What's Following Me? ♪♪♪½ (Columbia, 1996, prod. Kevin Moloney, Eleanor McEvoy), the guitars are revved up a little too much for Nashville tastes, but adventurous country fans will find an album that they can certainly understand and appreciate. The soaring "A Glass Unkissed" crystallizes heartbreak as well as any honky-tonk song. And the vulnerable ballad "My Own Sweet Bed Tonight" offers pertinent commentary on the subjects of sleeping single and drinking doubles. Her promising debut, Eleanor McEvoy ♪♪♪ (Geffen, 1993), offers plenty of good songs that the performances don't quite deliver.

influences:

R.E.M., Bob Dylan, Mary Black

Daniel Durchholz

Eileen McGann

Born 1959, in Calgary, Alberta, Canada.

In an age when "folk singers," male or female, tend to be more and more idiosyncratic, post-modern, and unpolished, Calgary's Eileen McGann is that rarest and most welcome of exceptions, a young singer with a keen sense of and pride in the traditional music of her Celtic and British ancestors, combined with the ability to write movingly about the beauties of life and nature around her, and blessed with a strong, crystal clear soprano voice that stops people in their tracks and commands attention. Following the path blazed by fellow Canadian singer/songwriters such as Stan Rogers and Gordon Lightfoot, the last decade has seen McGann establish herself as one of the finest singers, songwriters, and interpreters of traditional music on either side of the Atlantic. A first-generation Irish-Canadian, McGann was captivated by the music of Rogers, Lightfoot, and Don McLean in her teenage years. While working toward a degree in medieval history, she was asked by one of her professors to perform at a St. Patrick's Day banquet, and the embarrassing (by her own description) realization dawned on her that despite her Celtic heritage, she didn't know a single Irish song. In listening then to her mother's records of Irish operatic singers doing traditional songs, she was drawn to the underlying beauty of the music and the stories it was telling. Since emerging on the folk music scene during the late 1980s, McGann's recordings and live performances have highlighted her stunning ability to deliver traditional fare as well as her own intelligent, finely honed songs. While her melodies are beautiful, she excels at writing thoughtful, well-crafted lyrics that, as clearly as she sings them, express her thoughts on the environment ("Requiem for the Giants"), politics ("Too Stupid for Democracy"), social justice ("Reservations"), and many other contemporary themes. She can also write ballads ("Isabella Gunn," "The Knight of the Rose") that have a timeless sound, as if they have been around for hundreds of years—the mark of a superior minstrel. Her first three albums feature a solid mix of both traditional and original music, while newer releases have responded to her fans' many requests for an all-traditional recording. More than most singers in the world of folk music today, though, her entire catalog is of top-level quality, making it very difficult to pick favorites. These days, McGann spends much of her time on the road away from her beloved Calgary, on the slope of the Canadian Rockies. Traveling and performing as a duo with her long-time musical (and life) partner, David K. (Knutson), she continues to win rave reviews and new fans wherever she goes, still in the early years of what should be a long and fulfilling career. As she sings in one of her most popular songs, "I See My Journey."

what to buy: It's a close call between Turn It Around ♪♪♪♪♪ (Dragonwing, 1991, prod. Eileen McGann) and her 1995 effort, Journeys, and either will be immensely satisfying. Turn It Around features "Requiem for the Giants," "The Knight of the Rose," and the title track, but the real head-turner is her version of the traditional "The Fair Flower of Northumberland." Overall, the album matches four traditional cuts with seven original songs.

what to buy next: Journeys ♪♪♪♪½ (Dragonwing, 1995, prod. Eileen McGann) opens with "I See My Journey" and includes "Reservations," "Too Stupid for Democracy," and "In the Silence." Traditional songs include "Braw Sailin' on the Sea," "Bonny Portmore," and "Jock O'Hazeldean," and an added bonus is a rendition of Pete Morton's "Another Train."

the rest:
Elements ♪♪♪♪ (Dragonwing, 1987)
Heritage ♪♪♪♪ (Dragonwing, 1997)

worth searching for: Two Thousand Years of Christmas ♪♪♪♪ (Dragonwing, 1996, prod. Eileen McGann) features McGann, David K., and Cathy Miller performing as Trilogy, harmonizing on a variety of songs from the Celtic and British Yuletide tradition. Something unique and worthwhile to add to the Christmas music section of the record collection.

influences:
◀◀ Stan Rogers, Gordon Lightfoot
▶▶ Joan Baez, Janet Russell, Trilogy

John Lupton

Kate & Anna McGarrigle

Kate McGarrigle, born 1944, in Canada; Anna McGarrigle, born 1946 in St. Sauveur, Montreal, Canada.

These Canadian sisters gained critical attention with their mid-'70s releases because they played a perfectly pitched type of folksy music that combined their beautifully trilling vocals with a wide-eyed sensual purity that was downright refreshing at a time when punk rock was fermenting (the Patti Smith Group's debut came out the same year as the McGarrigles'), FM-radio album rock was bottoming out, and rock as an industry was becoming a pop commodity. As an antidote, here were two intelligent, whimsical, and decidedly quirky women who wrote often-witty, often-wrenching songs that shot straight for the heartstrings without a hint of cheap hamming. In fact, it was songwriting that snared the McGarrigles their record deal after Maria Muldaur recorded "Work Song" and Linda Ronstadt covered "Heart Like a Wheel." Unfortunately, their own records—liberally laced with the wheezy, evocative fiddles and accordions of their French-Canadian culture (and songs sung in French)—never were meant to be huge hits. After a couple of fabulous albums, the songwriting was obscured in efforts to "produce" them for better commercial advantage. But those efforts failed, of course, and the McGarrigles disappeared from the scene for the better part of a decade (a couple of their albums are out of print; French Record collects all the songs over their discography recorded in French). Their 1990 "comeback" release, Heartbeats Accelerating, was a beautiful, though emotionally downbeat, return. Matapedia proved the sisters still have the goods, but couldn't expand their audience beyond a devoted coterie.

what to buy: Dancer with Bruised Knees ♪♪♪♪♪ (Hannibal, 1977, prod. Joe Boyd) remains a thrilling recorded moment that transcends its period despite (or because of) its fearless use of goofy sonic elements, from a cornball voice-over on the opening title track to oompah music. Country, folk, gospel, and rock all come into play, and songs such as "No Biscuit Blues," "Be My Baby," and "Kitty Come Home" are all indelible melodies written with the very rare combination of smart, funny, and touching lyrics.

what to buy next: Kate & Anna McGarrigle ♪♪♪½ (Hannibal, 1975, prod. Joe Boyd) got rave reviews upon release, but its songs don't have the timeless ring that the material on Dancer does. It's still a startling record for its time, featuring "Heart Like a Wheel" and a lively take of Loudon Wainwright III's hilarious "Swimming Song" (Kate was married to Wainwright). The Hannibal/Carthage label has done a terrific job of re-releasing the sisters' catalog on CD; the latest to be resurrected is Love Over and Over ♪♪♪½ (Hannibal/Carthage, 1982).

the rest:
French Record ♪♪♪ (Hannibal, 1980)
Heartbeats Accelerating ♪♪♪½ (Private Music, 1990) Matapedia ♪♪♪ (Hannibal/Carthage, 1996)

influences:
◀◀ Carter Family, Joni Mitchell, Maria Muldaur ▶▶ Roches, Iris DeMent, Nanci Griffith

Gil Asakawa

Dennis McGee

Born January 26, 1893, in Bayou Marron, LA. Died October 3, 1989, in Chataignier, LA.

If there was someone about which it could be said that God threw away the mold after his creation, it was Dennis McGee. He was born into a family of fiddlers, from whom he learned his craft. He grew up and worked in the Eunice area, a hotbed of Cajun music. There, he met Sady Courville, with whom he played an archaic style of two-fiddle music until Courville's death in 1988. There, he also began the important collaborations with Creole accordionist Amédée Ardoin that would forever change the face of Cajun music. McGee had huge hands and wrenched up the bow of his fiddle hard, a technique necessary for a fiddler in an unamplified era. He had a vast reper-

kate & anna mcgarrigle

5 3
1

Kate (r) and Anna McGarrigle (© Jack Vartoogian)

toire of tunes and a high, piercing voice. Although he fell away from music for a spell after his initial recordings (1929–34), he returned to music during the 1960s and began to perform with Courville and young accordion phenomena Marc Savoy. McGee never lost his vigor for life or for playing and is the major influence on the music of both Savoy and Michael Doucet.

what to buy: On The Complete Recordings 1929–1930 ♪♪♪♪♪ (Yazoo, 1994, prod. Richard Nevins), McGee's fiddling is just a thing of beauty, and there is almost no comparison to his music. Here European country dances are tinged with blues and syncopated Cajun bow strokes, and sung in a voice that is part Celtic, part Native American, part Acadian. These pieces seem to be so ancient, but also still sound very modern, especially when McGee hooks up with Ernest Fruge as the second fiddler. Instead of the steady beat of Courville, Fruge plays almost a counterpoint to McGee and just takes the breath away.

what to buy next: On La Vielle Musique Acadienne ♪♪♪♪♪ (Swallow, 1983, prod. Floyd Soileau) McGee and Courville demonstrated that although they weren't as fast as they once were, they still could really play. McGee's fiddling is just superb—you can hear his impact on Dewey Balfa, Leo Soileau, and Doucet throughout this extraordinary set of tunes.

worth searching for: Cajun Music: Fais Do-Do ♪♪♪♪♪ (Columbia, 1994, prod. Lawrence Cohn), a compilation, contains McGee and Amédée Ardoin's six truly classic recordings. Like the stonework of the Incas, you can't slip a knife blade between the playing of the two men. They play with an empathy that has rarely been equaled.

influences:

- Wallace Cheese Read, Michael Doucet, Balfa Brothers, Leo Soileau

see also: Amédée Ardoin

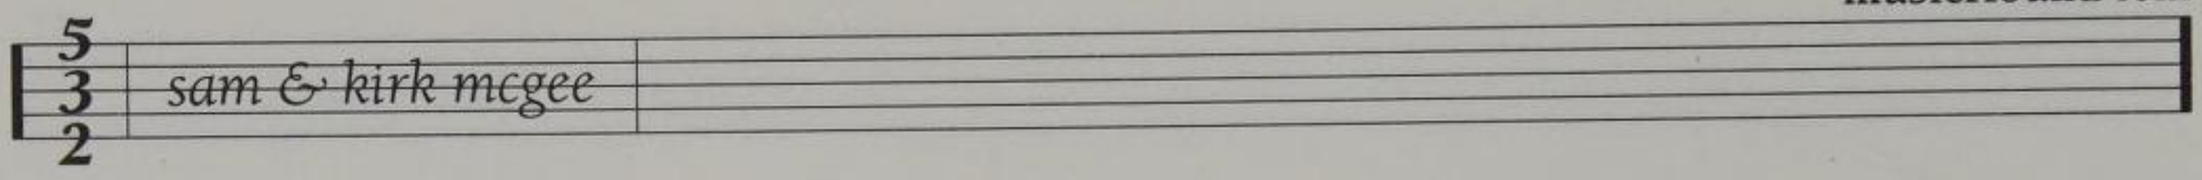
Jared Snyder



Sam & Kirk McGee /The Fruit Jar Drinkers /The Dixieliners

Formed c. 1900, in Franklin, TN.

Sam McGee (born May 1, 1894 in Franklin, TN; died August 21, 1975 in Franklin, TN), guitar, vocals; Kirk McGee (born November 4, 1899 in Franklin, TN, died October 21, 1983 in Franklin, TN), banjo, fiddle, vocals.

The Tennessee-born McGee brothers were early members of the Grand Ole Opry. As the Fruit Jar Drinkers, Sam and Kirk McGee toured and performed with Uncle Dave Macon as early as 1924. They made their debut two years later on the WSM Barn Dance, the predecessor of the Grand Ole Opry. They continued to make their presence felt for the next 60 years. Although Kirk died in a tractor accident in 1975, Sam performed on the Opry until his death in 1983. Born and raised on a family farm, where they continued to work the rest of their lives, Sam and Kirk McGee inherited their love of music from their father, an amateur fiddler. Inspired by the syncopated rhythms they heard played by local Black musicians, they played banjo at dances as teenagers. The McGee's recording debut came in April 1926 when they recorded several tunes with Macon. The following year, they returned to studio with Macon and fiddler Mazy Todd, and recorded what have been called "some of the best examples of string band ensemble playing ever recorded." Forming a band, the Dixieliners, with fiddler Arthur Smith, in 1930, the brothers spent most of the 1930s and early '40s touring with a comedy act, "Sara and Sally." In the late '40s, the brothers performed with Bill Monroe and His Bluegrass Boys. While they mostly performed solo during the 1950s, they periodically renewed their partnership in Fruit Jar Drinkers for appearances on the Grand Ole Opry. They continued to remain active in music into the 1970s.

what to buy: Recorded between 1926 and 1934, Old Time Songs & Guitar Tunes ♪♪♪½ (Old Homestead, 1985) focuses on Sam and Kirk McGee's early recordings and includes influential renditions of "Salty Dog Blues," "C-h-i-c-k-e-n," "Easy Rider," and "Buck Dancer's Choice."

what to buy next: Stars of the Grand Ole Opry ♪♪ (Diplomat, 1969) includes Sam and Kirk's McGee's blues-flavored interpretations of such songs as "Sittin on Top of the World," "Roll on Buddy," and "Milk Cow Blues."

worth searching for: David Freeman's County Records released a couple of LPs in the 1970s that featured the McGee brothers as the Dixieliners in support of Fiddlin' Arthur Smith, titled Fiddlin' Arthur Smith & His Dixieliners, Volumes I and II ♪♪♪♪ (County, 1978). These should be difficult to find but not impossible, and they feature great tunes by great old-time musicians.

solo outings:

Sam McGee:

Grand Dad of the Country Guitar Pickers ♪♪♪½ (Arhoolie, 1971/1997)

influences:

◀◀ Uncle Dave Macon, Gid Tanner & the Skillet Lickers

▶▶ Bill Monroe, Doc Watson, Norman Blake

Craig Harris

Brownie McGhee

See: Sonny Terry & Brownie McGhee

Roger McGuinn

See: The Byrds

Loreena McKennitt

Born February 17, 1957, in Morden, Manitoba, Canada.

Loreena McKennitt isn't so much a folk singer as a swirling, ethereal musician who uses elements of folk and Celtic music to enhance the atmosphere. Though the singer-harpist is more rooted in traditional songcraft than her new-age contemporary, Enya, McKennitt's music aims for the spiritual much more than the straightforward. She initially planned a career as a veterinarian, but wound up performing in folk clubs and working as a composer, actor, and singer at the Shakespearean Festival in Stratford, Ontario. (This would account for her dabbling in nineteenth-century poetry, such as the version of Alfred Lord Tennyson's "The Lady of Shalott" she set to music in 1992.) Soon, she began producing and distributing her own albums, finally catching on during the late 1980s when New Age was beginning its run as a music-industry commercial force. McKennitt's soaring voice, and the ability to turn any sort of traditional folk tune into an angelic hymn, launched her subsequent albums past gold level with very little radio or video play. Though she uses her considerable talent to mix all kinds of lofty musical traditions together, McKennitt's music is best experienced while sleeping, having sex, or otherwise trying to avoid distractions.

what to buy: "All Souls Night," the opening track of The Visit ♪♪♪ (Quinlan Road/Warner Bros., 1992, prod. Loreena McKennitt), is a spooky Celtic tune propelled by rolling percussion and McKennitt's voice blending with a tamboura, balalaika, cello, and accordion. The album is impeccably crafted, well thought out (there's a version of the traditional "Bonny Portmore"), and there's nary a bump in the road.

Susan McKeown (© Brendan Jamieson)

what to buy next: McKennitt can sing with emotional power, as on the soft, fragile folk song "The Dark Side of the Soul," which is a nice break from the swirling New Age music that otherwise colors The Mask and Mirror ♪♪♪ (Quinlan Road/Warner Bros., 1994, prod. Loreena McKennitt).

what to avoid: "Over a number of years spent ruminating on the distinctive characteristics of the Celts . . . ," begins McKennitt's introduction to The Book of Secrets ♪♪ (Quinlan Road/Warner Bros., 1997, prod. Loreena McKennitt), which despite these lofty pretensions manages to sound pretty good for background music.

the rest:
Elemental ♪♪♪ (Quinlan Road, 1985)
To Drive the Cold Winter Away ♪♪♪ (Quinlan Road, 1987)
Parallel Dreams ♪♪♪ (Quinlan Road, 1989)
A Winter Garden: Five Songs for the Season ♪♪ (Quinlan Road/Warner Bros., 1995)

influences:
◀◀ Lao Tzu, Johnny Clegg, Peter Gabriel, Alfred Lord Tennyson ▶▶ Enya, Yanni, Erykah Badu, Deep Forest

Steve Knopper

Susan McKeown & the Chanting House /Susan McKeown & Lindsey Horner

Born February 6, 1967, in Rathfarnham, Dublin, Ireland.

With numerous guest appearances on stage and CD and a deafening buzz in folk circles, Irish chanteuse Susan McKeown gained attention as a singer and songwriter before she recorded her first solo album. A measure of her success is due to her collaborations with other gifted musicians. McKeown has a startling dynamic range that's more evident in concert than on recordings. In composing and covering songs, she is drawn toward stories of women and mysticism, but she doesn't quite fit the "women's music" pigeonhole, nor is she a New Age artist. Sarah McLachlan has made heaps of money for doing something close to what McKeown does, but not exactly the same; McKeown's songs are richer, harder to grasp, and ultimately more satisfying. Of late, McKeown has appeared in Johnny Cunningham's production of Peter and Wendy and has been touring in duos and trios with other musicians. Another album with Lindsey Horner (bass guitar, bass clarinet, whistle) will be released in 1998. She's done vocal work on albums by rockabilly humorists Five Chinese Brothers, dance-trance project Arthur Loves Plastic, and pop-spiritual writer Thomas Moore. She's adept at slipping into the backing-singer role, but when she's up front, she rules the room.

5
3
4 sarah mclachlan

what to buy: McKeown and the Chanting House's Bones ♪♪♪♪♪ (Sheila-na-Gig, 1995/1-800-PRIME-CD, 1996, prod. Jimi Zhivago) is an extraordinary debut, an album that grows on the listener over time. A superb blend of originals and covers, it's a cogent and compelling debut album. Traditionally oriented listeners will be drawn to "Westron Wynde/Westlin Winds," which combines a ninth-century anonymous poem with Robert Burns's paean to hunting, and "Gorm," a chilling Gaelic lament. The more adventurous will be tantalized by the erotic "Curiouser" and the spooky title track. "Jericho" and "Snakes" are toe-tappers with spiritual guts, and "I Know I Know" would make Billie Holliday envious. Augmented by the artful sounds of cello, fiddle, hurdy-gurdy, percussion, bass, guitar, and pipes, McKeown's voice sails, moans, murmurs, and rings through it all like she's been at it for centuries.

what to buy next: Bushes and Briars ♪♪♪♪♪ (Alula, 1998, prod. Jamshied Sharifi, Akira Satake, Susan McKeown) gives traditional music the McKeown touch, with brooding vocals and moody instrumentation. Through the Bitter Frost and Snow ♪♪♪♪½ (PRIME CD, 1997, prod. Lindsey Horner, Susan McKeown, David Seitz) is a fine seasonal offering with the Celtic folk-jazz style found on much of Bones.

worth searching for: Snakes ♪♪♪♪ (PRIME CD, 1997, prod. various), McKeown's CD single, contains an in-concert recording of "Daddy's Little Girl" that suggests the passion of her live performances. Johnny Cunningham's Peter and Wendy ♪♪♪♪♪ (Alula, 1997, prod. Akira Satake), the music from Mabou Mines's stage production of J.M. Barrie's stories, includes luscious vocals from McKeown as well as vigorous Celtic instrumentals.

influences:

- Sandy Denny, Fotheringay, Pentangle, Mary Black, Johnny Cunningham
- Loreena McKennitt, Sarah McLachlan, Tori Amos, October Project

Pamela Murray Winters

Sarah McLachlan

Born January 28, 1968, in Halifax, Nova Scotia, Canada.

Sarah McLachlan grew up in Halifax, Nova Scotia, studying classical guitar and piano. At age 17, Nettwerk Records took notice—particularly of her stunning, dramatic vocals that tiptoe between her normal range, a throaty push, and a soprano falsetto (kind of like Enya without sounding too New Agey). McLachlan mixes that with an ethereal combination of layered guitars, keyboards, and ambient percussion, while her lyrics create almost visual images out of feelings and emotions. It's a unique sound that's allowed McLachlan to stand apart from the scores of female singers that long-negligent labels brought to the pop mainstream during the mid-90s.

what to buy: Her second album, Solace ♪♪♪♪½ (Arista/Nettwerk, 1991, prod. Pierre Marchand), is the deepest and most mesmerizing of her three releases, from the ambient-Celtic-folk mix of "Drawn to the Rhythm" to the gutsy guitar drive of "Into the Fire."

what to buy next: Fumbling towards Ecstasy ♪♪♪♪ (Arista/Nettwerk, 1993, prod. Pierre Marchand) adds some dance rhythms, drum machines, and a more straightforward pop tone to the songs, while Touch ♪♪ (Arista/Nettwerk, 1988, prod. Greg Reely)—despite gems such as "Vox" and "Ben's Song"—is definitely the work of a 20-year-old who hasn't quite caught her stride yet. Live ♪♪♪½ (Arista/Nettwerk, 1992) covers mostly "Solace" songs and shows McLachlan can replicate all the textures and layers of her studio albums onstage.

the rest:
Surfacing ♪♪♪ (Arista, 1997)

worth searching for: Multimedia fans should check out The Freedom Sessions ♪♪♪½ (Arista/Nettwerk, 1994), an eight-song

Sarah McLachlan (© Ken Settle)

sarah mclachlan

5 3
6 peter mclaughlin

EP featuring alternate versions of her songs, a cover of Tom Waits's "Ol' 55," and CD-ROM footage of interviews, videos, and concerts.

influences:

◀◀ Joni Mitchell, Tom Waits, Natalie Merchant

▶▶ Paula Cole, Jewel, Lisa Loeb

Joshua Zarov

Peter McLaughlin

Born November 14, 1955, in Washington, DC.

Sometimes superlative instrumental and vocal performers are reluctant to surround themselves with backup musicians of comparable caliber, their insecurities or ego problems preventing them from sharing the spotlight with musical peers. Not so with Laurie Lewis, who in the dozen or so years of her career as a headline act on the folk and bluegrass circuit has consistently stocked her band, Grant Street, with some of the finest acoustic musicians to be found. Since the early '90s, she has come to rely heavily on the guitar talents of Peter McLaughlin, a native of the Washington, D.C. area who now lives in Tucson, Arizona. From his youth, he was raised in a family environment that stressed a passion for music—his father introduced him to bluegrass music at an early age, and his brother, David McLaughlin, is also a superb guitarist, as well as the longtime mandolin player for the legendary neo-traditional bluegrass revival band Johnson Mountain Boys. After graduating from college in Arizona, Peter McLaughlin was looking forward to a career as a geologist among the buttes and arroyos he had come to love in Northern Arizona, with music as a sideline. Soon, though, he found himself playing bluegrass in a local band called Flying South, one of whose members, mandolinist Tom Rozum, became a good friend. Rozum later left to join Grant Street, and when that band found itself in need of a guitarist during the early '90s, Rozum recommended McLaughlin to Lewis. Peter has been a fixture in the band since, though he still finds time to do several shows each year with Flying South as well. Top-rate flatpickers are a scarce breed; the relatively few names that make most everyone's list are Doc Watson, Norman Blake, Tony Rice, and Dan Crary, but on the basis of his work on stage and on record as a solo artist and with Laurie Lewis, McLaughlin is mighty close to joining that list. While there are plenty of pickers who can play fast (usually sounding staccato and choppy in the process), McLaughlin is one of the blessed few who can dazzle with speed, yet maintain a sense of tone, timing, and fluidity in his playing that adds immeasurably to the music, particularly the mixture of bluegrass, country, jazz, and swing at which Lewis and Grant Street excel. He also contributes to the vocal harmony of the band (in addition to Lewis and Rozum, Todd Phillips on bass), and his solo CD Cliffs of Vermilion gives him an opportunity to demonstrate his abilities as a lead vocalist as well. A former champion at the annual Flatpick Guitar competition at Winfield, Kansas, McLaughlin is, quite simply, one of the most accomplished and satisfying guitar pickers in the folk music world today.

what's available: Cliffs of Vermilion ♪♪♪♪ (Dog-Boy, 1996, prod. Laurie Lewis) is a collection of 13 tunes both traditional and original, from classic instrumentals like "St. Anne's Reel/Fisher's Hornpipe," to his own compositions (the title cut), to expressive vocalizations on standards like "Cole Younger."

worth searching for: McLaughlin appears on three cuts on Laurie Lewis's True Stories ♪♪♪♪♪ (Rounder, 1993, prod. Mike Marshall, Laurie Lewis). His work is stellar, but pay close attention to "Swept Away." Also, he appears in the album's showpiece cut, Lewis's award-winning rendition of Kate Long's "Who Will Watch the Home Place." On the album of duets released by Lewis and Rozum, The Oak and the Laurel ♪♪♪♪♪ (Rounder, 1995, prod. Laurie Lewis, Tom Rozum), McLaughlin can be found on three tracks, including the rousing, high energy medley "Sleepy-Eyed John/Tom and Jerry."

influences:

◀◀ Doc Watson, Clarence White, Tony Rice

▶▶ David McLaughlin, David Grier, Scott Nygaard, Nina Gerber

see also: Laurie Lewis

John Lupton

Don McLean

Born October 2, 1945, in New Rochelle, NY.

After graduating from Iona College in 1968, folk-singing troubadour Don McLean enrolled at Columbia Graduate School, but didn't attend, choosing instead to work dates with childhood hero Pete Seeger. McLean's first album, Tapestry, was released in 1970 on the Mediarts label after being turned down by 34 other companies. It contained the original version of "And I Love You So," a song that became a moderate country hit for Bobby Goldsboro, a pop smash for Perry Como, and an album cut for Elvis Presley. McLean's breakthrough came with his second album, American Pie, which spent nearly two months atop the pop album charts in late 1971 and 1972 and was dedicated to Buddy Holly. In addition to the epic title song, that album also contained "Vincent." After American Pie, McLean made a series of inspired folk-rock albums, but never recaptured the magic of his eight-and-a-half minute blockbuster, though he was the inspiration for the song "Killing Me Softly with His Song," a chart-topping smash for Roberta Flack and, more recently, the Fugees. McLean, whose lengthy list of influences includes Hank Williams and Johnny Cash, traveled to Nashville in 1978 to record Chain Lightning, the album yielding his only Top 10 country hit, a remake of Roy Orbison's "Crying" that didn't chart until 1981. In 1981 he released another Nashville album, Believers, which, like Chain Lightning, was engineered by Billy Sherrill and featured some of Music City's prime players. He had one of his last hits with "He's Got You," a remake of Patsy Cline's "She's Got You," in 1987.

what to buy: The Best of Don McLean ♪♪♪♪ (EMI, 1988, prod. various) is a 10-song career overview containing all of his key tracks as well as his loving remake of hero Buddy Holly's "Every Day."

what to buy next: American Pie ♪♪♪♪ (EMI-Manhattan, 1971, prod. Ed Freeman) is the original breakthrough album that made such a big noise during the winter of 1971, the pure and unpretentious work of a troubadour who had no idea that a chart-topping classic was in his future.

the rest:

Tapestry ♪♪♪♪ (Mediarts, 1970/Capitol, 1996)
Primetime ♪♪♪ (Arista 1977/Hip-O, 1997)
Believers ♪♪♪ (Millenium 1982/Hip-O, 1997)
For the Memories ♪♪♪♪ (Gold Castle, 1989/Hip-O, 1997) Greatest Hits Live! ♪♪♪♪ (Gold Castle, 1990/Hip-O, 1997)
Head Room ♪♪♪ (Curb, 1991)
Don McLean Christmas ♪♪♪ (Curb, 1991)
Classics ♪♪♪♪ (Curb, 1992)
American Pie & Other Hits ♪♪♪ (Capitol Special Products, 1994)
The River of Love ♪♪♪ (Curb, 1995)
Favorites & Rarities ♪♪♪ (Alliance, 1997)
Don McLean's Christmas Dreams ♪♪♪ (Hip-O, 1997)

worth searching for: Chain Lightning ♪♪♪♪ (Millennium, 1978/Hip-O, 1997, prod. Larry Butler) features his compassionate vocals on material like "Crying" and "Your Cheating Heart," recorded in Nashville. A country singer he's not, but with his impassioned but tasteful deliveries, McLean makes you believe every word he sings.

influences:

◀◀ Pete Seeger, Johnny Cash, Hank Williams

▶▶ Mary Chapin Carpenter, Steve Forbert

David Sokol

Jeannie McLerie

See: Bayou Seco

James McMurtry

Born March 18, 1962, in Fort Worth, TX.

With a novelist's sense of detail and texture and a rocker's sense of rhythm, James McMurtry spins musical tales rich in imagery and emotion. His songs, like those of his first producer, John Mellencamp, examine the lives of disenfranchised Americans, those for whom the good life is just another myth, or those who had it and pissed it all away. It just so happens he does it with great guitar work and musical backing. To him, though, there's an important distinction between what he does and the work of a poet. Asked once if his lyrics, vivid as they are, could stand alone as poetry, he vehemently insisted they could not. "I just don't like poetry all that much," he said. It's just one more surprising admission from a guy any listener would swear had poetry in his blood. The son of Larry McMurtry, author of such renowned novels as Lonesome Dove, James has a solid storytelling pedigree, but where he learned to mix the detachment of a cynical observer with the mournful resignation of a wizened elder with a deadpan nasal twang is anybody's guess. (By the way, his English professor mom taught him to play guitar, though it was his dad's work on the screenplay of the Mellencamp film Falling from Grace that got the kindred troubadours connected.) Though he sounds like an authentically dust-covered, sweat-soaked Texan, McMurtry grew up in Virginia. He returned to Texas, first to San Antonio, during the '80s, then settled in Austin. A winner of the 1987 Kerrville Folk Festival's New Folk Contest, he was brought to Columbia by Mellencamp.

what to buy: Too Long in the Wasteland ♪♪♪♪ (Columbia, 1989, prod. John Mellencamp) is a terrific debut from an artist who knows both the beauty of a single voice and guitar and the depth of a rock 'n' roll band. It's a deep examination of the heartland by someone whose gift for detailed observation is instinctive. Candyland ♪♪♪♪ (Columbia, 1992, prod. Michael Wanchic) blurs the distinctions between folk and rock, as McMurtry employs a Mellencamp-like sensibility to relay such little gems as "Safe Side," "Don't Waste Away," and "Good Life."

what to buy next: If the Where'd You Hide the Body ♪♪♪♪ (Columbia, 1995, prod. Don Dixon) single "Fuller Brush Man" doesn't make you relive your childhood, you didn't have one. And if "Levelland" doesn't make you stop what you're doing to pay attention, you've got no pulse. McMurtry didn't sell enough discs for Columbia, so he wound up on Sugar Hill, without sacrificing any of the quality that drew the big guys to him in the first place. Catch the funky "Sixty Acres" and "Paris" in It Had to Happen ♪♪♪½ (Sugar Hill, 1997, prod. Lloyd Maines), then sit back and drift into McMurtry's Lonesome Dove kind of world, one in which he's older and wiser, but still wonderful.

influences:

⏪ Johnny Cash, Kris Kristofferson, John Hiatt, Band, Randy Newman, Bob Dylan, John Mellencamp, Bruce Springsteen, John Prine

⏩ Chris Whitley, Jesse Winchester, Joe Ely

Lynne Margolis

Brian McNeill

Born 1950, in Falkirk, Scotland.

Brian McNeill began his musical training in his early teens with formal violin lessons, and at the same time became an electric guitarist. During his college years, he discovered Celtic music and began to play traditional fiddle tunes. In 1969, along with Alan Reid and Ricky Starr, he formed the Battlefield Band, with which he played and sang for 21 years. During his years with the Battlefield Band, McNeill became one of Scotland's most noted musicians and songwriters. He plays fiddle, viola, mandolin, cittern, bouzouki, guitar, concertina, bass, and hurdy-gurdy, and his songs, including "The Yew Tree," "The Lads o' the Fair," and "The Snows of France and Holland," were among the best-loved of the Battlefield Band's repertoire. In addition to the many albums he recorded with the Battlefield Band, McNeill has recorded several solo projects. In 1990 he left the Battlefield Band, partly to put energy into his second career as a novelist. Since then, he has continued to perform, write songs, tour, and record as a solo artist and with various duos and groups.

what to buy: One of McNeill's most exciting projects, The Back o' the North Wind ♪♪♪♪♪ (Greentrax, 1991, prod. Brian McNeill) is a concept album about Scottish emigration. Some of these songs are about important characters in history, including Flora MacDonald, who helped Prince Charlie Stuart escape the redcoats before immigrating to North Carolina, where her husband and son became redcoats themselves and fought against the United States in the Revolution; Andrew Carnegie, who left a dirt-poor childhood in Scotland to become one of America's most legendary tycoons; and John Muir, who survived an authoritarian Calvinist upbringing to become America's leading conservationist, the founder of both the Sierra Club and the National Parks system. Others are about more obscure figures, including McNeill's uncle Jim. In addition to the wonderfully worded songs, there are several sets of tunes both upbeat and sad. McNeill has also performed these songs as part of a multimedia presentation, but they hold together beautifully as an album.

what to buy next: This will depend a bit on your taste in music. If topical songs are your bag, try No Gods ♪♪♪♪ (Greentrax, 1995, prod. Brian McNeill). Uncompromising songs like "Any Mick'll Do," about racism and bigotry of all sorts, and "Bring Back the Wolf," about harebrained schemes for Scotland's future, stand out on this release. On the other hand, it also features more personal songs, and quite a few good new fiddle tunes as well. If you like a mix of traditional and original songs and tunes, try McNeill's duo albums. Horses for Courses ♪♪♪♪ (Greentrax, 1993, prod. Brian McNeill), recorded with Tom McDonagh, mixes traditional Irish songs from McDonagh with some of McNeill's songwriting, and traditional Celtic tunes with McNeill's compositions. McNeill takes a similar, but more purely Scottish, approach on Stage by Stage ♪♪♪♪ (Greentrax, 1995, prod. Brian McNeill), which he recorded with singer and multi-instrumentalist Iain MacKintosh. This features traditional Scottish songs, some modern American and English ones, as well as tunes of various mongrel breeds. If traditional instrumentals excite you, McNeill's very first solo album, Monksgate ♪♪♪ (Greentrax, 1978, prod. Brian McNeill), explores the musical traditions of Ireland, Scotland, Wales, and Northumbria with a wealth of musical guests, and if new tunes are what you're after, try Unstrung Hero ♪♪♪ (Temple, 1985, prod. Robin Morton), on which McNeill plays an astonishing variety of instruments and even sings a few songs. Another mixed bag album, The Busker and the Devil's Only Daughter ♪♪♪ (Temple, 1990, prod. Brian McNeill), is loosely based on the idea of busking, and on McNeill's first novel. Though it's not his greatest work, a lot of it is very good.

worth searching for: The LP Sidetracks ♪♪½ (Topic, 1980, prod. Robin Morton) has some nice material from McNeill and his Battlefield partner Alan Reid. It includes an unusual version of Stan Rogers's "Barrett's Privateers," collected orally in Scotland.

influences:

⏪ Archie Fisher, Dick Gaughan

⏩ Billy Bragg, Old Blind Dogs

see also: The Battlefield Band

Steve Winick

Michael McNevin

Northern California resident Michael McNevin constructs finely crafted story songs with intricate guitar accompaniment and direct, intimate lyrics.

what's available: Secondhand Story (Mudpuddle, 1993, prod. Michael McNevin) ♪♪♪½, McNevin's only full CD to date, is a minor masterpiece, with one memorable song after another. Highlights include the moving title tune, which recounts verbatim a letter McNevin found in a goodwill backpack, and "Jersey Jail," a depiction of a memorable, if demeaning, encounter he had with the law. McNevin has one otherwise unavailable song, "Adolescent Jinx," which appears on the anthology Memorial Day: American Impressionist Songwriters Part II (Waterbug, 1996).

influences:
◀◀ Chuck Brodsky, Richard Shindell

Michael Parrish

Jesse McReynolds

See: Jim & Jesse

Blind Willie McTell

Born William Samuel McTell, May 5, 1901, in Thomson, GA. Died April 19, 1959, in Milledgeville, GA.

A pathetic figure to strangers who listened to him sing for coins on the streets of Atlanta, Blind Willie McTell was a blues giant—a stirring guitarist, a composer of stunningly moving songs, and an interpreter of the first rank. Like John Lee Hooker, he blithely moved from label to label, scattering gems everywhere he recorded. He was Blind Sammie for Columbia, Georgia Bill on OKeh, Barrelhouse Sammy for Atlantic, Pig 'n Whistle Red on Regal. Whatever McTell's aliases, the snapping of his 12-string guitar and his sly voice were unmistakable. No song was out of his range. His repertoire included his own classic songs, obscure folk performances, sprightly rags, and dignified gospel laments. He was capable of launching off on a rollicking version of "Pinetop's Boogie Woogie" one moment, then stepping back with a haunting reading of the folk ballad "Delia." McTell's rolling "Statesboro Blues" became fodder for both the Allman Brothers Band and Taj Mahal. But he alone performed his vast arsenal of songs best, and it is hardly surprising that 40 years after McTell's death, few artists have tried to adapt him. McTell was born in deep Georgia cotton country, about 30 miles west of Augusta. His last name at birth was reportedly McTear or McTier. How it became corrupted to McTell is unknown. Blinded soon after birth, he compensated by relying on his memory and his acutely developed senses of hearing and touch. Legends grew around his exploits: McTell reportedly was able to lead sighted people around Atlanta's streets and even navigated New York's subway system; friends said he once picked off a threatening dog with a handgun. But McTell was most at home as a singer, often accompanied by his Atlanta colleague Curley Weaver. After performing with traveling shows, McTell enrolled in the state's school for the blind in Macon. There he learned Braille and obscure crafts like broom making and leather work. He attended blind academies in New York and Michigan before returning to Atlanta in 1927, where his long recording career started. His first nine sessions for Victor were among his most lasting, producing "Statesboro Blues" and the powerful "Dark Night Blues." He moved to Columbia, an association that lasted four years before McTell moved on in 1933. On more than 40 recordings McTell gave the widest view of his talents, from the jaunty "Razor Ball" to the chilling "You Was Born to Die." He

editor's choice
10 cajun albums

Bois Sec Ardoin & Canray Fontenot, La Musique Creole (Arhoolie)

Various Artists, Le Gran Mamou: A Cajun Music Anthology (CMF)

D.L. Menard, Dewey Balfa, Marc Savoy, Under the Green Oak Tree (Arhoolie)

Nathan Abshire, French Blues (Arhoolie)

Harry Choates, Fiddle King of Cajun Swing (Arhoolie)

The Balfa Brothers, The Balfa Brothers Play Traditional Cajun Music, Vols. 1 & 2 (Swallow)

Amédée Ardoin, I'm Never Comin' Back: The Roots of Zydeco (Arhoolie)

Dennis McGee, The Complete Recordings, 1929–1930 (Yazoo)

Various Artists, Cajun Music: Fais Do-Do (Columbia)

Iry LeJeune, Cajun's Greatest: The Definitive Collection (Ace)

recorded briefly with Decca, then dropped from sight until 1940, when archivist John Lomax recorded him for the Library of Congress. The heyday of urban R&B should have spelled the end for McTell's lonely minstrelsy, yet he was recording again stunningly in 1949 for Atlantic Records, despite its emphasis on brass-driven R&B. He and Weaver followed up with sessions for Regal beginning in 1950. Drinking heavily, McTell still had enough verve left for one last session with Prestige in 1956. His death of a brain hemorrhage in 1959 was so ignored that blues researchers were still trying to find him a decade later. Their obsession was understandable. "Nobody," Bob Dylan sings in his barren tribute to the blind street performer, "sings the blues like Blind Willie McTell."

what to buy: The title The Definitive Blind Willie McTell ♪♪♪♪♪ (Columbia Legacy, 1994, prod. Lawrence Cohn) exaggerates only slightly. This two-CD set omits only McTell's Victor sides in its comprehensive culling of his classic early work. It is still indispensable, both for its respectful mastering and top-notch research by blues historian David Evans. Tipped off by a distributor that McTell was alive and well in Atlanta, record mogul Ahmet Ertegun lost no time in recording the street singer on Atlanta 12 String ♪♪♪♪♪ (Atlantic, 1991, prod. Ahmet Ertegun, Herb Abrahamson). Even if the released single sank like a stone, McTell's performance is a tour de force, ranging from the dooming "On the Cooling Board" to the infectious "Kill It Kid."

what to buy next: For those who have to have everything, there is Blind Willie McTell: Complete Recorded Works (1927–35), Volumes I-III ♪♪♪♪♪ (Document, 1990, prod. Johnny Parth). Among Austrian archivist Parth's finest sets, these three separate CDs will not lose their luster until BMG and MCA put out their own McTell on disc. Complete Library of Congress Recordings ♪♪♪♪ (Document, 1990) contains both songs and recorded monologues, including a wary McTell's careful discourse on race relations in the South, but for some reason, the four songs seem just a cut below his 1930s works. On Last Session ♪♪♪ (Original Blues Classics, 1991), McTell's voice is frayed and his fingers have lost some of their dexterity, but there is still haunted dignity in these final works. Not to be overlooked, either, is Blind Willie McTell, 1927–35 ♪♪♪ (Yazoo, 1990), a decent primer for those new to McTell but overshadowed in recent years by the Columbia and Document sets. The Victor classics included here complement the Columbia set nicely.

what to avoid: Doing That Atlanta (1927–1935) ♪♪♪ (Yazoo, 1991), a representative sampling of McTell's busiest years, has been mostly superseded by the Columbia two-CD set, which features cleaner masters and better sound. There are a few decent McTell efforts on Decca—but all of those duplicate the comprehensive Document releases.

worth searching for: Pig 'n Whistle Red ♪♪♪♪ (Biograph, 1993) is a delicately remastered reissue of McTell's 1950 flirtation with Regal. The 20 tracks are a mixed bag, including a revamped "Savannah Mama" and a reprise of 1933's "Good Little Thing." The session is watered down by some weak hokum and three throwaways by McTell's running buddy, Curley Weaver.

influences:

◀◀ Blind Blake, Curley Weaver

▶▶ Taj Mahal, Allman Brothers Band, Bob Dylan

Steve Braun

Ralph McTell

Born Ralph May, December 3, 1944, in Farnborough, Kent, England.

Ralph McTell is known best for one song. His "Streets of London" has been recorded by over 200 artists and five times by McTell himself. The third song he wrote, it reached number two on the charts when he recorded it for the second time in 1974. McTell is another product of the fecund musical atmosphere of postwar England. He's been working the folk circuit in England and worldwide since the late 1950s. The deep-voiced, socially conscious singer's most unusual occupation was as a children's show host. He's known to British youth from "Alphabet Zoo" and "Tickle on the Tum" from 1983.

what to buy: A highlight of From Clare to Here: The Songs of Ralph McTell ♪♪♪♪ (Red House, 1991) is McTell's "The Girl from the Hiring Fair." Also recorded by Fairport Convention (several of whose members appear on McTell's version), it's a richly romantic song with a traditional sound and a happy ending. The album also includes "Summer Girls" and "Streets of London."

best of the rest:

Slide Away the Screen (Road Goes on Forever, 1979)
Silver Celebration (1994)
Stealin' Back (Castle, 1996)
Sand in Your Shoes ♪♪♪½ (Red House, 1998) worth searching for: The GP's: Saturday Rolling Around ♪♪♪♪ (1981/Woodworm, 1991) documents the six-gig life of the country-rock supergroup comprising McTell, Richard Thompson, Dave Pegg, and Dave Mattacks. The CD includes McTell's "Zimmerman Blues" and "Love Grows" as well as songs by Hank Williams, Woody Guthrie, and Bob Dylan. The performances are enthusiastic and sloppy, and the CD makes fun traveling music.

influences:

⏪ Gordon Lightfoot, Bob Dylan

⏩ Simon Nicol, Huw & Tony Williams

Pamela Murray Winters

Melanie

Born Melanie Safka, February 3, 1947, in Queens, NY.

A guitar-wielding flower child with a sultry rasp of a voice, Melanie combined the winsome folk of late-'60s Joni Mitchell with the folk-naif girlishness of England's Mary Hopkin. Somehow, she managed to crack the mainstream in a way neither of those artists did. From 1969 to 1971, Melanie landed on pop charts both at home and abroad, establishing herself in the vein of other nonpolitical folk artists (Donovan, John Sebastian) with pleasant sing-alongs such as "What Have They Done to My Song, Ma?" and the chart-topping "Brand New Key." Her music has enjoyed an element of crossover success thanks to covers by Barbra Streisand, Ray Charles, and Mel Torme, among others. Comebacks during the late '80s and again during the mid-'90s showed she hasn't lost her audience or her touch. She remains a sophisticated songwriter of humane and healing themes.

what to buy: The Best of Melanie ♪♪♪♪ (Rhino, 1990, prod. various) is certainly the right choice to make. The 18 tracks include all six of her Top 40 hits, as well as her compelling cover of the Rolling Stones' classic "Ruby Tuesday."

what to buy next: Candles in the Rain ♪♪♪ (Buddah, 1970, prod. Hank Hoffman) is Melanie's premiere album, featuring deft and inspired songwriting ("Lay Down," "Ruby Tuesday," "What Have They Done to My Song, Ma?") and glorious backup vocals from the gospel chorus (and Buddah labelmates) the Edwin Hawkins Singers.

what to avoid: Melanie tried to shed her girlish image on Ballroom Streets ♪♪ (RCA, 1979/Rhino, 1994), and while the songs are more sophisticated than on previous efforts, nothing here is as strong as her early hits.

the rest:

Leftover Wine (Buddah/One Way, 1970)
Freedom Knows My Name (Lonestars, 1993) worth searching for: Gather Me ♪♪♪♪ (Neighborhood, 1971, prod. Peter Schekeryk), the first release on the label founded by Melanie and husband Schekeryk, was a winning effort that housed "Brand New Key" and the equally wonderful "Ring the Living Bell."

influences:

⏪ Joan Baez, Odetta, Ronettes, Dusty Springfield

⏩ Olivia Newton-John, Alanis Morissette, Jewel

Christopher Scapelliti

Memphis Jug Band /Picaninny Jug Band /Jed Davenport & His Beale Street Jug Band

Formed 1927, in Memphis, TN. Disbanded 1935.

Charlie Burse, guitar, mandolin, vocals; Jab Jones, piano, vocals, jug; Charlie Pierce, violin; Will Shade, harmonica, vocals; Vol Stevens, mandolin, vocals; Will Weldon, guitar, vocals; Charlie Polk, vocals, jug; Tewee Blackman, guitar; Hattie Hart, vocals; Jab Jones, jug; Charlie Nickerson, piano, vocals; Ben Ramey, kazoo, vocals; Milton Robie, violin; Memphis Minnie, guitar, vocals; Hambone Lewis, jug.

Jug bands were found in nearly every city in the South during the 1920s and '30s, but they were most popular and prolific in Memphis, Tennessee. The Memphis Jug Band was the first (and some consider the best) of many to record. Between 1927 and 1934, the group recorded close to 100 sides. Led by multi-instrumentalist Will Shade, the Memphis Jug Band performed at every conceivable type of venue: street corners, backwater juke joints, city nightclubs, political rallies, private parties at elegant homes and hotel ballrooms, openings of stores, medicine shows, and even on excursion trains and riverboats. Their repertoire had to include a wide range of styles in order to entertain all these different sorts of audiences, so they could and did play everything from the latest popular ragtime pieces to old-time waltzes and breakdowns, raucous bawdy blues songs, and humorous vaudeville routines. This seminal jug band went through numerous configurations during its seven years of recording; the consistent element was the band's organizer, Will Shade (who sometimes used the pseudonym "Sun Brimmer," a local name for a parasol, which "will shade"). The group stopped recording in 1934, but in 1956 Sam Charters recorded a recreation of the Memphis Jug Band with two of its original members, Shade and Charlie Burse, joined by Gus Cannon (of Cannon's Jug Stompers).

what to buy: Memphis Jug Band ♪♪♪♪ (Yazoo, 1991) provides a comprehensive introduction to the good-time party music played by this genre-defining aggregation of Memphis's finest musicians and spans their entire recorded output from 1927 to 1934. It includes all their classics: their most well-known song, "Stealin," the achingly beautiful vocal harmonies of "K.C. Moan," Hattie Hart's down-home "Cocaine Habit," the raunchy duet "Cave Man Blues," and much, much more. The Memphis Jug Band provided a benchmark for all future jug bands, and this material shows why: an entertaining, danceable fusion of blues, pop music, and old-time music featuring a thundering jug in place of a bass, melodic kazoo and harmonica duets anchored by two thumping guitars, vocals that are by turns lighthearted, lewd, melancholy, and comical. It's a must-have for anyone interested in jug band music.

what to buy next: Once you're hooked on the Memphis Jug Band sound, invest in the three Document CDs, Complete Recorded Works, Volume I (1927–1928), Complete Recorded Works, Volume II (1928–1929), and Complete Recorded Works, Volume III (1930) ♪♪♪♪ (Document, 1991, compilation prod. Johnny Parth). This will give you everything recorded by the Memphis Jug Band during its heyday, from 1927 to 1930, in chronological order. You'll hear some gems that don't appear on the Yazoo reissue, including the raucous "It Won't Act Right," and the enigmatic double-entendre "Papa's Got Your Bath Water On" (both on Volume III). Volume III also contains two wonderful songs featuring Memphis Minnie backed by the Memphis Jug Band: a remake of her hit, "Bumble Bee Blues," plus "Meningitis Blues." On Volume II are curiosities like "Jug Band Waltz" and "Mississippi River Waltz," among the very few waltzes recorded by any jug band; these were probably commonly played for both blacks and whites at the parties where the Memphis Jug Band entertained. Volume I includes an interesting laid-back rendition of "Kansas City Blues," recorded only nine days after Jim Jackson's hit version.

the rest:

Complete Recorded Works (1932–1934) ♪♪♪ (Document, 1990)

Associates and Alternate Takes (1927–30) ♪♪♪ (Wolf, 1990)

influences:

◀◀ Gus Cannon, Charlie Jordan, Ma Rainey, Whistler Jug Band, Beale Street Sheiks, Furry Lewis, Dixieland Jug Blowers, Tampa Red, Sleepy John Estes

▶▶ Jim Kweskin's Jug Band, Lovin' Spoonful, Grateful Dead, Maria Muldaur, Even Dozen Jug Band, Hot Tuna, Alvin Youngblood Hart, Del Rey, Arlo Guthrie, Youngbloods

see also: Memphis Minnie

Suzy Rothfield Thompson

Memphis Minnie

Born Lizzie Douglas, June 3, 1897, in Algiers, LA. Died August 6, 1973, in Memphis, TN.

A tough lady, Memphis Minnie had to fight vigorously to make her niche in a men's world and establish herself as one of the greatest blues artists of all times. Raised in Walls, Mississippi, she learned to play banjo and guitar and moved, alone, to Memphis in 1910 (at age 13!). She played on the streets and toured the South with medicine shows and circuses and lived with Casey Bill Weldon, who tutored her. In 1929 she married guitarist "Kansas" Joe McCoy, with whom she formed a marvelous, inventive duo with a rural flavor. She recorded some masterpieces of guitar playing ("Hoodoo Lady"), and her style became more urbanized. She kept evolving, and in 1938 formed a duo with her new lover, guitarist Ernest "Little Son Joe" Lawlars, whose compositions ("Digging My Potatoes," "Me and My Chauffeur," "I'm So Glad") and delicate accompaniment combined with stunning guitar interplay helped to increase Minnie's popularity and success ("In My Girlish Days"). In the late 1940s and early 1950s she tried several come-backs, but asthma and new trends in African-American music forced her to retire in Memphis in 1957. Memphis Minnie will remain one of the most influential blues personalities, a powerful voice, prolific composer, and outstanding guitar stylist with a legacy of more than 250 recordings, some of which are still widely performed by contemporary artists.

what to buy: Hoodoo Lady (1933–37) ♪♪♪♪♪ (Columbia/Roots 'n' Blues, 1991, prod. Lawrence Cohn) is an 18-track collection of the best songs recorded in that period—"Hoodoo Lady," "If You See My Rooster," "Black Cat Blues," and "Good Morning" among them. Me and My Chauffeur 1935–46 ♪♪♪♪♪ (E.P.M. Blues Collection, 1997, prod. Jean Buzelin), a 20-track collection, includes "Diggin My Potatoes," "I'm So Glad," "Down in New Orleans," and other masterpieces with some overlap from Hoodoo Lady. Minnie's electric guitar work combines nicely with Joe's acoustic playing on I Ain't No Bad Gal 1941 ♪♪♪♪♪ (CBS/Portrait Masters, 1988, prod. Bob Thiele); its 12 tracks from two 1941 sessions include four previously unissued selections.

what to buy next: Memphis Minnie & Kansas Joe—1929–34 Recordings in Chronological Order, Volumes I–IV ♪♪♪♪ (Document, 1991, prod. Johnny Parth) is for completists but comes highly recommended.

the rest:

Memphis Minnie: Complete Recorded Works 1935–41 Volumes I–V ♪♪♪♪ (RST, 1991)

Memphis Minnie: The Complete Post-War Recordings in Chronological Order 1944–53 Volumes I–III ♪♪♪♪ (Wolf, 1991)
Early Rhythm & Blues 1949 (Biograph, 1992)
Hot Stuff (Collector's Edition, 1996)
Queen of the Blues ♪♪♪ (Columbia/Legacy, 1997) worth searching for: Memphis Minnie's Blues—Woman with Guitar (Da Capo Press, 1992) offers a fascinating read and look at Minnie's importance. Written by Paul and Beth Garon, the first part, a biography with selected lyrics, is essential reading. Part two, a surrealistic analysis of Minnie's personality and lyrics, is more controversial.

influences:

◀◀ Frank Stokes, Furry Lewis, Beale Street Sheiks, Robert Wilkins, Jim Jackson, Casey B. Weldon

▶▶ Baby Boy Warren, Johnny Shines, J.B. Hutto, J.B. Lenoir

Robert Sacré

Doris "D.L." Menard

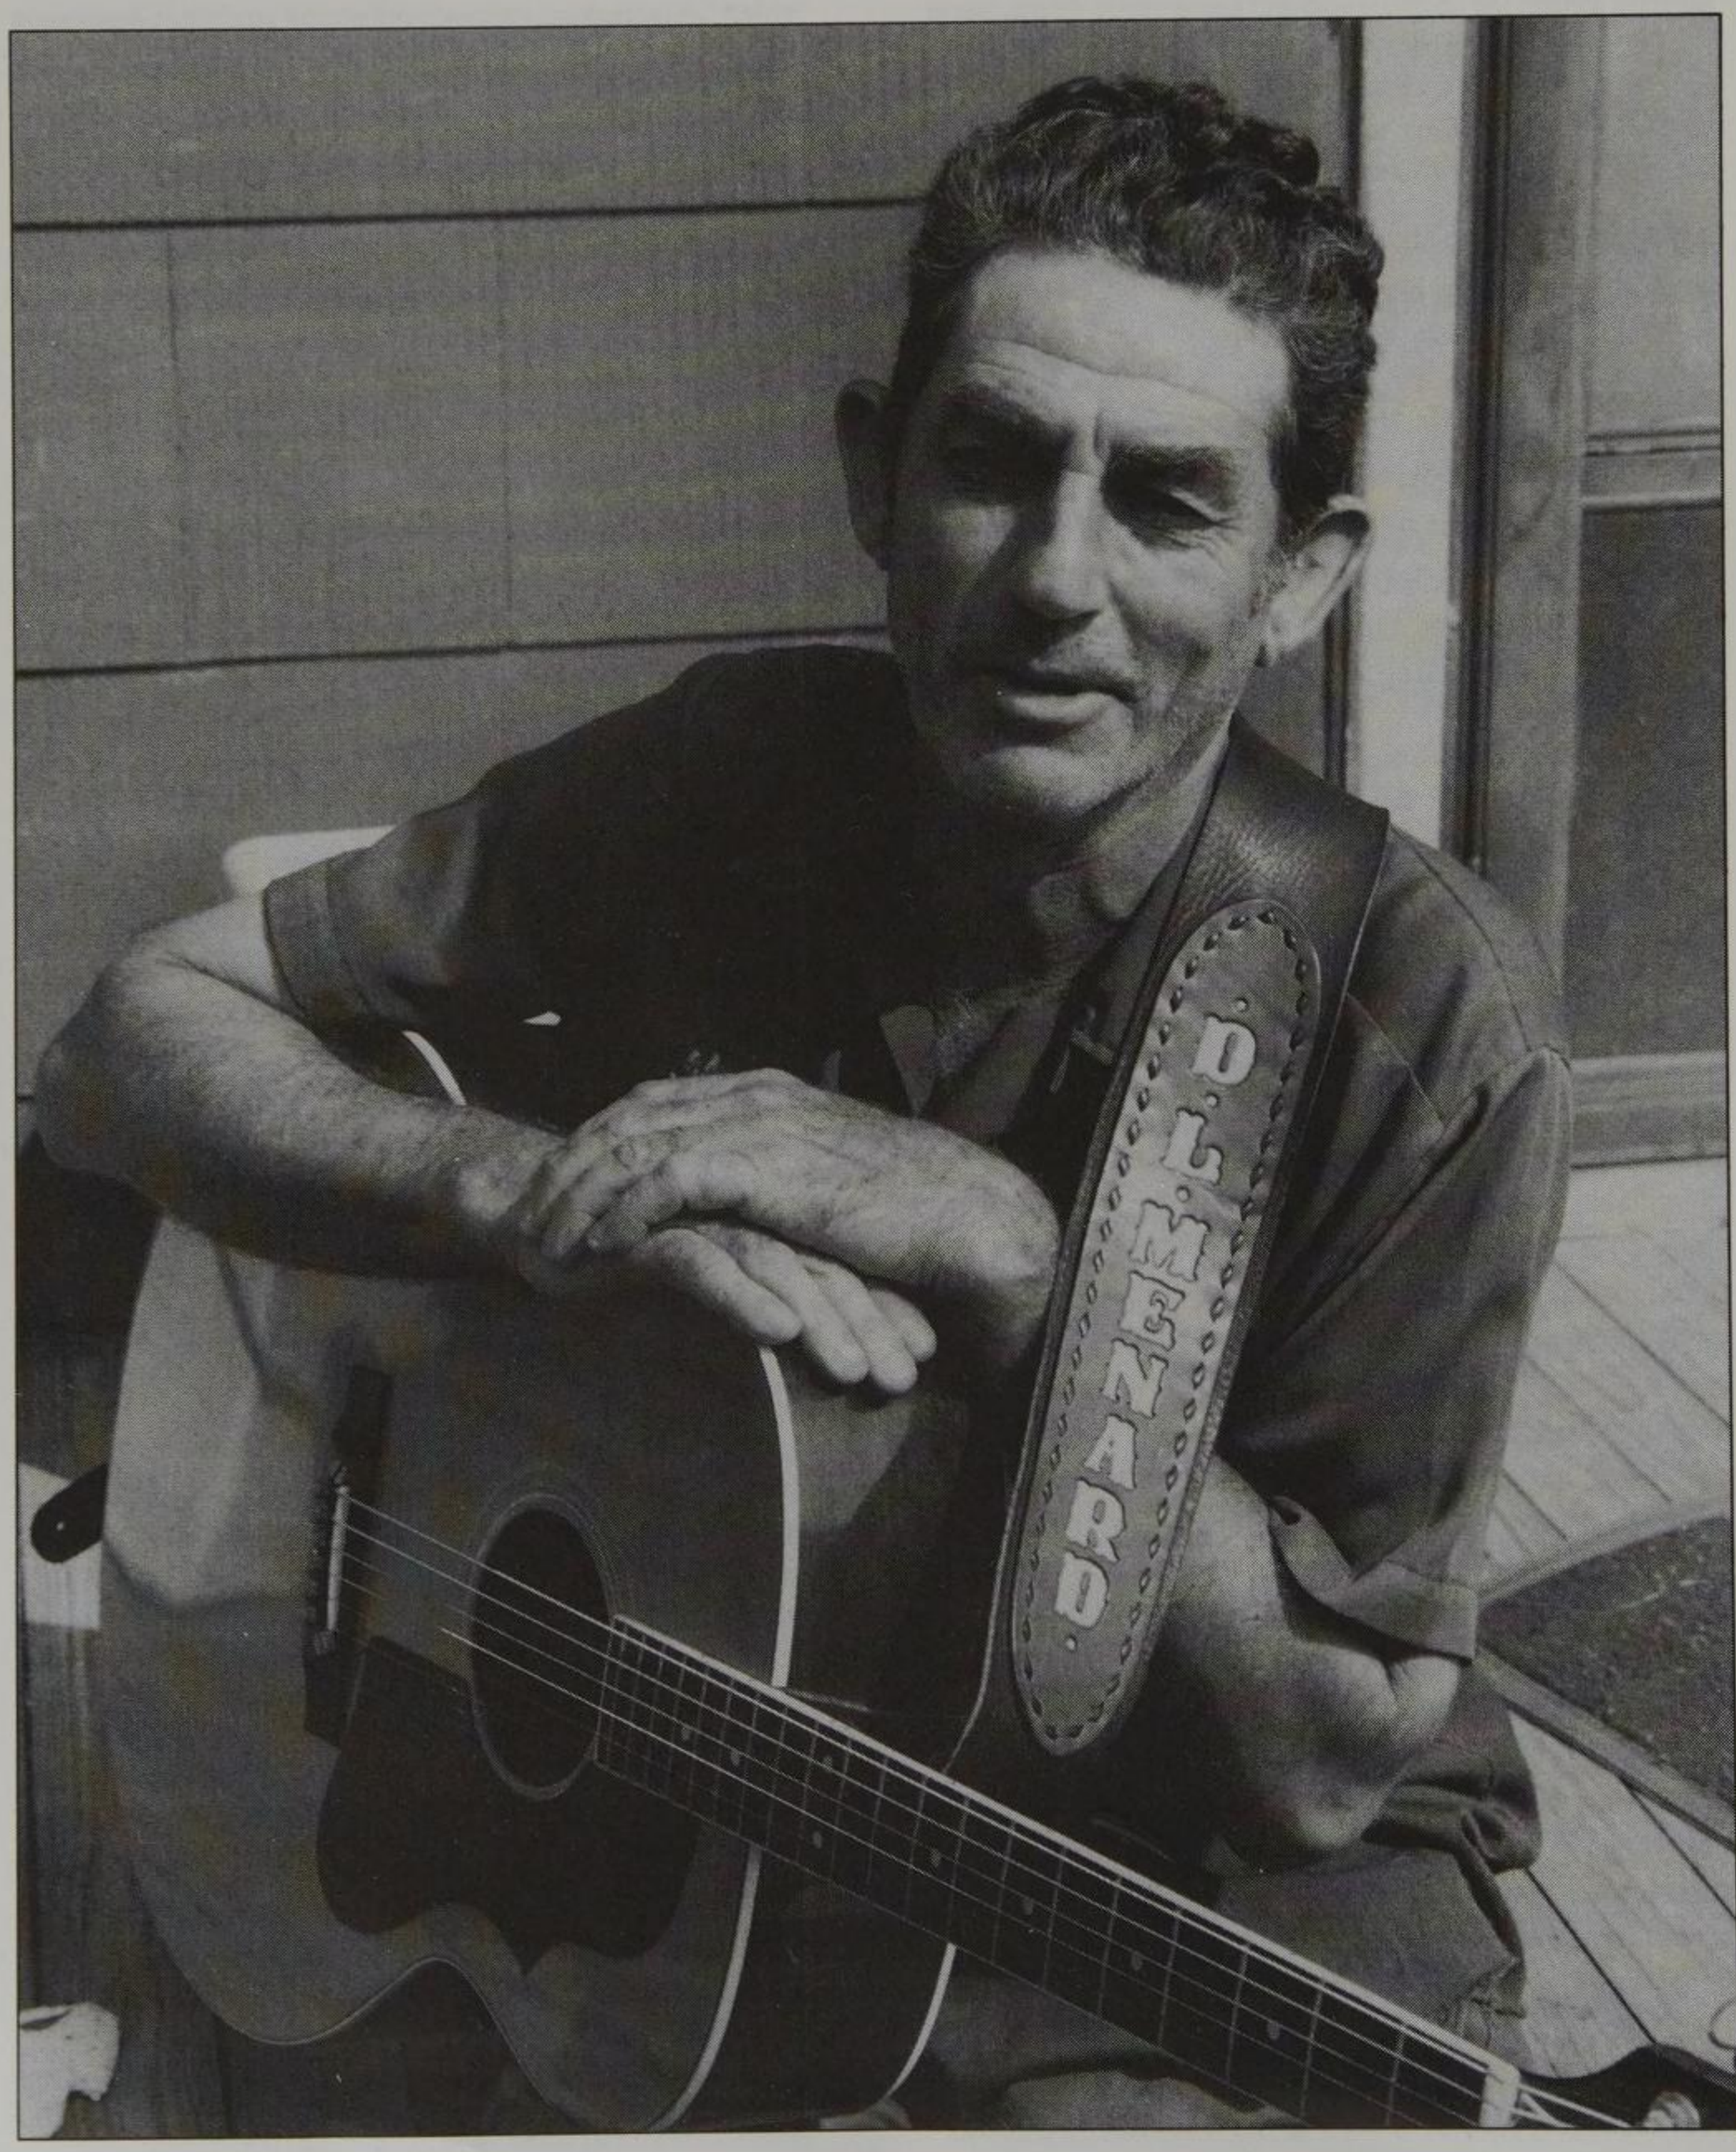
Born April 14, 1932, in Erath, LA.

Cajun singer and songwriter D.L. Menard, known as the "Cajun Hank Williams," has penned some of the most enduring modern Cajun songs, including his biggest hit, "The Back Door," which has been recorded by countless bands both in and out of Louisiana. His vocal style is nasal, intense, and immediately identifiable. Another of Menard's sobriquet's is the "Cajun rhythm machine," referring to his crisp, driving style of rhythm guitar playing. D.L. Menard still lives in Erath, Louisiana, the small town where he was born and raised, where he and his wife Louella run a chair factory, producing handmade rockers with caned seats. His father, Ophy, played Cajun music on the harmonica, and, at age 16, D.L. ordered his first guitar from Montgomery Ward. A few months later he began to play in Cajun dance halls with Elias Badeaux's band, the Louisiana Aces. During the postwar era, Menard says, "country music was pretty popular and a Cajun band that couldn't play country music with the Cajun music didn't have too many jobs." So the teenaged D.L. made a specialty of singing the popular country hits of Lefty Frizzell and Hank Williams, in addition to traditional Cajun French songs. During the early '50s, inspired by a chance meeting with his idol, Hank Williams, Menard began to make up his own songs in Cajun French. His first, "The Jolly Roger Waltz," sold moderately well, but the second, "The Back Door," was a huge regional hit, inspiring dozens of cover versions. During the '60s Menard began traveling outside southwest Louisiana, eventually touring in five continents. His outgoing, wisecracking style of performing combines humorous Cajun anecdotes with excellent traditional Cajun French music, making him a favorite at festivals and concerts. In addition, he continues to attract brilliant younger musicians as sidemen, including many of the finest accordion and fiddle players in Cajun music: Horace Trahan, Eddie LeJeune, Marc Savoy, Paul Daigle, Dewey Balfa, and Ken Smith. In 1994 Menard won a National Heritage Award, the National Endowment for the Arts' highest honor for a traditional artist.

what to buy: Under the Green Oak Tree ♪♪♪♪ (Arhoolie, 1976, prod. Chris Strachwitz) is a paradigm of traditional Cajun music by three undisputed masters of the genre. Marc Savoy's ornate accordion stylings and Dewey Balfa's haunting, soulful fiddling are anchored by the Cajun rhythm machine on standards of Cajun music, including great versions of "Lake Arthur Stomp" and "Un Gros Erreur." In addition, Menard sings several of his own hits, including "The Back Door" and the lovely title cut, which is a beautiful waltz. Highly recommended as an introduction to traditional Cajun music, this album sounds exactly like what it is: a relaxed yet intense musical conversation between three friends sitting around playing the music they love. Cajun Memories ♪♪♪ (Swallow, 1995, prod. Floyd Soileau) is a compilation of Menard's earliest Swallow recordings, including influential classic versions of "The Back Door," "Jolly Roger Waltz," and "She Didn't Know I Was Married," as well as many other Menard originals.

what to buy next: Out of all of D.L. Menard's albums, Cajun Saturday Night ♪♪ (Rounder, 1989, prod. Jerry Douglas) is probably the least Cajun-influenced. Produced by Nashville Dobro whiz Jerry Douglas, the album features Cajunesque honky tonk numbers, sung entirely in English and backed by Nashville session men Buck White, Ricky Skaggs, and Jerry Douglas. Although Cajun Saturday Night is not by any means traditional Cajun music, it might serve as a good introduction for those timid listeners who are reluctant to dive into the heady and strange gumbo that is REAL down-home Cajun. No Matter Where You Are, There You At ♪♪♪ (Rounder, 1989, prod. D.L. Menard, Ken Irwin) offers a more traditional treatment of Cajun standards, and a few non-Cajun standards as well (such as "Wildwood Flower," usually a guitar showcase but here presented as an exuberant Cajun two-step!). Eddie LeJeune and Blackie Forestier take turns on the Cajun accordion, combining with Ken Smith's Texas-tinged fiddling to provide a perfect foil for Menard's unique vocal style. Le Trio Cadien ♪♪♪ (Rounder, 1992, prod. Eddie LeJeune, Ken Irwin) is an excellent offering of Cajun standards, featuring the Menard-LeJeune-Smith triumvi-

doris "d.l." menard



rate, which unfortunately ended shortly after Le Trio Cadien was released. LeJeune's pyrotechnic accordion playing has to be among the hottest in Cajun music, and Smith, with his background in Texas contest-style fiddling, has the chops to match him in speed and virtuosity. As always, Menard provides rock-solid rhythm guitar, requiring neither bass nor drums to be strong and thoroughly danceable.

influences:

◀◀ Hank Williams, Harry Choates, Iry LeJeune, Marc Savoy, Balfa Brothers

▶▶ Eddie LeJeune, California Cajun Orchestra, Savoy-Smith Cajun Band, Steve Riley & the Mamou Playboys, Balfa Toujours

Suzy Rothfield Thompson

Metamora

See: Malcolm Dalglish, Pete Sutherland, Grey Larsen

Richard Meyer

Born September 6, 1952, in New Rochelle, NY.

A constant fixture on the Greenwich Village coffeehouse circuit since the 1980s, Richard Meyer's songwriting is intensely personal and reflective, with songs that speak from the heart and soul of urbania. A master of blues, folk, and pop styles, Meyer provides glimpses into personalities and experiences that transcend the everyday ("All My Ex-Girlfriends (Are Married)" from Laughing/Scared and "The Empress of Clowns" from The Good Life!). An editor and writer for Fast Folk Musical Magazine, Meyer has produced more than 60 albums with various folk artists and recorded a number of live radio broadcasts and concerts of established and emerging American singer-songwriters. He is also an acting consultant to Gadfly Records and Shanachie Records. In addition to his musical endeavors, Meyer is a professional designer of scenery and lighting for the theater, with hundreds of productions to his credit. Two of his three albums of "cinematic songs," The Good Life! and A Letter from the Open Sky, have been released nationally on the Shanachie label.

what to buy: A Letter from the Open Sky ♪♪♪ (Shanachie, 1994, prod. Richard Meyer) features bittersweet existential lyrics on "Century's End," "Blind October," and the title cut.

D.L. Menard (© Jack Vartoogian)

what to buy next: The Good Life! ♪♪ (Shanachie, 1992, prod. Richard Meyer) paints an abstract watercolor of Meyer's private universe with "Je Ne Sais Pas" and "Uneasy Nights." Both albums feature ace New York session musicians Howie Wyeth (drums), Mark Dann (bass), and Andrew Hardin (guitar) who deliver the right amount of subtle brilliance to Meyer's lyrics.

worth searching for: Laughing/Scared ♪♪ (Old Forge Records, 1988, prod. Richard Meyer) is Meyer's first effort on vinyl, and it's certainly worth the effort to locate. Order from Old Forge Records, 21 Schofield Street, City Island, New York 10464; telephone (718) 885-3268.

influences:

◀◀ Bob Dylan, Bobby Darin, Paul Simon, Doc Watson, Ella Fitzgerald

▶▶ Richard Shindell, Richard Goldman, Rod MacDonald

TJ McGrath

Walt Michael

Born June 20, 1946, in Bethesda, MD.

Multi-instrumentalist and vocalist Walt Michael encountered traditional folk music in the mid-'60s and began a career in string-band music. Michael heard his first hammered dulcimer being played in 1970 at the Fox Hollow Festival in Petersburg, New York. A year later he helped form Bottle Hill, one of the pioneer groups in "newgrass" music. In 1977 he formed the trio of Michael, McCreesh, and Campbell (with Tom McCreesh and Tom "Harley" Campbell) who toured throughout the United States, Canada, and Europe. In 1978 they collaborated with the Pilobolus Dance Theater in creating "Molly's Not Dead"—a dance piece that was performed on Broadway, on television, and throughout the world. In 1980 the trio was selected by the National Fine Arts Committee as "Official Minstrels of the 13th Olympic Winter Games" and performed some 14 concerts during the games. During ABC's broadcast of the closing ceremonies, the trio performed Michael's tune "Snowblind" to an audience of an estimated 900 million world television viewers. In 1982 Michael formed "Walt Michael and Company," an ensemble of gifted instrumentalists and singers that has included John Kirk, Frank Orsini, Mark Murphy, Evan Stover, and Tom Wetmore. In 1995 he founded the traditional music and arts center, Common Ground on the Hill, on the campus of Western Maryland College in Westminster, Maryland, where he serves as artistic director.

what's available: Music for the Hammered Dulcimer/Bermudaful ♪♪♪♪ (MCE Records/Eastwick, 1983, prod. Walt Michael) is a collection of new and traditional acoustic music featuring his expressive hammered dulcimer playing. Walt's original "Bermudaful" and "Snowblind" are included on this recording, as well as such traditional pieces as "Planxty Erwin" (Turlough O'Carolan) and "The Dark Island," a Scottish tune that is played in some interesting variations. Michael has several wonderful musicians assisting on these recordings, many of which appear elsewhere on his Walt Michael and Company recordings. Smoky Mountain Gospel ♪♪♪♪ (Brentwood, 1994, prod. Walt Michael) is another fine example of Walt Michael's inventive playing and arranging. Any of Michael's recordings can be ordered from Common Ground on the Hill, Western Maryland College, Westminster, Maryland 21157.

worth searching for: There are two out-of-print recordings of Walt Michael as part of Bottle Hill, A Rumor in Their Own Time ♪♪♪ (Biograph, 1972, prod. Arnold S. Caplin) and Light Our Way Along the Highway ♪♪♪ (Biograph, 1975, prod. Arnold S. Caplin) that include musicians Lewis London (vocals, banjo, guitar), Rexford Hunt (Dobro), Barry Mitterhoff (vocals, mandolin), and Fraser Shaw (vocals, string bass).

solo outings:

Walt Michael and Tom McCreesh:
Dance, like a Wave of the Sea ♪♪♪ (Front Hall Records/Eastwick, 1978)

Michael, McCreesh & Campbell:
The Host of the Air ♪♪♪ (Front Hall Records/Eastwick, 1980)

Walt Michael and Company:
The Good Old Way ♪♪♪ (Front Hall Records/Eastwick, 1985)
Live! ♪♪♪ (MCE Records/Eastwick, 1985)
Step Stone ♪♪♪½ (Flying Fish, 1988)

influences:
◀◀ Bill Spence, Bill Monroe, Christian Bailey, Cripple Cleve Cline

▶▶ Steve Schneider, Tina Bergmann, Madeline MacNeil

Heidi Cerrigione

Lynn Miles

Born September 29, 1958, in Sweetsburgh, Quebec, Canada.

Lynn Miles is a singer-songwriter whose lyrics are simple and familiar but whose melodies and harmonies conjure up something rich and mysterious. And she has the perfect voice for such mysteries—a reedy mezzo soprano that rises into a piercing chime and then relaxes into a comforting hum. She grew up in Ottawa, Ontario, where she studied classical violin, flute, piano, and voice and eventually gave voice lessons to a young Alanis Morissette. She had solid pop instincts in the vein of such heroines as Carole King and Laura Nyro, but during the '80s and '90s it was easier to make a living as a singer-songwriter on the folkie coffeehouse circuit than anywhere else, so Miles became a folk singer. In 1995, still based in Ottawa, she signed a songwriting deal with Criterion Music, the publisher that discovered Lyle Lovett. Criterion got Miles a record deal with Rounder subsidiary Philo in 1996 and convinced Joni Mitchell's ex-husband and collaborator Larry Klein to produce Miles's third album, due in 1998.

what's available: Slightly Haunted ♪♪♪♪ (Philo, 1996, prod. Jeffrey Lesser) is an album where the rise of great hopes and the fall of great disappointments are conveyed through the captivating melodies and chord changes more than the lyrics. When Miles confronts a lover with the suspicion that "You Don't Love Me Anymore," the dramatic chorus with its big, sustained notes captures all the courage and fear of such a showdown. When she reminds a disappointed lover that she always warned him not to count on her, there's a finger-snapping jauntiness to the punch line, "I Always Told You the Truth." On "The Ghost of Deadlock," the verses describe a relationship stalemated in silence, but the chorus articulates the singer's unspoken feelings in a big, unleashed melody that Miles belts out with impressive power. The heart of each song is Miles's voice and her acoustic rhythm guitar, but most of the tracks are dressed up by Ian LeFeuvre's Knopfleresque electric guitar and a tasteful rhythm section.

worth searching for: Miles's first CD, Chalk This One up to the Moon ♪♪½ (Snowy River Records, 1991, prod. Bill Stunt, Lynn Miles) is an inconsistent effort, but its high points hint at the tremendous breakthrough she would make five years later. "It's Hockey Night in Canada," with its mixture of gentle mocking and genuine affection for the national pastime, became a local favorite, and "I Can't Tell You Why" is a love song with a gorgeous refrain.

influences:
◀◀ Carole King, Laura Nyro, Joni Mitchell

▶▶ Patty Larkin, Fred Eaglesmith

Geoffrey Himes

Michael Miles

Chicago resident Michael J. Miles is one of the world's most adventurous clawhammer style banjo players, as well as an accomplished fingerstyle guitarist. An administrator at the Old Town School of Folk Music, Miles has made music education an important part of his career, producing numerous books and instructional tapes for banjo and guitar. For much of the last decade he has been engaged in an in-depth adaptation of Bach's cello works for the clawhammer banjo, as well as producing a solo theater piece, The Magic Banjo.

what to buy: American Bach ♪♪♪♪ (Right Turn on Red CD, 1997, prod. Michael J. Miles) is a remarkable recording featuring only Miles on banjo and Al Ehrich on standup bass. The work consists of three suites: Bach's first and third cello suites and Miles's own "Suite for the Americas." Miles's painstaking, inventive arrangements capture the nuances of the Bach pieces admirably, and his own ambitious composition is a finely crafted evocation of Americana.

what to buy next: Counterpoint ♪♪♪½ (Right Turn on Red CD, 1990, prod. Michael J. Miles, Robert S. Lyons) contains 11 pieces that feature Miles double-tracked on melody and harmony banjo, placing the instrument into unusual juxtapositions with instruments like the baroque flute, marimba, and Irish accordion. This disc features a superb supporting cast, including Ehrich, guitarists Muriel Anderson and Jim DeWan, accordionist Jimmy Keane, and marimba player Jef Thomas.

influences:

◀◀ Pete Seeger, Walt Koker, J.S. Bach

▶▶ Tony Trischka, Bad Livers

Michael Parrish

Mill Run Dulcimer Band

Formed in 1975, in Annandale, VA.

Kit Putnam (born December 29, 1941, in Richmond, VA), dulcimer, fiddle, psaltery, triangle, vocals; Kathleen Gotzmer (born April 6, 1957, in Sharon, PA), guitar, dulcimer, psaltery, bass, vocals (1992–present); Keith Young (born July 8, 1929, in Lafayette, IN), bass, dulcimer, guitar, vocals; Woody Padgett (born November 17, 1933, in Jacksonville, FL), autoharp, dulcimer, vocals; Neal Walters (born October 3, 1941, in Windom, MN), guitar, banjo, dulcimer, mandolin, bass, vocals (1978–present); Bill Wallace, guitar, dulcimer, vocals, (1975–77); Pat Appino, dulcimer, vocals (1975–79); Robin Gaiser, guitar, dulcimer, hammered dulcimer, vocals (1977–87); Terry Houff, guitar, dulcimer, mandolin, bass, vocals (1981–87).

Luthier Keith Young organized the Mill Run Dulcimer Band in 1975 to showcase the Appalachian dulcimers he was beginning to build in his basement. The band took its name from Colvin Run Mill, a restored eighteenth-century grist mill in Great Falls, Virginia, where they have appeared regularly for more than 20 years. As one might expect, the group has always featured the Appalachian dulcimer. All of the band members play the instrument, though never at the same time. Seldom straying far from the Washington, D.C., area, the band built a loyal following with a combination of traditional Appalachian material, sentimental and nostalgic songs from the Carter Family and others, and more contemporary songs that adapt well to their relaxed and folksy style. Their catalog now includes six albums, with a seventh on the way, and their appeal has broadened as the dulcimer has grown in popularity across the country. Young continues to make superb dulcimers and autoharps from his shop in Annandale, Virginia and his handmade instruments are in great demand. He is regarded as one of the four or five top dulcimer makers in the country. For the past several years, he has taught a dulcimer construction workshop at the Augusta Heritage workshops in Elkins, West Virginia, and runs a popular program of group classes in the D.C. area. In addition to his Mill Run work, Neal Walters performs as both a solo act and as part of the band Doofus, along with his wife Coleen, and John and Heidi Cerrigione from Ellington, Connecticut. Their first CD, What Did We Leave Behind?, is expected early next year. He also regularly teaches dulcimer workshops at Augusta, Appalachian State University in Boone, North Carolina, Kentucky Music Week, and elsewhere. With Heidi Cerrigione, he recently published his first book, Thirty Old Time Songs and Tunes for Dulcimer and Autoharp, and is a co-editor of the volume you are holding in your hand. Mill Run recordings are available from the band at 3815 Kendale Road, Annandale, Virginia 22003.

what to buy: Long Time Traveling ♪♪♪♪ (MRDB, 1992, prod. Mill Run Dulcimer Band) is the group's most recent release, and a good opportunity to sample their multi-layered vocal harmonies and charming instrumental arrangements. The traditional numbers "Going to the West," "Down by the Sally Gardens," and "Going across the Sea" anchor this collection—setting the stage for traditional-style presentations of the contemporary songs "Sunny Road" (Bill Staines), "Dear Companion" (Jean Ritchie), and "Give Yourself to Love" (Kate Wolf). Likewise the Appalachian hymns "Balm in Gilead" and "If I Could Hear My Mother Pray" present touching statements of faith, while the Carter Family classic "The Only Girl" resonates of true love. Most notable is Jay Ungar's haunting fiddle theme "Ashokan Farewell," from the PBS special The Civil War, with melody alternating between dulcimer, autoharp, and fiddle. This CD is rich in folk nostalgia—you can almost hear a warm and familiar voice opening with "It was a quiet day in Lake Wobegon. . . ."

mill run dulcimer band

what to buy next: You've Been a Friend to Me ♪♪♪♪ (MRDB, 1988, prod. Mill Run Dulcimer Band) presents another nice blending of traditional and contemporary folk. Carter Family covers include the humorous "Old Stern Bachelor" and the sentimental title song. The band's motto of "a chicken song on every turntable" is twice fulfilled with the lively old-time pieces "Crow Black Chicken" and "There's a Lock on the Chicken Coop Door." And the topic of love is celebrated with Bob Franke's contemporary "Thanksgiving Eve," and the widely sung, but rarely recorded hymn "In the Garden." Most notable is Scott Joplin's "The Entertainer," an innovative arrangement utilizing 14 of the 15 chords in the standard autoharp. And for a warm and peaceful closer, the band sings an unaccompanied arrangement of "Across the Bridge Where Angels Dwell."

the rest:
Sunday at the Mill ♪♪♪½ (MRDB, 1979)
Chicken in the Yard ♪♪♪ (MRDB, 1981)
Homespun Christmas ♪♪♪½ (MRDB, 1984)
Sweet Songs from Yesterday ♪♪♪½ (MRDB, 1984) Give Me Just a Little More Time N/A (MRDB, 1998)

solo outings:
Neal Walters:
(With Heidi Cerrigione) Thirty Old Time Songs and Tunes (Doofus Music, 1996, prod. Neal Walters, Heidi Cerrigione) (cassette only) (With Doofus) What Did We Leave Behind? N/A (Doofus Music, 1998)

influences:
◀◀ Simmons Family, Bill Staines, Carter Family ▶▶ Doofus, Sweetwater

Art Wojtowicz

Bill Miller

Born 1940, in WI.

Don't trouble yourself trying to label the music of Native American singer/songwriter Bill Miller; he's happy to do it himself. It's not alternative, he's fond of saying: it's alter-Native. And so it is. Miller can shift gears rapidly between Neil Young–style folkie reveries and tradition-based Native American chants. His 1996 release was a rock album, much of which draws on the kind of energy Miller saw when he shared a concert bill with the rock band Pearl Jam. Having grown up on a northern Wisconsin reservation, Miller was exposed to the vagaries of racism and all its attendant violence. While his music occasionally gives in to bitterness and a thirst for revenge, it is mostly about hope, dignity, and compassion. Miller's is an important and genuinely wise voice.

what to buy: On Raven in the Snow ♪♪♪♪ (Reprise, 1995, prod. Richard Bennett) Miller switches from his gentle folkie stance to full-bore rock arrangements—a good idea since, for the first time, the music reflects the fury behind such songs as "The Final Word" and the title track. Others—such as the defiant "Brave Heart" and "Listen to Me," which pleads for understanding between generations—are more reflective and have an ethereal quality. Altogether, Raven is Miller's most fully realized work.

what to buy next: To get a glimpse of Miller's other abilities, check out The Red Road ♪♪♪♪ (Warner Western, 1993, prod. Richard Bennett), which combines acoustic-based folk music with Native American flutes and chants. It includes the haunting instrumental "Dreams of Wounded Knee," plus "Praises," which is based on a Menominee prayer to the Creator, and "Reservation Road," a gritty memoir of Miller's birthplace.

the rest:
(With Robert Mirabal & the Smokey Town Singers) Native Suite ♪♪♪½ (Warner Western, 1996)

worth searching for: Miller's earlier, self-released albums, which he sells at shows and by mail order, include a pair of folk outings: Old Dreams and New Hopes ♪♪½ (Rosebud, 1987) and The Art of Survival ♪♪♪ (Rosebud, 1990), as well as the Native American/New Age–leaning Loon, Mountain, and Moon: Native American Flute Songs ♪♪½ (Rosebud, 1991).

influences:
◀◀ Neil Young, Dan Fogelberg, XIT
▶▶ Robert Mirabal, Robbie Robertson

Daniel Durchholz

Mill Run Dulcimer Band: (from left) Kit Putnam, Neal Walters, Woody Padgett, Keith Young, Kathleen Gotzmer (© Oy Veerasarn)

Buddy Miller

Born September 6, 1952, in Fairborn, OH.

Buddy Miller's career, in large part, has been that of the roaming singer/songwriter. He's based himself, at various times, in San Francisco, New York, Austin, Los Angeles, and, currently, Nashville. He has worked as a guitarist for folk-rock singer Shawn Colvin and had a loose writing and performing partner-

550 ed miller

morris dance

To appreciate morris dance, one must shake off any preconceived notions about flower-bedecked folk waving hankies. Think of workhorses, snorting and tramping in the snow. Think of Stonehenge's stones moving, after midnight, pacing out their stories. And sex: morris is suffused with sex. Morris dance has been documented in the British Isles since at least the fifteenth century. It enjoyed a resurgence in popularity during the 1960s and 1970s, as part of a growing interest in folk music and culture. Besides Great Britain, there are morris teams in the United States, other parts of Europe, and all over the world. Morris dancers are skilled athletes and artists. The dance observes strict forms and often includes intricate hand motions with handkerchiefs or sticks. Some variants involve swords. Done well, the dance is stately and jubilant, as determined by the musical accompaniment. An excellent gateway to the morris world is provided by Morris On (Island, 1972). This musical project brought together five of the strongest talents in English folk and folk-rock: Ashley Hutchings, Richard Thompson, John Kirkpatrick, Barry Dransfield, and Dave Mattacks. Several of the tracks feature the sounds of bell-legged dancers strutting their stuff. The treatment is far from traditional, with Thompson's electric guitar and Mattacks's rock-influenced drumming. Morris On nevertheless embodies the spirit of the dance, and it's won many converts to morris teams over the last 25 years. You don't have to dance to appreciate it, but it will certainly get your toes tapping and your spirit leaping.

Pamela Murray Winters

erdale, Emmylou Harris, Lucinda Williams, and others. Within a year of its release, every song on the album had been covered, recorded for future release, or put on hold by a major-label artist. Poison Love ♪♪♪♪ (HighTone, 1997, prod. Buddy Miller) was a follow-up of equal quality, from heart-rending originals like "Don't Tell Me" to a stunning cover of the Otis Redding hit "That's How Strong My Love Is." Emmylou Harris plays guitar on both those cuts and more, and Steve Earle guests for a duet on the old Johnnie and Jack classic "Poison Love."

influences:

◀◀ Jim Lauderdale

▶▶ Robbie Fulks

Brian Mansfield

Ed Miller

Born July 9, 1945, in Scotland.

Ed Miller is one of the best singers to emerge from the Scottish folk revival, a guitar-wielding folkie who wins his audiences over with a sweet but powerful voice, a great ear for material, and equal doses of populist politics and wry humor. He learned his craft in the sessions, clubs, and festivals of the folk revival, both in Scotland and the United States. Miller is also a scholar with an academic degree in folklore and a deep curiosity about history and culture, and his multiple roles and approaches to music and song make his performances and recordings that much more rewarding. Miller was born immediately after World War II, and grew up in postwar Edinburgh. He was thus in his teens during the early 1960s, the perfect age to take active part in the Scottish folk revival. From sessions in Edinburgh pubs, he progressed to membership in the Edinburgh University Folksong Society. In 1968 he came to the States for "a year or so" to do graduate work in geography at the University of Texas at Austin. After three years, he earned his master's degree with a thesis on images of Glasgow and Edinburgh in literature and song, for which he drew on his knowledge of the folk song tradition. By then he was a school junkie; he returned to UT for a Ph.D., this time in folklore. His dissertation, once again, looked at singing traditions in lowland Scotland. Miller continues to live in Austin today; as he proudly points out, it has been his home for more than half of his life. During his time there, he has had many jobs: in addition to his folk-related work as a student, university teacher, and folk DJ for Austin's NPR affiliate, he has also been a house painter, a soccer coach, and a tour guide. The one constant thread that runs through all his experiences in Scotland and America has been his singing; he gigs ship with Jim Lauderdale. He has recorded with Lauderdale, Heather Myles, and Victoria Williams. Miller came into his own in 1995 when he finally released an album under his own name. His wife, Julie Miller, is also a recording artist.

what's available: Your Love and Other Lies ♪♪♪♪ (HighTone, 1995, prod. Buddy Miller) features appearances by Jim Laud-regularly in Austin and tours throughout North America. Still, despite his long history and fine reputation as a performer, Miller waited until he was quite seasoned before recording an album; his first came out in 1989. Since then, he's put out four more original albums and one compilation.

ed miller

what to buy: Scottish Voice ♪♪♪♪ (Wellfield, 1993, prod. Rich Brotherton), Miller's third recording, is a great one. Like all his albums, this one features his commanding vocal presence and his excellent taste in Scottish songs, both old and new. Among the traditional songs here are "Jock O'Braidieslee," the old ballad about the poacher caught and killed by the king's foresters, and "Tae the Beggin'" about why panhandling beats working. Songwriters covered include Archie Fisher, Brian McNeill, Dougie MacLean, and even former Silly Wizard accordionist Phil Cunningham, whose only known song, "Darling Ailie" (elsewhere, this one's been called "Eilidh"), just happens to be a beautiful one. Miller does a good job moving the locale of Tommy Sands's emigration song "When the Boys Come Rolling Home" to fit his own story, and the song sounds that much the more sincere when you know that, unlike Sands, he's really lived through the emigrant's farewell. The most unusual and delightful song here is called "Pittenweem Jo," and was written by John Watt, the "Bard of Fife." It's a sweet little love song with a catchy chorus and a smug self-confidence that's a lot of fun. Miller is joined on this CD by Rich Brotherton, one of Austin's best guitarists, and Alasdair Fraser, one of the best Scottish fiddlers anywhere, as well as other accompanists, to produce a very classy and tasteful album of the best in Scottish folk song.

what to buy next: The Edinburgh Rambler ♪♪♪♪ (Wellfield, 1998, prod. Rich Brotherton) is another collection of both traditional and revivalist songs, but this time the emphasis is firmly on songs written for the revival. Once again Miller adapts songs to fit his own life story; in this case by Ewan MacColl's "The Manchester Rambler" and Tommy Sands's "Home Away from Home" get the "Miller treatment"; happily, the changes don't hurt the songs at all. Miller also covers choice material by several Scottish songwriters. Apparently both first names and surnames are in short supply on the Scottish folk scene, for Miller covers material by Alan Reid, Jim Reid, Jim Davison, and Ian Davison! The best cover version here is Brian McNeill's "Muir and the Master Builder," based on the life of environmentalist John Muir. In addition to all the covers, Miller sings two lovely traditional songs, "The Shearin's No for You" and "The Rigs o' Rye," as well as Robert Burns's nationalistic "Scots Wha Hae." Strangely, though, this album's best track is neither Scottish nor adapted to Miller's Scottish heritage. It's an old cowboy song from Miller's adopted home state that explains why the Texas climate is so hellish. The album's arrangements team Miller with Brotherton on guitars and mandolins and John Taylor on fiddle. At Home with the Exiles ♪♪♪♪ (Greentrax, 1995, prod. Rich Brotherton, Sandy Paton) is Miller's compilation disc, available in the United States as an import. It brings together tracks from Miller's two albums that are unavailable on CD, Border Background and Home and Away, along with a few tracks from Scottish Voice. Miller's smooth voice and Brotherton's subtle and supportive guitar playing are the stars of all three of these albums, and all of the tracks here are intelligent interpretations of traditional and original Scottish songs. Songs of every description are here, about work, love, sports, drink, travel, and other important parts of the Scottish experience. Titles include "Pittenweem Jo," "The John MacLean March," "The Jute Mill Song," "Crooked Jack," and "A Man's a Man." If there is a negative thing to be said about At Home with the Exiles, it's that, even with three albums of good material to choose from, it's only about 50 minutes long. CDs allow half-again that much material, and there are certainly that many good songs on Miller's original albums that could have been included. Tracks like "Banks of Sicily," "Home and Away," and "Love and Freedom" from the album Home and Away would have made excellent additions to this fine recording. Live at the Cactus Cafe ♪♪♪½ (Wellfield, 1995) is composed mostly of Miller's more lighthearted songs, which he felt went over better in a live setting than a studio. About half the songs on it are traditional chestnuts, including "Wild Mountain Thyme," "High Jeannie High," and "The Overgate," all of which deal with variously successful sexual encounters. The other half is made up of songs written by Scots folk-revivalists, including three by Adam MacNaughton and one each by Andy M. Stewart, Robin Laing, and Matt McGinn. A parody of the hackneyed and sentimental ballad "Loch Lomond" provides a few laughs, but the most amusing track is a medley of children's songs in which teachers, principals (or "hiedies" in Glasgow slang), and schools get burned, gutted, and destroyed. Don't let your kids hear this one, or you might find out how many of these songs they sing when your back is turned!

worth searching for: In addition to the four CDs listed above, Miller has released two albums that are available only in other formats. Home and Away ♪♪♪♪ (Wellfield, 1991, prod. Rich Brotherton), the more recent and better of the two, features wonderful versions of such songs as "Yellow on the Broom," "A Man's a Man," and "Banks of Sicily." It's available only on cassette. Border Background ♪♪♪ (Folk-Legacy, 1989, prod. Rich Brotherton) contains traditional ballads like "Thomas of Winesbury" alongside lots of good material from the Edinburgh folk revival; you can find it on LP and cassette.

influences:

Adam MacNaughton, Archie Fisher, Hamish Henderson

Tony Cuffe, Andy M. Stewart

Steve Winick

Emmett Miller

Born 1903, in Macon, GA. Date of death is unknown.

A little-known figure said to have taught Hank Williams his first hit, "Lovesick Blues," to have given Bob Wills his entire western swing style, and to remain an idol of no less than Merle Haggard to this day, Emmett Miller first gained notoriety via Nick Tosches's 1977 book Country. Miller was a minstrel performer who cut some rare OKeh 78s during 1927–28 in New York with the Dorsey brothers and some other respected jazzmen. Bootleg editions of his recordings fueled his legend and fostered more disciples, notably Leon Redbone, who based a considerable part of his whole act on Miller's unnatural, guttural sound. Biographical details are thin, and he disappeared into the ether of history without so much as a fare-thee-well; nobody knows when or where he died. But his cult continues.

what's available: Emmett Miller: The Minstrel Man from Georgia ♪♪♪♪ (Columbia/Legacy, 1996) is a masterpiece in musical archeology, a collection of 20 selections from those long-ago sessions. While falling somewhat short of establishing Miller conclusively as this great missing link in country music (too often the songs are little more than trite exercises in racial slander that passed as humor at the time), these recordings do show Miller to be a stylist of great originality and a vocalist with singular vitality—an altogether fascinating and rewarding but unrevealed chapter in music history.

influences:

vaudeville and minstrel traditions

Hank Williams, Bob Wills, Merle Haggard, George Jones, Bob Dylan

Joel Selvin

Jo Miller & Laura Love

See: Ranch Romance

Roger Miller

Born January 2, 1936, in Fort Worth, TX. Died October 25, 1992, in Los Angeles, CA.

If he had left us with nothing more than "King of the Road," Roger Miller's place in the pantheon of American musical giants would be assured. But Miller's remarkable body of work contains literally dozens of songs its equal and beyond. Songs that remain as vibrant, funny, poignant, and thought-provoking today as they were more than three decades ago when they first set the country music world on its ear. To the undiscriminating listener, Miller is best remembered for his mid-'60s string of light-hearted classics ("Dang Me," "England Swings," "Engine Engine # 9"): songs which also sold in Beatle-like quantities to pop and folk audiences as few releases out of Music City did in those days. But behind the rubber-faced, often crazed performer who threw these tunes so effortlessly up the charts lurked a deep and often dark spirit who, just as easily and as eloquently, sang of the harsher sides of life as well as the happy. Miller's own life and career saw plenty from both sides. At the tender age of two, his father recently deceased and his mother seriously ill, Miller was sent to Oklahoma where he was raised by an uncle. As a youngster he came to know and idolize family friend Sheb Wooley, later of "Purple People Eater" fame, who bought Miller his first fiddle and taught him his first guitar chords. Despite a two-year detour through the Korean War, Miller's goals were set, and by the mid-'50s he was haunting the honky-tonks and music offices of Nashville. Between stints playing fiddle for Minnie Pearl and drums for Faron Young, Miller got the assistance of George Jones in connecting with Mercury/Starday Records, who released his first single in 1957. With Miller now writing in earnest, Ray Price, Ernest Tubb, Jim Reeves, and old pal Young began scoring hits with Miller material, but Miller's own recordings, now on Decca, sank without a trace. Even Chet Atkins, his producer for RCA during the early '60s, could only get two Roger Miller records briefly into the Top 10 after three years of trying. With nothing left to lose, and in sore need of $1,600 with which to finance a move to California, Miller agreed to cut 16 songs (at a hundred bucks a pop) for Smash Records' new Nashville A&R chief Jerry Kennedy in January 1964. In a matter of hours he not only earned his moving money, but recorded his first two certified hits, "Dang Me" and "Chug-a-Lug." By the time he'd relocated to an apartment above Lee Hazelwood's Hollywood garage, he was swamped with offers for public appearances and television shots, and stranger still, his songs began crossing over to folk and then pop audiences. The sparse, simple arrangements Kennedy applied to Miller's sessions, which helped bring to the fore both Miller's lyrics (as much Chuck Berry as Hank Williams in their wit and wordplay) and voice (a sly, throaty purr which would take jazz-like leaps into scat where the guitar solo would usually go) coalesced perfectly that November during the recording of what was soon to become his signature song, "King of the Road." The hits and accolades (a then-record six Grammys won the following year) came hard and fast, but by '67 things started going awry. First, his loyal label Smash was swallowed up by the giant Mercury corporation, affording Miller less of a free reign inside the studio and less of a promotional push outside of it. A long-rumored amphetamine dependency also began to take its toll, most noticeably on his writing ability: Though he could still spot and release a good song before anyone else ("Ruby, Don't Take Your Love to Town," "Little Green Apples," "Me and Bobbie McGee"), they just weren't his songs anymore. After a lackluster stint at Columbia Records, some film work, and a subsequent exile to the Vegas lounges, Miller wisely lay low during the early '80s. Surprisingly, when he next popped up it was as a Broadway composer, and his score for Big River duly won a Tony Award in 1985. Having now proved to himself and the world that he still had what it took, Miller spent his remaining years fishing, hanging with friends both old and new (his last hit, "It Only Hurts Me When I Cry," was a collaboration with Dwight Yoakam), and joking about the throat cancer that finally claimed him in 1992. As writer J.R. Taylor so perfectly eulogized, "Having conquered the sticks, the suburbs and the city, Roger Miller then put our country in his pocket and took it all with him."

what to buy: The three-CD King of the Road: The Genius of Roger Miller ♪♪♪♪♪ (Mercury, 1995, comp. prod. Daniel Cooper) says, and includes, it all. From the early stabs to the mega-hits, the should've-been hits ("My Uncle Used to Love Me but She Died," to name but one), Big River, and even a manic "Orange Blossom Special" with Danny Gatton, you just owe it to yourself to take the wild and wonderful ride through these 70 songs.

what to avoid: At last count, more than a dozen shoddy "best of" albums were available, all of which should be quickly passed over in favor of the Genius box set. However, if a more compact collection is what you crave, stick with the original Golden Hits ♪♪♪♪ (PolyGram, 1965, prod. Jerry Kennedy).

the rest:
Roger Miller Live! ♪♪♪½ (Silver Eagle Cross Country, 1997)

worth searching for: Roger and Out ♪♪♪♪½ (Smash, 1964, prod. Jerry Kennedy), The Return of Roger Miller ♪♪♪♪½ (Smash, 1965, prod. Jerry Kennedy), and Words and Music by Roger Miller ♪♪♪♪ (Smash, 1966, prod. Jerry Kennedy) contain the absolute cream of his work, wonderfully veering from the ridiculous ("You Can't Roller Skate in a Buffalo Herd") to the sublime ("Train of Life") and then some. These albums show a man at the absolute peak of his creative and commercial powers, and a musician at least the equal of any operating anywhere, then or now.

influences:
◀◀ Bob Wills, Hank Williams, Sheb Wooley
▶▶ Mel Tillis, Tom Waits, Chris Isaak

Gary Pig Gold

Mississippi Sheiks

Formed late 1920s.

Walter Vincson (born February 2, 1901, in Bolton, MS; died April 22, 1975, in Chicago, IL), guitar, vocals; Lonnie Chatmon (born early 1880s, in Bolton, MS; died 1942 or 1943, in Bolton, MS), fiddle, vocals.

Playing the simple tandem of acoustic guitar and fiddle, the Mississippi Sheiks were an anachronism almost from the moment they began recording in 1930. But guitarist and singer Walter Vincson (also given as Vinson and even Vincent) and violinist Lonnie Chatmon (of the prolific Chatmon family that also produced brothers Bo and Sam) had a prodigious repertoire, and their willingness to try almost any string-based music won them audiences and influenced bluesmen wherever they roamed. Their most popular song, "Sittin' on Top of the World," became a standard years later for Chicago kingpin Howlin' Wolf. And Wolf also copped a Sheiks' verse about "smokestack lightnin'" for his own song of the same name—borrowed as well by Wolf's rival, Muddy Waters. And through those Chicago blues titans, the Sheiks also have lived on in electric-juiced versions by Cream and respectful acoustic replays by Bob Dylan. The reasons for the pairing of Vincson and Chatmon were never clear. Chatmon apparently fought with his brothers in an early fraternal group over who sang lead. And Vincson later told interviewers he took up playing in the string band and abandoned farming because he was "tired of smellin' mule farts." The two men grew so close they took to calling each other "Bruno" and locked so tightly as musicians that they could anticipate each other's solos. A 1930 recording session in Shreveport produced the first version of "Sittin' on Top of the World," a song so popular that several other groups claiming to be the Sheiks soon began stealing gigs on the Delta. The real Sheiks paid regular visits to studios in San Antonio and Jackson, Mississippi, scoring nearly 70 tracks between 1930 and 1936. They ranged from Tommy Johnson–influenced blues like "Stop and the chad mitchell trio

Listen" and "Blood in My Eyes for You" to hokum social commentaries like "Sales Tax" and "The World Is Going Wrong." At times, Vincson and Chatmon augmented their sound by adding Bo and Sam Chatmon. But the two original Sheiks stayed together as the heart of the group until the late 1930s, when their recording career ebbed. The pair's break-up is as mysterious as their coming together, attributed at various times by Vincson and Chatmon to either racism, a stroke, or the urgent need to flee an angry husband. Vincson recorded on his own but was unable to duplicate the Sheiks' early success.

what to buy: There could be no more perfect cross-section of the Sheiks' bountiful talents than Stop and Listen ♪♪♪♪♪ (Yazoo, 1992, prod. Richard Nevins, Don Kent, Stefan Grossman), a well-chosen 20 selections. All of the above-mentioned Sheiks classics are included, as are the unissued "Livin' in a Strain" and the sardonic "He Calls That Religion." The sound is surprisingly clean for 1930s-era 78s.

what to buy next: The four discs of Complete Recorded Works Volumes I–IV ♪♪♪♪ (Document, 1991, prod. Johnny Parth) contain all of the Sheiks' recordings, and what surprises most is how rarely Chatmon and Vincson duplicated themselves. Like most bluesmen of that era they knew enough to harp on a good thing, and were quick to remake "Sittin' on Top of the World" and "Stop and Listen." But the Sheiks' dexterity and open minds kept the records sounding fresh even as many of their peers' music palled.

influences:

◀◀ Henderson Chatmon, Neil Winston, Bo Chatmon, Sam Chatmon, Tommy Johnson

▶▶ Howlin' Wolf, Muddy Waters, Cream, Bob Dylan

Steve Braun

The Chad Mitchell Trio

Formed 1958, in Spokane, WA. Disbanded 1969.

Original trio: Chad Mitchell, vocals; Mike Kobluk, vocals; Joe Frazier, vocals. Later members included: John Denver, vocals; Jim (Roger) McGuinn, guitar, banjo.

The Chad Mitchell Trio epitomized the collegiate folk singing groups of the late 1950s and early '60s. Formed by college sophomores at Gonzaga University in Spokane, Washington, the trio is best remembered as the breeding ground for future "superstars" John Denver, who, as Henry Deutschendorf, replaced Mitchell in 1965, and Jim (Roger) McGuinn (later of the Byrds), who spent several years as the trio's guitar and banjo accompanist. During the decade that they were together, the Chad Mitchell Trio was instrumental in introducing and promoting the songs of Phil Ochs, Tom Paxton, Bob Dylan, and Ian Tyson. Their performance of Denver's tune, "Leaving on a Jet Plane," inspired Peter, Paul & Mary's recording, which became a top hit in 1969.

what to buy: Recorded at the Greenwich Village Club on March 19, 1962, At the Bitter End ♪♪ (Kapp, 1962, prod. Milton Okun) documents the Chad Mitchell Trio's live performances. Accompanied by McGuinn (guitar, banjo), Fred Hellerman of the Weavers (guitar), and Bill Lee (bass), the trio harmonize on the whimsical topical tune, "The John Birch Society," Ed McCurdy's "Last Night I Had the Strangest Dream," Woody Guthrie's "The Great Historical Bum (The Bragging Song)," two songs by Bob Gibson and Hamilton Camp ("Blues around My Head" and "You Can Tell the World"), and a rare, early Tom Paxton composition, "Come Along Home (Tom's Song)."

what to buy next: In addition to songs by Phil Ochs ("Draft Dodger Rag") and Tom Paxton ("I Can't Help but Wonder"), Slightly Irreverent ♪♪ (Mercury, 1960, prod. Franklin Fried) includes a humorous medley of songs penned by E.Y. "Yip" Harburg.

the rest:

That's the Way It's Gonna Be ♪♪ (Mercury, 1960)
Mighty Day on Campus ♪♪½ (Kapp, 1961)
The Chad Mitchell Trio ♪♪ (Colpix, 1964)
Typical American Boys ♪♪ (Mercury, 1964)

worth searching for: Belafonte Returns to Carnegie Hall (RCA, 1961, prod. Bob Bollard) includes three songs—"Vaicazkem," "I Do Adore Her," and "The Ballad of Sigmund Freud"—recorded by the Chad Mitchell Trio on May 2, 1960.

influences:

◀◀ Woody Guthrie, the Kingston Trio, the Limeliters

▶▶ Peter, Paul & Mary, John Denver, Roger McGuinn, Tom Paxton, Phil Ochs see also: John Denver, the Byrds

Craig Harris

Joni Mitchell

Born Roberta Joan Anderson, November 1943, in Fort Macleod, Alberta, Canada.

Joni Mitchell is one of the most influential singer-songwriters to emerge from the late '60s folk-rock scene, a poet on par with Bob Dylan. As a child, she took piano lessons in Saskatoon, Canada, and as a teenager taught herself to play ukulele and later guitar so she could entertain at parties. She first gained notice as a songwriter when Judy Collins turned her song "Both Sides Now" into a Top 10 hit in 1968. That same year, Mitchell's debut album was released to critical acclaim, and the rapid succession of albums that followed peaked with the classic Court and Spark. During the mid-'70s, Mitchell shifted gears, dropped the angst angel image, and stretched out for experiments in electronic and ethnic music and collaborations with jazz players such as Tom Scott and the legendary Charles Mingus. Though she releases albums infrequently—she also pursues an active career as a painter—Mitchell remains a vital and ambitious artist; her latest effort, 1995's Turbulent Indigo, captured two Grammy awards.

what to buy: Court and Spark ♪♪♪♪♪ (Asylum, 1974, prod. Joni Mitchell) remains Mitchell's top achievement, a melding of pop and jazz stylings that netted multiple Grammy nominations and the hit singles "Help Me" and "Free Man in Paris." Turbulent Indigo ♪♪♪♪♪ (Warner Bros., 1994, prod. Joni Mitchell, Larry Klein) is an evocative collection of songs that sounds both modern and timeless. With its all-star guest list—including Stephen Stills and James Taylor—Blue ♪♪♪♪♪ (Reprise, 1971, prod. Joni Mitchell) is a frank and revealing work, as well as one of Mitchell's finest singing performances.

what to buy next: Ladies of the Canyon ♪♪♪♪ (Reprise, 1971, prod. Joni Mitchell) houses the Mitchell standards "Big Yellow Taxi," "Woodstock," and "The Circle Game." For the Roses ♪♪♪♪ (Asylum, 1972, prod. Joni Mitchell) was Mitchell's first gold album and includes her first Top 40 hit "You Turn Me on, I'm a Radio." The Hissing of Summer Lawns ♪♪♪♪ (Asylum, 1975, prod. Joni Mitchell) continues to explore jazzy and impressionistic song veins using the same all-star jazz aces who worked on Court and Spark.

what to avoid: The guest-laden (Billy Idol?) Chalk Mark in a Rain Storm ♪♪ (Geffen, 1988, prod. Joni Mitchell, Larry Klein) is a surprisingly slight effort, musically bland and lyrically weak.

the rest:
Joni Mitchell ♪♪♪ (Reprise, 1968)
Clouds ♪♪♪ (Reprise, 1969)
Miles of Aisles ♪♪♪ (Asylum, 1974)
Hejira (Asylum, 1975)
Don Juan's Reckless Daughter ♪♪♪ (Asylum, 1977)
Mingus ♪♪♪ (Asylum, 1979)
Shadows and Light ♪♪♪ (Asylum, 1980)
Wild Things Run Fast ♪♪♪ (Geffen, 1982)
Dog Eat Dog ♪♪♪ (Geffen, 1985) Night Ride Home ♪♪♪ (Geffen, 1991)
Hits ♪♪♪♪ (Reprise, 1996)
Misses ♪♪♪½ (Reprise, 1996)

worth searching for: Just Ice ♪♪♪♪ (KTS, 1994), a digital bootleg recording of a rare Mitchell performance in Toronto after Turbulent Indigo's release, is worth looking for.

influences:

- Crosby, Stills & Nash, James Taylor, Motown, Charles Mingus, John Coltrane, Dizzy Gillespie
- Tori Amos, Tracey Bonham, Shawn Colvin, Milla Jovovich, Jewel, Alanis Morissette, Sarah McLachlan, Prince, Seal

Hilary Weber

Waddie Mitchell

Born in NV.

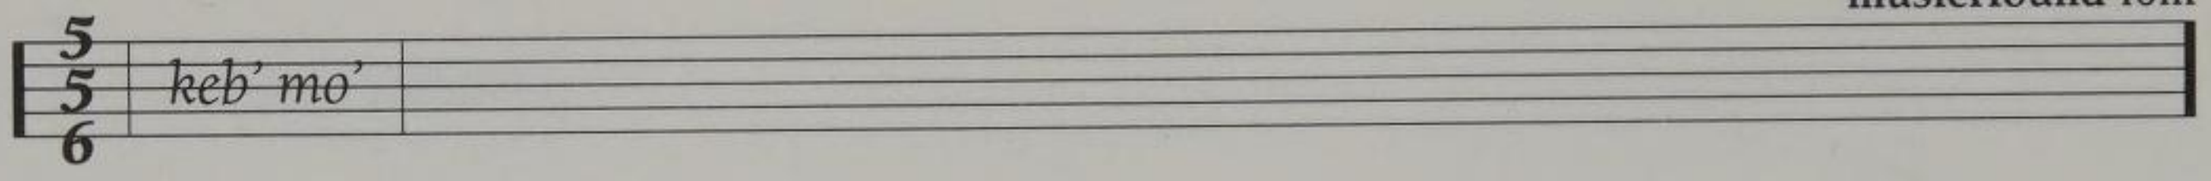
Cowboy poet Waddie Mitchell became a full-time cowboy starting at age 16 and later managed a 36,000-acre Nevada ranch. He was one of the organizers of the Elko Cowboy Poetry Gathering, which began in 1984. His many books and records eventually made him the recipient of the Nevada Governor's Arts Award for Literature. Mitchell was one of the original inductees into the Cowboy Poets and Singers Hall of Fame.

what's available: Lone Driftin' Rider ♪♪♪ (Warner Western, 1992, prod. Joey Miskulin, Michael Martin Murphey), Mitchell's first album for Warner Western, features some material recorded live in Sparks, Nevada, and other studio performances backed by a group of musicians led by accordionist/producer Joey Miskulin. Buckaroo Poet ♪♪♪ (Warner Western, 1993, prod. Joey Miskulin) features more of the same—Mitchell's cowboy poetry with musical backing. The Bard and the Balladeer: Live from Cowtown ♪♪♪ (Warner Western, 1995, prod. Joey Miskulin, Michael Martin Murphey) features two of the most popular contemporary cowboy performers (Mitchell is joined by Don Edwards) together in Fort Worth, Texas, at a 1994 concert.

influences:

- Red Steagall, Michael Martin Murphey
- Rich O'Brien

Brian Mansfield



Keb' Mo'

Born Kevin Moore, 1952, in Compton, CA.

Once a journeyman backup guitarist who played with Buddy Guy, Joe Cocker, and Santana, this soft-spoken singer-songwriter picked up an acoustic guitar in the early 1990s and set out to be one of the rare blues superstars. His debut album emphasized his worship of Robert Johnson and Taj Mahal, the follow-up leaned on Bonnie Raitt–style adult-contemporary pop, but his live performances showcase his upbeat charisma and electric-band passion. Just like You was one of 1996's best-selling blues albums, and in a time when so many bluesmen play the same classics and guitar solos in an endless loop, Keb' Mo' may just have the talent and personality for mainstream success.

what to buy: Keb' Mo' ♪♪♪ (OKeh/Epic, 1994, prod. John Porter) isn't revolutionary—John Hammond Jr., Rory Block, Buddy Guy, Junior Wells, and Taj Mahal are among the many revivalists who have tried to rejuvenate Robert Johnson–style acoustic blues—but it announces a nice, smooth voice and a potential for greatness.

what to buy next: Just like You ♪♪½ (OKeh/Epic, 1996, prod. John Porter) is a well-crafted pop album, with decent songwriting, a sense of humor, and cameos from Bonnie Raitt and Jackson Browne, but it's so nice, friendly, and calm you just can't believe Moore is a follower of the devil-plagued Robert Johnson.

worth searching for: The soundtrack CD Tin Cup ♪♪ (Epic, 1996) contains a new Keb' Mo' song, "Crapped out Again."

influences:

◀◀ Robert Johnson, Bonnie Raitt, Taj Mahal, John Hammond Jr., Rory Block, Buddy Guy, Shawn Colvin, Papa John Creach, Tracy Chapman

▶▶ Jonny Lang, Corey Harris

Steve Knopper

Modern Lovers

See: Jonathan Richman

Hugh Moffatt

See: Katy Moffatt

Katy Moffatt

Born 1950, in Ft. Worth, TX.

Katy Moffatt is one of those artists about whom those in the know constantly ask, "Why isn't her name a household word?" She is a powerful and passionate vocalist and she writes great songs, but she's never really caught on commercially, despite having recorded since 1970, when she made her first album for Columbia. Moffatt's recent efforts for Philo and Watermelon have featured her strong vocals and fine original songs, often written with Tom Russell.

what to buy: Walkin' on the Moon ♪♪♪♪ (Philo, 1989, prod. Katy Moffatt, Andrew Hardin) contains mostly Moffatt originals, with two heart-wrenching vocals—"Walkin' on the Moon" and "I'll Take the Blame"—that deserve classic status. Evangeline Motel ♪♪♪½ (Philo, 1993, prod. Katy Moffatt, Tom Russell) continues the Moffatt-Ruffell musical partnership to good effect.

what to buy next: On Kate Brislin & Katy Moffatt ♪♪♪♪ (Rounder, 1996, prod. Jody Stecher), Brislin blends her traditional country harmonic sensibilities with Moffatt's pure, passionate vocal intensity to create an album of wonderful duets; the repertoire embraces the Louvins, the Everlys, two Moffatt originals, and Jimmy Martin. Classic harmonizing. Dance Me Outside ♪♪♪½ (Philo, 1992, prod. Katy Moffatt, Hugh Moffatt) finds Katy and brother Hugh Moffatt, a Nashville songsmith, combining voices on a bunch of country and R&B classics and originals.

the rest:

Child Bride ♪♪♪ (Philo, 1990)
Hearts Gone Wild ♪♪♪ (Watermelon, 1994) Midnight Radio ♪♪♪ (Watermelon, 1996)

influences:

◀◀ Tracy Nelson, Bonnie Raitt

▶▶ Lucinda Williams, Gillian Welch, Hugh Moffatt

Randy Pitts

Matt Molloy

Born January 12, 1947, in Ballaghadreen, County Sligo, Ireland.

Both as a solo artist and as a member of the Bothy Band, Planxty, and, currently, the Chieftains, Matt Molloy has been at the center of Irish Traditional music for the past 25 years. His instantly recognizable sound, a combination of power and elegance wedded to incredible control of his instrument, has graced many of the most influential recordings in traditional Irish music. Molloy grew up in county Roscommon, an area

Keb' Mo' (© Jack Vartoogian)

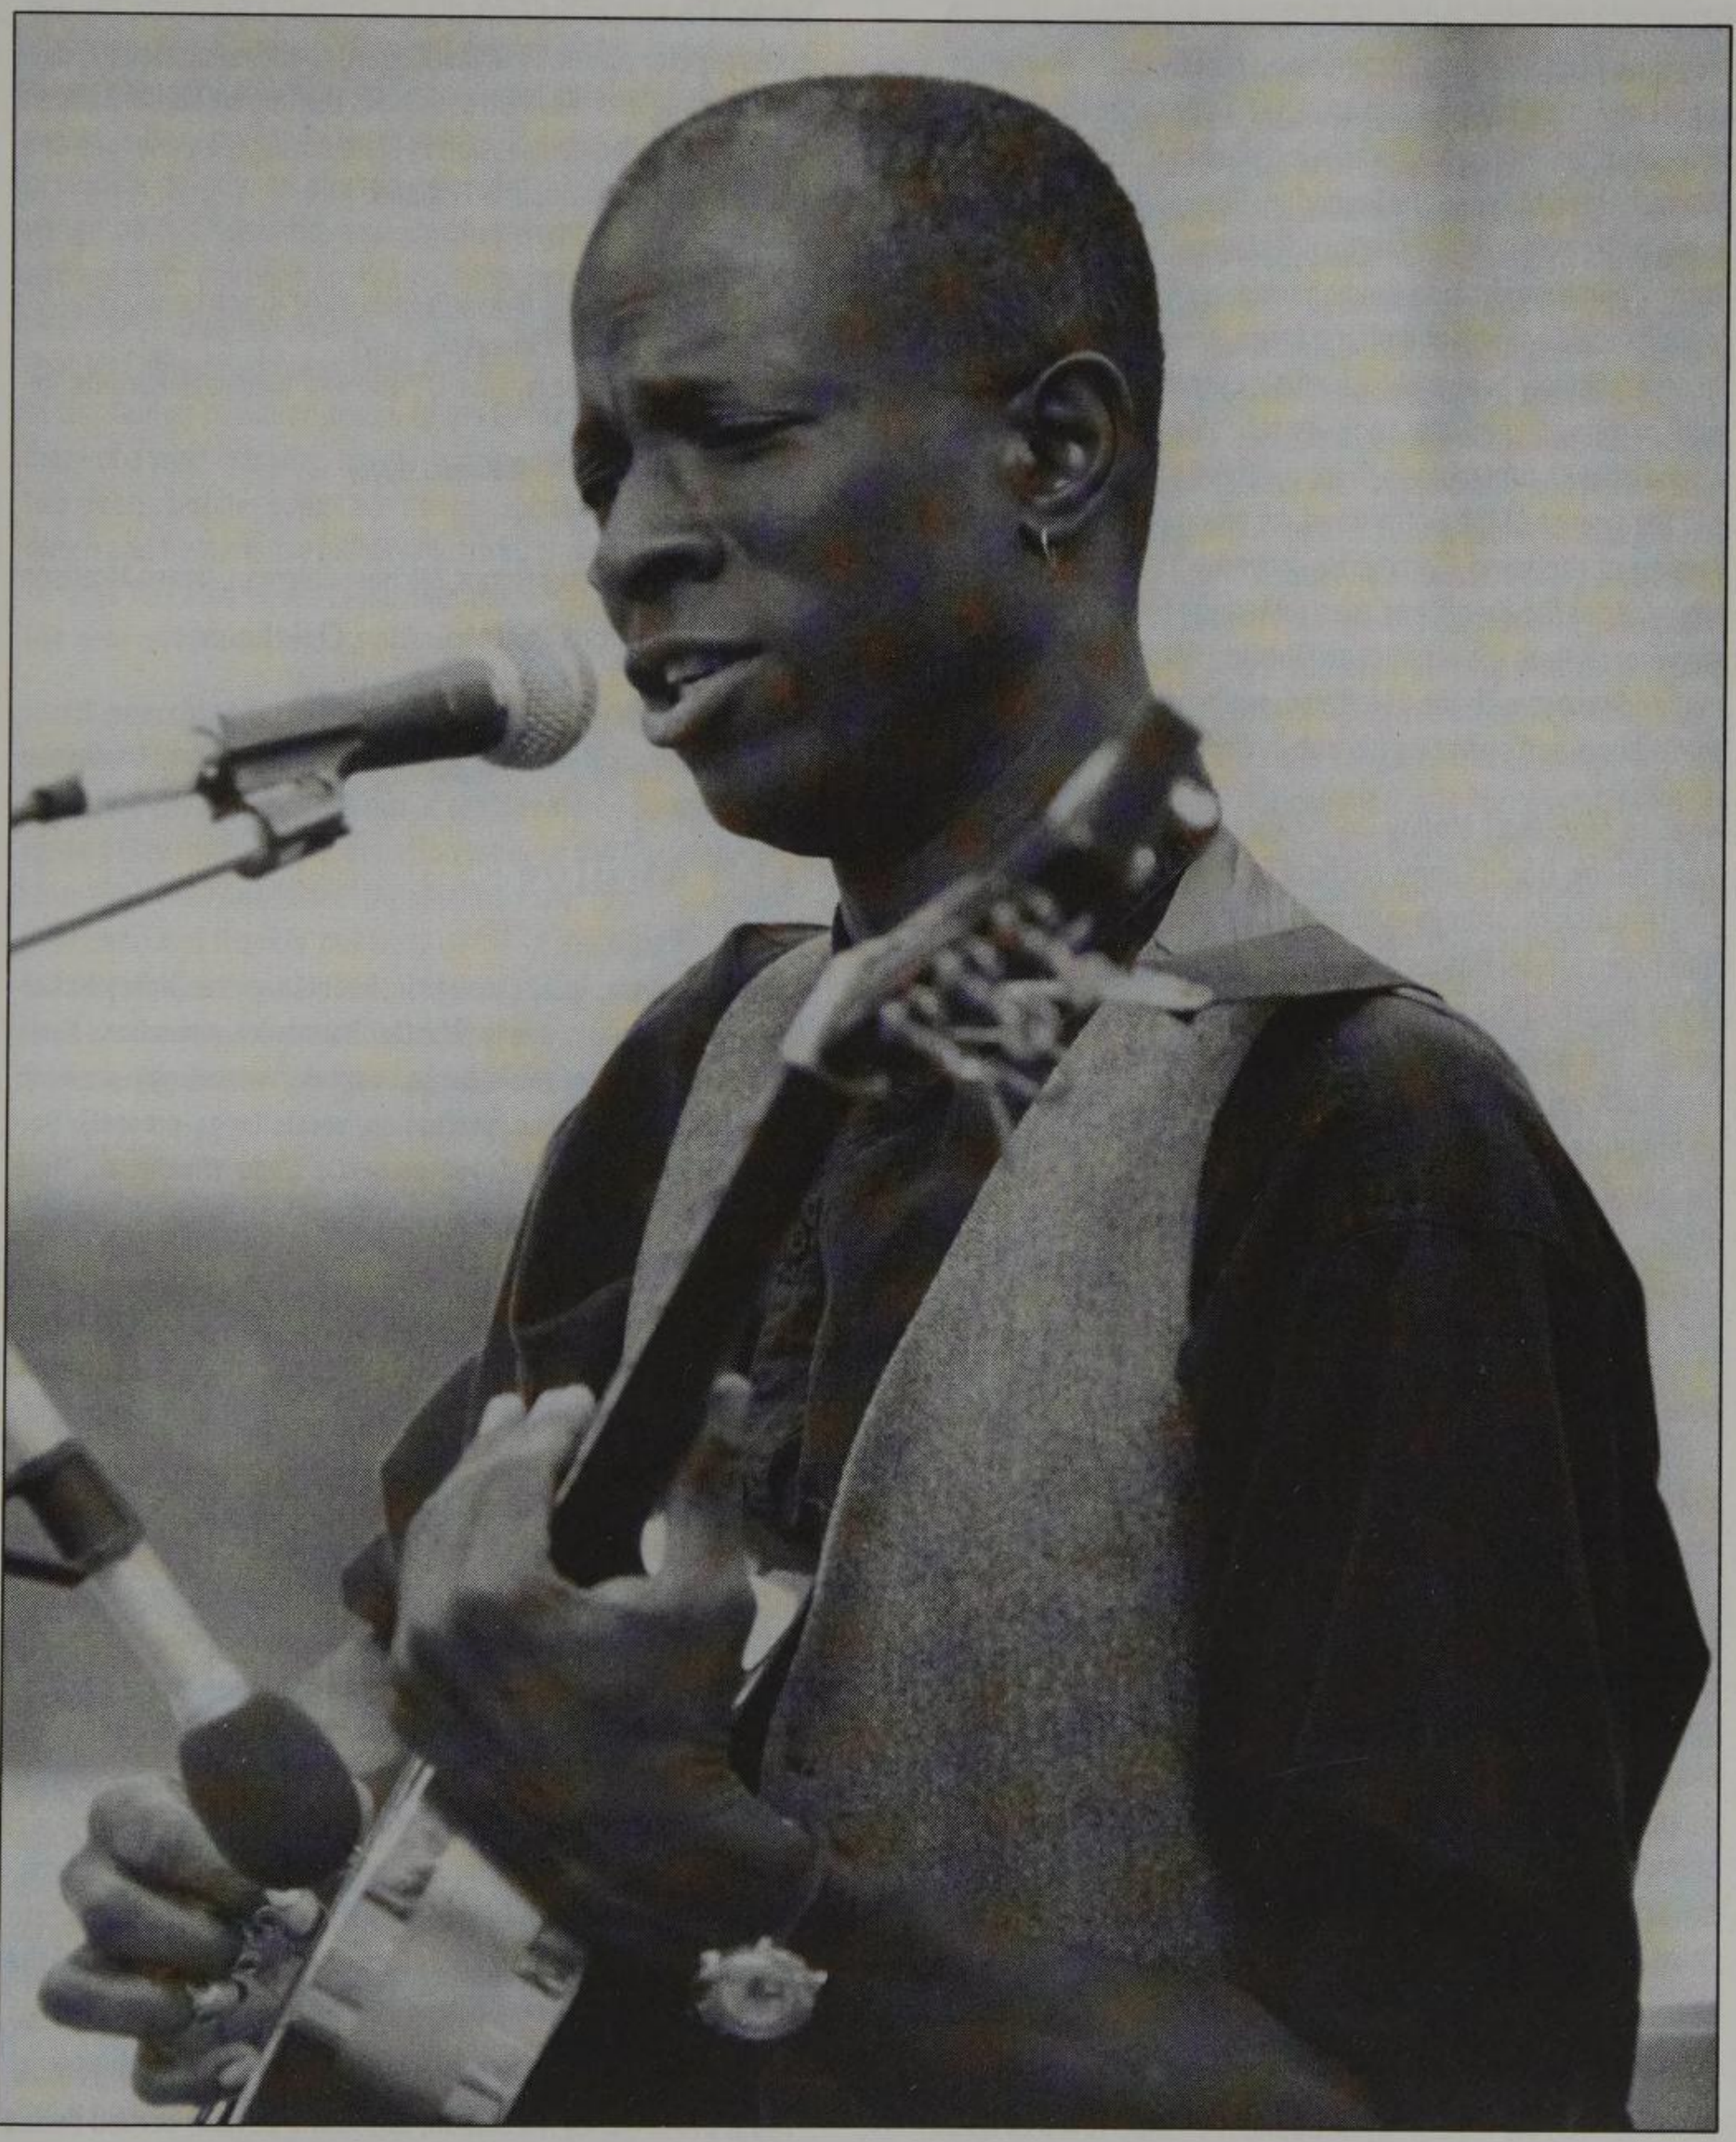
matt molloy



noted for producing outstanding flute players. He learned to play flute from his father, progressing rapidly until he won the senior all-Ireland title at age 17. After a stint with the Siamsa Ceili Band, and a few years as a jet mechanic for Aer Lingus, Molloy helped to found the legendary Bothy Band. Made up of some of Ireland's finest (and wildest) young musicians, the Bothy Band brought a no-holds-barred, rock 'n' roll sensibility to their music both on and off the stage, producing some of the most ferociously beautiful Irish music ever recorded. All of the wild partying eventually took its toll, however, and Molloy wound up with tuberculosis in 1977. After a stint in the hospital and the demise of the Bothy Band, he was invited to join a new version of the band Planxty. He stayed with Planxty for one album, After the Break, and then joined the Chieftains, replacing veteran flute player Michael Tubridy. Molloy continues to tour and record with the Chieftains, while occasionally cutting solo albums and operating his pub in Westport, County Mayo.

what to buy: Matt Molloy ♪♪♪♪♪ (Green Linnet, 1976, prod. Matt Molloy, Donal Lunny, Micheal O'Domhnaill) is one of the greatest Irish recordings ever made. Recorded before his bout with tuberculosis, this recording shows a young, driven master at the height of his power. From the first notes of the old favorite "The Boys of the Lough," Matt Molloy demonstrates just how much music can be pulled out of a flute. Highlights include an absolutely killer version of "The Bucks of Oranmore" and the haunting "Lament for Staker Wallace." Molloy's wild, uninhibited playing is backed by the awesome guitar and bouzouki playing of Donal Lunny, his bandmate in the Bothy Band, and one of the finest accompanists in Irish music.

what to buy next: Stony Steps ♪♪♪♪♪ (Green Linnet, 1987, prod. Donal Lunny), along with Matt Molloy, is required listening for anyone wanting to hear or play Irish flute music. While Matt Molloy is a solo tour-de-force, this album finds Matt sharing the stage with his impressive friends Kevin Burke, Sean Keane, and James Kelly, among others. He lets things stretch out a little more on this album and explores some more progressive accompaniment under the watchful eye of producer Lunny. Contentment Is Wealth ♪♪♪♪♪ (Green Linnet, 1985 prod. Brian Masterson) finds Molloy and fellow Chieftain Sean Keane showing off their tasty duet playing. This is a sparse, old-sounding album, with solid, tasteful accompaniment by guitarist Arty McGlynn.

what to avoid: Although Molloy's name is on the cover of Music at Matt Molloy's ♪♪½ (Realworld, 1992, prod. Martin Murray, Matt Molloy, Arty McGlynn), he appears on only seven of its 20 tracks. The rest of the time the performers range from the legendary (Peter Horan, Paul McGrattan) to the competent. A better recording of a live Irish session is the import album Maiden Voyage, recorded at a session in Clare during the early '90s and released by Celtic Music in England.

the rest:
Matt Molloy, Paul Brady, Tommy Peoples ♪♪♪♪ (Green Linnet, 1977)
Heathery Breeze ♪♪♪♪ (Shanachie, 1982)
Matt Molloy, Sean Keane, Liam O'Flynn ♪♪♪ (Claddagh Records, Ireland, 1992) Shadows on Stone ♪♪½ (Realworld, 1996)

influences:
◀◀ Fred Finn & Peter Horan, Michael Coleman, James Morrison ▶▶ Kevin Crawford, Paul McGrattan, Chris Norman

see also: Bothy Band, Chieftains, Planxty

Tony Ziselberger

The Mollys

Formed 1990, in Tucson, AZ.

Catherine Zavala, vocals, mandolin, bodhrán, guitar; Nancy McCallion, vocals, guitar, penny whistle, harmonica, melodion; Kevin Schramm, accordion, guitar, banjo, bouzouki, vocals (1993–present); Gary Mackender, drums, percussion, vocals (1994–present); Dan Sorenson, bass, guitar (1992–present); Linda Winkleman, flute (1990–91); Nathan Sady, accordion (1991–93); Michael Faulkner, drums (1991–94).

The Mollys are an unlikely fusion of Celtic and conjunto music from the unlikely town of Tucson, Arizona, where they release their albums on their own label, Apolkalips Now. Nonetheless, the band boasts a terrific Irish-American songwriter in Nancy McCallion, a great Mexican-American singer in Catherine Zavala, and a relentless punk 'n' soul rhythm section and wild accordionist in Kevin Schramm, who holds the divergent strains together. The result resembles Wynonna Judd singing the Lucinda Williams songbook backed by the Pogues and Los Lobos. McCallion and Zavala met in high school, led a Tucson new-wave band, Nadine & the MoPhonics, after graduation, and casually formed the Mollys as a folk trio for a St. Patrick's Day gig. The examples of the Pogues and Los Lobos, however, convinced them they could whip up their rootsy traditions into boisterous, bawdy rock 'n' roll, and they became one of the most impressive folk-rock bands of the mid-'90s.

what's available: This Is My Round ♪♪♪♪½ (Apolkalips Now, 1995, prod. Nancy McCallion, Catherine Zavala) served notice that the Mollys were a major new band. Irish folk stars Mick Moloney and Eugene O'Donnell are on hand, but the best songs share the raucous, non-conformist spirit of their protagonists, a Donegal lad in London who does not suffer anti-Irish prejudice quietly, an abused wife who takes imaginative revenge on her husband, and another woman who refuses to apologize for marrying an wealthy older man. Even better is Hat Trick ♪♪♪♪♪ (Apolkalips Now, 1997, prod. Mollys), which proved that McCallion had blossomed into a major-league songwriter of the caliber of Gillian Welch or Iris DeMent. She takes much more of a wise-cracking, bawdy approach to the world than her two peers, but her songs are no less substantial for it. Just as Welch and DeMent use hillbilly music for their personal stories, so does McCallion uses Celtic and Tejano music for her distinctive take on love and work.

worth searching for: The Mollys' first CD, Tidings of Comfort and Joy ♪♪♪ (Apolkalips Now, 1992, prod. Nancy McCallion, Catherine Zavala), which is out of print, features an earlier line-up and tilts the folk-rock equation more to the traditional folk side. Welt the Floor! ♪♪♪♪ (Apolkalips Now, 1995, prod. Kevin Schramm) and Wankin' out West ♪♪♪♪½ (Apolkalips Now, 1997, prod. Mollys) are live albums sold only at the band's gigs. They both capture the irrepressible spirit of the group in action, but the latter illustrates how fast and how far they've grown.

influences:

◀◀ Pogues, Los Lobos, Mick Moloney, Christy Moore, Steve Jordan

▶▶ Gillian Welch, Iris DeMent

Geoffrey Himes

Mick Moloney

Born November 15, 1944, in Limerick, Ireland.

A Limerick-born singer and guitar, mandolin, and banjo player, Mick Moloney got his start playing skiffle songs about age 14. It wasn't until his exposure to Irish music as a college student during the early '60s, however, that he became a serious musician. After starting on the guitar, he picked up a tenor banjo, and seemed to know automatically where his fingers should go. He quickly began attending music sessions in County Clare, an important locus where traditional players from all over Ireland congregated. He devoted a couple of years of his life to fanatical playing and practicing, and tried to incorporate what he learned from each model into his own playing. The end result was a unique style that, years later, would earn him multiple victories as best tenor banjoist in Frets magazine's prestigious reader's poll.

During the early 1960s, Moloney became a part of the Dublin folk music scene as a student at University College, Dublin. By 1964 records by the Clancy Brothers and Tommy Makem were forever changing Irish music, and groups of singers with guitars, called "ballad groups," were becoming the norm. Moloney, who by now also played the mandolin, fell in with another student named Donal Lunny, who would later be a member of both Planxty and the Bothy Band. Armed with mandolins and banjos for playing tunes, guitars for accompaniment, and Mick's store of tunes and songs, Moloney and Lunny, along with Brian Bolger, formed a band, the Emmet Folk Group. Taking a cue from the Dubliners, the Emmet Folk tried to incorporate both ballad group-style singing and traditional playing into their music. Lunny credits Moloney with bringing in a lot of the Emmet Folk's unique repertoire of tunes and songs. Although the Emmet Folk was neither long-lived nor commercially successful, Moloney was soon able to put his talents to work again. In 1966 he was asked to join a family group from County Meath called the Johnstons. Another future member of Planxty, Paul Brady, joined up with him, and the two applied some of Moloney's ideas from the Emmet Folk in their new situation. The Johnstons became one of the most popular groups in Irish music during the 1960s and early 1970s, and Moloney was able to tour the world. During a 1971 tour of the United States he met Kenneth S. Goldstein, then chairman of the department of folklore and folklife at the University of Pennsylvania. With Goldstein's encouragement, Moloney decided to come to the United States to get a doctorate in folklore. When he arrived in America, Moloney began to realize what a vast and relatively untapped storehouse of Irish musicians the United States was. He took on the role of organizer, putting together festivals and concerts where Irish musicians from different cities could meet and play together. He formed a lasting musical partnership with fiddler Eugene O'Donnell, trained younger players like Seamus Egan, and organized bands including the Green Fields of America, Moloney, O'Connell and Keane, and Cherish the Ladies.

Moloney finally earned his Ph.D. in 1992, 20 years after he moved to the States. He continues to play, both as a solo act and in various groups. He has also become a popular tour guide, organizing and hosting several tours of Ireland every summer that are specifically geared toward traditional music and folklore.

what to buy: Moloney and O'Donnell's Uncommon Bonds ♪♪♪♪ (Green Linnet, 1986, prod. Mick Moloney) may be the best introduction to this artist. Moloney's interest in Irish traditional songs is represented by the moving numbers "Bay of Biscay" and "Bonny Blue-Eyed Nancy." His fascination with the representation of Irishness on the Vaudeville stage compelled him to include such quirky and wonderful songs as "Muldoon the Solid Man" and "Miss Fogarty's Christmas Cake." His love of contemporary material in the Irish tradition is demonstrated by his inclusion of songs by Robbie O'Connell, Tommy Sands, and Seamus MacMathuna. Moloney's mandolin and banjo are perfectly complemented by O'Donnell's sensitive fiddle playing, and the two play their hearts out on several sets of rousing tunes. Also of interest to folk fans is the long list of guest artists on this CD, which includes Norman and Nancy Blake, the Clancy Brothers, and Saul Broudy, as well as some of the top names in Irish instrumental music.

what to buy next: Mick Moloney with Eugene O'Donnell ♪♪♪♪ (Green Linnet, 1978, prod. Mick Moloney) is still one of Moloney's greatest pieces of work. It includes some of Moloney's most appealing songs, including "The Limerick Rake," "The Irish Maid" and "The Bantry Girl's Lament," but it is more focused on tunes. Numerous sets of jigs and reels show off Moloney's instrumental prowess to the fullest. Moloney, O'Connell, and Keane's There Were Roses ♪♪♪♪ (Green Linnet, 1985, prod. Mick Moloney) teams Moloney up with guitarist and singer Robbie O'Connell (also of the Clancy Brothers and Robbie O'Connell) and piano accordion player Jimmy Keane. Fiddler Liz Carroll guests on many tracks as well. The title track, one of Tommy Sands's most moving ballads about the Northern Irish troubles, is a classic, and the rest of the album contains a lot of fine tunes and songs. The same lineup's follow-up album Killkelly ♪♪♪ (Green Linnet, 1988, prod. Mick Moloney) contains a few absolutely indispensable tracks, particularly the title song, which is the definitive version of the most popular recently penned emigration ballad. "Peter Pan and Me," a song about the Northern Irish troubles, is equally affecting. The album's drawback is that half of it is taken up with a single 20-minute medley of tunes and songs about the Irish in America that combines serious and silly material. It might have seemed like a good idea at the time, but it didn't produce a very listenable result. Also quite noteworthy is the CD Live in Concert ♪♪♪♪ (Green Linnet, 1989, prod. Mick Moloney) by Moloney's all-star Irish-American band the Green Fields of America, featuring Moloney, O'Connell and Keane, and also Seamus Egan, Eileen Ivers, and Donny and Eileen Golden. This contains an alternate version of the song "Kilkelly," as well as many more stirring tunes and lovely songs. Particularly moving is their tribute to Ed Reavy, one of the greatest composers of Irish traditional tunes.

the rest:

(With Eugene O'Donnell and Seamus Egan) Strings Attached ♪♪♪♪ (Green Linnet, 1980)

(With Eugene O'Donnell and Seamus Egan) Three Way Street ♪♪♪♪ (Green Linnet, 1992)

(With Eugene O'Donnell and Seamus Egan) Out of Ireland Original Soundtrack ♪♪♪ (Shanachie, 1995)

influences:

⏮ Clancy Brothers & Tommy Makem, Dubliners, Flanagan Brothers, Tulla Ceili Band, Willie Clancy, Johnstons

⏭ Planxty, Donal Lunny, Cherish the Ladies

Steve Winick

Bruce Molsky

Bruce Molsky grew up in New York City. A Doc Watson album given to him when he was 11 started him on a journey: his personal exploration of southern traditional music. On his musical travels he mastered fiddle, banjo, guitar, and voice. He did not perfect these instruments in isolation, however: among Molsky's mentors were seminal old-time fiddle players such as Tommy Jarrell, Albert Hash, and John Sayler. The results? Well, witnessing this man fiddle a tune live is to experience music to its fullest. To see him sitting down on his camp stool, hunched over his fiddle and sawing away like a man possessed, brings forth emotions difficult to describe. Luckily, the brilliance of Molsky's recordings is that they capture much of this passion.

what to buy: The best way to experience Molsky in his element is to listen to one of the solo fiddle tunes on Lost Boy ♪♪♪♪♪ (Rounder, 1996, prod. Bruce Molsky) such as "Buck Hoard," where the listener can almost feel the fiddler's very presence in the room. The notes flow out of his fiddle with such fluidity that at times you begin to wonder if Molsky sold his soul to achieve such talents. He doesn't just dazzle you with the fiddle, however; he also gives one of the best vocal performances of "The Blackest Crow," some stunning banjo work on "Fortune," and a few tunes of fingerstyle guitar ("Sail Away Ladies" and the African "Masanga Njia").

what to buy next: Bruce Molsky and Big Hoedown ♪♪♪♪½ (Rounder, 1997, prod. Bruce Molsky) teams Molsky with longtime partner Rafe Stefanini (banjo, fiddle, vocals) and Beverly Smith (guitar, vocals). This CD is a lively combination of fiddle-banjo duets, traditional songs, and old-time string-band dance tunes.

the rest:
(With Bob Carlin) Take Me as I Am ♪♪♪♪ (Marimac) (cassette only) (With Carla Gover) Hush My Restless Soul ♪♪♪♪ (June Appal)
The Hellbenders ♪♪♪♪ (Carryon)
Warring Cats ♪♪♪♪ (Yodel-Ay-Hee) (cassette only) (With A. Robic and the Exertions) Old Time Music Dance Party ♪♪♪♪ (Flying Fish, 1987) (cassette only)

influences:
John Salyer, Tommy Jarrell, Ed Haley
Rafe Stefanini, David Bass

Steve Gardner

Buddy Mondlock

Born in Chicago, IL.

Some musicians pump out the product so quickly it's hard to keep up. Buddy Mondlock takes his time, and it's worth it. He's released only two albums during the past decade, one of which isn't available in the United States. The 13 songs on 1987's On the Line are evocative and cinematic, from the Lyle Lovett-esque "Skeleton" to the sweet country waltz of "Gabriel." Rightly acclaimed for his songwriting, he's also a fine singer with a light, sincere tenor. His songs have been recorded by Janis Ian, Garth Brooks, and Nanci Griffith, among others. Peter, Paul, and Mary and David Wilcox have both recorded his best-known song, "The Kid" ("I'm the kid who ran away with the circus / Now I'm watering elephants"). These days he's working mostly behind the scenes in his home town of Nashville. A wry humor is key to Mondlock's style. When an interviewer asked how he boosts his creativity, he joked, "I wait for my girl to break up with me."

what's available: On the Line ♪♪♪♪½ (Sparking Gap, 1987, prod. Buddy Mondlock, Victor Sanders) is a superb collection of country- and swing-tinged original compositions in an appealing, largely acoustic setting.

influences:
Paul Simon, Al Stewart, James Taylor
Cheryl Wheeler, Teddy Thompson

Pamela Murray Winters

Monroe Brothers

See: Bill Monroe & His Blue Grass Boys

editor's choice
14 celtic albums

De Danann, The Star Spangled Molly (Shanachie)
The Bothy Band, Old Hag You Have Killed Me (Polydor)
Planxty, Planxty (Polydor)
Altan, Horse with a Heart (Green Linnet)
Dervish, At the End of the Day (Whirling Disc/Kells) Cusan Tan, Kiss of Fire (Firebird)
Sue Richards, Hazel Grove (Maggie's Music)
Clannad, Dulaman (Shanachie)
Bonnie Rideout, Kindred Spirits (Maggie's Music)
Tannahill Weavers, Mermaid's Song (Green Linnet)
House Band, Word of Mouth (Green Linnet)
La Lúgh, La Lúgh (Claddagh)
Silly Wizard, Live Wizardry (Green Linnet)
Sharon Shannon, Out the Gap (Grapevine)

Bill Monroe & His Blue Grass Boys

Formed 1939, in Nashville, TN.

Bill Monroe (born September 13, 1911, in Rosine, KY; died September 9, 1996, in Springfield, TN), vocals, mandolin; Charlie Monroe (born July 4, 1903, in KY; died September 27, 1975), guitar, vocals; Chubby Wise, fiddle; Earl Scruggs, banjo; Lester Flatt, guitar; Cedric Rainwater, bass; a legion of other bluegrass performers, including Stringbean, Del McCoury, Jimmy Martin, Sonny Osborne, Hubert Davis, Carter Stanley, Mac Wiseman, Peter Rowan, Kenny Baker, Byron Berline, Dale Potter, Tommy Jackson, Richard Greene, Bill Keith, Roland White, and Vassar Clements.

Truly the Father of Bluegrass Music, mandolinist Bill Monroe began his performing and recording career with brother and guitarist Charlie Monroe during the 1930s, recording 60 classic numbers for Bluebird that were cast in the then-standard country-brother duet style of the day. But even then, there was something different about Bill's approach to old-time country harmony duets. His mandolin playing was faster and fiercer, and his harmony vocals were pitched higher than the norm. The brothers split during the late 1930s; Charlie went on to lead his group, the Kentucky Partners, a popular and successful traditional country string band group, into the 1950s, coming out of retirement briefly during the 1970s. Bill, meanwhile, formed his first group of Blue Grass Boys and made country-music history; they soon became members of the Grand Ole Opry (October 1939) and had their first hit, an uptempo version of the Jimmie Rodgers standard "Mule Skinner Blues." The sound that would be known as "bluegrass" was taking shape, but the conventions that coalesced into a new kind of acoustic string-band music didn't come together until banjoist Earl Scruggs and guitarist Lester Flatt, along with fiddler Chubby Wise, joined Monroe in 1946. This band, along with either Howard Watts (alias Cedric Rainwater) or Bill's brother Birch Monroe on bass, is generally accepted as being the first true bluegrass band. With their arrival, this new form of music was complete. Bluegrass, as Monroe envisioned it and brought it to life, featured a repertoire drawn from Appalachian roots, with a touch of blues, Scottish and Irish fiddle influences (including many tunes learned in childhood and remembered from his uncle, Pendleton "Uncle Pen" Vandiver), and Protestant gospel vocal harmonies, with the occasional folk song or honky-tonk number thrown in for spice. Scruggs brought the syncopated, three-finger banjo style to the band, and various members added their individual talents. All the members except the bass player took instrumental breaks, Monroe sang tenor on the verses and lead on the choruses, the guitarists sang lead on the verses, and gospel three- and four-part harmonies were always a featured part of the show. This was the formula Monroe used for more than 50 years; he had his ups and downs, but he persevered. A star during the 1940s, he was largely overlooked during the 1950s, rediscovered during the 1960s, lionized during the 1970s and 1980s, and revered during the last years of his life. Countless great musicians apprenticed in his band as Blue Grass Boys; that designation became a badge of honor. Most of Monroe's musicians went on to illustrious careers in the music he invented; many of them left their individual marks on the music as well.

bill monroe and his blue grass boys

what to buy: The Music of Bill Monroe from 1936 to 1994 ♪♪♪♪♪ (MCA, 1994, comp. prod. John W. Rumble) is a monumental compilation that includes tracks from every period of Monroe's career (although it concentrates on the 44-year point with MCA/Decca). The collection includes two Monroe Brothers tracks with brother Charlie from Bluebird, a live "Muleskinner Blues" from a Grand Ole Opry broadcast in 1939, two tracks from the first Blue Grass Boys group on Bluebird from 1940–41, six tracks from his classic Columbia period, various live tracks and previously unissued or hard to find material from throughout Monroe's career, including appearances on albums by others; 98 selections in all. The compilation is an excellent effort to trace the arc of this American master musician's career and probably the best place to begin any attempt to understand the magnitude and significance of Monroe's musical accomplishments. It is with the recordings collected in The Essential Bill Monroe & His Blue Grass Boys 1945–1949 ♪♪♪♪♪ (Columbia/Legacy, 1992, comp. prod. Lawrence Cohn) that modern bluegrass music, with all its conventions, was defined. All the songs and tunes cut by Monroe's Blue Grass Boys for Columbia are here (although 16 tracks are alternate, originally unissued versions), including all 28 titles cut by the classic Flatt & Scruggs–Chubby Wise–Howard Watts version of the Blue Grass Boys. Definitive. 16 Gems ♪♪♪♪♪ (Columbia, 1996, prod. Lawrence Cohn) contains the issued cuts from the classic 1940s Blue Grass Boys that were replaced by alternates on the box set. Country Music Hall of Fame ♪♪♪♪ (MCA, 1991, prod. various) is a valiant attempt to distill Monroe's 1950–91 output for Decca and MCA into 16 songs and tunes. Although an impossible feat, this is the best one-disc overview of the man's 40-plus years of work for the label, and it's all great stuff. Live Recordings 1965–69: Off the Record, Volume I ♪♪♪♪½ (Smithsonian/Folkways, 1993, prod. Ralph Rinzler) captures 26 tracks of live performances at festivals, clubs, parties, and picking sessions featuring versions of the Blue Grass Boys never recorded, often doing versions of classic material much different from the more familiar recorded versions. It also includes an interview/music segment with Bill and his brothers Charlie and Birch from 1969. A companion piece is Live Duet Recordings 1963–1980—Off the Record, Volume II ♪♪♪♪½ (Smithsonian/Folkways, 1993, prod. Ralph Rinzler), where Bill is joined by folk legend Doc Watson.

what to buy next: Excellent early Decca material from 1950–55, In the Pines ♪♪♪♪ (County, 1993, reissue prod. Gary B. Reid) includes a killer version of the title cut featuring Jimmy Martin's lead vocal. All Monroe's Decca and MCA recordings up to 1979 are collected on three box sets from Germany's Bear Family label, including: Bill Monroe—Bluegrass 1950–1958 ♪♪♪♪♪ (Bear Family, 1989, prod. Paul Cohen, Owen Bradley); Bill Monroe—Bluegrass 1959–1969 ♪♪♪♪½ (Bear Family, 1991, prod. Owen Bradley, Harry Silverstein); and Bill Monroe—Bluegrass 1970–1979 ♪♪♪½ (Bear Family, 1994, prod. Harry Silverstein, Walter Haynes).

the rest:
Beanblossom ♪♪♪½ (MCA, 1973)
Columbia Historic Edition—Bill Monroe ♪♪♪♪ (Columbia, 1984)
Bluegrass '87 ♪♪½ (MCA, 1987)
16 All-Time Greatest Hits ♪♪♪♪ (Columbia, 1987) (cassette only) Southern Flavor ♪♪½ (MCA, 1988)
At His Best ♪♪ (Hollywood, 1989)
Live at the Opry: Celebrating 50 Years ♪♪♪ (MCA, 1989)
Cryin' Holy unto the Lord ♪♪♪ (MCA, 1991)
Bill Monroe at His Best ♪♪½ (Hollywood, 1992)
Live Recordings 1956–1959 ♪♪♪ (Smithsonian/Folkways, 1993)
Blue Moon of Kentucky ♪♪♪ (Sony Music Special Products, 1996)
I Saw the Light ♪♪♪ (MCA Special Products, 1996)
The Essential Bill Monroe ♪♪♪♪ (RCA, 1997)

worth searching for: Bill Monroe & His Blue Grass Boys: Muleskinner Blues ♪♪♪♪ (RCA, 1991, prod. Billy Altman) contains all the Blue Grass Boys material recorded for Bluebird in 1940–41; bluegrass in its infancy, or pre-bluegrass in its seminal stages. Either way, it's classic material, historically important as well. Are You from Dixie? Great Country Brother Teams of the 1930s ♪♪♪♪ (RCA, 1988, prod. Billy Altman) contains three Monroe Brothers songs along with material by the Delmore Brothers, the Allen Brothers, the Dixon Brothers, and the Blue Sky Boys. Feast Here Tonight ♪♪♪♪♪ (RCA/Bluebird, 1975, reissue prod. Frank Driggs) is a two-LP set of the classic 1930s Monroe Brothers recordings.

influences:
◀◀ Jimmie Rodgers, Carter Family
▶▶ Del McCoury, Peter Rowan, any bluegrass musician who ever lived

Randy Pitts

Charlie Monroe

See: Bill Monroe & His Blue Grass Boys

Patsy Montana

Born Ruby Blevins, October 30, 1912, in Hot Springs, AR. Died May 3, 1996.

Growing up the only girl in a family with 10 boys, it's no wonder that Patsy Montana's image became one of a lovable tomboy. After growing up in rural Arkansas, Montana performed in California with the Montana Girls (where she picked up the nickname Patsy and, later, the stage name Montana). Later, she backed Jimmie Davis on recordings and fronted the Prairie Ramblers on the WLS Barn Dance. The first woman in country music to sell a million copies of a record ("I Want to Be a Cowboy's Sweetheart" in 1935, the middle of the Depression), Montana continued to perform and record well into the 1990s, providing a standard against which nearly every female singer that followed could measure herself. She was posthumously inducted into the Country Music Hall of Fame in 1996.

what to buy: Montana is probably more poorly represented by her available catalog than any other recent inductee into the Country Music Hall of Fame. The Cowboy's Sweetheart ♪♪♪½ (Flying Fish, 1988, prod. Cathy Fink) was recorded when she was well into her 70s and features renditions of classic Western songs (including "Cowboy's Sweetheart" and Gene Autry's "That Silver-Haired Daddy of Mine") with new genre tunes like Laurie Lewis's "The Cowgirl Song." This record possesses plenty of charm, but though Montana receives sympathetic backing from Cathy Fink and Marcy Marxer's band Rhythm Ranch, there's little of the freewheeling vocal spunk of her pioneering records of the 1930s.

what to buy next: For the original recording of "Cowboy's Sweetheart," try the excellent various-artists compilation Columbia Country Classics, Volume I: The Golden Age ♪♪♪♪♪ (Columbia, 1990).

the rest:
Cowboy's Sweetheart ♪♪ (King, 1997)

influences:
◀◀ Sons of the Pioneers, Gene Autry
▶▶ Suzy Bogguss, Dixie Chicks

Brian Mansfield

Christy Moore

Born 1945, in Ireland.

Christy Moore is one of Ireland's most influential singer-songwriters. As a founding member of Irish trad-rock bands Planxty and Moving Hearts and as a soloist, Moore has successfully fused the musical traditions of Ireland with an understanding of modern political and social concerns. His original songs, which include "Ordinary Man," "Go, Move, Shift," and "City to Chicago," have provided a voice for the working class and have spoken out against violence, war, and economic struggle. The older brother of singer-songwriter Luka Bloom, Moore has been singing most of his life. As a child, he sang at home with his mother and with school and church choirs and learned to play piano. Initially attracted to rock and roll, he shifted his musical direction after hearing a recording by Liam Clancy of the Clancy Brothers. His knowledge of Ireland's traditional music was expanded after meeting Donal Lunny, the keyboardist of a band in Newbridge, the Liffeysiders. Lunny has continued to play an important role in Moore's career. In addition to playing together in Planxty and Moving Hearts, the two musicians have collaborated on Moore's solo albums, with Lunny producing several of his recordings. Moore was working as a bank official in 1964, when he met and befriended piper Willie Clancy, with whom he would play local pubs for the next year and a half. Moving to London in 1966, he performed several gigs with the Grehans. While recording his debut solo album, Prosperous, in 1972, Moore assembled the band that became Planxty. Although he was only with the group for two years, he helped to produce three highly influential albums. In the early 1980s he took the band's energetic trad-rock approach a step further and formed Moving Hearts with Lunny, Keith Donald, Davy Spillane, Declan Sinnott, Eoin O'Neill, and Brian Calnan. Combining traditional instruments, including bodhrán and uilleann pipes, and modern instruments, including saxophone and electric guitar, the group brought the musical traditions of Ireland up to contemporary standards. Since leaving Moving Hearts in 1983, Moore has focused on his solo career. His 1996 album, Graffiti Tongue, included a song, "North and South of the River," written with Bono and the Edge of U2.

what to buy: The Christy Moore Collection 1981–1991 ♪♪♪♪ (Warner Bros.-UK, prod. Donal Lunny, Christy Moore) surveys the most influential decade of Moore's solo work and includes such memorable tunes as "Ordinary Man," "Lakes of Pontchartrain," "Biko Drum," and "Lindoosvarna."

what to buy next: Recorded at the Point Theater in Dublin in July, 1994, Live at the Point ♪♪♪½ (1994, prod. Christy Moore) captures the excitement of Moore's concerts. Accompanying himself on guitar and bodhrán, he performs an intimate set that includes traditional folk songs, such as "Black Is the Color," and memorable original tunes including "Fairytale of New York," "Go, Move, Shift," and "Ride On."

the rest:
Prosperous ♪♪♪½ (Tara, 1971)
Whatever Tickles Your Fancy ♪♪½ (Polydor, 1975)
Christy Moore ♪♪½ (Polydor, 1978)
The Christy Moore Folk Collection: 1973–1978 ♪♪♪ (Tara, 1978)
The Iron behind the Gate ♪♪½ (Tara, 1978)
Live in Dublin ♪♪♪ (Tara, 1978)
The Time Has Come ♪♪♪ (Green Linnet, 1983)
Ride On ♪♪♪ (Green Linnet, 1984)
Ordinary Man ♪♪♪½ (Green Linnet, 1985)
Nice 'n' Easy ♪♪½ (PolyGram, 1986)
Unfinished Revolution ♪♪½ (Warner Bros., 1987)
Voyage ♪♪½ (Warner Bros., 1989)
Smoke & the Strong Whiskey ♪♪½ (Warner Bros., 1991)
King Pluck ♪♪½ (Columbia/Sony, 1993) Graffiti Tongue ♪♪♪ (Warner Bros., 1996)

influences:
◀◀ Ewan MacColl, Martin Carthy, Clancy Brothers, Seamus Ennis ▶▶ Oyster Band, Bothy Band, Rare Air, Luka Bloom see also: Moving Hearts, Planxty

Craig Harris

Hamish Moore

Born in Scotland.

Making a name for yourself in two professions (albeit related professions) is quite an accomplishment, but that is exactly what Hamish Moore has done. Known as a premier maker of various sorts of bagpipes, Moore has also made a big splash in the world of bagpipe music. His work with Scottish small-pipes and Highland bagpipes, as well as other types of bagpipes, has opened a whole new frontier to the piping community. Moore's work is innovative and creative, combining the elements of traditional music and modern jazz in a delightful whirlwind. The result leaves the listener filled with anticipation for what is to come next. Moore began playing the Highland bagpipe at age 10, but his passion was truly kindled when he discovered the "cauld wind" Scottish small-pipes in 1980. His love of the instrument prompted him to promote it in a variety of ways, from hand-crafting small-pipes to combining them with other instruments in new and exciting forms of music, thus grabbing a whole new audience for the instrument. His musical credits are numerous, including participation in Scottish festivals of folk and jazz, opening for Van Morrison at Edinburgh Castle, recording a film score with the Montreal Symphony Orchestra, and teaching at a variety of piping schools. He also established a piping school of his own, with branches in the United Kingdom, North America, and New Zealand.

what to buy: Stepping on the Bridge ♪♪♪♪ (Greentrax, 1994, prod. Jerry Holland) is a good place to start for those who enjoy traditional music played well. Moore plays Cape Breton and Scottish tunes in the Cape Breton style made popular by fiddlers such as Buddy and Natalie MacMaster. The choice of tunes is superb, and Hamish brings the music to life through his emotional playing. The liner notes to this album explain what to buy next: Farewell to Decorum ♪♪♪♪ (Greentrax, 1993, prod. Michael Marra) is an eclectic montage of creatively presented jazz, folk, and pop. Moore is joined by Dick Lee, a highly acclaimed jazz saxophonist. The two are accompanied by a variety of other musicians, making up a whole jazz band on some of the tracks. Hamish does a stirring small-pipe solo called "Farewell to Nigg," where he experiments with an unusual tuning of the drones and chanter, leaving the piece with a decidedly minor feel.

Moore's belief that Cape Breton's style of playing more accurately represents the style of Scottish music in the eighteenth century than the styles currently in favor in Scotland.

worth searching for: Also worthy of note, The Bee's Knees ♪♪♪ (Green Linnet, 1991, prod. Hamish Moore, Dick Lee) is another pairing of Hamish with Dick Lee, resulting in a jazzy selection of traditional and modern tunes.

influences:

◀◀ Alex Currie, Buddy MacMaster, Dick Lee

▶▶ Barbara Dennerlein, Don Patterson, Don Pullen

Jo Hughey Morrison

Kevin Moore

See: Keb' Mo'

The Lynn Morris Band

Formed 1988.

Lynn Morris (born San Antonio, TX), vocals, guitar, banjo; Marshall Wilborn, bass, vocals; Jesse Brock, mandolin; Ron Stewart, banjo; past members include Tom Adams, banjo; David McLaughlin, mandolin, guitar, vocals.

Lynn Morris, a national banjo champion, grew up in, as is often said facetiously, "the great bluegrass state of Texas." Her college years in Colorado led to her first exposure to the genre in which she would eventually become something of a pioneer. As a writer, producer, skilled picker, and vocalist, Morris has been rewarded by bluegrass associations for her playing, and she is regarded as one of bluegrass music's most versatile female performers. Her husband, bass player and songwriter Marshall Wilborn, served in two impressive bluegrass outfits—as a member of Jimmy Martin's band and also in the Johnson Mountain Boys. The couple first met as members of Whetstone Run, a Pennsylvania-based band. Wilborn, also from Texas, was in the Johnson Mountain Boys with Gettysburg, Pennsylvania's Tom Adams. Another survivor of the Jimmy Martin experience, Adams picked banjo with Martin for two years, joining Morris and Wilborn in 1988. Bridging the gap between hard-edged country vocals and sweet bluegrass harmony, Morris is obviously influenced by much of the work of legends like Hazel Dickens, ensuring she won't be confused with too many of the more pop-edged bluegrass acts proliferating these days. A handful of hard country cover songs can be found on the group's three albums, along with lots of traditional bluegrass music.

what to buy: Between Mama's Hand ♪♪♪♪ (Rounder, 1995, prod. Lynn Morris) and The Lynn Morris Band ♪♪♪½ (Rounder, 1990, prod. Lynn Morris Band), there's plenty of heavy-duty bluegrass picking to be found. The Hazel Dickens–penned title track of the former has become a multi-award-winning signature song for Morris. The debut record features a young Ronnie McCoury on mandolin.

what to buy next: The Bramble & the Rose ♪♪♪ (Rounder, 1992) is a strong collection, with tunes by Tom T. Hall, Johnny Cash, and Dolly Parton. You'll also hear Wilborn's original version of the Alison Krauss hit "Heartstrings."

influences:

◀◀ Hazel Dickens, Johnson Mountain Boys

▶▶ Laurie Lewis, Cox Family

Stephen L. Betts

Van Morrison

Born August 31, 1945, in Belfast, Ireland.

More than anyone's except maybe Jerry Lee Lewis or Little Richard, the mercurial music of Van Morrison explores that most elusive of dichotomies: the tension between the sacred and the profane, the spiritual and the worldly, sex and chastity. Alternating between being pious and being lascivious, Morrison's best albums explore that most tenuous and volatile of life's conflicts. He has lurched all over the emotional and musical landscape in his search. As a teenager in Them, Morrison screamed lustily, emulating hard-bitten American bluesmen and scoring hits with the proto-rock/blues of "Baby, Please Don't Go" and his own "Gloria," still a garage-band mainstay. After the pop-heavy (but controversial) "Brown Eyed Girl," which revealed a seemingly endless capacity for hit records, Morrison's first real solo record, Astral Weeks, veered away from the mainstream, introducing an inquisitive, introspective, and self-absorbed obsession with folk/jazz, all banging acoustic guitars, strings, impressionistic lyrics, and a grunting, growling scat that would differentiate his voice from all others.

van morrison

He embraced the poetry and mysticism of William Blake and William Butler Yeats with the same enthusiasm as the lyrics of Jackie Wilson or Leadbelly. His early solo records for Warner Bros., especially the warm country/soul of Moondance, His Band and Street Choir, Tupelo Honey, and St. Dominic's Preview reflect the rural hippie aesthetic of the period and his Woodstock, New York, surroundings. After a brief hiatus between 1974–77, his later Warner albums seemed to tilt further in favor of the mystic and spiritual, most notably on Beautiful Vision and Into the Music. Since moving to Polydor during the mid-'80s, Morrison's music has matured even more but has retained—some would probably say regained—its edge. For all his accomplishments and influence, Morrison remains something of a (large) cult artist, and his aversion to show business mechanisms has been well documented. Eschewing fashion in favor of his muse, wherever it takes him, Morrison displays a rare honesty, tenacity, and willingness for growth and exploration without consideration for commercial trends or fashion. It seems he's forever stalled at the crossroads where the path of righteousness meets the highway to hell. He can make it a bumpy ride at times, but it's worth getting in the back seat and hanging on.

what to buy: Choosing the best from someone as prolific and challenging as Morrison is difficult at best, but his first three solo records are absolute musts. Astral Weeks ♪♪♪♪♪ (Warner Bros., 1968, prod. Lewis Merenstein) is a song cycle that sounds like a concept album, even if it isn't, as it meanders through the alleys and back streets of London's pre-punk Notting Hill Gate with sleazy eccentrics like the unforgettable icon "Madame George." Moondance ♪♪♪♪♪ (Warner Bros., 1970, prod. Van Morrison) and His Band and the Street Choir ♪♪♪♪½ (Warner Bros., 1970, prod. Van Morrison) would have made an extraordinary double album, with numerous youthful examples of the Morrison acoustic soul magic including "Into the Mystic," "Caravan," "Crazy Love," "Domino," "Blue Money," and "Call Me up in Dreamland." Hymns to the Silence ♪♪♪♪ (Polydor, 1991, prod. Van Morrison), a lengthy double set, is one of his more recent triumphs. Disc one, with a couple of wry showbiz rants ("Professional Jealousy" and "Why Must I Always Explain") and a masterful version of "I Can't Stop Loving You," is especially listenable.

what to buy next: St. Dominic's Preview ♪♪♪♪ (Warner Bros., 1972, prod. Van Morrison, Ted Templeman) contains wonderful songs, such as "Jackie Wilson Said (I'm in Heaven When You Smile)," "Almost Independence Day," and the epochal "Listen to the Lion." Irish Heartbeat ♪♪♪♪½ (Mercury, 1988, prod. Van Morrison, Paddy Moloney), a collaboration with the Chieftains, is an inspired collection of traditional music. A Night in San Francisco ♪♪♪♪½ (Polydor, 1994, prod. Van Morrison) is a two-disc, extended live set that does justice to his current high-energy, big-band performances and includes amazing medleys that place his music in context. Too Long in Exile ♪♪♪♪ (Polydor, 1993, prod. Van Morrison) finds a loose Morrison in a bluesy mood, relaxing on alto saxophone, electric guitar, and harmonica and reprising "Gloria" for his middle age. Neophytes can't go wrong with The Best of Van Morrison ♪♪♪♪ (Polydor, 1990, prod. various) and The Best of Van Morrison Volume II ♪♪♪½ (Polydor, 1993, prod. various), with 35 distinct tracks between them that will have to do until the inevitable box set comes along.

what to avoid: Inarticulate Speech of the Heart ♪ (Warner Bros., 1983, prod. Van Morrison) is as confusing as the title implies. Synthesized New Age blather, it was, not surprisingly, his last record for Warner Bros.

the rest:
Blowin' Your Mind ♪♪♪ (Bang, 1967)
Best of Van Morrison ♪♪♪ (Bang, 1970)
Tupelo Honey ♪♪♪♪ (Warner Bros., 1971)
T.B. Sheets ♪♪♪ (Bang, 1972)
Hard Nose the Highway ♪♪ (Warner Bros., 1973)
It's Too Late to Stop Now ♪♪♪♪ (Warner Bros., 1974)
Veedon Fleece ♪♪ (Warner Bros., 1974)
A Period of Transition ♪♪♪ (Warner Bros., 1977)
Wavelength ♪♪♪½ (Warner Bros., 1978)
Into the Music ♪♪♪½ (Warner Bros., 1979)
Common One ♪♪♪ (Warner Bros., 1980)
Beautiful Vison ♪♪♪½ (Warner Bros., 1982)
A Sense of Wonder ♪♪♪ (Mercury, 1985)
Live at the Grand Opera House Belfast ♪♪♪♪ (Mercury, 1985)
No Guru, No Method, No Teacher ♪♪♪½ (Mercury, 1986)
Poetic Champions Compose ♪♪♪ (Mercury, 1989)
Avalon Sunset ♪♪♪♪ (Mercury, 1989)
Enlightenment ♪♪♪½ (Mercury, 1990)
Bang Masters ♪♪♪ (Epic, 1991)
Days like This ♪♪♪♪ (Polydor, 1995)
(With Georgie Fame) How Long Has This Been Going On ♪♪♪½ (Verve, 1996)
Brown Eyed Girl & Blue Eyed Soul ♪♪♪ (Sony Music Special Products, 1996)
Tell Me Something: Songs of Mose Allison ♪♪♪½ (Verve, 1996)
The Healing Game ♪♪♪♪½ (Polydor, 1997)

worth searching for: Morrison's infrequent live sets are generally considered the best way to experience the Belfast Cowboy, as witnessed by his three excellent, authorized live albums.

There are literally dozens more available in bootleg form, and since Morrison rarely does the same show twice, many of them are worth the effort. Can You Feel the Silence? ♪♪♪♪½ (Great Dane, 1983) records a 1982 show with a great Morrison rant about "Idiot Wind" that tries to explain why he's playing at a rock festival. Van Morrison Gets His Chance to Wail Volumes I and II ♪♪♪♪ (Gold Standard) puts you in the studio during 1969–71, with Morrison on acoustic guitar as he works out demo versions of "Ballerina," "Domino," "And It Stoned Me," "Wild Night," "Caravan," and many more.

solo outings:

Them:

Them ♪♪♪½ (Parrot/Decca, 1965)
Them Again ♪♪♪ (Parrot/Decca, 1966) Them Featuring Van Morrison ♪♪♪♪ (Parrot/London, 1972)

influences:

◀◀ Sonny Boy Williamson, Leadbelly, Muddy Waters, John Lee Hooker, Sam Cooke, Slim Harpo, Solomon Burke, James Brown, Ray Charles, Sonny Terry & Brownie McGhee, Jackie Wilson, Bo Diddley, Curtis Mayfield & the Impressions, Johnny & the Pirates, Alexis Korner, Mose Allison, Bob Dylan

▶▶ Counting Crows, Graham Parker & the Rumour, Dexy's Midnight Runners, Sinead O'Connor, U2, Band, Elvis Costello, Rod Stewart, Mark Knopfler, Bob Seger, John Mellencamp, Bruce Springsteen, Joan Armatrading, Rickie Lee Jones

Leland Rucker

Bill Morrissey

Born November 25, 1951, in Hartford, CT.

The most bizarre thing about this New England folkie is not his voice, which sounds like a frog eating sandpaper. It's that such a voice manages to be soulful, funny, and moving all at the same time. Though Morrissey rarely tries to rock—or honky-tonk for that matter—his songs about normal people doing slightly odd things evoke the natural spirit of both country and rock 'n' roll. "Grizzly Bear," one of his best early songs, is about a rich, stuck-up, beautiful woman who won't give the narrator the time of day until he gets her to dance something called the Grizzly Bear. And "Letter from Heaven" is a party song about Charlie Parker, Mama Cass, and devil-plagued bluesman Robert Johnson ("Yeah, I know, everybody's always surprised to see him here") having a ball on a cloud someplace. Though his idiom isn't country per se, he records a Hank Williams song now and then, and his songwriting style is as down-to-earth and friendly as that of Johnny Cash.

what to buy: The darkly funny Night Train ♪♪♪♪ (Philo/Rounder, 1993, prod. Ellen Karas), with "Letter from Heaven" and the romantic "Ellen's Tune" ("I love the way she knocks upon my door"), is Morrissey's most consistent (and, not coincidentally, shortest) album. His debut, Bill Morrissey ♪♪♪ (1984/Philo/Rounder, 1991, prod. Bill Morrissey, Ellen Karas), has "Grizzly Bear" and a bunch of other wry love songs and was actually re-recorded in 1991.

what to buy next: Recorded with pal folk singer Greg Brown, Friend of Mine ♪♪♪½ (Philo/Rounder, 1993, prod. Ellen Karas) is a reverential collection of great old songs, including Willie Dixon's "Little Red Rooster," Hank Williams's "I'll Never Get out of This World Alive," and Chuck Berry's "Memphis, Tennessee."

what to avoid: Most of Morrissey's records are solid, but the weakest material is on Inside ♪♪½ (Philo/Rounder, 1992, prod. John Jennings).

the rest:

Standing Eight ♪♪½ (Philo/Rounder, 1989)
You'll Never Get to Heaven ♪♪♪ (Philo/Rounder, 1996)

worth searching for: Morrissey fans should keep their eyes open for stray copies of "Live Free or Die"/"Trailer Park" (Shoot the Cat Records, 1977), the funny and rebellious first single—released, coincidentally, in the same year as Never Mind the Bollocks, Here's the Sex Pistols.

influences:

◀◀ Hank Williams, Pete Seeger, Woody Guthrie, Leadbelly

▶▶ Shawn Colvin, Suzanne Vega, Patty Larkin, Christine Lavin

Steve Knopper

Morse Playboys

See: Eddie LeJeune

Pete Morton

Born in Leicester, England.

Pete Morton is not afraid to call himself a folk singer. In Morton's case the genre is bent and melded with a background steeped in punk and defiant rock. Sprinkle a large dose of traditional influence over it all and you wind up with something difficult to categorize, but the Leicester, England, native's love of traditional music becomes a thread lacing around everything he performs. Morton grew up in an era where it was common for young men to gravitate towards punk and he too took up that cause, but his direction changed when he began discovering the music of folk singers of the '60s and '70s. "I found some folk records in the library, Buffy Sainte-Marie and Bob Dylan, and felt they were so powerful. Especially the voice of Buffy Sainte-Marie." Morton soon left his bandmates and went his own way, delving still deeper into the traditional music of the British Isles, primarily England and Scotland. What he found will come as no surprise to lovers of traditional music. He discovered that traditional material and traditionally based contemporary folk music was the perfect medium to address many of the social issues and problems of today. As he says, "Punk and folk music are pretty much the same thing. They're both strong; a shouting out." These varied influences resulted in the development of a powerfully unique writing and singing style. Morton's writing takes a global perspective on issues but he is still able to succinctly pare them down to manageable chunks. His audiences have no trouble dealing with the stories that Morton brings to the stage, whether they are stories from Kurdistan or his home in England. But rather than just another angry young man, he has progressed beyond that stage, now imbuing his songs with a mature new sense of hope. Morton's greatest asset is his songwriting ability. With a craggy voice that is aged beyond his years he delivers music has been described as "an important step forward for English folk music.

what to buy: Courage, Love, and Grace ♪♪♪♪♪ (Harbourtown, 1996/Rounder, 1997, prod. Gordon Jones), a recent solo album, is Morton's best and most consistent by far. Intelligent songwriting, good production, and even pacing make it a great collection of songs. Morton writes about human fallibility, the mysteries of love, politics, and religion. "On Your Side," a simple, affirming love song, is an example of Morton's best and the backup vocals by Sally Barker top it off. His epic "Change," a dream journey with George Fox, is a somewhat cryptic piece that talks about class differences and injustices.

what to buy next: Pithy songwriting, strident vocals, and some fun mark Mad World Blues ♪♪♪ (Harbourtown/Green Linnet, 1992, prod. Gordon Jones). Morton's "Songbird" became the center of the album, which is based on the idea of thinking globally instead of nationalistically. In it, Morton makes apologies "for messin' up the Earth." "We race through time on a mad, mad wheel, arrogantly saying we're wise/Avoiding the obvious in glory and death/ I hope we can apologize in the end."

the rest:

One Big Joke ♪♪♪ (Harbourtown/Green Linnet, 1988)
(With Roger Wilson and Simon Edwards) Urban Folk Volumes I and II: Self Destructive Fools ♪♪♪♪ (Harbourtown, 1997)

worth searching for: Frivolous Love ♪♪♪ (Harbourtown, Philo/Rounder, 1987, prod. Gordon Jones) contains 10 of Morton's original songs and the remarkable reworking of the traditional ballad "Tamlyn," which has become a firm favorite with his audiences.

influences:

◀◀ Buffy Sainte-Marie, Bob Dylan

▶▶ Billy Bragg, Brooks Williams, Richard Shindell, Stephen Fearing

Denise Sofranko

Lisa Moscatiello

Born April 5, 1966, in Arlington VA.

Singer and guitarist Lisa Moscatiello has long been a favorite of Washington, D.C., area folk-music fans and is set to be discovered by a nationwide audience on the strength of her debut album Innocent When You Dream. Growing up in the middle of Washington's fertile Irish music scene, Moscatiello learned well from master musicians Billy McComiskey and Andy O'Brien of the Irish Tradition, harper Sue Richards, and singer-guitarist Chris Noyes, among others. While still in high school she was playing professionally with D.C.-area multi-instrumentalist Wendy Morrison in a duo called Short Story and with the Irish band Sodabread. After four years at Yale, where she broadened her musical palette with influences from the Jazz and pop worlds, Moscatiello returned to D.C. and joined the English folk-rock band the New St. George. In the New St. George, Moscatiello became a professional musician, learning much from the group's arranger, keyboardist Jennifer Cutting. After six years touring all over the United States and recording one album, the New St. George called it quits and Moscatiello began a solo career. Her debut album, Innocent When You Dream was released on her own Happy Cactus label in 1995, garnering strong reviews and airplay. Moscatiello continues to tour as a solo performer, with keyboardist Bev Stanton, and with the New York–based Irish band Whirligig.

what's available: Innocent When You Dream ♪♪♪♪½ (Happy Cactus Records, 1995, prod. Marco Delmar) showcases Moscatiello's great voice and great taste in songs. Her debut album sees her wrapping her warm alto voice around songs from a variety of genres, making each of them her own. Opening with a faithful version of Fairport's "Now Be Thankful," she goes on to cover songs from the bluegrass, Irish, French, and folk fields. Producer Marco Delmar and Moscatiello's group of bandmates—including bass player Rico Petruccelli, guitarist Dave Chappell, and multi-instrumentalist Robin Bullock—keep the sound consistent across all the genres. Highlights include the title track, a Tom Waits composition imaginatively paired with a Yeats poem set to music by Moscatiello; her version of the French song "Dame Lombarde"; and a breathtaking version of the traditional Scots ballad "Bogie's Bonnie Belle." Moscatiello has great taste in musicians as well as songs and gets such talented friends as fiddler Bruce Molsky, all-Ireland accordionist Billy McComiskey, and Chesapeake singer Moondi Klein to help out. Like Maura O'Connell, whom she admires, Moscatiello is a singer's singer, more interested in finding and performing good songs than fitting into stylistic pigeon holes. Her debut album is a great collection of songs, sung wonderfully.

influences:

Sarah Vaughan, Dolores Keane, Irish Tradition

Maura O'Connell, Susan McKeown see also: New St. George

Tony Ziselberger

Mouth Music

Formed 1990, in Scotland.

Jackie Joyce, vocals; Martin Swan, guitar, whistles, flutes, drums; Michaela Rowan, voice; James MacKintosh, drums; Quee MacArthur, bass; Jeremy Black, percussion.

"All music is singing or drumming," states Mouth Music's Martin Swan, and that is probably the closest you can come to finding a description of this unusual group. Evolving to a whole new sound with each new recording, Mouth Music has defied fans and critics alike with their chameleon-like personality. One moment funky world-beat, the next new age with a touch of traditional music thrown in, quickly followed by techno-pop, this group changes persona at the drop of a song. Which, considering their start, should hardly be a surprise. Formed by Scottish film and TV director Martin Swan and American-born ethnomusicologist Talitha MacKenzie, how could this group help but pull on a variety of styles and traditions, forming a new fusion of sounds at each turn? Feeling that rhythm is the root of any music, Mouth Music derives this rhythm in the most creative of ways, from bongos and bottles to synthesizers, and even through the vocal lines themselves.

what's available: Winner of multiple "Best of the Year" awards, Mouth Music ♪♪♪ (Triple Earth, 1991, prod. Martin Swan, Chic Medley) takes Gaelic tunes to Africa and back, adding a bit of pop culture along the way. Driving rhythms and heavily synthesized vocals and keyboard lines accompany a collection of traditional tunes, bringing them a new sound. Dance beat meets waulking songs and a cappella mouth music, sometimes together at once, sometimes alternating in style. Particularly fascinating is "I See the Great Mountains," from the tune better known as "Mist Covered Mountains," which mixes the well-known vocal line with a hypnotic drum beat. Mo-Di ♪♪ (Triple Earth, 1993, prod. Martin Swan, Stuart Hamilton) is a collection of memorable dance tunes, distinguished by the amazing multi-lingual vocal talents of singer Jackie Joyce. Stand-out tracks include "Birnam," an ethereal new-age ballad, and "He Mandu," which combines exciting dance rhythms with fascinating harmonies. Shorelife ♪ (Triple Earth, 1995, prod. Martin Swan, Chic Medley) has more of a computerized feel, heavy on the synthesizers and drum kits.

influences:

David Byrne, Brian Eno, Enya

Pink Kross

Jo Hughey Morrison

Moving Cloud

See: Kevin Crawford

Moving Hearts

Formed 1981, in Dublin, Ireland. Disbanded in 1985.

Christy Moore, guitar, vocals; Keith Donald, saxophone; Davy Spillane, pipes; Declan Sinnott, guitar; Donal Lunny, keyboards; Eoin O'Neill, bass; Brian Calnan, drums.

The musical traditions of Ireland were expanded by the rock-influenced arrangements played by Moving Hearts. With the songs of brogue-heavy vocalist and songwriter Christy Moore set to the trad-Irish sounds of bodhrán and uilleann pipes, and the dynamic sounds of saxophone, keyboards, and a powerful rhythm section, the band roared with a contemporary-minded intensity that influenced such future trad-rock groups as the Oyster Band, the Pogues, and Rare Air. Moving Hearts initially came together to perform one night a week at the Baggot Inn in Dublin. Their early performances were so successful that the gig was extended to three nights a week, with word about the band's potent sound spreading across the Atlantic. Although Moore only remained with the band until 1983, they continued to perform together for another two years. Their final album, The Storm, was an all-instrumental outing.

cajun accordion

Creoles in Louisiana were playing accordions as early as 1850, barely twenty years after the invention of the instrument. It was probably Creoles that introduced accordions to the Cajuns, but it was the German settlers who brought the one-row diatonic accordion that is now the defacto Cajun accordion. Joe Falcon's recording of "Allons a Lafayette" in 1928 started an accordion craze, but it is the sophisticated playing of Creole Amédée Ardoin that has continued to deeply influence succeeding generations of accordionists. Iry Lejeune took Ardoin's songs and super-charged them with his own passionate accordion playing, updating them for modern Cajun music. Meanwhile, succeeding generations of Creole musicians began to utilize two- and eventually three-row button accordions to get more "blue" notes. Clifton Chenier introduced the piano accordion and created modern zydeco by melding Ray Charles bass lines onto Creole tunes and Louisiana blues, something only possible with the "strap-on Steinway." The one-row accordion has returned to prominence amongst Creole musicians, mainly through Boozoo Chavis. Both Cajuns and Creoles see the one-row accordion as a symbol of ethnic identity. Demand for the instrument is so strong that Cajuns have also become proficient builders of the instrument.

Jared Snyder

what to buy: Moving Hearts' self-titled debut album Moving Hearts ♪♪♪♪ (Warner Bros., 1981, prod. Donal Lunny) is their most politically minded recording. In addition to Moore's original songs, "Hiroshima Nagasaki Russian Roulette" and "Irish Ways and Irish Laws," the album includes a powerful rendition of Jackson Browne's anti-nuke classic, "Before the Deluge."

what to buy next: The first album released after Moore's departure, Live Hearts ♪♪♪½ (Green Linnet, 1983, prod. Steve Turner) maintains the high-energy levels of their live performances. Recorded at the Dominion Theatre in London, the album, which features the lead vocals of Mick Hanley, carries as potent a punch as the group's earlier work.

the rest:
The Dark End of the Street ♪♪♪ (WEA-UK, 1982)
The Storm ♪♪ (Tara, 1985)

influences:
Planxty, Bothy Band, Band

see also: Oyster Band, Rare Air, U2, Pogues

see also: Christy Moore, Donal Lunny

Craig Harris

Moxy Früvous

Formed 1990, in Toronto, Ontario, Canada.

Jian (formerly Jean) Ghomeshi, vocals, drums, percussion; Mike Ford, vocals, guitar; David Matheson, vocals, accordion, banjo, guitar; Murray Foster, vocals, bass.

Don't get hung up on the name: fans, members, and web sites will give many improbable stories about the origin of "Moxy Früvous." (According to the liner notes from Bargainville, it refers to the "sound produced when yogurt dollops are dropped in searing liquid.") What matters is that the band has incredible talents behind the incredible name. As vocal-pyrotechnic groups go, this one is unparalleled; the harmonies make the goofiness and lefty banner-waving easy to swallow. Moxy Früvous began as a group of buskers on Toronto's streets. Commissioned by the Canadian Broadcasting Company to write satirical songs for radio, the group rose to the challenge and became audience favorites.

Easily dismissed as musical Marx Brothers, Moxy Früvous's songs often touch on political issues: "River Valley" is a gorgeous ecological ballad; "Drinking Song," about Armageddon, sounds like something Pete Seeger would pen on a good day; "The Kids' Song" pokes gentle fun at the Canadian government's penchant for surveys and paperwork. Musically, the band favors '60s-style folk-anthem melodies with romantic Eastern European and Middle Eastern touches, which provide an appealing counterpoint to the often biting lyrics. Nobody does this sort of thing like the Canadians; imagine the comedy group Kids in the Hall with the voices of the Vienna Grown-up Boys Choir, with hearts on sleeves and tongues in cheeks.

what to buy: Begin at the beginning with Bargainville ♪♪♪♪½ (Warner, 1993, prod. Moxy Früvous, Doug McClement), the band's most balanced album and the one with the strongest songs, including "River Valley," "My Baby Loves a Bunch of Authors," and the Spiderman theme.

what to buy next: You Will Go to the Moon ♪♪♪♪½ (Bottom Line, 1997, prod. Moxy Früvous, Stephen Traub) starts out with a retro/hip-hop mix and spins out into the world music bazaar, where it's hard to place the band's intentions but the noises they make are awfully pretty anyway. Fortunately, it swings back into retro with "Your New Boyfriend" (who's apparently a "right-wing shit" in four-part harmony).

what to avoid: Unless you're a completist, pass on Wood ♪♪♪½ (Warner, 1995, prod. Moxy Früvous, Michael Koppelman). It's well made but strangely somber; I'm a major Früvous fan, and I found it hard to listen to more than once.

worth searching for: If you're a convert by way of the band's live shows, look for The B Album ♪♪♪♪ (Warner, 1996, prod. Moxy Früvous), a short collection of satirical songs like "Gord's Gold" and "The Greatest Man in America" (tributes to Gordon Lightfoot and Rush Limbaugh, respectively). It's marketed mostly at live shows.

influences:

◀◀ Bee Gees, Andrews Sisters, Roches, Kids in the Hall

▶▶ Nields, Sons of the Never Wrong, Da Vinci's Notebook

Pamela Murray Winters

Mr. Fox

Formed 1970, in Yorkshire, England; disbanded 1971.

Bob Pegg, vocals, organ, melodeon, tin whistle, terrapin, guitar, piano, bass, bass drum; Carole Pegg, vocals, fiddle; Alan Eden, drums, vocals; Barry Lyons, bass, dulcimer, recorder, tambourine, vocals; Andrew Massey, cello (1970); John Myatt, flute, clarinet, bass clarinet, bassoon (1970).

Mr. Fox bucked all the folk-rock trends of the early '70s. Instead of performing traditional ballads and fiddle tunes, they wrote their own stories of Yorkshire life and myth, and performed them in a style heavily influenced by Yorkshire Dales bands. They used electric instruments, but shunned rock rhythms, producing a quirky sound that remains fresh today and is perfectly suited to their morbid lyrics. Doomed to obscurity by their short life span and distance from the mainstream, they remain one of the most interesting footnotes in folk-rock history.

what's available: Mr. Fox/The Gipsy ♪♪♪♪ (Castle, 1996, prod. Bill Leader) collects both Mr. Fox albums on one CD. Mr. Fox (1970) has the full Dales sound, with cello and woodwinds underpinning the Peggs' macabre fairy tales; "The Gay Goshawk," with startling and highly effective distorted bass, is the standout track. One is obliged to note that the band is sloppy and often out of tune, but somehow this doesn't diminish the album's curious power. On The Gipsy (1971), the cello and woodwinds are gone, and the band is technically improved, but the material is somewhat less focused. The bizarre folk-rap of "Aunt Lucy Broadwood" and an Eldritch rendition of "House Carpenter" keep things quite lively, however.

worth searching for: "Mendle," an intense, highly fuzzed, and rather psychedelic song from The Gipsy, was left off the combined CD due to lack of space. You'll need to track down the original vinyl release if you want to hear it.

Tim Walters

Karen Mueller

Born June 30, 1962, in Winfield, KS.

Karen Mueller is an outstanding autoharp performer who began playing in 1978 and won the 1986 International Autoharp Championship in Winfield, Kansas. In addition to the autoharp, she plays guitar, mountain dulcimer, and mandolin, all of which she regularly teaches in Minneapolis, Minnesota. She's been described as "one of the country's premier autoharp players" and has a unique autoharp style that is full of energetic syncopated rhythms, improvisation, and dynamic variations. Mueller's repertoire includes many old time/bluegrass fiddle tunes and Irish jigs, many of which she has published in a tune book, The Autoharp Gourmet.

what's available: Clarity ♪♪♪♪½ (Streamline Productions, 1993, prod. Karen Mueller, Streamline Productions BMI) is an exciting instrumental recording featuring Mueller's unique and energetic autoharp style. The title is most appropriate to describe her clean melody picking and each selection makes an immediate statement. The cuts vary from an excellent rendition of "Norwegian Wood" with banjo added by Tony Trischka, to a wonderful medley of "Blarney Pilgrim" and "Humours of Enistymon" that includes Timothy Britton on uilleann pipes. Other musicians lending support on this recording include Tom Schaefer (fiddle), Pete Mathison (bass), Marc Anderson (percussion), Jacqueline Ultan (cello), and Michael O'Sullivan (grand piano). Mueller's mountain dulcimer is featured on four cuts and displays her fingerpicking on "Sister," and her incredible rhythmic energy on "Night Flight to Dublin," a take-off on a classical guitar piece that she's turned into a jig. Clarity is available from Streamline Productions BMI, P.O. Box 80565, Minneapolis, Minnesota 55408.

worth searching for: Autoharp Gourmet ♪♪♪ (Streamline Productions, 1992, prod. Karen Mueller) is available on cassette and demonstrates the arrangements in the tune book. This instrumental solo recording stands on its own and is an excellent sampling of her autoharp expertise.

influences:

◀◀ Tony Rice, Bothy Band, Bryan Bowers

▶▶ Les Gustafson-Zook, Tina Louise Barr

Heidi Cerrigione

Ann Mayo Muir

See: Bok, Trickett, Muir

Maria Muldaur

Born Maria D'Amato, September 12, 1943, in New York, NY.

When Maria Muldaur started her solo career, she rode her distinctive, sweet voice to the pop stratosphere with the single "Midnight at the Oasis." As usual with overnight successes, she had worked a long time to get there. Through the 1960s she was part of the Even Dozen Jug Band and then the Jim Kweskin Jug Band (with whom she recorded a great early version of her solo hit, "I'm a Woman"). After the Kweskin band broke up, she and bandmate/husband Geoff Muldaur recorded before they divorced in 1972. She released her self-titled solo debut in 1973 and enjoyed a quick rise and fall on the pop charts. In the 1980s she became a born-again Christian and recorded some gospel and contemporary Christian albums. Muldaur has enjoyed good success on the blues and roots-music circuit in the 1990s.

what to buy: There's no question that Muldaur's best album is her first. Maria Muldaur ♪♪♪♪♪ (Reprise, 1973/Warner Archives, 1993, prod. Lenny Waronker, Joe Boyd) came out at a time when the pop scene was ready to enjoy the eclecticism of American music. She hit swing with "Walking One and Only" and sexy radio pop with "Midnight at the Oasis"—a song that, for good or ill, set a standard for come-on pop songs of the 1970s. The follow-up, Waitress in a Donut Shop ♪♪♪♪½ (Reprise, 1974/Warner Archives, 1993, prod. Lenny Waronker, Joe Boyd), was just as broad and excellently performed but didn't hang together as well. It featured her rock 'n' rolling "I'm a Woman" (her second and last chart hit) as well as two cuts led by jazz great Benny Carter—"Sweetheart" and "It Ain't the Meat (It's the Motion)."

what to buy next: On Sweet and Slow ♪♪♪♪ (Tudor, 1983/Stony Plain, 1993, prod. David Nichtern) Muldaur sings with her old fire for Nichtern, who wrote "Midnight at the Oasis," with bands led by Dr. John and Kenny Barron. Jazzabelle ♪♪♪♪ (Stony Plain, 1995, prod. Maria Muldaur), recorded a decade later, is a jazz effort that finds Muldaur just as sharp with a huskier voice. Louisiana Love Call ♪♪♪½ (Black Top, 1992, prod. Hammond Scott) and Fanning the Flames ♪♪♪½ (Telarc, 1996, prod. John Snyder, Maria Muldaur, Elane Martone) don't capture the pop moment the way her earlier albums did, but in terms of performance, Muldaur certainly gives her all, vocally.

what to avoid: Generally speaking, you can't go wrong with a Muldaur album, but if you're rummaging through remainder bins of old vinyl, avert your eyes and close your wallet for Southern Winds ♪♪ (Reprise, 1978) and Open Your Eyes ♪ (Reprise, 1979, prod. Patrick Henderson), which sound totally tired.

the rest:

There Is a Love ♪♪♪ (Myrrh, 1982)
On the Sunny Side ♪♪♪ (Music for Little People, 1992)
Meet Me at Midnite ♪♪♪½ (Black Top, 1994) Jazzabelle (Stony Plain, 1995)

worth searching for: Geoff and Maria Muldaur's fine Pottery Pie ♪♪♪ (Reprise, 1967/Hannibal, 1993, prod. Joe Boyd) points the way toward Maria's first solo outing. Out of print, Muldaur's third solo outing—Sweet Harmony ♪♪♪♪ (Reprise, 1976, prod. Lenny Waronker)—was just a tad less interesting than her first two.

influences:

◀◀ Billie Holiday, Bessie Smith, Dolly Parton

▶▶ Wendy Waldman, Linda Ronstadt

Salvatore Caputo

Muleskinner

Formed early 1970s.

Peter Rowan, guitar, lead vocals; David Grisman, mandolin, harmony vocals; Bill Keith, banjo; Richard Greene, violin, bass vocals; Clarence White, lead and rhythm guitar, harmony vocals.

Muleskinner was a short-lived bluegrass supergroup born of its members' shared experience with 1960s counterculture and love of traditional hillbilly music.

what to buy: Muleskinner: A Potpourri of Bluegrass Jam ♪♪♪½ (Sierra, 1974, prod. Richard Greene, Joe Boyd) is the quintet's sole outing. Originally released on Warner Bros. in 1974, this record predates both the classic edition of New Grass Revival and mandolinist David Grisman's groundbreaking mix of jazz and bluegrass. It also documents one of flatpicker extraordinaire Clarence White's final studio sessions.

the rest:
Live—Television Soundtrack ♪♪♪½ (Sierra, 1994)

influences:
◀◀ Bill Monroe, Dillards
▶▶ New Grass Revival

see also: Peter Rowan, David Grisman, Richard Greene

Bill Friskics-Warren

Heidi Muller

Born c. 1950s, in NJ.

Heidi Muller has been writing and singing professionally for two decades, accompanying herself on mountain dulcimer and guitar. She settled in Seattle during the early 1980s, where she struck up a friendship with Linda Waterfall, who has served as Muller's mentor and producer. Muller has toured nationally, and was a New Folk finalist at Kerrville in 1989, but she remains principally a regional figure.

what to buy: Muller's first CD, Matters of the Heart ♪♪♪½ (Cascadia, 1989, prod. Linda Waterfall) remains her most engaging effort. "Good Road" has become the theme songs for a regional NPR show called "Inland Folk," but the disc's principal charm is that Muller's graceful voice is simply coupled to a set of adult songs (half hers, half not) that suits it perfectly.

what to buy next: Giving Back ♪♪♪ (Cascadia, 1996, prod. Heidi Muller, Janis Carper) and Cassiopeia ♪♪♪ (Cascadia, 1992, prod. Linda Waterfall) are both thoroughly pleasant outings.

influences:
◀◀ Linda Waterfall, Jean Ritchie

Grant Alden

Peter Mulvey

Born September 6, 1969, in Milwaukee, WI.

Peter Mulvey picks acoustic guitar with the dexterity of such heroes as Leo Kottke and Michael Hedges, and he pens literary lyrics that owe a clear debt to Bob Dylan and Leonard Cohen. On stage, he sticks to his voice and guitar, but in the studio, his rock 'n' roll passion emerges. He first got the music bug when he busked on the streets of Dublin in 1989. He came home to pursue a theater major at Marquette University in Milwaukee, but he ended up co-leading a successful college band, Big Sky, which leant an alternative-rock edge to his folk-rock compositions. When that group split up in 1992, Mulvey impulsively moved to Boston, ground zero for the singer-songwriter movement.

There he found plenty of receptive audiences but also plenty of competing musicians. The best day job he could find was playing for tips in the Boston subway system, much as he had in Ireland. He soon graduated to opening-act gigs and then placed as a finalist in the annual Boston Acoustic Underground competition in '93 and '94. He was the new darling of the acoustic-music scene, but when he got a chance to make an album for Eastern Front Records, he couldn't resist plugging in again.

what to buy: Rapture ♪♪♪ (Eastern Front Records, 1995, prod. Peter Mulvey) uses its rock-band arrangements to amplify the strangeness of Mulvey's intriguing imagery. "Standing with my sneakers soaking up a lake of gasoline," he sings on one song, "standing with my Bob Dylan comic books and a bag of Boston baked beans/I smell the future and it smells like gasoline." A jungle-like tom-tom drum figure and a spacey guitar line gave this witty description the ominous edge it needed. To illustrate both sides of his musical personality, Mulvey included two versions of the Waterboys' "The Whole of the Moon," one recorded solo as he did it in the Boston subways and one with the studio band.

what to buy next: Deep Blue ♪♪♪ (Eastern Front Records, 1997, prod. Nicholas Sansano) takes its title from Mulvey's song about the IBM computer that wishes it had skin and hands with which to celebrate its chess victory. Like many of Mulvey's compositions, this one starts out funny and ends up unsettling. As King Crimson bassist Tony Levin pushes the bristling art-rock song relentlessly forward, however, there's a genuine sense of despair in such lines as, "I'm gonna find out just how long a guy can lie and lie and lie in the middle of the floor." Mulvey isn't consistently reliable yet. Several songs drift off into the esoteric ether of words that mean more to him than to anyone else and of music that's more atmosphere than melody. He has good taste in role models, though, for Deep Blue includes remakes of songs by Tom Waits, Chris Smither, and Los Lobos. Good taste and genuine talent are usually indicators of a bright future.

the rest:
Goodbye Bob ♪♪♪ (Eastern Front Records, 1997)

worth searching for: Brother Rabbit Speaks ♪♪♪½ (self-released, 1992, prod. Peter Mulvey, Rick Bauer) is a mostly acoustic studio album recorded in Milwaukee during Mulvey's early development as a singer-songwriter. Rain ♪♪♪ (self-released, 1993, prod. Peter Mulvey) is a solo, acoustic live album recorded October 7, 1993, at the Helfaer Theatre in Milwaukee.

influences:

⏪ Bob Dylan, Leonard Cohen, Leo Kottke, Patty Larkin, Waterboys, Tom Waits

Geoffrey Himes

Brendan Mulvihill

See: Irish Tradition

Alan Munde

Alan Munde was one of the first players to successfully stretch the banjo's tonal possibilities from traditional bluegrass accompaniment instrument to melodic powerhouse. During the late 1960s he joined Jimmy Martin's Sunny Mountain Boys and in 1972 he and his fiddling college classmate Byron Berline were recruited to back up the Rick Roberts–era Flying Burrito Brothers. A couple of years later, Munde and Berline formed Country Gazette, subsequently adding former Burritos Kenny Wertz and Roger Bush to the lineup. The group disbanded in 1986 and today Munde is an assistant professor at South Plains College in Levelland, Texas. In addition, he has co-written a book with guitarist Joe Carr titled Prairie Nights to Neon Lights: The Story of Country Music in West Texas.

what to buy: Blue Ridge Express ♪♪♪♪ (Rounder, 1994, prod. Alan Munde) is a compilation of the best of Munde's three works released between 1975 and 1986: Banjo Sandwich, The Banjo Kid, and In the Tradition. The styles featured on the disc range from bluegrass to traditional folk to jazz. Especially worth checking out is the cool banjo-mandolin interplay between Munde and Joe Carr on the fiddle tune "Leather Britches."

what to buy next: Windy Days and Dusty Skies ♪♪♪½ (Flying Fish, 1995, prod. Alan Munde), recorded with Joe Carr, showcases Munde's superb banjo stylings and Carr's sparkling guitar and mandolin playing. Especially noteworthy are "Forked Deer," which features Italian guitar picker Beppe Gambetta, and "Milwaukee Blues," which includes spectacular twin fiddling courtesy of Billy Joe Foster.

the rest:

(With Country Gazette) Keep on Pushing ♪♪♪ (Flying Fish, 1991)
Festival Favorites Revisited ♪♪♪½ (Rounder, 1993) Welcome to West Texas (Flying Fish, 1998)

influences:

⏪ Earl Scruggs

⏩ Béla Fleck

see also: Flying Burrito Brothers

Rick Petreycik

Lee Murdock

Born February 7, 1953.

Northern Illinois resident Lee Murdock began his folk singing career during his college days in Iowa. Since settling in Illinois, Murdock has made a career of singing, collecting, and writing songs of the Great Lakes, which he delivers in his booming baritone while finger picking intricate fills on his six- and 12-string guitars.

what to buy: Full of great songs, Fertile Ground ♪♪♪♪ (Depot, 1989, prod. Lee Murdock, Mark Karney, Drew Carson) contains some of Murdock's most enduring performance pieces, including Doug Miller's anthemic title song, Murdock's Yuletide classic "The Christmas Ship," and moving covers of "Lakes of Ponchartrain" and "Lady Franklin's Lament."

what to buy next: Freshwater Highway ♪♪♪½ (Depot, 1995, prod. Lee Murdock, Mark Karney) is the most accessible of Murdock's Great Lakes albums, combining catchy covers like Shel Silverstein's "Great Lakes Song" and Stephen Foster's "The Glendy Burk" with some of Murdock's memorable songs. The dramatic "No Nets Will Be Found" deals with the exploits of American fisherman working in Canadian waters. As usual, Murdock worked with some of Chicago's best musicians, including Don Stiernberg, Howard Levy, and John Williams.

the rest:

The Grand Departure ♪♪♪ (Depot, 1980) (LP only)
Where the Pinery Narrows ♪♪♪ (Depot, 1983) (LP only) Wayfaring Stranger ♪♪♪ (Depot, 1987) (LP only) Folk Songs of the Great Lakes Region ♪♪½ (Depot, 1989) (cassette only) Safe in the Harbor ♪♪♪ (Depot, 1993)
Cold Winds ♪♪♪ (Depot, 1993)
Voices across the Water ♪♪♪½ (Depot, 1997)

influences:

⏪ Weavers, Kingston Trio, Stan Rogers

⏩ Tom & Chris Kastle

Michael Parrish

Colm Murphy

See: De Danann

Elliot Murphy

Born March, 16, 1949, in Garden City, NY.

Hemingway said no man who ever wrote anything of value left his country to work his craft. Elliot Murphy, one of the more gifted practitioners of heartland rock to ever labor under the "new Dylan" tag, is the contradiction to refute such a claim. And of that unlucky lot, Murphy has suffered perhaps the most pervading kind of indifference. At one point, he was actually doing office work in a law firm, such was the lack of attention. Nonetheless, he has retained his songcraft while doggedly forging a 20-plus year career. His consistency level has remained higher than most of his peers, as he continues to craft songs of remarkable intellectual depth while retaining and a journeyman's stance. Murphy now resides in the more welcoming environs of Paris, where he has much larger following than in his native United States.

what to buy: Much of Murphy's output is out of print, but his recent Selling the Gold ♪♪♪♪ (Dejadisc, 1996, prod. Djoum, Elliot Murphy) is a telling introduction to his mature subtlety and still active muse. Without resorting to bombast or overly simplistic immediacy, it's also typical Murphy: there's big pay-off to be had, but only if you pay attention. Both Bruce Springsteen and Violent Femmes' Gordon Gano pop up for cameos. Dipping into his past a bit, Going through Something: The Best of Elliott Murphy ♪♪♪♪ (Dejadisc, 1996, prod. Elliot Murphy, Steve Wilkison) covers highlights from '78 through '91 from otherwise deleted albums. A decent run through of what you missed the first time around.

what to buy next: The title track and a host of others make Party Girl, Broken Poets ♪♪♪ (Dejadisc, 1984, prod. Elliot Murphy, Ernie Brooks) a decent spin. Murphy's knack for extended storytelling while adhering to conventional folk and pop song structures flourishes, untouched by the new-wave '80s.

the rest:

Diamonds by the Yard: A Career Retrospective ♪♪♪ (Razor & Tie, 1992) Unreal City ♪♪♪ (Razor & Tie, 1993)

influences:

◀◀ Bob Dylan, Lou Reed, Velvet Underground

▶▶ Bruce Springsteen, John Mellencamp, Tom Petty, Violent Femmes

Allan Orski

Michael Martin Murphey

Born May 5, 1938, in Dallas, TX.

Michael Martin Murphey's career path has been an odd one—from rock-band singer to progressive-cowboy country to country balladeer to Western-music historian. The common thread through all these phases is Murphey's thoroughly romantic dedication to the American West. The first place many of today's country listeners first heard Murphey's work was from the pop band the Monkees, who recorded Murphey's "What Am I Doin' Hangin' 'Round?," written while Murphey was performing as Travis Lewis of the Lewis and Clarke Expedition, which had their own hit album in 1967. During the early 1970s Murphey relocated to Austin, Texas, and became part of that city's country scene; he made some of his best, most free-spirited music while living there, including such early albums as 1972's Geronimo's Cadillac and 1973's Cosmic Cowboy Souvenir, which featured the talents of such Austin musicians as Gary P. Nunn and Willis Alan Ramsey. Murphey moved progressively to the middle of the road—first to the pop market, where he had hits with "Wildfire" and "Carolina in the Pines" (both from Blue Sky, Night Thunder) in 1975, then into country where he had a string of largely forgettable hits during the 1980s. As the 1980s and the hits ended, he returned to the music of the American West. He signed with Warner Western and became largely responsible for the direction of that label during its early days. His most recent albums have been collections of standard and original cowboy music.

what to buy: Cowboy Songs III: Rhymes of the Renegades ♪♪♪ (Warner Western, 1993, prod. Joey Miskulin, Michael Martin Murphey) is the best of Murphey's recent cowboy offerings, with duets with Chris LeDoux, Hal Ketchum, and the late Marty Robbins (an electronically altered version of "Big Iron"), plus original songs and public-domain material about Cole Younger and Birmingham jails.

what to buy next: Largely a collection of traditional songs like "The Yellow Rose of Texas" and "Spanish Is the Lovin' Tongue" and silver-screen cowboy numbers ("Happy Trails," "Tumbling Tumbleweeds"), Cowboy Songs ♪♪½ (Warner Western, 1991, prod. Steve Gibson, Michael Martin Murphey) is a pleasantly romanticized look back at the American West. Murphey has better albums than this, but not in print.

what to avoid: In between his phases as hippie-cowboy and historian-cowboy, Murphey spent seven years making the kind of sappy middle-of-the-road ballads that would've made even John Denver blush. Most of that stuff has fallen out of print, but The Best of Michael Martin Murphey ♪ (Liberty, 1995, prod. Jim Ed Norman)—half of which is re-recordings of early songs like "Geronimo's Cadillac" and "Carolina in the Pines"—stays as a sad reminder.

the rest:
Blue Sky, Night Thunder ♪♪ (Epic, 1975)
Swans against the Sun ♪♪ (Epic, 1975)
River of Time ♪♪♪ (Warner Bros., 1988)
Land of Enchantment ♪♪ (Warner Bros., 1989)
The Best of Country ♪♪ (Curb, 1990)
Cowboy Christmas: Cowboy Songs II ♪♪ (Warner Western, 1991)
What's Forever For ♪♪ (Capitol Special Products, 1994)
Sagebrush Symphony ♪♪♪ (Warner Western, 1995) Horse Legends ♪♪♪ (Warner Western, 1997)

worth searching for: Even before his Cowboy Songs trilogy, Murphey (or Michael Murphey, as he was first called) was always fascinated by the American West; he just used to write more songs of his own about it. The best of those is the title track from Geronimo's Cadillac ♪♪♪ (A&M, 1972, prod. Bob Johnston), which has been re-recorded often but never improved. This album also has a slightly renegade take on the West with such songs as "Calico Silver" and "Natchez Trace." It also has Murphey's version of "What Am I Doin' Hangin' 'Round?"

influences:
◀◀ Roy Rogers, Jerry Jeff Walker
▶▶ John Denver, Don Edwards

Brian Mansfield

Arnie Naiman & Chris Coole

Formed in Toronto, Ontario, Canada.

During the mid-'70s, Arnie Naiman, from Toronto, Canada, attended the Mariposa Folk Festival and saw American musicians such as the New Lost City Ramblers, Doc Watson, and Tommy Jarrell. Having informally played some contemporary folk on guitar for a few years, he decided to try to pick up playing the banjo. Naiman learned the frailing, or clawhammer, style of old-time banjo picking. Chris Coole, also from Toronto, first recalled hearing the sound of a tenor banjo on a Neil Diamond record. Interest gradually increased with a few family trips to Nashville, listening to Roy Lewis's Greatest Hits, and a banjo workshop at the 1990 Mariposa festival. After acquiring a five string banjo, Coole started playing Scruggs style, but was soon drawn towards old-time clawhammer. He met up with Naiman, who introduced him to festivals, dances, and camps, and most importantly his own banjo and fiddle playing. Naiman and Coole now have a repertoire of traditional and original old-time tunes and songs on fiddle, banjo, and guitar.

what's available: Naiman and Coole recorded a CD of old-time banjo tunes and songs with guitar accompaniment titled Five Strings Attached with No Backing ♪♪♪♪ (Merriweather, 1997, prod. Arnie Naiman, Chris Coole). A few of the songs have vocals added, including the beautiful and lonesome old tune "The Blackest Crow," which Naiman plays and sings (and sounds a lot like fellow-Canadian Bruce Cockburn.) Banjo tunings and keys are documented for the banjo-playing enthusiast. This is a good CD for both new and old fans of the banjo. Along with the traditional tunes, Naiman and Coole add a number of splendid originals.

influences:
◀◀ Dwight Diller, Mike Seeger, Henry Reed
▶▶ Diane Jones & Hubie King

Steve Gardner

Graham Nash

See: Crosby, Stills & Nash

The Nashville Bluegrass Band

Formed 1985, in Nashville, TN.

Pat Enright, guitar, lead vocals; Alan O'Bryant, banjo, lead vocals; Roland White, mandolin (1989–present); Stuart Duncan, fiddle, (1985–present); Gene Libbea, bass (1989–present); Mike Compton, mandolin (1984–88), Mark Hembree, bass (1984–88).

The Nashville Bluegrass band is arguably the most important bluegrass act of the 1990s next to Alison Krauss and Union Station. Noted for their strong harmony singing, they are responsible more than anyone for bringing the sound of black, a cappella gospel into bluegrass. The multiple Grammy- and International Bluegrass Music Association-award winners are stronger and more influential then ever entering their second decade.

what to buy: Waitin' for the Hard Times to Go ♪♪♪♪♪ (Sugar Hill, 1993, prod. Jerry Douglas), the Grammy winner for Best Bluegrass Recording, varies styles and manages the difficult task of sounding both traditional and contemporary. From the hard-driving "Kansas City Railroad Blues" through the swaying rhythms of "On Again, off Again" to the a cappella gospel number "Father I Stretch My Hand to Thee," this is the rare album with no flaws.

what to buy next: The band's second Grammy winner, Unleashed ♪♪♪♪♪ (Sugar Hill, 1996, prod. Jerry Douglas) deftly mixes traditional numbers with new songs by Gillian Welch, Dave Allen, Harry Stinson, and others. A special highlight is the band's harmonizing with gospel greats the Fairfield Four on "Last Month of the Year."

the rest:
The Nashville Bluegrass Band ♪♪♪½ (Rounder, 1987)
To Be His Child ♪♪♪♪♪ (Rounder, 1987)
(With Peter Rowan) New Moon Rising ♪♪♪♪ (Sugar Hill, 1988)
The Boys Are Back in Town ♪♪♪♪½ (Sugar Hill, 1990) Home of the Blues ♪♪♪♪½ (Sugar Hill, 1991)

solo outings:
Roland White:
Trying to Get to You ♪♪♪½ (Sugar Hill, 1994)

influences:
◀◀ Fairfield Four, Country Gazette, Kentucky Colonels ▶▶ IIIrd Tyme Out, Lonesome River Band

Douglas Fulmer

Nathan & the Zydeco Cha Chas /Nathan Williams

Born March 24, 1963, in Lafayette, LA.

With Buckwheat Zydeco out on the road playing to an international audience, Nathan Williams has become the champion of the blues- and R&B-inflected zydeco sounds of Lafayette. Williams plays the full-size piano accordion with vigor and skill equal to all but the great Clifton Chenier. His bands are tight and tend to have stinging guitar solos as well as sweaty zydeco grooves. Although Williams covers can range far, like Stevie Wonder's "Isn't She Lovely," the music doesn't sway off into the rock-dominated sound that appears too readily in other young zydeco performers. While the diatonic accordion, minor riff sound seems to dominate at the moment, Nathan remains true to the Creole blues of Clifton Chenier and the traditional Creole French culture.

what to buy: Creole Crossroads ♪♪♪♪½ (Rounder, 1995, prod. Scott Billington) works as an unintentional tribute to the great Clifton Chenier by two artists whom he greatly influenced: Nathan Williams and Michael Doucet. Chenier recorded "Black Girl" with his uncle Morris on fiddle, and Williams and Doucet provide an update. There are also two duet pieces, echoing another great Creole/Cajun pairing of Creole Amédée Ardoin and Cajun Dennis McGee. Elsewhere, it is a joy to hear Doucet solo over the Cha Chas crackerjack rhythm section instead of the sometimes porous Beausoleil. He is at his bluesiest here, emulating Canray Fontenot and Bradford Gordon, the black fiddlers with whom he studied. While not the perfect example of Williams's sound, this CD is his most entertaining work.

what to buy next: It's almost impossible the capture the excitement of a live zydeco band on a recording, but I'm a Zydeco Hog ♪♪♪♪ (Rounder, 1997, prod. Scott Billington) comes close. You'll just have to imagine the heat of a full dance floor and the way the band plays off the dancers and the dancers in turn inspire the musicians. Williams and the band deliver one crushing dance groove after another, from the start of "Tante Rose" to the closing notes of "Zydeco Road," only pausing for the "Grand Prix" waltz. The guitar and bass drop out for "Hey Bebe Bebe" where Nathan trades licks with "Cat Roy" Broussard's saxophone, sounding a bit like a meringue band lost in the Achafalya swamp. Mostly you get a really tight zydeco band in a current version of the classic Clifton Chenier sound. This record is the perfect example of the Nathan Williams sound, but lacks the diversity that will make Creole Crossroads more appealing to those with less experience with zydeco.

the rest:
Steady Rock ♪♪♪ (Rounder, 1989)
Your Mama Don't Know ♪♪♪½ (Rounder, 1990) Follow Me Chicken ♪♪♪♪ (Rounder, 1993)

influences:
◀◀ Clifton Chenier, Rockin Sidney, Buckwheat Zydeco ▶▶ Geno Delafose, Lynn August

Jared Snyder

Neal & Leandra

Formed in St. Peter, MN, early 1980s.

Neal Hagberg (born June 22, 1969, Omaha, NE), guitar, vocals; Leandra Peak, (born September 15, 1961, in Louisville, KY), guitar, vocals.

Neal and Leandra have been touring the country since the early 1990s, singing their own blend of original folk and smoothly mixed harmonies that they began while attending Gustavus Adolphus College in St. Peter, Minnesota, a Swedish Lutheran School college in the early '80s. What started as just singing at weddings and other functions blossomed. At college, Peak (a Spanish major) was singing in a musical when Hagberg (a premed major) heard her and asked if she would sing with him at a function. They began playing informally, singing at friends' weddings and mostly for fun. In 1988 they recorded their first album together; they were married in 1989. By the early 1990s, they were performing full time, becoming mainstays on public radio, filling concert halls in the Midwest, and building a following elsewhere in the country. They play festivals and folk clubs, but mostly tour the country with Columbia Artists Management, performing at community concerts. In 1993 they signed with Red House Records, which had heard their album Old Love, which was reissued in 1995.

5
7
8 holly near

what to buy: The couple's fourth album, Hearts and Hammers ♪♪♪♪♪ (Red House, 1994, prod. John Scherf), reflects the love and setbacks that couples experience. Their warmth, sincerity, and soft, closely knit harmonies can easily open a listener's emotional fireplug. Songs like "Save Me" parallel a search for love with a need to be rescued. "Grand Hotel," with added pomp from piano accompaniment, contrasts the blindness of the city's rich against what's really happening on the streets around them. "Too Happy" is a comical modern-day Tarzan-Jane love tale. The title track aptly describes the building of a strong relationship.

what to buy next: It's really a toss-up between the duo's latest album, Accidental Dreams ♪♪♪♪ (Red House, 1996, prod. John Scherf, Neal Hagberg, Leandra Peak), and the one for which they are best known, Old Love ♪♪♪♪ (Uncle Gus Music, 1992, prod. John Scherf). Accidental Dreams contains original, touching, honest ballads, with a dash of humor. "Love in the Family" is a song for every family that has ever quarreled (which one hasn't?). "Rock in the River" speaks of women's strength of spirit, inspired by poet Maya Angelou. Their other songs deal with feelings of suspicion in a small town. Others, like "Love Back Then," deal with the reality of love and its occasional lapses into solitude and hurt, while "Sam" is a lighthearted look at their dog, who just likes to lie around a lot. Joining Neal and Leandra are fiddle maestro Peter Ostroushko and more than a half-dozen other performers. Old Love contains the title track, which has become the couple's signature and most-requested song, a sweetly affecting duet. The album was a regional hit, and in 1991, after performing it on Minnesota Public Radio, listeners flooded the station with requests to hear the song again. The song has sold more than 10,000 copies at shows alone, a stellar feat for the previously independent artists. The album blends intimate and heartwarming songwriting and vocals with a contemporary folk sound and touches of blues, country, and even bluegrass.

the rest:
Rocky Road ♪♪♪ (Uncle Gus Music, 1988) Lazy Summer Evening ♪♪♪ (Uncle Gus Music, 1990)

influences:
◀◀ Ian & Sylvia, Peter, Paul & Mary, Barry & Holly Tashian
▶▶ Barry & Holly Tashian

Stephen Ide

Holly Near

Born June 6, 1949, in Ukiah, CA.

Holly Near practically gave birth to the genre known as "women's music." The daughter of Californian political activists, she learned early to combine social concerns with the limelight. In her days at UCLA she got involved in television and film, appearing in many of the popular TV shows of the time, from The Partridge Family to The Bold Ones. She recorded her first album in 1973 on the label she founded, Redwood Records, which emphasized women and other "marginalized" musicians.

Over the three decades of her career, Near's commitment to political issues hasn't varied, except insofar as the issues themselves have varied. She's best known as a pioneer in gay rights—she was open about her sexuality at a time when few dared such openness, and her song "Singing for Our Lives" has become an anthem. She's also fought for peace in Central and Latin America, and the cultures have influenced her music in turn.

In addition to her "cause-related" songs, Near is fond of musical theater, an interest reflected in her recent album With a Song in My Heart, featuring longtime accompanist John Bucchino on piano. At this stage of her career, she has the luxury of working on unusual projects, such as with a performing arts school in her native Ukiah, California.

what's available: Very few of Near's albums are in print at this writing. With a Song in My Heart ♪♪♪ (Calico Tracks, 1997, prod. Holly Near), a collection of standards, suffers from a lack of variety, though the individual tracks show Near's affinity for, as she puts it, "timeless gems from my parents' generation." Holly Near and Ronnie Gilbert's collaborative effort, This Train Still Runs ♪♪♪♪ (Abbe Alice Music, 1996, prod. Donna A. Korones), like many live albums, is stronger on enthusiasm than

Holly Near (Photo by Mike Rogers)

accordion

The accordion was invented in 1829 by an Austrian piano tuner as a device to create sustainable tones that would facilitate his work. The design is deceptively simple: two rectangular pine boxes connected by a set of paper bellows. The right-hand box has buttons or piano keys, which, when pressed, allow air to travel across flat metal reed blocks. Each rectangular block has two metal reeds, one riveted to each side. One reed sounds when pushing the bellows in and the other when pulling the bellows out. Each reed has a corresponding leather flap on the opposite side of the reed block that prevents it from sounding when the bellows are moving in the opposite direction. The left hand provides accompaniment in the form of buttons that play bass notes and chords. Button boxes (i.e., accordions with buttons to play the melody) come in styles ranging from one row in a diatonic scale to five rows in a full chromatic scale. The ubiquitous piano accordion has the full chromatic scale on its piano keyboard. Concertinas are a related family of instruments that share similar construction to accordions, but vary in location of the buttons and the lack of chordal accompaniment.

Jared Snyder

finesse. Highlights include "In the Quiet Morning," a Janis Joplin tribute written by Mimi Fariña.

worth searching for: If you can find it, buy Singer in the Storm ♪♪♪♪ (Chameleon, 1990, prod. Holly Near), a powerful concert recording that features Near with many other talents, including Bucchino, Mercedes Sosa duetting with Near on two tracks, and Melissa Etheridge on guitar on the title track. Her cover of Walter Robinson's "Harriet Tubman (Lifeline)" gave me chills, and I don't chill easily.

influences:

⏪ Ronnie Gilbert, Pete Seeger, Joan Baez

⏩ disappear fear, Margie Adam

Pamela Murray Winters

Fred Neil

Born 1937, in St. Petersburg, FL.

A little-known but major talent of the American folk renaissance, Fred Neil is probably better recognized for other people's performances of his songs—such as "Everybody's Talkin'" (Harry Nilsson) or "The Dolphins" (Tim Buckley)—than his own long-out-of-print albums. He was a fixture on the Greenwich folk scene during the early 1960s, and his laid-back 12-string guitar style and unique singing voice, which slips effortlessly from a mellow tenor to a haunting baritone, was a major influence on the scene. After recording four albums from 1965–71, Neil retreated to his home in Florida where, by all accounts, he lives in virtual seclusion.

what to buy: Fred Neil ♪♪♪♪♪ (Capitol, 1966, prod. Nick Venet) is highlighted by Neil's versions of the dreamlike "The Dolphins" and "Everybody's Talkin'."

the rest:

Bleecker and MacDougal ♪♪♪♪ (Elektra, 1964)
Other Side of This Life ♪♪♪♪ (Capitol, 1971)

influences:

⏪ Pete Seeger, Woody Guthrie

⏩ Bob Dylan, Tim Buckley, John Sebastian

Joel Selvin and Dan Weber

Mark Nelson

Born July 10, 1950, in Santa Ana, CA.

Mark Nelson is perhaps best known as an innovative and exciting mountain dulcimer player, but he is a complete musician with excellent credentials on instruments as diverse as the Hungarian cittera, the Swedish hummel, and the Hawaiian slack-key guitar. Developing his style during the early '70s, he took first place in the National Dulcimer Championships in Winfield, Kansas, in 1979 and his unique style has helped fuel a fast growing interest in the dulcimer throughout the country. Along the way, he has recorded a number of excellent but difficult to categorize albums, worked as an artist-in-residence in schools throughout the West, and published a number of highly regarded instructional books and videos for the dulcimer. He has collaborated with musicians as diverse as Kevin Burke, David Balakrishnan, and Keola Beamer. His stage performances display the full range of his diverse musical interests as well as a large dose of interesting anecdotes presented with unfailing good humor. On his more recent releases, he has taken a lead role in the MIDI revolution, experimenting with digital technology to tastefully complement the more traditional sounds of the dulcimer.

what to buy: Autumn ♪♪♪♪ (Wizmak Productions, 1996, prod. Mark Nelson) showcases all of Nelson's instrumental prowess in a fascinating variety of mostly original compositions for dulcimer, MIDI-dulcimer, hummel, and MIDI-guitar. Nelson combines mood pieces, jazz improvisations, Hawaiian slack-key dulcimer experiments, a Turlough O'Carolan piece, a requiem for a dear, departed canine friend, and a variety of other musings into a surprisingly cohesive and very satisfying musical celebration of his West Coast home and lifestyle. Although the material was actually recorded over a period of six years, it all sounds as fresh as though it were done in one session. His musicianship is impeccable and he displays wonderful technique, a keen melodic sense, and, perhaps most important, the "right" amount of discipline, taste, and restraint in the use of the MIDI instruments. The album has received quite a lot of airplay on National Public Radio.

what to buy next: Southern Light ♪♪♪½ (Flying Fish, 1986, 1990, prod. Danny Carnahan) is quietly intense bop and swing, teaming Nelson with new acoustic musicians Andy Narell, David Balakrishnan, Robin Petrie, Pat Klobas, and producer Danny Carnahan. The music is again eclectic and hard to pigeonhole but it has a decidedly more jazz-like flavor than Autumn. The CD version released in 1990 is slightly different from the original 1986 release in that two of the original cuts were dropped, including Nelson's singing debut, and two were added, including "Larkin," his first effort at using the MIDI dulcimer. By the artist's own admission, the whole album made a lot more sense with these changes since it made for a "better sense of progression."

the rest:

Fiddle Tunes for Dulcimer: The Rights of Man ♪♪♪ (Kicking Mule, 1980)

You Can Teach Yourself to Make Homemade Musical Instruments ♪♪½ (Mel Bay Publications, 1995) (companion to Nelson's book of the same title)

The Faery Hills ♪♪♪ (Wizmak Productions, 1996) (companion to Nelson's The Complete Book of Celtic Music for Dulcimer.)

Scottish Airs and Ballads for Appalachian Dulcimer ♪♪♪ (Mel Bay Publications, 1997) (companion to Nelson's book of the same title) worth searching for: After the Morning: Irish, Scottish, and American Fiddle Music for Dulcimer ♪♪♪½ (Kicking Mule, 1983, prod. Kevin Burke) featured ensemble performances with a first-rate string band led by Irish fiddler Kevin Burke and also featuring several other outstanding Celtic musicians from the Pacific Northwest. Geoffrey Himes describes this as "some of the liveliest playing ever to come out of a lap dulcimer. The rolling momentum of Irish music takes on a new sonic quality with the dulcimer's slippery, sliding sound." Long out of print, this recording was a Book-of-the-Month Club selection when it was released. The master tapes are now owned by Fantasy Records and a CD release is rumored. Nelson also has one cut on Masters of the Mountain Dulcimer ♪♪♪♪ (Susan Trump Music, 1997, prod. Susan Trump), a nice compilation featuring 19 of the country's best dulcimer players. Similarly, he also has two cuts on December's Hearth ♪♪♪ (Wizmak Productions, 1996, prod. Tom White, Geri White), a holiday sampler featuring the stable of Wizmak artists.

influences:

Richard Fariña, Raymond Kane, Kenny Hall, Margaret MacArthur

Jerry Rockwell, Ledward Kaapana, David Schnaufer

Neal Walters

Tracy Nelson

Born December 27, 1944.

Tracy Nelson is certainly one of the most underrated white blues singers of the last 30 years. A contemporary of Janis Joplin's, she moved from Madison, Wisconsin, to San Francisco during the mid-'60s, where she fronted the blues-rock band Mother Earth. Although Nelson was probably a better singer than Janis Joplin, she lacked Joplin's onstage flair. She moved Mother Earth to Nashville (where she has lived ever since) at the height of the ballroom scene, and started cutting country and R&B-based albums during the era of the endless guitar solo. During the '80s, she took a decade-long hiatus from recording before starting to create her string of fine new albums for Rounder a few years back.

what to buy: The Best of Tracy Nelson/Mother Earth ♪♪♪♪ (Reprise, 1996, comp. prod. Gregg Geller) collects most of the essential tracks from Nelson's Mercury and Reprise albums of the late '60s to mid-'70s, sampling California and Tennessee tracks cut with Mother Earth. Highlights include Nelson's stunning signature song, "Down So Low," a psychedelic cover of Memphis Slim's "Mother Earth," and a soaring rendition of Steve Young's "Seven Bridges Road."

what to buy next: Move On ♪♪♪ (Rounder, 1996) was cut in Nashville with a bunch of powerful accompanists, including Mike Henderson and the Bluebloods, Al Kooper, and guitarist Gary Nicholson. The overall sound is rockin' blues, with Nelson's singing at full throttle. Notable cuts include the Little Feat–style rocker "Livin' on Love," the barrelhouse version of "Got Me Goin'," and the sassy pop blues tune "Ladies' Man," which features Phoebe Snow, Maria Muldaur, and Bonnie Raitt.

what to avoid: Although it has its moments, the now-out-of-print Sweet Soul Music ♪♪ (MCA, 1975/One Way, 1995) mostly falls flat.

the rest:
Mother Earth Presents Tracy Nelson Country ♪♪♪½ (Mercury, 1970/Reprise Archives, 1997)
Homemade Song/Come See about Me ♪♪½ (Flying Fish, 1993)
In the Here and Now ♪♪♪ (Rounder, 1993)
I Feel So Good ♪♪♪½ (Rounder, 1995)
Time Is on My Side ♪♪♪ (One Way, 1995)

worth searching for: Deep Are the Roots ♪♪♪ (Prestige LP, 1965), Nelson's debut, was a straight country blues effort that stands in sharp contrast to the big-band settings of her other early work.

influences:
◀◀ Willa Mae Thornton, Bessie Smith, Janis Joplin ▶▶ Janis Joplin, Bonnie Raitt, Melissa Etheridge

Michael Parrish

Willie Nelson

Born April 30, 1933, in Fort Worth, TX.

Willie Nelson is arguably the most influential figure of the past quarter century—first as a songwriter and then as a performer who rewrote the rules for what qualified as country. After landing in Nashville in 1960, he penned such hits as Ray Price's "Night Life," Faron Young's "Hello Walls," and Patsy Cline's "Crazy." When Music City found his style (and nasal voice) too unusual, Nelson retreated to Texas, where he became a cultural icon. During the early 1970s his audience was an unlikely mix of rednecks and hippies, both of whom related to his relaxed attitude and cosmic cowboy themes. His Red Headed Stranger album made him the nominal head of the so-called "Outlaw" movement. Stylistically, Nelson tried everything from honky-tonk to Tin Pan Alley, and with his distinctive approach it all somehow formed a cohesive American style. His film career includes roles in The Electric Horseman, Honeysuckle Rose, Barbarosa, and others. During the 1980s he co-founded the annual Farm Aid benefit concerts. Unimpressed, the IRS socked him for back taxes in 1991, which cost Nelson most of his assets. Nevertheless, his social conscience and mastery of all forms of country music have made him one of the genre's true giants. If they ever carve a country-music version of Mount Rushmore, they'll have to include Nelson.

what to buy: Red Headed Stranger ♪♪♪♪♪ (Columbia, 1975) is Nelson's greatest "Outlaw" album, with admirably spare production and the timeless "Blue Eyes Crying in the Rain." Nelson's return to Texas yielded Shotgun Willie ♪♪♪♪♪ (Atlantic, 1973), an adventurous concept album that brought him together with such rockers as Leon Russell and Doug Sahm and made him hip outside the country-music community. Phases and Stages ♪♪♪♪♪ (Atlantic, 1974, prod. Jerry Wexler), Nelson's second concept album, cemented his status as a crossover star. These two albums can sometimes be found packaged together as Shotgun Willie/Phases and Stages ♪♪♪♪♪ (Mobile Fidelity Sound Lab, 1993). Who'll Buy My Memories? (The IRS Tapes) ♪♪♪♪♪ (Sony, 1991) was intended only as a method of paying off his tax debt, but it's one of Nelson's most evocative albums ever, featuring nothing but his voice and guitar—and his soul.

what to buy next: Nite Life: Greatest Hits and Rare Tracks, 1959–1971 ♪♪♪♪♪ (Rhino, 1990, prod. various), a great collection of Nelson's early years, includes "Half a Man" and "Funny How Time Slips Away." On Stardust ♪♪♪♪ (Columbia, 1978) Nelson takes on the Tin Pan Alley of George Gershwin and Hoagy Carmichael, and wins hands down.

what to avoid: Pancho, Lefty, and Rudolph ♪♪½ (Columbia, 1995), a collaboration with Merle Haggard, is a cheapo repackage that has five holiday songs from each artist. The music's pretty good (Nelson's "Pretty Paper," Haggard's "If We Make It through December"), but hold out for full Christmas albums by each artist.

best of the rest:
. . . and then I wrote ♪♪♪♪ (Capitol, 1962/1995)
The Sound in Your Mind ♪♪♪ (Columbia, 1976)
(With Waylon Jennings, Jessi Colter, and Tompall Glaser) Wanted! The Outlaws ♪♪½ (RCA, 1976/1996)
To Lefty from Willie ♪♪♪♪ (Columbia, 1977)
Willie and Family Live ♪♪♪½ (CBS, 1978)
Willie Sings Kristofferson ♪♪♪ (Columbia, 1979)
(With Leon Russell) One for the Road ♪♪♪ (Columbia, 1979) (With Ray Price) San Antonio Rose ♪♪♪♪ (Columbia, 1980)
Original Soundtrack: Honeysuckle Rose ♪♪♪ (Columbia, 1980)
Greatest Hits (& Some That Will Be) ♪♪♪ (Columbia, 1981)

Willie Nelson (© Jack Vartoogian)

willie nelson

5 8
4 michael nesmith

Somewhere over the Rainbow ♪♪♪ (Columbia, 1981)
Always on My Mind ♪♪♪♪ (Columbia, 1982)
Tougher than Leather ♪♪♪ (Columbia, 1983)
Without a Song ♪♪♪ (Columbia, 1983)
(With Roger Miller) Old Friends ♪♪♪½ (Columbia, 1983)
City of New Orleans ♪♪♪ (Columbia, 1984)
(With Kris Kristofferson) Music from Songwriter ♪♪♪ (Columbia, 1984)
Me and Paul ♪♪♪ (Columbia, 1985)
Half Nelson ♪♪♪ (Columbia, 1985)
(With the Highwaymen) Highwayman ♪♪♪♪ (Columbia, 1985) Partners ♪♪♪ (Columbia, 1986)
Willie ♪♪♪ (RCA, 1986)
The Promiseland ♪♪♪ (Columbia, 1986)
(With Waylon Jennings) Take It to the Limit ♪♪♪ (CBS, 1987) Island in the Seas ♪♪♪ (Columbia, 1987)
What a Wonderful World ♪♪♪ (Columbia, 1988)
Best ♪♪♪ (EMI, 1988)
All-Time Greatest Hits, Volume I ♪♪♪ (RCA, 1988)
Horse Called Music ♪♪♪ (Columbia, 1989)
(With the Highwaymen) Highwayman 2 ♪♪♪½ (Columbia, 1990)
Born for Trouble ♪♪♪ (Columbia, 1990)
Greatest Songs ♪♪♪ (Curb, 1990)
The Best of Willie Nelson ♪♪♪ (RCA, 1991)
Super Hits ♪♪♪½ (Columbia, 1991)
Willie Sings 28 Great Songs ♪♪♪ (Hollywood/IMG)
Super Hits ♪♪♪ (CSI Classics, 1991)
(With Jennings) Clean Shirt ♪♪♪ (Epic, 1991)
Moonlight Becomes You ♪♪♪½ (Justice, 1993)
The Early Years: The Complete Liberty Recordings Plus More ♪♪♪♪ (Liberty, 1994)
The Legend Begins ♪♪½ (Pair, 1994)
Peace in the Valley: The Gospel Truth Collection ♪♪♪ (Promised Land, 1994)
Healing Hands of Time ♪♪½ (Liberty, 1994)
The Early Years ♪♪♪½ (Scotti Bros., 1994)
(With Curtis Potter) Six Hours at Pedernales ♪♪♪ (Step One, 1994)
A Classic and Unreleased Collection ♪♪♪½ (Rhino, 1995)
The Essential Willie Nelson ♪♪♪½ (RCA, 1995)
Super Hits, Volume II ♪♪♪ (Epic, 1995)
Just One Love ♪♪♪♪ (Justice, 1995)
Revolutions of Time . . . the Journey ♪♪♪♪♪ (Columbia/Legacy, 1995)
(With the Highwaymen) The Road Goes on Forever ♪♪♪♪ (Liberty, 1995)
(With Billy Walker) Charlie's Shoes ♪♪½ (DEC, 1995) Spirit ♪♪♪ (Island, 1996)
(With Bobby Nelson) How Great Thou Art ♪♪♪ (Finer Arts, 1996)
(With Johnny Lee) Willie Nelson & Johnny Lee ♪♪½ (Intermedia, 1996) Broken Promises ♪♪♪ (DRG, 1997)
Classic Willie ♪♪♪ (RCA, 1997)
Hill Country Christmas ♪♪♪ (Finer Arts, 1997)

worth searching for: Never one to stick with an image, Nelson turned to such modern writers as Lyle Lovett, Paul Simon, and John Hiatt for Across the Borderline ♪♪♪♪ (Columbia, 1993, prod. Don Was), his most satisfying album in years. Pretty Paper ♪♪♪½ (Columbia, 1979, prod. Booker T. Jones), Nelson's Christmas album, features extremely laid-back renditions of holiday favorites like "Rudolph the Red-Nosed Reindeer" and "Jingle Bells."

influences:
◀◀ Floyd Tillman, Gene Autry, Lefty Frizzell ▶▶ Waylon Jennings, Rodney Crowell, Billy Joe Shaver

Bob Cannon

Michael Nesmith

Born December 30, 1942, in Houston, TX.

Being tagged "the smart Monkee" may seem faint praise indeed, but Michael Nesmith was that, and more. A session musician and folkie when he was tapped to join the Prefab Four, Nesmith regularly contributed songs to the group and was its most accomplished musician (apologies to Peter Tork). Apart from the Monkees, Nesmith wrote Linda Ronstadt's first hit "Different Drum" and recorded such innovative, if quirky, concept albums as The Prison. Despite the odious implications of his day job, Nesmith was there at the dawn of country rock, and his contributions, such as the utterly lovely song "Joanne," are often overlooked. Maybe that's because Nesmith's most significant innovation is in the field of video. His clip for Duran Duran's "Rio" was one of America's first conceptual music videos, and the terrific Elephant Parts the first conceptual long-form video. Popclips, a video show Nesmith produced for Nickelodeon, was the prototype of MTV. Finally, his company, Pacific Arts, produced the brilliant cult films Repo Man and Tapeheads. So laugh at his past if you want (and his present, in the wake of the Monkees' reunion), but no one else descended from the Monkees has evolved quite so far.

what to buy: These days, you're pretty much limited to whatever you can find, since nearly all of Nesmith's music is out of print. The Newer Stuff ♪♪♪½ (Rhino, 1989, prod. Michael Nesmith) is a collection of mostly quirky pop tunes, while The Older Stuff; The Best of the Early Years ♪♪♪♪ (Rhino, 1991, prod. Michael Nesmith) is better, containing more country-flavored material, including "Joanne" and "Different Drum."

the rest:
And the Hits Just Keep on Comin' ♪♪♪ (Pacific, 1972/Rio, 1995) worth searching for: The long-form video Elephant Parts (Pacific Arts, 1980) ♪♪♪♪♪ has it all—good music, plenty of laughs, and an energetic spirit of innovation not seen since Judy Garland and Mickey Rooney decided, "Hey, let's put on a show!"

influences:

⏪ Bob Dylan, Merle Travis, Ernie Kovacs

⏩ Stone Poneys, the wool hat industry, MTV

Daniel Durchholz

The New Christy Minstrels

Formed 1961, in NY. Disbanded, c. 1969.

Randy Sparks, guitar, vocals; Barry McGuire, guitar, vocals; Art Podell, guitar, vocals; Dolan Ellis, guitar, vocals; Jackie Miller, banjo, vocals; Barry Kane, fiddle, vocals; Gayle Caldwell, percussion, vocals; Nick Woods, guitar, vocals; Larry Ramos, banjo, vocals; Clarence Treat, mandolin, vocals; Kenny Rogers, guitar, vocals; others.

Like the Kingston Trio, the New Christy Minstrels (named after the popular nineteenth-century vaudeville troupe) rode the early-'60s folk boom to commercial success and helped spawn an array of similarly conceived multi-voiced, acoustic guitar-driven groups. Despite their preference for light material, the Minstrels could tackle a Leadbelly tune with professional results, and they also had an adept writer in Randy Sparks, who penned "Follow the Drinkin' Gourd" (a popular folk-circuit staple) and "Today," a 1964 smash. It was gravel-voiced Barry McGuire who helped give the first incarnation of the Minstrels its identifiable sound through hits "Green, Green" and "Saturday Night" (both Top 20s from 1963). After McGuire departed for a solo career ("Eve of Destruction"), the Minstrels recruited future star Kenny Rogers, who failed to return the group to commercial favor, and the band petered out by the end of the decade, warbling less folkie fare like "Chim, Chim, Cheree." what to buy: All you really need to know about the Minstrels is contained on their Greatest Hits (Rhino, 1996, prod. Bonnie Pritchard, Tom Pickles), which includes their hits, a smattering of traditional forays ("Cotton Fields"), plus a really boffo period album cover photo.

the rest:

Presenting: The New Christy Minstrels ♪♪♪♪ (Columbia, 1962)
Ramblin' Featuring "Green Green" ♪♪♪♪ (Columbia, 1963)
New Christy Minstrels Greatest Hits ♪♪♪♪ (Columbia, 1966) Golden Classics Edition (Collectables, 1997)

influences:

⏪ Pete Seeger, Kingston Trio, Leadbelly

⏩ Rooftop Singers, Byrds, Mamas & the Papas

David Simons

New Golden Ring

See: Sandy & Caroline Paton

The New Grass Revival

Formed 1971, in Louisville, KY. Disbanded 1989.

Sam Bush, mandolin; John Cowan, bass guitar, lead vocals (1974–89); Béla Fleck, banjo, (1981–89); Pat Flynn, guitar, vocals, (1981–89); Courtney Johnson (died June 7, 1996), banjo (1971–81); Curtis Burch, guitar, Dobro (1971–81); Ebo Walker, bass (1971–74).

Sam Bush put together the New Grass Revival when he was only 19 years old, but it wasn't until 10 years later when banjo ace Béla Fleck and guitar player Pat Flynn joined that the band really took off. Their shows were nearly legendary, adding a decided rock 'n' roll energy and style to bluegrass.

what to buy: New Grass Revival was always better live than in the recording studio and Live (Sugar Hill, 1989, prod. New Grass Revival), recorded during their farewell tour, effectively captures the raucous energy of the group's live sets.

what to buy next: Hold to a Dream ♪♪♪½ (Capitol, 1987, prod. Garth Fundis) was the best of New Grass Revival's attempts at mainstreaming for the country audience.

what to avoid: Like any New Grass Revival album, Friday Night in America ♪♪ (Capitol, 1987, prod. Wendy Waldman) has some high points, but overall it's not as loose and energized as their other efforts.

the rest:

Fly through the Country/When the Storm Is Over ♪♪♪½ (Flying Fish, 1976/1977)
Barren County ♪♪♪ (Flying Fish, 1979)
Commonwealth ♪♪½ (Flying Fish, 1981)
On the Boulevard ♪♪♪½ (Sugar Hill, 1985) Anthology ♪♪♪½ (Sugar Hill, 1990)

influences:

⏪ Country Gazette, Kentucky Colonels

⏩ Béla Fleck & the Flecktones, Chesapeake

Douglas Fulmer

New Kingston Trio

See: Kingston Trio

The New Lost City Ramblers

Formed 1958, in New York, NY.

Multi-instrumentalists Mike Seeger; John Cohen; Tom Paley (1958–62); Tracy Schwarz (1962–present).

The most popular, most influential, and arguably the most important first-generation revival band of the folk boom in terms of presenting rural Southern string-band music both in concert and on recordings, the New Lost City Ramblers remain a force in traditional music circles to this day. Their music, which came to be known as old-time or old-timey (to distinguish it from bluegrass), explores the diversity of U.S. string-band music within Appalachian ballads, black and white gospel and blues, Cajun, and countless other traditions. They have tended to concentrate on—and are most successful at performing—the string-band music of the Appalachian and Ozark cultures, their knowledge of which has been gleaned from 78s, Library of Congress field recordings, and from hunting down traditional performers and learning their repertoires. The Ramblers' influence on generations of young musicians who have followed in their footsteps is incalculable; it's difficult to imagine a revival of old-time music of any consequence without them. Ethnomusicologists to a man, the Ramblers chose to perpetuate rather than preserve the music by performing it with grace, dignity, and a sense of good fun. Although all band members have gone on to other endeavors (musical and otherwise), they have continued to perform in recent years on an infrequent basis.

what to buy: The New Lost City Ramblers, the Early Years, 1958–1962 ♪♪♪♪♪ (Smithsonian/Folkways, 1991, prod. Mike Seeger, Moses Asch, Peter Bartok) contains 26 tracks from the 12 highly influential albums recorded for Folkways with the original members, before Tom Paley left the band and subsequently moved to England. These performances breathed new life into old traditions, sparking an interest in the traditions presented here that live on. The New Lost City Ramblers Volume II, 1963–1973: Out Standing in Their Field ♪♪♪♪♪ (Smithsonian/Folkways, 1993, prod. various) continues the traditions of the first recordings and incorporates the musical contributions of Tracy Schwarz who, among other talents and interests, brought his enthusiastic fiddling and knowledge of Cajun music to the band.

what to buy next: The New Lost City Ramblers & Friends ♪♪♪½ (Vanguard, 1994, prod. Mary Katherine Aldin) gathers 31 live examples from the 1963–65 Newport Folk Festivals of the Ramblers performing with influential performers of days gone by, including Cousin Emmy, Maybelle Carter, Eck Robertson, Roscoe Holcomb, Sam and Kirk McGee, and Dock Boggs, illustrating the band's familiarity and expertise performing the repertoires of these older performers and at the same time underlining the group's rediscovery efforts on behalf of these important, although sadly neglected, artists. New Lost City Ramblers' 20th Anniversary Concert ♪♪♪ (Flying Fish, 1987, prod. Steve Rathe) is a live recording of a Carnegie Hall concert from 1978, celebrating the group's first 20 years. It includes special guests the Highwoods String Band, Elizabeth Cotten, and Mike Seeger's brother, Pete.

influences:

◀◀ Carter Family, Eck Robertson, many more

▶▶ Highwoods String Band, Freighthoppers

see also: Tracy Schwarz, Mike Seeger, Tracy Schwarz & Ginny Hawker

Randy Pitts

The New St. George

Formed 1986, in Takoma Park, MD; disbanded 1995.

Jennifer Cutting, vocals, keyboards, accordions; Lisa Moscatiello, vocals, whistles, acoustic guitar, bouzouki; Rico Petruccelli, vocals, bass; Juan Dudley, percussion; Bob Hitchcock, vocals, lead guitar, mandolin (1986–94); Eric Rose, guitar (1994–95); Al Petteway, guitar (1995).

Jennifer Cutting grew up under rigid discipline in a secluded Hindu monastery in South Florida surrounded by mango plantations. Steeped in Anglo/Indian music and customs, she didn't hear her Western name again until she was 18. She attended graduate school in ethnomusicology at the University of London and had the good fortune to become the last and youngest protégé of British folk revival leader A.L. Lloyd. Moving back to the States in 1984, she started the New St. George from a basement practice room in 1986. Lisa Moscatiello, the band's lead vocalist, played in local Washington, D.C. bands Sodabread and Celtoiri, and as a duo with Grace Griffith prior to joining the New St. George. Rico Petruccelli, the bassist, co-producer, and backing vocalist, worked with Chuck Berry, Jonathan Edwards, and Charlie Byrd, played bass on Mary Chapin Carpenter's first three albums, and was a member of her touring band for four years. African American Juan Dudley, the band's drummer and percussionist, played with the classic rock band Pilot and the new wave/alternative band Big Bang Theory, as well as various jazz bands. Bob Hitchcock grew up in Brighton, Sussex, an area steeped in the English folk tradition. He moved to New York City in 1975, played a bit there, and eventually ended up in D.C. As a member of the sea music group the Boarding Party, he recorded two albums with them before joining the New St. George in 1986. After Hitchcock left the New St. George in 1994 to pursue other interests, Eric Rose shared the electric guitar duties with Al Petteway. Rose came to NSG from the world of major-label session work in LA and New York (Warner Bros.). Guitar and mandolin wizard Petteway joined the band in 1995, alternating with Rose at live appearances.

what's available: High Tea ♪♪♪♪ (Folk Era, 1994, prod. Rob Petruccelli, Jennifer Cutting, Bob Dawson) is a classic folk-rock album combining the sound of Fairport Convention and Steeleye Span with elements of Motown, bossa nova, funk, and progressive rock. The album's upbeat opening tune, "The Steggie," got a lot of airplay, but the album's highlights are probably Moscatiello's vocals on "False Bride" and Cutting's "All the Tea in India," an award-winning song that beautifully excoriates British colonialism.

worth searching for: The New St. George has one cut on Hungry for Music: A Holiday Feast ♪♪♪ (Hungry for Music 1995, exec. prod. Jeff Campbell). "Time to Remember the Poor" is an exquisite arrangement of a turn-of-the-century English broadside ballad with haunting, multi-tracked vocals by Moscatiello.

influences:

◀◀ A.L. Lloyd, Steeleye Span, Fairport Convention

▶▶ Lisa Moscatiello

see also: Lisa Moscatiello, Al Petteway

Neal Walters

Carrie Newcomer

Born May 25, 1958, in Dawagiac, MI.

Hope isn't a four-letter word to Carrie Newcomer, a husky-voiced singer-songwriter who creates poignant, powerful music by maintaining a refreshingly optimistic attitude in a genre often marked more by introspection and melancholy. After six years and two independent albums as a founding member of the Bloomington, Indiana, folk trio Stone Soup, Newcomer went solo in 1988, joined Rounder's Philo roster in 1994, and instantly established herself as that rare performer capable of clicking her heels and keeping both feet on the ground. Her compassion for the homeless ("In the City") and victims of senseless violence ("The Madness You Get Used To") is fueled by her spirituality, as is her anger at those who use their belief in God to justify starting wars ("Playing with Matches") and bombing abortion clinics ("Wisdom Is Watching"). But Newcomer's most inviting and inspiring songs document the lessons learned from her own life, struggling through sour relationships, raising a teenage daughter, and emerging a little smarter and a lot stronger, battle scarred but not bitter.

what to buy: Backed by a solid five-man band that accompanied her on the road, Newcomer beefs up her sound without sacrificing the intimacy of her earlier records on My Father's Only Son ♪♪♪½ (Philo, 1996, prod. Mark Williams, Robert Meitus). Such nostalgic gems as "Up in the Attic" and the title track offer snapshots of her life, but such harder-rocking anthems as "You Can Choose" and the defiant "I'm Not Thinking of You" are clear windows into her soul.

what to buy next: Her splendid Philo debut, An Angel at My Shoulder ♪♪♪½ (1994, prod. Carrie Newcomer, Michael Graham), established her life-affirming attitude with "Only One Shoe" and "Three Women," and her sense of humor with "My Mamma Said It's True," a bluesy litany of maternal myths.

what to avoid: The earnest songs on Visions and Dreams ♪♪½ (Philo, 1995, prod. Carrie Newcomer, Graham Thomas, Richard Thomas), a reissue of her 1991 solo debut originally released on Windchime Records, are more about wet-behind-the-ears poetry than the wise-beyond-her-years poignancy that would inform her later albums.

the rest:

The Bird or the Wing ♪♪♪ (Philo, 1995)
My True Name ♪♪♪½ (Philo, 1998)

worth searching for: The two Stone Soup albums originally released on Windchime Records, Long Fields ♪♪♪ (Windchime, 1983, prod. Richard Thomas, Stone Soup) and October Nights ♪♪♪ (Windchime, 1987, prod. Richard Thomas, Stone Soup), are available on cassette and can be mail-ordered through Windchime Promotions, Inc., P.O. Box 5653, Bloomington, Indiana 47407.

influences:

◀◀ Janis Ian, Bruce Cockburn, Mary Chapin Carpenter

▶▶ Sara Hickman, Story, Dar Williams

David Okamoto

jimmy c. newman

Jimmy C. Newman

Born Jimmy Yeve Newman, August 27, 1927, near Big Mamou, LA.

Nicknamed "The Alligator Man," Jimmy C. Newman is best known for bringing Cajun flair to country music. Inspired by the cowboy call of Gene Autry, Newman integrated his own signature call—"Ai-eee!"—into his country act. During the 1950s, his hits "Cry, Cry Darling," "Seasons of My Heart," "Blue Darling," and "Day Dreaming" made the charts. One of his best-remembered songs, "Falling Star," made Newman a star in 1956, the same year he joined the Grand Ole Opry. Newman's bayou-rich songs—such as "Alligator Man," "Bayou Talk," "Louisiana Saturday Night," "City of Angels," and "Back in Circulation"—continued to be chartmakers through the '60s. Although his recording career slowed during the '70s, he continues to bring down the house with his spirited Louisiana-flavored shows.

what to buy: Though Newman's days as a country hitmaker are long past, he can still make great records, and Whatever Boils Your Crawfish ♪♪♪♪ (Swallow, 1995, prod. Jimmy C. Newman) is an absolute blast. Newman, producing himself, gets great performances out of his band. The album kicks off with a great one-two punch: Loudon Wainwright's "Dead Skunk in the Middle of the Road" and the rollicking title tune.

what to buy next: Rounder wanted a traditional Cajun country sound when Newman recorded The Alligator Man ♪♪♪½ (Rounder, 1991, prod. Jimmy C. Newman, Ken Irwin), and that's exactly what it got. Newman sings the songs largely in French, and the playing is marked by the spirited fiddle of Rufus Thibodeaux and Dobro of Joe Rogers.

what to avoid: Don't buy both Jimmy C. Newman & Cajun Country ♪♪ (Dot, 1986, prod. Stan Cornelius) and More Cajun Music ♪½ (MCA, 1995, prod. Stan Cornelius), which are essentially the same album, although More Cajun Music has two fewer cuts. Recorded about the time Rockin' Sidney's rhythm-box zydeco tune "My Toot Toot" became a national sensation, More Cajun Music finds Newman trying for the same sound, even recording Rockin' Sidney's "Cochon de Lait." On Jimmy C. Newman, he did his own version of "My Toot Toot." It's not a comfortable fit.

the rest:

20 Cajun Country Classics ♪♪ (Plantation, 1985)
16 Best of Jimmy C. Newman ♪♪ (Plantation, 1987) Cajun Classics ♪♪ (Sun, 1995)

influences:

◀◀ Dewey Balfa & the Balfa Brothers

▶▶ Doug Kershaw, Eddy Raven, Jo-El Sonnier

Randall T. Cook and Brian Mansfield

Randy Newman

Born November 28, 1943, in New Orleans, LA.

Swaggering onto the scene like Jonathan Swift at a Bourbon Street piano bar, Randy Newman thrives on misinterpretation. His biggest hit, 1977's "Short People," drew protests from diminutive listeners who didn't realize he was attacking a larger target—prejudice in general. He sometimes takes on the personae of apartheid-supporting South Africans ("Christmas in Capetown"), insecure gay bashers ("Half a Man"), Southern bigots ("Rednecks"), and right-wing conservatives ("Roll with the Punches") to get his points across. The ultimate irony is that, despite his perennial cult-hero status, Newman's wry blend of Tin Pan Alley pop, ragtime, and Crescent City R&B has won over Madison Avenue and Hollywood: he's licensed his songs for commercial jingles ("I Love LA." for Nike, "I Love to See You Smile" for Colgate), penned film scores for Ragtime, The Natural, and Avalon, and dueted with Lyle Lovett on the catchy theme for 1995's Toy Story. His albums barely trickle out—between 1979 and 1996, he's released all of four discs—but he hasn't lost his satirical edge or ambitious flair: 1995's Randy Newman's Faust is a twisted musical-theater adaptation of Johann Wolfgang von Goethe's classic set in South Bend, Indiana. The Lord is played by James Taylor; the Devil, of course, by Newman.

what to buy: Newman wedges his tongue into his cheek on the gloriously sardonic Sail Away ♪♪♪♪½ (Reprise, 1972, prod. Russ Titelman, Lenny Waronker) as he entices slaves to America like a sideshow huckster ("Sail Away"), celebrates the polluted Cuyahoga River like it was Walden Pond ("Burn On"), and advocates dropping the Big One ("Political Science"). Good Old Boys ♪♪♪♪½ (Reprise, 1974, prod. Russ Titelman, Lenny Waronker), a rollicking concept album about the South, is celebrated for skewering redneck ignorance but "Louisiana 1927," "A Wedding in Cherokee County," and "Marie" garner their emotional clout from Newman's sympathetic narrative eye. The engaging Land of Dreams ♪♪♪♪ (Reprise, 1988, prod. Mark Knopfler, James Newton Howard, Tommy LiPuma, Jeff Lynne) opens with three autobiographical numbers about his New Orleans childhood and ends with "I Want You to Hurt like I Do," his chilling answer to "We Are the World."

what to buy next: Trouble in Paradise ♪♪♪½ (Reprise, 1983, prod. Russ Titelman, Lenny Waronker) is often dismissed as the album that spawned "I Love LA." But digging deeper uncovers such gems as "Miami," the scathing "Christmas in Capetown," and "My Life Is Good," in which a cocky Newman brags about what to avoid: The pinched production and bloated orchestrations of Randy Newman ♪♪ (Reprise, 1968, prod. Lenny Waronker, Van Dyke Parks) make for a tough listen, even with "Davy the Fat Boy" and "I Think It's Going to Rain Today."

Bruce Springsteen asking him "How would you like to be the Boss for a while?"

the rest:
12 Songs ♪♪♪½ (Reprise, 1970)
Randy Newman Live ♪♪♪ (Reprise, 1971)
Little Criminals ♪♪♪½ (Reprise, 1977)
Born Again ♪♪½ (Reprise, 1979)
Randy Newman's Faust ♪♪♪ (Reprise, 1995)
Maverick: The Original Film Score (Reprise, 1995)

worth searching for: For timid beginners, the German-made Lonely at the Top ♪♪♪½ (WEA International, 1987, prod. Lenny Waronker, Russ Titelman, Van Dyke Parks) is a 22-track best-of collection that mixes sarcastic favorites like "Rednecks" and "Short People" with such lovely ballads as "Marie," "I Think It's Going to Rain Today," and "Living without You." It's an impressive portrait, though hardly a complete picture.

influences:
◀◀ Stephen Foster, uncles Lionel and Alfred Newman, George & Ira Gershwin, Fats Domino ▶▶ Lyle Lovett, Timbuk 3

David Okamoto

Maire Ni Chathasaigh

Born April 21, 1956, in Co. Cork, Ireland.

Until recently, the harp had, for the most part, fallen out of the world of traditional Irish dance music. While there were a few scattered players, and a harp category at the All-Ireland competition, the rarity and expense of the instrument meant that there were few harpers in the rural countryside where traditional music survives most strongly. During the last 30 years, artists like Derek Bell of the Chieftains, Antoinette McKenna, and even Mary O'Hara had helped to start a harp revival, but it wasn't until the 1980s and the arrival of Maire Ni Chathasaigh's recordings that harpers began to use the techniques and ornamentation common to Irish dance music. Her technically proficient and precise style is based on the playing of the fiddlers and pipers she heard as a child in County Cork in the west of Ireland. Her first recording, The New Strung Harp, introduced audiences to her use of traditional ornamentation, including the rolls, cuts, and slurs common to fiddles, accordions, and pipes, and served as a revelation to harpers all over the Celtic world. The album forced harpers everywhere to raise their playing standards, and changed forever the role of the harp in dance music. Born into a musical family (her sister is fiddle player Nollaig Casey) and brought up speaking both Irish and English, Ni Chathasaigh began playing the harp at age 12, having already learned whistle and piano. She attended University College, Cork where she spent time collecting songs and music from traditional players in the area and received an honors degree in Celtic studies. Having won numerous harp competitions in her youth, Ni Chathasaigh is now a fixture as a judge and teacher at those same competitions. She has toured and taught throughout the United States and Europe, both as a solo performer and with her long-time musical partner, guitarist Chris Newman. She currently lives in England and is also president of Old-Bridge Records, her own label.

what's available: The New Strung Harp ♪♪♪♪♪ (Temple, 1985/1997, prod. Robin Morton) is a classic. When released in 1985, the recording showed a new way to play Irish jigs and reels on the harp. Modeled on the playing of fiddlers and pipers, Ni Chathasaigh's playing mimics those instruments in her style of ornamentation, allowing her music to fit as closely as possible into the dance music idiom. She shows off her awesome technique on the set of reels "The Volunteer" and "The Pullet" and on the jig "Gander in the Pratie Hole," and also sings a few traditional Irish songs in a sweet, clear voice. Although other harpers have in the intervening years raised their level of playing to Ni Chathasaigh's, she was the first to play in this modern style, and for that reason she is important listening. The Carolan Albums ♪♪♪♪ (Old Bridge, 1994) is an essential compilation of the music of Turlough O'Carolan, a blind eighteenth-century itinerant considered to be the last of the great traveling Irish harpers. His compositions have become a major part of the traditional Irish repertoire and Ni Chathasaigh's precise, confident performances set a new standard for this important material.

worth searching for: Ni Chathasaigh's other recordings, all with guitarist Newman, are available on the import Old Bridge label. They are: The Living Wood ♪♪♪½ (Old Bridge, 1995); Out of Court ♪♪♪ (Old Bridge, 1991); and Live in the Highlands ♪♪♪ (Old Bridge, 1995).

influences:
◀◀ Grainne Yeats, Antoinette McKenna
▶▶ Sue Richards, Carol Thompson, Aine Minogue

Tony Ziselberger

Tríona Ní Dhomhnaill

See: Nightnoise

The Nields

Formed 1988 in Wilmington, DE.

Nerissa Nield (born June 2, 1967 in New York, NY), vocals, guitar; Katryna Nield (born April 30, 1969 in New York, NY), vocals; David Nield (born David Jones, November 8, 1960 in Henderson, NC), guitar, vocals; Dave Chalfant (born January 31, 1968 in Barcelona, Spain), bass; Dave Hower (born January 8, 1967 in New York, NY), drums.

Youthful exuberance and infectious melodies have made the Nields one of pop-folk's fastest rising acts. Although the group began as a trio featuring singer-songwriter Nerrisa Nield, her guitarist husband, David Nield, and her lead vocalist sister Katryna Nield, The Nields have evolved into an exciting five-piece rock band. The Nield sisters—Nerrisa and Katryna—grew up listening to their parents' collection of folk albums and have been singing together since earliest memory. The sisters' love of music was further enhanced when they attended the Potomac School in Washington, D.C. and took classes with John Langstaff, director of the Revel singers. Although they attended different colleges—Nerrisa as an English major at Yale and Katryna as a religion major at Trinity in Hartford—they resumed their singing partnership in 1991. Pete Townshend and Adrian Belew–inspired guitarist David Nield, whom Nerrisa married in 1990, also played a big role in the development of the band's sound, backing the two sisters on an acoustic guitar run through an electric pedal board. After honing their sound at open mics in Washington, D.C., the Nields relocated to Windsor, Connecticut, when David was hired to be an English teacher and head of the theater department at the Loomis Chafee Boarding School. Ed McKuen of University of Hartford radio station WWUH radio was one of the first to discover the group and provided airplay for their demo tape on his show. The group's popularity spread after they were featured on anthology albums produced by the Fast Folk Music Magazine (The Old Vienna Tapes: Volume II) and by WWUH (Honey, Hide the Banjo! It's the Folk Next Door Again and The Folk Next Door). While their first two self-produced albums, 66 Hoxsey Street and Live at the Iron Horse Music Hall, showcased the initial trio, the Nields, who settled in Northampton, Masachusetts, were enhanced by the addition of bassist Dave Chalfant and drummer Dave Hower in 1994.

what to buy: The Nields' second album as a five-piece band, Gotta Get over Greta ♪♪♪♪ (Razor & Tie, 1996/EMI/Guardian, 1997, prod. Kevin Moloney) shows how much they'd grown since their inception. A powerful folk-rock collection, the album is the product of an ultra-tight unit. Nerrisa and David Nield's songwriting skills are showcased with such original songs as "Best Black Dress," "I Know What Kind of Love This Is," and the title track, while Katryna Nield's lead vocals are delivered with enthusiasm and emotion. Released initially by Razor & Tie, the album was re-mastered by EMI/Guardian with three additional tracks—"Taxi Girl," "Einstein's Daughter," and a cover of the Beatles' "Lovely Rita."

what to buy next: Recorded during a 1993 performance at a Northampton, Massachusetts club, Live at the Iron Horse Music Hall ♪♪♪ (Nields, 1993) captures the infectious spirit of the trio's early live shows.

the rest:
66 Hoxsey Street ♪♪♪½ (Nields, 1992)
Bob on the Ceiling ♪♪♪ (Nields, 1994) worth searching for: Katryna and Nerrisa have contributed vocal harmonies to two albums by Dar Williams, harmonizing with Williams on "Alleluia" on The Honesty Room ♪♪♪♪ (Burning Field Music, 1993, prod. Dar Williams, Adam Rothberg, David Seitz) and "As Cool As I Am" on Mortal City ♪♪♪♪ (Razor & Tie, 1996, prod. Steven Miller). Live recordings by the Nields include "Anchorman" on The Folk Next Door ♪♪♪½ (WWUH, 1992, prod. Ed McKuen) and "(Just like) Christopher Columbus" on Honey, Hide the Banjo! It's the Folk Next Door Again ♪♪♪ (WWUH, 1993, prod. Ed McKuen), as well as The Old Vienna Tapes, Volume II ♪♪♪ (Fast Folk, 1993).

influences:
◀◀ Beatles, Cranberries, Counting Crows, Who, Adrian Belew ▶▶ Dar Williams, Eddie from Ohio, Indigo Girls

Craig Harris

Nightnoise

Formed 1983, as a duo.

Billy Oskay, violin, viola, keyboards (1983–90); Micheál Ó Dhomhnaill, guitar, whistles, synthesizers, vocals; Tríona Ní Dhomhnaill, keyboards, vocals, whistles, accordion (1986–present); Brian Dunning, flutes, panpipes (1986–present); John Cunningham, fiddle, vocals (1991–present).

Familiarity with French Impressionist painters like Monet might help an unfamiliar listener understand the group Nightnoise. Calling on backgrounds from the classical to the traditional Irish, this group has assembled a mist-covered image from a serious of brightly colored impressions. Pulling their various backgrounds together, they have created a soft, romantic mood with the music they play. Nightnoise has a distinct and unusual sound, with a new-age feel to the instrumentation, but with more of a jazz-like rhythm to the music. Unquestionably Celtic in background, the group never loses the sense of the traditional, but never exactly attempts to be traditional either. Definitely not rock, but far too varied to be new age, this group is just plain hard to classify. There is a chamber-folk quality to them, but the music also borders on pop, and still maintains an Irish feel. Perhaps they are the closest thing the Irish have to American jazz. The band was started by Billy Oskay, who wanted to record some tracks and asked Micheál Ó Dhomhnaill to join him. The resulting music soon became the album known as Nightnoise, and they decided to take their show on the road. They added a piano player and a second fiddler for the road show, and by the time they were ready to record again, had added Ó Dhomhnaill's sister Tríona (from Touchstone and Bothy Band) and Brian Dunning to the mix. When Oskay decided to leave, they quickly filled his position with John Cunningham (of Silly Wizard fame). What appealed to these top-notch performers with busy solo schedules was the concept behind Nightnoise. The group does ample touring, but allows the members to have plenty of time to pursue other projects during the course of the year. This factor may add greatly to the group's success, since exploring other creative outlets frequently keeps the songwriting juices flowing. It certainly works, as displayed by the group's highly evocative and creative music.

what to buy: Shadow of Time ♪♪♪♪½ (Windham Hill, 1993, prod. Dawn Atkinson, Nightnoise) contains a delightful mix of traditional and new material, sporting soaring flute lines, rhythmic piano accompaniment, and melodic fiddle. Exciting rhythms highlight "Silky Flanks," a wonderful instrumental track, and amazing Gaelic vocals create rhythm, melody, harmony, and texture in the mouth music "Fionnghuala." This is new-age folk at its best.

what to buy next: A Different Shore ♪♪♪♪½ (Windham Hill, 1995, prod. Nightnoise) is also filled with new-age style music in a slightly more exotic vein. The arrangements include wonderful fiddle, flute, and vocal lines, brilliantly performed. The melodic piano line on the song "Falling Apples" and the throaty bass flute line on the title track, "A Different Shore," are particularly lovely.

what to avoid: Both At the End of the Evening ♪♪½ (Windham Hill, 1988, prod. Nightnoise) and Something of Time ♪♪½ (Windham Hill, 1987, prod. Billy Oskay, Micheál Ó Dhomhnaill) seem to have more new-age material and less folk substance to them than Nightnoise's other albums. A lack of tension in the music keeps these albums from living up to the group's overall standard.

the rest:
Oskay & Ó Dhomhnaill: Nightnoise ♪♪♪ (Windham Hill, 1984)
Parting Tide ♪♪♪ (Windham Hill, 1990)
Nightnoise: A Windham Hill Retrospective ♪♪♪ (Windham Hill, 1992)
The White Horse Sessions ♪♪♪ (Windham Hill, 1997)

solo outings:
Tríona Ní Dhomhnaill:
Tríona ♪♪♪½ (Green Linnet, 1975)

influences:
Relativity, Jethro Tull, Silly Wizard, Touchstone
Enya

see also: John Cunningham, Silly Wizard, Bothy Band

Jo Hughey Morrison

Harry Nilsson

Born June 15, 1941, in Brooklyn, NY. Died January 15, 1994, in Agoura Hills, CA.

Harry Nilsson was both a remarkable singer and a gifted songwriter. It was the latter talent that launched his career during the mid-'60s; bands such as Three Dog Night scored hits with his songs, which helped him embark on his own recording career. His supple voice—which could handle mellow, swing-influenced ballads and soaring rock anthems with equal facility—was given full rein, as were his more eclectic instincts as a composer. He achieved mainstream success with his version of "Everybody's Talkin'," the theme from the hit film Midnight Cowboy, and scored massive hits with the humorous original "Coconut" and Badfinger's ultimate power ballad, "Without You." He also wrote songs for the cartoon musical The Point, which became a success with help from the single "Me and My Arrow." Nilsson composed other music for film and television, notably the theme from the series The Courtship of Eddie's Father, which he also performed over the show's opening credits. He rarely performed live, however, and never toured in support of his recordings. He followed a decidedly idiosyncratic career path, recording standards, making mock-horror films with Ringo Starr, and drinking quite a lot with John Lennon. Unfortunately, Nilsson's voice was damaged along the way, and he lost his exquisite falsetto—apparently from booze. Lennon's murder in 1980 made Nilsson an outspoken advocate of gun control; he recorded very little during that decade, however. After his own death from heart disease in 1994, he was the subject of an all-star tribute album that demonstrated his profound influence on pop.

what to buy: The two-disc anthology Personal Best ♪♪♪♪ (RCA, 1995, prod. various) is a stunning treasury of Nilsson's achievements as both vocalist and songwriter. In addition to boasting his best-known moments, the compilation features many obscure gems.

what to buy next: Nilsson Schmilsson ♪♪♪½ (RCA, 1971, prod. Richard Perry) is a fine mix of hits and lesser-known delights.

what to avoid: Son of Dracula ♪♪ (RCA, 1974, prod. Harry Nilsson, Ringo Starr) may have been fun to make, but its blend of songs (mostly recycled from other albums), stoned dialogue, and incidental music from this dog of a movie will try the patience of most listeners.

the rest:
Pandemonium Shadow Show ♪♪♪ (RCA, 1967)
Spotlight on Nilsson ♪♪♪½ (RCA, 1967)
True One ♪♪♪ (RCA, 1967)
Aerial Ballet ♪♪♪½ (RCA, 1968)
Nilsson Sings Newman ♪♪♪½ (RCA, 1970)
The Point ♪♪♪ (RCA, 1971)
Aerial Pandemonium Ballet ♪♪♪ (RCA, 1971)
Son of Schmilsson ♪♪♪½ (RCA, 1972)
Songwriter ♪♪♪ (RCA, 1972)
A Little Touch of Schmilsson in the Night ♪♪½ (RCA, 1973)
(With John Lennon) Pussy Cats ♪♪♪ (RCA, 1974)
Sandman ♪♪½ (RCA, 1975)
That's the Way It Is ♪♪ (RCA, 1976)
Knilsson ♪♪ (RCA, 1977)
Nilsson's Greatest Music ♪♪♪½ (RCA, 1978)
A Touch More Schmilsson in the Night ♪♪ (RCA, 1988)
All-Time Greatest Hits ♪♪ (RCA, 1989) Presence of Christmas ♪♪ (Dove, 1997) worth searching for: Harry ♪♪♪½ (RCA, 1969/DCC, 1997, prod. Harry Nilsson, Rick Jarrard) is gentler and more nostalgic, but contains some of his very best early work.

influences:
◀◀ Cole Porter, George & Ira Gershwin, Hank Williams, Little Richard, Beatles, Beach Boys, Burt Bacharach, Randy Newman, Van Dyke Parks

▶▶ Marshall Crenshaw, Aimee Mann, Gin Blossoms, Jellyfish, Posies, Semisonic, Jennifer Trynin

Simon Glickman

The Nitty Gritty Dirt Band

Formed 1966, in Long Beach, CA.

Jeff Hanna, vocals, guitar; Jimmie Fadden, vocals, drums; Les Thompson, vocals, mandolin (1966–73); Bruce Kunkel, guitar, violin, vocals (1966–67); Ralph Barr, guitar, clarinet, vocals (1966–68); Jackson Browne, guitar, vocals (1966); John McEuen, banjo, guitar, fiddle, (1967–86); Chris Darrow, guitar, fiddle (1968); Jimmy Ibbotson, bass, vocals (1969–76, 1983–present); John Cable, guitar, bass, vocals (1976–77); Jackie Clark, bass, guitar (1976–77); Michael Buono, drums (1976–77); Bob Carpenter, keyboards, vocals (1979–present); Al Garth, saxophone, violin (1978–82); Richard Hathaway, bass (1978–82); Merle Brigante, drums (1978–79); Vic Mastriani, drums (1980–82); Michael Gardner, bass (1980–82); Bernie Leadon, guitar, banjo (1987–88).

The Nitty Gritty Dirt Band was the group that introduced many second-generation rock 'n' rollers to music outside of the bubblegum pop that AM Top 40 radio served during the late 1960s and early 1970s. With such hits as "Mr. Bojangles" (written by Jerry Jeff Walker), the NGDB led interested fans to other singer/songwriters and the country-rock scene. Its sprawling, landmark 1972 three-record set, Will the Circle Be Unbroken, brought unadulterated folk and roots country stars to rock fans' ears. The collection was a multi-generational gathering, including traditional musicians from Mother Maybelle Carter and Doc Watson to Opry founders Roy Acuff and Merle Travis, with the long-haired Dirt Band members playing backup and proving they listened to a wider range of music than many of their fans. The band's catholic stylistic sense came from its roots in the halcyon LA folk-rock scene of the mid-1960s. The NGDB first formed as a jug band. When multi-instrumentalist John McEuen joined, the core group was set for most of the rest of its career. Its records at various times were more rock than country (the 1975 Dream LP even included a spacey banjo opus that sounded like Pink Floyd for hillbillies), but by the 1980s, with myriad personnel changes and a stint officially calling themselves the Dirt Band, the core members settled in as something of a country-music institution; their music hadn't changed, but in the post-punk era, twangy music found itself unhip and relegated to country radio. Although it wasn't as much of a revelation the second time around, the Dirt Band also released an updated version of Circle in 1989, a songfest featuring some of the original legends (Roy Acuff, Earl Scruggs) as well as the new Nashville set (Rosanne Cash, John Hiatt, Emmylou Harris, Marty Stuart, Bruce Hornsby). Having passed its 30th year, the band is without a major-label deal for the first time ever, but it's still a staple on the road and seems far from quitting, having settled into an acoustic sound that reaches back to its roots. The Dirt Band's most recent release is The Christmas Album, recorded largely around the band's longtime home of Aspen, Colorado with pals including McEuen, bluegrass star fiddler Alison Krauss, veteran fiddler Vassar Clements, and Poco founder Richie Furay, a pastor these days in Boulder, Colorado. Of all the many members who've passed through the NGDB, multi-instrumentalist McEuen has sustained the closest thing to a solo career; though hitless, McEuen is well regarded and performs steadily on the acoustic circuit.

what to buy: Will the Circle Be Unbroken ♪♪♪♪♪ (Liberty, 1972, prod. William E. McEuen) is the hands-down, must-own release by the NGDB, although it's not as much a reflection of the band's own music as it is a testament to its roots. The music was already old by then but sounded fresh in this context. And it hasn't aged in the quarter-century since.

what to buy next: Uncle Charlie and His Dog Teddy ♪♪♪½ (Liberty, 1970, prod. William E. McEuen) includes the group's biggest hit, "Mr. Bojangles," as well as a minor-hit version of Michael Nesmith's great "Some of Shelley's Blues" (recently covered by the Continental Drifters) that's typical of its hippie eclecticism. The mid-career, three-LP compilation Dirt, Silver & Gold ♪♪♪♪ (United Artists, 1976, prod. various) collects the good stuff and filters out the dross. Much of the NGDB's catalog is available on CD via various labels' reissue lines, or on import labels.

what to avoid: Outside of collections and concept albums, much of the NGDB's mid-era output included such tepid fodder as Jealousy ♪♪ (Liberty, 1981) and Let's Go ♪♪ (Liberty, 1983).

the rest:
Ricochet ♪♪ (Liberty, 1967)
Pure Dirt ♪♪ (Liberty, 1968)
All the Good Times ♪♪♪ (Liberty, 1971)
Stars and Stripes Forever ♪♪♪½ (Liberty, 1971)
Dream ♪♪♪½ (United Artists, 1975)
20 Years of Dirt ♪♪♪ (Warner Bros., 1986)
Hold On ♪♪ (Warner Bros., 1987)
Best of the Nitty Gritty Dirt Band ♪♪♪ (Liberty, 1987)
More Great Dirt ♪♪ (Warner Bros., 1989)
Greatest Hits ♪♪♪ (Curb, 1990)
Live Two Five ♪♪ (Capitol Nashville, 1991)
Not Fade Away ♪♪ (Liberty, 1992)
Best Of ♪♪ (Curb, 1993)
Acoustic ♪♪½ (Liberty, 1994)
The Christmas Album ♪♪½ (Rising Tide, 1997) Best Of ♪♪♪ (Capitol, 1997)

editor's choice
11 slack key guitar albums

Gabby Pahinui, Hawaiian Band: Vol. 1 (Edsel)
Sonny Chillingworth, Sonny Solo (Dancing Cat)
Keola Beamer, Mauna Kea: White Mountain Journal (Dancing Cat)
Keola Beamer, Moe'uhane Kika (Tales from the Dream Guitar) (Dancing Cat)
Barney Isaacs & George Kuo, Hawaiian Touch: Acoustic Steel & Slack Key (Dancing Cat)
Ledward Kaapana, Led Live: Solo (Dancing Cat)
Ray Kane, Punahele (Dancing Cat)
Various Artists, Hawaiian Slack Key Guitar Masters (Dancing Cat) Various Artists, Songs of the Hawaiian Cowboy (Na Mele O Paniolo) (Warner Western) George Kuo, Aloha No Na Kupuna (Love for the Elders) (Dancing Cat) Various Artists, Ki Ho'alu Christmas (Dancing Cat)

solo outings:
John McEuen:
String Wizards ♪♪♪ (Vanguard, 1991)
String Wizards II ♪♪♪½ (Vanguard, 1994)
Acoustic Traveller ♪♪♪♪½ (Vanguard, 1996)
String Wizard's Picks ♪♪♪ (Vanguard Enhanced CD, 1997)
Wild Jimbos:
Wild Jimbos ♪♪♪½ (MCA, 1991)
Wild Jimbos II ♪♪ (Resounding Records, 1993)

influences:
◀◀ Carter Family, Weavers, Buddy Holly, Jim Kweskin Jug Band, Byrds ▶▶ Rodney Crowell, Rosanne Cash, Foster & Lloyd, Travis Tritt, Hank Williams Jr., Michelle Shocked, Uncle Tupelo, Continental Drifters

Gil Asakawa

No Strings Attached

Formed June 1978, in Blacksburg, VA.

Pete Hastings, guitar, harmonica (1978–present); Bob Thomas, bass, bass clarinet, bass saxophone (1984–present); Wes Chappell, hammer dulcimer, mandolin, mandola, guitar, pennywhistle, percussion (1978–present); Randy Marchany, hammer dulcimer, synthesizer, piano, percussion (1980–present), Suzy Gorsline (1980–87), Rytas Vilgalys (1980–83), Rusty May (1980–84).

An award-winning quartet based in Roanoke/Blacksburg, Virginia, No Strings Attached actually features hundreds of strings playing music described as "eclectic, jazz on acoustic instruments and world beat." Much like Clark Kent appears ordinary for the most part, only to become Superman after visiting a convenient phone booth, No Strings is superficially a traditional string band focusing on instrumental arrangements, but they consistently stretch the boundaries of string music beyond traditional concepts. The Washington Post accurately described them as "one of the more adventurous string ensembles today." While their recordings feature traditional acoustic music, they also incorporate material by Dave Brubeck, Thelonious Monk, Sonny Rollins, the Chieftains, and Bill Spence, as well as their own originals. The eclectic brand of music they play and their exciting stage personae—think Cirque du Soleil and you're close—has allowed them to open for such artists as Mary Wilson and the Supremes, Béla Fleck and the Flecktones, Doc Watson, Turtle Island String Quartet, John Hartford, and John McCutcheon. They have played in European venues such as FolkClub Zuriche (Switzerland) and in U.S. venues ranging from the Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts and CBS TV's Morning News program to major festivals such as the Pacific Rim International Music Festival in Los Angeles, California. On stage, they typically dance the tango with their instruments, parody old rock and roll bands, clog while playing old-time tunes, and sometimes use the slinky (yes, the old toy) as a percussion instrument. The band members don't cite strong folk music influences. Bassist Bob Thomas comes from the jazz, rock, and bluegrass worlds and is one of the vocalists in the group. He takes his role as "bassist" to heart, playing acoustic bass, bass clarinet, and bass saxophone, with the goal of "owning a bass instrument from every instrument family." Wes Chappell is the other vocalist and the multi-instrumentalist of the group. His background is rock and roll, but he plays in a variety of styles. Harmonica player Pete Hastings has become well known for his virtuosity on the chromatic and diatonic harmonicas, having studied under harmonica master Howard Levy for a number of years. Hastings also doubles as the group's guitarist. Randy Marchany, who plays the hammer dulcimer and keyboards, was trained as a classical pianist. So, given their varied backgrounds, perhaps the band's selection of material isn't all that unusual. This variety of styles is one of the cornerstones of their appeal.

what to buy: Bellinzona ♪♪♪♪ (Enessay Music, 1996, prod. No Strings Attached, Bill McElroy) is the group's most recent recording featuring material of David Grisman, Antonio Jobim, Django Reinhardt, Randy Marchany, and several traditional pieces. It is chock full of energy, neat rhythms, and dynamic variations. Hasting's incredible harmonica is featured on a medley of two Irish tunes "Langstrom's Pony" and "Maid at the Spinning Wheel." Chappell's mandolin and Marchany's hammer dulcimer trade exciting leads on Grisman's "Learned Pigs & Fireproof Women." Of course, they say "you know we had to do a song with a title like that!" The group's humor is evident in their liner notes, and outrageous song titles are only part of their appeal. Take a listen to Hastings's excellent bass playing on "Manha du Carnaval," a song from the movie Black Orpheus, as he takes a turn with the lead. This recording is available from the Record Depot (1-800-277-5355).

what to buy next: Three of the six albums the group recorded for Turquoise Records are still available. All three were nominated for INDIE awards and Take Five ♪♪♪½ (Turquoise, 1988, prod. Pat Martin, Bill McElroy) was a National Association of Independent Record Distributors award winner. Blue Roses ♪♪♪½ (Turquoise, 1992, prod. No Strings Attached, Bill McElroy) and Coffee at Midnight ♪♪♪ (Turquoise, 1991, prod. No Strings Attached, Bill McElroy) are both excellent efforts and it is difficult to choose among the three.

worth searching for: The remaining trio of releases the group did for Turquoise are harder to find. Isles of Langerhans ♪♪♪ (Turquoise, 1984, prod. Enessay Music), Traditional Music of the Future ♪♪♪ (Turquoise, 1985, prod. Enessay Music), and Dulcimer Dimensions ♪♪♪ (Turquoise, 1986, prod. No Strings Attached, Pat Martin) are all are in limbo at this point. They aren't available from the label or from the band, which has been in "negotiating standoff" with the label for over a year. Hopefully, their differences will be resolved and we can all get another chance to hear these earlier recordings.

influences:

◀◀ Trapezoid, Bill Spence, Walt Michael, Malcolm Dalglish, John McCutcheon

Steve Schneider

Heidi Cerrigione and Neal Walters

Norman & Kolodner

See: Helicon, Chris Norman

Chris Norman

Born August 5, 1963, in Halifax, Nova Scotia, Canada.

Chris Norman spent his earliest years in Nova Scotia, where he acquired a taste for the Celtic-flavored music of Cape Breton, but he soon moved to the United States, where he studied orchestral flute at the Indiana University School of Music and the Peabody Conservatory of Music. Even when he turned from the metal flute to the Celtic wooden flute of his childhood, he didn't abandon his classical background entirely. He continues to play with the Baltimore Consort, one of America's leading early-music ensembles, and seeks out opportunities to play with orchestras whenever possible. But his primary pursuit has been the chamber-folk hybrid sound pioneered by the Chieftains. Norman formed a duo with Baltimore's Ken Kolodner and then a trio called Helicon, with Kolodner and guitarist Robin Bullock. He became the flute soloist in Skyedance, the Celtic chamber-folk group led by fiddler Alasdair Fraser. Norman founded and continues to direct the annual Boxwood summer school for the wooden flute in the mountains of Wyoming. In the midst of all this other activity, he still has found time to pursue a very active solo career.

what to buy: The best introduction to Norman's work is Beauty of the North ♪♪♪♪½ (Dorian, 1994, prod. Ronn McFarlane, Chris Norman). Subtitled "Traditional Favorites from Quebec and Maritime Canada," the recording returns the flutist to the fetching Celtic tunes of his childhood, played with a grace and cleanliness of line that owes as much to the early-music branch of classical music as it does to folk dances. Norman's elegant flute work is nicely framed by Bullock, Fraser, and Trian accordionist Billy McComiskey. The classical influence is even more pronounced on Highlands ♪♪♪♪½ (Dorian, 1997, prod. David H. Walters), which finds Norman collaborating with the Camerata Bariloche, a chamber orchestra from Buenos Aires. Norman commissioned composer Brian Packham to use the traditional melodies of Maritime Canada as the basis for a three-movement "Cape Breton Concerto" for flute and chamber orchestra. Unlike most orchestrations of traditional folk tunes, this one manages to maintain the bouncy lilt of the original sources, even as it greatly expands their harmonic scope. Norman and the Camerata Bariloche, directed by Fernando Hasaj, pull off similar tricks on Packham's arrangement of Hamilton Harty's 1925 tone poem, "In Ireland," and Edward McGuire's arrangement of "The Gaelic Flute—Traditional Gaelic Love Songs of the Sea." Kolodner and Bullock reunite with Norman on the climactic "South American Suite," a collection of traditional Andean melodies also arranged by Packham.

what to buy next: The title of Norman's first solo album, Man with the Wooden Flute ♪♪♪ (Dorian, 1992, prod. Ronn McFarlane), is a take-off on James Galway's tag line as the "Man with the Golden Flute." Like Galway, Norman balances an interest in both classical music and Celtic folk music, even if the scale is tilted differently. The album is subtitled "Traditional Flute Music of the British Isles, America, Quebec, and Cape Breton," and Norman is joined by Metamora fiddler Pete Sutherland, Helicon guitarist Bullock, and Ann Marie Morgan on viola da gamba. Norman joins soprano vocalist Custer LaRue, his bandmate in the Baltimore Consort, for the duo album, Lullaby Journey ♪♪♪½ (Dorian, 1996, prod. Douglas Brown, Chris Norman, Custer LaRue). LaRue is a spellbinding singer, and the harmonies on these traditional children's lullabies from around the world will put a listener of any age at ease.

worth searching for: Before they formed Helicon, Kolodner and Norman released a duo album called Daybreak ♪♪♪ (Jeb Records, 1985, prod. Ken Kolodner, Chris Norman). They were still trying to get a handle on their musical personalities, but the interplay between Norman's classical training and Kolodner's self-taught Appalachiana, between Norman's fluttering flute and Kolodner's piercing hammer dulcimer, pointed toward the distinguished careers to come. In addition to the Celtic and Appalachian tunes, the album included two Mozart pieces, which boasted a folksy warmth, even as the folk tunes benefited from a classical discipline.

influences:

Matt Molloy, James Galway

Linda Hickman, Seamus Egan

see also: Helicon, Baltimore Consort

Geoffrey Himes

Northampton Harmony

See: Cordelia's Dad

Northern Lights

Formed as How Banks Fail, 1975, in Boston, MA.

Taylor Armerding, mandolin, vocals; Bill Henry, guitar, vocals; Mike Kropp, banjo; Jake Armerding, fiddle; Chris Miles, bass, vocals. Former members include Bob Emery, banjo; Alison Brown, banjo; Oz Barron, bass; Jeff Horton, bass.

During the past two decades, Northern Lights' distinctive fusion of folk music and bluegrass has paid dividends consistently. The recipient of a Boston Music Award as "Outstanding Country Act of 1991," the band has propelled itself to the top of contemporary bluegrass. In addition to their own concerts, Northern Lights has provided instrumental accompaniment and vocal harmonies for Peter Rowan, Vassar Clements, and Jonathan Edwards. Northern Lights was initially conceived by banjo player Bob Emery and mandolinist Taylor Armerding. Although they released a self-titled album in 1976, the first version of the band dissolved the following year with Emery and Armerding going on to form a similar band, String Fever, in 1981. The second edition of Northern Lights came together in late 1982 when banjo wiz Alison Brown, who was then a sophomore at Harvard University, phoned Armerding. The band, which expanded to include acoustic guitar virtuoso Bill Henry, released its second album, Before the Fire, in 1984. When Brown graduated, in mid-1984, and moved back to California, she was replaced by Earl Scruggs–influenced banjo player Mike Kropp. The heyday of Northern Lights began in 1986 when the group finished third in a "best new Bluegrass band" contest sponsored by Kentucky Fried Chicken. They released their third album, On the Edge, as a self-produced cassette. The biggest change in the band's evolution has come with the addition of Armerding's teenage son Jake on fiddle. Although their 1990 album, Take You to the Sky, featured guest fiddlers Alison Krauss and Matt Glaser and their 1992 collection, Can't Buy Your Way, featured Stuart Duncan, Vassar Clements, and Matt Glaser, the young Armerding has played fiddle for the group since he made his recording debut on the album Wrong Highway Blues in 1994. He wrote and sang lead on "Sing to You" and played mandolin on "Ariel's Hornpipe" on the 1996 album, Living in the City. In 1996 Chris Miles, a contemporary Christian rock bassist, joined the group.

what to buy: Take You to the Sky ♪♪♪ (Flying Fish, 1990, prod. Northern Lights, Bil VornDick) reflects the wide range of Northern Lights' approach to the music of the hill country. While their instrumentation remains firmly set in the mandolin-banjo-guitar-fiddle tradition, the band applies their unique stamp to songs by Bill Staines, Little Feat, Jimmy Martin, John Prine, and Jimmie Rodgers and demonstrate their songwriting skills with four original tunes. Henry's "Early Morning Riser" and Kropp's "April Snow" are imaginative instrumentals, while Armerding's "Northern Rail" is an up-tempo ode to railroading and his anthemic "Winterhawk," featuring harmony vocals by Peter Rowan, has become the theme song of the annual Winterhawk bluegrass festival. The most ambitious tune on the album is a medley of Henry's adaptation of J.S. Bach's "Bouree" and his own "Borealis Blues."

what to buy next: Living in the City ♪♪♪ (Red House, 1996, prod. Northern Lights, Mark Wessell) spotlights the talents of Taylor Armerding's teenage son, Jake. In addition to his expressive fiddle playing, the young Armerding shows his talents as a songwriter on two original tunes. He sings lead vocals on "Sing to You" and plays second mandolin on the instrumental "Ariel's Hornpipe."

the rest:
Northern Lights ♪♪ (Revonah, 1976)
Before the Fire ♪♪ (Revonah, 1984)
On the Edge ♪♪♪ (self-produced cassette, 1987)
Can't Buy Your Way ♪♪♪ (Flying Fish, 1992)
Wrong Highway Blues ♪♪♪ (Flying Fish, 1994)
Vanishing Borders ♪♪ (Gourd, 1994)
Music of Contemplation for a New Age (Finlandia, 1995)

influences:
◀◀ Bill Monroe, Seldom Scene, Peter Rowan, Hot Rize ▶▶ Alison Brown, Alison Krauss, Chesapeake

Craig Harris

Billy Novick

Born October 12, 1951, in Mineola, NY.

The ragtime, stride, and swing of early twentieth-century jazz are resurrected through the melodic clarinet, saxophone, and pennywhistle playing of Billy Novick. Alternating between a traditionally jazz-rooted band, the New Black Eagle Jazz Band, and a duo that he shares with guitarist Guy Van Duser, Novick brings an excitement and spirit to his treatment of the musical past. A veteran of David Bromberg's band, Novick toured with Leon Redbone and Jonathan Edwards during the mid-1970s. He met Van Duser, a former accompanist of Bill Staines, in 1976 while performing the music for a modern dance production. After Novick performed on Van Duser's debut album, Finger-Style Guitar Solos, in 1977, the two musicians agreed to formally pool their resources. Over the next decade, the duo were regulars of the East Coast coffeehouse scene and recorded several albums together. Novick and Van Duser also occasionally performed, along with Bill Staines, Mason Daring, and Jeannie Stahl, in the Passim All-Stars. Although he joined the New Black Eagle Jazz Band in 1986 and also performs and records with his own band, Shades of Swing, Novick has continued to periodically renew his partnership with Van Duser. He served as musical director and arranger for Dave Van Ronk's jug band treatment of "Peter and the Wolf" in 1991.

what to buy: Recorded during two 1985 performances at the Coffeehouse Extempore in Minneapolis, Minnesota, These n' That n' Those ♪♪♪♪ (Rounder, 1986, prod. Guy Van Duser, Billy Novick) documents the enthusiasm and fun of the duo's concerts. With Van Duser displaying a virtuoso mastery of the six-string acoustic guitar, Novick crafts melodies on his woodwinds and reeds. Although none of the tunes are originals, the duo adapt compositions by Fats Waller ("I've Got a Feeling I'm Falling"), Duke Ellington ("Caravan"), Jelly Roll Morton ("Buddy Bolden's Blues"), Sidney Bechet ("Georgia Cabin"), and John Philip Sousa ("Semper Fidelis") to their unique acoustic approach.

what to buy next: Raisin' the Rent ♪♪♪♪ (Rounder, 1982, prod. Guy Van Duser, Billy Novick) was the duo's first truly successful collaboration. Accompanied by acoustic bass player Brian Torff and drummer Bob Jackson, Novick and Van Duser show their versatility with songs ranging from Fred Koehler's "Happy as the Day Is Long" and Duke Ellington's "Jubilee Stomp" to DeSilva-Brown-Henderson's musical theater classic, "You're the Cream in My Coffee."

what to avoid: While Novick has greatly expanded the musical vocabulary of the pennywhistle, the novelty wears thin on The New Pennywhistle Album ♪♪ (Green Linnet, 1978, prod. Billy Novick, Guy Van Duser).

the rest:

(With Guy Van Duser) Get Yourself a New Broom. . . . ♪♪♪ (Rounder, 1979)
(With Guy Van Duser) Exactly like Us ♪♪½ (Rounder, 1989)
Swing So Softly ♪♪½ (Daring, 1992)
(With Guy Van Duser) Guy and Billy ♪♪♪ (Daring, 1994)
(With Shades of Swing) Remembering You ♪♪½ (Daring, 1994)
(With Guy Van Duser) Every Little Moment ♪♪½ (Daring, 1996) (With Herb Pomeroy) This Is Always ♪♪½ (Daring, 1996)

influences:

◀◀ Benny Goodman, Jelly Roll Morton, Duke Ellington, Sidney Bechet

▶▶ New Black Eagle Jazz Band, Dave Van Ronk, David Bromberg see also: Guy Van Duser

Craig Harris

The Nudes

Formed January 1992 in New York, NY.

Walter Parks, guitar, bass, vocals; Stephanie Winters, cello, vocals.

The Nudes were formed when Walter Parks, a Florida-born jazz guitarist, placed an ad in the Village Voice for a musical partner; his ad was answered by Stephanie Winters, a classically trained cellist. The two create jazz-tinged folk songs with that stylish, fluid sound indigenous to New York City–based folk. Winters pioneered the use of cello in a singer-songwriter setting before MTV Unplugged nearly turned it into a cliché. Parks writes and arranges most of the group's songs (although a version of "Norwegian Wood" appears on Velvet Sofa). The Nudes are more than the sum of their parts. The duo's enthusiasm elevates sometimes pedestrian songs into performances worth hearing.

what's available: The Nudes ♪♪♪½ (Nudes, 1993, prod. Walter Parks, Stephanie Winters) has a pleasant, low-key jazz-folk sound. The rock radio–friendly Velvet Sofa ♪♪♪½ (Acoustic America, 1996, prod. Walter Parks, Stephanie Winters) improves slightly on its predecessor, particularly in terms of songwriting. The Beatles cover is disappointing, except for some enticing guitar licks by Parks.

influences:

◀◀ Gordon Lightfoot, Simon & Garfunkel

▶▶ Kennedys

Pamela Murray Winters

Scott Nygaard

Born July 30, 1955, in Champaign/Urbana, IL.

After serving his musical apprenticeship in the Pacific Northwest playing in jazz, Celtic, and old-time country bands, guitarist Scott Nygaard stepped into the national spotlight when he joined Laurie Lewis and Grant Street in 1989. Nygaard made his recording debut on that band's Singing My Troubles Away and made his solo debut shortly after that. One of the most versatile and tasteful guitarists on the acoustic music circuit, Nygaard has played since 1992 with acclaimed singer-songwriter Tim O'Brien, touring and recording as one of the O'Boys. He has also done extensive session work, guesting on albums by such artists as Jerry Douglas, Tim and Mollie O'Brien, Linda Waterfall, John Reischman, Tony Furtado, and Sally Van Meter.

what's available: No Hurry ♪♪♪ (Rounder, 1990, prod. Laurie Lewis, Scott Nygaard) illustrates Nygaard's eclecticism, as the all-instrumental album ranges from the "Irish calypso" of "Mary and the Soldier" to the jazz original "It Happened," with stops along the way for old-time music ("Red Apple Rag" and "Fiddle Tune Medley") and a nod to Clarence White on "Bury Me beneath the Willow." Dreamer's Waltz ♪♪♪½ (Rounder, 1996, prod. Scott Nygaard), as diverse as its predecessor but a bit more cohesive, showcases Nygaard (and guests like Tim O'Brien, Jerry Douglas, and Dirk Powell) on a program of mostly Nygaard originals. Standout cuts include "Crawfeet," "The Lost Word," "Beaten to the Puncheon," and the Brazilian choro-influenced "Fog and Flame."

influences:

⏪ Clarence White, Russ Barenberg

⏩ Peter McLaughlin, Chris Thile

Jon Hartley Fox

The Nylons

Formed in 1979, in Toronto, Canada

Paul Cooper (1979–90); Marc Connors (1979–91); Micah Barnes (1991–94); Billy Newton-Davis (1991–94); Claude Morrison, tenor vocals; Arnold Robinson, bass vocals; Garth Mosbaugh, tenor vocals; (1994–present); Gavin Hope, baritone vocals, (1994–present).

Billboard magazine's Book of American Singing Groups calls the Nylons "one of the few groups to bring dominant vocal harmony to the American charts in the 1980s." Speaking of their hit "Na Na Hey Hey (Kiss Him Goodbye)," Billboard said, "with an a cappella intro at varying tempos, the Nylons launched into three minutes and 23 seconds of possibly the most exciting power-packed harmony and percussion of any record in the '80s." The Nylons were formed in 1979 when Paul Cooper, Marc Conners, and Claude Morrison, three actors from the Toronto theater scene, met up with Arnold Robinson, a native of Wilmington, North Carolina who had been touring with the Sonny Turner Platters. Initially the four started vocalizing at parties, combining their love of classic doo wop with more contemporary material. They were discovered by a local nightclub owner who told them to put together a name and some solid material and they could have a regular spot at his club. They began working at the local dinner club to rave reviews that eventually led to a recording contract with Attic Records. Over the next seven years, the Nylons went on to record six albums for Attic, selling over 2,000,000 records. They are known for their dynamic live performances; on one occasion, when the sound system failed, they were able to sing effectively to 15,000 hushed fans who broke into a roaring ovation at the conclusion of their number. After almost a decade of success, Cooper, the group's most prolific songwriter, got tired of touring and decided to leave. He was replaced by Micah Barnes. In 1991 Marc Connors died. He had been the driving force behind the group's onstage persona, which featured multiple costume changes, dramatic stage sets, and razor-sharp choreography. Less than a month later, the Nylons were back on stage with new member Billy Newton-Davis. They signed a new record deal with Los Angeles–based Scotti Bros. Records and went after a younger audience, experimenting with rap, funk, and rhythm and blues songs. In 1994 Barnes and Newton-Davis returned to solo careers and were replaced by Garth Mosbaugh, a cast member from the Toronto productions of Miss Saigon and Les Miserables, and Gavin Hope, who had worked with the a cappella group the Earthtones.

what to buy: Fabric of Life ♪♪♪♪ (Primarily A Capella Records, 1997, prod. Ian Prince, Garth Mosbaugh) features some of the best grooves of their career, including "I Can't Go for That" and "Monkey," as well as an extraordinary rhythm and blues version of the Beatles' "Let It Be." One of the most heralded vocal groups in the world, the Nylons continue to provide dazzling harmonies and smooth, sophisticated arrangements.

what to buy next: Run for Cover ♪♪♪½ (Attic Productions, 1994, prod. Peter Mann) marked a return to the Nylons' roots—a capella work with only the bare bones of rhythm tracks—and features renditions of the Beatles' "Lady Madonna" and the Beach Boys' "God Only Knows." Perfect Fit ♪♪♪ (Attic Productions, 1997, prod. various) is a compilation of 14 tunes originally released in the 1980s.

the rest:

The Nylons ♪♪♪ (Attic Records, 1982)
One Size Fits All ♪♪♪ (Attic Records, 1982)
Seamless ♪♪♪ (Attic Records, 1984)
Happy Together ♪♪♪ (Attic Records, 1987)
Rockapella ♪♪♪ (Attic Records, 1989)
4 on the Floor ♪♪♪ (Attic Records, 1991)
Live to Love ♪♪♪ (BMG/Scotti Bros, 1992)
The Best of the Nylons ♪♪♪ (BMG/Windham Hill, 1993)
Harmony ♪♪♪ (BMG/Scotti Bros, 1994/1997)
Because ♪♪♪ (BMG Scotti Bros, 1994)
The Nylons ♪♪♪ (BMG/Windham Hill, 1995) Hits of the '60s A Capella Style ♪♪♪½ (BMG/Scotti Bros, 1997)

influences:

⏪ Chiffons, Beatles, Shirelles

⏩ Boyz II Men, Take 6

Neal Walters

Laura Nyro

Born Laura Nigro, October 18, 1947, in the Bronx, NY. Died of cancer, April 8, 1997.

One of the best and brightest songwriters of the late '60s, Nyro is essential listening for anyone seeking out the roots of rock's singer-songwriter movement. Nyro was a mere 18 years old when she recorded her first album, More Than a New Discovery, a remarkable debut that showcased her prodigious musical talent and gutsy, swooping voice. Throughout a 30-year career, Nyro has written and released a sterling catalog of angst-bearing, confessional music inflected with R&B, soul, and gospel touches. While she has had only one recording reach the Top 100 (her cover of the Drifters' "Up on the Roof" in 1970), her own songs have been major hits for artists such as Barbra Streisand ("Stoney End"), the 5th Dimension ("Wedding Bell Blues"), Blood, Sweat & Tears ("And When I Die"), and Three Dog Night ("Eli's Coming"). With her 1971 album Gonna Take a Miracle, Nyro became one of the first rock-era songwriters to release an album of cover material in tribute to past mentors.

what to buy: Basically a re-release of Nyro's 1966 debut album, The First Songs ♪♪♪♪♪ (Columbia, 1973, prod. Milton Okun) is a remarkable debut from an 18-year-old woman whose wisdom, voice, and talent belie her years. Featuring numerous songs that later became hits for other artists ("Wedding Bell Blues," "And When I Die," "Flim Flam Man," and "Stoney End"), the album spins out a continuous stream of first-class, introspective music. Another bona fide classic, New York Tendaberry ♪♪♪♪♪ (Columbia, 1969, prod. Laura Nyro, Roy Halee) is the culmination of the style Nyro began developing on her debut, a dramatic noir journey through love and its loss. Supporting her expressive vocal work with piano and delicate instrumental accompaniment, she explores a vast spectrum of human emotions with music that memorably touches the core of expression.

what to buy next: Eli & the 13th Confession ♪♪♪♪ (Sony, 1968, prod. Charlie Calello, Laura Nyro) is a mini-progression from The First Songs. Nyro is more soulful and more introspective, presenting a stellar collection of memorable songs that range from R&B ("Stoned Soul Picnic") to gospel ("Poverty Train") and powerful ballads ("Lonely Women"). Nyro changed the pace on her fourth album, Gonna Take a Miracle ♪♪♪♪ (Sony, 1971, prod. Leon Gamble, Kenny Huff), teaming with soul-funk group Labelle for joyful and inspired readings of 1960s R&B hits such as "Jimmy Mack," "Spanish Harlem," and "Nowhere to Run."

what to avoid: Although Nyro's work can never be considered weak, Mother's Spiritual ♪♪ (Line, 1984, prod. Laura Nyro) is not among her best works. The urgent passion of her earlier music is replaced here by a cooler, more politically attuned sensibility that's respectable but not compelling.

the rest:

Smile ♪♪♪ (Sony, 1976)
Live at the Bottom Line ♪♪♪ (Cypress, 1990)
Walk the Dog & Light the Light ♪♪♪ (Columbia, 1993) Stoned Soul Picnic: Best Of . . . ♪♪♪ (Sony, 1997)

worth searching for: At the height of Nyro's comeback during the late '70s, Columbia Records planned a double LP of Nyro performing her greatest hits in concert with an all-star lineup. By the time the album was released as Season of Lights ♪♪♪♪ (Columbia, 1977), it had been trimmed back to a single live LP featuring 10 songs that had been significantly rearranged from their studio versions. The two-album set can be found on bootleg.

influences:

◀◀ Joan Baez, Leonard Cohen, Bob Dylan, Labelle, Carole King, Judy Collins, Joni Mitchell, Aretha Franklin

▶▶ Todd Rundgren, Barbra Streisand, Carole King, Fifth Dimension, Blood, Sweat & Tears, Randy Newman, Rickie Lee Jones, Carly Simon, Chaka Kahn, Des'ree, Alanis Morissette

Christopher Scapelliti

Tim O'Brien /Tim & Mollie O'Brien

Born March 16, 1954 in Wheeling, WV.

Tim O'Brien was the leader of the traditional bluegrass band Hot Rize (and their humorous, more countrified alter-egos Red Knuckles and the Trailblazers) from 1978 to 1992. He later went on to record with guitarist Scott Nygaard and bassist Mark Schatz as Tim O'Brien and the O'Boys, and through the years with sister Mollie, whose soulful voice found a perfect harmony with her brother's clear-as-a-bell tenor. The pair have both moved in bluegrass and folk circles for years, involving themselves in their own solo and duet recordings, as well as those of other artists, whether in a writing or singing capacity. Their blended family harmony is a precious thing, and their albums together are a rare, enjoyable treat.

what to buy: Oh Boy! O'Boy ♪♪♪♪½ (Sugar Hill, 1993, prod. Jerry Douglas), recorded with the O'Boys, is a stellar album. Mary Chapin Carpenter lends subtle harmonies to the aching and tender "Time to Learn." There's also a foreshadowing of Tim's Dylan full album tribute with the inclusion of "When I Paint My Masterpiece."

what to buy next: Tim and Mollie's Away out on the Mountain ♪♪♪♪ (Sugar Hill, 1994, prod. Tim O'Brien) is the finest of their duet CDs. Its standouts include two Gillian Welch covers, "Wichita" and "Orphan Girl."

the rest:
Hard Year Blues ♪♪♪♪ (Flying Fish, 1984)
(With Mollie O'Brien) Take Me Back ♪♪♪♪ (Sugar Hill, 1988)
Odd Man In ♪♪♪♪ (Sugar Hill, 1991)
Remember Me ♪♪♪♪ (Sugar Hill, 1993)
Rock in My Shoe ♪♪♪♪½ (Sugar Hill, 1995)
Red on Blonde ♪♪♪♪½ (Sugar Hill, 1996)
When No One's Around ♪♪♪♪ (Sugar Hill, 1997)

solo outings:
Mollie O'Brien:
Tell It True ♪♪♪½ (Sugar Hill, 1996)

influences:
Hot Rize, New Grass Revival John Gorka, Maura O'Connell

see also: Hot Rize

Stephen L. Betts

Phil Ochs

Born December 19, 1940, in El Paso, TX. Died April 9, 1976, Far Rockaway, NY.

Phil Ochs remains an enigma more than two decades after his death. He loved John Wayne flicks, country music, and rock and roll, but became a folk singer. He went to military school, but became a radical. He loved John F. Kennedy, but despised the social order Kennedy represented. He wanted fame and fortune, but chose a path that could never give it to him. As a college journalist at Ohio State University, Ochs began to write regularly. Soon a friendship with a folk-music enthusiast led him to learn to play guitar and write songs, all infused with his growing interest in left-wing politics. In 1962, with just months to go before graduating, he left school for Greenwich Village. There, he set out to make his mark on the scene that was heady with a "folk music boom." Ochs recorded a number of songs included on folk compilations before he was signed to Elektra Records in 1963. He recorded three albums dominated by protest songs for that label, all the while pulling for Bob Dylan to become a major rock star. Ochs even defended Dylan's stylistic jumps against attacks by outraged folk fans. Dylan insulted Ochs as being nothing but a journalist, but there are wells of emotion and insight in Ochs's music that belie that. Ochs suffered from depression that may have been passed down genetically from his dad, and that probably factored into his inability to turn the corner toward greater popularity. Certainly, "There but for Fortune" and "Changes" showed he was capable of going there. When Ochs moved to A&M records in 1967, his lyrical direction was more poetic and his musical direction orchestral. Part of this was the flavor of the day, but Ochs had always done more than point fingers. For instance, he set Edgar Allen Poe's "The Bells" and Alfred Noyes's "The Highway Man" to music on his first two albums, and "There but for Fortune," with its empathy and neutral politics, also came from the protest days. He went through one other major stylistic change, trying to work a down-home, Elvis Presley approach in 1970. In theory, this finally would bring Ochs in touch with the real people that his protest songs had been about. In practice, it alienated his old folk audience and drew almost no one outside that small circle. It also ended his recording career. Ochs's version of "The Highway Man" may actually be one of the most telling in his catalog. Obviously, a tale of rebellious people should appeal to a protest singer. Perhaps more important is that it's about a romantic who throws his life away in a burst of passion. In his last days, at the end of a five-year downward spiral, with a voice permanently damaged by a mugging in Africa, without a recording contract, and with no firm direction for his muse, Ochs must have felt defeated. Whether in final protest or in a burst of passion, he hung himself on April 9, 1976.

what to buy: Sadly, most of the albums Ochs released in his lifetime are out of print. Of the "protest" albums available, I Ain't Marching Anymore ♪♪♪♪½ (Elektra, 1965/Hannibal, 1995, prod. Jac Holzman) offers a glimpse of Ochs hitting his stride. And what a stride! Ochs crafted his greatest anthem, "I Ain't Marching Anymore," and his best lampoon, "Draft Dodger Rag." (Note too, that despite the pacifism of the former, he blasts the draft dodger's lack of moral rectitude in the latter.) The non-protest songs—"That Was the President," "The Highway Man," "Hills of West Virginia," and "The Men behind the Guns"—are finely sensitive, and Ochs's voice becomes unusually tender at times. There's nothing of politics when he sings of JFK, "a man so full of life, even death was caught off guard." In Concert ♪♪♪♪♪ (Elektra, 1966/Rhino, 1995, prod. Mark Abramson, Jac Holzman) was not a collection of favorites from the past but Ochs's latest pack of tunes when it was released. The set list was strong, starting out with the cocksure "I'm Going to Say It Now" and ending with the melancholy "When I'm Gone." In between those bookends are "There but for Fortune," "Changes," and "Love Me, I'm a Liberal." Farewells & Fantasies ♪♪♪♪♪ (Elektra Traditions/Rhino, 1997, comp. prod. Gary Stewart, Michael Ochs, Megan Lee Ochs), a three-CD set, gathers work from his entire major-label career. Every standout tune is here (in fact, all of In Concert is here), as well as the long-out-of-print electric version of "I Ain't Marching Anymore" and some previously unissued cuts. More importantly, the set captures the arc of his career—the way his initial optimism and fire gave way to intimations of despair.

what to buy next: All the News That's Fit to Sing ♪♪♪½ (Elektra, 1964/Hannibal, 1994, prod. Jac Holzman) finds Ochs just shy of the standard he soon would set for himself. Nonetheless it's a good album with evergreen songs such as "One More Parade," "The Bells," and "Bound for Glory" balancing out the more timely (and somewhat more disposable) songs such as "Talking Vietnam" and "Talking Cuban Crisis." There but for Fortune ♪♪♪♪ (Elektra, 1989, comp. prod. Michael Ochs) compiles Ochs's first three albums, but unless your budget is tight, it's superseded by Farewells & Fantasies. With some important exceptions, the same might be said of The War Is Over: The Best of Phil Ochs ♪♪♪♪ (A&M, 1988, prod. Jeffrey Gold, Geoffrey Schulman), which compiles songs from the A&M albums. It also includes two non-album rarities: "Kansas City Bomber," Ochs's rejected attempt to write a theme for the Raquel Welch movie, and a live version of "I Ain't Marching Anymore" from the 1968 Toronto Peace Festival. A Toast to Those Who Are Gone ♪♪♪½ (Rhino, 1986, prod. Michael Ochs) allows listeners to peer into the head of the budding protest writer. It's a collection of demos circa 1964 that are almost as strong as the material he officially released on Elektra.

the rest:

The Broadside Tapes, Volume I ♪♪♪ (Smithsonian/Folkways, 1963)
There and Now: Live in Vancouver ♪♪♪½ (Rhino, 1991)
Live at Newport ♪♪♪½ (Vanguard, 1996)
Fairwells & Fantasies N/A (Rhino, 1998)

worth searching for: Pleasures of the Harbor ♪♪♪♪½ (A&M, 1967, prod. Larry Marks), Tape from California ♪♪♪½ (A&M, 1968, prod. Larry Marks), and Rehearsals for Retirement ♪♪♪♪½ (A&M, 1969, prod. Larry Marks) are all worth a search for the original vinyl. Greatest Hits ♪♪♪ (A&M, 1970/Edsel, 1993, prod. Van Dyke Parks), the album on which Ochs tried to channel a still-living Elvis, is available as a CD on the import label Edsel. Another must is Gunfight at Carnegie Hall ♪♪♪♪ (A&M Canada, 1974, prod. Phil Ochs), the live album, recorded in 1970, that's a startlingly frank chronicle of how his audience reacted to Ochs in gold lame.

influences:

◀◀ Woody Guthrie, Bob Gibson, Elvis Presley

▶▶ Billy Bragg, John Wesley Harding

Salvatore Caputo

Maura O'Connell

Born September 16, 1958, in Ennis, Co. Clare, Ireland.

Blessed with a rich, powerful voice and a talent for finding excellent songs and rendering them with heartfelt poignancy, Maura O'Connell is one of country music's finest singers, though her insistence on exploring the full range of country music's possibilities has meant she has often been overlooked within the narrowest center of the Nashville mainstream. O'Connell first rose to prominence with the Irish band De Danann, recording on its album Star Spangled Molly, and became a celebrity in her home country before moving to Nashville in 1987 and falling in with the likes of New Grass Revival and other boundary-pushing pickers within the city's acoustic music scene. After a debut album on Rounder, O'Connell was picked up by Warner Bros. for three albums before settling at Rykodisc/Hannibal.

what to buy: Helpless Heart ♪♪♪½ (Warner Bros., 1989, prod. Béla Fleck) remains O'Connell's most endearing effort; Paul Brady's "Helpless Heart" became a signature song of sorts for her, while versions of Nanci Griffith's "Trouble in the Fields" and Karla Bonoff's "Isn't It Always Love" gave the originals a run for their money. Gerry O'Beirne's stunningly beautiful "Western Highway" is the best single song she's done to date. A Real Life Story ♪♪♪½ (Warner Bros., 1990, prod. Greg Penny) featured an intriguing version of Tom Waits's "Broken Bicycles" as well as first-rate selections by John Hiatt, Shawn Colvin, and Hugh Prestwood.

what to buy next: Blue Is the Colour of Hope ♪♪♪ (Warner Bros., 1992, prod. Jerry Douglas) is highlighted by the slowly burning "Blue Train" and also features songs written by Mary Chapin Carpenter and the team of Paul Carrack and John Wesley Harding. The standout on Stories ♪♪♪ (Rykodisc/Hannibal, 1995, prod. Jerry Douglas) is a gorgeous version of the Lennon/McCartney staple "If I Fell."

602 mark o'connor

Mark O' Connor (© Jack Vartoogian)

what to avoid: Just in Time ♪♪ (Rounder, 1988, prod. Béla Fleck) didn't live up to O'Connell's potential in terms of either song selection or the quality of her singing.

the rest:
Wandering Home ♪♪♪ (Rykodisc/Hannibal, 1997)

influences:

⏪ Dolores Keane, Linda Ronstadt, New Grass Revival

⏩ Eleanor McEvoy, Niamh Parsons

see also: De Danann

Peter Blackstock

Mark O'Connor

Born August 5, 1961, in Seattle, WA.

Few musicians have done as much to blur the lines between what is perceived as high and low art as has Mark O'Connor. A child prodigy on the fiddle, O'Connor is also master of the mandolin, guitar, and other instruments, and he has used them to play bluegrass, country, jazz, rock, fusion, classical, and all kinds of music in between. For years O'Connor was part of Nashville's A-Team of session players, and his credit can be found on literally hundreds of recordings made during the last couple of decades. As a solo artist he has been responsible for bringing divergent constituencies together in the recording studio and the concert hall, and for breaking down barriers between genres. A noble cause, perhaps, but the results sound great, too.

what to buy: At once a celebration of the Music City's session scene and his declaration of independence from it, The New Nashville Cats ♪♪♪♪ (Warner Bros., 1991, prod. Mark O'Connor, Jim Ed Norman) marked O'Connor's "retirement" from playing sessions in favor of playing his own music. Cats features a stellar cast, including Vince Gill, Steve Wariner, Ricky Skaggs, Béla Fleck, and Marty Stuart, plus lots of other musicians whose names you might not recognize, but whose work you've heard hundreds of times. Heroes ♪♪♪♪ (Warner Bros., 1993, prod. Mark O'Connor) takes O'Connor's genre-busting mission to a higher level, bringing him together with his favorite players from across the musical spectrum, including Jean-Luc Ponty, Bill Monroe, L. Shankar, Pinchas Zuckerman, Stephane Grappelli, Vassar Clements, Johnny Gimble, and others. The music ranges from a playful "Ain't Misbehavin'" (with Grappelli) to a beautiful reading of "Ashokan Farewell" (with Zukerman) to a scorching treatment of Charlie Daniels's "The Devil Came Back to Georgia" (with Daniels, Travis Tritt, Marty Stuart, and Johnny Cash).

what to buy next: For fans willing to dabble a little in classical music, look no further than Appalachia Waltz ♪♪♪♪♪ (Sony Classical, 1996, prod. Edgar Meyer, Mark O'Connor), a triumphant collaboration with world-class cellist Yo Yo Ma and noted composer/bassist Edgar Meyer. The album mixes Celtic and Texas fiddle traditions with classical music in ways that are accessible, yet instructive. O'Connor's title track is intoxicatingly beautiful. If you get past that recording, try The Fiddle Concerto ♪♪♪½ (Warner Bros., 1995, prod. Mark O'Connor). After all, are there two words that bespeak a hybrid of different styles any more than "fiddle" and "concerto"?

what to avoid: The early recording On the Rampage ♪♪ (Rounder, 1979) is a lesser light in a largely stellar catalog.

the rest:
Markology ♪♪♪ (Rounder, 1978)
Soppin' the Gravy ♪♪♪ (Rounder, 1979)
False Dawn ♪♪½ (Rounder, 1982)
Stone from Which the Arch Was Made ♪♪½ (Warner Bros., 1987) Retrospective ♪♪♪½ (Rounder, 1987)
Elysian Forest ♪♪½ (Warner Bros., 1988)
On the Mark ♪♪♪ (Warner Bros., 1989)
The Championship Years ♪♪♪ (Country Music Foundation, 1990) Liberty! Original Soundtrack ♪♪♪½ (Sony Classical)

influences:
◀◀ Benny Thomasson, Vassar Clements, L. Shankar, Johnny Gimble, Stephane Grappelli ▶▶ Rob Hajacos, Chris Thile, Luke & Jenny Anne Bulla, Kenny Kosek

Daniel Durchholz

Martin O'Connor

See: De Danann

Molly O'Day

Born July 9, 1923, in McVeigh, KY. Died December 5, 1987, in Huntington, WV.

Molly O'Day's legend is based on 36 songs recorded for Columbia between 1946 and 1951, when she renounced a successful recording and performing career to devote her life to her faith. With her powerful, evocative, and sincere vocal style, she excelled at sentimental ballads and traditional songs of Appalachia. O'Day was an early interpreter of Hank Williams's work, recorded the most popular version of the classic "Tramp on the Street," and many other old time and gospel standards, not a few of which have entered the bluegrass repertoire as standards, including "The Drunken Driver," "At the First Fall of Snow," "Matthew 24," "Too Late, Too Late," "The Evening Train," "Poor Ellen Smith," and "Teardrops Falling in the Snow." After her last Columbia session in 1951, she vowed never to perform in public outside church again, although she and husband and performing partner Lynn Davis maintained a radio ministry for many years.

what's available: Molly O'Day & the Cumberland Mountain Folks ♪♪♪♪½ (Bear Family, 1992, prod. Art Satherly) contains all 36 songs recorded for Columbia. Definitive.

influences:
◀◀ Lulubelle & Scotty, Lilly May Ledford ▶▶ Hazel Dickens, Laurie Lewis

Randy Pitts

Odetta

Born Odetta Gordon, December 31, 1930, in Birmingham, AL.

Odetta is one of folk music's most influential performers. Since the late 1950s, her soulful vocals and musicologist-like repertoire of folk songs, blues, gospel hymns, and work songs have inspired everyone from Joan Baez and Sweet Honey in the Rock to Tracy Chapman and Whitney Houston. Accompanying herself on the acoustic guitar that she affectionately calls "baby," Odetta has embodied a continuing link to the traditional melodies and spirit of the Afro-American experience. Odetta, who grew up in San Francisco, studied classical piano and operatic singing as a youngster. She turned her focus to folk music shortly after performing as an actress in a touring production of Finian's Rainbow. Performing in Bay Area clubs, she began to attract critical acclaim. Following a year-long engagement at the Tin Angel, she was booked for a two-week stand at the Blue Angel in New York. From the moment she hit the Big Apple, Odetta was embraced by the folk community. Harry Belafonte featured her during his ground-breaking concerts at Carnegie Hall, while Pete Seeger invited her to be a guest performer at his Town Hall shows. For the next two decades, she continued to be one of folk music's best-loved artists and released 19 top-selling recordings. A live album recorded in 1986 in Wisconsin, Movin' It On marked her first release in 12 years.

604 eugene o'donnell

Odetta has appeared in several movies, including The Last Time I Saw Paris, Cinema Holiday, and Sanctuary, as well as in the TV film The Autobiography of Miss Jane Pittman.

what to buy: Recorded during a November, 1986, concert at the Union Theater in Madison, Wisconsin, Movin' On ♪♪♪♪ (Rose Quartz, 1987, prod. Elizabeth Karlin) was Odetta's first album in 12 years. A mixture of traditional folk and blues tunes including "Sail Away Ladies," "Michael Row the Boat Ashore," "Take This Hammer," "House of the Rising Sun," and "This Little Light of Mine," the album hearkens back to the eclectic sounds of her earliest work.

what to buy next: With the release of My Eyes Have Seen ♪♪♪ (Vanguard, 1959/1994), Odetta furthered the acclaim she had received with her performances at Chicago's Town Hall and her impressive debut album, Ballads and Blues ♪♪♪ (Vanguard, 1956). Accompanying herself on guitar and joined by Bill Lee on string bass, she displays the depths of her repertoire and the power of her vocals with soulful renditions of traditional folk songs, including "Motherless Children," "I Know Where I'm Going," "Saro Jane," and "No More Cane on the Brazos." The album, which features liner notes by Harry Belafonte, includes a studio version of Odetta's unique medley of the American folksongs "I've Been Driving on Bald Mountain" and "Water Boy."

the rest:

Sometimes I Feel like Cryin' ♪♪♪½ (RCA, 1960)
Sings of Many Things ♪♪♪½ (RCA, 1961)
It's a Mighty World ♪♪♪½ (RCA, 1962)
And the Blues ♪♪♪ (Riverside, 1962)
At Town Hall ♪♪♪ (Vanguard, 1962)
Odetta ♪♪♪½ (Verve, 1963)
Sings Folk Songs ♪♪♪ (RCA, 1963)
One Grain of Sand ♪♪♪ (Vanguard, 1963)
At the Gate of Horn ♪♪♪ (Tradition, 1964/1998)
Sings Dylan ♪♪♪½ (RCA, 1965)
The Ballad for Americans and other American Ballads ♪♪♪ (Vanguard, 1965)
In Japan ♪♪♪ (Vanguard, 1965)
Odetta ♪♪♪ (Vanguard, 1967)
Best Of Odetta ♪♪♪½ (Vanguard, 1967)
At Carnegie Hall ♪♪♪½ (Vanguard, 1967)
Sings the Blues ♪♪♪½ (Vanguard, 1968)
Golden Odetta ♪♪♪½ (Vanguard, 1972)
Christmas Spirituals ♪♪♪ (Alcazar, 1988)
The Essential ♪♪♪½ (Vanguard, 1989) worth searching for: Odetta's live version of "I Gotta Be Me" is included on Philadelphia Folk Festival ♪♪♪ (Flying Fish, 1978). Two songs—"I've Been Driving on Bald Mountain/Water Boy" and "A Hole in the Bucket"—recorded during her ground-breaking 1960 guest performance are included on the album Belafonte Returns to Carnegie Hall ♪♪♪ (RCA, 1961, prod. Bob Bollard).

influences:

◀◀ Pete Seeger, Mahalia Jackson, Harry Belafonte

▶▶ Tracy Chapman, Joan Armatrading

Craig Harris

Eugene O'Donnell

Born 1932, in Derry City, Northern Ireland.

Frequently in the '80s and '90s, all-star programs of Irish folk musicians would be mounted at schools and theaters on America's East Coast, and the line-up would be full of fast-fingered hot shots. More often than not, though, the show would be stolen by an elderly gentleman with snow white hair and an old wool suit. He couldn't play as fast or as accurately as many of the youngsters, but he played with more feeling than any of them. When he tackled slow airs, he caressed the high notes with a whispery tenderness and dug into the low notes with a hard scrape of the bow, producing an ineffable longing for towns, loves, and years left behind. The man was Eugene O'Donnell, and he had been quite a dancer when he grew up in Northern Ireland. He won six All-Ireland Step-Dancing Championships, was the first Irish dancer to appear on TV in London, and is still a licensed adjudicator for Irish dancing. He immigrated to Philadelphia in the late '50s and soon became the lead fiddler in the city's best Ceili band. He met folklorist/musician Mick Moloney at the 1973 Philadelphia Folk Festival, and Moloney began play-

Odetta (© Jack Vartoogian)

liam o'flynn

cajun music

Cajun music is intended for dancing and its steady, solid heartbeat always throbs just beneath the melody. While the jaunty two-steps often catch the ear of the outsider, it is the waltzes that pull at the heart strings of the Cajuns. A band will alternate between the two all night long. Cajuns took their own Acadian songs and added elements from the cultures they assimilated: syncopation and improvisatory singing from their Creole neighbors, blues from African Americans, fiddles from Anglo Americans, guitars from the Spanish, accordions from the Germans, and the whoops and steady beat from Native Americans. Early Cajun music was the sound of two fiddles. Accordions became popular in the 1920s and were paired with fiddles. Fiddle-led string bands dominated the music scene during the 1930s and 1940s. After World War II, Cajuns again embraced the accordion, particularly the music of Iry Lejeune. By the late 1960s Cajun culture was being overwhelmed by mainstream America until a cultural revival was spearheaded by Dewey Balfa. His efforts revitalized the music and saw the rise of a new generation of musicians. These younger players have begun to use the mass media to promulgate the sounds of Cajun music throughout the world.

Jared Snyder

ing with the old pro whenever possible. And when Moloney became an informal advisor for Green Linnet Records in Connecticut, he made sure the label documented O'Donnell's under-recorded talent.

what to buy: Slow Airs & Set Dances ♪♪♪♪½ (Green Linnet, 1978, prod. Mick Moloney) is O'Donnell's best, for it captures him near the peak of his powers and it showcases him prominently. Set against Moloney's spare accompaniment, O'Donnell squeezes all the aching yearning out of traditional Irish slow airs such as "The Celtic Lament." Almost as good is The Foggy Dew ♪♪♪♪ (Green Linnet, 1988, prod. Eugene O'Donnell, James MacCafferty). When O'Donnell returned home to Derry City in 1983, he taped a series of fiddle-and-piano duets with his childhood friend James MacCafferty. When those tapes were finally released in 1988, they revealed music of a patient austerity and patent beauty.

what to buy next: O'Donnell joined his two younger Philadelphians, Moloney and Seamus Egan, on 3 Way Street ♪♪♪½ (Green Linnet, 1993, prod. Mick Moloney). The old man gets less room in this three-generation showcase, but the mutual admiration and affection among the three men is palpable.

worth searching for: O'Donnell made two more albums with Moloney that haven't yet seen reissue on CD. Mick Moloney with Eugene O'Donnell ♪♪♪ (Green Linnet, 1978, prod. Patrick Sky) is dominated by Moloney, but O'Donnell's lovely bowing can be heard on nine of the 14 tracks, while American folkie Patrick Sky produced and played tin whistle. Uncommon Bonds ♪♪♪ (Green Linnet, 1984, prod. Mick Moloney) finds Moloney and O'Donnell playing traditional Irish tunes with a varying assortment of Irish-American and bluegrass musicians, including Egan, Liz Carroll, Robbie O'Connell, and Norman and Nancy Blake.

influences:

⏪ Michael Coleman, Paddy Killoran, James Morrison

⏩ Eileen Ivers, Mick Moloney, Seamus Egan

Geoffrey Himes

Liam O'Flynn /Liam Ó Floinn

Born 1950, in Kill, Co. Kildare, Ireland.

Having first come to prominence as a member of the 1970s Irish group Planxty, but more recently associated with orchestral works like The Brendan Voyage, Liam O'Flynn is widely recognized as one of Ireland's finest performers on the uilleann pipes. Born in a musical family, O'Flynn started playing the whistle at an early age and has his first taste of the pipes through the playing of Tom Armstrong. However, he credits Leo Rowsome, Willie Clancy, and Séamus Ennis as his main musical influences. As the folk boom was taking Ireland by storm in the early 1970s, O'Flynn was asked by singer Christy Moore to participate in the making of the album Prosperous, featuring Andy Irvine, Dónal Lunny, and a few others as accompanists. After the album came out in 1972, the foursome decided to perform together under the name Planxty. Over the next 10 years, the band went on to record six albums, each featuring O'Flynn's piping prominently. By the time Planxty broke up in the early 1980s, O'Flynn had become involved in performing the compositions of his good friend Shaun Davey, who was experimenting with bringing together uilleann pipes and symphony orchestra. Recorded in 1980, the first and still the best known of these pieces is The Brendan Voyage, evoking the sixth-century sea voyage of St. Brendan, Abbot of Clonfert, to North America. In 1988 O'Flynn finally recorded his first solo album, released on his own label and featuring Seán Keane and Dónal Lunny. The Fine Art of Piping, produced for the British company Celtic Music, followed in 1989, and the fine trio album The Fire Aflame, with Seán Keane and Matt Molloy, in 1992. O'Flynn's most recent albums, Out to an Other Side (1993) and The Given Note (1995), which clearly show the influence of the piper's collaboration with Shaun Davey, are no match for his earlier output.

what's available: While O'Flynn's piping is immaculate throughout, his most recent albums, Out to an Other Side ♪♪♪ (Tara, 1993, prod. Shaun Davey) and The Given Note ♪♪♪ (Tara, 1995, prod. Shaun Davey), would hardly meet with the approval of traditional music lovers. The influence of O'Flynn's collaboration with Davey is clearly heard in the overwhelmingly busy and popish-sounding arrangements. Although only distantly related to traditional music, Davey's orchestral suites like The Brendan Voyage ♪♪♪½ (Tara, 1980, prod. Shaun Davey), The Pilgrim ♪♪♪ (Tara, 1983, prod. Shaun Davey), Granuaile ♪♪♪½ (Tara, 1985, prod. Shaun Davey), and The Relief of Derry Symphony ♪♪♪ (Tara, 1990, prod. Shaun Davey) have been successful in their own way. On The Seville Suite ♪♪♪ (Tara, 1992, prod. Bill Whelan, Dónal Lunny), O'Flynn performs with Andy Irvine and Lunny on "Timedance '92," the piece that was to evolve into Whelan's award-winning show Riverdance.

worth searching for: Unfortunately, O'Flynn's best recordings of traditional music remain his earlier ones, therefore the ones hardest to find. During his Planxty heyday, he appeared on Mick Hanly and Mícheál Ó Domhnaill's beautiful Celtic Folkweave ♪♪♪♪½ (Polydor, 1974, prod. Dónal Lunny). Although there were some experiments with the accompaniment on O'Flynn's first solo LP, Liam O'Flynn ♪♪♪½ (LOF, 1988, prod. Dónal Lunny), Lunny's production kept it away from the excesses of the later, Davey-produced albums. The Fine Art of Piping ♪♪♪♪½ (Celtic Music, 1989) is just that, excellent solo piping by a master of the instrument. On The Fire Aflame ♪♪♪♪½ (Claddagh, 1992, prod. Seán Keane, Matt Molloy, Liam O'Flynn) O'Flynn collaborated with Matt Molloy (flute), Séan Keane (fiddle), and Arty McGlynn (guitar) to produce a remarkable album of deftly played traditional music.

influences:

- Tom Armstrong, Leo Rowsome, Seamus Ennis, Willie Clancy
- Mick O'Brien, Jimmy O'Brien-Moran

see also: Planxty, Seán Keane, Matt Molloy

Philippe Varlet

editor's choice

18 folk albums from across the usa

Bill Staines, The Alaska Suite

Tony Trischka, A Robot Plane Flies over Arkansas

Mary McCaslin, Sunny California

Norman Blake, Slow Train through Georgia

Gabby Pahinui, The Gabby Pahinui Hawaiian Band

Greg Brown, The Iowa Waltz

Earl Scruggs, Live at Kansas State

Bill Monroe, Kentucky Blue Grass

Tracy Schwarz, Louisiana and You

Mississippi John Hurt, Best of Mississippi John Hurt

Bayou Seco, Songs of New Mexico and Beyond

Betty Smith, Songs Traditionally Sung in North Carolina

Doyle Lawson and Quicksilver, Tennessee Dream

Bob Wills, Bob Wills' Texas Playboys (1930s–1940s)

Deseret String Band, Utah: Songs of Statehood

Margaret MacArthur, Vermont Heritage Songs

The Carter Family, Mid the Green Fields of Virginia

Ginny Hawker and Kay Justice, Pathway to West Virginia

Mary Margaret O'Hara

Born in Toronto, Canada.

Mary Margaret O'Hara is Canada's other kinda arty/kinda country cult figure. In contrast to k.d. lang, however, O'Hara is a little less country and a lot cultier. Think Patsy Cline crossed with David Byrne. The sister of SCTV comedienne Catherine O'Hara, Mary Margaret began her music career after graduating from Ontario Art College. After first playing first with a band called Dollars and then leading the Go Deo Chorus, of which she was a member from 1976–83, O'Hara landed a solo deal with Virgin Records. Her debut, Miss America, was released in 1988. It received critical acclaim that's grown only more fervent with time. (It was named one of the best 100 albums of all time in a 1995 Mojo critics poll.) In addition, O'Hara's debut has been championed by the likes of Kristen Hersh, Morrissey, and Michael Stipe. R.E.M.'s frontman has called her "one of the most powerful singers I've ever heard." Miss America, however, didn't sell well. O'Hara adopted a low profile through most of the '90s, appearing as a guest on albums by Morrissey, Gary Lucas, This Mortal Coil, and John & Mary. Through the years, she's also made infrequent film appearances (The Hunter, Candy Mountain, The Events Leading up to My Death). She stepped from the shadows during the mid-'90s with the reissue of Miss America and 1991's Christmas E.P. She contributed to Sweet Relief 2: The Songs of Vic Chesnutt and sang on two albums by the Canadian group the Henrys.

what to buy: Miss America ♪♪♪♪♪ (Virgin, 1988/KOCH International, 1996, prod. Mary Margaret O'Hara, Michael Brook) finds O'Hara exploring a variety of environments, from torch music to quirky rock that recalls mid-period Talking Heads. She's most at home with such drifting stream-of-consciousness originals as the intoxicating "Body's in Trouble" and the romantically obsessed "Help Me Lift You Up." O'Hara's vocals are theatrical yet conversational. She dwells on words and phrases, stuttering through them with singular intensity.

what to buy next: Christmas E.P. ♪♪♪♪ (KOCH International, 1996, prod. Mary Margaret O'Hara), a brief seasonal treat, is the only follow-up to Miss America. Recorded in 1991 but first available in the United States in 1996, Christmas E.P. consists of one original (the simple but insistent "Christmas Evermore"), plus incandescent treatments of "Blue Christmas," "What Are You Doing New Year's Eve?," and "Silent Night." All are calm, all are bright.

influences:

◀◀ Patti Smith, Marianne Faithfull

▶▶ Throwing Muses, Tanya Donnelly

Steven Stolder

Old Blind Dogs

Formed 1990 in Aberdeen, Scotland.

Jonny Hardie, fiddle, mandolin, bouzouki, guitar, backing vocals; Buzzby McMillan, cittern, electric bass, whistle, backing vocals; Fraser Fifield (1996–present), border pipes, soprano saxophone, whistles; Davy Cattanach, percussion, backing vocals; Ian F. Benzie, guitar, lead vocals.

The group Old Blind Dogs blends Scottish tunes and instrumentation with Eastern-flavored percussion. The distinctive percussion is credited to Davy Cattanach, who cut his teeth on reggae, rock, and blues before joining Old Blind Dogs. Cattanach's arsenal includes djembe and congas, neither of which is commonly found in northern Scotland. Jonny Hardie's driving fiddle and Buzzby McMillan's bass add to the strength of the band's rhythms. Lead vocalist Ian F. Benzie has a 30-year musical career that began in the Scottish folk revival.

what's available: Five ♪♪♪♪♪ (Lochshore, 1997, prod. Old Blind Dogs, Niall Mathewson) opens with the evocative instrumental "Trip to Pakistan" and moves through a choice collection of songs and tunes, highlighted by "Parcel of Rogues," with Benzie's dreamlike vocal. Legacy ♪♪♪♪ (KRL, 1995, prod. Old Blind Dogs, Niall Mathewson) is somewhat more traditional.

influences:

◀◀ Archie Fisher, Scott Skinner, Silly Wizard

▶▶ Whirligig

Pamela Murray Winters

Old & in the Way

See: Grateful Dead, David Grisman

David Olney

Born March 23, 1948, in Providence, RI.

One of Nashville's most revered writers among his peers, David Olney is a master storyteller, inhabiting his characters the way an actor who specializes in villains assumes his roles. His songs may be sarcastic or simply funny, acerbic or tender, and the qualities play off one against another, adding depth to each emotion. Olney's one-time band, the X-Rays, achieved local cult status before breaking up in the mid-1980s, and he's spent the last decade performing primarily solo. His songs aren't often recorded by Nashville's stars, but the occasional discriminating judge of material—Emmylou Harris and Linda Ronstadt among them—will cover his songs.

what to buy: Deeper Well ♪♪♪♪ (Philo, 1988, prod. Thomas Goldsmith, Joe Fleming) is a stunning album, not just because the songs are great (they are), but because of the kinds of song they are. In "Jerusalem Tomorrow," Olney writes a song about a religious charlatan during Jesus's time that resonates through the centuries without ever leaving the era. Harris recorded his "Deeper Well," and Ronstadt recorded "Women across the River"—two very different songs about the quest for wisdom.

what to buy next: Roses ♪♪♪♪ (Rounder, 1991, prod. Tommy Goldsmith, Jim Rooney) is more blues-oriented than most of Olney's albums, but he carries it off well in a variety of settings, from the brutal humor of "Luckiest Man" to the Southern-raised rock 'n' roll of "Lee's Highway/Bamaloo." The album also contains versions of Robert Johnson's "Last Fair Deal" and Townes Van Zandt's "Rex's Blues."

what to avoid: From about 1978 to 1985, Olney fronted a bar band called the X-Rays. The one album he recorded under that name, Contender ♪♪ (Rounder, 1981/1995), has some moderately clever songs, but the band is uninspired, making Contender sound like a third-rate Springsteen pretender.

the rest:
Eye of the Storm ♪♪♪½ (Philo, 1987/1996)
High, Wide, and Lonesome ♪♪♪½ (Philo, 1995)
Live in Holland ♪♪♪ (Strictly Country, 1995)
Real Lies ♪♪½ (Philo, 1997)

influences:
◀◀ Randy Newman, Guy Clark, John Prine, Townes Van Zandt ▶▶ Steve Earle, Tom Russell, Kevin Welch

Brian Mansfield

Kristina Olsen

Born May 26, 1957, in San Francisco, CA.

Kristina Olsen is proud of her heritage as a California flower child. Her music and manner are unabashedly warm and inviting. Olsen is a folk singer in the most literal sense of "folk"; even in the throes of bluesy longing, her voice and delivery draw the listener into the circle. She's a skilled interpreter of blues songs, often accompanying herself on steel guitar; one of her best is "Come on in My Kitchen" by Robert Johnson by way of David Bromberg. Her own compositions have improved over the years, demonstrating her good sense for a clever turn of phrase. Although touring extensively and internationally, Olsen has still found time to record an album with Australian cellist Peter Grayling.

what to buy: Live from around the World ♪♪♪♪ (Philo, 1997, prod. various) is almost as good as attending an Olsen concert. It includes many of her best-known songs—"Come on in My Kitchen," "Your Little Brother Sure Can Dance," "Better than TV," and "Cry You a Waterfall"—interspersed with her offbeat stories about being a traveling musician.

what to buy next: Olsen has three studio albums. Love, Kristina ♪♪♪ (Philo, 1993, prod. Nina Gerber) reveals a talented performer in search of a direction. "The Power of Loving You" is a Hallmark card from a straight woman to her gay friends, and "Keeping This Life of Mine" places the protagonist in an abusive relationship, but neither song quite convinces. The final two songs suggest Olsen's best path. "This Bed of Ours" is an understated torch song; "Live Man in the Dead of Night" fills that troubled bed quite nicely. Hurry on Home ♪♪♪½ (Philo, 1995, prod. Nina Gerber) is a rather somber offering. "Love Is a Sometimes Thing" and "Love Isn't Safe" are both strong compositions delivered with heart and soul, and all of the compositions show a marked growth in her songwriting skill.

the rest:
Kristina Olsen ♪♪♪ (Philo, 1992)

influences:
◀◀ Joan Baez, Mance Lipscomb, David Bromberg, John Prine ▶▶ Joan Osborne

Pamela Murray Winters

The Osborne Brothers

Formed 1953, in KY.

Bobby Osborne (born December 7, 1931, in Hyden, KY), mandolin, vocals; Sonny Osborne (born October 29, 1937, in Hyden, KY), banjo, vocals.

One of the few bluegrass acts to have a mainstream country following, Bobby and Sonny Osborne's progressive approach to their music—they used electric guitar, pedal steel, drums, even strings when it suited their purposes—brought them a number of radio hits during the late 1960s and early 1970s. Before the group formed in 1953, Bobby played with the Lonesome Pine Fiddlers while Sonny backed Bill Monroe and Jimmy Martin. Once together, the brothers went after any audience they could find: They joined the Grand Ole Opry in 1964, but also frequented college campuses and folk festivals. The duo's widespread appeal even brought them the Country Music Association's award for vocal group of the year in 1971. Since leaving Decca, where they had most of their hits, for independent labels, the Osborne Brothers' music has grown more traditional. It's still not without its surprises, though; the group has recorded albums of songs associated with songwriters Felice and Boudleaux Bryant (1977's From Rocky Top to Muddy Bottom) and Ernest Tubb (1995's The Ernest Tubb Song Folio, Volume I). The roster has changed frequently behind the two brothers; some of the more prominent members of their backup band have included Bennie Birchfield, Ronnie Reno, Gene Wooten, and Bobby Osborne Jr.

what to buy: Best of the Osborne Brothers ♪♪♪♪♪ (MCA, 1982) is a great collection of the group's recordings made during their peak commercial period, with all the hits: "Rocky Top," "Georgia Pineywoods," "Tennessee Hound Dog," and "The Kind of Woman I Got." Even today, the Osborne's cross-pollination of bluegrass and electric country ideas sounds adventurous.

what to buy next: With most, if not all, of their Decca catalog out of print by the early 1990s, the Osbornes decided to revisit some of the songs they'd made during their stay at the label. Once More, Volumes I & II ♪♪♪♪ (Sugar Hill, 1991, prod. Sonny Osborne) combines the two Once More albums issued separately and puts them on one CD with more than an hour of music. Singles like "Rocky Top" and "The Kind of Woman I Got" aren't here, but Osborne favorites like "My Favorite Memory," "I'll Be Alright Tomorrow," and "Blue Moon of Kentucky" are. The sound is more traditional, but this is still a fine, well-stocked collection.

the rest:
From Rocky Top to Muddy Bottom ♪♪♪½ (CMH, 1977/1991)
Bluegrass Collection ♪♪♪½ (CMH, 1978/1989)
The Osborne Brothers and Mac Wiseman ♪♪♪½ (CMH, 1979/1987)
I Can Hear Kentucky Calling Me ♪♪♪ (CMH, 1980)
Once More, Volume I ♪♪♪½ (Sugar Hill, 1986)
Once More, Volume II ♪♪♪½ (Sugar Hill, 1987)
Singing, Shouting Praises ♪♪♪ (Sugar Hill, 1988)
Hillbilly Fever ♪♪♪ (CMH, 1991)
When the Roses Bloom in Dixieland ♪♪♪ (Pinecastle, 1994)
Our Favorite Hymns ♪♪♪ (MCA, 1995)
The Ernest Tubb Song Folio, Volume I ♪♪♪½ (Pinecastle, 1995)
Greatest Bluegrass Hits, Volume 1 ♪♪♪½ (CMH, 1996)
Country Bluegrass ♪♪♪½ (MCA, 1996)
Class of '96 ♪♪♪½ (Pinecastle, 1996)
Some Things I Want to Sing About ♪♪♪½ (Sugar Hill)
#1 ♪♪♪½ (CMH)
Bluegrass Concerto ♪♪♪½ (CMH)
Bobby and His Mandolin ♪♪♪½ (CMH) worth searching for: The CD single "Rocky Top '96" ♪♪♪ (Decca, 1996, remix prod. Scott Rouse) contains the original 1968 version plus three re-mixes by Scott Rouse.

influences:
◀◀ Bill Monroe, Jimmy Martin
▶▶ New Grass Revival, Diamond Rio

Brian Mansfield

Ossian

Formed 1976, in Glasgow, Scotland. Disbanded 1991; re-formed 1997.

Billy Ross, vocals, guitar, dulcimer, whistle; George Jackson, cittern, mandolin, fiddle, whistle, flute, guitar, vocals; John Martin, fiddle, cello, vocals; William Jackson, harp, uilleann pipes, whistles, vocals, bass, synthesizer, piano, bodhrán; Tony Cuffe, vocals, guitar, tiple; Iain MacDonald, bagpipes, flute, whistle, jew's harp, vocals; Stuart Morison, fiddle, cittern, mandolin, vocals; Iain MacInnes, Scottish smallpipes, whistles; other members, including Maggie MacInnes, harp, vocals; Norman Chalmers, concertina, harp, whistles, vocals.

Named after the bard of the Fianna in Celtic mythology, and at the same time after one of Scotland's most famous and infamous works of literature, the folk band Ossian was a gentler alternative to the fiery Tannahill Weavers and the electrified Battlefield Band for the entire 1980s and a couple of years more. The group grew out of Glaswegian folk-rock group Contraband, which included John Martin, George Jackson, and William "Billy" Jackson. These three, plus singer Billy Ross, comprised Ossian's original lineup, which formed in 1976 and established the band's trademark sound, a soft, classically informed, and subtle style that could nonetheless burn with intensity. In 1980 Ross was replaced by singer and guitarist Tony Cuffe, a veteran of such groups as Alba and Jock Tamson's Bairns. Cuffe's voice and full, round guitar-playing became further hallmarks of the group. To complete its growth, Ossian added one final distinctive ingredient in 1982: the sensitive highland pipe and flute playing of Iain MacDonald.

Apart from one tour on which William Jackson was replaced by Maggie MacInnes because of a broken hand, this classic Ossian lineup remained constant until 1990, when Jackson and Cuffe both moved to the United States. At that point, although Ossian did not break up right away, several of the band members sought new opportunities and, as a result, George Jackson and William Jackson were sometimes not available to tour with them. They were replaced for those tours by multi-instrumentalist Norman Chalmers. Although Ossian remained together for a short time after that, the pressures on a band based in two countries ultimately won out and they broke up. After a short time Martin was recruited into the Tannahill Weavers and MacDonald into the Battlefield Band, while Cuffe and William Jackson performed as solo artists. Ossian was reborn in 1997, when the group Smalltalk, composed of Ross, Iain MacInnes, and Stuart Morison, added William Jackson, who had since moved back to Scotland, to its membership. Although only Jackson and Ross were former members of Ossian (MacInnes and Morison having passed through the ranks of that other Scottish musical institution the Tannahill Weavers), they decided to play music in the spirit of Ossian's work during the '70s and '80s. Smalltalk changed its name to Ossian and recorded an album. Whether this new version of Ossian will be as successful and long-lived as the previous incarnation remains to be seen.

what to buy: The Best of Ossian ♪♪♪♪♪ (Iona, 1994, prod. Ossian) is undoubtedly the place to start for the uninitiated. It contains tracks from all of Ossian's recordings for the Iona label, which means all but the first of the original group's recordings. The selection of tracks is terrific, and manages really to capture what was best about each Ossian lineup: Ross's beautiful Gaelic vocal on "S Gann Gunn Dirich Mi Chaoidh," Cuffe's equally affecting singing in Scots on songs like "The Road to Drumleman" and "I Will Set My Ship in Order," and piper MacDonald's rousing playing on several sets of tunes. Of course, the contributions of stalwart members John Martin, William Jackson, and George Jackson, the group's founders who remained with it through almost its entire life as a touring and recording band, are without peer in Scottish music. There would be only one way to make this better: more tracks; at 56 minutes it's not exactly skimpy, but there's room on a CD for considerably more.

what to buy next: Borders ♪♪♪♪♪ (Iona, 1984, prod. Ossian) was the best of Ossian's original albums. It was produced after the band had been together for some time, and had really learned what worked best about their sound. The combination of highland pipes and harp, right from the start of the album, is more compelling than it had been on their previous album, Dove across the Water. The arrangements are unusual, confident, and quite lovely. Cuffe mined several collections of songs, especially John Ord's Bothy Songs and Ballads, to find unusual and beautiful traditional songs to sing, composing melodies where none existed and writing extra verses when necessary. In short, this was both their most traditional and their most original album. Seal Song ♪♪♪♪½ (Iona, 1981, prod. Ossian) comes in a close second. It did not yet have the highland bagpipes, which were to be an important part of Ossian's palette, but it nonetheless has a full and rich sound, due in part to new member Cuffe. Cuffe's strong guitar playing, influenced by Martin Carthy and by Nic Jones, added melodic, harmonic, and percussive dimensions to the band, and his voice is magnificent. Even so, the band was already excellent without Cuffe, as is evident on St. Kilda Wedding ♪♪♪♪ (Iona, 1978, prod. Ossian). The group's deft handling of many and diverse instruments gives this album a light, airy, and appealing feeling. Despite the repertoire of entirely Scottish material, the band at this stage sounded more like an Irish group in the mold of Planxty than like contemporary Scottish acts, with uilleann pipes, cittern, whistle, and guitar taking center stage. Nonetheless, Martin's fiery fiddling and Ross's undeniably Scottish singing in both Gaelic and Scots made their Scottish identity quite evident. Ross's singing is also a major ingredient on the re-formed Ossian's debut, The Carrying Stream ♪♪♪½ (Greentrax, 1997, prod. Ossian). On this CD, the new band does not quite succeed in reproducing the classic Ossian sound, but they do come close; MacInnes's Scottish smallpipes are a sort of compromise between the highland and uilleann pipes featured on the original band's albums. Jackson's harp takes a more dominant role, and his piano fills out the sound in places. Ross's voice, guitar, and dulcimer sound as delicate and practiced as they did back 20 years ago, and Morison's strong fiddling, while not identical to Martin's, is nonetheless stirring. Of the many solo and duet albums produced by Ossian's members, the best is Cuffe's When First I Went to Caledonia ♪♪♪♪♪ (Iona 1988, prod. Tony Cuffe). Cuffe's firm, sure guitar playing gets much more of a chance to shine on solo tunes like "The Lass O' Patie's Mill," and his singing is never more lovely than on the title track. It is one of the best solo albums of a Scottish singer/guitarist ever.

the rest:
Dove across the Water ♪♪♪ (Iona, 1982)
Light on a Distant Shore ♪♪♪ (Iona, 1986) worth searching for: The band's self-titled debut LP Ossian ♪♪½ (Springthyme, 1976) featured the same lineup as St. Kilda Wed-

612 peter ostroushko

zydeco music

The essential core of any zydeco band is the combination of accordion and rubboard (locally called "frattoir"). The accordionist pumps out the melody and normally is the leader and singer. The rubboard acts as the foil, providing the steady scraping rhythm that makes for zydeco's identifiable sound. During a night's performance, the band will "drop out," leaving just the accordion and rubboard to hold up the rhythm and keep the dancers moving. This is the litmus test that separates the boys from the men. The words of zydeco music are still often sung in the local French, though more and more commonly in English. The repertoire consists of Creole tunes, waltzes, and two-steps shared with the Cajun repertoire, Louisiana R&B standards, Swamp Pop hits, blues, and whatever else can help a band win popularity on the dance floor. Zydeco, a music for and about dancing, often sounds like it is coming more from the north end of the Caribbean than from the deep South of the United States. With its national visibility, zydeco music has become a source of pride in the Creole community, its unique contribution to the American musical landscape.

Jared Snyder

ding. There are some nice songs and tunes on this somewhat tentative debut.

influences:

Planxty, Battlefield Band, Jock Tamson's Bairns, Alba, Contraband

Tony Cuffe, William Jackson, Smalltalk

Steve Winick

Peter Ostroushko

Born August 12, 1953, in Minneapolis, MN.

Peter Ostroushko is an eclectic multi-instrumentalist whose style includes traditional folk, bluegrass, Eastern music, and Ukrainian folk tunes. He has toured with Robin and Linda Williams and Dakota Dave Hull. In 1974 he played on Bob Dylan's Blood on the Tracks and started a 12-year run on the syndicated Prairie Home Companion radio show, the last five as musical director. He has also performed with the Minnesota and Rochester Symphony Orchestras and the St. Paul Chamber Orchestra. Since 1989 he has toured with guitarist Dean Magraw.

what to buy: On Pilgrims on the Heart Road ♪♪♪♪ (Red House, 1997, prod. Peter Ostroushko), his most fully realized album yet, Ostroushko blends the serious folk of "Miracle" with the whimsical Dixieland of "My People." The net result is a song cycle whose world-beat flourishes create an exotic strain of Americana. A stunner.

what to buy next: In Buddies of Swing ♪♪♪♪ (Red House, 1990, prod. Peter Ostroushko), Ostroushko leads an all-star group—including Jethro Burns on mandolin and Johnny Gimble on fiddle—through original and traditional tunes, with a little George Gershwin and Fats Waller thrown in.

what to avoid: First Generation ♪♪ (Flying Fish, 1986, prod. Bertram Levy, Sandy Bradley), a comic operetta featuring Bertram Levy, is closer to Gilbert and Sullivan than to Homer and Jethro.

the rest:

Peter Ostroushko Presents the Mando Boys ♪♪♪½ (Red House, 1986)
Blue Mesa ♪♪♪½ (Red House, 1989)
(With Dean Magraw) Duo ♪♪½ (Red House, 1991) Heart of the Heartland ♪♪♪ (Red House, 1995) worth searching for: The early albums Down the Streets of My Old Neighborhood ♪♪♪ (Rounder, 1987) and Slúz Dúz Music ♪♪♪ (Rounder, 1985) are rare treats, lessons in how to mix bluegrass, Dixieland, and folk with some bone-dry humor.

influences:

Bill Monroe, David Grisman

Michael Hedges, Sam Bush

Bob Cannon

The Oyster Band

Formed 1981, in England.

John Jones, lead vocals, melodeon, accordion, piano; Ian "Chopper" Kearey, bass, cello, tiple, vocals; Ian Telfer, fiddle, viola, tenor concertina; Russell Lax (Lee), drums, percussion, hammer, vocals; Alan Prosser, guitar, banjo, mandolin, violin, vocals; Cathy LeSurf, vocals (1981); Chris Taylor (1981–84).

The Oyster Band is a one-of-a-kind punk band of master musicians leaning on Celtic and English dance traditions while rocking harder than most of the mainstream. Criminally underappreciated, the band explores the political and personal landscape with intensity and consistency, generating high-spirited power-folk led by the assertive vocals of Welchman John Jones and the incisive electric fiddle of Telfer. The Oysters are frequently transcendent on disc, though no release has ever approached the band's incendiary live performance. The Oyster Band had its genesis in two bands, the Whitstable Oyster Co. Ceilidh Band (later the Oyster Ceilidh Band), which first took the stage in 1975, and Fiddler's Dram, founded in 1972 by violinist David Arbus, known for his work with East of Eden and the Who. Fiddler's Dram, then consisting of Prosser, Telfer, Taylor, and LeSurf, made the album To See the Play, notable for a "posthumous" hit novelty single in 1979, "Day Trip to Bangor." The hit's success forced the band to make another album, where they were joined by Kearey, among others. Meanwhile, much of Fiddler's Dram enjoyed a parallel existence in the Oyster Ceilidh Band, with LeSurf, Prosser, Kearey, Telfer, and Taylor joining Jones on the dance hall circuit. In 1981 the band dropped "Ceilidh" from its name, LeSurf departed, and the Oyster Band became essentially the unit that exists today. The Oysters have occasionally collaborated with English folk singer June Tabor.

what to buy: Ride ♪♪♪♪♪ (PolyGram, 1989, prod. Dave Young) comes closest to the glorious assault of their live show. Cuts range from the rollicking "New York Girls" to the pensive "This Year, Next Year," closing with the itchy fiddle cover of New Order's "Love Vigilantes." The Shouting End of Life ♪♪♪♪ (Cooking Vinyl, 1995, prod. Pat Collier) is led by the fiddle and guitar pyrotechnics of "Blood-Red Roses" and a pulsating reworking of Bruce Cockburn's "Lovers in a Dangerous Time." Deserters ♪♪♪♪ (Ryko, 1992, prod. John Ravenhall) is a hard-edged beauty that includes the reeling "All That Way for This" and the working class anthem "Fiddle or a Gun."

what to buy next: The band's one full-fledged experiment with June Tabor, Freedom and Rain ♪♪♪♪ (Rykodisc, 1990, prod. Oyster Band), is an atmospheric near-masterpiece that includes tunes by Shane McGowan, Richard Thompson, and Billy Bragg.

what to avoid: Though a poor Oyster recording is not to be had, Little Rock to Leipzig ♪♪♪ (Rykodisc, 1991, prod. Oyster Band, Dave Young) is a less compelling collection of studio and live odds and ends best left to die-hard fans.

the rest:
Step Outside ♪♪♪ (Cooking Vinyl, 1986)
Wild Blue Yonder ♪♪♪ (Cooking Vinyl, 1987)
Holy Bandits ♪♪♪♪ (Rykodisc, 1993)
Trawler (Cooking Vinyl, 1996)
Deep Dark Ocean (Cooking Vinyl, 1997)

worth searching for: Several early Oyster recordings were released on the band's own Pukka label, and are not readily available: English Rock 'n' Roll—The Early Years 1800–1850, Lie Back and Think of England, 20 Golden Tie Slackeners, and Liberty Hall. The CD single "Cry Cry" (Rykodisc, 1994) from the Holy Bandits album includes three previously unreleased tunes, including an astonishing "Star of the County Down."

influences:
◀◀ Fairport Convention, Pentangle, the Clash
▶▶ The Pogues, Spirit of the West

Martin Connors

The Pahinui Brothers /Cyril Pahinui /James "Bla" Pahinui

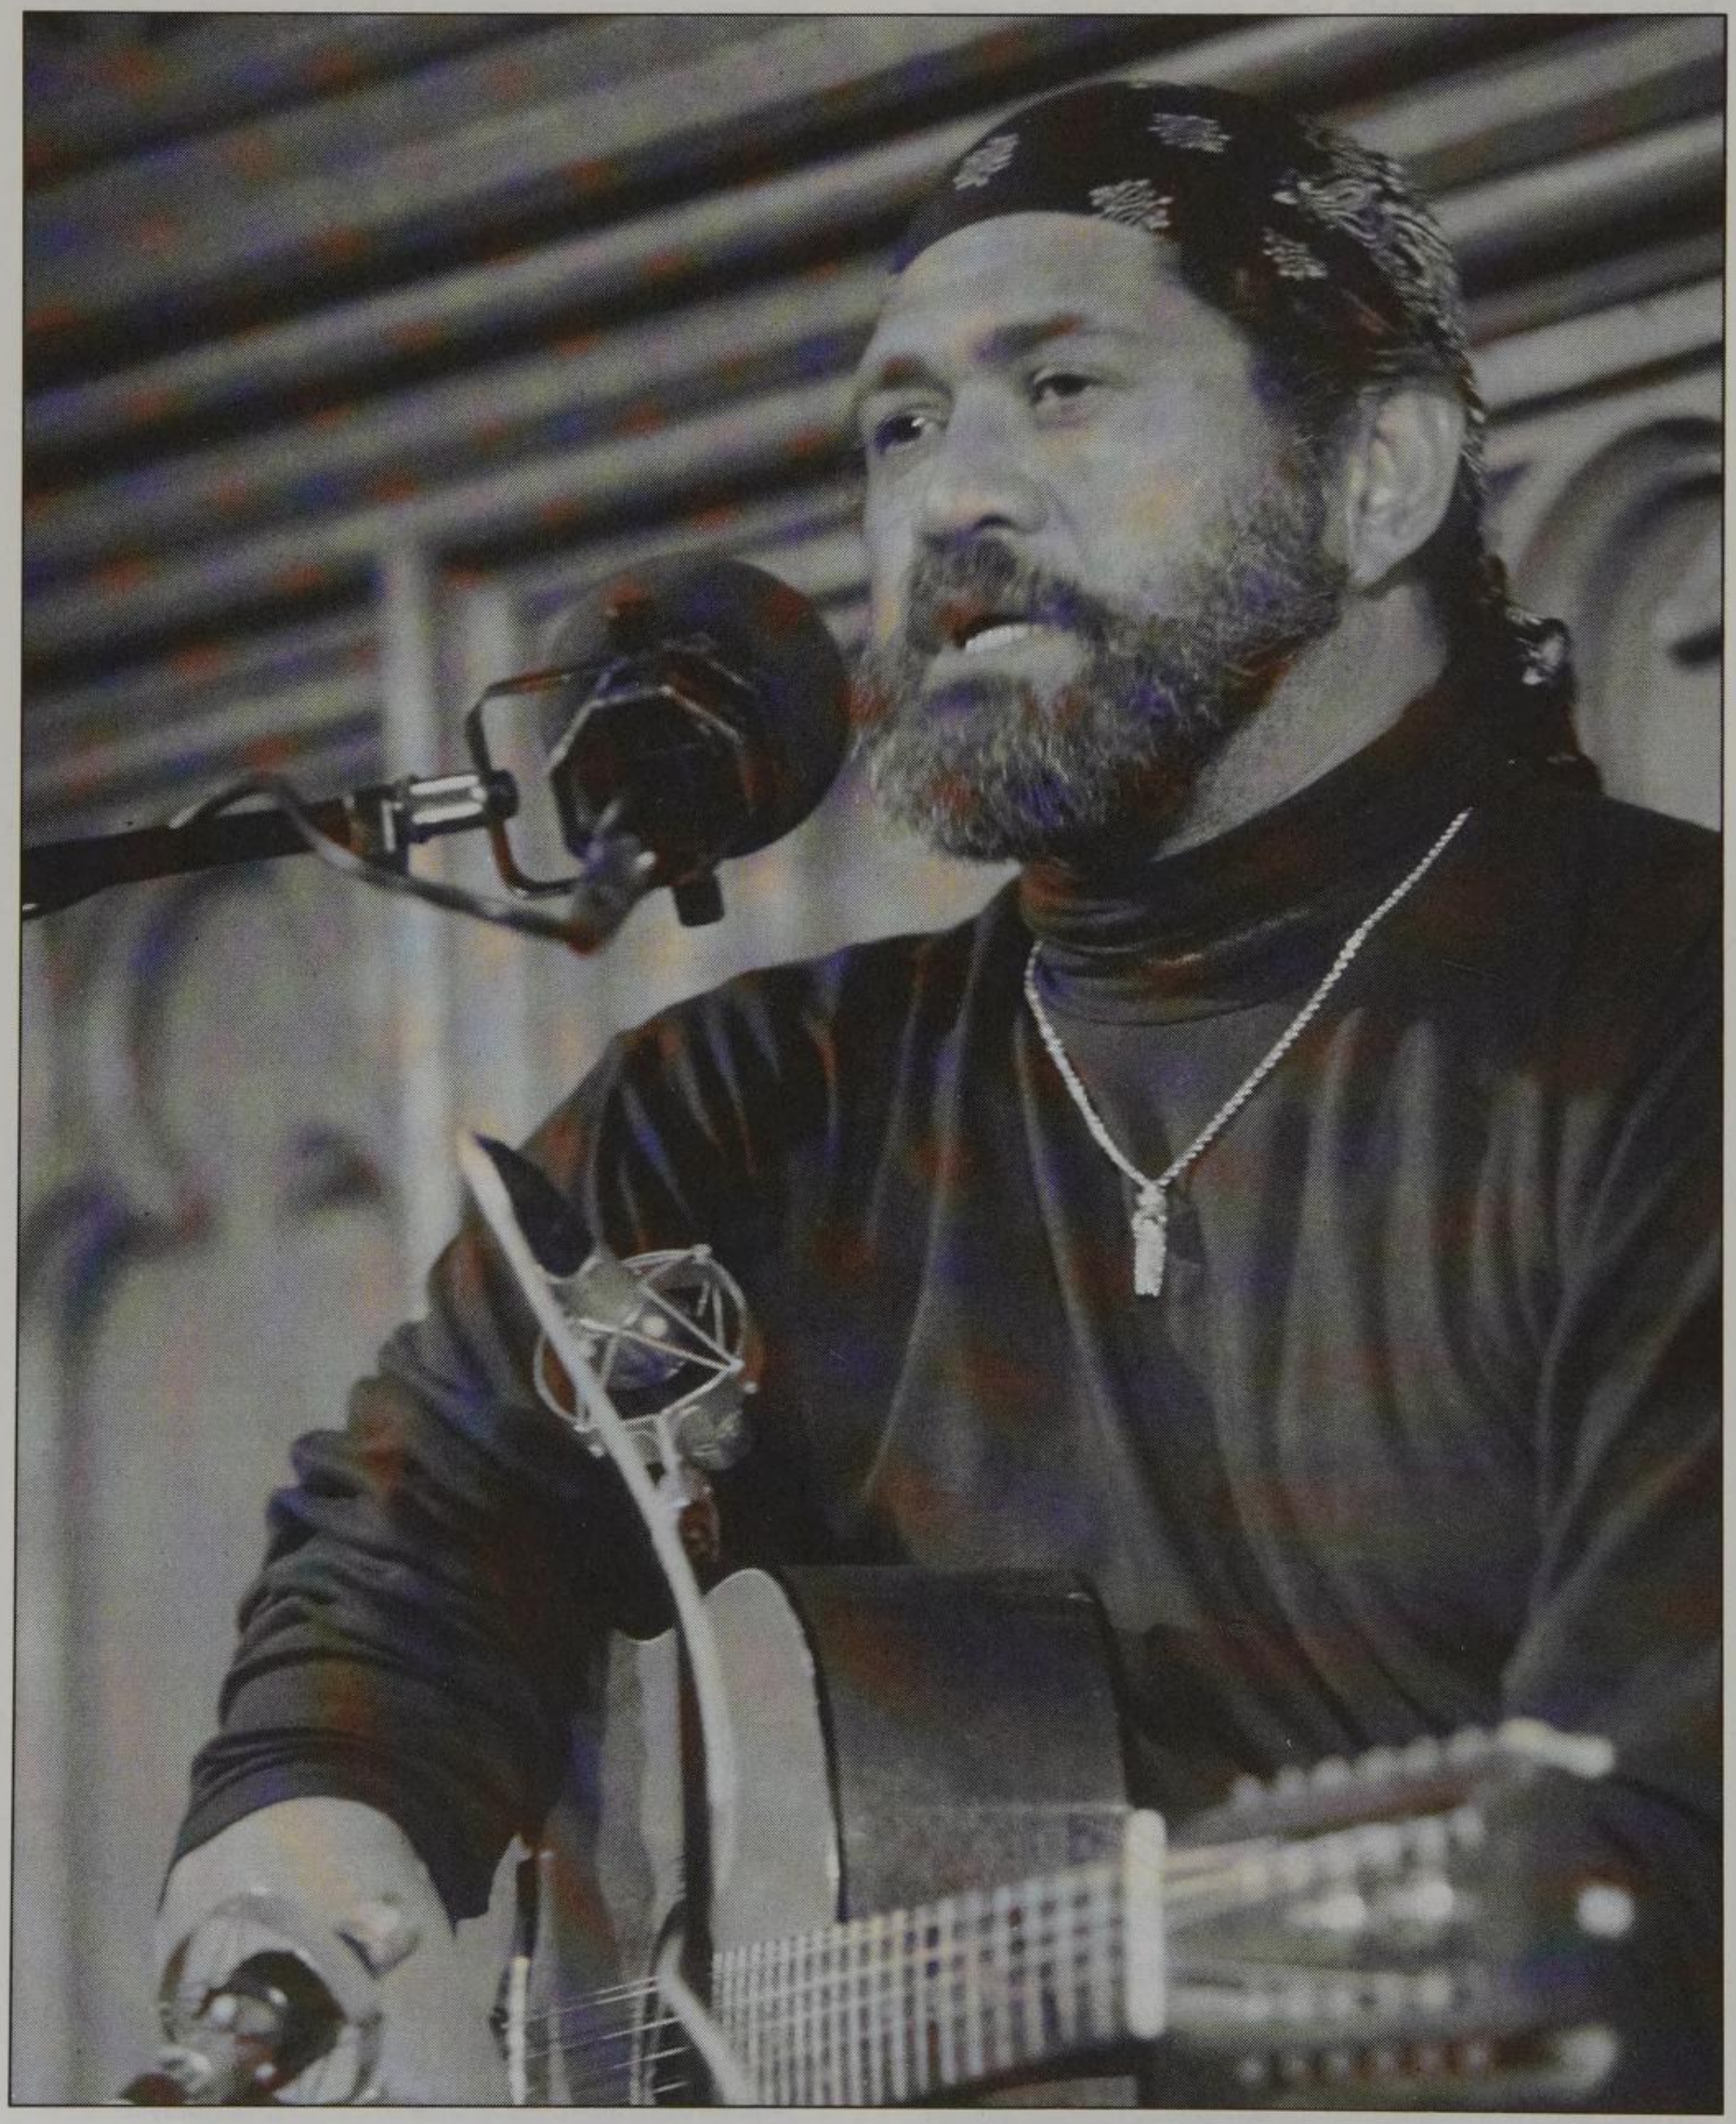
Formed in HI.

Cyril Pahinui (born April 21, 1950, in HI), guitar, ukulele, vocals; James "Bla" Pahinui (born 1942, in Waimanalo, HI), guitar, ukulele, vocals; Martin Pahinui, bass, vocals.

As sons of one of Hawaii's musical legends, the Pahinui Brothers have had big shoes to fill. Though they performed on their own, they came to the forefront of Hawaiian music when four of Gabby Pahinui's sons joined their father in the Gabby Band during the early 1970s, shortly after Gabby left the Sons of Hawaii. Since Gabby's death in 1980, the brothers have continued performing and recording, both separately and together. Cyril, James (usually called "Bla"), and Martin recorded an album for Private Music in 1992, and Cyril and Bla have each recorded solo for Dancing Cat.

what's available: The Pahinui Bros. ♪♪♪ (Private Music, 1992, prod. Steve Siegfried, Witt Shingle, Ry Cooder) takes a mainstream, mainland approach to slack-key playing, mixing

the pahinui brothers



tunes by John Lennon ("Jealous Guy") and Steve Earle ("My Old Friend the Blues") with otherwise largely traditional fare. The session band includes lap-steel player David Lindley, drummer Russ Kunkel, and guitarist Ry Cooder. Both Cyril and James subsequently signed with George Winston's Dancing Cat Records and released solo albums. Cyril Pahinui, the ninth of Gabby's 10 children, made his solo debut with Six- and 12-String Slack-Key ♪♪♪ (Dancing Cat, 1994, prod. George Winston) after working not only with his father, but with a variety of other artists. Half instrumental and half vocal, Six- and 12-String Slack-Key offers exactly what its title suggests, with Cyril playing each instrument solo in a variety of tunings. James "Bla" Pahinui has recorded more often, though his early solo albums are out of print. Bla's Mana ♪♪♪ (Dancing Cat, 1997, prod. George Winston, Howard Johnson) shows the influence of his interest in both Latin music and doo-wop (he does a vocal medley containing "Silhouettes (on the Shade)," "Goodnight My Love," and "Can't Help Falling in Love (with You)"). That's a little odd, but, like the rest of the album, it has an endearing quality to it. James is a left-handed guitarist who plays his instrument updside down and backwards: He plays all the songs here in a "Dropped D" tuning that runs D-A-D-G-B-E from the highest-pitched string to the lowest.

worth searching for: Cyril and Bla both play guitar on the Gabby Pahinui Hawaiian Band's classic The Baggy Pahinui Hawaiian Band, Volume 1 ♪♪♪♪♪ (Edsel, 1975/1987, prod. Panini).

influences:

◀◀ Gabby Pahinui, Sonny Chillingworth, Ry Cooder

▶▶ George & Moses Kahumoku, Ozzie Kotani, George Kuo see also: Gabby Pahinui

Brian Mansfield

Gabby Pahinui

Born Charles Philip Pahinui, 1921, in HI. Died October 13, 1980.

Gabby Pahinui was one of Hawaii's great slack-key guitarists, and the one who introduced many mainlanders to the style. He ushered in the modern slack-key era when he made his first recordings in 1947, and continued recording and performing—both as a frontman and a sideman—until his death more than 30 years later. His many recordings, along with his virtuosic playing style and evocative falsetto singing, earned him the name "father of modern slack-key guitar." Pahinui played in many well-known Hawaiian bands, including the Sons of Hawaii and the Hawaiian Serenaders. During the '70s, he led his own band, the Gabby Pahinui Hawaiian Band, which featured four of his children. Guitarist Ry Cooder helped bring his talents to mainland attention, but there is probably not a guitarist in the Hawaiian islands who's not directly influenced by Pahinui's music.

what's available: Though Pahinui recorded often throughout his career, most of his albums are no longer in print or are very difficult to find outside Hawaii. Fortunately, his watershed album The Gabby Pahinui Hawaiian Band, Volume 1 ♪♪♪♪♪ (Edsel, 1975/1987, prod. Panini) is readily available as a British import. It features a band including Sonny Chillingworth, Cyril and James "Bla" Pahinui, and Ry Cooder. It's an outstanding recording—made with a generator-driven studio in a remote section of the island of Hawaii in 1974. This is probably the best place to start for someone who's just getting interested in Hawaiian music. Pahinui and Atta Isaacs, who often played together, can be heard in duo fronting a five-piece band on Two Slack-Key Guitars ♪♪♪½ (Tradewinds, 1996, prod. Margaret Williams). The age of the recording shows, but the playing is exceptional.

influences:

◀◀ Sonny Chillingworth, Atta Isaacs

▶▶ James "Bla" & Cyril Pahinui, George Kuo, Kahumoku Brothers, Ozzie Kotani, Keola Beamer, Rev. Dennis Kamakahi, Ledward Kaapana

see also: The Pahinui Brothers

Brian Mansfield

Cyril Pahinui (© Jack Vartoogian)

Cyril Pahinui

See: Pahinui Brothers

James "Bla" Pahinui

See: Pahinui Brothers

Tom Paley

See: New Lost City Ramblers

Gram Parsons

Born Cecil Ingram Connor, November 5, 1946, in Winterhaven, FL. Died September 19, 1973, in Joshua Tree, CA.

A Harvard dropout who played with both the Byrds and the Flying Burrito Brothers before going solo, Gram Parsons gave rock 'n' roll a country martyr it could claim as its own. Parsons serves much the same function for such 1990s "alternative country" acts as Son Volt and the Jayhawks that Hank Williams serves for mainstream country—he drank too much, wrote sad songs, and died before he hit 30. Parsons's storytelling gift is enhanced by his tragic legend, and it didn't hurt that he helped introduce Emmylou Harris to the music world. When Parsons died, his road manager and a friend stole his body, cremated it, and scattered the ashes at Cap Rock, a California national monument.

what to buy: G.P./Grievous Angel ♪♪♪♪♪ (Reprise, 1990, prod. Gram Parsons, Rick Grech) is a two-fer classic that combines Parsons's two solo albums. California country-rock doesn't come more influential than this.

what to buy next: Sleepless Nights ♪♪♪ (A&M, 1976, prod. various), a posthumous release, was compiled from solo material and tracks from Parsons's days with the Flying Burrito Brothers.

the rest:
Gram Parsons and the Fallen Angels Live ♪♪♪½ (Sierra, 1992) worth searching for: Safe at Home ♪♪ (Shiloh, 1968/Sundown, 1991) is an early record with the International Submarine Band that shows the direction Parsons would travel. Also worth uncovering is Warm Evenings, Pale Mornings, Bottled Blues ♪♪♪♪ (Raven, 1994), an Australian compilation.

influences:
◀◀ Hank Williams, Merle Haggard, Elvis Presley, Byrds ▶▶ Emmylou Harris, Eagles, Jayhawks, Uncle Tupelo, Wilco, Son Volt, Bottle Rockets see also: Byrds, Flying Burrito Brothers

Brian Mansfield

Niamh Parsons

See: Arcady

Deb Pasternak

Deb Pasternak was headed for a field career in marine biology when a bout of rheumatoid arthritis intervened. During her recovery, she decided to turn her avocation of performing music into a career, and began writing songs and learning guitar in earnest. In recent years, Pasternak has garnered a slew of Boston area music awards, and has recently started performing with a full band.

what to buy: More ♪♪♪½ (Signature Sounds, 1997, prod. Chris Rival), Pasternak's first full-blown studio album, is a marvelous collection of songs cut with top Boston-area talents like guitarists Chris Rival (who also produced) and Duke Levine, trumpeter Scott Aruda, and saxophonist Gordon Beadle. Highlights include the blues-rocker "Walking South" and the cool jazz ballad "Woman of Action." Pasternak's unique vocal style comes through on "Shadow" (with some great, sinuous sax) and the skeletal "Sweet Addiction."

what to buy next: Trust Me, I'm Soulful ♪♪½ (Independent CD, 1994, prod. Jackie Mollet), Pasternak's debut solo CD, is a no-frills live recording that showed why she had already generated such a buzz in the Boston area.

influences:
◀◀ Rickie Lee Jones, Joni Mitchell, Lyle Lovett
▶▶ Martin Sexton

Michael Parrish

Sandy & Caroline Paton

Formed 1957.

Sandy Paton (born January 22, 1929, in Jacksonville, FL), guitar, vocals; Caroline Paton (born August 31, 1932, in East Chicago, IN), mountain dulcimer, vocals.

The tradition of passing music from person to person and generation to generation often is considered the essence of folk music. For Sandy and Caroline Paton, who run Sharon, Connecticut's Folk-Legacy Records as a labor of love, it is a tradition dear to their hearts. Consequently, they have traveled the United States, the British Isles, and Canada meeting people, hearing their stories, singing along with them, and bringing home the musical gems, both new and old, that would be lost on today's money-driven record dynasties. For the Patons, the story behind the song is almost as important as the song itself. Many of their albums include the stories about how they came to learn the songs, along with song histories. Caroline first became interested in folk music as a counselor at summer camp, and that interest never waned. Sandy had studied art and began studying acting when he learned about folk music. Though they came from different parts of the country, they met by chance at a concert in Berkeley, California, and married in 1957. Their association with "The Golden Ring" seems a natural connection. The Golden Ring is a gathering of singers that includes the Patons and their friends Ed Trickett, Gordon Bok, Cathy Barton, Dave Para, and many others. Along with Lee Haggerty, the Patons formed Folk-Legacy in 1961. Over the years they have recorded a half-dozen albums together with their friends, though they have produced more than 120 others. Playing guitar, Appalachian dulcimer, and autoharp, their music is soft-spoken, filled with fun, tongue-twisting songs, touching ballads, and warm harmonies achieved with their own, delightful choral singing. In 1993 they were named Connecticut's official State Troubadours. And they are passing on the tradition through their sons: Robin Paton sings, plays banjo, fiddle, mandolin, and guitar, and has written songs. He joins his brother, concertina virtuoso David Paton, on David's recording Music from the Mountain (Folk-Legacy, 1992). Suffice it to say that Sandy and Caroline Paton maintain the essence of folk music. They have inspired countless people who foster homemade music, from people who enjoy in-house ceilidh singing and house concerts to people who play in and put on church coffeehouses.

what to buy: Though much of the Patons's music involves group singing, they have a couple of albums on which they are featured. Most enjoyable is New Harmony ♪♪♪♪ (Folk-Legacy, 1987, Sandy Paton, Caroline Paton), which offers a lovely blend of traditional, original, and contemporary folk songs sung by either just the Patons or with friends Dave Para and Gordon Bok. Their group singing is superb in the traditional "All Gone for Grog." The title track by Craig Johnson is nostalgic, reminiscent of country life, performed with rich harmonies. The traditional a cappella of "Joshuay" shows the Patons' singing talents as they sing the melody a fifth apart. Also featured are the wonderful Wade Hemsworth–penned "Log Driver's Waltz" and Bob Franke's rousing "The Great Storm Is Over," sung with a delicious vocal blend. Among the duo's best efforts is their first, Sandy and Caroline Paton ♪♪♪♪ (Folk-Legacy, 1966, prod. Sandy and Caroline Paton), which is produced on cassette by Folk-Legacy upon request.

what to buy next: Representative of the group singing and acoustic instrumentation that the Patons enjoy is For All Good People—A Golden Ring Reunion ♪♪♪♪ (Folk-Legacy, 1992), which includes an a cappella rendition of Craig Johnson's "Damned Old Piney Mountains," based on the story of an old logger, and a medley of Gail Davies's "Grandma Song/The Reindeer Song," which has roots in traditional English folk and the Ozarks. Like all their CDs, this one is a full 72 minutes. Joining them are Cathy Barton, David Para, their son David Paton, Ed Trickett, and Harry Tuft.

the rest:

I've Got a Song! ♪♪♪½ (Folk-Legacy, 1984)
When the Spirit Says Sing ♪♪♪♪ (Folk-Legacy, 1988)
'Twas a Night like This—A Christmas Legacy ♪♪♪ (Folk- Legacy, 1989)
The New Golden Ring—Five Days Singing, Volumes I and II ♪♪♪½ (Folk-Legacy, 1996)

influences:

Pete Seeger, Burl Ives, Leadbelly, Cisco Houston, Ewan MacColl, Jeanie Robertson, Jean Ritchie, Hally Wood

Judy Collins

Stephen Ide

Patrick Street

Formed 1986, in Dublin, Ireland.

Andy Irvine, vocals, bouzouki, mandolin, harmonica (1986–present); Kevin Burke, fiddle (1986–present); Jackie Daly, button accordion (1986–present); Arty McGlynn, guitar (1986–94); Ged Foley, guitar, Northumbrian smallpipes (1995–present).

Imagine Woody Guthrie singing with the Bothy Band, and you get some idea of the heady mix achieved by Ireland's all-star folk group, Patrick Street. Andy Irvine is a lifelong Guthrie devotee and sings songs charged with political passion, irreverent humor, and sharp-eyed detail with the requisite harmonica and roughened baritone. He is backed, however, by two of Ireland's finest instrumental soloists, fiddler Kevin Burke and accordionist Jackie Daly. As a result, Patrick Street's albums and concerts bounce back and forth between moving songs and dazzling dance tunes—and sometimes fusing the two into wonderful medleys. Irvine, Burke, Daly, and guitarist Gerry O'Beirne first toured together as the Legends of Irish Music in the United States in 1986. They enjoyed the experience so much that they returned in 1987 with a new name, Patrick Street; a new guitarist, Arty McGlynn; and a debut album, Patrick Street. The quartet had ties to some of the finest Irish folk bands of the post-Beatles era. Irvine was a co-founder of Sweeney's Men in 1966 and of Planxty in 1972, and has also played with Paul Brady, De Danann, and others. Burke played with Christy Moore before replacing the legendary Tommy Peoples in the Bothy Band in 1976. He later formed his own band, Open House, in his adopted home of Portland, Oregon. Daly was a member of De Danann and Kinvara before joining Patrick Street. McGlynn had been the rhythm guitarist of choice for everyone from Christy Moore and Tommy Makem to Paul Brady and Van Morrison. Moreover, Donal Lunny, who produced and played on Patrick Street's first album, had played with Planxty and the Bothy Band. The liner notes of that album claim the band was named after an old fiddler named Patrick Street, but the band later admitted that was a shaggy-dog story. Ultimately, however, Patrick Street outshone all its fabled predecessors by staying together longer than any of them and growing tighter and brighter as a result.

6 1 8 charley patton

what to buy: For Irish Times ♪♪♪♪½ (Green Linnet, 1990, prod. Gerry O'Beirne, Patrick Street), Patrick Street grew from a quartet to an octet with the temporary addition of fiddler James Kelly, keyboardist Bill Whelan, piper Declan Masterson, and guitarist O'Beirne. This little-big-band enables the group to achieve an astonishing density of sound on five songs and five instrumental medleys. Especially effective is their Ceili version of the Penguin Café Orchestra's "Music for a Found Harmonium." By the time the band tackled All in Good Time ♪♪♪♪½ (Green Linnet, 1993, prod. Bill Whelan), Patrick Street had achieved a longevity and a corresponding cohesiveness known to no other Irish band but the Chieftains. The pay-off came in the exquisite arrangements and well-earned rapport of songs and tunes on this album. The highlight is the seven-and-a-half-minute medley, "Lintheads," which threads together two songs about textile mills with evocative instrumentals. The instrumental highlights of No.2 Patrick Street ♪♪♪♪½ (Green Linnet, 1988, prod. Patrick Street) include the jigs and reels written by Daly for his effortlessly flute-like accordion figures. Vocal highlights include Irvine's revamping of Guthrie's "Tom Joad" to the tune of "John Hardy" and Irvine's own stirring song about Sacco and Vanzetti. McGlynn was replaced by Battlefield Band guitarist Ged Foley on Corner Boys ♪♪♪♪ (Green Linnet, 1996, prod. Patrick Street), and he helped Burke and Daly forego all tentative and ornamental notes to carve out confident, surprising melodic variations. And whether accompanying each other's solos or Irvine's vocals, these pickers know how to push without shoving.

what to buy next: Even on their debut album, Patrick Street ♪♪♪♪½ (Green Linnet, 1988, prod. Donal Lunny), the promise of this illustrious band was already obvious. Burke's fiddle and Daly's accordion improvise grand leaps over the pulsing rhythms of McGlynn's guitar and Irvine's bouzouki. The highlights, though, were the three ballads which Irvine sings with a whispery intimacy that brings a genuine affection to his themes of loss. On Made in Cork ♪♪♪♪½ (Green Linnet, 1997, prod. Patrick Street), the group seemed content to rely on proven methods rather than push forward with any innovations. These methods prove as pleasurable as ever, however.

influences:

◀◀ Bothy Band, Planxty, De Danann

▶▶ Celtic Thunder, Solas

Geoffrey Himes

Charley Patton

Born April 1891, in Bolton, MS. Died April 28, 1934, in Indianola, MS.

Thanks to Eric Clapton and the marketing power of Sony Records, the great Delta bluesman Robert Johnson has become an American icon. Patton, whose dark and occasionally frightening delivery influenced Johnson, Son House, and Howlin' Wolf, to name a few, is still known mainly to historians and hard-core blues fans. After he started playing guitar in 1907, his talent made him a celebrity in his native Mississippi, where he drew unprecedented, large crowds to hear him sing. Like his successors Johnson and Lightnin' Hopkins, Patton's songs were obsessed with death: "Oh Death," "Prayer of Death," "Jesus Is a Dying-Bed Maker," and "Poor Me" were among his better-known titles. What's really jarring, even upon hearing the static-filled 1929 recordings that constitute his legacy, is the emotional desperation in his deep voice and the urgent one-two rhythm of his acoustic guitar. Just five years after record-store owner H.C. Speir tracked him down and took him into the studio, Patton died of a chronic heart condition.

what's available: Unlike Johnson, Patton was a prolific studio musician, recording 43 sides in his first year and continuing until his death. The two collections of this output, King of the Delta Blues ♪♪♪♪♪ (Yazoo/Shanachie, 1991) and Founder of the Delta Blues ♪♪♪♪½ (Yazoo/Shanachie, 1989), have been impeccably transferred to CD with thorough accompanying liner notes and an R. Crumb portrait.

worth searching for: The multi-volume Complete Recorded Works ♪♪♪ (Document, 1994–95) has absolutely everything, but it's hard tracking down all three volumes. Masters of the Delta Blues: The Friends of Charley Patton ♪♪♪½ (Yazoo/Shanachie, 1991, prod. various) has excellent performances by Patton followers Willie Brown, Son House, Bukka White, and several others.

influences:

◀◀ Blind Lemon Jefferson, Earl Harris, Jim Jackson

▶▶ Robert Johnson, Willie Brown, Booker Miller, Lightnin' Hopkins, Howlin' Wolf, Skip James, Eric Clapton, John Hammond Jr.

Steve Knopper

Ellis Paul

Born 1966, In Fort Kent, ME.

Ellis Paul was raised in Presque Isle, a small town in northern Maine. He hails from a family whose past generations earned their living by potato farming. He learned the ethic of hard work and perseverance that is reflected in the characters of his songs, and this background has greatly influenced his perception of the modern world in which he now travels. After attending college in Boston on a track scholarship, Paul began playing his music at various open mikes and was soon selling out clubs on his own. He was discovered by New England singer-songwriter Bill Morrissey, who produced his first album, Say Something. He has since developed a strong national following by playing 200-plus shows a year, performing in major festivals, night clubs, and church basements. He is a six-time winner of the Boston Music Awards, a 1994 winner of the prestigious Kerrville New Folk Award, winner of the Acoustic Underground Competition, and a USA Today selection as a "best bet for stardom." Few singer-songwriters in recent years have received the critical and popular acclaim accorded Paul and he is proving to be one of the most original voices on the scene today.

what to buy: A Carnival of Voices ♪♪♪♪ (Philo/Rounder, 1996, prod. Jerry Marotta) is Paul's latest and features an all-star cast including bassist Tony Levin of King Crimson, guitarists Duke Levine and Bill Dillon, and vocalists Jennifer Kimball, late of the Story, and Patty Griffin. From the opening "Midnight Strikes Too Soon" to the striking "Deliver Me," Paul demonstrates considerable lyrical skill and a unique voice that you won't mistake for anyone else. "Never Lived at All" describes how three people deal with their unrealized dreams in different ways. Guitar Player magazine said, "think T.S. Eliot or Ezra Pound set to a crisp, arty soundtrack." If you haven't heard Paul yet, this would be the best place to start.

what to buy next: Stories ♪♪♪½ (Black Wolf, 1994/Philo/Rounder, 1995, prod. Duke Levine), Paul's second album, discusses everything from the death of River Phoenix to the "Autobiography of a Pistol," a story told from the point of view of a .45. The production is first rate and the supporting cast is a worthy match for Paul's incisive and confessional lyrics as well as his Dylanesque voice. The album was originally released on Black Wolf Records but was picked up by Rounder who then signed him to the recording contract that produced A Carnival of Voices.

the rest:
Say Something ♪♪♪ (Black Wolf, 1993)

influences:
⏪ Woody Guthrie, Bob Dylan, Bill Morrissey

Neal Walters

Gayla Drake Paul

Even if you're a splendid songwriter with an unusually evocative voice, it's not easy to distinguish yourself in an ocean of would-be songsmiths. And even if you're an exceptional guitarist with an original and distinctive style, it can be a while before you're noticed, given the endless supply of guitar-slingers vying for the world's attention. The question is: if you're both of these things, does that give you an advantage, or does it make things twice as difficult? Such is the dilemma for Gayla Drake Paul, who suffers the additional disadvantage of being from Ely, Iowa, a long way from the dense circuits of the coasts. One imagines that if Paul were based in, say, Philadelphia, her career would have attained a much broader arc by now, her audiences caring little whether she's a songwriter queen or a guitar goddess. As it is, Paul continues to seduce audiences and wow critics on the club and festival circuit, as well as firmly establishing her reputation as a guitarist, appearing at Muriel Anderson's elite Guitar Night in Nashville and doing appearances and ads for Gallagher guitars and John Pearse strings.

what to buy: Her first album, the gemlike Gayla Drake Paul ♪♪♪♪ (Ivanhoe Road, 1994, prod. Curtis Paul), is her one project that weds songs, voice, and guitar into one evocative, seamless whole. Paul's voice has a dark, introspective quality that invites comparison to June Tabor or Sandy Denny, great traditional singers whose austere styles are more powerful for their understatement. Her own guitar accompaniment seems a perfect compliment to that voice—playing almost exclusively in a modal "D" tuning (à la Pierre Bensusan), providing a velvety backdrop, and occasionally bursting into silvery pyrotechnics.

what to buy next: How Can I Keep from Singing? Works for Solo Guitar ♪♪♪½ (Ivanhoe Road, 1997, prod. Curtis Paul), her third release, holds its own and then some among the widening array of self-produced fingerstyle guitar recordings. Sweet-toned and skillful throughout, it's a program of original music with a sprinkling of traditional Celtic tunes—staples of the fingerstyle repertoire but somehow much more convincing in the hands of a masterful tone-monger like Paul. Warning: this CD was issued in a plastic slipcase, akin to the way radio or retail promo CDs are packaged, rather than the conventional jewel box, or the environmentally-friendly paper gatefold. Retailers are reluctant to carry CDs in oddball packages; this one may be a little harder to find.

what to avoid: While by no means a bad album, Waiting for the Spark ♪♪♪ (Ivanhoe Road, 1995, prod. Curtis Paul) may have been a little too self-consciously a departure from the first CD. Though some heavyweight guests like John Hartford, Gordon Stone, Bob Black, and others play well (as they always do), the result sounds like a lot of other singer-songwriter efforts, and some of the intimacy and understated power of the first album is lost.

influences:

◀◀ Joni Mitchell, Nick Drake, Pierre Bensusan

▶▶ Ariane Lydon, Steve Baughman

Chris Rietz

Pat Paulsen

See: Smothers Brothers

Tom Paxton

Born October 31, 1937, in Chicago, IL.

Tom Paxton never became as popular as his songs. "Ramblin' Boy," "I Can't Help but Wonder Where I'm Bound," and "The Last Thing on My Mind" inspire sing-alongs almost any time they are played at folk gatherings. Paxton, who made his primary impact on the New York folk scene during the early and mid-'60s, charted with a few albums but never seemed in danger of becoming a major pop phenomenon like Bob Dylan. His modest popular acceptance, though, has allowed him to continue a career as a topical songwriter long after "protest songs" went out of vogue. With his gentle tenor, Paxton always seemed more prone to laugh at the foibles that produced inequities than to moralize. Not that he wasn't serious. Such sensitive social tunes as "Goodman, Schwerner and Chaney" and "The Death of Stephen Biko" illustrate that Paxton's humanity—the same element that helped his mellower tunes become anthems—has been more important than his politics. Woody Guthrie's influence is clear in such political Paxton numbers as "Ain't That News," which tout the values of organizing to battle inequities, but Paxton's true strength as a protest singer lays in such winking satires as "The Willing Conscript" and "Talking Vietnam Potluck Blues." In the decades since his heyday, he's kept his hand in it with such satires as "Little Bitty Gun" and "You Can Eat Dogfood." Since the '70s, Paxton, like a number of folkies since Guthrie, has recorded fun-filled children's music as well.

what to buy: Heroes ♪♪♪♪ (Vanguard, 1978, prod. Jeff Zaraya) marked a high point in Paxton's post–Vietnam era career. "The Death of Stephen Biko" and "There Goes the Mountain" showed there were still "protest" topics available. Even a Gray Day ♪♪♪♪ (Flying Fish, 1983, prod. Bob Gibson) offers Paxton in a mellow but blue mood with an atypical collection dominated by love songs. The Marvelous Toy and Other Gallimaufry ♪♪♪♪ (Flying Fish, 1984, prod. Bob Gibson) proves the best of Paxton's kid collections, sparked by the same sense of humor and humanity that make his political satires worthy.

what to buy next: The Very Best of Tom Paxton ♪♪♪½ (Flying Fish, 1988, prod. Bob Gibson) doesn't quite live up to its title, but it does give a good picture of Paxton's songwriting strengths. Live for the Record ♪♪♪½ (Sugar Hill, 1996, prod. Jim Rooney) starts off with too many of what Paxton himself describes as "short shelf-life songs," like "Tonya Harding" and "Let's Go to Michael Jackson's House." Overall, though, the album gives an excellent snapshot of a Paxton's '90s performing style and social concerns. A Child's Christmas ♪♪♪½ (Sony Kids' Music, 1992, prod. Bob Gibson) is the next-best on Paxton's list of children's albums.

the rest:

New Songs from the Briarpatch ♪♪♪ (Vanguard, 1977)
One Million Lawyers and Other Disasters ♪♪♪ (Flying Fish, 1985)
And Loving You ♪♪♪ (Flying Fish, 1986)
Politics: Live at Old Town School of Folk Music ♪♪♪ (Flying Fish, 1989)
It Ain't Easy ♪♪♪ (Flying Fish, 1991)
Wearing the Time ♪♪♪ (Sugar Hill, 1994)
Goin' to the Zoo ♪♪♪ (Rounder, 1997)
I've Got a Yo-Yo ♪♪♪ (Rounder, 1997)

worth searching for: Paxton's initial spurt of songwriting produced some of his most enduring songs, so any of his Elektra titles are well worth the search. The tunes on Ain't That News ♪♪♪½ (Elektra, 1965) include the romantic "Hold onto Me Babe," the satiric "The Willing Conscript," and such timely protest tunes as "Lyndon Johnson Told the Nation." Paxton Primer ♪♪♪♪ (Pax, 1986, prod. Tom Paxton) captures Paxton's best material on one vinyl LP on his own label.

influences:

◀◀ Woody Guthrie, Pete Seeger

▶▶ Bob Gibson, Michael Cooney

Salvatore Caputo

Tom Paxton (© Linda Vartoogian)

Herb Pederson

See: Laurel Canyon Ramblers

Don Pedi

Born May 2, 1947, in Boston, MA.

Don Pedi grew up in New England but moved to North Carolina in 1974. Inspired primarily by the playing of Richard Fariña, he took up the mountain dulcimer in 1968 and is entirely self-taught. Patrick Sky and Howie Mitchell were also early influences. Around 1982 he started playing regularly with fiddler Bruce Greene, developing a repertoire of archaic tunes and a playing style that fits the dulcimer to the fiddle as if they were made for each other. Pedi lives in western North Carolina but plays and teaches at music and dance camps around the country.

what's available: Pedi's first CD offering is The Hog Went through the Fence Yoke and All ♪♪♪♪♪ (Class IV Records, 1995, prod. Adam Greenberg, Don Pedi). The other musicians assisting Pedi on this disc are Steve Millard on guitar, John Herrmann on bass, Barry Benjamin on banjo, Helen Stewart on feet, and—notably—Bruce Greene on fiddle. With someone like Greene on board, you might be tempted to think that this disc will present the dulcimer as a backup instrument. Well, don't. Pedi takes the dulcimer into a realm where it complements the fiddle perfectly, not as accompaniment but as an equal. These two have been playing together for a long time, and it shows, but what comes across most strongly is how surprisingly well these two instruments can be put together. Despite the crookedness of some of these tunes, the dulcimer and fiddle are in perfect sync and equalized at perfectly matched levels. They are mostly tunes that Greene learned in his travels around Kentucky, many of which are not recorded elsewhere. They're played at a slightly faster pace than Greene would play them solo, and they take on a new dimension. "Old Tobacco Hills," while retaining its stately presence, makes for a dance tune that would probably empty the chairs in the first two measures. There are also selections where the dulcimer takes the lead and is backed by guitar, bass, or banjo. If you've listened to a lot of mediocre old-time music, you might think a dulcimer/banjo duet wouldn't work; Benjamin's clean, spare clawhammer playing is perfect for this role, making "Liza Jane" a standout. There are a few dulcimer solos, most of which are also Kentucky fiddle tunes set to the dulcimer. The recording quality is excellent, sources are credited in the liner notes, and tunings are given for fiddle and dulcimer. This disc might be difficult to find in record stores, but is available from Class IV Productions, 9 Busbee View Road, Asheville, North Carolina 28803.

6/2/2 ann peebles

influences:

⏪ Bruce Greene, Richard Fariña

⏩ Alan Freeman, David Schnaufer

Dave Shombert

Ann Peebles

Born April 27, 1947, in St. Louis, MO.

Often overlooked in the vast shadow of Al Green's success, Ann Peebles's seven albums for Memphis-based Hi Records contain some of the finest music of the '70s soul era. Like Green, Peebles's records were produced and arranged by Willie Mitchell, and they featured the same superb Hi Records house band. But while Green sang of "Love and Happiness," Peebles mined a darker vein of bitter loss, betrayal, and regret with tunes such as "I'm Gonna Tear Your Playhouse Down" and "Feel like Breakin' Up Somebody's Home." And Mitchell's musical arrangements for Peebles were sparer, more intimate—emotionally attuned to a voice soaked in longing and pain. Her high point came with the 1974 album I Can't Stand the Rain and its oft-covered title tune. During the late '70s, she abruptly retired from music to raise a family, though she was coaxed back into a Memphis studio for an excellent 1992 comeback record, Full-Time Love.

what to buy: The Best of the Hi Records Years ♪♪♪♪ (The Right Stuff, 1996, prod. Willie Mitchell) provides an overview of Peebles's Hi Records recordings. Containing all the essential hits, it's the place to start. Ann Peebles's Greatest Hits ♪♪♪♪ (MCA, 1992, prod. Willie Mitchell) is also a fine collection. Anyone who loves classic soul should own a copy of I Can't Stand the Rain ♪♪♪♪ (Hi, 1973/The Right Stuff, 1993, prod. Willie Mitchell).

what to buy next: Full Time Love ♪♪♪ (Bullseye Blues, 1992, prod. Ron Levy) is Peebles's long-overdue return to the studio, backed by many of the original Hi Records studio musicians. Despite the absence of Mitchell's guiding hand, its high points (such as a brilliant version of Delbert McClinton's "Read Me My Rights") reach the level of her finest Hi recordings.

the rest:

Straight from the Heart ♪♪♪½ (Hi, 1971/The Right Stuff, 1993)
It Must Be Love ♪♪♪½ (Capitol Special Products, 1994)
Fill This World with Love ♪♪♪ (Bullseye Blues, 1996)
St. Louis Woman, Memphis Soul ♪♪♪♪ (Hi, 1996)

worth searching for: Most of Peebles's original Hi albums are available now only as imports. Look for If This Is Heaven ♪♪♪½ (Hi U.K., 1978, prod. Willie Mitchell), which has been packaged with Tellin' It (Hi, 1976, prod. Willie Mitchell).

influences:

⏪ Mahalia Jackson, Aretha Franklin, Sam Cooke

⏩ Toni Braxton, Annie Lennox, Otis Clay

Doug Pippin

Bob & Carole Pegg

See: Mr. Fox

George Pegram

Born August 5, 1911, in Oak Ridge, NC. Died September 12, 1974.

Banjo player George Pegram has a place in folk history, if only for inspiring the formation of the pivotal Rounder Records imprint during the early '70s. By the time label founders Ken Irwin and Bill Nowlin happened upon the North Carolina native, however, he already had decades of performing experience under his belt. Pegram picked up the banjo when he was around nine. In the '40s, he performed at horse shows and fiddler conventions while working an assortment of jobs in North Carolina and Virginia. In 1949 folk-festival promoter Bascom Lunsford came across the lanky picker supposedly when Lunsford's car broke down and Pegram came to his aid. Pegram earned local acclaim through the '50s playing at dances, fairs, and festivals where he displayed an innate showmanship. For a period, he formed a duo with harmonica player Red Parham, with whom he recorded for the Riverside label. The partnership dissolved due, it's said, to Parham's discomfort with Pegram's unrestrained showboating. In the late '50s, he began playing with the Bushy Mountain Boys, an association that continued into the '60s. Later in the decade, Pegram was hired to perform at Southern Railroad conferences, which took him around the country. An appearance at the 1969 Mountain Dance and Folk Festival in Asheville, North Carolina, brought him additional exposure, prompting string-band devotee Charles Faurot to record Pegram. When the Kanawha label passed on the record, two undergraduates in Boston decided to put together their own label to release it, and Rounder Records was born. Pegram continue to perform during the '70s before his death in 1974 of bone cancer.

what to buy: George Pegram ♪♪♪♪½ (Rounder, 1970/1995, prod. Charlie Faurot) demonstrates the appeal of this engaging rustic. Backed by mandolin, fiddle, and guitar, Pegram picks and hoots his way through an assortment of old-time and gospel standards with unbridled merriment. The CD builds upon its vinyl source (released as Rounder 0001) by adding a half-dozen previously unreleased tracks.

influences:

◀◀ Uncle Dave Macon, Bill Monroe, Ola Belle Reed

▶▶ Wayne Erbsen, Jody Stecher & Kate Brislin

Steven Stolder

Pentangle

Formed 1967, in England. Disbanded 1973; re-formed 1983.

Bert Jansch, guitar, vocals (1967–73, 1983–94); Jacqui McShee, vocals; Terry Cox, drums, percussion (1967–73, 1983–89); John Renbourn, guitar, vocals, sitar (1967–73, 1983–85); Danny Thompson, bass (1967–73, 1983–85); Mike Piggott, guitar (1985–89); Nigel Portman-Smith, bass (1985–89); Gerry Conway, drums (1990–present); Peter Kirtley, guitar (1990–94); Spencer Cozens, keyboards (1995–present).

The original Pentangle grew out of the collaborations of British finger-style guitarists Bert Jansch and John Renbourn. Both on their own and in their duets they display a great appreciation for the subtle swing and interplay of jazz, and so it now seems a very natural evolution that they added a rhythm section. Thompson played upright bass and had an affinity for Charles Mingus (a favorite of Renbourn and Jansch) and Cox was comfortable playing with brushes at a time when drum sets were growing louder and larger. On top of this singer McShee's crystalline vocal sang lyrics and melodies that drew from American and British folk traditions, but her inflections had more in common with the cool trumpet of Miles Davis than Cecil Sharp's ballad singers. The overall combination made for a remarkably elegant hybrid of Celtic, folk, jazz, and blues. In hindsight, the music seems all the more impressive when contrasted with the overwrought studio albums that followed Sergeant Pepper or the roar of the psychedelic sound that dominated the airwaves at that time. After three extremely well-made records, the group struggled along, disbanded in 1973, and re-formed briefly from 1983 to 1985. Jansch and McShee then kept together one version or another until 1994, when Jansch left. McShee now works with drummer Conway and keyboardist Cousins and the trio continues to use the name Pentangle.

what to buy: There isn't a false step in Pentangle's brief career. Basket of Light ♪♪♪♪♪ (Reprise/Transatlantic, 1969/Castle, 1996, prod. Shel Talmy) is perhaps the most commercially successful effort, yielding two modest hits in the United Kingdom: "Once I Had a Sweetheart" and "Sally Free and Easy."

what to buy next: Sweet Child ♪♪♪♪♪ (Reprise, 1968/Castle, 1996, prod. Shel Talmy) is a double album that explores most of the themes on subsequent releases. It's maybe the most diverse record ranging from updated arrangements of traditional Celtic tunes, to a tribute to Manhattan street composer Moondog, to Thompson's solo rendering of Mingus's Haitian Fight Song.

what to avoid: Open the Door ♪♪ (Varrick, 1985/Shanachie, 1985, prod. Pentangle) is a disappointing return after a lengthy absence and holds none of the magic of the early recordings.

the rest:

The Pentangle ♪♪♪½ (Reprise, 1968/Castle, 1996)
In the Round ♪♪ (Varrick, 1986)
So Early in the Spring ♪♪♪½ (Green Linnet, 1990)
Think of Tomorrow ♪♪♪ (Green Linnet, 1991)
People on the Highway (1968–1971) ♪♪♪½ (Transatlantic, 1992/1994)
Collection ♪♪♪½ (Castle, 1992)
Live at the BBC ♪♪♪♪ (Band of Joy, 1995) worth searching for: Cruel Sister ♪♪♪♪♪ (Reprise, 1971/Castle, 1996, prod. Shel Talmy) introduced electric guitars into the group's arrangements; understated and flowing, its focus is more exclusive of Celtic folk. The 18 minutes of "Jack Orion" organically builds and builds in a way few bands could do. Early Classics ♪♪♪♪½ (Shanachie, 1992, prod. various) is a good overview, but the flow and segues from the original recordings are missed.

influences:

◀◀ Charles Mingus, Davey Graham, Ian Campbell Group, Miles Davis

▶▶ Nick Drake, John Martyn, Clannad

Jared Snyder

Tommy Peoples

Born September 20, 1948, in Letterkenny, Co. Donegal, Ireland.

In his book Notes from the Heart, Irish record producer P.J. Curtis writes about taking an American friend to a session in a

tommy peoples

Clare pub and of his friend's disbelief when it was revealed that the fiddler playing there was none other than Tommy Peoples. One of the few true masters of Irish traditional fiddle playing, one whose sound can be instantly identified, Peoples remains an unassuming man, generous with his music, and happy to lead a simple life in the countryside of County Clare—he doesn't even have a phone at home. Peoples grew up in a musical family in the village of St. Johnston, in the eastern part of County Donegal that borders with Northern Ireland. Peoples's father, Tom, who was a fiddle player himself, and especially his cousin Joe Cassidy, were Tommy's first source of inspiration and instruction on the fiddle. By all accounts, he was already an impressive player by the time he reached his teenage years. After leaving school, Peoples moved to Dublin where he soon joined in the growing traditional music scene, playing at sessions with the likes of Matt Molloy, Liam O'Flynn, James and Seán Keane, and Mary Bergin. By the early 1970s, Peoples was living in Clare where he had married the daughter of Kitty Linnane, piano player for the famed Kilfenora Ceili Band. He became a member and participated in a 1974 recording of the band produced by Mick Moloney for the American label Tradition. During that same period, he was also involved for a time with 1691, a short-lived group that toured and recorded in Brittany. Among other members of the band were singer and clavinet player Tríona Ní Dhomhnaill and flute player Matt Molloy, with whom Peoples would soon become a member of the legendary Bothy Band in 1975. The band's debut album, which remains a revered classic, featured Peoples's fiery fiddle-playing prominently. However, the pressures of the road did not agree with Peoples, who parted company with the band in 1976 and settled in Clare once again. That same year, Comhaltas Ceoltóirí Éireann (Irish Musicians' Association) released an album of live recordings of Peoples made between 1974 and 1976, still regarded as an essential record. In 1976 the fiddler also made a brand new album, The High Part of the Road, with guitarist Paul Brady as his accompanist, for the New York label Shanachie. Out of Peoples's participation in informal sessions in Dublin came the exhilarating Matt Molloy, Paul Brady, Tommy Peoples, recorded for Dónal Lunny's Mulligan label in 1977 and released the following year. That same year, Peoples appeared on Paul Brady's celebrated Welcome Here Kind Stranger. In 1985 Peoples renewed his ties with Shanachie and recorded The Iron Man, with Dáithí Sproule providing the guitar accompaniment. Since then, Peoples has recorded a couple more solo albums, released only in Ireland, but their poor production hasn't done justice to his playing. He continues to appear in concert and teach for workshops. His daughters Siobhán and Gráinne carry on the family tradition with distinction, as does his nephew Séamus Gibson, who strives with great success to emulate his uncle's playing style. And if you are ever in Ennis or Kilfenora, County Clare, you may well run into Tommy Peoples at the local session.

what's available: The High Part of the Road ♪♪♪♪ (Shanachie, 1976, prod. Richard Nevins, Daniel Michael Collins) was Peoples's first album to be distributed in the United States. His playing has its characteristic urgency and rough edge, even with Paul Brady's guitar playing lending an air of civility. There are some great tunes here associated with Donegal, for instance the reels "The Oak Tree" and "The Pinch of Snuff." Matt Molloy, Paul Brady, Tommy Peoples ♪♪♪♪♪ (Mulligan, 1978/Green Linnet, 1985, prod. Dónal Lunny, Paul Brady), sounding much as if the three musicians were having a bit of a session in a Dublin pub, is one of those albums that belong at the top of any list of Irish recordings. It is pure energy and a thrilling listening experience. It would be impossible to list highlights of the album, for each new track is better than the previous one. The Iron Man ♪♪♪♪½ (Shanachie, 1985, prod. Daniel Michael Collins, Richard Nevins), with Dáithí Sproule contributing his usual stellar guitar backing, recaptures the atmosphere of Peoples's 1976 album, with some of the rougher edges having been smoothed over. Once again, most of the tracks are of reels, but the medley of strathspeys, including the title tune "The Iron Man" and the hornpipe "Kitty O'Shea," are things of wonder.

worth searching for: Peoples appears with his daughter Siobhán (fiddle) on several tracks of the wonderful live recording Maiden Voyage ♪♪♪♪½ (Celtic Music, 1991, prod. Páraic MacDonnchadha, Kevin Crawford), made on location at Peppers Bar in Feakle, County Clare. There are other local performers involved, the music is varied and excellent throughout, and it retains the feel of a live session. If you are very lucky, you may come across Peoples's very first solo LP, Tommy Peoples ♪♪♪♪½ (Comhaltas Ceoltóirí Éireann, 1976, prod. Séamus MacMathúna). Do not let it pass; it is one of the most exciting records of Irish fiddle playing ever made. Paul Brady's Welcome Here Kind Stranger ♪♪♪♪½ (Mulligan, 1978, prod. Dónal Lunny, Paul Brady), an outstanding album recently reissued on compact disc in Ireland and worth looking for in any case, happens to feature the playing of Peoples on several tracks, including the spectacular set of reels "The Boys on the Hilltop/Johnny Goin' to Céilidh."

influences:

Matt Peoples, Joe Cassidy, Vincent Campbell, Frank Kelly, Jimmy Hueston

Siobhán Peoples, Gráinne Peoples, Séamus Gibson, Mairéad Ní Mhaonaigh, Paddy Glackin, Paul O'Shaughnessy

see also: Bothy Band, Matt Molloy, Paul Brady

Philippe Varlet

Larry Perkins

See: Lonesome Standard Time

Ken Perlman

Born 1949, in New York, NY.

Not content to be merely a talented multi-instrumentalist (banjo, fiddle, and guitar), New York City native Ken Perlman has achieved a well-deserved reputation in the folk music world over the last 20 years as a writer, teacher, and musicologist. In addition to his recordings, he is a regular contributor to such folk-music publications as Sing Out! and Banjo Newsletter, has produced several instructional videos, and has written a number of instructional books in the popular Mel Bay series. While in his own words, he was "swept away" by the folk-music boom of the early '60s, he found himself being attracted more and more to traditional music and material wherever he could find it. Rather than play this traditional music in the traditional way, however, he began to develop his own approaches to the music. In particular, he devoted much energy and thought to arranging tunes for instruments, especially the five-string banjo, that were considered extremely difficult if not impossible to play on that instrument. Eventually, he became one of the relatively few banjo players to master his own distinctive, melodic clawhammer style. The typical banjo style (old-time or bluegrass) tends to contain more "filler" notes than actual melody, but Perlman's style allows him to perform recognizable tunes on the banjo as a solo instrument. While researching material for a Mel Bay book, he visited Canada's Prince Edward Island and came under the spell of Maritime fiddlers like George MacPhee, Eddy Arsenault, and Peter Chaisson. The fiddling tradition of the island province is so strong, he discovered, that fretted instruments and the people who play them are viewed with a mixture of amusement and suspicion. After absorbing a great many of the Maritime dance hall fiddle tunes, he set to work translating them to the clawhammer banjo, and the result was his 1996 release Island Boy. While in recent years players like Béla Fleck, Tony Trischka, and Alison Brown have taken the bluegrass banjo style into previously uncharted territory bordering on jazz and rock, Perlman continues to mine new veins in the traditional realm.

what to buy: The reels, jigs, and strathspeys of the Scottish settlers who came to the Canadian Maritime provinces, specifically Prince Edward Island, form the basis of Perlman's 1996 release Island Boy ♪♪♪♪ (Wizmak, 1996, prod. Ken Perlman, John Rossbach, Pete Sutherland, Eric Kilburn). Entirely instrumental, the 16 tracks are presented as medleys done in Perlman's intricate melodic style, covering a total of 41 tunes. Most of the tunes will be unfamiliar to American ears, with the popular "St. Anne's Reel" being a notable exception. Perlman's liner notes for the album go into detail about each tune, and true to his calling as a teacher, he includes the key and banjo tuning for each piece for those who want to learn, or just play along.

the rest:

Devil in the Kitchen ♪♪♪½ (Marimac, 1993) worth searching for: Live in the U.K. ♪♪♪ (Halstead, 1987), currently available on cassette only, may be released on CD in the near future. Clawhammer Banjo and Fingerstyle Guitar Solos ♪♪♪½ (Folkways, 1984, prod. Andy Polon) and Melodic Clawhammer Banjo ♪♪♪ (Kicking Mule, 1977, prod. Ken Perlman) are out-of-print LPs that can sometimes be found in the stalls of record dealers at folk, bluegrass, and old-time festivals.

influences:

Walt Koken, Howie Bursen, Kathleen Collins, Andy McGann

Tony Ellis, Carroll Best, Will Keys

John Lupton

Cliff Perry & Laurel Bliss

Formed 1978, in Seattle, WA.

Cliff Perry (born January 16, 1944), guitar, vocals; Laurel Bliss (born November 6, 1951), guitar, Dobro, vocals.

Cliff Perry and Laurel Bliss rank among the best of the current crop of old-time country song interpreters. Bliss is blessed with an unusual vocal timbre, which is by turns deep, rugged, and airy. Perry's mellow baritone fuses with her dusky alto, creating understated homespun harmonies that are pure and sweet as mountain spring water. Veterans of the Seattle, Washington old-time and bluegrass scene, their exquisite blend of forthright country harmonies is a standout because of its subtle (and occasionally quirky) ornamentation; Perry and Bliss have thoroughly internalized the vocal style of a bygone time and place, and have made it their own. In 1987, after years of singing together as members of the legendary Pacific Northwest bluegrass band Southfork, Perry and Bliss made a home recording of eight of their favorite old-time country duets. Seven years later, they re-recorded those songs, and added six more in the same genre; this lovely recording is their only commercially available one.

what's available: Old Pal ♪♪♪♪ (Telegraph Music, 1993, prod. John M. Miller) peacefully evokes the old-time way of life in the Southern mountains, with its simple but powerful arrangements of songs by the Carter Valley, the Blue Sky Boys, and other early country music singers. Recorded direct to DAT (without any mixing, splicing, or overdubbing), Old Pal garnered rave reviews from such icons of old-time music as Jody Stecher, who calls the album "superb." Perry and Bliss have spent many years absorbing the ethos of early country music of the 1920s and 1930s, and this is expressed in their vocal approach, which is straightforward and plain, but emotionally intensely direct. The backup is very simple indeed, consisting solely of Perry on guitar and Bliss on guitar and Dobro; Old Pal is definitely an album of songs, rather than a showcase of instrumental virtuosity, but mention must be made of Bliss's melting Dobro tone, which reflects the influence of Dobroist Sally Van Meter.

influences:

◀◀ Carter Family, Blue Sky Boys, Monroe Brothers

▶▶ Jody Stecher & Kate Brislin, Carol Elizabeth Jones & James Leva, Any Old Time Stringband, Delta Sisters, Sally Van Meter

Suzy Rothfield Thompson

Peter & Gordon

Formed 1963, in London, England; disbanded 1968.

Peter Asher (born June 22, 1944, in London, England), vocals, guitar; Gordon Waller (born June 4, 1945, in Braemar, Scotland), vocals, guitar.

Peter Asher and Gordon Waller began singing together as schoolmates at London's Westminster School for Boys. Asher became friends with Paul McCartney in the early days of Beatlemania when Paul was dating Asher's younger sister, Jane. Peter and Gordon's first three hits, including their chart-topping breakthrough "A World without Love," all came from McCartney's prolific pen, and during 1964 and '65, the duo was constantly on the charts. In addition to McCartney, Peter and Gordon tapped Del Shannon, Phil Spector, and Buddy Holly (the red-headed Asher wore Holly-like spectacles in tribute to the late rocker) for its soft-rocking material, and although the duo often wrote songs together, most of the twosome's bluesier originals were relegated to album cuts and b-sides. Besides Holly, the duo's early influences ranged from Woody Guthrie and Charlie Parker to Elvis Presley, with the Everly Brothers providing firm common ground. After Peter and Gordon's hits stopped coming, Asher went on to become an in-demand producer and manager, playing key roles in the careers of numerous contemporary folk-tinged artists including James Taylor and Linda Ronstadt.

what's available: The Best of Peter and Gordon ♪♪♪½ (Rhino 1991, comp. prod. Bill Inglot) traces the duo's entire 1964–68 career, including the four Paul McCartney–penned chartbusters and all their other hits. As their material became increasingly middle-of-the-road, it lost much of its spark, so many of the latter songs here are curiosities at best, like their precious late mini-hit "Sunday for Tea" (a second-rate attempt to create a Ray Davies–like slice of life scene) and a clueless stab at Phil Ochs's topical "The Flower Lady." Greatest Hits ♪♪♪ (CEMA Special Products, 1992/1994, prod. various) offers just the hits, no filler or surprises on this specially priced, 10-track collection.

worth searching for: For a real flashback to mid-'60s British pop with folk and blues leanings, I Go to Pieces ♪♪♪ (Capitol, 1965, prod. Norman Newell, John Burgess, Dave Dexter Jr.) showcases the duo's harmonies in a more relaxed setting then you get when you hear just the hits. Along with the Del Shannon–composed title track, you get several of Peter and Gordon's best originals, oddly appealing covers of songs by Leadbelly and Pomus/Shuman, and a very Everlys-esque version of "All Shook Up."

influences:

◀◀ Paul McCartney, Everly Brothers

▶▶ Linda Ronstadt, Hollies

David Sokol

Peter, Paul & Mary

Formed 1961, in New York City; disbanded 1970; reunited 1978.

Peter Yarrow (born May 31, 1938, in New York, NY), guitar, vocals; Noel "Paul" Stookey (born November 30, 1937, in Baltimore, MD), guitar, vocals; Mary Travers (born November 11, 1937, in Louisville, KY), vocals.

Following their 1961 debut at Greenwich Village's Bitter End coffee house, Peter, Paul, and Mary went on to become the most successful folk group of the decade. Emulating the Weavers' tradition of blending classic with contemporary repertoire, the trio recorded 19 hit singles (six in the Top 10), and 11 hit albums (eight going gold) before 1970. Their lush three-part harmonies and their commitments to promoting social justice have produced such timeless hits as "Blowin' in the Wind" (Bob Dylan), "If I Had a Hammer" (Pete Seeger and Lee Hays), "Leaving on a Jet Plane" (John Denver), and "Puff the Magic Dragon" (by Peter, Paul, and Mary's own Peter Yarrow). In 1970 the trio split to pursue three moderately successful solo careers, reuniting only in 1976 to produce their "25th Anniversary Concert"—one of the most popular PBS fund-raisers in history. In 1978 Peter, Paul, and Mary officially restated their vows and have since maintained a steady career of performing and recording: members divide their time between group and solo projects, playing about 45 dates a year as a trio. And true to their roots, Peter, Paul, and Mary support benefits for homelessness, world hunger, anti-apartheid, and other worthy causes. Their career as a trio now spans 19 albums and two generations, as they bring their magical vocal blend—and a piece of their 1960s idealism—to the children of their earliest fans.

what to buy: Peter, Paul, and Mary ♪♪♪♪♪ (Warner Bros., 1962, prod. Albert Grossman) marks the trio's recording debut, bringing folk music to the vast American public and to the top of the charts. The liner notes accurately describe their blend as "an angel, and two cellos playing guitars." Shining with youthful enthusiasm and virtue, the album serves as a reminder of our nobler selves and of the social consciousness in which folk music is rooted. The double-sided hit "Lemon Tree" and "If I Had a Hammer" is a classic pairing of musical story telling and political activism—the later becoming an anthem of the civil rights movement. "Cruel War" and "Where Have All the Flowers Gone" speak eloquently of the personal sacrifices supporting a costly war in Vietnam. And "Autumn to May" introduces the trio's wonderful gift for interpreting children's songs. If you fancy yourself a folk collector, this album belongs on your list of classics. Lifelines ♪♪♪♪ (Warner Bros., 1995, prod. Phil Ramone) unites three generations of folk singers, as Peter, Paul, and Mary sing with their mentors, their contemporaries, and the new singer-songwriters who carry on the time-honored folk tradition. Participants include Ronnie Gilbert and Fred Hellerman (formerly of the Weavers), Richie Havens, Tom Paxton, Dave Van Ronk, John Sebastian, Buddy Mondlock, and Susan Werner. Regarding the diversity of this talented choir, Peter, Paul, and Mary note: "the sum is greater than the parts—that's what folk music is all about." The remake of "The Great Mandella (The Wheel of Life)" (with Havens, Carly Simon, and Lucy Simon) is as fresh as the trio's 1967 version. And Stookey's recent composition "For the Love of It All" (sung with Emmylou Harris) reveals the faith of a maturing soul: "For the Love of it all, like the stars and the sun, we are hearts on the rise, separate eyes with the vision of one." In Concert ♪♪♪♪♪ (Warner Bros., 1964, prod. Albert Grossman, John Court) highlights a cornucopia of classics, with definitive performances of "Rolling Home," "Leaving on a Jet Plane," "No Other Name," and the trio's signature anthem "The Song Is Love." For a touch of levity, Travers sings "I'm in Love with a Big Blue Frog" and Stookey presents his wry monologue "Paul Talk." This album presents the still-developing Peter, Paul, and Mary in better form than in their earlier studio recordings of these numbers. And, notably, "Single Girl" gives an early look at the feminist ideals that would characterize the civil rights movement in decades to come.

what to buy next: Peter, Paul, and Mary's million-seller Album 1700 ♪♪♪♪½ (Warner Bros., 1967, prod. Albert Grossman, Milton Okun) is a worthwhile musical outing for the seasoned follower. In addition to the Top 40 hit "Leaving on a Jet Plane" (which helped establish songwriter Denver's stellar career), the collection reveals some notable artistic experiments. Stookey presents two originals: "What's Her Name," a casual recitation recalling lost love, and "I Dig Rock and Roll Music," a biting satire on a growing movement that would eventually reduce the trio's popularity. And Yarrow's original "The Great Mandella (The Wheel of Life)" takes a 1960s peak at Eastern philosophy. This set presents works that miss entry onto Peter, Paul, and

editor's choice
7 autoharp albums

Mike Fenton, The Best of Mike Fenton 1984–1996 (Heritage)

Karen Mueller, Clarity (Streamline)

Bryan Bowers, By Heart (Flying Fish)

June Maugery, Shining Bright Like Gold (Studio du Mont-Blanc)

Les Gustafson-Zook, Gather at the River (Raindrop)

Mike Herr, Gander in the Pratie Hole (MH/CP)

Alan Mager, Hear the Colors (AFM)

peter, paul & mary

Mary's list of classics, but are artistically valuable nonetheless. The album title Peter, Paul, and Mommy Too ♪♪♪♪ (Warner Bros., 1993, prod. Peter Yarrow, John McClure) represents a word play on the trio's 1969 release Peter, Paul, and Mommy—a nickname coined by Travers's daughter Erika. This Grammy-nominated album was taped at the Brooklyn Academy of Music's Majestic Theatre with a live audience of children and their families. Peter, Paul, and Mary's way with youth is nicely preserved with such classics as "Puff, the Magic Dragon," "The Fox," "The Garden Song," "Blowin' in the Wind," "Inside," and "If I Had a Hammer." The album See What Tomorrow Brings ♪♪♪♪ (Warner Bros., 1966, prod. Albert Grossman) is best described in the liner notes: the group's "message is the same as that of any artist through the centuries—a sermon of truth and beauty in the context of their times." And indeed, this is another beautiful collection. The rendition of "Early Morning Rain" helped launch Gordon Lightfoot's prolific career, while "The Last Thing on My Mind" put Tom Paxton on the map. And Travers's voice is ever so touching in "The First Time Ever I Saw Your Face."

the rest:
Moving ♪♪♪½ (Warner Bros., 1962)
In the Wind ♪♪♪♪ (Warner Bros., 1963)
A Song Will Rise ♪♪♪♪ (Warner Bros., 1965)
Album ♪♪♪♪ (Warner Bros., 1966)
Late Again ♪♪♪½ (Warner Bros., 1968)
Peter, Paul, and Mommy ♪♪♪♪♪ (Warner Bros., 1969)
Best Of ♪♪♪♪ (Warner Bros., 1970)
Reunion ♪♪♪½ (Warner Bros., 1978)
No Easy Walk to Freedom ♪♪♪½ (Warner Bros., 1986)
A Holiday Celebration ♪♪♪♪ (Warner Bros., 1988)
Flowers and Stones ♪♪♪½ (Warner Bros., 1990) LifeLines Live ♪♪♪½ (Warner Bros., 1996)

worth searching for: Eugene McCarthy for President—If You Love Your Country ♪♪♪♪♪ (1968, prod. Peter, Paul, and Mary) is a pair of singles that the trio recorded in their early prime for a failed presidential campaign. This quirky piece of left-wing memorabilia weaves their trademark vocal harmonies with sound bites of the candidate. Children ♪♪♪ (Project Survival, 1985, prod. Peter, Paul, and Mary) is a single recorded March 29, 1985, on stage at the Riverside Theatre in Milwaukee, Wisconsin, with all proceeds going to a local non-profit organization providing food and clothing to the needy. 1960s-style social consciousness is still breathing. Paul and . . . ♪♪♪♪ (Warner Bros., 1971, prod. Jim Mason, Ed Mattau) is the only solo album by any member of the group to stand any test of time, its moderate success due primarily to the gem "Wedding Song"—a Top 40 hit and nuptial favorite. Stookey's moderate success as a solo artist suggests he is the premiere talent of the famed trio. Look for this in the "analog disk" section of your favorite used-record store.

influences:
◀◀ Pete Seeger, Weavers, Ramblin' Jack Elliot, Dave Van Ronk, Gordon Lightfoot, John Denver, Bob Dylan, Tom Paxton

▶▶ Judy Collins, Joni Mitchell, Holly Near, John Gorka, Nanci Griffith, Carly Simon, John Sebastian, Susan Werner, Darryl Tookes

Art Wojtowicz

Mary Travers of Peter, Paul, and Mary (© Jack Vartoogian)

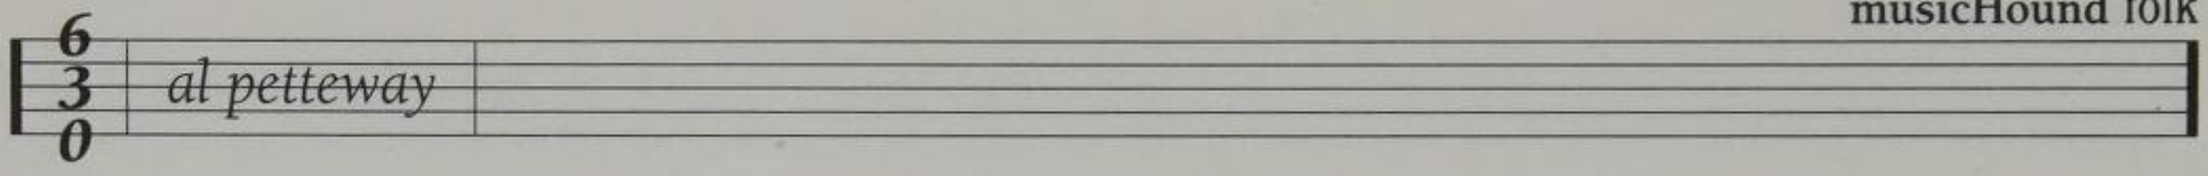
Ed Pettersen

Born January 29, 1962, in Glen Cove, NY.

A singer-songwriter out of the once-agricultural section of Long Island, Ed Pettersen, like many budding musicians of his era, learned guitar from listening to Beatles records. Unfortunately, it took the deeper lessons from those records a while to take hold: Pettersen spent several years working at a New York ad agency before deciding to become a full-time songwriter and performer. He comes out of the same New York roots scene that inspired cult favorites like the Del Lords, and played guitar behind Dion ("Runaround Sue," "The Wanderer") before setting out on his own. Pettersen released his first album in 1995 and formed his band, the High Line Riders, a couple of years later.

what's available: Pettersen's debut, Desperate Times ♪♪½ (DIM, 1995, prod. Dave Kincaid), is a stripped-down roots album that sounds more like a demo than anything else. There are a few choice tunes here, most notably Blind Alfred Reed's "How Can a Poor Man Stand Such Times and Live" and "Cheyenne," both previously recorded by friend Scott Kempner's former band, the Del Lords. Pettersen's writing highlight comes at the end, with the Springsteen-influenced working-man anthem "This Hard Land." Somewhere South of Here ♪♪♪ (Tangible, 1997) benefits from a regular band, Pettersen's High Line Riders. Kempner has a few more tunes here (three written with Pettersen) and Pettersen's been taking lessons from Nashville writers with songs like "DWIOU" and "How I Lost You (The Official Record)." It's a solid roots-rock record that shows across-the-board improvement since his debut.



influences:

Del Lords, Dion, Bruce Springsteen

Brian Mansfield

Al Petteway

Born October 17, 1952, in Belleville, IL.

Al Petteway began his professional music career at age 11 during the height of the British pop invasion. He played guitar, drums, and string bass with a variety of rock and folk acts in the Washington, D.C., area during the 1960s, becoming a local legend by the time he went to college to study music composition in 1970. During that time, he performed with the Old Dominion University Madrigal Singers, his school's jazz and symphonic bands, and the Norfolk Ballet Orchestra. After graduation he performed with night club dance bands until 1977 when he took a job with the National Geographic Society. His years as supervisor of picture editing for the society's Image Collection gave him the artistic freedom he needed to discover his own musical style on acoustic guitar. From 1981 to 1986, Petteway and mandolinist Akira Otsuka became "house musicians" for the Birchmere, a world-renowned folk club in Alexandria, Virginia, where they backed many nationally known acts. They were also founding members of Grazz Matazz, an exciting group that became one of the premier "new acoustic" acts of the time, performing a mix of bluegrass, jazz, and rock styles on acoustic instruments. Their landmark album Delinquent Minor featured guest appearances by such top acoustic musicians as Béla Fleck, Jethro Burns, and Mike Auldridge. It won a "Wammie" for Best Album in 1986, the first of numerous awards that Petteway has received from the Washington Area Music Association. His subsequent studio and live performances with Peter Rowan, Debi Smith, the Smith Sisters, Grace Griffith, Susan Graham White, Cheryl Wheeler, Jonathan Edwards, Tom Paxton, and others, helped gain him a reputation as one of the best accompanists in the music business. In 1987 Petteway's first solo recording, Dryad Dance, sparked the formation of the Al Petteway Quartet, an all-instrumental acoustic act featuring Petteway and guitarist John Jennings of Mary Chapin Carpenter fame. His follow-up album Whispering Stones, a collection of Celtic-inspired original compositions and unique arrangements of traditional music from the British Isles, caught the attention of Maggie's Music, an Annapolis-based label that specializes in Celtic music. In 1993 it signed him and has since released Whispering Stones and The Waters and the Wild, exposing his music to an international audience for the first time. In autumn of 1993, the National Geographic Society presented "The Waters and the Wild" as a multi-media event that showcased Petteway's music and photography. Images of fresh-water locations in the mid-Atlantic region that have served as inspiration for Petteway's compositions were projected during two live performances of the music at the society's Grosvenor Auditorium. During the same week, he swept the Washington Area Music Awards, winning the highest honors of top artist and musician. In 1994 the environmental aspect of his music and photography attracted the attention of newly elected Vice President Al Gore, who asked him to perform for a private dinner at their home where Tipper Gore had placed a copy of The Waters and the Wild at each place setting as gifts for the guests. Petteway left the National Geographic Society to become a full-time musician in the spring of 1995, just before the release of Midsummer Moon. An interview with Noah Adams on National Public Radio's All Things Considered, featuring the music from this recording, generated more tape requests than any other music segment ever aired on the program. As a Maggie's Music recording artist, Petteway plays and records regularly with Scottish fiddler Bonnie Rideout and hammered dulcimer player Maggie Sansone. Their 1996 collaborative effort, A Scottish Christmas, led to internationally broadcast appearances on CBS Sunday Morning and NPR's Performance Today. The 1997 release of Caledon Wood puts Petteway into a new and more elite class of musician and composer. His unique interpretation of "Celtic" music promises to bring him yet more international acclaim, as will his more contemporary compositions and collaborative efforts with his wife Amy White, an award-winning multi-instrumentalist who played on and co-produced his last two recordings and performs with him in concert.

what to buy: Caledon Wood ♪♪♪♪½ (Maggie's Music, 1997, prod. Al Petteway, Amy White) is an exceptional album that demonstrates both the subtlety and the power of Petteway's playing. The title track, combining Celtic, African, and South American elements, shows just how far Petteway has come during his short but brilliant career.

what to buy next: The Waters and the Wild ♪♪♪♪ (Maggie's Music, 1994, prod. Al Petteway, Larry Sifel, Jim Ebert) is Petteway's award-winning tribute to the environment in and around Washington, D.C., from Chincoteague Island to the Great Dismal Swamp.

the rest:

Dryad's Dance ♪♪♪½ (Sifel's Creek, 1987)
Whispering Stones ♪♪♪♪ (Maggie's Music, 1994)
Midsummer Moon ♪♪♪♪ (Maggie's Music, 1995)

(With Bonnie Rideout and Maggie Sansone) A Scottish Christmas ♪♪♪♪♪ (Maggie's Music, 1996, prod. Maggie Sansone)

worth searching for: Petteway's album with the band Grazz Matazz, Delinquent Minor ♪♪♪ (Matrix Records, 1985), long out of print, is a mix of hot bluegrass and swing rather than the introspective music he now plays. Nevertheless, it is worth snatching if you find an old LP in a cutout bin.

influences:

John Renbourn, Alex di Grassi

Martin Simpson

see also: Maggie Sansone

Neal Walters

Pierce Pettis

Born in Fort Payne, AL.

Though he's one of the most thoughtful singer-songwriters around, part of Pierce Pettis's talent comes from his versatility: Listen to his songs closely, and you'll find tracks of rock and R&B influences behind the warmth of his voice and acoustic guitar. A native of Alabama and a former student at Florida State University, Pettis spent time performing in both those states before moving to New York and hooking up with the Fast Folk crowd. He recorded an independent album in 1984, later signing with Windham Hill's High Street label and recording three albums. He moved to Nashville's Compass Records in 1996 for Making Light of It and currently splits his time between Atlanta and Nashville.

what to buy: The songs on Tinseltown ♪♪♪½ (High Street, 1991, prod. Mark Heard) cover a period of about six years, including some from Pettis's first independent album. When he culled the best tunes from that period, he came up with what's probably the strongest album of his career. His spirituality adds a sense of depth to love songs like "Can't Get Away from My Love" and "You Need a Love." Any good writer could get mileage out of the birth of a son, as Pettis does with "Little Man," but Pettis can turn even political tunes like "Mickey Leland," about a congressman who died in a plane crash while on a humanitarian mission, into personal ones.

what to buy next: Making Light of It ♪♪♪½ (Compass, 1996, prod. David Miner) is perhaps the most overtly spiritual album of Pettis's career, with songs about Absalom, an heir to the throne of the Hebrew king David, and the Virgin Mary (or Miriam, as she would have been called in her day). "Satellite Sky" is the second song by the late Mark Heard that Pettis has recorded (he cut "Nod over Coffee" on Chase the Buffalo); "You Move Me" was later recorded by country superstar Garth Brooks.

the rest:

While the Serpent Lies Sleeping ♪♪♪ (Windham Hill, 1989)

Chase the Buffalo ♪♪♪½ (High Street, 1993) worth searching for: Pettis's first album, Moments ♪♪♪½ (Small World, 1984), came out on a small label and is not easily found. But new versions of both the title track and "Grandmother's Song" made it onto 1991's Tinseltown.

influences:

Mark Heard, Bruce Cockburn, David Wilcox, John Gorka

Brian Mansfield

Kelly Joe Phelps

Pacific northwest denizen Kelly Joe Phelps has become an in-demand session player lately, working with cutting-edge artists like Dave Alvin and Greg Brown. Phelps's atmospheric acoustic slide is accomplished by playing a normal acoustic guitar in his lap. A very low-key solo performer, he is an affecting vocalist as well as a very tasteful slide and finger-style guitarist. Although he has only produced two solo albums, Phelps has become a session guitarist of choice in recent years, appearing on albums by, among others, Martin Simpson, Tony Furtado, Greg Brown, and Dave Alvin (with whom Phelps occasionally performs in an acoustic duo).

what to buy: Phelps recorded the 12 solo tracks on Roll Away the Stone ♪♪♪♪ (Rykodisc, 1997, prod. Kelly Joe Phelps) either at home in Washington State, or in an abandoned house in Portland. He draws heavily on the classic blues songbook ("See That My Grave Is Kept Clean," "Cypress Grove," "That's Alright"), but his originals, like the slow, plaintive title tune and the mournful "Without the Light," sound like they could have come off of the Mississippi Delta as well. Even on gospel numbers, such as the title track and "When the Roll Is Called up Yonder," Phelps's world-weary vocals contrast strikingly with the lyrical celebrations of salvation. He play fast and intricately on the instrumental "Doxology," but elsewhere he mostly goes for feeling rather than flash.

what to buy next: Lead Me On ♪♪♪ (Burnside, 1994, prod. Kelly Joe Phelps), his debut, is in much the same vein as Roll Away the Stone, a minimalist blend of traditional blues ("Hard Time

bruce u. "utah" phillips

Killin' Floor Blues," "Leavin' Blues") and gospel numbers ("Motherless Children," "I've Been Converted"). Phelps's clean, intricate slide is flawless throughout.

influences:

David Lindley, Robert Johnson, Bob Brozman

Greg Brown, Dave Alvin, Tony Furtado

Michael Parrish

Bruce U. "Utah" Phillips

Born 1935.

When Bruce Phillips, barely out of his teenage years, emerged from military service after the Korean War, he was, by his own admission, an angry and bitter young man, resolved to never again allow anyone—individuals, groups, or faceless bureaucrats—to tell him who his enemies were. Eventually, he crossed paths with Ammon Hennacy and the Catholic Workers Movement, an experience that confirmed him as a dedicated pacifist and anarchist. Though these two stands might appear on the surface to be contradictory ("anarchist" generally thought of as being synonymous with "bomb thrower," after all), it's a measure of Phillips's startling and rare ability to say more about life's absurdities and complexities in a few words or verses than most others can say in an encyclopedia, when he simply states, "An anarchist is someone who doesn't need a policeman to tell him what to do." As the son of parents who were both immersed in the labor struggles of the Depression and ensuing years, Phillips is also a proud, dyed-in-the-wool Wobbly, and much of his music emphasizes his commitment to advancing and protecting the rights of workers everywhere. While employed in the Utah State Archives in 1968, he ran for the U.S. Senate as the candidate of the Peace and Freedom Party, garnering all of 6,000 votes, and losing his job in the process. Prodded by his friend, folksinger Rosalie Sorrels, he packed his life into a VW minibus he christened "Hitler's Revenge" and headed for the legendary Café Lena in Saratoga, New York to begin a performing career that in has led to the 1997 Lifetime Achievement Award from the North American Folk Alliance, in recognition of his standing as one of the most beloved singers, songwriters, organizers, and storytellers of the folk movement. Styling himself as "U. Utah Phillips, the Golden Voice of the Great Southwest" (after the country music idol of his youth, T. Texas Tyler), he has traveled the world for nearly 30 years, joyously iconoclastic, provocatively and beautifully lyrical, and never less than uproariously funny in pointing out just how pompous and silly we all actually are. Although steeped in the traditional, he has an adventurous side as well—in 1996 he collaborated with avant-garde folksinger Ani DiFranco to produce the past didn't go anywhere, a fusion of Phillips's spoken words against a background of funk/rap/country rhythm, released on DiFranco's own Righteous Babe label. In recent years, health problems have forced Phillips to severely curtail his touring and performing and retire to his home in Nevada City, California, but his legacy of songs, which include "Room for the Poor," "Green Rolling Hills," "Starlight on the Rails," "Rock Salt and Nails," and many, many more, ensures that his name will be part of the folk music community as long as there are folk songs to be sung.

what to buy: Good Though ♪♪♪♪♪ (Philo, 1973, prod. Al McKenney, Louis Krieg) is Phillips at his overall best, including his legendary "Moose Turd Pie" story, as well as popular favorites "Starlight on the Rails" and "Daddy, What's a Train?" Where his other recordings tend to feature Phillips by himself, accompanied only by his own guitar, he's backed up on Good Though! by Jane Voss (vocals), Martin Grosswendt (Dobro, Hawaiian guitar), Danny Coane (acoustic bass), and Scott Campbell (fiddle).

what to buy next: All Used Up: A Scrapbook ♪♪♪♪ (Philo, 1975) includes his own recording of "Room for the Poor," as well as versions of songs written by two of his prime influences, Goebel Reeves ("Hobo's Lullaby") and "Haywire Mac" McClintock ("Hallelujah, I'm a Bum"). Recorded without a band, this album leaves the listener with more of a feel of what it's like to hear Phillips perform in person, at least musically.

what to avoid: the past didn't go anywhere ♪♪½ (Righteous Babe, 1996, prod. Ani DiFranco) isn't a necessary addition to the Phillips record collection, not because it's a clunker (it isn't), but it's less representative of his music on the whole than his solo projects. DiFranco mixes a variety of rhythms underneath his recorded monologues and, while it's interesting conceptually and entertaining simply because Phillips can't help but be attention-riveting in any context, it's not "folk music" in the traditional sense of the term.

the rest:

El Capitan ♪♪♪♪ (Philo, 1969)

We Have Fed You All for a Thousand Years ♪♪♪ (Philo, 1984)

I've Got to Know ♪♪♪½ (Alcazar, 1991)

Loafer's Glory ♪♪♪♪ (Red House, 1997)

Utah Phillips (© Robert J. Huffman/Field Mark Publications)

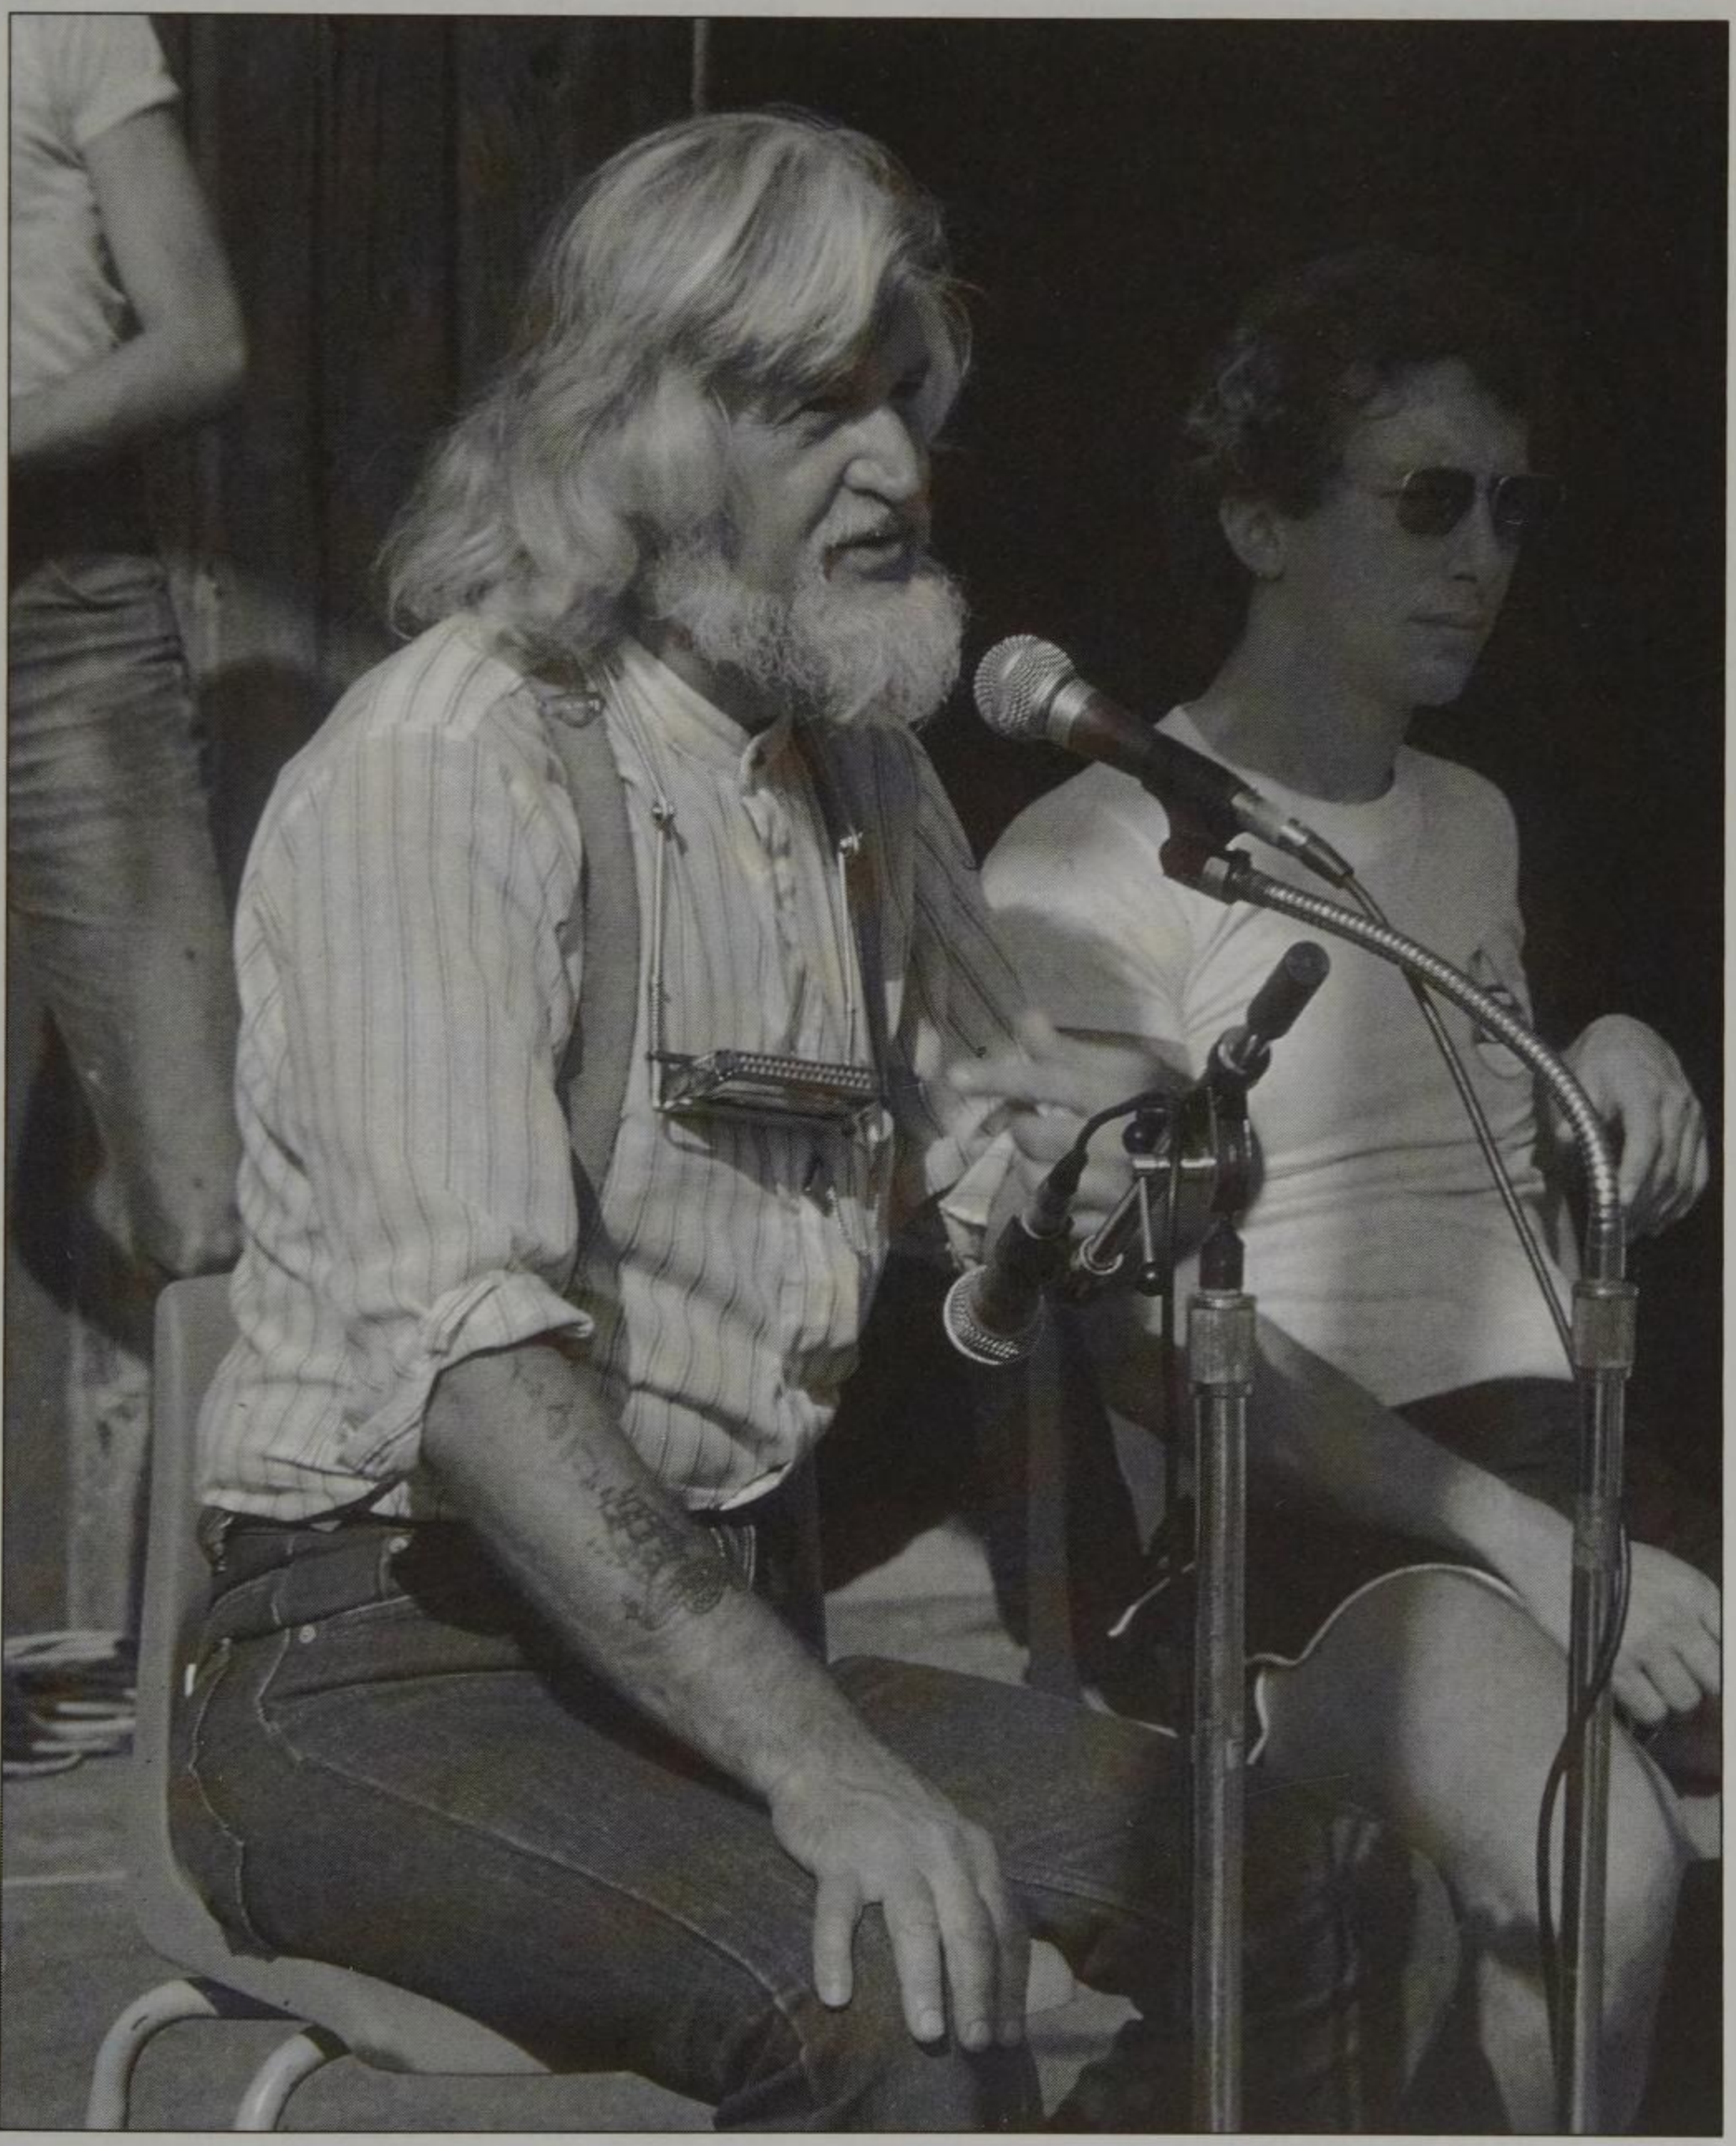
bruce u. "utah" phillips



todd phillips

worth searching for: Legends of Folk ♪♪♪♪ (Red House, 1992, prod. Neenah Ellis) is a CD release of a live performance featuring Utah Phillips, Ramblin' Jack Elliot, and Spider John Koerner. Phillips serves as emcee for the show, and the highlight of the album is his discourse covering folk music, Unitarians, and former president Ronald Reagan in one fell swoop, followed by his version of Sara Carter's "Railroading on the Great Divide." Heart Songs: The Old-Time Country Songs of Utah Phillips ♪♪♪♪♪ (Rounder, 1997) is an album devoted to several lesser-known, yet beautiful Phillips songs, done by the California husband/wife old-time duet singers Jody Stecher and Kate Brislin, with liner notes written by Phillips. "Orphan Train" and "I Remember Loving You" are special standouts.

influences:

◀◀ Jimmie Rodgers, Carter Family, Woody Guthrie, T. Texas Tyler, Goebel Reeves, "Haywire Mac" McClintock

▶▶ Emmylou Harris, Ani DiFranco, Critton Hollow String Band, Rosalie Sorrels, Jody Stecher & Kate Brislin, Ramblin' Jack Elliott, Kate Wolf

John Lupton

Todd Phillips

One of today's most versatile and accomplished acoustic musicians, it is no accident that Todd Phillips has so often been at the right place at the right time. A charter member of the David Grisman Quintet, Phillips started his career as a mandolin player before switching to what has become his main instrument, the acoustic bass, during the late 1970s. His subtly intricate bass lines have made him the player of choice for a significant portion of the acoustic/bluegrass community. Over the years, he has played scores of sessions, as well as being a member of the Tony Rice Unit, Montreux, the Bluegrass Album Band (along with Rice, Jerry Douglas, Bobby Hicks, and J.D. Crowe), the Good Ol' Persons, Psychograss, Kathy Kallick's Little Big Band, and Laurie Lewis and Grant Street. In addition to producing four solo albums, Phillips is also an accomplished luthier and has produced albums for artists like Kathy Kallick and David Grier.

what to buy: Phillips produced, engineered, arranged, and played on True Life Blues: The Music of Bill Monroe ♪♪♪♪½ (Sugar Hill, 1996, prod. Todd Phillips), an all-star tribute to the late great father of bluegrass music, and garnered a Grammy for his efforts. The project succeeds in being both reverent and adventurous. The Big Mon would've been proud.

what to buy next: Timeframe ♪♪♪½ (Compass, 1985, prod. Todd Phillips), Phillips's second solo disc, is an ambitious, progressive release that features classical and jazz instrumentation along with typical bluegrass instruments.

the rest:

Released ♪♪♪ (Varrick, 1984)
In the Pines ♪♪♪ (Gourd, 1995)

influences:

◀◀ Bill Monroe, David Grisman, John Coltrane

▶▶ Mike Marshall, David Grier, Rob Wasserman see also: Psychograss, Laurie Lewis, David Grier, Mike Marshall, Tony Trischka, Good Ol' Persons

Michael Parrish

Utah Phillips

See: Bruce U. "Utah" Phillips

Washington Phillips

Born 1891, in Freestone County, TX. Died December 31, 1938, or 1939, in Austin, TX.

Washington Phillips is to old-time black country-gospel music what Robert Johnson is to Delta blues. He'll never equal Johnson's fame and notoriety, of course, but, like Johnson, his musical legacy consists of a small treasure-trove of emotionally intense music captured in Columbia field recordings. Also like Johnson, the details of his life are shrouded in mystery and he died in apparent tragic circumstances. (Phillips spent the final eight years of his life in a state mental institution in Austin.) In his recordings, made during three sessions between 1927 and 1929, he performed solo, accompanying himself on a dolceola, an archaic tabletop instrument constructed of a zither-like body with 60 wire strings in a housing similar to an autoharp. It featured a small keyboard and was marketed as a "miniature grand piano." In Phillips's hands, the instrument created a haunting, carousel effect that was a curiously effective complement to the plaintive religious commitment evident in his vocals and lyrics.

what's available: Sixteen of Phillips's 18 recordings have survived and are available on I Am Born to Preach the Gospel: The Complete Recorded Works of Washington Phillips ♪♪♪♪ (Yazoo, 1991, prod. Richard Nevins) or the compilation album Storefront and Streetcorner Gospel 1927–1929 ♪♪♪♪ (Document), which also includes seven tracks by the Forehands and two by Luther Magby.

worth searching for: The late-'70s LP Denomination Blues ♪♪♪♪ (Agram, prod. Guido van Rijn) includes the same material as the titles above, but is worth finding if only for the fine liner notes by van Rijn and Hans Vergeer.

influences:

◀◀ C.A. Tindley, Pace Jubilee Singers, Blind Willie Johnson, Mississippi Fred McDowell

▶▶ Willie Mae Ford Smith, Dixie Hummingbirds, Southern Harps, Sister Rosetta Tharpe

Bryan Powell

Phranc

Born Susan Gottlieb, August 28, 1957, in Santa Monica, CA.

Boy, did Phranc emerge at the wrong time. During the mid-1980s, when Ronald Reagan ruled and even punk rock's lesbians and gay men weren't totally encouraged to come out of the closet, this self-described "all-American Jewish lesbian folk singer" began inflicting her wonderful sense of humor on society at large. After playing in a few punk bands and co-opting the genre's ironic sense of humor, the former Ms. Gottlieb renamed herself Phranc and began a solo career. She sang about her love for female mud-wrestlers, a clever obsession with Kim Novak in the Hitchcock film Vertigo, and her hatred for punk's misguided emphasis on sexism and Nazism. In one of her most hilarious songs, she also rewrote the Modern Lovers' famous "Pablo Picasso" to "Gertrude Stein," neatly recasting the feminist icon as a rock 'n' roll rebel. Sadly, when lesbians became hip circa 1996—Ellen DeGeneres, Melissa Etheridge, and even k.d. lang take themselves far more seriously than Phranc ever did—the singer's career suffered personal setbacks. Her brother was murdered in 1991, and she left the music industry for several years, returning with a bizarre Neil Diamond tribute tour and an EP on the gay-friendly riot-grrrl label Kill Rock Stars.

what to buy: Though Phranc's best-known music came out on big record labels, it's hard to find in record stores these days: Positively Phranc ♪♪♪½ (Island, 1991) includes a co-written song with macho country-rocker Dave Alvin, a gender-bending take on the Beach Boys' "Surfer Girl," and the gleeful "Gertrude Stein"; the highlight of I Enjoy Being a Girl ♪♪♪ (Island, 1989) is "Take off Your Swastika," which Phranc used to sing, courageously, to slam-dancers at punk shows.

what to buy next: The Goofyfoot ♪♪♪ EP (Kill Rock Stars, 1995), aside from an inexplicable surf-music obsession, is most notable for its backup musicians, Hole's Patty Schemel and Bikini Kill's Tobi Vail, among others. Who says punks don't take care of their own? With luck, Phranc's comeback will take over the planet.

the rest:

Folksinger ♪♪½ (Rhino, 1985/Island, 1990)

influences:

◀◀ Joan Baez, Sex Pistols, k.d. lang, Beach Boys, Ventures, New York Dolls, Two Nice Girls

▶▶ Melissa Etheridge, Bikini Kill, Hole, Nirvana, Mary Lou Lord

Steve Knopper

Jo Carol Pierce

Born July 20, 1944, in Wellington, TX.

Somewhere between the coffeehouse warblings of Phoebe, Lisa Kudrow's character on TV's Friends, and, say, Wittgenstein, there's the work of Jo Carol Pierce. The ex-wife of Jimmie Dale Gilmore, Pierce is a contemporary of the brighter lights along the Austin/Lubbock axis—Gilmore, Joe Ely, Butch Hancock, Terry Allen, Angela Strehli, and David Halley. She wrote her songs in secret during the 1970s, then began writing plays and screenplays. Her works include Falling, Back to School, New World Tango (with music by Ely), Bad Girls Upset by the Truth, and In the West (which ran in Austin for five years). An infrequent performer, Pierce works by day as a counselor on a state-run child-abuse hot line.

what's available: Pierce's only recording, Bad Girls Upset by the Truth ♪♪♪♪ (Monkey Hill, 1995, prod. Frank Quintini, Troy Campbell), is a collection of monologues and music tracing a "bad girl's" complex romantic and religious history. Hilarious, outrageous, and absolutely true to life, the play contains such philosophical musings as "Does God Have Us by the Twat or What?," "Secret Dan," and "I Blame God." Great stuff.

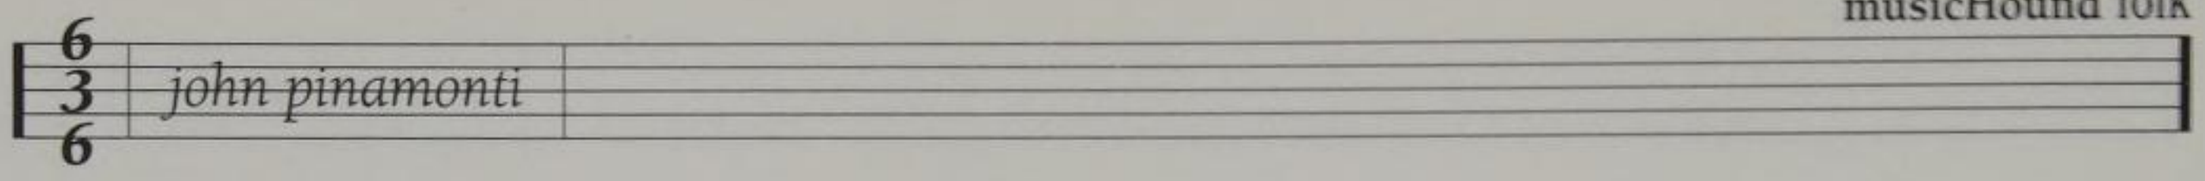
worth searching for: A slightly uneven tribute album, Across the Great Divide: Songs of Jo Carol Pierce ♪♪♪½ (Dejadisc, 1992) finds such artists as Gilmore, Allen, Ely, Michael Hall, Darden Smith, and David Halley, among others, performing Pierce's wonderful songs.

influences:

◀◀ Terry Allen, Mary Magdalene, Joan of Arc

▶▶ Shawn Colvin, Mary Chapin Carpenter

Daniel Durchholz



John Pinamonti

Born January 14, 1961, in Los Angeles, CA.

How apt that a songwriter professing a Townes Van Zandt inspiration is on a label that's recently released a Van Zandt album. What John Pinamonti gets from the Texas troubadour is good storytelling sense and deep commitment; what marks Pinamonti as his own man is effectively straightforward language and scintillating acoustic guitar technique. He spent four years playing with African master drummer Obo Addy, touring across the United States and Canada. Raised in Texas and Oregon, for the last few years he has lived in New York City, where he has performed at such venues as CBGB's Gallery and Lounge, Mercury Lounge, and other spots on the city's folk circuit.

what's available: The best song on Tragico Magico ♪♪♪♪ (Gregor, 1997, prod. John Pinamonti, Scott Anthony) is "Like Willie Mays," a perfectly limned history of a friendship begun casually and ended by one man's death in the Marines. It's laid out in everyday events moving in their utter naturalness. Pinamonti varies his approach with a tall tale, "Westbound Freight," about being tempted by the Devil; "He asked me for a smoke, but he carried his own flame" is an example of his marvelously dry eye for detail. "The Blues Left Texas" is Pinamonti's most bravura performance, the only overt showcase for his superb guitar playing. Even here it's not a matter of how many notes he can play, but rather perfect proportion and gestures inflected just enough to be dramatic but not so much as to overpower the story. "For Years" effectively varies the album's timbral palette with a little Dylan-esque harmonica by Pinamonti. Otherwise, aside from a few tracks including upright bassist John Abbey, his singing and picking are the whole show until the last of the 12 songs, where he and Abbey are joined by Boo Reiners on banjo and Karen Ramos on vocals, suggesting another fruitful musical direction Pinamonti can explore. Tragico Magico is not perfect, however—Pinamonti's vocals are not strong, and his drawl can sometimes sound artificial. But it's a helluva debut, full of exquisite playing and songwriting.

influences:

⏪ Townes Van Zandt, Lefty Frizzell, Jimmie Reed

Steve Holtje

Piney Creek Weasels

Formed 1986, in Sacramento, CA.

Rick Abrams (born in Miami, FL; died, December 1997), clawhammer banjo; Hugh Hoeger, guitar; Eric Anderson, fiddle, mandolin (1995–present); Dave Rainwater, fiddle, mandolin (1986–95); Rocky Rioux, acoustic bass.

Rick Abrams had an early exposure to old-time music. A newspaperman by profession, he began to play the banjo at age 14 and managed to combine his musical and journalistic pursuits throughout his life. Among other newspaper assignments, he covered the Watergate scandal and actually sat in church with Richard Nixon as the scandal was breaking, leading him to remark that "old-time music and calamity complement each other nicely." On the music side of things, he played with the Green Grass Revival while living in Florida for a time. Moving to California to work for the Sacramento Bee, he met old-time fiddler Dave Rainwater, a transplanted Pennsylvanian. Finding that they shared a common bond, the two men founded the Piney Creek Weasels in 1986. The band, very successful in its local area, subsequently played bluegrass and old-time festivals on both coasts, including the Galax Old Fiddlers Convention, where Abrams won first place in the banjo competition in 1987. They made no attempt to imitate note for note what you might hear on an old, scratchy 78 rpm record, claiming that while "there's room to treat old-time music with archaeological reverence, there's also room to dig it up and dance to it." Abrams died in 1997 after a long battle with cancer, leaving the band somewhat unsettled but intent upon continuing.

what to buy: Squirrel Heads and Gravy ♪♪♪½ (Hay Holler, 1996, prod. Kerry Hay, Rick Abrams, Piney Creek Weasels) is the band's last album with Abrams. It features some solid playing on 15 tunes, most of them traditional, with emphasis on Abrams's excellent banjo playing. He pays tribute to a few of his banjo heroes, including Uncle Dave Sturgill of Piney Creek, North Carolina, the town from which the band took its name. Abrams's version of Kirk McGee's "Snowdrops" is another highlight.

what to buy next: Go Long Mule ♪♪♪ (Heritage, 1993, prod. Piney Creek Weasels) is similar in feeling to Squirrel Heads and Gravy and also emphasizes Abrams's banjo playing in a set of all-traditional tunes from such sources as Uncle Dave Macon, Sam and Kirk McGee, Art Rosenbaum, and Kyle Creed.

the rest:

I'll Rise When the Rooster Crows ♪♪♪ (Weasel Productions, 1987) (cassette only) Bake that Chicken Pie ♪♪½ (Weasel Production, 1989) (cassette only) Weasels! ♪♪½ (Weasel Productions, 1991) (cassette only)

solo outings:

Rick Abrams:
Wild Goose ♪♪♪ (Heritage, 1987)

influences:

Kyle Creed, Marvin Gaster, Skillet Lickers, Uncle Dave Sturgill

Red Mountain White Trash, Freighthoppers

Neal Walters

The Plaid Family

Formed in Kansas City, KS.

Kelly Werts, fiddle, guitar; Diana Werts, accordion; Princess Harris, hammered dulcimer.

The Plaid Family consists of Kelly Werts, his wife Diana, and Princess Harris. Kelly Werts has been active in music in the Midwest for a decade. In addition to his work with the Plaid Family, he's produced work by other Midwestern artists and done regional television. The Plaid Family's single album is imaginatively produced and promises better things to come.

what's available: The Flying Book (Wizmak, 1994, prod. Pete Sutherland) ♪♪♪♪ is a sprightly collection of tunes, mostly traditional but with some Werts originals that hold up well to their companions. English, Welsh, and American traditional tunes are represented.

solo outings:

Kelly Werts:

Christmas on the Plains ♪♪♪ (Wichita Eagle & Beacon, 1993)

Home on the Range: Songs of the Kansas Pioneers ♪♪♪♪ (Wichita Eagle & Beacon, 1993)

influences:

John Kirkpatrick, Bergmann Brothers, Linda Thomas & Dan DeLancey

Pamela Murray Winters

Plainsong

See: Iain Matthews, Julian Dawson

Plank Road

See: Carol Elizabeth Jones & James Leva, Brad Leftwich

Planxty

Formed 1972, in Dublin, Ireland. Disbanded 1983.

Christy Moore (1972–74), vocals, guitar; Andy Irvine (1972–75, 1979–83), vocals, mandolin, bouzouki, hurdy-gurdy; Dónal Lunny (1972–73, 1979–83), bouzouki, guitar; Liam O'Flynn (1972–75, 1979–83), uilleann pipes, tin whistle; Paul Brady (1974–75), vocals, guitar; Johnny Moynihan (1973–75), vocals, bouzouki, fiddle, tin whistle; Matt Molloy (1979–80), flute; Bill Whelan (1983), keyboards; James Kelly (1983), fiddle; Nollaig Casey (1983), fiddle; Eoghan O'Neill (1983), bass guitar.

The emergence of Planxty during the early 1970s marked the beginning of an Irish traditional music revival that is still going strong today. The band's music also ushered in a new era when Irish music was no longer seen as the exclusive domain of ballad groups like the Clancy Brothers and the Dubliners. Other bands before them, Sweeney's Men in particular, had experimented with arranging traditional material for folk music audiences, but Planxty's unique stroke of genius was to squarely incorporate it into the band by securing the services of brilliant uilleann piper Liam O'Flynn. As the story goes, it all came about as singer Christy Moore and producer Bill Leader put their heads together to plan the album Prosperous, featuring Irvine, Lunny, O'Flynn, and a few other accompanists. After the album came out in 1972 on Leader's Trailer label, the foursome decided to perform together under the name Planxty, a term found in titles of seventeenth-century harp tunes composed in praise of patrons. The immediate success of their single with the song "The Cliffs of Dooneen" was followed by the release in 1973 of the band's first album, known as the "black album" for its black cover with an eerie shot of the musicians caught in the beam of a stage projector. Planxty's following grew rapidly and the band's success continued, despite Lunny's departure after the completion of The Well below the Valley in 1973. Replacing Lunny was singer and bouzouki player Johnny Moynihan, a former accomplice of Irvine in Sweeney's Men. Moynihan was featured on the band's third album, Cold Blow and the Rainy Night, which was named Melody Maker's folk album of the year for 1974. However, by the time the album was released, Moore had left the band to return to a quieter life in Ireland. Singer and multi-instrumentalist Paul Brady, formerly with the vocal group the Johnstons, was asked to replace Moore, a move frowned upon by Planxty fans at the time as Brady was involved in the California rock scene. As it turned out, Brady embraced this opportunity to return to his roots with enthusiasm, and the Planxty of 1975, although never recorded and short-lived, was at least as good as the original lineup. Not until 1979, with the Bothy Band on its way out, did Lunny and the three other original members decide to try it again, this time with the addition of the great Roscommon flute player Matt Molloy. The reunited Planxty made a smashing comeback, despite a power outage interrupting their set, at the Ballysadare festival in August 1979 (an event also marked by the Bothy Band's final appearance), and released the powerful After the Break. Molloy, who unfortunately

planxty

the 1960s

The social tumult of this decade was echoed in the continuous and rapid evolution that occurred within folk music. As the decade dawned, the folk revival was at its peak, with groups like the Kingston Trio and the Limeliters frequent visitors to the pop charts. Some of the earliest murmurings of the protest movement were expressed musically, with veterans like Pete Seeger and new voices like Joan Baez and Bob Dylan stirring the generation's youth to action. The early to mid sixties were a time of incredible popularity for folk music, with tens of thousands of people jamming events like the Newport Folk Festival. The decade was also the time when Flatt and Scruggs made bluegrass a household word through high-profile appearances on the Beverly Hillbillies and the soundtrack to Bonnie and Clyde. Dylan's switch to electric music heralded a shift in the music's direction, folk rock bands like the Byrds and Fairport Convention were soon reinventing and stretching the boundaries of traditional music, and psychedelic bands like the Jefferson Airplane and the Grateful Dead freely plundered and adapted the public domain. The late sixties brought a plethora of talented new singer-songwriters, including Joni Mitchell, James Taylor, Tim Buckley, and Leonard Cohen. Woody Guthrie's son Arlo had a counter-culture hit with "Alice's Restaurant" and serenaded 300,000 people at Woodstock. Folk music may have lost a clearly identifiable persona near the decade's close, but its influences were everywhere.

Michael Parrish

was soon gone to join the Chieftains, also appeared on the band's next album, The Woman I Loved So Well, released in 1980. During the early 1980s, Lunny was once again distracted by other projects, namely an experimentation in folk-rock out of which came the great Moving Hearts, and Planxty began winding down slowly but surely. They released their final album, Words and Music, in 1983, with the participation of fiddler James Kelly and keyboard player Bill Whelan, well known today as the man behind Riverdance. However, all former members of the band continue to participate actively in the Irish music scene, Moore and O'Flynn as solo performers, Irvine with Patrick Street, and Lunny as one of the busiest producers and session musicians in Ireland today.

what to buy: The band's official first album, Planxty ♪♪♪♪♪ (Polydor, 1973/Shanachie, 1979, prod. Phil Coulter), remains one of its best. The famous opening song, "Raggle Taggle Gypsy," is left practically unchanged from Prosperous, though the fidelity of the studio recording allows a better appreciation of the intricacies of the arrangement, in particular the brilliant transition into the old harp tune "Tabhair Dom Do Lámh (Give Me Your Hand)." Other classic songs on the album include "Arthur McBride," later made into a hit by Paul Brady; "The Jolly Beggar"; "Follow Me up to Carlow," celebrating a rare Irish victory against the Crown; "The Blacksmith," with its Balkan-tinged instrumental conclusion; as well as Andy Irvine's own "West Coast of Clare." O'Flynn's masterful piping is heard on the lovely reel medley "Junior Crehan's Favorite," the multi-part slide "Merrily Kissed the Quaker," and a couple of O'Carolan's harp compositions. Much in the same vein, The Well below the Valley ♪♪♪♪½ (Polydor, 1973/Shanachie, 1979, prod. Phil Coulter) features Moore and Irvine equally as lead singers, performing such classics as "Cúnla" and the two versions of "As I Roved Out." O'Flynn contributes some of the great pieces of the piping repertoire, including the slip jig "An Phis Fhliuch," and the reels "The Dogs among the Bushes" and "Jenny's Wedding." Despite Lunny's departure (he actually participated in the recording), Cold Blow and the Rainy Night ♪♪♪♪½ (Polydor, 1974/Shanachie, 1979, prod. Phil Coulter) remains true to the earlier Planxty sound. New member and ex–Sweeney's Men vocalist Johnny Moynihan is the featured singer on "'P' Stands for Paddy," one of the memorable songs on the album. Others include Irvine's "Johnny Cope" and Moore's "The Lakes of Pontchartrain." Instrumental highlights include a set of polkas, now universally known among Irish session goers, and the exotic Balkan tune "Mominsko Horo," following Irvine's self-penned song of Romanian travels. With After the Break ♪♪♪♪♪ (Tara, 1979, prod. Dónal Lunny), Planxty made a stunning comeback. Lunny's "blarge" (five-course bouzouki) brings new depth to the sound, while the sophistication of the mandolin-and-bouzouki arrangements reaches new heights, on "The Good Ship Kangaroo" and "The Pursuit of Farmer Michael Hayes" in particular. The addition of Molloy's expert flute playing makes the instrumentals that much richer—one of them is a spectacular Bulgarian dance tune titled "Smeceno Horo." The what to buy next: Although not officially a Planxty album, Moore's Prosperous ♪♪♪♪ (Trailer, 1972/Tara, 1972, prod. Bill Leader) gives us a glimpse at a prototypic form of the band, as Moore gathered Lunny, O'Flynn, Irvine, and a few others to record the album. It features two songs, "Raggle Taggle Gypsy" and "The Cliffs of Dooneen," which Planxty would continue to perform with great success, along with other, equally interesting selections like Bob Dylan's "Tribute to Woody" and Woody Guthrie's "Ludlow Massacre." The Planxty Collection ♪♪♪♪♪ (Polydor, 1974/Shanachie, 1979, prod. Phil Coulter) is an excellent sampler based on Planxty's first three albums, to which is added the enormously successful "The Cliffs of Dooneen," from the band's 1972 single. Although not as exciting an album as After the Break, The Woman I Loved So Well ♪♪♪♪ (Tara, 1980, prod. Dónal Lunny, Brian Masterson) contains some fine songs, like Irvine's "Kellswater," learned from the Sam Henry collection, and Moore's epic "Little Musgrave." The instrumental tracks benefit from the presence of guest musicians, particularly the great Clare duet of Noel Hill (concertina) and Tony Linnane (fiddle). Words and Music ♪♪♪ (WEA, 1983/Shanachie, 1983, prod. Dónal Lunny) was Planxty's swan song. The influence on its sound of Lunny's experiments with Moving Heart is clearly heard in some of the accompaniments featuring electronic keyboards and electric bass—although the marriage of electronics and traditional music works rather well on the beautiful piping air "Táimse Im' Chodlach." On other instrumental tracks, O'Flynn's pipes are combined with the twin fiddles of James Kelly and Nollaig Casey.

CD reissue of the album includes two additional tracks that had been previously released on the LP sampler High Kings of Tara.

worth searching for: Three Planxty tracks, one being a set of jigs not recorded on any of their studio albums, were included on the Breton-produced 2e Festival Pop' Celtic Kertalg 73 ♪♪♪ (Barclay, 1973, prod. Gwenn Le Goarnic, Hughes de Courson). High Kings of Tara ♪♪♪♪♪ (Tara, 1980, prod. Dónal Lunny) contains three Planxty tracks left over from the After the Break sessions, two of which were later included in the CD reissue of that album. Arís ♪♪♪♪ (Polydor, 1984) is another anthology based on the band's first three albums, with the added interest that it includes the song "Yarmouth Town" from the B-side of Planxty's famous first single. You will be truly lucky if you can find a copy of the two-cassette bootleg The Best of Planxty Live ♪♪♪♪♪ (Planxty, c. 1986, prod. Kevin Flynn, Michael Germaine), recorded live at the Olympia Theatre by the original quartet with Nollaig Casey (fiddle) and Bill Whelan (keyboards). The numbers performed span the complete recorded output of the band and its members, from the black album's "The Jolly Beggarman" to Andy Irvine's "Plains of Kildare," first recorded with Paul Brady, to "Pity the Poor Immigrant" and "The Irish March" from the band's final album.

influences:

◀◀ Ceoltóirí Cualann, Sweeney's Men

▶▶ Bothy Band, Touchstone, Moving Hearts, Patrick Street, Dónal Lunny, Dervish

see also: Andy Irvine, Liam O'Flynn, Paul Brady, Christy Moore

Philippe Varlet

The Pogues

Formed 1982, in Kings Cross, London, England. Disbanded 1996.

Shane MacGowan, vocals (1982–91); Philip Chevron, guitar (1985–96); James Fearnley, accordion (1982–94); Darryl Hunt, bass (1986–96); Terry Woods, mandolin, vocals (1987–94); Spider Stacy, tin whistle, vocals; Andrew Ranken, drums; Jem Finer, banjo; Cait O'Riordan, bass (1982–86); Jamie Clarke, banjo (1994–96); James McNally, accordion, uilleann pipes (1994–96); David Coulter, mandolin (1994–96).

The Pogues emerged from the London neighborhood of Kings Cross in 1984 with an idea that seemed so good it's surprising it was considered novel: Why not mate the energy of punk with traditional folks songs Irish-born, English-raised band avatar Shane MacGowan had grown up with? Both cultures were rife with rebellion. Neither punk nor folk necessarily required virtuosity (prime movers MacGowan, Spider Stacy, Jem Finer, James Fearnley, Cait O'Riordan, and Andrew Ranken were, to put it kindly, instrumental novices). Perhaps best of all for the hard-drinking crew, both could be played sloshed. Sounded better that way, in fact. After releasing one British album, Red Roses for Me, they hooked up with another Englishman with Irish bloodlines, Declan MacManus, a.k.a. Elvis Costello. Costello produced two gems—an acclaimed LP, Rum, Sodomy, and the Lash, and a follow-up EP, Poguetry in Motion. Bassist Cait O'Riordan left the band in 1988 after falling for Costello (whom she soon wed) and was replaced by Darryl Hunt. Multi-instrumentalist/vocalist Terry Woods, a one-time member of Steeleye Span, and guitarist/vocalist Phillip Chevron signed on around the same time and considerably elevated the instrumental proficiency of the ensemble. Its lineup solidified, the Pogues hit their critical and commercial peak with 1987's If I Should Fall from Grace with God and Peace and Love, which arrived two years later. The group's gradual descent began with 1990's Hell's Ditch. MacGowan's self-destructive behavior began to get the better of him and, while there was a surplus of capable writers and vocalists in the group (the Clash's Joe Strummer was a periodic fill-in for MacGowan), a fully functional front man was missed. MacGowan left the band in 1991, resurfacing during the mid-'90s as the leader of a new band, the Popes. The Pogues released two titles without him—1993's Waiting for Herb and 1995's Pogue Mahone—before giving up the ghost in 1996.

what to buy: Waiting for Herb ♪♪♪ (Chameleon/Elektra, 1993, prod. Michael Brook), the group's first post-MacGowan release, finds the boys forging on properly. Their front man–by–committee method works rather well, but falls short of prime Poguetry.

what to buy next: Pogue Mahone ♪♪½ (Mesa/Bluemoon, 1995, prod. Steve Brown) is an inconspicuous swan song.

the rest:
Red Roses for Me ♪♪½ (WEA, 1992)
Rest of the Best ♪♪♪½ (WEA, 1994)
Hell's Ditch ♪♪♪ (MSI/WEA, 1997)

worth searching for: Rather shockingly, the Pogues' Island output is currently sans a U.S. label. Given the group's relatively healthy patronage, it seems likely that situation will be rectified before too long. In the meantime, Pogues imports are easy to find and most are well worth tracking down. If I Should Fall from Grace with God ♪♪♪♪½ (Island, 1987/1996, prod. Steve Lillywhite) whisked the Pogues sound into the late '80s but the songs remained rooted in a timeless place inhabited by raging revolutionaries, drunken poets, foul-mouthed maiden, and hopeless dreamers. While it contains a single medley of three traditional tunes, such originals as "Thousands Are Sailing," "Lullaby of London," and "Streets of Sorrow" display the same arcane, enduring qualities as the generations-old tunes favored early in the group's history. Rum, Sodomy, and the Lash ♪♪♪♪½ (MCA, 1985, prod. Elvis Costello) is clumsy but charming. Conversely, Peace and Love ♪♪♪♪ (Island, 1989, prod. Steve Lillywhite) is as close to "slick" as this rag-tag cast of characters was capable. Both albums are carried by strong songs and fervent performances.

influences:
◀◀ Chieftains, Dubliners, Clancy Brothers ▶▶ Low & Sweet Orchestra, Oyster Band

Steven Stolder

The Poodles

See: American Cafe Orchestra

Charlie Poole /Charlie Poole & the North Carolina Ramblers

Born March 22, 1892, in Alamance County, NC. Died May 21, 1931, in Spray, NC.

Charlie Poole and his band, the North Carolina Ramblers, played breakdown dances in the Spray-Leaksville area of central North Carolina as early as 1918. From there they went on to record some of the most lilting, rhythmically dynamic string-band music of the 1920s. Poole's three-finger banjo style and vaudeville-inspired "story" songs sound remarkably fresh 70 years later.

what to buy: Old Time Songs ♪♪♪♪♪ (County, 1965) includes a handful of songs—"White House Blues," "Don't Let Your Deal Go Down," and "Take a Drink on Me" among them—that became staples in the repertoires of generations of country, bluegrass, and folk performers.

what to buy next: Old Time Songs: Volume II ♪♪♪♪♪ (County, 1974) contains more fine string band music and tall tales, the best of the latter assaying the virtues and pitfalls of the sportin' life.

the rest:
Charlie Poole and the North Carolina Ramblers: Volume I ♪♪♪♪♪ (County, 1996) Charlie Poole and the North Carolina Ramblers: Volume II ♪♪♪♪♪ (County, 1996)

influences:
▶▶ New Lost City Ramblers, Nancy & Norman Blake

Bill Friskics-Warren

The Poozies

See: Sileas

Steve Pottier & Sandy Rothman

See: Sandy Rothman & Steve Pottier

Dirk Powell

Born June 7, 1969, in Oberlin, OH.

Dirk Powell began playing traditional music at age 12 when he was inspired to pick up old-time banjo from his grandfather

James Clarence Hay, a highly gifted musician from eastern Kentucky. The fiddle, guitar, and bass soon followed, as Powell found a desire to immerse himself in all aspects of Appalachian music. In the early '90s he met the Balfa family, the great ambassadors of Cajun music, and he quickly developed an interest in the genre (not surprising, as he was also developing an interest in Dewey Balfa's youngest daughter, Christine). Dirk and Christine formed the group Balfa Toujours ("Balfa Forever") shortly after Dewey passed away in 1992, and they have since gone on to record three albums of traditional Cajun music. Besides several projects with his own groups, Powell has recorded with a diverse number of musicians, including Seamus Egan, Tim O'Brien, Bruce Molsky, Jay Ungar and Molly Mason, the Freewill Savages, David Grier, Scott Nygaard, and many more. He cherishes the words of his father-in-law Dewey Balfa, "A culture is like a whole tree; you have to water the roots to keep it alive, but you can't cut off the branches every time it tries to grow."

what to buy: If I Go Ten Thousand Miles ♪♪♪♪½ (Rounder, 1996, prod. Tim O'Brien) is proof (as if you needed some) that when Powell started playing Cajun music he did not neglect his old-time roots. This is one of the best old-time CDs that you can buy today from someone of the "Young Fogie" generation. If Powell's playing isn't enough, just lend an ear to Jim Miller's killer vocals on songs such as "Little Satchel." Between some of the best musicianship you're bound to hear and then some of the best singing . . . well, you can see where this album is headed.

what to buy next: Balfa Toujours' Deux Voyages ♪♪♪♪♪ (Rounder, 1996, prod. Tim O'Brien) is the best sample of Powell's work with wife Christine Balfa. He really does a great job on the Cajun accordion and vocals. This recording should please even the most hard-core fan of Cajun music.

the rest:
(With Balfa Toujours) Pop, tu me parles toujours ♪♪♪♪ (Swallow) (With Balfa Toujours) A vieille Terre Haute ♪♪♪♪ (Swallow, 1995)

worth searching for: The Wandering Ramblers' Rambling and Wandering ♪♪♪♪½ (Marimac, 1991, prod. Wandering Ramblers) cassette-only release with Carol Elizabeth Jones, Jim Miller, John Herrmann, and June Drucker is worth looking for, as well as Dirk Powell and John Herrmann ♪♪♪♪ (Yodel-Ay-Hee, 1992, prod. Dirk Powell, John Herrmann) (cassette only).

solo outings:
Dirk Powell, Tom Sauber, and John Herrmann:
One Eyed Dog ♪♪♪♪ (Yodel-Ay-Hee, 1993)

influences:
◀◀ James Clarence Hay, Tommy Jarrell, Fred Cockerham, George Jones, Dewey Balfa

▶▶ Donna the Buffalo see also: Carol Elizabeth Jones & James Leva, Bruce Molsky, Tim O'Brien, Scott Nygaard

Steve Gardner

Tom Prasada-Rao

Born in Ethiopia.

Tom Prasada-Rao plays his guitar like it's a band, writes catchy songs, sings like he means it, and always grooves. Born to Indian parents living in Africa and educated in the United States, England, and India, Prasada-Rao blends musical influences of pop, R&B, and world music with his political, spiritual, and personal songs. He usually performs solo, often asking friends or members of the audience to join him—making for very interactive and dynamic shows. His warm, personable, interactive audience style is characterized by his down-to-earth personality, and is heightened by the power of his conviction, and his obvious enjoyment of live performance. Prasada-Rao has chosen a path away from mainstream pop music and is committed to raising the social consciousness of his audiences in hopes of inspiring positive action towards others. At times he is joined on stage by master percussionist Broto Roy (Calcutta) and Baltimore guitar legend Billy Kemp. He is also one-third of the group known as Sherpas, along with Nashville's Tom Kimmel and Michael Lille, and with the Sherpas doubles on violin and piano. With no group album and limited national touring they have nonetheless garnered rave reviews as well.

what to buy: On his latest release, Hear You Laughing ♪♪♪½ (Ahimsa, 1997, prod. Tom Prasada-Rao) Prasada-Rao goes from serious to playful, working from solo and band arrangements, adding sitar and wah wah guitars along with the tabla and djembe, and adding love and political songs to the mix. Critical reviews abound and the buzz is deafening. Christine Lavin says, "Brilliant writer, amazing performer, sensational singer—I'm so jealous I could vomit," while Steve Netsky observes, "I hope the Devil is enjoying his half of the bargain as much as we're enjoying Tom's right now."

what to buy next: Incoming ♪♪♪ (Crossroads, 1991, prod. Mark Heard) has sold over 12,000 copies to date. According to Martin Fullington in The Leak, Out 'n' About, "This is genius at work."

primitive characters

worth searching for: In addition to producing his own recent albums, Prasada-Rao produced an album for Ranjith in 1996 titled Falling Ashes. His efforts in the publishing world have produced a cut on a late 1990s Randy Travis album; co-written with Tom Kimmel, the song is called "See Myself in You." He also appears on the Christine Lavin compilation Follow That Road ♪♪♪ (Rounder, 1994), which features live recordings from the second annual Martha's Vineyard Singer-Songwriter Retreat.

influences:

◀◀ Bruce Cockburn, Richard Thompson, Bob Dylan

▶▶ Michael Johnson, Tom Kimmel, Michael Lille

Neal Walters

Primitive Characters

Formed 1995, in Boston, MA.

Sandy Stark, fiddle, vocals; Mike Donoghue, banjo; Chip Smith, guitar, vocals; Jim Reidy, banjo-ukulele, lead vocals; Paul Strother, bass, low vocals.

The Primitive Characters are a rhythmic juggernaut of a string band, steeped in the traditional country music of the Golden Age recordings from the 1920s. After being part of several influential 1970s string bands, including the seminal, upstate New York–based Swamp Root Stringband, fiddler Sandy Stark landed in Boston, Massachusetts and began to pursue her other muse, photography, in earnest (she is currently professor of photographic studies at the Boston Art Institute). In 1980 Stark joined the popular Boston string band the Chicken Chokers, playing double fiddles with Chad Crumm. The Chokers disbanded during the early 1990s, when Crumm formed his own band, the Hix. Of the Primitive Characters' beginnings, Stark says, "Mike Donoghue (our banjo player) returned to town in 1995 and one day we all just looked at each other and thought, 'hmmm, here we go again.' We thought of a lot of different band names and ended up as Primitive Characters, hoping it would convey a sense of raw intensity that the music seems to be about when it's working. " what's available: The Leavin's ♪♪♪♪ (Chubby Dragon, 1996, prod. Taylor "Chip" Smith, Primitive Characters) is hopefully just the first of many albums from this very fine group. The Characters play their old-time music with a straightforward respect, depth, and humor, and groove like crazy to boot. What more could one ask for? Stark's chugging fiddle, replete with broad bow sweeps and swoops, is placed squarely in front. She is ably backed by Chip Smith's straightforward rhythm guitar (which makes effective and subtle use of bass runs), while Mike Donoghue's banjo blends whimsically with the redoubtable Jim Reidy's banjo-uke. This rhythmic steamroller is firmly grounded by Paul Strother's acoustic bass. The Leavin's is chock-full of instrumentals from the likes of Byron Berline and Benton Flippen (and many traditional tunes) interspersed with lovingly played songs from the Poplin Family, Uncle Dave Macon, and the Louvin and Delmore Brothers. The instrumentals are, without exception, bursting with energy; even the slow tunes pulse with intensity while remaining deliberate in tempo. Stark's bowing is the most striking aspect of her fiddling; on The Leavin's her intonation (not the "in tune" that Nashville session players strive for) reveals how deeply she has assimilated southern old-time fiddle sounds, although her playing never sounds studied or contrived. The songs are silly and sentimental, ditties culled from impeccable old-time sources. Lead singer Riedy brings an affectionate yet firmly tongue-in-cheek attitude to Uncle Dave Macon's "She's Got the Money Too," a gleeful tale of a female gold-digger. The ensemble singing on "It Won't Happen Again for Months" is delightfully wacky and makes excellent use of Paul Strother's big ole bullfrog croak of a voice.

influences:

◀◀ Benton Flippen, Stripling Brothers, Uncle Dave Macon, Highwoods Stringband, Tommy Jarrell, Lymon Enloe

▶▶ Horseflies, Heartbeats, Any Old Time Stringband see also: Chicken Chokers

Suzy Rothfield Thompson

John Prine

Born October 10, 1946, in Maywood, IL.

One of the first to be strapped as "the new Dylan," John Prine is one of the few to actually outgrow the tag and become a distinct, trenchant songwriting voice. Mostly because of his admittedly limited guitar skills, he often gets lumped in the folkie/singer/songwriter genre, but as anyone who has ever listened carefully or heard him play with a band knows, he has the heart and soul of a rock 'n' roller. His 1971 self-titled debut alone includes astonishing songs like "Sam Stone," the first Vietnam protest song to examine the war's effect on soldiers' lives; an homage to the elderly wryly titled "Hello in There"; "Donald and Lydia," a touching ode to masturbation; the wicked social

John Prine (© Ken Settle)

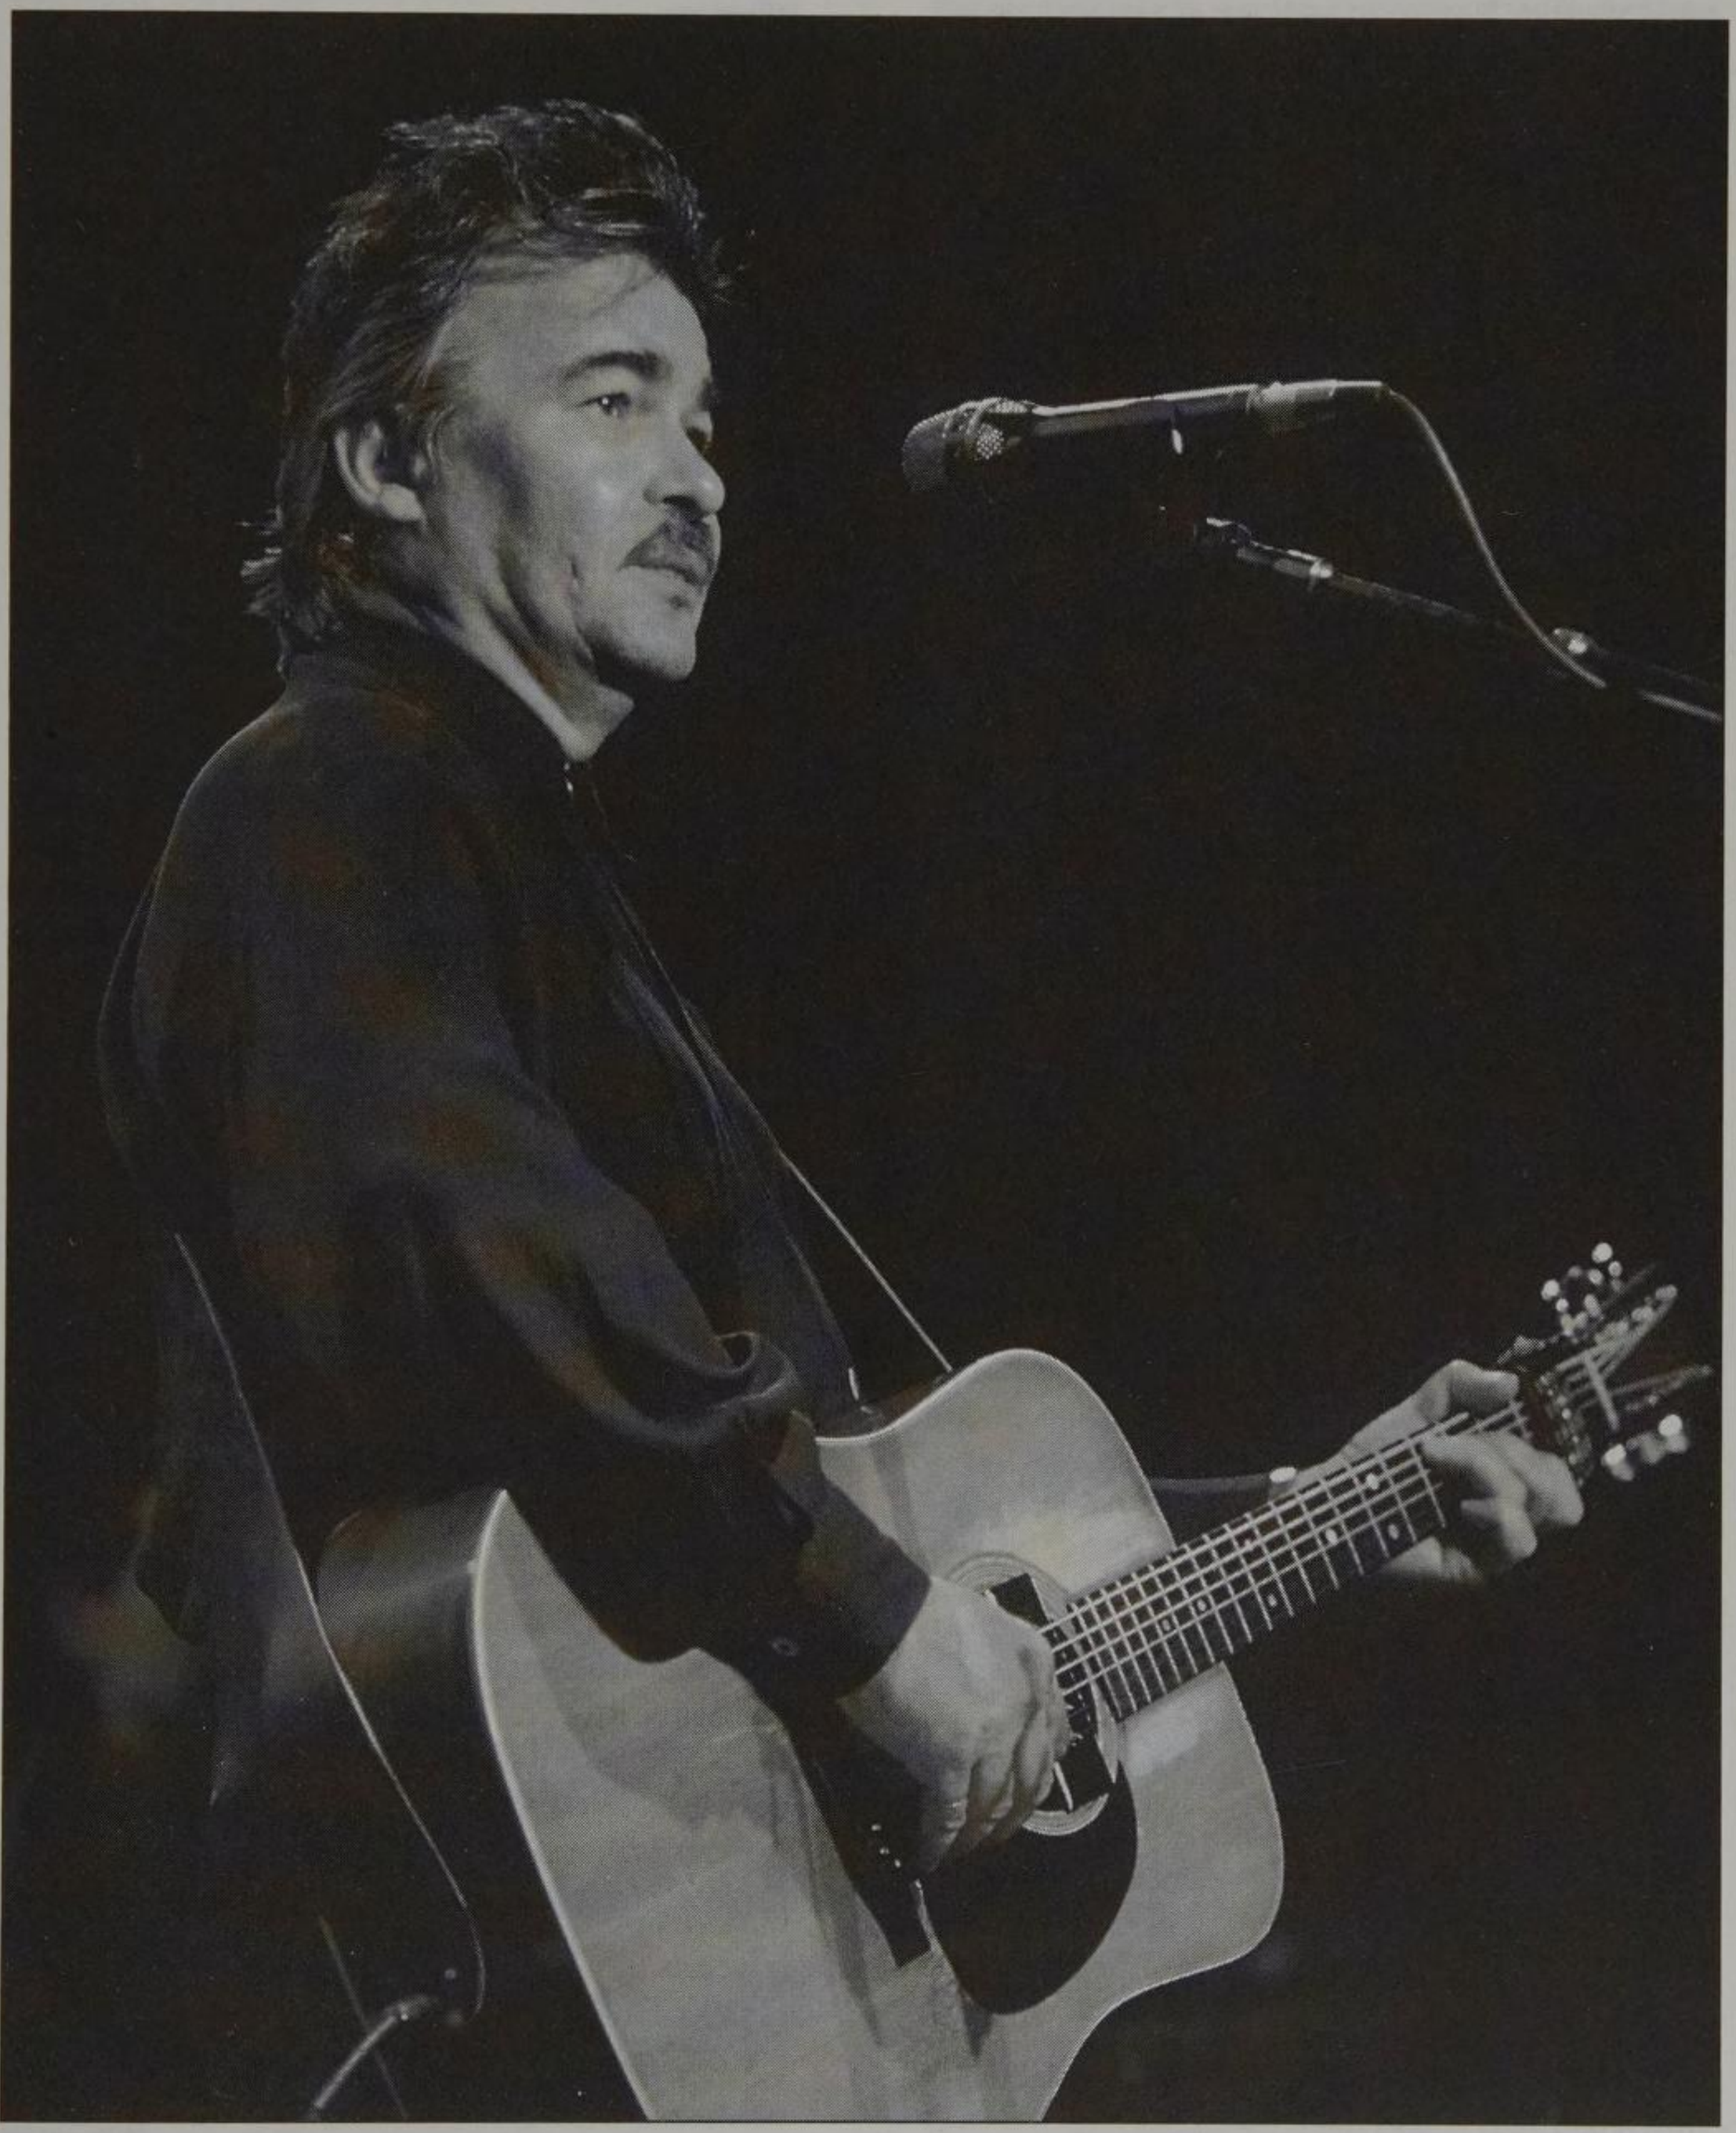
john prine



maddy prior

satire "Spanish Pipedream" with the oft-repeated chorus, "Blow up your TV/Throw away your paper"; and "Angel from Montgomery," a longtime Bonnie Raitt staple. Major labels gave up on Prine, which led to him to start his own Oh Boy Records during the early '80s. These days his edge, sharp eye for detail, and feel for simple melodies, common language, and popular culture seems, if anything, more intact—and he's even more effective in concert. His songs have been recorded by such diverse artists as Joan Baez, Bette Midler, the Everly Brothers, and Cowboy Junkies, but more importantly, Prine's influence can be heard whenever guitars are played on streets and living rooms around the world.

what to buy: John Prine ♪♪♪♪♪ (Atlantic, 1971, prod. Arif Mardin) is a must, with its raw, harrowing, sometimes goofy tales of life. The Missing Years ♪♪♪♪♪ (Oh Boy, 1991, prod. Howie Epstein) offers the same kind of world-view, undaunted by middle age. Bruised Orange ♪♪♪♪ (Asylum/Oh Boy, 1978, prod. Steve Goodman) offers Goodman's inspired arrangements. John Prine Live ♪♪♪♪½ (Oh Boy, 1988, prod. John Prine, Dan Einstein, Jim Rooney) includes the stories and onstage charisma that's missing on his studio albums.

what to buy next: Storm Windows ♪♪♪♪ (Asylum, 1980, prod. Barry Beckett) is Prine's best-sounding record, courtesy of producer Beckett, while Aimless Love ♪♪♪♪ (Oh Boy, 1984, prod. John Prine, Jim Rooney) is a pleasant, country-flavored outing. The best collection to span his career is Great Days ♪♪♪♪½ (Rhino, 1993, prod. various), with music from all albums up to that time.

what to avoid: Common Sense ♪♪ (Atlantic, 1975, prod. Steve Cropper) is a classic example of mismatching producer and artist. The songs—and there are some good ones—often sound incomplete, and Prine sounds out of breath at the end of every one.

the rest:
Sweet Revenge ♪♪♪ (Atlantic, 1973)
Prime Prine ♪♪ (Atlantic, 1976)
German Afternoons ♪♪♪½ (Oh Boy, 1988)
Diamonds in the Rough ♪♪♪ (Atlantic, 1990)
A John Prine Christmas ♪♪♪♪ (Oh Boy, 1993)
Lost Dogs and Mixed Blessings ♪♪♪½ (Oh Boy, 1995) Live on Tour ♪♪♪♪ (Oh Boy, 1997)

worth searching for: On Pink Cadillac ♪♪♪♪½ (Asylum/Oh Boy, 1979, prod. Knox Phillips, Jerry Phillips), a primal Prine draws from the unique energy and vibe of Memphis's famous Sun Studios with Sam Phillips's kids at the knobs.

influences:
◀◀ Carter Family, Hank Williams, Chuck Berry, Jerry Lee Lewis, Bob Dylan ▶▶ Nanci Griffith, Iris DeMent, Cowboy Junkies

Leland Rucker

Maddy Prior

See: Steeleye Span

Willis Prudhomme

Born September 22, 1931, in Kinder, LA.

Willis Prudhomme typifies many of the zydeco performers who work the circuit and rarely become known outside the Cajun triangle of South Louisiana. Prudhomme is a rice farmer who started performing in public only in 1975. A solid but not flashy accordionist, he was recruited by drummer and singer Leo Thomas to play with his group. His apprenticeship with Thomas lasted 10 years before he was ready to strike out on his own. Prudhomme's band Zydeco Express is a lot like its leader: unassuming, but steady. They play an honest rural zydeco sound, nothing fancy and no frills. That means there is a bounce in the beat that distinguishes it from the crunch of the doubling, clutching sound popularized by Beau Jocque. Dancers always know that they will get their money's worth when Prudhomme is on the marquee.

what to buy: Prudhomme and Zydeco Express share Zydeco Live! Volume II ♪♪♪♪ (Rounder, 1989, prod. Scott Billington) with John Delafose and the Eunice Playboys. Prudhomme works exclusively with the one-row button accordion with an internal pickup, which produces a gritty sound similar to the sound of a good Chicago blues harpist. The band shines on the waltzes in particular, something of a dying art among zydeco groups.

what to buy next: Live, with a dance floor, these guys pack a lot of excitement. Their style of zydeco is about playing evenly, not about the kind of climaxes that are such a part of rock music. As exhibited on Willis Prudhomme and Zydeco Express ♪♪♪½ (Maison De Soul, 1990, prod. Floyd Soileau), this doesn't translate well into the studio, where the band fails to catch fire or a great groove without an audience. Prudhomme is an average singer, so you're not able to get much from focusing in on his voice.

influences:
◀◀ John Delafose, Roy Carrier
▶▶ Geno Delafose, Keith Frank, Chubby Carrier

Jared Snyder

Psychograss

Formed 1993, in the San Francisco Bay area.

Darol Anger, fiddle; Mike Marshall, mandolin; Todd Phillips, string bass; Tony Trischka, banjo (1996–present); David Grier, guitar (1996–present); Joe Craven, percussion (1993).

A showcase for cutting-edge acoustic instrumental improvisation, Psychograss came together after most of the group's members backed banjoist Tony Trischka at a local gig. As the group is composed of five extremely busy musicians, most bandleaders in their own right, they have played less than a dozen gigs in their years together, but have developed notoriety through their high-profile appearances at places like Telluride and Strawberry, as well as through their two recordings. For their second recording, guitarist David Grier joined, Joe Craven bowed out, and Trischka became a full member.

what to buy: An adventurous debut, Psychograss ♪♪♪½ (Windham Hill, 1993, prod. Mike Marshall, Darol Anger) gave the group members (Marshall, Anger, Craven, and Phillips at the time) ample room for stretching out on nine contemporary-sounding instrumentals, along with an unlikely, but effective, cover of "Whiter Shade of Pale" with Tim O'Brien guesting on vocals.

what to buy next: . The addition of Grier and Trischka on Like Minds ♪♪♪ (Sugar Hill, 1996, prod. Mike Marshall, Darol Anger) made for a denser instrumental mix, and the second recording cuts a broader stylistic swath, from bluegrass-influenced pieces like "Garlic and Sapphires" to Phillips's jazz piece "Big Monk," Marshall's new age–inflected "Hot Nickels," and Trischka's Celtic-tinged "Stuart Symington's Summer Song." This disc's ringer is a fiery acoustic rendition of Jimi Hendrix's "Third Stone from the Sun."

solo outings:

Darol Anger:

Heritage ♪♪♪ (Six Degrees, 1997)

influences:

◀◀ David Grisman, Bill Monroe, Frank Zappa

see also: David Grier, Mike Marshall, Todd Phillips, Tony Trischka

Michael Parrish

Riley Puckett

Born George Riley Puckett, May 7, 1894 (or possibly 1890), in Alpharetta, GA. Died July 13, 1946, in College Park, GA.

The first prominent guitarist in country music and probably the first country singer to yodel on a recording, Riley Puckett (who was blinded as an infant) made his radio debut in 1922. He first recorded in 1924 as a duo with Georgia fiddler Gid Tanner, and was a charter member of Tanner's immensely popular and freewheeling stringband, the Skillet Lickers. As lead singer and guitarist for that pioneering group until it disbanded in the mid-1930s, Puckett was enormously influential on young musicians in the South. As a solo artist, he recorded for Columbia, Bluebird, and Decca and worked on radio stations in Georgia, Kentucky, West Virginia, and Tennessee.

what's available: While the sound of the Skillet Lickers was raucous and wonderfully chaotic, Puckett's solo recordings are more restrained, featuring his mellow singing and distinctive guitar playing. Unfortunately, none of these are available on CD (1970s-era LP reissues on County, Old Homestead, and Bear Family are worth the search). The only Skillet Lickers CD available, Old-Time Fiddle Tunes and Songs from North Georgia ♪♪♪ (County, 1996), reissues 16 songs and tunes recorded between 1927 and 1931. Puckett is present on every cut, driving the fiddle tunes with his propulsive, bass-heavy guitar playing and singing on about half of the selections. Puckett's playing is most impressive on "Dixie" and "Molly Put the Kettle On"; of the vocals, "Dixie," "Devilish Mary," and "Pretty Little Widow" are the most enjoyable to modern ears.

influences:

◀◀ Roy Harvey, Maybelle Carter

▶▶ Every other guitar player in bluegrass and old-time country music

Jon Hartley Fox

Elaine Purkey

Listening to a CD by West Virginia's Elaine Purkey is probably similar to something you'd experience if you sat down with her in her home and thumbed through one of her scrapbooks. You'll experience the happy times and the sad. There's the union meetings and the strikes at the coal mine, and then there's the times where she sat home and joined with her family and friends in singing the old songs that she heard on the Grand Ol' Opry. In other words, there isn't a song that Purkey sings that isn't about her own life in some form or fashion. The best part is that she has recorded some of these memories and is inviting you to join in. It would almost be rude to turn away, now wouldn't it?

what's available: Mountain Music, Mountain Struggle ♪♪♪½ (Marimac, 1996, prod. Larry MacBride, Fred Campeau) proudly

queen ida

shows off Purkey's roots. A glimpse at the song choices says a lot about her life. On it you have old country songs such as "Keep on the Sunny Side," "Knoxville Girl," and "Banks of the Ohio"; original labor songs such as "Destiny of a Coal Miner," "If the Rich Paid Taxes," "America! Our Union!," and a sacred standard transformed into a union song "Wayfarin' Worker." All in all, this CD showcases a strong woman writing and singing some powerful songs.

influences:

- Hazel Dickens, Woody Guthrie, Aunt Molly Jackson, Reba McEntire
- Sheila Barnhill

Steve Gardner

Q

Queen Ida /Ida Guillory

Born January 15, 1929, in Lake Charles, LA.

Born in Lake Charles, Louisiana, Ida Guillory's family followed the exodus of many Creole families to the San Francisco Bay region. She brought the music of her childhood with her to the West Coast but performed exclusively at social functions. While raising her children and driving a bus part time, she borrowed brother Al Rapone's accordion and started practicing. With the encouragement of brothers Al and Wilbert Lewis, she began to perform in the Bay area. The uniqueness of her stature as a female accordion player has overshadowed her talent on the three-row accordion, but increased her demand. Her music has a less intense beat than the bands working Southwest Louisiana and the English lyrics are easier to make out than those of most zydeco bands, but when the band breaks down to the drums, frattoir, and Ida's accordion there is no denying the roots of her music. Ida, who is known to fans as Queen Ida, should be proud of the number of female zydeco performers following in her footsteps, including Rosie Ledet and Anne Goodley.

what to buy: Cookin' with Queen Ida ♪♪♪♪ (GNP, 1989, prod. Neil Norman) demonstrates the Queen Ida sound: zydeco mixed with rock and blues, with a lot more backing and harmony vocals than you'll probably ever hear in a Louisiana zydeco band except maybe Double Clutchin'. Her son, Myrick "Freeze" Guillory, contributes accordion, frattoir, and vocals.

what to buy next: Band on Tour ♪♪♪½ (GNP, 1982, prod. Neil Norman), winner of the 1982 Grammy Award for best ethnic/traditional folk album, finds Ida's sound geared towards an audience that is mostly English speaking and from the lands outside of southwest Louisiana. The mix is lighter and more rock oriented.

the rest:

Zydeco ♪♪ (GNP, 1976)
In New Orleans ♪♪♪½ (GNP, 1980)
Caught in the Act ♪♪♪½ (GNP, 1985)
Zydeco a la Mode (GNP, 1987)
Play the Zydeco (GNP, 1987)
On a Saturday Night ♪♪♪ (GNP, 1987)
In San Francisco ♪♪♪ (GNP, 1988)
Mardi Gras ♪♪♪½ (GNP, 1994) worth searching for: The cookbook Cookin' with Queen Ida: "Bon Temps" Creole Recipes (and Stories) from the Queen of Zydeco Music (Prima Publishing, 1990), by Queen Ida Guillory and Naomi Wise, is full of stories about Queen Ida and Creole music. The food is great, as are the stories.

influences:

- Amédée Ardoin, Boozoo Chavis, Canray Fontenot, Clifton Chenier
- Beau Jocque, Zachary Richard

Jared Snyder

R

Ann Rabson

See: Saffire

Gerry Rafferty

See: Stealer's Wheel

Raffi

Born Raffi Cavoukian, July 8, 1948, in Cairo, Egypt.

Raffi didn't set out to become the world's preeminent children's recording artist; he just saw a need, filled it, and became the idol of millions of small children and their parents in the process. Raffi was an aspiring folk singer during the mid-'70s, when his mother-in-law suggested he write and record some songs for the kids in the preschool she ran. The resulting music was such a hit that other preschools began requesting copies of the tape, and a phenomenon was born. Besides updating classic children's material, Raffi writes inventive, instructive songs for children concerning the environment, personal hygiene, and just plain nonsense. His abilities on guitar, piano, and accordion allow him to fashion catchy, simple arrangements that stay fresh after repeated listenings, and encourages group sing-a-longs. Once Raffi's tapes found distribution through the Shoreline and A&M labels during the '80s, his popularity sky-rocketed, and his LPs sold in the millions. Wanting to prove that he was more than a children's entertainer, Raffi switched gears in 1990 and covered more serious material as an "eco-troubador." Eventually he combined this approach with his established kid's repertoire, and further expanded his musical horizons by adding elements of calypso, jazz, and live theater to his ever-growing production style. During the '90s, his deal with Rounder Records gave Raffi an aura of arrival and legitimacy, unprecedented for someone deemed a "children's performer." In this cynical age, entertainers who are popular with kids provoke a lot of critical abuse from the media; Raffi is no exception. Everyone from David Letterman to the animated Tiny Toons Adventures have unmercifully parodied his style, but it has not affected his popularity and a new crop of preschoolers are growing up learning from and singing along with Raffi.

what to buy: Your small-fry will love you for buying Singable Songs Collection ♪♪♪♪♪ (Rounder, 1996, prod. Raffi, Ken Whiteley), a two-CD, 33-track set of Raffi's best songs for kids and their grateful, exhausted parents.

what to buy next: Charm exudes from Raffi's seasonal offering Raffi's Christmas Album ♪♪♪♪½ (Rounder, 1983/1997, prod. Raffi, Ken Whiteley) as well as his best start-to-finish LP Baby Beluga ♪♪♪♪½ (Rounder, 1980/1997, prod. Raffi, Ken Whiteley), which features Bruce Cockburn on guitar.

what to avoid: It's by no means a bad LP, but your youngsters probably won't enjoy Raffi's work as an "eco-troubador" on Evergreen Everblue ♪♪½ (Rounder 1990/1996, prod. Billy Bryans, Raffi) until they're a little older.

the rest:

Singable Songs for the Very Young ♪♪♪♪ (Rounder, 1976/1996)
More Singable Songs ♪♪♪♪ (Rounder, 1977/1996)
Corner Grocery Store and Other Singable Songs ♪♪♪½ (Rounder, 1979/1996)
Rise and Shine ♪♪♪♪ (Rounder, 1982/1996)
One Light, One Sun ♪♪♪ (Rounder, 1985/1997)
Bananaphone ♪♪♪ (Rounder, 1994)
Raffi Radio ♪♪½ (Rounder, 1995)
Everything Grows ♪♪♪ (Rounder, 1996)

worth searching for: Now out of print, Raffi on Broadway: A Family Concert ♪♪♪♪ (MCA, 1993, prod. Phil Ramone, John Love) is an especially fine live program and his best concert recording to date.

influences:

◀◀ Tom Chapin, James Taylor, Tom Paxton

▶▶ Sharon, Lois & Bram, Fred Penner, Jack Grunsky

Ken Burke

Raise the Rafters

See: Kevin Crawford

Bonnie Raitt

Born November 8, 1949, in Los Angeles, CA.

There are two Bonnie Raitt stories—one in the bottle and one out. From the late '60s to the early '80s, the Quaker-raised, Radcliffe-educated daughter of Broadway star John Raitt was a blues mama who learned her craft at the feet of John Lee Hooker, Mississippi Fred McDowell, and Sippie Wallace. They taught her to play hard and true—and to party hard, too. Raitt made good on their lessons, turning out songs that mined blues, pop, and folk while developing a distinctive, stinging slide guitar style and an aching, honest vocal delivery. An exceptional cover of Del Shannon's "Runaway" unjustly defined the first phase of her career, though Raitt also proved herself a performer of rare conscience, joining kindred spirits such as Jackson Browne and James Taylor at various benefits and rallies. It was after being dropped by Warner Bros. in 1983 that Raitt decided to clean up, dry out, and, essentially, start over again. Her 1989 release Nick of Time revealed a smoother pop style that showcased her trademark slide guitar and retained just enough blues touches to make it work; it sold more than four million copies and started a string of Grammy victories that made Raitt—who married actor Michael O'Keefe in 1991—the darling of her peers as well as of the mainstream audience. She's explored other styles on subsequent releases, though never straying too far from the proven sound. And in 1995 Fender made her the first female guitarist to have an instrument named after her, with royalties funding a program to provide guitars and music lessons to inner-city youths.

bonnie raitt

what to buy: Smooth, assured, and forthright, Nick of Time ♪♪♪♪ (Capitol, 1989, prod. Don Was) is a mature and celebratory effort in which Raitt unveils her new sound, shows off her peerless blues-inspired guitar, and sings with depth and feeling about the tribulations of the past; she even makes Jerry Williams's "I Will Not Be Denied" sound like one of her own songs. The Bonnie Raitt Collection ♪♪♪♪ (Warner Bros., 1990, prod. various) is her old label's cash-in on Nick of Time's success, but it's a terrific overview anyway, featuring previously unreleased live duets with Wallace ("Women Be Wise") and John Prine ("Angel from Montgomery").

what to buy next: Give It Up ♪♪♪½ (Warner Bros., 1972, prod. Michael Cuscuna) is the best of Raitt's Warner albums, a corker that blasts open with her own "Give It Up or Let Me Go" and continues through an inspired collection of originals and covers. Luck of the Draw ♪♪♪½ (Capitol, 1991, prod. Don Was, Bonnie Raitt) finds the Raitt of Nick of Time exuberantly in love and ready to tell the world about it on "Something to Talk About" and her burning duet with Delbert McClinton, "Good Man, Good Woman." what to avoid: Home Plate ♪ (Warner Bros., 1975, prod. Paul D. Rothchild) is a weak and ill-conceived attempt to take Raitt in a country direction—and it strikes out.

the rest:
Bonnie Raitt ♪♪½ (Warner Bros., 1971)
Takin' My Time ♪♪♪½ (Warner Bros., 1973)
Streetlights ♪♪ (Warner Bros., 1974)
Sweet Forgiveness ♪♪ (Warner Bros., 1977)
The Glow ♪♪ (Warner Bros., 1979)
Green Light ♪♪♪ (Warner Bros., 1982)
Nine Lives ♪♪♪ (Warner Bros., 1986)
Longing in Their Hearts ♪♪♪½ (Capitol, 1994)
Road Tested ♪♪♪ (Capitol, 1995) Fundamental ♪♪♪♪ (Capitol, 1998)

worth searching for: Raitt's ubiquitous guest shots on her friends' albums have resulted in some fine music. Her Grammy-winning duet with John Lee Hooker on "In the Mood" from his album The Healer ♪♪♪♪½ (Chameleon, 1989, prod. Roy Rogers) is definitive, while her contributions to her father's Broadway Legend ♪♪♪ (Angel, 1995) are sweet.

influences:
◀◀ Howlin' Wolf, Muddy Waters, Sippie Wallace, Mississippi Fred McDowell, John Lee Hooker, Odetta, Joan Baez

▶▶ Pat Benatar, Melissa Etheridge, Melissa Ferrick, Sheryl Crow, Joan Osborne

Gary Graff

Bonnie Raitt (© Ken Settle)

Willis Alan Ramsey

Born March 5, 1951, in Birmingham, AL.

Wielding more influence than the meager sales of his lone album would indicate, Willis Alan Ramsey is seen today as a genuine forebear of the progressive country scene that has grown up around Austin, Texas, during the past two decades. Only 21 when he recorded his debut album, an effort that teemed with promise and a crack session team (Leon Russell, Ernie Watts, Leland Sklar, Russ Kunkel, Jim Keltner, Carl Radle), Ramsey inexplicably failed to follow it up. For a time he lived in England and Ireland, but he has since relocated to Nashville. Rumors of a second album abound, but thus far none has appeared.

what's available: Willis Alan Ramsey ♪♪♪♪ (Shelter, 1972/DCC Compact Classics, 1990, prod. Denny Cordell, Willis Alan Ramsey) is an acoustic-based collection of literate and laid-back country/folk tunes, some of which have been covered by Leon Russell, Jimmy Buffett, America, Waylon Jennings, and, most recently, Shawn Colvin. Ramsey's best-known song, "Muskrat Love," which is included here, was a hit for America and for the Captain & Tennille.

influences:
◀◀ Woody Guthrie, Bob Dylan, Gram Parsons

▶▶ Lyle Lovett, Nanci Griffith, Butch Hancock

Daniel Durchholz

Ranch Romance

Formed 1989, in Seattle, WA. Disbanded 1994.

Jo Miller, guitar, vocals; Lisa Theo, vocals, mandolin (1989–91); Barbara Lamb, vocals, fiddle; Nancy Katz, vocals, bass; Nova Karina Devonie, accordion, vocals (1991–94); Michael Buono, drums (1991–93); David Keenan, vocals, guitar, mandolin, banjo (1992–94).

This hot, mostly female band (David Keenan, the man with longest tenure in the band, was usually referred to onstage as the band's Ranch Ro-man), opened a series of shows for k.d. lang early in its existence, giving the group a nice push. They were a hot band, featuring the scintillating fiddle of Barbara Lamb, who went on to become a member of Asleep at the Wheel; the passionate lead vocals of Jo Miller and, for a time, Lisa Theo; plus the plucky Clevinger bass playing of Nancy Katz. Nova Devonie added her accordion beginning with the group's second album, and the versatile, hot picking of Keenan was stirred into the mix. The band's repertoire featured a mixture of country boogie, Western swing, some cowboy yodeling, torchy country ballads, a little bluegrass, a lot of originals by the band, and a strong spirit of good fun.

what's available: Western Dream ♪♪♪½ (Ranch Hands, 1989/Sugar Hill, 1991, prod. Ranch Romance, Michael Lord), the band's first album, represents their spirit of good fun very well. On Blue Blazes ♪♪♪♪ (Sugar Hill, 1991, prod. Michael Lord, Jo Miller), the band really hits its stride—a collection of scorching honky-tonkers, swing, cowperson yodeling, and smoldering ballads, it includes the band's perverse take on roadhouse sin, "Buckaroo." Flip City ♪♪♪½ (Sugar Hill, 1993, prod. Tim O'Brien) offers more honky-tonk, Western swing, and country boogie.

solo outings:

Barbara Lamb:

Fiddle Fatale ♪♪♪ (Sugar Hill, 1993)

Tonight I Feel like Texas ♪♪♪½ (Sugar Hill, 1996)

Jo Miller:

(With Laura Love) Jo Miller and Laura Love Sing Bluegrass and Old Time Songs ♪♪♪♪ (Rockin' Octoroon, 1995)

influences:

◀◀ Sons of the Pioneers, Patsy Cline

▶▶ k.d. lang, Red Knuckles & the Trailblazers

Randy Pitts

The Rankin Family

Formed c. 1989, in Cape Breton, Canada.

Carol Jean "Cookie" Rankin, vocals; Heather Rankin, vocals; Jimmy Rankin, vocals, guitar, drums; John Morris Rankin, piano, fiddle, guitar, bass, vocals; Raylene Rankin, vocals.

Growing up in an area that was remote and isolated, the members of the Rankin Family pulled on the traditional roots of their Scottish and Irish ancestors as the source material for their music. Emphasizing soaring melody lines in solos by Cookie, Heather, and Raylene, and the exciting blend of the three voices in tight harmonies, this group's vocal strengths helped it soar to popularity in very little time. The strong songwriting of Jimmy Rankin was also evident from the start, and his work has now become the bulk of the group's material. As the group has evolved, it has incorporated a more contemporary/country sound into its music. Beginning their musical training by performing at family parties, the group truly became a reality once they started touring the folk festival circuit in 1989. Showing farsighted confidence in themselves, they produced their own first album, which eventually went platinum. Following this success, their second album, Fare Thee Well Love, went triple-platinum. They have won four Juno awards: Group of the Year, People's Choice Award for Canadian Entertainer of the Year, Single of the Year for "Fare Thee Well Love," and Country Group of the Year.

what to buy: A good place to get an introduction to the group would be The Rankin Family Collection ♪♪♪ (EMI, 1996, prod. various), which collects some of the favorite tracks from their albums, including the ever-popular "Fare Thee Well Love" and the uplifting "Rise Again." The Rankin Family ♪♪♪½ (Rankins, 1989, prod. Chad Irschick) takes a good look at the group's roots, made up of mostly traditional music, some sung a cappella. Highlights include a lovely, upbeat arrangement of "Mairi's Wedding" and a haunting vocal solo, "Lament of the Irish Immigrant."

what to buy next: Although North Country ♪♪♪ (EMI, 1993, prod. Chad Irschick) shows the group reaching towards a more modern sound, it contains some true gems. Especially lovely is "Ho Ro My Nut Brown Maiden," sung in Gaelic.

what to avoid: Although Endless Seasons ♪♪ (EMI, 1996, prod. John Jennings, Rankin Family) is a bit of a return to an acoustic sound, the group clearly stretched for a new, more contemporary sound, going farther towards the country end of the music spectrum. Featuring several wonderful tracks, including the lively opening "As I Rove Out," the album as a whole feels unremarkable.

the rest:

Fare Thee Well Love ♪♪♪ (EMI, 1993)

solo outings:

Heather, Cookie & Raylene Rankin:

Do You Hear . . . Christmas with Heather, Cookie, & Raylene Rankin ♪♪♪½ (EMI, 1997)

influences:

◀◀ Clannad, Patrick Doyle, Mary Chapin Carpenter

▶▶ Barra MacNeils

Jo Hughey Morrison

David Rea

Born 1945, in OH.

A master session musician on acoustic guitar who has worked with the likes of famous '60s icons Judy Collins, Tom Rush, Buffy Sainte-Marie, Jesse Winchester, Ramblin' Jack Elliott, and Doug Kershaw, David Rea has also made a name for himself as a top-notch performer and songwriter over the last three decades. At age 17, he moved to Toronto from Ohio and, because of his extraordinary guitar skills, soon found himself backing such Canadian folk artists as Gordon Lightfoot and Ian and Sylvia. Rea started writing songs too, and his "Pilgrimage to Paradise" and "The Minstrel," were included as part of Ian and Sylvia's live performances at the time. Rea then embarked on a solo career and, with the help of producer Felix Pappalardi in 1969, made his debut album Maverick Child. He soon found himself writing songs with Pappalardi, and together they penned classic rock songs for Pappalardi's rock group, Mountain: "Mississippi Queen," "For Yasgur's Farm," and "Flowers of Evil." A second solo album, By the Grace of God, followed in 1971. Both albums, long out of print, typify Rea's folksy, laid-back songwriting style that was popularized by artist like James Taylor, Arlo Guthrie, and Jonathan Edwards. By 1972 Rea was anxious to try some new musical directions, and he was asked by his old touring mate, Dave Swarbrick, if he'd like to join the English folk-rock band Fairport Convention as a replacement for lead guitarist Richard Thompson. Arrangements with the band didn't work out to everyone's satisfaction, and Rea left the band after two months. He eagerly returned to Canada, and after working as a solo performer, began work in 1975 with Mike Seeger on The Second Annual Farewell Reunion, an album with various prominent folk performers, including Elizabeth Cotton, Ry Cooder, Ewan MacColl, and Pete Seeger. Encouraged by the success of the album and feeling inspired by musician friends, Rea produced an opera in 1976 with the help of the Toronto Symphony Orchestra. Titled Emperor Norton, it is based on the legendary "emperor of San Francisco," Joshua Abraham Norton. Raising a family took top priority with Rea, so for a while he checked out of extensive touring and devoted more time to his kids. But in 1988 he felt his creativity in music needed expression once again, so assisted by the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation (CBC) he wrote and produced a three-part series of the life of Robert Johnson, the Mississippi bluesman, in 1988. Looking for another new direction, Rea developed and wrote "Music Don't Mind," a radio project that explored the mix of European and black musical styles that eventually produced American music. In 1988 he was honored with the Gabriel Award for Excellence in Broadcasting. Rea has continued to be a vital force in the folk world. His fingerstyle guitar work is still in demand in the studio, notably with David Maloney Listen to the Pipes. Still touring and doing folk festivals (most recently with Native American flutist Sky Walkinstik "man-alone"), Rea continues to be a commanding folk performer, whose songs about the Old West, Canadian and American heroes, and his own thoughts about liberty and the pursuit of happiness make his appeal universal to all audiences of every age.

what's available: Brass Ring ♪♪♪ (Beacon Music, 1993, prod. Neil J. Young, David Rea) is the only Rea album still stocked in major folk record stores. This compact disc features 15 songs written by Rea and includes the legendary "Mississippi Queen" (written by Rea) and backup by Felix Pappalardi, Corky Laing, and Leslie West. Other notable tunes, more in Rea's folk style, are "Juanita," "Twilight Bay," and "A Lover's Ghost."

editor's choice

14 hammered dulcimer albums

Steve Schneider, Momentum (Salient Music Works)

Bill Spence, The Hammered Dulcimer (Front Hall)

Madeline MacNeil, A Place Apart (Turquoise)

Sam Rizzetta, Bucks & Does (Rizzetta Music)

Cathy Barton, Johnny Whistletrigger (Big Canoe)

Malcolm Dalglish, Hymnody of Earth (Ooolithic)

Dan Duggan, Between the Seasons (Esperance)

Walt Michael, Music for the Hammered Dulcimer/Bermudaful (MCE)

No Strings Attached, Bellinzona (Ennessay)

Scott Jackson, Shanty Tunes (SJ)

Linda Thomas & Dan Delancy, Among Old Friends (DL)

Bob Shank, Hammer Dulcimer Solos (Otter Slide)

Maggie Sansone, Traditions (Maggie's Music)

Karen Ashbrook, Knock on the Door (Maggie's Music)

worth searching for: Maverick Child ♪♪ (Capitol, 1969, prod. Felix Pappalardi) is Rea's first effort and a real collector's album if you can find it; By the Grace of God ♪ (Capitol, 1971, prod. Bob D'Orleans, David Rea) is also quite rare and features members of the Rascals and Mountain, as well as Nashville session hands Vassar Clements, Norbert Putnam, and Buddy Spicer. Slewfoot ♪♪ (Columbia/Windfall, 1973, prod. David Rea, Bob Weir) uses members of the Grateful Dead and New Riders of the Purple Sage as back-up musicians on many of the cuts. Another release on cassette, Feelin' Good ♪ (1986), sadly is not available anymore.

influences:

◀◀ Ian Tyson, Tom Rush, Oscar Brand, Dave Van Ronk, Robert Johnson, Pete Seeger, Joni Mitchell

▶▶ Richard Shindell, Ellis Paul, David Mallett

TJ McGrath

"Cheese" Read

Born Wallace Read, August 12, 1914, in Eunice, LA. Died November 15, 1981, in Eunice, LA.

"Cheese" Read was a fiddler who condensed decades of Cajun fiddle styles in his playing. He could produce the "crying" sound of early Cajun fiddlers like Dennis McGee, but he was also capable of playing in a more string-band style that showed the sound of Leo Soileau, Luderin Darbone, and Harry Choates. There's more than a bit of Western swing influence, particularly of the fiddle music of Bob Wills. You can hear that kind of synthesis of Cajun styles at work in such younger fiddlers as Michael Doucet and David Greely. Read also loved early Cajun recording artists like the Breaux Freres and Moise Robin and Mayuse LaFleur. He was recorded playing very traditional pieces during the early 1960s by Dr. Harry Oster, but his chance to shine came on an album recorded for Arhoolie.

what to buy: Cajun House Party: C'ez Cheese ♪♪♪♪♪ (Arhoolie, 1994, prod. Chris Strachwitz) takes all the cuts that Strachwitz recorded in 1979, which include one featuring Read and master Cajun accordionist Marc Savoy backed only by guitar. There is also a session recorded in Savoy's music shop that highlights Read's fiddling where he is backed by guitar, bass, and drums. The remainder of the CD is filled with songs that were recorded by Dr. Harry Oster but not issued in Folksongs of the Louisiana Acadians.

what to buy next: Folksongs of the Louisiana Acadians ♪♪♪♪♪ (Arhoolie, 1994, prod. Chris Strachwitz) combines the original two LPs recorded by Oster. Although Read is only one of a number of artists featured on these recordings, his performances are excellent, and he accompanies many of the other fine performers on this record.

worth searching for: Read is one of the musicians visited by Yasha Aginsky in his movie Cajun Visits (Flower Films, 1983). You not only get to see him play; you get to see the finest Cajun vegetable garden of all time in the bargain.

influences:

◀◀ Dennis McGee, Harry Choates, Leo Soileau, Hackberry Ramblers

▶▶ Michael Doucet, Steve Riley, Magnolia Sisters, Dewey Balfa

Jared Snyder

Bernice Johnson Reagon

Born in 1942, in Albany, GA.

Music has been a medium of political expression for Bernice Johnson Reagon, the founder and leader of Sweet Honey in the Rock, as well as an essential force in the preservation and perpetuation of African American cultural idioms, including oral, musical, and protest traditions. The daughter of a Baptist minister, she has used her deep, soulful voice as a tool against racism, economic struggle, and political injustice. Reagon has been outspoken from earliest memory. A member of the first Youth Chapter of the NAACP in 1959, she was suspended from Albany State College for participating in protest demonstrations two years later. Raised on the songs that she learned at Mt. Early Baptist Church and the spirituals that she sang in high school and college choirs, Reagon made her professional singing debut as a member of the topical group the Freedom Singers in the early 1960s. Organized by Cordell Reagon, whom she married in 1963 (and later divorced), the group became the singing conscience of the civil rights movement. Traveling in a six-cylinder Buick station wagon, the Freedom Singers spread their message across the United States, performing in people's homes, schools, and theaters, including Carnegie Hall and Town Hall in New York, and the Ash Grove in Los Angeles. Their most memorable performance came at the Newport Folk Festival in 1963. In addition to their own set, the group joined with Bob Dylan, Joan Baez, Pete Seeger, and Peter, Paul and Mary in a powerful version of "We Shall Overcome." Reagon left the Freedom Singers in 1964, after the birth of her daughter, Toshi; her son, Kwan Tauna, was born the following year. Her commitment to social change, however, remained as strong as ever. From 1964 to 1966 she worked with Guy Carawan to organize conferences of civil rights movement song leaders. Together with Mary Ethel Jones and Mattie Casey, she formed the Harambee Singers and performed at conferences and rallies on the East Coast. Financed by an anonymous grant, Reagon returned to Spellman College in 1968 to finish her undergraduate studies in history. She moved to Washington, D.C., in 1971, there to attend Howard University, where she earned her doctorate, and to form the Student Non-Violent Coordinating Committee Freedom Singers. Although she temporarily stopped singing in the summer of 1970 due to throat problems, Reagon has continued to be drawn to music. Becoming the vocal director of the Black Repertory Company, she began the steps that led to the formation of the a cappella group Sweet Honey in the Rock, of which she is artistic director. Reagon has recorded two solo albums: The Sound of Thunder in 1965 and River of Life in 1986. Her influence can be directly felt through the music of her daughter, Toshi. She sang supportive vocals on a memorable version of Sting's "Walking in Your Footsteps" on her daughter's debut album, Justice, and served as co-producer for her daughter's second release, Still on the Journey. She maintains a busy schedule outside of music as well. A professor of history at American University in Washington, D.C., and curator emeritus at the Smithsonian Institute's National Museum of American History, Reagon has explored the social roots of her songs. She recently edited the book We'll Understand It Better By and By: Pioneering African American Gospel Composers, which inspired a radio series on National Public Radio in 1994. In 1995 Reagon received the Charles Frankel Prize, a Presidential medal for outstanding contribution to public understanding of the humanities.

what to buy: Reagon's most intriguing and diverse performances are captured in the recordings of Sweet Honey in the Rock, but she has also performed—and more importantly, produced—vital work under her own name. The Songs Are Free ♪♪♪♪ (Mystic Fire Audio, 1994, prod. Gail Pellet) is an hour-long documentary produced by Public Affairs Television, Inc., and hosted by Bill Moyers. The release principally is an interview with Reagon, interspersed with musical excerpts, that defines her perception of the role and importance of oral and musical traditions in black culture. It's also available on video. For the uninitiated, it provides a valuable framework and context to her other recordings. Wade in the Water: African American Sacred Music Traditions ♪♪♪♪ (Smithsonian Folkways, 1994) was conceived, compiled, and annotated by Reagon. She, Toshi, and Sweet Honey in the Rock are among the dozens of performers on this 67-song, four-CD set that documents nineteenth- and twentieth-century African American sacred music. Voices of the Civil Rights Movement: Black American Freedom Songs 1960–1966 ♪♪♪♪ (Smithsonian Folkways, 1997, prod. Bernice Johnson Reagon) features 43 on-location recordings made during the heat of the civil rights struggle at mass meeting sites including Atlanta, Chicago, and Los Angeles, to name a few. It's a devastating two-CD time capsule.

what to buy next: On River of Life/Harmony: One ♪♪♪ (Flying Fish, 1972, prod. Bernice Johnson Reagon, Toshi Reagon), she recreates the rich harmonies of Sweet Honey in the Rock on her own, overdubbing up to 16 different vocal parts. Reagon's self-produced 1965 album The Sound of Thunder has been out of print for more than three decades.

influences:

◀◀ Freedom Singers, Harambee Singer, Betty Mae Fikes, Bessie Jones, Carla Thomas, Paul Robeson, Ray Charles, Pete Seeger, Odetta, Ike & Tina Turner

▶▶ Joan Baez, Toshi Reagon, Tracy Chapman

see also: Sweet Honey in the Rock, Toshi Reagon

Craig Harris and Bryan Powell

Toshi Reagon

Born January 1964.

Like Jakob Dylan, Eliza Carthy, and Ziggy Marley, Toshi Reagon has a formidable lineage to live up to. Her mother is Bernice Johnson Reagon of Sweet Honey in the Rock. She grew up with the sounds of the civil rights movement mixed with the usual teenage pop music, and she's melded her influences into her own roots-based style. Reagon isn't quite the blues belter one might expect; there's a delicate frailty to her voice that suggests youth, and it's very appealing. When at times her lyrics meander into didacticism, her energetic delivery and colorful backing arrangements keep listeners' attention. Reagon says, "People always come up to me after shows and say, 'Man, I felt like you were talking to me.' And I'm like, 'I was.'"

what's available: Who would ever have envisioned Sting as a folk composer? Reagon takes "Walking in Your Footsteps" and embroiders it with gospel ornamentation; it's a great kick-start to Justice ♪♪♪♪ (Flying Fish, 1990, prod. Toshi Reagon). Reagon shows off her instrumental virtuosity on "How Long" (one of her mom's songs) with guitars, tambourine, harmonica, and her own voice. Smithsonian Folkways' press release calls the style of Kindness ♪♪♪♪ (Smithsonian Folkways, 1997, prod. Toshi Reagon) "urban acoustic." It's heavily vocal based, infused with rap and blues. The album was done to raise money for hip surgery; the young Reagon has now had six operations on her hip. Kindness succeeds because of its simplicity; it's the flip side of the equally successful but far more strident Justice.

influences:

◀◀ Led Zeppelin, Bob Marley, Big Mama Thornton, Joni Mitchell, Sweet Honey in the Rock

▶▶ Laura Love, Ani DiFranco

Pamela Murray Winters

The ReBirth Brass Band

Formed 1983, in New Orleans, LA.

Philip Frazier, tuba, leader, sousaphone (1983–present); Kermit Ruffins, trumpet, lead vocals (1983–93); Gardner Ray Green, trumpet (1983–86); Keith "Wolf" Anderson, trombone, background vocal, percussion (1983–1990); Kenneth Austin, snare drum, background vocal, percussion (1983–89); Keith "Bass Drum Shorty" Frazier, bass drum, cymbal, background vocal, percussion (1983–present); Derrick "Khabuky" Shezbie, trumpet, percussion (1986–91); Derek Wiley, trumpet, background vocal, percussion (1987–91); Stafford "Lil D" Agee, trombone, background vocals (1989–93); Ajay "Grabby-Grab" Mallery, snare drum (1989–present); John "Prince" Gilbert, tenor saxophone, vocals (1989–93); Solomon "Nine" Shabazz, cowbell (1989–90); the Morris Brothers, tambourine (1989–90); "Lil" Glenn Andrews, snare drum, tuba (1990–present); Reginald Steward, trombone, background vocals (1991–present); Louis "Shuaka Shuaka" Jordan, maracas (1991–92); Michael Brooks, percussion (1991–92); Roderick "Claude" Paulin, tenor saxophone (1991–93); Kenneth Terry, trumpet (1991–present); Tyrus Chapman, trombone (1991–present); "Jammin'" Al Richardson, cowbell (1991–present).

It was the Dirty Dozen Brass Band that revitalized the New Orleans parade band tradition in the '80s by incorporating elements of funk, R&B, and bebop into the second-line, carnival-music format. The Dozen's success, which took them to jazz festivals all over the world, inspired a younger generation of New Orleans musicians to follow in the same footsteps. The best and most prominent of those younger acts is the ReBirth Brass Band. Of the seven musicians listed on the ReBirth Brass Band's 1984 debut album, Here to Stay, only two were still in the band in 1994; of the 10 musicians on ReBirth's 1992 album Take It to the Street, only five remained. And yet all six of the ReBirth Brass Band albums sound remarkably alike. That's because this group is not about individual stars, but about an ensemble sound rooted in an aggressive approach to New Orleans' brass-band tradition. As long as that city produces young drummers and horn players who have both an affection and irreverence for second-line parade music, ReBirth will have no trouble filling its ranks.

The two musicians who have been with ReBirth from the start are the Frazier brothers, Philip on tuba and Keith on bass drum. It's no coincidence that these low-pitched rhythm instruments been the unchanging factor in the band, for the ReBirth sound is built from the bottom up. The Fraziers get the syncopated groove "rollin'," as the title has it, and the snare drummer and the four to eight other horn players climb on board. This allows a rare combination of freedom and discipline, for the horns can play almost anything as long as they stay in the groove.

what to buy: The ReBirth Brass Band had a surprise hit single with "Do Whatcha Wanna" from their second album, Feel like Funkin' It Up ♪♪♪♪ (Rounder, 1989, prod. Ron Levy). The catchy, sing-along melody fit so snugly into the syncopated carnival beat, and Kermit Ruffins's Louis Armstrong–like vocal was so infectious that the song broke out of the folklorist ghetto and onto commercial radio throughout the South. In 1993–94, just as key members Ruffins and Agee were leaving the band, the group made Rollin' ♪♪♪♪ (Rounder, 1994, prod. Keith Keller), its most sophisticated project. Ten years of playing had finally given the musicians the skills to handle the progressive-jazz flavors that the Dirty Dozen had pioneered.

what to buy next: Do Whatcha Wanna ♪♪♪♪ (Mardi Gras, 1991, prod. Milton Batiste) contains some of the band's most popular tunes—"Do Whatcha Wanna" and "I Feel Like Funkin' It Up"—in alternate recordings by brass-band veteran Batiste. It would be the best introduction to the band if it weren't for the total lack of information on the packaging. Take It to the Street ♪♪♪ (Rounder, 1992, prod. Ron Levy) finds the band growing into its reputation with improved chops and undiminished energy. The title tune is the group's catchiest song since its fluke 1989 hit.

what to avoid: ReBirth Kickin' It Live ♪♪♪ (Rounder, 1991, prod. Ron Levy) captures the group in performance at the legendary Glass House, the original home of the Dirty Dozen. The album has tons of energy but little precision. Chris Strachwitz, the great roots-music documentarian, captured ReBirth on tape on Here to Stay ♪♪ (Arhoolie, 1984, prod. Chris Strachwitz, Jerry Brock, Rebirth Jazz Band) when the musicians were very young and inexperienced. It shows.

influences:

Dirty Dozen Brass Band, Young Olympia Brass Band, Tuba Fats & the Chosen Few

New Birth Brass Band, Treme Brass Band, Young Soul Rebels

Geoffrey Himes

Red Clay Ramblers

Formed 1972, in Chapel Hill, NC.

Tommy Thompson, banjo, guitar, vocals (1972–94); Jim Watson, mandolin, guitar, vocals (1972–86); Bill Hicks, fiddle, vocals (1972–81); Clay Buckner, fiddle, vocals (1980–present); Mike Craver, piano, vocals (1973–86); Bland Simpson, piano, vocals (1986–present); Jack Herrick, bass, horns, vocals (1976–present); Chris Frank, piano, guitar, accordion, horns, vocals (1987–present).

To call the Red Clay Ramblers a bluegrass band is simply to acknowledge that there's nothing else to call them. Original fiddler Bill Hicks describes the Ramblers as "a band that might have existed in 1930, but didn't." They started out as an old-time string band, self-consciously trying to recreate the musty 78 rpm ambiance of Appalachian folk. Even in their early days, however, the Ramblers were never exactly purists about it. They're one of the most versatile bands in the business, drawing from Tin Pan Alley, Cajun, blues, Irish folk, and even Broadway standards. Some of the Ramblers' best work has been in conjunction with theatrical productions, beginning with their stint in the acclaimed 1975 off-Broadway musical Diamond Studs: The Story of Jesse James. Through 25 years and myriad lineup changes (Shawn Colvin was a part-time member during the mid-'80s, although she does not appear on any of their recordings), the Ramblers have maintained a consistently high standard of quality.

what to buy: The Ramblers have enjoyed a long and fruitful association with writer/director Sam Shepard, starting with A Lie of the Mind ♪♪♪♪ (Rykodisc/Sugar Hill, 1986, prod. Jack Herrick, Gary Bristol). The Ramblers served as pit band for this play about familial clashes, providing musical emphasis points. The score mixes originals with traditional covers like "In the Pines" and Stephen Foster's "Hard Times," and more than stands on its own apart from the play. It's the perfect Ramblers sampler, hitting just the right balance between old and new. The next best thing to seeing 'em live. (The Ramblers also play a medicine show band in Shepard's 1993 movie Silent Tongue.) what to buy next: While it's true that the Ramblers can get a shade too cutesy at times, only the congenitally churlish won't be won over by the CD package that combines Twisted Laurel (Flying Fish, 1976, prod. Red Clay Ramblers, Alice Gerrard, Bruce Kaplan, Bill McElroy) and Merchants Lunch ♪♪♪♪ (Flying Fish, 1977, prod. Red Clay Ramblers, Bill McElroy). The material ranges far and wide, from Jimmie Rodgers to W.C. Handy to originals that fit in seamlessly. If you have a hard time telling the difference between the Ramblers' originals and their covers, well, that's the point. Rambler ♪♪♪½ (Sugar Hill, 1992, prod. Jack Herrick) is well-executed but not quite as loose—although its Irish-jig take on "Cotton-Eyed Joe" is pretty amazing.

the rest:

The Red Clay Ramblers with Fiddlin' Al McCanless ♪♪♪ (Folkways, 1974) Stolen Love ♪♪♪½ (Flying Fish, 1975)
Chuckin' the Frizz ♪♪♪ (Flying Fish, 1978)
Meeting in the Air ♪♪♪½ (Flying Fish, 1980)
Hard Times ♪♪♪½ (Flying Fish, 1982)
It Ain't Right ♪♪♪ (Flying Fish, 1986)
The Merry Wives of Windsor, Texas ♪♪♪ (Snappy, 1988) Music from Sam Shepard's A Lie of the Mind ♪♪♪½ (Sugar Hill, 1989) worth searching for: Of the Ramblers' many extracurricular projects, one of the most intriguing is Michelle Shocked's roots-music travelogue Arkansas Traveler ♪♪♪ (Mercury, 1992, prod. Michelle Shocked), on which they back her up on the track "Contest Coming." Singer Marti Jones's lost classic Unsophisticated Time ♪♪♪♪ (A&M, 1985, prod. Don Dixon) has a wonderful version of Bland Simpson's wistful "Follow You All over the World." Simpson moonlights with Don Dixon and Jim Wann as the Coastal Cohorts, a trio that performs the musical King Mackerel and the Blues Are Running ♪♪♪ (Sugar Hill, 1996, prod. Don Dixon); the production has been known to tour and is well worth seeing.

influences:

Charlie Poole & the North Carolina Ramblers, Fats Waller, Louvin Brothers, Band, Carter Family

Hot Rize, Ry Cooder, Béla Fleck, Squirrel Nut Zippers

David Menconi

Red Mountain White Trash

Formed 1986, in Birmingham, AL.

Ed Baggott, fiddle; Jim Cauthen, fiddle, vocals; Joyce Cauthen, guitar, vocals; Phil Foster, mandolin; Jamie Finley, harmonica, banjo uke; Bill Martin, autoharp, vocals; Nancy Jackson, bass.

The Red Mountain White Trash became a band in 1986 when living on Red Mountain in Birmingham, Alabama. Professionals were moving into the area and turning it into an average American suburb while this group of friends were working by day and playing music, clogging, and country dancing by night. They figured the neighbors thought they were white trash so they embraced the term and thus came the name for the band. The Red Mountain White Trash is a southern old-time string band that plays for contradances. Many of their tunes are set into medley like you often see in Celtic music so that during long contras they do not bore the dancers with a single tune. The tunes they choose to play mostly come from Alabama, Kentucky, and Tennessee.

leon redbone

what's available: Fire in the Dumpster ♪♪♪ (Whoop It Up!, 1996, prod. Red Mountain White Trash) is a fun CD to have around, whether you are a dancer or not. There are a lot of good tunes here for the fan of old-time music, including some by John Salyer, Emmett Lundy, Clyde Davenport, and James Bryan. Also included are some tunes the bluegrass fan would know, such as "Dixie Hoedown" from Jim and Jesse, and "Devil on the Stump" by Art Stamper. Besides fiddles, this band adds mandolin, guitar, harmonica, banjo uke, autoharp, bass, and vocals. All the cuts are enjoyable and the liner notes will send you off in a million different directions to hunt down some of the sources for these tunes.

influences:

◀◀ John Salyer, Brad Leftwich, James Bryan, Clyde Davenport, Emmett Lundy

▶▶ Freighthoppers, Red Hots

Steve Gardner

Leon Redbone

The deep, froggy voice and soft, ragtime guitar sounds as if it should come out of an old Victrola; the music of Leon Redbone comes from another time, another era, equal parts Jelly Roll Morton, Mark Twain, Tiny Tim, and Jiminy Cricket. His past is shrouded in mystery—he politely dismisses any biographical question from prying interviewers—but we do know he is a long-time resident of New Hope, Pennsylvania, and that his shtick, a quiet amalgam of jazz, country blues, Tin Pan Alley show tunes, and vaudeville performed in a quiet, ragtime style, has never varied since he first appeared on record beginning in 1975. His voice is probably better known these days on ubiquitous television commercials for beer and laundry detergents and themes for TV programs and films, but he remains a popular, compelling live attraction at concerts and festivals.

what to buy: Redbone's records are pretty much the same style, with only slight background changes from one to the other. You still can't beat his debut, On the Track ♪♪♪♪½ (Warner Bros., 1975, prod. Joel Drone), with impeccable sidemen, careful production, and a passel of catchy songs like "Ain't Misbehavin'," "Lulu's Back in Town," "Polly Wolly Doodle," and the lovely "Marie," with a Warner Bros. cartoon bullfrog on the cover. Double Time ♪♪♪♪ (Warner Bros., 1977/1988, prod. Joel Dorn) is nearly as good, a bit more melancholic and edgy than On the Track, with "Diddy Wa Diddy," "Mr. Jelly Roll Baker," "Crazy Blues," and "Winin' Boy Blues" among the highlights.

what to buy next: From Branch to Branch ♪♪♪♪ (Emerald City/Atco, 1981, prod. Beryl Handler, Leon Redbone) is a high-quality set of tunes—"Step It up and Go," "A Hot Time in the Old Town Tonight," even "When You Wish upon a Star." Red to Blue ♪♪♪♪ (August, 1985, Sugar Hill, 1995, prod. Beryl Handler, Leon Redbone) has a bigger band sound, with Dr. John on piano most of the way through. For a taste of this live show—which isn't that much different from the studio version—try Live ♪♪♪♪ (Special Music, 1995, prod. Beryl Handler, Leon Redbone).

the rest:

Champagne Charlie ♪♪♪½ (Warner Bros., 1978/1988)
Christmas Island ♪♪♪½ (Rounder, 1988/Private, 1996)
Sugar ♪♪♪♪ (Private, 1990)
Up a Lazy River ♪♪♪½ (Private, 1992)
Whistling in the Wind ♪♪♪½ (Private, 1994) worth searching for: For something a bit different, try No Regrets ♪♪♪♪ (Sugar Hill, 1988, prod. Beryl Handler, Leon Redbone), with guests from the newgrass world—Béla Fleck, Jerry Douglas, and Mark O'Connor.

influences:

◀◀ Jelly Roll Morton, Emmitt Miller, Blind Blake, Bing Crosby, Jimmie Rodgers, Louis Armstrong, Mississippi Sheiks

Leland Rucker

Otis Redding

Born September 9, 1941, in Dawson, GA. Died December 10, 1967, in Madison, WI.

Because of his more organic approach to '60s soul, Otis Redding's music has endured—and even deepened—in the years since his death in an airplane crash at age 26. The prince of Memphis soul has blossomed into something only hinted at in his final recording, "(Sittin' on) The Dock of the Bay," made only three days before he died. He might not have bothered to learn all the lyrics to a song before recording—the most glaring example is his version of the Rolling Stones' "(I Can't Get No) Satisfaction"—but close scrutiny of his live recordings or the available outtakes indicate it was exactly this spirit of improvisation, this enthusiasm for creativity, that illuminated his work. From his earliest Little Richard–inspired efforts to the enormous body of work he compiled in four short years at Memphis' Stax/Volt, Redding dominated whatever he recorded with a vivid vision of himself: warm and whimsical, cornpone and secretly wise.

what to buy: With ace Atlantic engineer Tom Dowd at the board, Otis Blue ♪♪♪♪♪ (Stax, 1965, prod. Jim Stewart) featured a slightly richer sound that, coupled with the single finest selection of songs of any Redding album, made this one of the greatest soul albums of its era. The Very Best of Otis Redding ♪♪♪♪♪ (Rhino, 1992, prod. various) is a terrific compilation of the essential material.

what to buy next: The evergreen Live in Europe ♪♪♪♪♪ (Stax, 1967, prod. Jim Stewart), with Dowd at the controls again, commemorates Redding's power as a galvanizing live performer on one of the most historic live albums ever.

what to avoid: Although compelling in its unvarnished honesty, Good to Me ♪♪ (Stax, 1993, prod. Al Jackson Jr.) is not a very good album. Composed of scraps left over from Live at the Whiskey and featuring Redding's unskilled—and undoubtedly underpaid—road band stumbling through his command, this is the least interesting of his many live recordings.

the rest:
Pain in My Heart ♪♪♪♪ (Stax, 1965)
The Great Otis Redding Sings Soul Ballads ♪♪♪♪ (Stax, 1965)
The Soul Album ♪♪♪½ (Stax, 1966)
The Otis Redding Dictionary of Soul ♪♪♪♪ (Stax, 1966)
(With Carla Thomas) King and Queen ♪♪♪ (Stax, 1967)
The Dock of the Bay ♪♪♪♪ (Stax, 1968)
In Person at the Whiskey a Go Go ♪♪♪½ (Stax, 1968)
The Immortal Otis Redding ♪♪♪½ (Stax, 1968)
Love Man ♪♪♪♪ (Atco, 1970)
Tell the Truth ♪♪♪ (Atco, 1970)
Ultimate Otis Redding (Warner Bros., 1987)
Sings Soul Ballads (Atlantic, 1991)
Remember Me ♪♪♪ (Stax, 1992)
The Very Best of Otis Redding, Volume II ♪♪♪♪ (Rhino, 1995)
White Christmas (Rhino, 1996)

worth searching for: The three-disc box, The Otis Redding Story ♪♪♪♪ (Atlantic, 1987, prod. various), also released in a six-LP edition, was replaced—but not improved upon—by a pricey, four-disc box, Otis! The Definitive Otis Redding ♪♪♪♪ (Rhino, 1993, prod. various).

influences:
◀◀ Little Richard, Sam Cooke, Solomon Burke
▶▶ Al Green, Janis Joplin, Mick Jagger

Joel Selvin

Jean Redpath

Born April 28, 1937, in Edinburgh, Scotland.

Jean Redpath's unaffected, crystalline mezzo-soprano is an excellent instrument for Scottish songs. A university lecturer, she is as much a scholar as she is a performer, and she scoffs at show business trappings, concentrating instead on the purity of the music. Nevertheless, her delivery is never dry; her heart is in every syllable. The daughter of a musician and a folklore scholar, Redpath spent time in Greenwich Village in the 1960s, impressing her audiences with the size of her repertoire. She has recorded many albums, but her best-known project is the songs of Robert Burns; seven volumes of this series were recorded before the death of her researcher, Serge Hovey.

what to buy: Lowlands ♪♪♪♪♪ (Philo, 1994, prod. Jean Redpath) is an excellent mix of songs. Two of the best are "Faraway Tom" (with cello accompaniment by Abby Newton) and the a cappella "Gallowa' Hills." Equally strong is Jean Redpath ♪♪♪♪♪ (Philo, 1975/1989), which includes "I Live Not Where I Love," one of Redpath's most requested songs.

what to buy next: The Songs of Robert Burns, Volumes I and II ♪♪♪♪♪ (Philo, 1976, 1980/1996, prod. Serge Hovey) contains the best of Redpath's versions of Burns's songs, including "Auld Lang Syne," "A Red, Red Rose," and "Nine Inch Will Please a Lady."

best of the rest:
First Flight ♪♪♪♪ (Philo, 1989)
The Songs of Robert Burns, Volumes III and IV ♪♪♪♪½ (Philo, 1982, 1983/1996)
The Songs of Robert Burns, Volumes V and VI ♪♪♪♪½ (Philo, 1985, 1987/1996)
The Songs of Robert Burns, Volume VII ♪♪♪♪½ (Philo, 1990) Song of the Seals ♪♪♪♪½ (Philo, 1994)

influences:
◀◀ Robert Burns, Jeannie Robertson

Pamela Murray Winters

6 5 8 blind alfred reed

Blind Alfred Reed

Born June 15, 1880, in Floyd, VA. Died January 17, 1956, in Cool Ridge, WV.

A street musician, protest singer, and ordained Methodist minister, Alfred Reed was blind from birth but learned to play violin, guitar, banjo, and mandolin. He recorded for the Victor label during 1927 and 1929, but made most of his living playing dances, giving lessons, or selling small broadsides with his lyrics printed on them. His recordings have been difficult to find since the '40s—Rounder issued a collection in 1972, but even that's only on cassette. Still, a few of his songs have carried his reputation through the years, most notably "How Can a Poor Man Stand Such Times and Live?," a timeless diatribe that can be championed by both the political left and right and has been recorded by the New Lost City Ramblers, Ry Cooder, the Del Lords, and others.

what's available: Reed made his first recordings at the same 1927 Bristol, Tennessee, field sessions that introduced Jimmie Rodgers and the Carter Family to the world at large. How Can a Poor Man Stand Such Times and Live? ♪♪♪½ (Rounder, 1972/1991) contains three of those recordings plus 11 more. The songs, which include the title track, "Why Do You Bob Your Hair, Girls," and several religious songs, typically feature Reed singing and playing fiddle while accompanied by his son, Arville Reed, on guitar. Many of the songs take a conservative political bent, and modern listeners may not be sure whether to laugh at or take offense to Reed's songs about women, like "Woman's Been after Man Ever Since" and "We've Just Got to Have 'Em, That's All."

worth searching for: Though the sole collection of Reed's music is available only on cassette, several of his recordings appear on compilation CDs. Most notably there's The Bristol Sessions ♪♪♪♪ (Country Music Foundation, 1991, prod. Country Music Foundation), a two-disc set featuring "The Wreck of the Virginian," Reed's first recording, and "Walking in the Way with Jesus," along with tunes by the Carter Family, Jimmie Rodgers, Ernest V. Stoneman, and others. Two gospel songs, "Always Lift Him up and Never Knock Him Down" (from 1927) and "There'll Be No Distinction There" (from 1929) appear on Something Got a Hold of Me: A Treasury of Sacred Music ♪♪♪♪ (RCA, 1990, comp. prod. Billy Altman). "The Old Fashioned Cottage" and the self-pitying "You'll Miss Me," two 1929 recordings not included on the Rounder collection, appear on the compilations The Rose Grew 'round the Briar: Early American Rural Love Songs—Volumes I and II ♪♪♪½ (Yazoo, 1997, prod. Richard Nevins), respectively.

influences:

◀◀ Vernon Dalhart, Carson Robison

▶▶ Carter Family, Jimmie Rodgers, Woody Guthrie

Brian Mansfield

Harvey Reid

Born 1951, somewhere in the Mojave Desert.

Technology came to acoustic music through New Hampshire–based multi-instrumentalist and vocalist Harvey Reid. The first artist to record a folk CD, Reid was the inspiration and the first to use the Fishman transducer and amplification system for acoustic stringed instruments. Alternating between six-string, 12-string, and slide guitars, autoharp, and six-string banjo, Reid casts a deeply personal musical spell. Performing and recording mostly as a soloist, he has crafted traditional folk, classical, Celtic, nautical, bluegrass, and gospel influences into his own intimate style. Music played a small role in Reid's childhood, as none of his relatives played an instrument. He didn't pick up his first guitar until he was in high school. But, after stumbling onto a guitar at a party and strumming it for a few minutes, he was hooked. Teaching himself to play on a $19 guitar that his mom had bought and put in the attic a few years back, he developed a passion for acoustic music and became a traveling musician. Reid has released seven albums. His 1986 debut, The Coming of Winter, shows his command of traditional folk music, while 1987's The Heart of the Minstrel on Christmas Day has become a classic of the Yuletide season.

what to buy: A sampling of tunes from Reid's first six albums is collected on Overview ♪♪♪♪ (Woodpecker, 1990). In addition to impressive renditions of Woody Guthrie's "Vigilante Man" and Jimmie Rodgers's "California Blues," as well as inventive reworking of three traditional tunes, the anthology is a memorable showcase of Reid's virtuoso playing and tradition-rooted composing.

what to buy next: Reid's all instrumental album, Chestnuts ♪♪♪♪ (Woodpecker, 1995), is a tribute to the music of the past. Performing on a lengthy list of stringed instruments and joined by David Surette (guitar, mandolin, and bouzouki), Moondi Klein (guitar), Brian Silber (viola), and Dan Crary (guitar), Reid brings century-old tunes, including "My Grandfather's Clock," "Old Black Joe," and "Listen to the Mockingbird," up to date.

the rest:

The Coming of Winter ♪♪♪½ (Woodpecker, 1986)

The Heart of the Minstrel on Christmas Day ♪♪♪½ (Woodpecker, 1987)
Of Wind and Water ♪♪♪ (Woodpecker, 1988)
Solo Guitar Sketchbook ♪♪♪ (Woodpecker, 1989)
Steel Drivin' Man ♪♪♪½ (Woodpecker, 1992) Circles ♪♪♪½ (Woodpecker, 1993)

influences:

Leo Kottke, John Fahey, Gordon Lightfoot, Carter Family

Michael Hedges

Craig Harris

John Reischman

See: Good Ol' Persons

Relativity

See: Nightnoise

John Renbourn

Born 1944, in Torquay, England.

John Renbourn is considered one of the finest fingerpicking guitarists in the world. His work during the 1960s with his own groups, with Pentangle, and together with Bert Jansch had a profound effect on anybody who played acoustic guitar during the 1960s and 1970s. He began to play guitar as a teen and, like almost every other British youth, became obsessed with the skiffle craze of the 1950s. He formally studied classical guitar, but soon moved to London where he met Jansch, whose first album, Bert Jansch, had a profound impact on Renbourn as it had on many other guitarists. The two collaborated together on one album, Bert and John, and shortly thereafter founded the folk-rock group Pentangle. Both guitarists had been influenced by country blues, jazz, and traditional music of the British Isles. Renbourn brought a knowledge of medieval music and classical guitar also. Pentangle allowed the Renbourn and Jansch to interact over the solid rhythm section of Danny Thompson and Terry Cox. The group lasted until about 1973. Renbourn's work after that with the John Renbourn Group showed a growing interest in East Indian music both in rhythm and scales. His more recent ensemble, Ship of Fools, has a pronounced Celtic influence. Renbourn continues to tour and record and challenge both himself and the adventurous listener.

what to buy: During the late '60s, Sir John Alot of Merry England ♪♪♪♪♪ (Shanachie, 1992, prod. Nathan Joseph) was in heavy rotation on many a turntable on both sides of the Atlantic. During the Summer of Love, with all its feedback and psychedelic sounds, this record stood out by conjuring up castles and knights with its clear acoustical sound. This sound was accomplished by Renbourn with help from Pentangle drummer Terry Cox and flutist Ray Warleigh. What they created was a unique marriage of Renbourn's love of medieval music with the improvisations and openness of jazz.

what to buy next: John Renbourn and Bert Jansch ♪♪♪♪♪ (Cambra, 1985, prod. Bill Leader) combines the Bert and John LP with cuts from Jansch's first two records. You really can't go wrong with any of it. You can hear the amazing guitar interplay between these two musicians just as they were beginning to collaborate together. It is an audio documentation of the creative process of discovery that was going on between the two of them. Here is the first version of Charles Mingus's "Goodbye Porkpie Hat" that wasn't recorded by a jazz band. Like a pair of good cooks, each adds a tinge of blues or a slight Celtic accent to the other's themes.

the rest:

John Renbourn ♪♪♪½ (Reprise, 1965)
Bert and John ♪♪♪♪ (Transatlantic, 1966)
Another Monday ♪♪♪ (Transatlantic, 1967)
John Renbourn Sampler ♪♪♪♪ (Transatlantic, 1971)
Lady and the Unicorn ♪♪ (Shanachie, 1971)
Faro Annie ♪♪ (Reprise, 1972)
So Clear ♪♪♪ (Transatlantic, 1973)
Heads and Tails ♪♪♪½ (Transatlantic, 1973)
Hermit ♪♪♪ (Shanachie, 1977)
(With the John Renbourn Group) Maid in Bedlam ♪♪♪♪½ (Shanachie, 1977)
(With Stefan Grossman) John Renbourn & Stefan Grossman Live in . . . ♪♪♪ (Kicking Mule, 1978)
Black Balloon ♪♪ (Shanachie, 1979)
Under the Volcano ♪♪♪ (Sonet, 1980)
Enchanted Garden ♪♪♪ (Shanachie, 1980)
Live in America ♪♪½ (Flying Fish)
Live in Concert ♪♪♪♪ (Shanachie, 1985)
(With Stefan Grossman) The Three Kingdoms ♪♪½ (Shanachie, 1986) Essential Collection, Volume I ♪♪♪♪ (Transatlantic, 1987) Essential Collection, Volume II ♪♪♪½ (Transatlantic, 1987)
Folk Blues of John Renbourn ♪♪♪♪½ (Demon, 1988)
Nine Maidens ♪♪ (Flying Fish, 1988)
Ship of Fools ♪♪½ (Flying Fish, 1988)
Medieval Almanack ♪♪½ (Demon, 1994)
Wheel of Fortune ♪♪♪♪½ (Flying Fish, 1994)
Essential: The Best of John Renbourn ♪♪♪♪ (Transatlantic, 1994)
Collection ♪♪♪♪½ (Castle, 1995)
Rare Performances 1965–95 ♪♪♪ (Vestapol, 1996)
John Renbourn/Another Monday ♪♪♪♪ (Castle, 1996)
In Concert 1982 ♪♪♪♪ (Vestapol, 1996)
(With the John Renbourn Group) John Barleycorn ♪♪♪ (Edsel, 1996)

660 renegades

the 1970s

The seventies began with a number of acoustic performers being huge stars on the rock circuit—James Taylor, Crosby, Stills, Nash and Young, and Joni Mitchell made the jump to arenas very easily. As the decade continued, many new voices made a commercial splash nationally—John Prine and Steve Goodman in Chicago, Dan Fogelberg in Colorado, David Bromberg in New York, and Kris Kristofferson in Nashville. Country, folk, and rock continued to merge through the work of folks like Gram Parsons, Emmylou Harris, the Eagles, Jerry Jeff Walker, and even the Grateful Dead (and their spin-off, the New Riders of the Purple Sage). Bluegrass continued to diversify, with groups like the Newgrass Revival and the Nitty Gritty Dirt Band melding bluegrass and rock (and, in the Dirt Band's case, making an important connection with their country roots in the Will the Circle Be Unbroken project), and artists like David Grisman and Tony Rice making connections between bluegrass instrumentation, progressive jazz, and acoustic swing. Folk rock continued to be a significant force in the British Isles, with groups like Steeleye Span, the Albion Band, and the resilient Fairport Convention drawing larger and larger audiences, and Fairport alumni Richard Thompson (working with his wife Linda) and Sandy Denny (who died in 1978) making some of their most enduring contributions during the decade.

Michael Parrish

Lost Sessions ♪♪♪ (Edsel, 1996)
(With Stefan Grossman) Snap a Little Owl ♪♪♪ (Shanachie, 1997)

worth searching for: John Renbourn: Rare Performances 1965–95 ♪♪♪♪ (Vestapol, 1996) is a 90-minute video tape of performances by Renbourn that cover more than 30 years of his career. You get some of almost all the periods of his work and if you are interested in his guitar playing there is no better way to get some idea how he's able to do some of the things he does.

influences:
◀◀ Davey Graham, Big Bill Broonzy, Bert Jansch

▶▶ Richard Thompson, Martin Carthy, Ralph McTell

see also: Bert Jansch, Pentangle, Stefan Grossman

Jared Snyder

Renegades

See: Carol Elizabeth Jones & James Leva

Don Reno & Red Smiley

Formed 1951. Disbanded 1964.

Don Reno (born February 21, 1926, in Spartanburg, SC; died October 16, 1984), banjo, guitar, vocals; Red Smiley (born May 17, 1925, in Asheville, NC; died January 2, 1972), guitar, vocals.

Singer-songwriter and bandleader Don Reno was a longtime, influential musician from the first generation of artists to consciously play a music called bluegrass. With guitarist and singer Red Smiley and their band the Tennessee Cut-ups (a crack outfit that included fiddler Mack Magaha, bassist John Palmer, and, from the age of nine, Reno's son, mandolin player Ronnie Reno), Reno made some of the most successful and enduring bluegrass albums of the early days of the music. He was recognized as among the most innovative banjo players around, was an outstanding bluegrass guitarist, and wrote "Feudin' Banjos" with sometime performing partner Arthur "Guitar" Smith. He replaced Earl Scruggs in Bill Monroe's band before forming a duo, and eventually a band, with Smiley. Together, they cut many classic bluegrass sides for King Records and others; the partnership dissolved in 1964 due to Smiley's ill health. Reno then formed a group with guitarist and vocalist Bill Harrell that lasted for a decade. From 1976 Reno performed mostly with his younger sons, Dale and Don Wayne, although oldest son Ronnie sometimes took time out from his job with Merle Haggard to appear with the family band.

what to buy: Reno & Smiley & the Tennessee Cut-ups, 1951–1959 ♪♪♪♪♪ (King, 1993, reissue prod. Gary B. Reid) is a beautifully compiled and annotated collection of the duo's first eight years on King, featuring many classics, including "I'm Using My Bible for a Roadmap," "Drifting with the Tide," "I'm the Talk of the Town," "Country Boy Rock 'n' Roll," "I Know You're Married," and more, 115 in all. Good Old Country Ballads ♪♪♪½ (King, 1959) and A Variety of Country Songs ♪♪♪½ (King, 1959) are budget reissues of albums from the late 1950s; like most reissues from King and its subsidiaries, they offer no liner notes or other information, fidelity is iffy, and the track count is low—but the price is right and the music is classic and has been hard to find for years.

what to buy next: Don Reno and Red Smiley on Stage ♪♪♪♪ (Copper Creek, 1996) and Don Reno and Red Smiley on the Air ♪♪♪½ (Copper Creek, 1996) present Don and Red during the late 1950s in a pair of live recordings, the first from concerts, the second from a variety of radio shows.

the rest:
Instrumentals ♪♪♪ (Hollywood, 1958)
New and Original Folk Songs Written in Commemoration of the Centennial of the American Civil War ♪♪½ (King, 1961)
World's Best Five-String Banjo ♪♪♪ (King, 1963)
On the Road: Songs Truck Drivers Love ♪♪ (King, 1964)
The Glory Years (Collectors Classic, 1971)
Country Songs ♪♪♪ (Starday, 1975)
The World's 15 Greatest Hymns ♪♪♪½ (King, 1975)
Last Time Together ♪♪½ (Gusto, 1976)
The True Meaning of Christmas ♪♪♪ (King, 1976) Songs from Yesterday ♪♪♪ (Rebel, 1988)
I Know You're Married, But I Love You Still ♪♪ (King, n.d.) Country Singing and Instrumentals ♪♪ (King, n.d.)
Bluegrass Hits ♪♪ (Dot, n.d.)
The Best of Reno & Smiley ♪♪ (King, n.d.)
Hymns and Sacred Gospel Songs ♪♪♪ (King, n.d.)
16 Greatest Gospel Hits ♪♪♪ (Gusto, 1996)

worth searching for: Family & Friends ♪♪♪♪ (Kaleidoscope, 1988, prod. Tom Stern), one of Reno's last sessions, finds him joined by top-notch pickers like Byron Berline, Tony Rice, and his sons Ronnie, Don Wayne, and Dale on a program of mostly familiar Reno & Smiley material. Red Smiley also cut several albums on the Rural Rhythm label, apparently all with the same name, i.e. Red Smiley and the Bluegrass Cut-ups, but with differing catalog numbers: (Rural Rhythm RRRS 160) ♪♪, (Rural Rhythm RRRS 182) ♪♪, and (Rural Rhythm RRRS 211) ♪♪. None of them have release dates but they date from the 1960s or 1970s. Although all of them are way out of print and none are particularly noteworthy, for those who enjoy pawing through cutout bins, you might run across them and they won't be all that expensive either.

solo outings:
Don Reno:
(With Eddie Adcock) Sensational Twin Banjos ♪♪♪ (Rebel, 1968/1992)
(With Bill Harrell) Bluegrass on My Mind ♪♪½ (Starday, 1972)
Wango Presents Reno ♪♪½ (Wango, 1975)
Magnificent Bluegrass Band ♪♪½ (CMH, 1976)
The Don Reno Story ♪♪♪ (CMH 1976)
Fastest Five Strings Alive ♪♪♪ (Hollywood, 1969/Starday, 1976) (With Arthur Smith) The Original Dueling Banjos ♪♪ (CMH, 1979)

influences:
◀◀ Bill Monroe, Earl Scruggs
▶▶ Reno Brothers, Bluegrass Cut-ups

Randy Pitts and Neal Walters

Kimmie Rhodes

Born March 6, 1954, in Wichita Falls, TX.

In an unassuming way, Kimmie Rhodes has managed to keep a silent hold on Nashville while creating music in her Lone Star home state. Two of Rhodes's compositions—sobering tales of love lost titled "Hard Promises to Keep" and "I Just Drove By"—were recorded by Trisha Yearwood and Wynonna, respectively. Undoubtedly these accomplished vocalists appreciate the caliber of Rhodes's talent. As a songwriter she crafts poignant vignettes with a soulful core and a lyrical power that convey melancholy without resorting to melodramatics. "West Texas Heaven," the title cut of her excellent stateside debut album, communicates longing with a sense of resiliency. The equally beautiful "The Corner of the Bar" is both picturesque and transcendent. It's no wonder Rhodes has attracted a slew of respected and outspoken admirers, including Willie Nelson, Waylon Jennings, Joe Ely, and Billy Joe Shaver. Nelson, Jennings, and the late Texas songwriter Townes Van Zandt make guest appearances on West Texas Heaven, released in 1996 on the Houston-based independent Justice Records label.

what's available: West Texas Heaven ♪♪♪♪½ (Justice, 1996, prod. Joe Gracey, Kimmie Rhodes, John Leventhal) showcases Rhodes's seamless control of her artistry. The singer/songwriter runs the gamut from folk to country to blues. Her angelic voice, an instrument of stark beauty, turns sassy on "Git You a Job" and "Home John," then contemplative on "I'm Not an Angel" and the title cut. A quiet masterpiece.

worth searching for: Pal Willie Nelson invited Rhodes to sing with him on two songs from Nelson's Just One Love ♪♪♪½ (Justice, 1995, prod. Grady Martin). The title cut and "I Just Drove By"—both written by Rhodes—are just two of the solid country tunes on Nelson's splendid album, an indie-label side project that captured the rich country history inherent in Nelson's native Texas.

influences:
◀◀ Emmylou Harris, Bobbie Gentry
▶▶ Kelly Willis, Libbi Bosworth

Mario Tarradell

Rhythm Rats

Formed in Cincinnati, OH.

Kenny Jackson, fiddle, banjo, guitar, vocals; Paula Bradley, guitar, banjo-ukulele, vocals; Whitt Mead, fretted and fretless banjos, fiddle.

The Rhythm Rats are a trio from Ohio that play old-time music. They are one of many groups today known as "Young Fogies" for taking up the banner of old-time music and not only furthering it, but having a heck of a lot of fun with it in the process. The band is led by multi-instrumentalist Kenny Jackson. Jackson plays all instruments well, but on the fiddle he really shines. He and guitarist Paula Bradley also sing some very pretty Carter Family and old-country duet material. The Rhythm Rats are definitely a band that shows us that old-time music is safe for yet another generation.

what's available: I Believe I'll Go Back Home ♪♪♪♪ (Marimac, 1997, prod. Rhythm Rats) is their first CD release. It is a fabulous primer into the music of the Rhythm Rats, providing a good rundown of their favorite tunes and songs as well as the musicians who influenced them. One of the tunes that is especially striking is Jackson's solo fiddle version of "Jenny Lynn," a song he learned from a visit with Birch Monroe. Birch had learned it from his own uncle, Pendleton Vandiver, who was immortalized in Bill Monroe's bluegrass standard "Uncle Pen." Bluegrass fans need to hear Jackson run through this song loaded with the "ancient tones" that Bill Monroe used to speak about.

worth searching for: Pretty Crowing Chicken ♪♪♪♪ (Marimac, 1994, prod. Rhythm Rats, Fred Campeau) is their first release on Marimac records and came out only on cassette. Once again this wonderful tape is loaded with old-time duets and fiddle tunes. An old-timey version of "In the Pines" would once again set well with the bluegrass crowd.

influences:

- Carter Family, Tommy Jarrell, Melvin Wine, New Lost City Ramblers
- Red Mules

Steve Gardner

Rice Brothers

See: Tony Rice

Tony Rice

Born June 8, 1951, in Danville, VA.

Virginia-born, California-bred Tony Rice is a brilliant, innovative flatpicking guitarist who was introduced to bluegrass by his father. While knocking around the more popular West Coast bluegrass hangouts in the early- to mid-'60s, Rice learned a lot from such superpickers as Clarence White, Merle Watson, Norman Blake, and Ry Cooder. Between 1970 and 1981 the guitarist allied himself with a number of cutting-edge "newgrass" bands, including the Bluegrass Alliance, J.D. Crowe's New South, the David Grisman Quintet, and the Bluegrass Album Band. As part of the David Grisman Quintet, Rice expanded his horizons beyond three-chord bluegrass, studying chord theory, learning to read charts, and expanding the range of his playing. In 1979 he left the group to pursue his own music and recorded Acoustics, a guitar-oriented record. That was followed by Manzanita, which leaned more toward folk music and highlighted Rice's soulful vocal style. He subsequently formed a band called the Tony Rice Unit, which showcased his forays into jazz and experimental "spacegrass." In 1996 Rice was named Best Acoustic Pickstyle Guitarist by Guitar Player magazine readers. The same year he also recorded Out of the Woodwork, a marvelously crafted album with brother Larry Rice and Desert Rose Band alumni Herb Pedersen and Chris Hillman.

what to buy: Tony Rice Sings and Plays Bluegrass ♪♪♪♪½ (Rounder, 1996, prod. Tony Rice) shows Rice dipping into the bluegrass canon with Bill Monroe's "On and On" and Flatt and Scruggs's "I'll Stay Around." Also included is a tasteful rendition of Bob Dylan's "Girl from the North Country."

what to buy next: Manzanita ♪♪♪♪ (Rounder, 1979) and Church Street Blues ♪♪♪♪ (Sugar Hill, 1983) are two hugely influential bluegrass albums. Manzanita features the accompaniment of Sam Bush, Jerry Douglas, and Ricky Skaggs on tunes with a largely old-time feel. Church Street Blues is more of a solo affair, with phenomenal picking by Rice. Tony Rice Sings Gordon Lightfoot ♪♪♪½ (Rounder, 1996) shows Rice transplanting the intimacy and subtlety of the folk coffeehouse into the bluegrass tradition by offering poignant versions of his favorite songwriter's tunes, including "Ten Degrees" and "Early Morning Rain." The album's 17 selections are culled from other Rice recordings released from 1977 to 1994.

the rest:

(With the Tony Rice Unit) Acoustics ♪♪♪½ (Kaleidoscope, 1979/Rounder, 1994)
Backwaters ♪♪♪ (Rounder, 1982)
Cold on the Shoulder ♪♪♪½ (Rounder, 1984)
Me and My Guitar ♪♪♪½ (Rounder, 1986)
(With Norman Blake) Blake and Rice ♪♪♪ (Rounder, 1987) Native American ♪♪♪½ (Rounder, 1988)

Devlin ♪♪♪½ (Rounder, 1988)
(As the Rice Brothers) Tony, Larry, Ron, and Wyatt Rice ♪♪♪♪½ (Rounder, 1989) California Autumn ♪♪♪½ (Rebel, 1990)
(With Norman Blake) Norman Blake and Tony Rice 2 ♪♪♪ (Rounder, 1990)
Guitar ♪♪♪½ (Rebel, 1991)
(As the Rice Brothers) Rice Brothers II ♪♪♪♪½ (Rounder, 1994)
(With John Carlini) River Suite for Two Guitars ♪♪♪ (Sugar Hill, 1995)
(With Larry Rice, Chris Hillman, and Herb Pedersen) Out of the Woodwork ♪♪♪♪ (Rounder, 1996)

worth searching for: The Tony Rice Unit's Mar West ♪♪♪♪½ (Rounder, 1980, prod. Tony Rice) is a splendid collection of the guitarist's spacegrass originals. Especially noteworthy is "Nardis," a Miles Davis tune that showcases Rice's uncanny ability to segue from jazz to bluegrass in a heartbeat.

influences:
Doc Watson, Clarence White, Merle Watson
Béla Fleck

Rick Petreycik

Zachary Richard

Born September 8, 1950, in Lafayette, LA.

Zachary Richard started out as a folk singer after graduating from Tulane University. Looking for something to make him stand out from all the other guitar-playing singers, he took up the Cajun accordion and was mentored by the great Felix Richard (who also mentored Horace Trahan) and by playing along to Aldus Roger records. Richard's style of music is now not often based on traditional Cajun music or the accordion, but on a blend that weighs more towards zydeco and New Orleans music, with a strong rock sensibility. There is a continuing thread of social activism in his music about Cajun culture and the struggle to maintain the French language in Louisiana that is juxtaposed against the dancing, good-times sound of his music.

what to buy: Snake Bite Love ♪♪♪♪ (A&M, 1992, prod. Jim Wray) represents the mature Richard sound: a zydeco beat with elements of rock, country, swamp pop, and R&B built on top, all filtered through a Cajun sensibility. Richard's songwriting owes more to the singer-songwriter genre than to Lawrence Walker or Dewey Balfa, but the passion found in his singing is clearly inspired those Cajun legends.

what to buy next: On Women in the Room ♪♪♪♪ (A&M, 1990, prod. Zachary Richard, Jim Scott), Richard's songwriting began to get the major-label quality of his live performances. He hit the perfect synthesis of his social comment and folk-rock style with "No French, No More" and mixed a south Louisiana dance groove and nonsense lyrics with "Who Stole My Monkey."

the rest:
Mardi Gras Mambo ♪♪♪ (Rounder, 1980)
Zack's Bon Ton ♪♪♪ (Rounder, 1989)
Zack Attack ♪♪♪½ (Arzed, 1989)
Bayou des Mystées ♪♪♪ (Arzed, 1991)
Vent d'Eté ♪♪♪ (Arzed, 1996)

worth searching for: Looking Back ♪♪♪♪ (Arzed, 1985, prod. Zachary Richard) is a retrospective of Richard's early work.

influences:
Aldus Roger, Jimmy C. Newman, Tasso, Steve Riley

see also: Michael Doucet

Jared Snyder

Sue Richards

Born December 4, 1943, in Muscle Shoals, AL.

Four-time U.S. National Scottish Harp Champion Sue Richards did not grow up dreaming of becoming a harpist. Quite the contrary, she only learned to play the pedal harp because her father wanted her to. She never really liked the instrument until, years later, she discovered the joys of folk music and the distinctly different voice of the Celtic harp. By this time she had developed another career, but the harp gradually took over; she soon became an outstanding harper, particularly on the toe-tapping dance tunes that so many other harpers tend to avoid. Richards's ability to capture the lilt and lift of a song quickly distinguished her as an exceptional Celtic musician. She currently spends much of her time spreading her love of folk music and the folk harp by teaching at workshops across the country, judging at harp competitions, and touring both as a soloist and with others. She specializes in Scottish, Irish, and Welsh music, and this concentrated focus makes her an expert at what she does. An excellent ensemble musician, Richards currently works with two groups, Ceoltoiri and Ensemble Galilei, where her skills as an accompanist and a soloist shine. She has performed with a wide variety of musicians, including Bonnie Rideout, Jean Redpath, Billy McComiskey, Kim Robertson, and Maggie Sansone. The choice of music on all her recordings reflects her exquisite taste in tunes. Her more recent recordings also reflect her flair for composition, showcasing a few of her original works.

jonathan richman

what to buy: Hazel Grove ♪♪♪♪♪ (Maggie's Music, 1995, prod. Charlie Pilzer) combines a delightful selection of tunes, from the stately "Brian Boru March" to the exciting "Banjo Breakdown." The choice of instrumentation on this album is particularly well thought out. The title track, a Richards original, ends the recording with a journey to enchantment.

what to buy next: Grey-Eyed Morn ♪♪♪♪½ (Maggie's Music, 1991, prod. Maggie Sansone) is a softer, more mellow collection of tunes that demonstrates Richards's flair for arranging traditional tunes for harp. Morning Aire ♪♪♪♪ (Maggie's Music, 1993, prod. Charlie Pilzer), winner of the Washington Area Music Association's Album of the Year award, contains some uplifting dance tunes along with a few gentle airs.

influences:

◀◀ Sileas, Kim Robertson, Wendy Stewart, Maire Ni Chatasaigh, Jean Harriman, Richard Gary

▶▶ Carol Thompson, Sunita Staneslow

see also: Ceoltoiri, Ensemble Galilei

Jo Hughey Morrison

Jonathan Richman

Born 1951, in Boston, MA.

If you thought Ronald Reagan's leap from the movie screen to the White House was a stunner, consider Jonathan Richman's left-turn from underappreciated father of punk rock to heel-clicking, soul-baring hopeful romantic. As the leader of an early-'70s Boston bar band called the Modern Lovers—which also featured future Talking Heads keyboardist Jerry Harrison and future Cars drummer David Robinson—Richman created a brooding, Velvet Underground–derived sound that yielded such influential three-chord classics as "Roadrunner" and "Pablo Picasso." But even back then he wasn't afraid to express his deepest feelings and darkest fears, an unflinching honesty that pervades his work to this day—even though he's now funneling those emotions through stripped-down '50s- and '60s-inspired ditties that range from offbeat covers (Bette Midler's "The Rose," the theme from "Moulin Rouge") to disarming paeans to awkward slow dancing ("They're Not Tryin' on the Dance Floor") and dressing down for a date ("Everyday Clothes"). Cynics dismiss him as childish and self-consciously cute, but they haven't been paying attention since the days of "I'm a Little Dinosaur." Even though his breakup with his longtime wife darkened his attitude, Richman came to terms with his pain and himself on 1996's inspiring Surrender to Jonathan. His world remains full of treasured moments and small pleasures, where growth is measured in wrinkles, not milestones, and where true love is still a quest, not an anachronism.

what to buy: Mopey and minimalist, Modern Lovers ♪♪♪♪ (Beserkley/Rhino, 1975, prod. John Cale) is the album that launched a thousand garage bands with "Roadrunner," "Pablo Picasso," and "She Cracked." The mostly acoustic Back in Your Life ♪♪♪½ (Beserkley, 1979, prod. Matthew King Kaufman, Glen Kolotkin, Kenny Laguna) contains both his silliest ("I'm Nature's Mosquito," "Party in the Woods Tonight") and most sublime ("Affection," "Back in Your Life") material. The title track contains what may be the single best line about the passage of time ever written: "What once was a puppy is now a dog/and what once was a piglet is now a hog." Jonathan Sings! ♪♪♪♪ (Sire, 1983, prod. Peter Bernstein) marks an important transition as Richman learns how to celebrate life and love from an adult's perspective and a child's heart. "This Kind of Music," which champions rock 'n' roll as something to be felt and not merely heard, and "The Neighbors," about not letting other people control your life, are as empowering as they are entertaining. Having a Party with Jonathan Richman ♪♪♪½ (Rounder, 1991, prod. Brennan Totten) is an utterly charming, solo, electric, live recording sporting such giddy anthems as "The Girl Stands up to Me Now," "When She Kisses Me," and the lovely "They're Not Tryin' on the Dance Floor."

what to buy next: Jonathan Goes Country ♪♪♪½ (Rounder, 1990, prod. Lou Whitney, D. Clinton Thompson) unites Richman with the Missouri bar band the Skeletons. "Since She Started to Ride," "Reno," and an instrumental version of Skeeter Davis's "I Can't Stay Mad at You" lock into a tight, twangy bar-band groove. But the highlight is Richman's tender cover of "Man Walks among Us," Marty Robbins's cautionary tale about urban sprawl.

what to avoid: The self-indulgent, sonically anemic Jonathan Richman ♪♪ (Rounder, 1989, prod. Brennan Totten) contains some great tunes—Ronnie Dawson's "Action Packed" and Richman's "Everyday Clothes"—but they're drowned out by droning instrumentals, foreign-language ditties, and a painful spoken-word number called "I Eat with Gusto, Damn! You Bet."

the rest:

Jonathan, Te Vas a Emocionar ♪♪ (Rounder, 1984)
Rockin' and Romance ♪♪♪ (Twin Tone, 1985)

It's Time for Jonathan Richman ♪♪♪ (Upside, 1986)
I, Jonathan ♪♪♪½ (Rounder, 1992)
You Must Ask the Heart ♪♪♪ (Rounder, 1995) Surrender to Jonathan ♪♪♪ (Vapor, 1996) worth searching for: Chartbusters: The Best of Beserkley 1975–1978 (Rhino, 1986, prod. Matthew King Kaufman, Glen Kolotkin), a reissue of the 1975 compilation of rare tracks by labelmates the Rubinoos, Greg Kihn, and Earth Quake, contains four Richman rarities: "The New Teller," a joyful rocker about his crush on a bank teller; a heartfelt cover of the Showmen's "It Will Stand"; "Government Center"; and a bouncier, post–John Cale rendition of "Roadrunner."

solo outings:
Modern Lovers:
Modern Lovers Live ♪♪♪½ (Beserkley/Rhino, 1977)
Jonathan Richman and the Modern Lovers ♪♪♪½ (Beserkley, 1977)
Rock 'n' Roll with the Modern Lovers ♪♪ (Beserkley/Rhino, 1977)
The Beserkley Years ♪♪♪♪½ (Rhino, 1987)
Modern Lovers 88 ♪♪♪½ (Rounder, 1988)
Precise Modern Lovers Order ♪♪♪ (Rounder, 1994)

influences:
◀◀ Velvet Underground, Chuck Berry, Ventures
▶▶ Poi Dog Pondering, Ben Lee, Beck

David Okamoto

Leslie Riddle

Born June 13, 1905, in Burnville, NC. Died July 13, 1980, in Rochester, NY.

Leslie Riddle was born and raised in the segregated South. He had little education and was a common laborer most of his life, working as a clothes presser and delivery man, and shoeshine boy. He began playing the guitar after an accident at a cement plant caused him to lose his right leg at the knee. A small disability payment allowed him to attend North Carolina A&T for a year and he began playing music while recovering from his injury. He played in small string bands throughout the '20s and achieved some renown as a guitar player. During the late '20s, he met A.P. Carter in Kingsport, Tennessee, and became a valued source for many of the Carter Family songs and tunes. He moved to Rochester, New York, in 1942 and basically gave up music in 1945. Mike Seeger, learning of his role from Maybelle Carter, sought Riddle out in 1963 and encouraged him to begin playing again; he was able to play a few festivals and to make one recording before his death. A 70-page essay on Riddle, including lyrics and full annotations for all the songs he recorded, is available from Barry O'Connell/Riddle, Box 2234, Amherst College, Amherst, Massachusetts 01002.

what's available: Step by Step ♪♪♪½ (Rounder, 1993, prod. Mike Seeger) was recorded between 1965 and 1978 and clearly shows the influence that Riddle had upon the Carter Family and, particularly, on Maybelle Carter's famous guitar style. It includes such Carter favorites as "Titanic," "The Cannon Ball," and "I'm Working on a Building."

influences:
◀◀ Blind Willie McTell, Charlie Poole
▶▶ Carter Family, Maybelle Carter, Mike Seeger

Neal Walters

Bonnie Rideout

Born December 18, 1962, in Saline, MI.

Bonnie Rideout started violin at age eight and went on to graduate from the University of Michigan in music and fine arts in 1985. As she was growing up, her family often played music together. Her mother was a concert pianist and was also her accompanist on her first recording, Soft May Morn. Rideout served as musician-in-residence at Armadale Castle on the Isle of Skye, where she had access to an unpublished eighteenth-century music manuscript of traditional tunes collected by Patrick McDonald. These rare tunes appear throughout her recordings. She is best known for her trademark "piobrachs," highly ornamented Highland bagpipe tunes, and a style that borrows from Highland bagpipe ornamentation. She has been the National Scottish Fiddle champ three times. In 1996 Rideout became the first American ever invited to the prestigious Edinburgh International Festival in Scotland to demonstrate Highland style fiddling. She took them by storm and is influencing the next generation of young Scottish fiddlers. On both violin and viola, this tiny woman produces one of the biggest, fiery sounds in Scottish music today!

what to buy: Rideout's recordings are all well researched, beautifully arranged, and masterfully performed. Celtic Circles ♪♪♪♪♪ (Maggie's Music, 1994, prod. Charlie Pilzer) has the theme of a day's cycle from sunset to nighttime. Starting with a distant drum that leads into a driving march, the music makes a memorable statement. Braveheart piper Eric Reigler adds drive. Chris Caswell on nylon- and wire-strung harps and Carolyn Surrick on viola da gamba add delicacy and a haunting bass. The Washington Post describes Rideout best on this album: "She transforms a lonely melody into utter desolation . . . then effortlessly switches gears from languorous ballad to virtuoso exercise."

Kindred Spirits ♪♪♪♪♪ (Maggie's Music, 1996, prod. Bonnie Rideout, Bill McElroy) is devoted to music for, by, and about women. Highlights include the heartbreaking eulogy written by Robert Burns at the death of his first wife, and the soaring, uplifting "Aldavaloch" and "Roy's Wife" (who was reputed to be a fickle lass). Rideout is joined with her usual brilliant crew of Eric Rigler, Al Pettaway, Chris Caswell, Abby Newton, and Maggie Sansone.

the rest:

Soft May Morn ♪♪♪½ (Atholl Brose Recordings, 1990/Maggie's Music, 1994)
A Scottish Christmas ♪♪♪♪♪ (Maggie's Music, 1996)
Gi'me Elbow Room N/A (Maggie's Music, 1998)

influences:

Rideout's musical family, Dr. John Turner, and an old northeast Scottish farmer named Jim Falconer

Karen Ashbrook

Riders in the Sky

Formed mid-1970s, in Nashville, TN.

Ranger Doug (Douglas B. Green), lead and baritone vocals, yodels, guitar; Woody Paul (Paul Chrisma), lead and tenor vocals, fiddle, guitar, accordion, harmonica, mandolin; Too Slim (Fred LaBour), melody vocals, stand-up bass, guitar, accordion.

Riders in the Sky are throwbacks to the silver-screen era of singing range riders, a day when cowboys were the idolized heroes of the Western world. Brimming with original music and a repertoire of classics, the trio are known equally for their music and their numerous radio and television endeavors, especially those geared toward children. No-hat act Doug Green is a country music historian, while Paul Chrisma holds a Ph.D. in theoretical plasma. This makes for great conversation out on the prairie. The group's albums typically have some combination of music and Western skit comedy. The members of Riders in the Sky have been Grand Ole Opry members since 1982 and appeared in the 1985 Patsy Cline biopic Sweet Dreams.

what to buy: If you're new to the Riders, Best of the West ♪♪♪♪½ (Rounder, 1987) is a collection of their early recordings that makes an excellent introduction to the band.

what to buy next: Best of the West Rides Again ♪♪♪♪½ (Rounder, 1987) is the second volume of the group's best-known material.

what to avoid: The Riders comedy shtick goes over best live or on radio. You've got to be a real fan to want The Riders Go Commercial ♪♪ (MCA, 1989), a spoken-word album packed with fake advertisements.

the rest:

Three on the Trail ♪♪♪ (Rounder, 1980)
Cowboy Jubilee ♪♪♪ (Rounder, 1981/1991)
Weeds and Water ♪♪♪ (Rounder, 1983/1991)
Live ♪♪♪½ (Rounder, 1984)
New Trails ♪♪♪½ (Rounder, 1986)
Saddle Pals ♪♪♪ (Rounder, 1987)
The Cowboy Way ♪♪♪½ (MCA, 1987)
Prairie Serenade ♪♪♪½ (Rounder, 1991)
Harmony Ranch ♪♪♪ (Columbia, 1991)
Merry Christmas from Harmony Ranch ♪♪♪ (Columbia, 1992)
Always Drink upstream from the Herd ♪♪♪ (Rounder, 1995) Public Cowboy Number One: The Music of Gene Autry ♪♪♪½ (Rounder, 1996)

influences:

Gene Autry, Sons of the Pioneers
Don Edwards, Wylie & the Wild West Show

Craig Shelburne and Brian Mansfield

Steve Riley & the Mamou Playboys

Formed 1989, in Mamou, LA.

Steve Riley, fiddle, accordion, vocals; Peter Schwarz, fiddle, bass, vocal; David Greely, fiddle, saxophone, vocals; Jimmy Domengeaux, guitar, vocals; Kevin Dugas, drums. Past members include Kevin Berzas, guitar.

In Philip Gould's collection of photographs Cajun and Zydeco Music, he juxtaposes a photo of a very young Steve Riley wedged against the stage at a Music Festival in Mamou, Louisiana, with his eyes locked in on the musicians with a picture of a 20-year-old Riley playing on the same stage. The look of determination in the young boy's eyes sums up the intensity of Riley's development as a player and performer. Riley taught himself to play the accordion by modeling himself after his cousin, master accordion maker and player Marc Savoy. His prodigious skills brought him to the attention of Dewey Balfa, who took Riley out on the road with him. Under Balfa's eye he learned to fiddle and was introduced to Peter Schwarz, the son of Tracy Schwarz and fellow fiddle student of Balfa. One of Balfa's final tours featured a band that included Riley, Schwarz, Christine Balfa (now of Balfa Toujours), and Kevin Barzas, a young guitarist from Mamou whose grandfather had for years led one of the best Cajun bands around, the Mamou Playboys.

With the addition of Baton Rouge–area fiddler David Greeley, the new Mamou Playboys were formed. Riley is a monster on both accordion and fiddle. He has expanded his talents to include three-row and piano accordion. The band uses complicated modulating arrangements, three-part harmony, and the occasional presence of Greeley's saxophone to vary the sound. Riley can play the toughest, fastest two-steps, solid zydeco, and the oldest fiddle tunes from the Balfa Brothers repertoire.

what to buy: Titled after the French version of All Souls Day, where people go tend to the graves of their ancestors, La Toussaint ♪♪♪♪½ (Rounder 1995, prod. Scott Billington) highlights the strengths of the Mamou Playboys and keeps their excesses in check. The three-part harmonies are here, but they're used for accenting ("T'es Parents Veulent Plus Me Voir" and "La Valse D'Amitié); the same can said for the modulations that the band sometimes can't resist ("Between Euncie and Opelousas"). "La Toussaint" maybe the best Cajun composition of the '90s, a moving piece written by Schwarz with lyrics by Greeley. Placing it as the centerpiece of the CD gives the recording a kind of thematic quality that isn't all that common in Cajun recordings. Around it, there are dance hall originals like "Katherine," with guest Isaac Miller on steel, and archaic fiddle pieces based on Alan Lomax's fiddle recordings. The album also contains two zydeco numbers with Riley showing his chops on three-row button accordion and C.J. Chenier contributing alto sax. Overall the record captures the essence of this group and makes for great listening–even for those who aren't Cajun music fans.

what to buy next: The enthusiastic playing and singing on Trace of Time ♪♪♪♪ (Rounder, 1993, prod. Al Tharp) is marred only by murky and bottomless production. All the traits of the band are there, the modulations and the three-part harmonies that are their signature and the Balfa Brothers tune, "Parlez-Nous a Boire," played with respect for tradition.

the rest:
Steve Riley and the Mamou Playboys ♪♪♪½ (Rounder, 1990)
Tit' Galop pour Mamou ♪♪♪ (Rounder, 1992)
Live! ♪♪♪ (Rounder, 1994) Friday Night at Last ♪♪♪♪ (Swallow, 1997)

influences:
◀◀ Balfa Brothers, Savoy-Doucet Cajun Band, Tracy Schwarz, D.L. Menard, Dewey Balfa ▶▶ Horace Trahan, Balfa Toujours

see also: Tracy Schwarz

Jared Snyder

Jim Ringer /Jim Ringer & Mary McCaslin

Jim Ringer, born February 29, 1936 in Yell County, AR. Died March 17, 1992 in Northern CA. Mary McCaslin, Born December 22, 1946 in Indianapolis, IN.

Jim Ringer's earthy baritone was tailor made for Nashville-style country music, but his love of acoustic music and his sparsely produced arrangements brought a folkiness to his performances and recordings. As comfortable with Lefty Frizzell–penned country ballads as he was with Woody Guthrie–like folk songs, Ringer projected a warmth and rustic intimacy in his musical approach. A native of Arkansas's Ozark Mountain region, he was as much a product of California's San Joaquin Valley, where he moved—after a temporary stop in Oklahoma—with his family in the mid-1940s. The son of a farmer-turned-construction worker, Ringer earned extra money for the family by picking farm crops alongside his five brothers and sisters. Inheriting a mixture of folk ballads learned from his mother and the Jimmie Rodgers–style country music and blues favored by his father, Ringer began playing guitar at the age of 10. His early years, however, were mostly spent in trouble with the law and he served a prison term in the late 1950s. Throughout the 1960s, he performed solo and with Sweet's Mill String Band in northern California bars and honky tonks while working a variety of day jobs ranging from construction to logging. Shortly after the breakup of his first marriage in the early '70s, Ringer met singer-songwriter Mary McCaslin at a folk music camp/retreat in the Sierra Mountains above Fresno, California. In addition to a romance that culminated in their marriage in 1978, Ringer and McCaslin fused their musical talents as an influential duo. Their happiness was brief. In 1982 Ringer's health began to decline and his record label, Philo, experienced financial problems and stopped releasing new albums. Although they moved to northern California in 1985, they stopped touring three years later. When their marriage dissolved in 1989, Ringer, whose health and alcoholism continued to worsen, returned to Fresno. He died on St. Patrick's Day, 1992, at the age of 56. McCaslin, who had her own solo career prior to meeting Ringer, has continued to perform and has released several solo albums in print.

what to buy: Ringer's musical legacy is celebrated on The Best of Jim Ringer: The Band of Jesse James ♪♪♪♪ (Philo, 1996, prod. Jim Ringer, Mary McCaslin). While memorable re-workings of Lefty Frizzell's "Saginaw, Michigan" and Roy Acuff's "Streamlined Cannonball" reflect his grounding in country music, Ringer's true talents come through his songwriting. Accompanied by such stellar players as Jay and Lyn Unger, Saul Brody, David Bromberg, Billy Novick, and Peter Ecklund, he shows the strength of his pen with original versions of "Waitin' for the Hard Times to Go," later the title track of an album by the Nashville Bluegrass Band, and "Tramps and Hawkers," later covered by Tom Russell. The sorrow of a broken marriage and being separated from his children is reflected during "Open Door at Home" and "Good to Get Home." The country flavor of Ringer's music is exemplified by three tunes—"Dusty Desert Wind," "Still Got That Look," and "Linda's on Her Own"—featuring instrumental accompaniment by the Dillards, the Hot Band, and the Burrito Brothers. McCaslin's harmonies enhance two songs—"Rank Stranger" and "Strawberry Roan"—from their solo duet album, The Bramble and the Rose, and serve as a reminder of how potent their music was together.

jean ritchie

the rest:
Waitin' for the Hard Times to Go ♪♪♪½ (Folk-Legacy, 1972)
Jim Ringer ♪♪♪ (Philo, 1975)
Tramps and Hawkers ♪♪♪ (Philo, 1977)
(With Mary McCaslin) The Bramble and the Rose ♪♪♪½ (Philo, 1978) Endangered Species ♪♪♪ (Flying Fish, 1991)

influences:
◀◀ Lefty Frizzell, Jimmie Rodgers, Woody Guthrie ▶▶ Nashville Bluegrass Band, Mary McCaslin

see also: Mary McCaslin

Craig Harris

Jean Ritchie

Born December 8, 1922, in Viper, KY.

Jean Ritchie is one of America's greatest living traditional musicians and part of an American musical family that rivals its British peers, the Coppers and Watersons. The fourteenth of 14 children in a Scots-Irish Appalachian family, Ritchie learned music at her parents' feet. The Ritchies were visited by Cecil Sharp a few years before her birth, and he collected a number of their songs. Jean Ritchie wasn't discovered until 1948, when Mitch Miller heard her in a store demonstration of dulcimers. She was later recorded by another folklorist, Alan Lomax. She has become well known as a lecturer, but her skills as a performer are her greatest gift: she has a simple, gentle voice that shows off her songs like sunlight shows off a hardwood floor.

what to buy: Recorded in 1959, Carols for All Seasons ♪♪♪♪½ (Rykodisc/Tradition 1997, reissue prod. Anton Glovsky) is an intensely moving collection of songs that are particularly suited to wintertime but can be played, as the title suggests, year round. Ritchie lets her roots show; these American songs are full of references to bunches of may, wassails, and other trappings of English tradition.

best of the rest:
(With Doc Watson) Jean Ritchie and Doc Watson at Folk City ♪♪♪♪½ (Folkways, 1963/1990)
High Hills and Mountains ♪♪♪♪ (Greenhays, 1979)
The Most Dulcimer ♪♪♪♪ (Greenhays, 1984)
(Jean Ritchie and Sons) Mountain Born ♪♪♪♪½ (Greenhays, 1995)

influences:
◀◀ The Ritchie Family
▶▶ Jean Redpath, Kate MacLeod, Robin Holcomb

Pamela Murray Winters

Tex Ritter

Born Maurice Woodward Ritter, January 12, 1905, in Murvaul, TX. Died January 2, 1974.

Raised on a Texas ranch, "Tex" Ritter enjoyed all the amenities that the lifestyle had to offer: riding, roping, swapping tall tales. The boy could sing pretty well too, and he mesmerized fellow Texans by spinning legends about the wildest days of their beloved Lone Star State. A career in entertainment seemed natural, but Ritter attempted a law degree instead. His storytelling led him all over the country, eventually to Chicago, where a fascination with radio won him over. After helping to write and produce the legendary Lone Ranger series, Ritter landed on Broadway in 1931 in Lynn Riggs's Green Grow the Lilacs (a predecessor of the musical Oklahoma). Hollywood lured Ritter away in 1936, and there he dabbled in movies (he has 85 to his credit), radio, TV (he co-hosted the Town Hall Party series from 1953–60), and more music ("You Two-Timed Me Once Too Often" spent 11 weeks at Number One in 1945, and the theme song to High Noon, which he sang, won an Oscar). Ritter, who is the father of actor John Ritter, was elected to the Country Music Hall of Fame in 1965 and moved to Nashville the following year, where he became a regular on the Grand Ole Opry.

what to buy: The fabulously annotated Country Music Hall of Fame ♪♪♪½ (MCA, 1991) contains more than half the 30 sides Ritter recorded for Decca during 1935–39. Many of these recordings, such as "I'm a Natural Born Cowboy" and "Ride, Ride,

Jean Ritchie (© Linda Vartoogian)

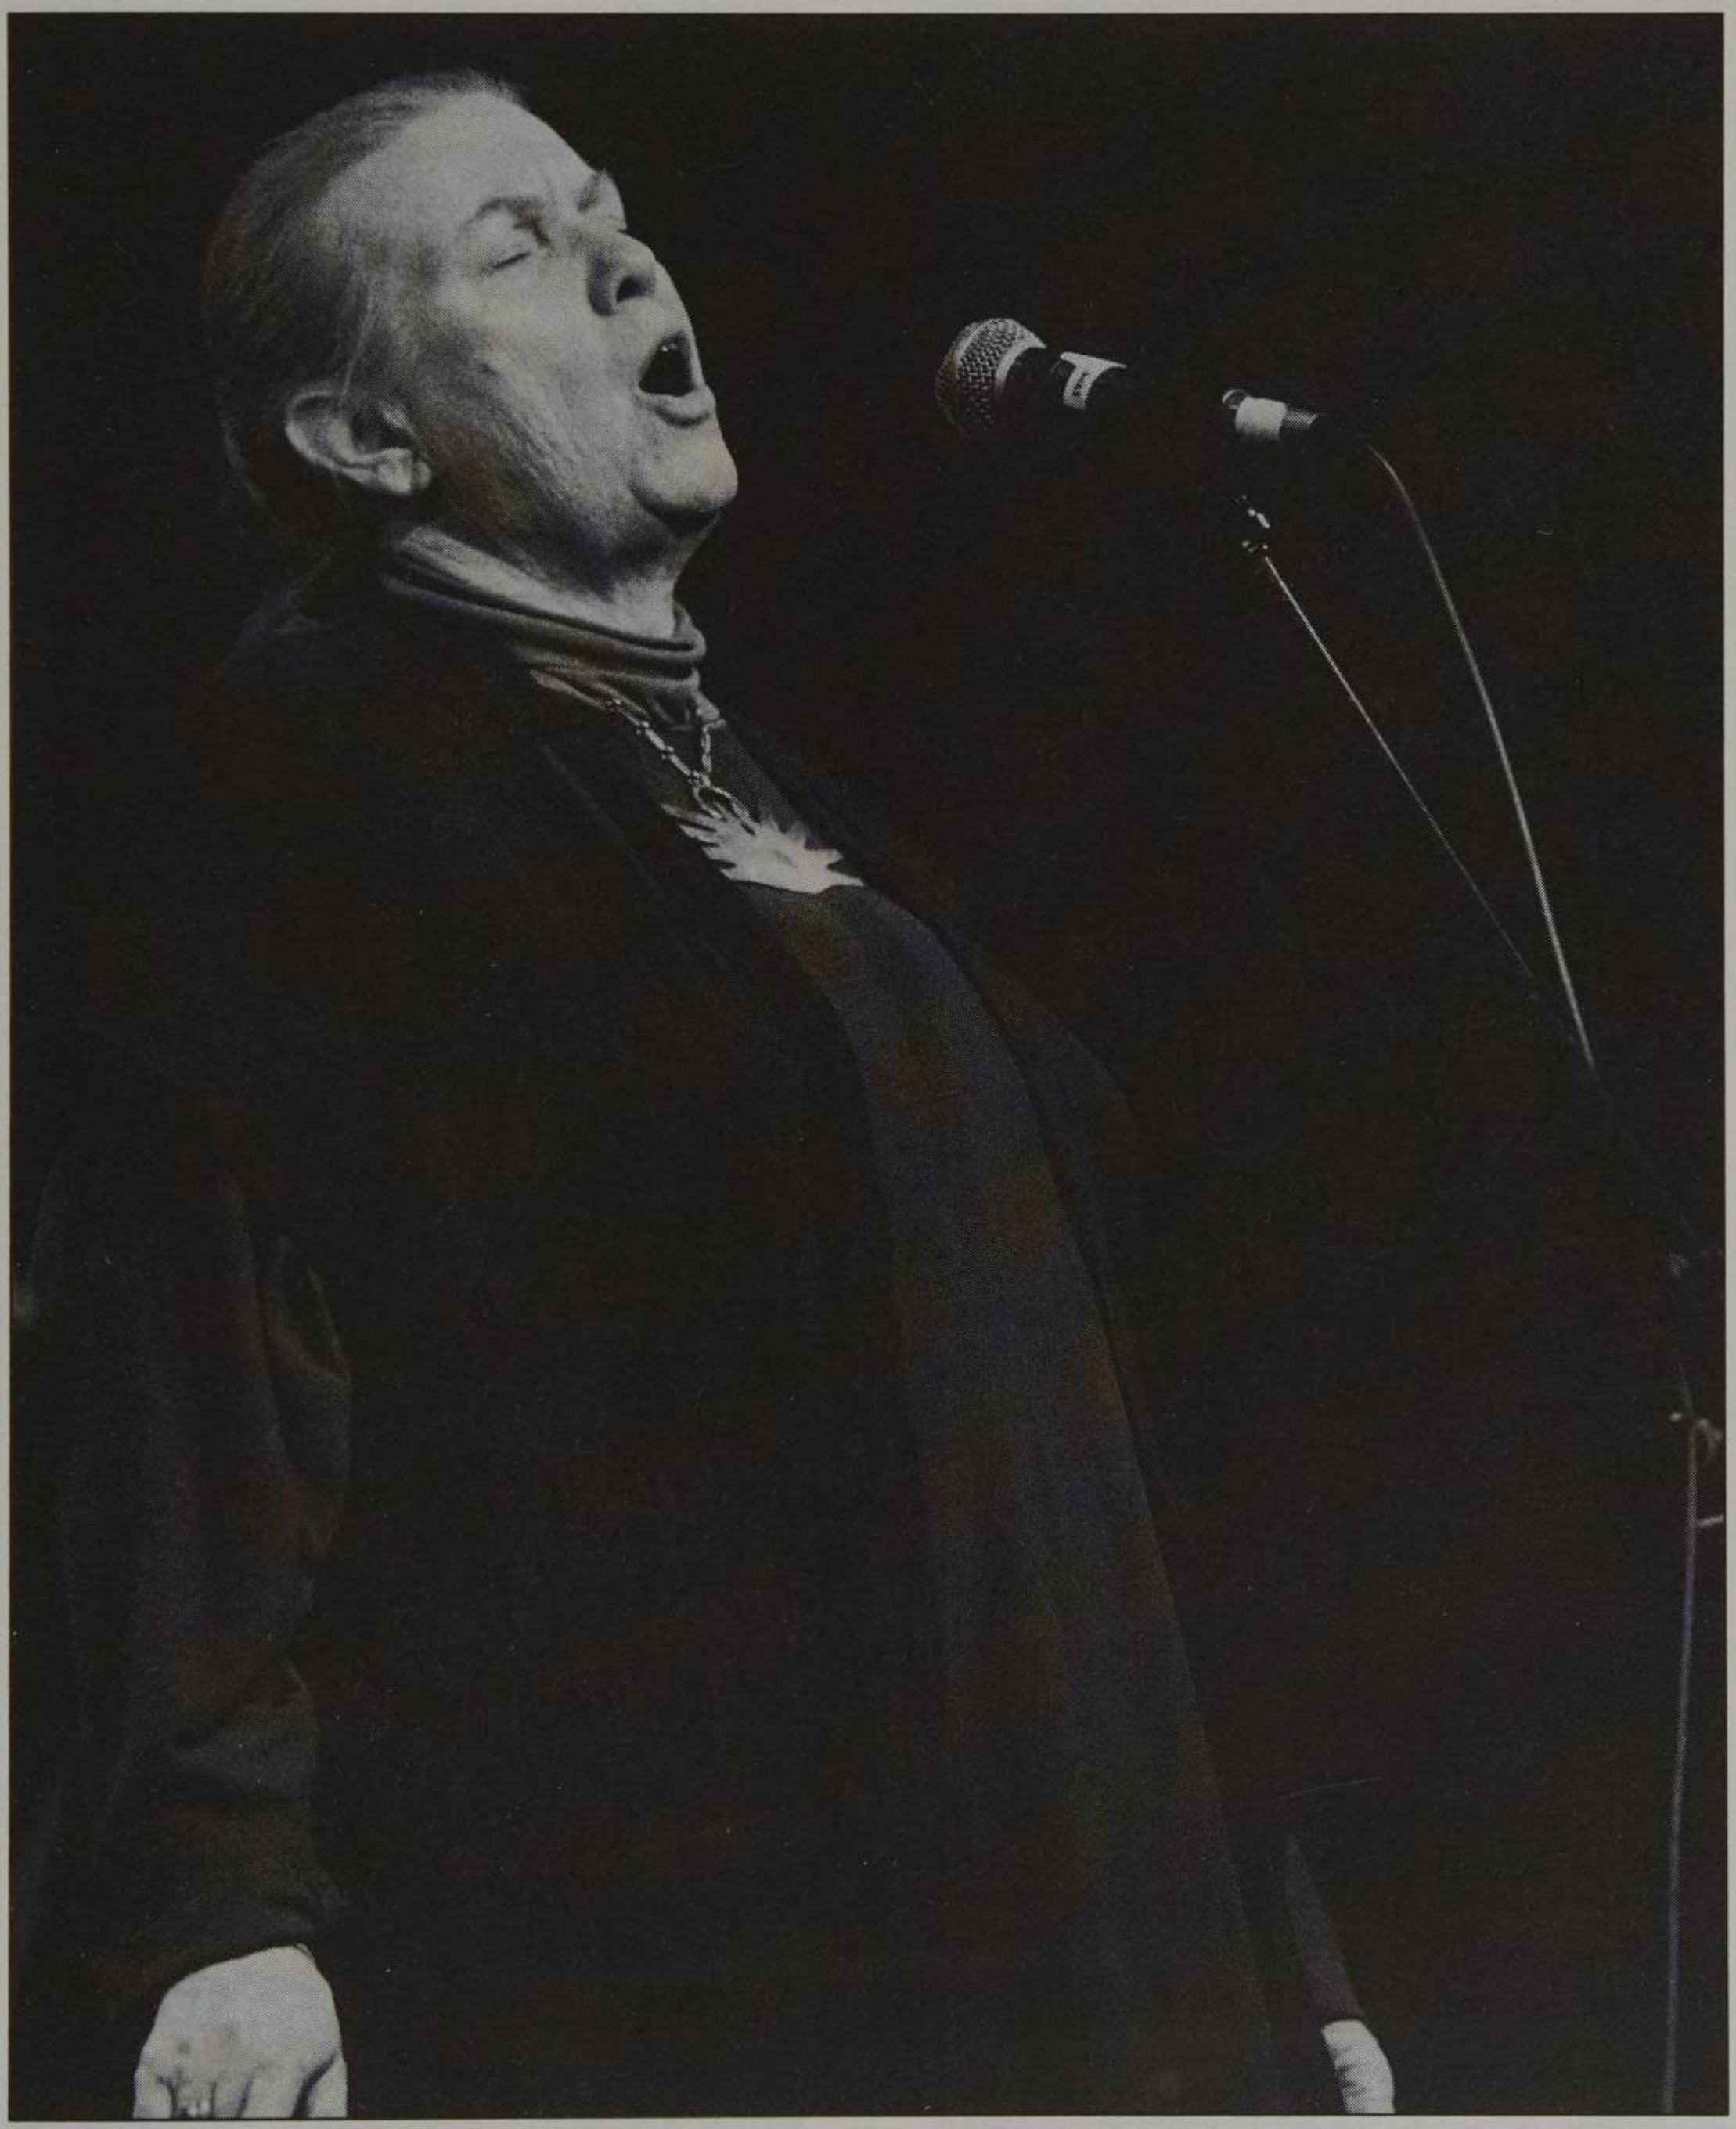
tex ritter



Ride," come from his movies. While these recordings weren't as popular as ones he'd later make, this is a fine package.

what to buy next: Greatest Hits ♪♪♪ (Curb, 1990) contains a pretty good selection of Ritter's best-known recordings for Capitol, including "Deck of Cards," "High Noon," and "Have I Told You Lately that I Love You." The liner notes are skimpy, so if you can find the out-of-print Capitol Collector's Series, it's a preferable buy. Until Capitol releases another reissue, this will do.

what to avoid: The recordings on Conversation with a Gun ♪♪ (Richmond, 1988), dating from late in Ritter's career, are hardly his best, and there's only eight of them here.

worth searching for: Ritter was Capitol's first country signing, and he spent some 30 years with the label. Capitol Collector's Series ♪♪♪½ (Capitol, 1992) collects the best of that period; it's probably the best compilation of Ritter's work and can be found with some diligence. High Noon ♪♪♪½ (Bear Family) is a single-disc collection of cowboy songs.

influences:
◀◀ Gene Autry, Roy Rogers
▶▶ Rex Allen, Riders in the Sky

Brian Mansfield and Craig Shelburne

Sam Rizzetta

Born May 23, 1942, in Oak Park, IL.

Since the mid-1960s, Sam Rizzetta has been a performer and builder of a great variety of stringed instruments, most notably hammered dulcimers. He is highly regarded as a master craftsman and musician, beginning a new era of dulcimer playing in the traditional music and folk scene with the founding of the first dulcimer quartet, Trapezoid, in 1975. He has worked primarily as a soloist since 1979. His dulcimers have been exhibited at the Smithsonian Institution and the National Folk Festival and featured in Fine Woodworking magazine. Rizzetta writes original music for the hammered dulcimer and his many recordings feature his innovative, handmade, experimental dulcimers. He has an expressive and versatile playing style and his performances have included the Kennedy Center and the National Cathedral, as well as national TV and radio appearances on A Prairie Home Companion and Mountain Stage. Rizzetta also started the dulcimer program at the Augusta Heritage Center and has taught there for 24 years.

what to buy: Bucks and Does ♪♪♪♪ (Rizzetta Music, 1982, prod. Sam Rizzetta) is Rizzetta's first solo recording and contains a wonderful collection of mostly hammered and fretted dulcimer solos ranging from "Fanny Poer," a Turlough O'Carolan waltz, to "Paul's New Dulcimer," an original Rizzetta tune written while he was stringing a new dulcimer for Paul Van Arsdale. There is excellent guitar and fiddle accompaniment on several tracks (played by Blackie Cool, Michael Kline, and Gerry Milnes) as well as a dulcimer duet with Rizzetta's wife, Carrie, on "Sweet Hour of Prayer/Angels We Have Heard on High." In the Garden ♪♪♪½ (Rizzetta Music, 1992, prod. Carrie Rizzetta, Sam Rizzetta) is a recording of 18 favorite hymns arranged as instrumentals for hammered dulcimer. The stunning range of his versatile "Rizzetta Extended-Range Dulcimer" is apparent throughout, and he is joined by Tabby Finch (accordion, pipe organ) and Seth Austen (guitar) on several cuts, adding some autoharp accompaniment on "In the Sweet Bye and Bye" and "Shall We Gather at the River." All of Rizzetta's recordings are available from Rizzetta Music, P.O. Box 510, Inwood, West Virginia 25428.

the rest:
Seven Valleys ♪♪♪ (Flying Fish, 1988)
Christmas in the Air ♪♪♪ (Rizzetta Music, 1991)
When You and I Were Young ♪♪♪ (Rizzetta Music, 1992)
Ocean's Edge ♪♪♪ (Rizzetta Music, 1993)
Flowing Waters ♪♪♪ (Rizzetta Music, 1993)

worth searching for: Trapezoid ♪♪♪ (Rizzetta Music, 1975) is currently out of print, but keep watch for a re-release in 1998 on CD. Three Forks of Cheat (Rounder, 1979/1988), the second Trapezoid recording to which Rizzetta contributed, is available on cassette tape. Together at Last ♪♪♪ (Flying Clouds Music, 1981, prod. Drew McDaniel) was a collaboration with Alan Freeman (fretted dulcimer) but is now out of print.

influences:
◀◀ Chet Parker, Russell Fluharty, Worley Gardner, Blackie Cool ▶▶ Bob Shank, Steve Schneider, Walt Michael, Madeline MacNeil

Heidi Cerrigione

John Roberts & Tony Barrand

Formed 1968, in Ithaca, NY.

John Roberts, voice, guitar, banjo, concertina; Tony Barrand, voice, concertina, drums, bones.

These two singing Englishmen are among the primary exponents of traditional English folksong living in the United States. They came to the United States during the 1960s and met as graduate students at Cornell University in 1968. They soon discovered their common interests in folk music and social history and began to perform together in 1969. The folk-music community in the States was glad to have such skilled performers of a predominantly English repertoire on American soil, and they have been in great demand ever since. John Roberts and Tony Barrand are known for beautiful two-part harmony singing, both a capella and accompanied. Both play the concertina, and Roberts is also known for guitar and banjo picking. In their concerts and on recordings, they tend to arrange their material thematically in order to emphasize the stories behind the songs: the history as well as the folklore of the English people. In addition to their work as a duo, Roberts and Barrand have other interests. They have long been part of the quartet Nowell Sing We Clear, presenters of a Christmas pageant featuring song, music, dancing, and dramatic interludes. Barrand is a well-known Morris and clog dancer and the author of an acclaimed book on the subject, Six Fools and a Dancer, and teaches folklore and aesthetics at Boston University. Roberts has other musical interests, including continental European music, and also works as a music engraver.

what to buy: A Present from the Gentlemen ♪♪♪♪½ (Golden Hind, 1992, prod. John Roberts, Tony Barrand) is subtitled "A Pandora's Box of English Folk Songs." It is their first collection of songs in quite some time that is not organized around a specific theme. As such, it leaves them complete freedom to choose their favorites. And, since it clocks in at more than an hour in length, it is able to reflect the scope and variety of their extensive repertoire of folk songs. It presents older, traditional ballads like "The Outlandish Knight" and "Robin Hood and the Bishop of Hereford." It also features new additions to the tradition like Rudyard Kipling's "A Smuggler's Song," which comes to the gentlemen by way of the late Peter Bellamy, and Adam MacNaughton's "Our Hamlet" in its Anglicized form, which was thoughtfully prepared for non-Scots by Martin Carthy. In between, there are traditional songs and ballads like "The Painful Plow," "The Three Butchers," and "Jackie Munro," as well as music-hall numbers like "Sam Hall." The accompaniments are tasteful and quite simple; Roberts plays English and Anglo-German concertina and banjo and Barrand adds bones and side-drum. The real power of their duo arrangements, though, is in their use of vocal harmonies. With only two voices, both the melody and the harmony are distinguishable as separate vocal lines, which makes for more interesting listening than would more lush three- or four-part harmonies. Their two quite different voices, one sweet and clear, the other more resonant, complement each other perfectly in harmony.

what to buy next: A classic LP, Dark Ships in the Forest ♪♪♪♪♪ (Folk-Legacy 1977, prod. Sandy and Caroline Paton) was released on CD in 1997. The theme of this album is "Ballads of the Supernatural," and most of its songs deal with ghosts, spirits, sirens, and other magical characters. Their rendition of A.L. Lloyd's setting of "The Two Magicians" is particularly lovely and has been quite influential. On Dark Ships, Roberts and Barrand are joined by Steve Woodruff and Fred Breunig, their partners in Nowell Sing We Clear. The same line-up of Nowell Sing We Clear produced three albums of Christmas material, from which a CD, The Best of Nowell Sing We Clear (Front Hall, 1989, prod. John Roberts, Tony Barrand, Bill Spence), was compiled. This disc contains a wealth of traditional Christmas carols, many of them quite unusual, all of them beautiful. Notable is the selection of songs based on the apocryphal gospels, including "The Cherry Tree Carol," "The Bitter Withy," and "King Herod and the Cock." Andy Breunig replaced Steve Woodruff in 1988, and the new quartet recorded Nowell Sing We Clear Volume IV ♪♪♪½ (Front Hall, 1988, prod. John Roberts, Tony Barrand), which features both new material and different versions of some of the same carols as their previous CD. The latest CD from Nowell Sing We Clear, Hail Smiling Morn! ♪♪♪♪ (Golden Hind, 1995, prod. John Roberts, Tony Barrand), features still more uncommon Christmas songs; as before, there are some new versions of the most popular carols that they have recorded before ("The Holly and the Ivy," "While Shepherds Watched Their Flocks," and "The Cutty Wren") as well as some brand-new material. Their rendition of the Copper Family's "Shepherds Arise" is particularly nice.

worth searching for: Roberts and Barrand have four albums that may be found in used LP bins, several of which are still in print on cassette. All of them are high-quality recordings of thoughtfully arranged and beautifully performed English folk songs. They include two potpourri albums, Spencer the Rover Is Alive and Well ♪♪♪ (Swallowtail, 1971) and Mellow with Ale from the Horn ♪♪♪ (Front Hall, 1975, prod. John Roberts, Tony Barrand, Bill Spence); a sea-shanty album, Across the Western Ocean ♪♪♪½ (Swallowtail 1973); and a live album, Eat Bertha's Mussels ♪♪♪ (Front Hall, 1982, prod. John Roberts, Tony Barrand). Nowell Sing We Clear also have several cassette albums available.

influences:

◀◀ A.L. Lloyd, Peter Bellamy, Copper Family, Watersons

▶▶ Voice Squad, Robin & Barry Dransfield

Steve Winick

Kathryn Roberts

See: Kate Rusby

Kim Robertson

Born in WI.

To many, the first name of Celtic harp is Kim Robertson. Her sensuous harp arrangements have become a hallmark of the folk harp community, the tunes she plays magically woven into a tapestry of ethereal threads. Her touch on the strings is firm, yet delicate, her expression evocative, and her arrangements perfectly suited for the harp. Robertson plays a wide variety of styles, from Celtic tunes to original works, from American folk favorites to new age sounds. One of her greatest skills is as an improviser, where she soars to the height of her expression. Due to her great love of her instrument, Robertson spends much of her time running harp workshops, both in the United States and abroad. She has written several books of music and published two instructional videos as well.

Robertson began playing the harp her senior year in high school, learning the pedal harp. She enjoyed the instrument, but had no desire to join a symphony, so did not pursue it as a career. Instead, she entered college as a piano major. Her piano background included jazz improvisation, a skill which she translated beautifully to the harp. This has helped her enormously when working with the Celtic harp, which she discovered during the mid-'70s while attending a harp retreat. She soon fell in love with the instrument, exploring its many voices and experimenting with new possibilities in sounds and techniques. The result was her own unique sound, capturing the spirit of the harp itself, and carrying it to the listener in music. Some of her more recent work has also included her unique vocals.

what to buy: Displaying her talent for evocative arrangements of traditional tunes, Robertson plays an array of delightful works on Wind Shadows II ♪♪♪♪½ (Invincible, 1987, prod. Liv Khalsa). Her arrangements of "Arise and Get Dressed," "Black Nag," "Star of County Down," and "Bridget Cruise" display her work at its very best. This Celtic recording will please traditional music fans with its selection. Celtic Christmas II ♪♪♪♪½ (Invincible, 1990, prod. Liv Khalsa) is among the best Christmas albums around. A broad collection of well-known and lesser-known carols, this recording combines the delicate strains of Robertson's harping with the haunting voice of cello, played by Virginia Kron. Special selections include a delightful Spanish carol, "A la Nanita Nana," the American folk song "As Joseph Was a Walking," and a wonderful 13th-century French "Pastourelle."

what to buy next: On Treasures of the Celtic Harp ♪♪♪♪ (Dargason Music, 1995, prod. Joemy Wilson, Scott Fraser), Robertson returns to arranging traditional material, after a period of largely original work. Such gems as "Glenlivet" and "The Water Is Wide" sparkle on this fresh recording, along with four of her own compositions. Combining haunting flute by Bettine Clemen and an occasional cello or percussion accompaniment, Love Song to a Planet ♪♪♪½ (Invincible, 1994, prod. Bettine Clemen, Kim Robertson) is an uplifting collection of traditional tunes and new material, all expressing the love and joy the musicians have for this Earth. A moving rendition of the "New World" symphony theme launches this album, followed by several choice Robertson originals. There are also stirring arrangements of "Mist-Covered Mountains," "The Dark Island," and "Amazing Grace." Joy! Joy! Joy! ♪♪♪½ (Invincible, 1989, prod. Liv Khalsa), another Christmas recording, consists of remarkable arrangements of familiar carols. Sometimes bordering on jazz, as in the stirring rendition of "Joy to the World," sometimes soft and romantic, as in the gentle "Jesus Lullaby," Robertson and flautist Steve Kujala paint a highly evocative Christmas picture.

what to avoid: If you are looking for active-listening music, avoid all of the Crimson Collection series: Crimson Collection Volumes I and II ♪ (Invincible, 1991, prod. Liv Khalsa), Crimson Collection Volumes IV and V ♪ (Invincible, 1991, prod. Liv Khalsa), and Crimson Collection Volumes VI and VII ♪ (Invincible, 1991, prod. Liv Khalsa). These recordings each feature two half-hour-long chants, featuring Liv Khalsa's voice and Robertson's harp. Although the original themes on each recording are strong, they are very repetitive, meant to be used as a background for deep meditation or prayer, and promoted for their healing powers. Although excellent for their intended purpose, they will not excite a listener looking for more than background sound.

the rest:

Wind Shadows ♪♪♪ (Invincible, 1983)
Water Spirit ♪♪♪½ (Invincible, 1987)
Moonrise ♪♪ (Invincible, 1987)
Celtic Christmas ♪♪♪½ (Invincible, 1987)
Wild Iris ♪♪ (Invincible, 1989)
Angels in Disguise ♪♪½ (Invincible, 1990)
Gratitude ♪♪♪ (Invincible, 1990)
Tender Shepherd ♪♪♪½ (Gourd Music, 1992) Wood, Fire, and Gold ♪♪♪ (Dargason Music, 1996)

influences:

◀◀ Virginia Kron, Singh Kaur

▶▶ Knodel & Valencia, Sunita Staneslow

Jo Hughey Morrison

Lonnie Robertson

Born January 8, 1908, in Longrun, MO. Died February 19, 1981, Theodosia, MO.

Lonnie Robertson is one of the great figures in twentieth-century Ozark fiddling. He grew up near the Missouri-Arkansas border absorbing the local musical style from his father and from friends and neighbors. At age 15, he moved to the city of Springfield, Missouri, where he soon after began a career as a radio performer. During the '30s and early '40s, Robertson was the featured fiddler on a number of stations in the Midwest. During the early 1940s he and his wife Thelma started the Down Home Folks Show, featuring a mix of songs and fiddle music. The show developed a large and loyal following throughout Missouri and is fondly remembered to this day. Although changing styles in country music signaled the end of Robertson's radio career during the mid-1950s, he continued to perform and recorded several LPs of fiddle music on his own Caney Mountain label. During the 1960s and '70s, he became a favorite at square dances, jam sessions, and fiddle contests, where he was rightly viewed as an elder statesman of Missouri music. Robertson continued performing until his death in 1981.

what's available: Lonnie's Breakdown! ♫♫♫♫ (Rounder, 1996, prod. Gordon McCann, Mark Wilson) is the only CD of Robertson's work currently available. Drawn from his albums and from home recordings he made on a reel-to-reel tape deck, this CD focuses on his playing of the distinctive Missouri fiddle repertoire, both traditional tunes and his own compositions. Missouri fiddling is notey, complex, and very fast, and Robertson handles it with aplomb. The sound varies from the acceptable to the very good (these are home recordings we're talking about), and the material is well chosen and supported with detailed liner notes.

worth searching for: Robertson's old recordings on the Caney Mountain label are long out of print and probably impossible to find outside of Missouri (pretty hard to find within Missouri as well). Recordings by many of such Robertson contemporaries as Bob Walters, Casey Jones, Lyman Enloe, and Cyril Stinett—excellent fiddlers all—are available from the Missouri State Old Time Fiddle Association (MSOTFA). Based in Columbia, Missouri, MSOTFA is a wonderful non-profit organization dedicated to preserving and promoting the traditional fiddle music of Missouri.

influences:

⏮ Kessinger Brothers, Skillet Lickers

⏭ Charlie Walden, Art Galbraith

Tony Ziselberger

editor's choice
20 old time albums

Jody Stecher & Kate Brislin, Heart Songs: The Old Time Country Songs of Utah Phillips (Rounder)

Bruce Molsky & Big Hoedown, Bruce Molsky & Big Hoedown (Rounder)

Rhythm Rats, I Believe I'll Go Back Home (Marimac)

New Lost City Ramblers, There Ain't No Way Out (Smithsonian-Folkways)

Ann & Phil Case, The Springtime of Life (Dry Run)

Tommy Jarrell, Sail Away Ladies (County)

Camp Creek Boys, Camp Creek Boys (County)

Dirk Powell, If I Go Ten Thousand Miles (Rounder)

Red Clay Ramblers, Hard Times (Flying Fish)

Double Decker String Band, Chasing Rainbows (Marimac)

Various Artists, Young Fogies, Vol. 2 (Rounder)

Dan Gellert, Forked Deer (Marimac)

Highwoods String Band, Feed Your Babies Onions (Rounder)

Wade & Julia Mainer, In the Land of Melody (June Appal)

Hotmud Family, Meat and Potatoes and Stuff Like That (Flying Fish)

Freight Hoppers, Where'd You Come From, Where'd You Go? (Rounder)

J.P. & Annadeene Fraley, Maysville (Rounder)

Cliff Perry & Laurel Bliss, Old Pal (Telegraph)

Norman & Nancy Blake, Just Gimme Something I'm Used To (Shanachie)

Ginny Hawker & Kay Justice, Come All Ye Tender Hearted (June Appal)

Paul Robeson

Born April 9, 1898 in Princeton, NJ. Died January 23, 1976 in Philadelphia, PA.

Long before Jackie Robinson and Martin Luther King Jr., Paul Robeson struggled against racism and political injustice. Best remembered for his show-stopping rendition of Jerome Kern and Oscar Hammerstein II's "Ol' Man River" in the Broadway and film production of Showboat, and his portrayal of the title character in the Broadway production of the Shakespeare play Othello, Robeson was as effective acting in a play or film, including Emperor Jones in 1933 and King Solomon's Mines in 1937, as he was on a concert stage singing songs of freedom. The deep-voiced son of a Presbyterian minister and a school teacher, Robeson initially attracted attention as an athlete. At Rutgers University he became the second black All-American football player. He was the third black scholar to attend Columbia Law School and graduated in 1923. Robeson's thespian interests were sparked while he was a law student. When an amateur show in which he had a major role, Simon the Cyrenian, moved to New York's Lafayette Theater in 1921, he made his professional debut as an actor. After receiving his law degree three years later, he spent the summer performing at the Provincetown Playhouse on Cape Cod. His acting in a summer production of Eugene O'Neill's play All God's Chillun Got Wings in 1924 was so natural that he was chosen to star in a New York production of the show. He continued to make his presence felt in stage productions of Black Boy in 1926, Porgy and Othello in 1928, and in 11 films, including the stellar versions of Showboat in 1933 and Emperor Jones in 1936. Robeson presented his first vocal recital of Afro-American spirituals and folk songs in 1925. He toured for the next two years with piano player Larry Brown and performed influential concerts in the United States, Europe, and England. In 1926 he recorded the first of more than 300 songs that would range from operatic arias to folk and pop tunes. His most popular album, Ballads for Americans was released in 1939. An avowed "anti-fascist," Robeson was profoundly affected by trips to the Soviet Union in 1934, where he was moved by the lack of racism he experienced, and to Spain in 1937, where he performed for the loyalist troops fighting Franco and Hitler. Although his political beliefs created a stir among the conservative forces in his native country, he encountered serious problems after announcing, at the World Peace Conference in Paris, that black Americans would not go to war in support of an oppressive government. The backlash was unparalleled. At a concert in Peekskill, New York in 1949, hundreds were injured by rocks and stones hurled by anti-communist reactionaries. The following year, the State Department revoked his passport and he was unable to travel abroad. The blacklist had a major effect on Robeson's career. One of the top concert artists in the world during the 1940s, his income decreased significantly in the early 1950s after many of his concerts were canceled and his records removed from store shelves. He continued to perform whenever possible. In the late-1950s, when his passport was reinstated, he moved to London after performing a memorable farewell concert at Carnegie Hall in New York. After poor health caused him to retire and return to the United States in 1963, he lived the remainder of his life in seclusion. His autobiography, Here I Stand, was published in 1958. A drive to persuade the U.S. Postal Service to issue a stamp in celebration of Robeson's 100th birthday was unsuccessful in 1997.

what to buy: Robeson performed four concerts at Peace Arch Park, near Blaine, Washington, during the peak of the blacklist. Unable to leave the United States, he performed on a flat-bed truck that was driven as close as possible to the U.S.-Canadian border. The long-overdue CD release of the first two concerts, The Peace Arch Concerts ♪♪♪♪♪ (Folk Era, 1997, prod. Ian Shaw), recorded in May 1952 and August 1953, documents the power of his performances. With his thundering, opera-like vocals set to piano accompaniment, Robeson offers a memorable sampling of his vast repertoire that spans Afro-American and Gaelic folk and gospel songs, including "No More Auction Block," "Go Down Moses," and "Jacob's Ladder," classical pieces ("Theme from Beethoven's Ninth"), and Chinese marching songs ("Chin Chin"). The most prized tunes on the album are Robeson's distinctive interpretations of his most influential tunes—"Ol' Man River" and "Joe Hill." A lengthy 12 1/2-minute speech by Robeson concludes the album, which stands as one of the strongest political documents of the twentieth century.

what to buy next: Recorded at Robeson's historic "Farewell" concert at Carnegie Hall on May 9, 1958, The Essential Paul Robeson ♪♪♪♪ (Vanguard, 1987, prod. Maynard Solomon) captures the eclectic nature of Robeson's concerts. Although he shows his folk roots with "My Curly-headed Baby," "Every Time I Feel the Spirit," and "Didn't My Lord Deliver Daniel," he is equally potent with his interpretation of classical music pieces, including Dvorak's "Going Home," Mussorgsky's "Boris Godonuv" and "The Orphan," Bach's "Christ Lag in Todesbanden," and Franz Schubert's "Lullaby." In addition to emotional versions of "Joe Hill" and "Ol' Man River," the album features a powerful monologue from Othello.

the rest:

The Legendary Moscow Concert ♪♪♪ (Fenix Entertainment, 1949)
Songs of My People ♪♪♪ (RCA, 1972)

The Golden Classics, Volume III ♪♪♪ (Collectibles, 1977)
Green Pastures ♪♪♪ (Living Era, 1987/ASV Living Era, 1992)
The Glorious Voice of Paul Robeson ♪♪♪ (EMI/1990)
Ol' Man River ♪♪♪ (Remember, 1990)
Ballad for Americans ♪♪♪ (Vanguard, 1990)
The Power and the Glory ♪♪♪ (Sony, 1991)
A Lonesome Road ♪♪♪ (ASV Living Era, 1992)
Collectors ♪♪♪ (Monitor, 1993)
Great Voices of the Century–Paul Robeson, Volume II ♪♪♪ (Memoir Classics, 1994)
Ol' Man River ♪♪♪ (Music of the World, 1995)
Paul Robeson, Volume II ♪♪♪ (Memoir Classics, 1995)
21 Songs & Spirituals ♪♪♪ (Memoir Classics, 1996)
Great ♪♪♪ (Goldies, 1996)
The Political Years ♪♪♪ (Collector's Edition, 1996)
Songs for Free Men ♪♪♪ (Pavilion, 1997)
The Man and His Beliefs ♪♪♪ (Legacy, 1997) worth searching for: A Gil Noble–produced documentary film, The Tallest Tree in the Forest (Phoenix Films, 1977), includes rare concert footage and comments and recollections about Robeson from friends and family.

influences:

◀◀ Bert Williams, J.P. Christy, James Bland

▶▶ Leadbelly, Marian Anderson, Josh White

Craig Harris

Joseph "Butch" Robins

Born 1949, in Russell County, VA.

Like many of his craft, Butch Robins likes to say that he became a musician because it was better than having to get a job. Make no mistake, though, he takes his chosen profession seriously and has spent the last 30 years as, in his own words, "a consummate student of music." The central figure in his drive to meld his person and his music into one unified whole was the late Bill Monroe, the Father of Bluegrass, in whose band, the Blue Grass Boys, Robins played banjo briefly in 1967 and then for an extended period from 1977 to 1981. In Monroe he found a mentor whose music and persona were literally inseparable—Monroe lived and found expression through his music, and while many have followed his path, none have performed Monroe's music quite like he did. As years went by and Monroe's music picked up the label "bluegrass," there was a tendency by some to standardize it, making it almost formulaic, forgetting the fact that throughout his entire career Monroe was an innovator and experimenter. During his time in Monroe's band during the late '70s and early '80s, Robins took the lessons learned from Monroe and released a number of innovative and distinctive albums on the Rounder label. He also appears on a number of projects released under the name the Blue Grass Band. After several years as a sought-after session musician, he returned to the studio in 1995 for his CD release Grounded–Centered–Focused, on which he was able to feature Monroe, who was still a vital and powerful musician at the time, prior to his passing in September 1996. Although well-versed in bluegrass, Robins continues to work hard at exploring new territory and continues to prove that he is, indeed, a consummate musician.

what's available: On Grounded-Centered-Focused ♪♪♪♪ (Hay Holler, 1995, prod. Butch Robins, Kerry Hay), Robins surrounds himself with an all-star lineup of bluegrass vocal and instrumental talent, including Monroe (in one of his final appearances on a record), Mike Compton, Dudley Connell, Sammy Shelor, David Grier, and many others. Playing with drive and intensity in both traditional and eclectic modes, Robins demonstrates why he is one of the most versatile banjo pickers on the scene today. The last half of the album is an affectionate tribute to his mentor, mandolinist Monroe, who shows that even in his 80s, he can still play. Dudley Connell's vocal on "Kentucky Waltz" makes it one of the best versions available of that oft-recorded Monroe classic.

worth searching for: The title of The Fifth Child ♪♪♪♪ (Rounder, 1980, prod. Butch Robins) is drawn from Monroe's description of the five-string banjo (in an interview with the late Ralph Rinzler) as "the Fifth Child that was born in Bluegrass," following the mandolin, guitar, fiddle, and bass. Featuring standards like "Jerusalem Ridge," "Cumberland Gap," and "Cripple Creek," the album is notable as well for the vocals of Alan O'Bryant (currently of Nashville Bluegrass Band) and Bobby Osborne (of the legendary Osborne Brothers), the mandolin of Sam Bush, and the fiddle of Blaine Sprouse. Also worth combing the LP bins for is Fragments of My Imagination ♪♪♪½ (Rounder, 1978, prod. Butch Robins), which features a mixture of standards ("Earl's Breakdown") as well as more eclectic and experimental pieces ("Twelve O'Clock, eh Sonny," "On the Edge"). Notable presences here are three later members of New Grass Revival, Sam Bush (again), Béla Fleck, and John Cowan.

influences:

◀◀ Bill Monroe, Earl Scruggs, Sonny Osborne

▶▶ Alan O'Bryant, New Grass Revival, Alison Brown, Tony Trischka

John Lupton

Tom Robinson /Tom Robinson Band /Sector 27

Tom Robinson born June 1, 1950, in Cambridge, England. Tom Robinson Band formed 1977, in London, England. Disbanded 1979. Sector 27 formed 1979, in London, England. Disbanded 1980.

Tom Robinson Band: Tom Robinson, bass, vocals; Danny Kustow, guitar, vocals; Mark Ambler, keyboards (1977–79); Brian "Dolphin" Taylor, drums (1977–79); Ian Parker, keyboards (1979); Preston Heyman, drums (1979). Sector 27: Tom Robinson, vocals, guitar; Jo Burt, bass; Stevie B., guitar; Derek Quinton, drums.

Tom Robinson is a cult artist who likes it that way. He hosts parties and provides special annual CDs to members of his Castaway Club; he has a detailed Web site and participates in online discussions with listeners. Once known mainly as the guy who was "Glad to Be Gay," he's stubbornly refused to be marginalized or pigeonholed. His work has been described as "anti-folk," but few artists are as immersed in the grassroots.

Robinson's music features a sensitivity to melody that many of his '70s peers couldn't match. His songs hold up over 20 years. He's a strong guitarist and an even stronger singer with a persuasive voice. Like Richard Thompson, he can romanticize the lives of outcasts and underlings without softening the impact of their stories.

The Tom Robinson Band had a couple of hits in the late 1970s: "2-4-6-8 Motorway" and "Glad to Be Gay." The band briefly metamorphosed into Sector 27 (whose album is now out of print) before Robinson went out on his own. Though his early solo work was uneven, he's developed into a masterful musician. To critics of his changes in lifestyle (including his marriage to a woman), he sings the following (at the end of [Having It Both Ways]): "Well if gay liberation means freedom for all/a label is no liberation at all/I'm here and I'm queer and I do what I do/I'm not gonna wear a straitjacket for you."

what to buy: Having It Both Ways ♪♪♪♪½ (Cooking Vinyl, 1996, prod. Al Scott) drags the listener through the gutter—but, as Oscar Wilde pointed out, from there one can still look at the stars. "Rum Thunderbird" sounds like a chantey by the Pogues. "Fool to Myself" is a masterpiece, the confession of a man who's hit bottom and vows to change. "Hot Dog" is a homoerotic rave-up with gorgeous rockabilly guitar by Robinson. "Castaway," the final track, is a modern-day folk ballad with a bisexual theme.

what to buy next: The live album Living in a Boom Time ♪♪♪♪ (Cooking Vinyl, 1992) begins with an anti-folk rant delivered in classic arran-sweater style. Highlights are the moving "Blood Brother" and the hilarious, biting "Yuppie Scum."

the rest:

Love over Rage ♪♪♪ (Rhythm Safari, 1994)
(With Tom Robinson Band) Power in the Darkness ♪♪♪♪ (Harvest, 1978/Razor & Tie, 1993) (With Tom Robinson Band) TRB Two ♪♪♪ (Harvest, 1979/Razor & Tie, 1993)

influences:

◀◀ Richard Thompson, Shane McGowan, Warren Zevon

▶▶ Pansy Division, Billy Bragg, Angie Aparo

Pamela Murray Winters

Carson Robison

Born August 4, 1890, in Oswego, KS. Died March 24, 1957, in Pleasant Valley, NY.

Carson Robison was a vaudeville performer who came to country music through his job as Vernon Dalhart's whistler. Nicknamed the "Kansas Jaybird" because of that talent, Robison eventually became a popular performer in his own right, particularly overseas. He wrote many popular tunes, including "Blue Ridge Mountain Blues," "Carry Me Back to the Lone Prairie," and "Barnacle Bill the Sailor." Robison was the first country singer to tour Great Britain and, next to Jimmie Rodgers, was the most popular early country singer in Great Britain. In the Unites States he had some of his biggest successes during World War II with his recordings of "1942 Turkey in the Straw" and "Hitler's Last Letter to Hirohito." He also had the first version of the popular 1948 novelty "Life Gets Tee-Jus Don't It," later recorded by Tex Williams. His backing groups were known as the Pioneers, the Buckaroos, and the Pleasant Valley Boys.

what's available: Home, Sweet Home on the Prairie ♪♪♪ (Living Era, 1996, comp. prod. Peter Dempsey), which contains 25 recordings made between 1930–36, includes three of Robison's recordings with Dalhart and some tracks he cut in London during his first European tour. Modern notions of cowboy music have been shaped so completely by later Hollywood films that these recordings, made with an East Coast mentality, sound quite surprising.

influences:

◀◀ Vernon Dalhart, Wendell Hall

▶▶ Sons of the Pioneers, Gene Autry

Brian Mansfield

The Roches

Formed December 1976, in Greenwich Village, NY.

Maggie Roche, guitar, keyboards, vocals; Terre Roche, guitar, vocals; Suzzy Roche, guitar, vocals.

Graduates of the Greenwich Village folk scene, Maggie, Terre, and Suzzy Roche stood out like crewcuts at a Grateful Dead concert when they released their self-titled debut in 1979: folk was dead, punk was threatening, and the idea of three sisters harmonizing around acoustic guitars was hardly hip. Yet, their songwriting was filled with quirky humor, and their voices purposely didn't weave so much as collide, flirting with atonalism and eschewing traditional rules of harmony singing. Alternately pretty ("The Married Men"), powerful ("The Hallelujah Chorus"), and punishing ("Bobby's Song"), their unison sound was so daring and distinctive that the trio spent the better part of a decade harnessing its force and fighting with record companies over the best direction to follow. Such recent albums as A Dove and Can We Go Home Now? show they've finally won both battles.

what to buy: The Roches ♪♪♪♪ (Warner Bros., 1979, prod. Robert Fripp) is a mesmerizing acoustic showcase framed around such striking compositions as "Hammond Song," "Married Men," and the giddy "Mr. Sellack." The immediacy and intimacy of Fripp's "audio verite" production captures every nuance from breathing sounds to the squeaks of sliding fingers on the frets. The sisters' relentless quest to weave pop elements and band arrangements around their harmonies is finally fulfilled on A Dove ♪♪♪♪ (MCA, 1992, prod. Stewart Lerman). Keep on Doing ♪♪♪♪½ (Warner Bros., 1982, prod. Robert Fripp) includes their stunning a cappella version of "The Hallelujah Chorus" and the strange but endearing "The Largest Elizabeth in the World."

what to buy next: Nurds ♪♪♪ (Warner Bros., 1980, prod. Roy Halee) is a brave attempt to shoehorn them into the new-wave movement with such oddities as "Bobby's Girl," "The Boat Family," and the hysterically self-deprecating "Death of Suzzy Roche."

what to avoid: No Trespassing woof! (Rhino, 1986, prod. Joe Terry, Andy Bloch, Roches) is a lifeless four-song EP recorded after the trio split from Warner Bros.

the rest:
Another World ♪♪♪½ (Warner Bros., 1985)
Speak ♪♪♪ (MCA, 1989)
We Three Kings ♪♪♪ (Rykodisc, 1990)
Will You Be My Friend ♪♪♪½ (Baby Boom, 1994)
Can We Go Home Now ♪♪♪ (Rykodisc, 1995)

worth searching for: Seductive Reasoning ♪♪ (Columbia, 1975, prod. Paul Simon, Paul Samwell-Smith) is a pre-Suzzy album, co-produced by Simon after Maggie and Terre backed him on There Goes Rhymin' Simon.

solo outings:
Suzzy Roche:
Holy Smokes ♪♪♪ (Red House, 1997)

influences:
- Madrigal singing, Simon & Garfunkel, Kate & Anna McGarrigle
- Murmurs, Story

David Okamoto

Jerry Rockwell

Born April 9, 1950, in New York, NY.

Jerry Rockwell began playing the lap dulcimer while in college in Plattsburgh, New York in 1971, after cutting his musical teeth on the jazz guitar stylings of Wes Montgomery, Kenny Burrell, Johnny Smith, Barney Kessel, George Van Eps, and Howard Roberts. Finding the cocktail lounge atmosphere of the jazz scene to be stifling, he starting searching for a dulcimer after hearing Richard Fariña in order to "satisfy a developing urge to throw himself into something both primitive and old." At about the same time, he began to develop an equally powerful interest in English and Celtic folk music. He also began building dulcimers. Over the years he has developed a reputation as both a gifted musician and a gifted luthier. During the late '70s, he formed a musical partnership with Mary Ann Samuels, cutting two traditional dulcimer albums for the Traditional label and touring England, the United States, and Ireland. In 1983 he helped to form Kellswater, a dulcimer-oriented Celtic band with regional popularity in the Columbus, Ohio, area. In 1986 he teamed with hammered dulcimer player Bob Bellamy to form a duo that blended Rockwell's Celtic stylings with Bellamy's more bluegrass-oriented material. Rockwell has pursued a solo career during the '90s, combining performing and recording with conducting workshops, teaching, and publishing popular instructional books. His reputation as a luthier has flourished with the introduction of his popular baritone dulcimer design, which is in great demand.

what to buy: The Blackbird and the Beggarman ♪♪♪½ (Wizmak Productions, 1994, prod. Pete Sutherland) features Rockwell's

judy roderick

dulcimer on nearly two dozen Celtic instrumentals and features fine backup by fiddler/producer Pete Sutherland and mandolinist Niles Hokkanen. Rockwell's choice of Sutherland as his producer was inspired, and their collaboration serves to elevate this collection well above the ordinary. Hokkanen, R.P. Hale, Ron Ewing, and Ken Lovelett also make substantial contributions. Jointly, they make this a somewhat eclectic, but never boring, recording.

what to buy next: Favorite American Folktunes ♪♪♪ (J.C. Rockwell Music, 1991, prod. Jerry Rockwell) (cassette only) is a straightforward treatment of 21 traditional tunes of the American frontier. Rockwell's musical sensibilities make this an outstanding introduction both to the dulcimer and to its rich heritage as a parlor instrument in many a nineteenth-century pioneer home. It's available from J.C. Rockwell Music, P.O. Box 79, Guysville, Ohio 45735-3011.

the rest:

Mountain Dulcimer and Psaltery Instrumentals ♪♪♪ (Tradition, 1979) (cassette only) Dulcimer Dreams ♪♪½ (Tradition, 1983) (cassette only) Little Maggie ♪♪½ (J.C. Rockwell Music, 1987) (cassette only)
Into the Fever Rain ♪♪½ (Mandocrucian Productions, 1990) (cassette only) Improvisations for Dulcimer, Guitar, and Other String Beings ♪♪♪ (J.C. Rockwell Music, 1991) (cassette only) Perfect Harmony ♪♪½ (Mountain Sounds, 1991) (cassette only) worth searching for: Rockwell appears on three of Bob Bellamy's albums, American Architecture ♪♪½ (Windridge Recordings, 1992, prod. Rob Griffin, Bob Bellamy), As Silent Stars Go By ♪♪½ (Windridge Recordings, 1993, prod. Rob Griffin, Bob Bellamy), and Rise over Run ♪♪♪ (Windridge Recordings, 1996, prod. Bob Bellamy).

influences:

◀◀ Richard Fariña, Steeleye Span
▶▶ Mark Nelson, Hollis Landrum

Neal Walters

Judy Roderick

Born December, 1942, in Wyandott, MI. Died January, 1992.

Judy Roderick's first musical influence was the black gospel radio station WJLB in Detroit and her sister's Hank Williams records. She started singing professionally while a student at the University of Colorado. In common with many artists who grew up during the folk boom of the '50s and '60s, much of her initial apprenticeship was experienced performing in coffeehouses. In 1962, when white women still didn't sing the blues, she met Janis Joplin at a coffee house in San Francisco. After Joplin returned to Texas, Roderick left for the Philadelphia Folk Festival; her performance there led her to her first recording contract. Roderick sang in the classical blues idiom and possessed a distinctly individual sound that reflected the influence of singers such as Ma Rainey or Bessie Smith, but she also exhibited the sensitivity of a Billie Holiday. Her 1965 Vanguard album Woman Blue, along with her appearance at the Newport Folk Festival that same year gave promise of a brilliant career. Alas, it was not to be. Woman Blue was a one-shot deal and Roderick died in 1992 without having come close to duplicating its success.

what's available: The re-release of Woman Blue ♪♪♪½ (Vanguard, 1965/1993) will allow a new generation to enjoy a classic folk album of the 1960s. It contains all the tunes on that original release, plus four previously unreleased songs. With great accompaniment by studio stalwarts Dick Weisman, Artie Traum, and Russ Savakus, Roderick does tunes by Bessie Smith and Memphis Minnie, as well as some very original treatments of traditional material. The title tune later became a counter-culture anthem with the now familiar title of "I Know You Rider." Her distinctive version of the Ian and Sylvia tune, "You Were on My Mind," is particularly noteworthy.

influences:

◀◀ Bessie Smith, Memphis Minnie, Ma Rainey ▶▶ Maria Muldaur, Sylvia Tyson

Neal Walters

Jimmie Rodgers

Born James Charles Rodgers, September 8, 1897, in Meridian, MS. Died May 26, 1933.

A childhood spent shuffling back and forth between relatives (and consequently sampling the life of music halls and vaudeville acts) aided Jimmie Rodgers in absorbing the rich music of Mississippi during the early 1900s. After winning a local talent contest at age 12, he was persuaded to pursue a more stable life and worked for more than a decade for the railroad. When diagnosed with tuberculosis in 1924 he ditched the railroad and plunged into his true calling—music. He broke records by selling more than a million copies of a recording that included his legionary "T for Texas." The following years were dotted with such hits as "Blue Yodel," "Way out on the Mountain," and "A Drunkard's Child." His vocal style, a distinct yodel, became the one to imitate, but Rodgers also experimented with eclectic back-up arrangements, tossing in jazz or Hawaiian bands to add a twist. In 1933 he finally lost his battle with TB. Often referred to as the "Father of Country Music" or "America's Blue Yodeler," Rodgers certainly earned his charter induction into the Country Music Hall of Fame in 1961 and into the Rock and Roll Hall of Fame in 1986.

what to buy: The recordings on First Sessions, 1927–1928 ♪♪♪♪♪ (Rounder, 1990, prod. Ralph Peer), along with the Carter Family's first recordings, set the course for recorded country music. Rodgers accompanies himself on guitar for these songs (another musician occasionally adds banjo or ukulele), and the second his keening voice sets to wailing "Blue Yodel" (a.k.a. "T for Texas"), it's obvious something special is going on. This collection contains Rodgers's first three "blue yodels," plus the classic "In the Jailhouse Now."

what to buy next: Rounder has released all of Rodgers's Victor recordings on CD, and America's Blue Yodeler, 1930–1931 ♪♪♪♪ (Rounder, 1991, prod. Ralph Peer) is probably the place to go after Rodgers's historic first recordings. If the pop influence on modern country music strikes you as a betrayal of tradition, just listen to these fully arranged "Jimmie's Mean Mama Blues"—piano, clarinet, tuba, banjo, and cornet, courtesy of Bob Sawyer's Jazz Band. And future jazz legend Louis Armstrong even plays trumpet on "Blue Yodel No. 9." But when the songs are this good—"T.B. Blues" is on this collection, as is "Blue Yodel No. 8" (a.k.a. "Muleskinner Blues")—it doesn't much matter how you play them.

what to avoid: On Jimmie Rodgers ♪♪♪ (RCA, 1991, prod. Ralph Peer) the songs are classic—"Blue Yodel No. 1 (T for Texas)," "Muleskinner Blues"—but, geez, there's only eight of them. Many better collections exist.

the rest:

Country Legacy ♪♪ (Pair, 1989)
Early Years, 1928–1929 ♪♪♪ (Rounder, 1990)
On the Way Up, 1929 ♪♪♪ (Rounder, 1991)
Riding High, 1929 ♪♪♪ (Rounder, 1991)
Down the Old Road, 1931–1932 ♪♪♪♪ (Rounder, 1991)
No Hard Times, 1932 ♪♪♪♪ (Rounder, 1991)
Last Sessions ♪♪♪ (Rounder, 1991)
Train Whistle Blues ♪♪ (ASV Living Era, 1992) American Legends ♪♪♪ (Laserlight, 1996)

influences:

◀◀ Riley Puckett, Tenneva Ramblers

▶▶ Ernest Tubb, Carson Robison, Gene Autry

Randall T. Cook

Aldus Roger

Born February 10, 1916, in Carencro, LA.

Aldus Roger is an accordionist and band leader whose groups set the standard for performance of Cajun music from the late 1950s to the 1970s. His emulated his hero, Lawrence Walker, until his own success finally eclipsed Walker's popularity. Roger was a full-time carpenter, but he was so popular that he played every night. His band, the Lafayette Playboys, served as a proving ground for many important young musicians, including swamp pop singer and historian Johnnie Allan, steel players Phillippe Alleman and Rodney Miller, fiddler Doc Guidry, and Cajun singer Belton Richard. Roger developed a syncopated, energetic style on the accordion, which he played standing and using a shoulder strap (some attribute its creation to him). His bands swung hard through two-steps, with the bass percolating and the steel player coming in on the off-beats. A number of his records feature twin fiddle in a style influenced by Western swing, but at their heart there's always pure Cajun singing and the accordion of Aldus Roger. This quality caused Zachary Richard to spend two hours a day playing along with Roger's recordings.

what to buy: Roger said that his band would often walk into the studio in the afternoon after appearing on a morning TV or radio show and record. Listen to A Cajun Legend ♪♪♪♪♪ (La Louisiana, 1995, prod. Carol Rachou Sr.) and see if you can hear any mistakes. This band is so tight and so on the music that they make it sound easy. Cajun culture is built around a love of dancing and you can tell from the effect of this music why the Lafayette Playboys packed the clubs. This CD compilation brings together two albums of Roger's music The French Music of South Louisiana and King of the French Accordion Plays His Old Hits.

what to buy next: Plays the French Music of South Louisiana ♪♪♪♪♪ (La Louisiana, 1995, prod. Carol Rachou Sr.) was Roger's biggest seller, and although it's folded into the previously mentioned disc, it stands on its own as a classic of the time. On the two-steps the instruments seem to be chasing each other, with Roger's accordion being followed by Phillip Alleman's steel and then Doc Guidry's fiddle.

worth searching for: Marie/Be Careful, You're Breaking My Heart ♪♪♪♪♪ (Swallow, c. 1966, prod. Floyd Soileau) is the only 45 rpm record that Roger cut for Swallow, but it has stayed in print on the power of the song "Marie," which continues to be played by both Cajun and zydeco bands.

aldus roger

influences:

- Lawrence Walker, Sundown Playboys
- Zachary Richard, Mark and Ann Savoy, Paul Daigle, Bruce Daigrepont

Jared Snyder

Gamble Rogers

Born James Gamble Rogers IV in 1937, in Winter Park, FL. Died October 10, 1991, in Flagler Beach, FL.

If you can imagine a performer with the folksy humor and storytelling knack of Will Rogers, the vivid imagination and articulation of William Faulkner, and the ability to sing and play the guitar like Merle Travis, you'll get an idea of what it was like to see the late Gamble Rogers on stage. Son and grandson of world-renowned architects, James Gamble Rogers IV was trained to follow in the family profession, but an early stint with the Serendipity Singers during the folk revival of the 1960s revealed to him that he was uniquely talented in the art of building a story crafted and calculated to reduce his audience to a shambles of laughter. Much as Faulkner concocted an imaginary Mississippi county, populated by the decaying elements of the Old South, Gamble Rogers brought us the absurdities of day-to-day life in fictional Oklawaha County, Florida, and the characters who somehow seemed to make sense of it all—Still Bill, Eulalah Singleterry, Flat Tire (the three-legged Chihuahua), and the Philosopher Laureate of the loading dock at Erindale's Feed & Seed, Agamemnon Jones. While delivering these tales in an oratorical style that was part Southern Baptist preacher brimstone, and part William F. Buckley verbosity, Rogers always seemed to manage to impart obscure bits of knowledge and wisdom, such as the difference between the innocuous king snake and the deadly coral snake. Or the advice he once received from Agamemnon, while working as a door-to-door Bible salesman, after fending off an attacking dog by whacking it on the head with a sample of his "product" (suffering pangs of guilt about it afterwards): "Son, when your work speaks for itself, don't interrupt." Rogers' fame as a humorist and storyteller sometimes overshadowed the fact that he was among the best Travis-style pickers to come along in a long while, and his playing is as worthy of attention as his monologues. He died tragically in 1991, drowned while attempting to rescue a swimmer caught in an undertow.

Aldus Roger (© Jack Vartoogian)

what to buy: Sorry Is as Sorry Does ♪♪♪♪♪ (Flying Fish, 1986, prod. Robin McBride) was recorded live in Woodstock, Illinois, and features several of his best stories, including "The Bible Salesman" and "Flat Tire and the Great Dane," although it's a little lighter on the pickin' than his other recordings.

what to buy next: The Lord Gives Me Grace, the Devil Gives Me Style ♪♪♪♪ (Flying Fish, 1977, prod. Stephen Powers) features more stories, a rendition of John Stewart's "July, You're a Woman," and an tip of the hat (or pick) to Doc Watson, "Deep Gap Salute."

worth searching for: If you can find Gamble Rogers Live: The Warm Way Home ♪♪♪♪ (Mountain Railroad, 1980, prod. Robin McBride) in a second-hand LP bin, snap it up and treat yourself to "The Honeydipper" and "The Passion of Miss Eulalah Singleterry," among others.

influences:

- Merle Travis, Doc Watson, Serendipity Singers
- Steve Gillette & Cindy Mangsen, Loudon Wainwright III, Arlo Guthrie

John Lupton

Garnet Rogers

Born in Hamilton, Ontario, Canada.

A most significant event in the life of Garnet Rogers was the loss of his older brother—legendary Canadian singer-songwriter Stan Rogers—in a 1984 plane crash. Stealing victory from the jaws of defeat, Garnet responded by immediately upgrading his musical career as Stan's accompanist to the level of successful solo artist. With his smooth, dark baritone, Rogers is widely regarded as one of the finer vocalists in the folk venue. And his seven successful albums chronicle his evolution from a first-rate instrumentalist (guitar, fiddle, flute) to a blooming songwriter—with ballads depicting the small victories of everyday heroes. Rogers has been featured on numerous television and radio programs, and has shared the stage with such greats as Mary Chapin Carpenter, Bill Monroe, and Guy Clark. Concert-goers love Rogers for his over-the-top humor and lightning-quick wit.

what to buy: Small Victories ♪♪♪♪♪ (Snow Goose Songs, 1990, prod. Garnet Rogers) blends ancient Celtic beauty with a free-spirited sense of the new world. Although a studio project, it rings with the intensity and authenticity of live performance. The collection also marks Rogers's coming of age as a composer: nine of the 10 pieces are original. Notably, "One Bullet" is a powerful and riveting ballad, while "Stars in Their Crown," "For Herself," and "Small Victory" are significant for their poetic lyrics. Rogers's ability to capture what is real and lasting will likely give this collection a long shelf life next to his brother's many classics: Stan's shadow cannot diminish Garnet's artistic success here. Summer Lightning—Live ♪♪♪♪ (Snow Goose Songs, 1994, prod. Garnet Rogers) showcases numerous definitive performances, including "What's Wrong with This Picture," "A Row of Small Trees," and the electrifying original "Frankie and Johnny." A gifted and experienced fiddler, Rogers shows an instinctive ability to sing to the lyrical accompaniment of violinist Doug Long. The Outside Track ♪♪♪½ (Snow Goose Songs, 1986, prod. Garnet Rogers) is worth the purchase, if for nothing else than the title track, an acoustic gem. James Keelaghan's "Jenny Brice" appears here, well-dressed in Rogers's instrumental excellence, while Bill Caddick's "John o'Dreams" features the artist's resonant baritone very nicely.

garnet rogers

Gamble Rogers (© Robert J. Huffman/Field Mark Publications)

what to buy next: Night Drive ♪♪♪♪ (Snow Goose Songs, 1996, prod. Garnet Rogers) shows an energized Rogers breaking new ground with electric guitar while generally maintaining the integrity of his traditional folk roots. And for icing on the cake, he is backed by outstanding instrumentalists Dan Achen (Junkhouse), David Sereda, and Duke Levine (Mary Chapin Carpenter). Rogers's two songs about his late brother Stan are strong and sensitive: "These Golden Fields" and "Night Drive." The notably irreverent: the Greg Brown tune "Jesus and Elvis" is a clever contrast to Rogers's more sensitive gems, "Phone Booth" and "Golden Fields." The later is ripe with deja vu images of crossing vast prairies: "We are young forever, in these golden fields." More than a vocal collection, this album is about guitars—acoustic guitars, slide guitars, and electric guitars. But don't be surprised if Rogers's next outing is minus the amplification: Life is too short for playing your weaker suit. Rogers's first solo album, Garnet Rogers ♪♪♪ (Snow Goose Songs, 1984, prod. Garnet Rogers), features some imaginative covers, including the works of London (Ontario) folkies Willie P.

Bennett and Doug McArthur, as well as Bob Franke and others. Rogers also tips his hat to the great Scottish singer-guitarist John Martyn with the arrangement "Carrick Fergus." This album shows more than just an occasional streak of brilliance, whetting the appetite for Rogers's later original works. Speaking Softly in the Dark ♪♪♪ (Snow Goose Songs, 1988, prod. Garnet Rogers) showcases Bob Franke's "Hallelujah! (The Great Storm Is Over)" with a voice that only Rogers can provide. Notable covers include "Crucifixion" (Phil Ochs) and "Lament for Henry Chapin" (Sarah Baughan): Rogers has developed a special talent for mourning the lost brethren. Although At a High Window ♪♪♪ (Snow Goose Songs, 1992, prod. Garnet Rogers) is not Rogers's best work, a man of his creativity and fastidious nature will likely never strike out.

influences:

◀◀ Stan Rogers, John Martyn, Willie P. Bennett, Archie Fisher, Bob Franke, Greg Brown

▶▶ Stan Rogers, Mary Chapin Carpenter, Billy Bragg, Ferron, Guy Clark, Margaret Christl, Lee Murdoch

see also: Stan Rogers

Art Wojtowicz

Roy Rogers

Born July 28, 1950, in Redding, CA.

Although originally from the San Francisco Bay Area, Roy Rogers derives his slide guitar sound from Mississippi Delta blues roots, in the tradition of Earl Hooker and Robert Nighthawk. In addition to pursuing a solo career since the 1970s, Rogers also did some road and studio time with John Lee Hooker in the 1980s and produced four highly successful Hooker albums—The Healer, Mr. Lucky, Boom Boom, and Chill Out. Rogers's music has assumed increasing dimensions of rhythm and blues, country, and rock with each successive album, but the frequent covers of Delta and early-Chicago slide masters—Robert Johnson and Elmore James, especially—always serve to reaffirm his deep blues roots.

what to buy: Rogers's ambitious solo debut, Chops Not Chaps ♪♪♪♪ (Blind Pig, 1986, prod. Roy Rogers), mixes four original tunes with covers of classics by Robert Johnson, Elmore James, and Skip James. Travellin' Tracks ♪♪♪½ (Blind Pig, 1992, prod. Norton Buffalo, Roy Rogers), recorded with harpist Norton Buffalo, is a country-blues mix of live duet recordings with more orchestrated studio tracks.

what to buy next: Slide Zone ♪♪♪½ (Liberty, 1994, prod. Roy Rogers) is a highly textured recording that includes appearances by harpist Charlie Musselwhite, Windham Hill pianist Philip Aaburg, and Euro-folk banjoist Béla Fleck. Rhythm and Groove ♪♪♪½ (Pointblank, 1996, prod. Roy Rogers) re-employs Musselwhite and Aaburg and incorporates shades of Latin music.

the rest:

Slidewinder ♪♪♪ (Blind Pig, 1988)
Blues on the Range ♪♪♪ (Blind Pig, 1989)
R&B ♪♪♪ (Blind Pig , 1991)
Slide of Hand ♪♪♪ (Liberty, 1993) worth searching for: A Foot in the Door ♪♪♪♪ (Waterhouse, 1976), recorded with harpist Dave Brugin prior to the launch of Rogers's solo career, gives a clear, early indication of his versatility and virtuosity on guitar.

influences:

◀◀ Earl Hooker, Robert Nighthawk

▶▶ Keb' Mo'

John C. Bruening

Roy Rogers

Born Leonard Franklin Slye, November 5, 1911, in Cincinnati, OH.

Raised on Tom Mix movies, cowboy singer Roy Rogers picked up acting naturally and starred in more than 100 films, usually as a genial singing cowboy. He started doing radio sketches with the Sons of the Pioneers, then branched out into movies, getting his big break when Republic Pictures used him to replace Gene Autry after a contract dispute. Along with Autry and Tex Ritter, he became a childhood idol to millions of young boys. Hollywood couldn't get enough of the handsome hero, so Rogers and his screen partner/wife Dale Evans earned a green light for an NBC Saturday-morning TV series, which lasted from 1951–57. Dale and Roy, married since 1946, eventually retired to Apple Valley, California, in the Mojave Desert, where they maintain the Roy Rogers Museum. Rogers's other sidekick, Trigger the horse, is stuffed and on display there. Rogers is the only person to be elected to the Country Music Hall of Fame twice: the Sons of the Pioneers, the group in which he rose to fame, was inducted in 1980, and Rogers followed as a solo performer eight years later.

what's available: The recordings on Country Music Hall of Fame ♪♪♪ (MCA, 1992, prod. Country Music Foundation), made for Decca during the 1930s and 1940s, show Rogers as a smooth-

6/8/4 sally rogers

the 1980s

As the eighties dawned, folk music was in a relatively dormant period. Although many stars of the previous two decades continued to tour, most of the action (and economic activity) in the music business centered in rock and dance music. Nashville made a handful of folkies and bluegrassers like Ricky Skaggs, Vince Gill, and Mary Chapin Carpenter stars, and gave steady work (and hefty paychecks) to instrumental virtuosos like Jerry Douglas and Mark O'Connor. Acoustic music was given an unexpected lift when William Ackerman's relatively obscure Windham Hill Label became a heavy hitter in music business economics, and seemingly every solo instrumentalist rushed to put out a "new age" recording. Although often considered a bit of a dark period for folk music, the decade saw a steady stream of releases on labels like Rounder and Flying Fish. A few talented new singer-songwriters like Greg Brown, John Gorka, and Shawn Colvin emerged, and a regular, if somewhat limited, touring circuit persisted for such artists, largely on the East Coast. The eighties were a vital time for Celtic music as well, with artists like Clannad and Enya cracking the pop charts but, more significantly, a plethora of new groups like Altan and Capercaillie breathing new life into these musical traditions, and a steady stream of new virtuoso instrumentalists like Seamus Egan and John McCusker continuing to raise the standards for speed and expression.

Michael Parrish

voiced balladeer. After he left the Sons of the Pioneers in 1937, his music began to steer away from strictly cowboy and Western themes—which could be one reason it had such wide appeal. Still, you'd want a Rogers collection to have mostly cowboy music, which makes Best of Roy Rogers ♪♪♪ (Curb, 1990) an odd lot at best—it has Rogers's versions of such country standards as "Candy Kisses," "Tennessee Waltz," and "Send Me the Pillow You Dream On." Peace in the Valley ♪♪♪ (Pair, 1996, comp. prod. Allan Steckler), recorded with Evans, features 20 gospel tunes recorded for RCA during the '40s and '50s.

worth searching for: Tribute ♪♪ (RCA, 1991, prod. Richard Landis), one of the first major-label country tribute albums, features contemporary artists—most notably Clint Black, Randy Travis, Emmylou Harris, and the Kentucky Headhunters—singing songs with Rogers.

influences:

◀◀ Carson Robison, Gene Autry

▶▶ Tex Ritter, Rex Allen

Brian Mansfield

Sally Rogers

Born September 19, 1954, in New York, NY.

Multi-talented singer-songwriter Sally Rogers plays guitar, banjo, and mountain dulcimer and specializes in traditional folk, old-timey, and (most recently) children's music. Even though she was born in New York City, she left at six months old (knowing she was not a city girl) and was raised on the family farm in Michigan. Rogers then lived in Brazil, Wisconsin, Switzerland, and Michigan again before settling in Connecticut for the last 15 years. Rogers has been a full-time touring folk musician as well as songwriter since 1979. Her incredible songwriting talent is found on each of her recordings as her crystal clear vocals draw us in, making us listen for more. She also plays traditional pieces and has been recognized with numerous awards, including Best Folk Album of 1982 for Circle of the Sun, and Best Children's Recording of 1992 for What Can One Little Person Do? and of 1993 for At Quiet O'Clock. She has made frequent radio appearances on A Prairie Home Companion and the nationally syndicated Mountain Stage. In 1997 Rogers was appointed to the official position of Connecticut State Troubadour, a one-year post. She is a master teaching artist for the Connecticut Commission on the Arts. Her discography includes five solo recordings, two albums with Howie Bursen, two albums with Claudia Schmidt, and four award-winning children's albums. She also is featured on a chamber music recording with Michael Newman and Laura Oltman (her cousin), as well as a recording of songs from the civil rights era, I'm Gonna Let It Shine, which includes many of the original Freedom Singers from the Student Non-Violent Coordinating Committee: Guy and Candie Carawan, Kim and Reggie Harris, Cathy Fink, Marcy Marxer, and many more. Rogers has composed songs that are in the Unitarian and Quaker hymnals and has created the music for a Mennonite folk opera, Pieced Together. She is currently working on an oral history/songwriting project for the Quinebaug-Shetucket National Heritage Corridor in Connecticut. All of her recordings include extensive liner notes as well as lyrics to all the songs.

what to buy: The latest of Rogers's solo recordings, We'll Pass Them On ♪♪♪♪½ (Red House, 1995, prod. Sally Rogers) is an excellent example of her original pieces intermingled with some all-time favorite traditional songs and ballads. Her powerful vocals reign throughout as we listen to "Across the Blue Mountains" and "Black Jack Davey," which are accompanied by a harmonium. There are several outstanding originals and Rogers explains that her goal is to write songs that are appropriate for gatherings of people, songs that build community. She says, "we are all born singers and by using our voices in community, we begin to realize the power of one and of the group." This recording includes "We'll Pass Them On," a song written at the 1993 gathering of the Children's Music Network in a workshop led by Pete Seeger, and "In the Name of All of Our Children," a zipper song written for Nona Beamer, guest of honor at the 1994 gathering. Some of the talented musicians who contributed to this recording are Stephen Snyder (piano, bass, harmonium), Donna Hebert (fiddle), and Allan Bradbury (bass, button accordion). Most of Rogers recordings should be easy to find, but can also be ordered from the artist at P.O. Box 98, Abington, Connecticut 06230 or via e-mail at salrog@neca.com.

what to buy next: The Unclaimed Pint ♪♪♪♪ (Flying Fish, 1986, prod. Gary Reid, Sally Rogers) contains selections from both The Unclaimed Pint (DGA Productions, 1979, prod. Jim Sigler, Gary Reid) and Circle of the Sun (DGA Productions, 1982, prod. Gary Reid, Sally Rogers), originally released on vinyl. Two outstanding originals are "Lovely Agnes," a song Rogers wrote for her grandmother as a present on her 92nd birthday, and "The Touch of the Master's Hand," a poignant poem written by Myra Brook Welch that Rogers set to music. Generations ♪♪♪½ (Flying Fish, 1989, prod. Paul Reisler, Bob Read) is a collection of songs by, about, and for women. Without being overtly political or feminist in nature, they all speak to the strength of womanhood, its struggles and delights. Rogers is joined by several musicians, including members of Trapezoid (Bob Read, Tim Valdes, Anne Louise White, Cheryl Hurwitz, and Paul Reisler). What Can One Little Person Do? ♪♪♪½ (Round River, 1992, prod. Sally Rogers) is an excellent children's recording, earning awards from Parents' Choice Magazine among others. Rogers gets delightful help from Molly Mason (acoustic bass), Marcy Marxer (mandolin, guitar, accordion, tin whistle, and various percussion instruments), Donna Wilson (fiddle), Steven Snyder (piano), and the Swamptown Chorus, a group of eight youthful voices.

the rest:
(With Howie Bursen) Satisfied Customers ♪♪♪½ (Flying Fish, 1984)
Love Will Guide Us ♪♪♪½ (Flying Fish, 1985)
In the Circle of the Sun ♪♪♪½ (Flying Fish, 1986)
(With Claudia Schmidt) Closing the Distance ♪♪♪ (Flying Fish, 1987) Piggyback Planet ♪♪♪ (Round River, 1990)
(With Howie Bursen) When Howie Met Sally ♪♪♪½ (Flying Fish, 1990)
(With Claudia Schmidt) While We Live ♪♪♪ (Red House, 1991)
At Quiet O'Clock ♪♪♪ (Round River, 1993)

worth searching for: Rogers contributes vocals and dulcimer to Laments & Dances ♪♪♪ (MusicMasters, 1994, prod. Gregory Squires), a recording of the Newman and Oltman Guitar Duo along with the Turtle Island String Quartet and Jay Unger. I'm Gonna Let It Shine (Round River, 1990, prod. Bill Harley) features a group of people who came together to sing songs of freedom and the human spirit. This amazing collection of people are not just singers, but activists working to make a better world, and there are no instruments heard other than human voices and hands. Rogers also has a video titled Sally Rogers Sings for Children, which was recorded at a live children's concert in 1994.

influences:
◀◀ Art Thieme, Sandy & Caroline Paton, Jean Ritchie, Stan Rogers, Peggy Seeger

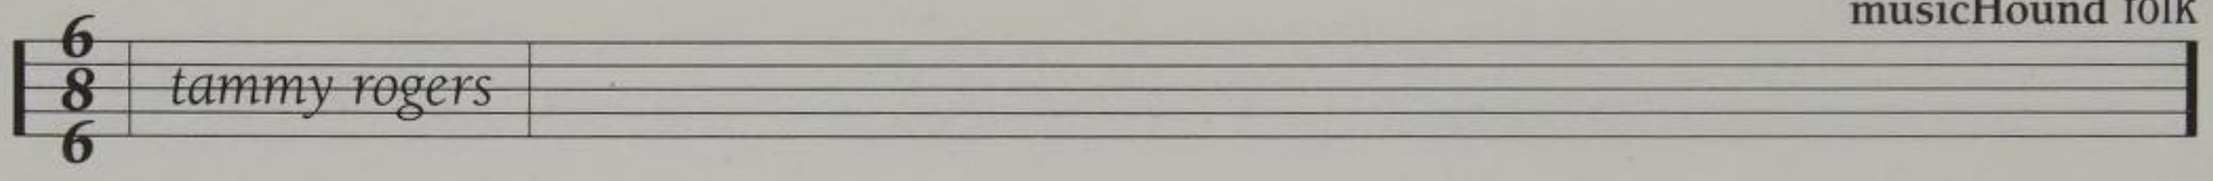
▶▶ Anne Hills, Christina Muir, Cindy Kallet

Heidi Cerrigione

Stan Rogers

Born November 29, 1949, in Hamilton, Ontario. Died, June 2, 1983, in Cincinnati, OH.

A child of Maritime stock, Stan Rogers—with his deep, bellowing voice and brilliant song writing—has provided timeless "snapshots" of the ordinary folks who worked the fisheries, mines, and farms of his native Canada. His dream—to establish a national identity for Canadian songwriting—reached fulfillment with a half-dozen successful albums, and Rogers earned world-wide respect as one of folk music's brightest young talents. But the dream ended on June 2, 1983, when Rogers died in a fire on Air Canada flight 797 at the Cincinnati airport. And while his memory lingers, his music lives on—with a growing list of artists paying tribute by covering his repertoire. Rogers was posthumously awarded the Diplôme d'Honneur by the Canadian Conference of the Arts. His songs have appeared in poetry anthologies, films, plays, and musicals. With his chronicles of ordinary life, Rogers is remembered as one of the touchstones of modern Canadian history.



what to buy: Rogers possibly matched, but never exceeded the song craftsmanship of his first release: Fogarty's Cove ♪♪♪♪♪ (Fogarty's Cove Music, 1977, prod. Paul Mills). This collection—a dozen pieces of and about Nova Scotia—is filled to the brim with classics, including "45 Years," "Fogarty's Cove," and "Barrett's Privateers." Rogers's traditional acoustic band (guitar, bass, banjo, fiddle, etc.) supports his robust baritone voice with authentic style. Most notable is Rogers's ballad of a dying fishing trade, "Make or Break Harbor": "the boats are so few, too many are pulled up and rotten. Most houses stand empty, old nets hung to dry are blown away, lost and forgotten." This fine set closes with "Finche's Complaint," a recitation in the old maritime tradition that Rogers learned—appropriately—by ear. After extensive travel in Canada's northwest, Rogers composed his gem Northwest Passage ♪♪♪♪♪ (Fogarty's Cove Music, 1981, prod. Paul Mills). The songs run the gamut of traditional styling, comprising a fairly eclectic brew of working-man ballads. "The Field behind the Plow" tells of Saskatchewan grain farmers: "Watch the field behind the plow turn to straight dark rows. Put another season's promise in the ground." Rogers dedicates "Working Joe" to dear old Dad, whose upstanding character helped inspire "You Can't Stay Here," the story of an "old-fashioned guy" with shining moral fortitude in the face of temptation. "The Idiot" presents Eastern Canadians who followed the lure of oil money to the West. And most notably, Rogers dedicates "Lies" to the farmer's wife, and her loving husband who looks past the ravages of age to see inner beauty. Between the Breaks . . . Live ♪♪♪♪ (Fogarty's Cove Music, 1979, prod. Paul Mills), the definitive of Rogers's two live albums, offers a good opportunity to sample his repertoire and live-concert charisma. The most charismatic number is the classic "The Mary Ellen Carter," of which Rogers writes: "I really like the guy in this song. He's every person who ever had experts tell him that what he wanted to do was impossible, then did it anyway." And what he did was raise his sunken ship, proclaiming: "Rise again, rise again! . . . No matter what you've lost, be it a home, a love, a friend, like the Mary Ellen Carter, rise again!" And finally, the version of the classic "Barrett's Privateers" is considered to be definitive.

what to buy next: Rogers's second live album, Home in Halifax ♪♪♪♪ (Fogarty's Cove Music, 1982, prod. Mark Andrew Cardiff), preserves the essence of his stage manner, including ongoing banter with his brother and constant sideman Garnet Rogers. It also includes a previously unrecorded Stan Rogers song "Sailor's Rest." And not to go unnoticed is the warm rapport between Rogers and the Halifax community, with which he shares family ties. Turnaround ♪♪♪½ (Fogarty's Cove Music, 1978, prod. Paul Mills) shows a developing songwriter in some patchy efforts. But nonetheless there are diamonds in the rough. "Bluenose" showcases Rogers's exceptional knack for maritime rhyme: "Feel her bow rise free of Mother Sea, in a sunburst cloud of spray, that stings the cheek while the rigging will speak, of sea-miles gone away." And "The Jeannie C.," dedicated to the fishermen of Little Dover, Nova Scotia, features Garnet's characteristically solid fiddle. With From Fresh Water ♪♪♪♪ (Fogarty's Cove Music, 1984, prod. Paul Mills), Rogers's songwriting came full circle around Canada, ending in the Great Lakes Region where he was raised. Released posthumously, this is Rogers's last major writing project—a keepsake for those who love him like family. In addition to the classics "Lock-Keeper," "White Squall," "The Last Watch," and "The Nancy," two protest songs are included: "Tiny Fish for Japan" and "The House of Orange."

what to avoid: Poetic Justice ♪♪ (Fogarty's Cove Music, 1996, prod. Bill Howell) consists of two old radio plays in which our dearly beloved participated. Rogers is gone . . . we all miss him. But this is digging a bit far.

worth searching for: Released just before Rogers's death, For the Family (Folk Tradition, 1983, prod. Stan Rogers) contains songs written by friends and family members. Happy hunting!

influences:

◀◀ Garnet Rogers, Jim Paine, Kelly Russell, Pete Seeger

▶▶ Garnet Rogers, Schooner Fare, Priscilla Herdman, Alan Reid & Brian MacNeil, Eric Bogle, John Gorka, Jerry Rau, Mary Travers

see also: Garnet Rogers

Art Wojtowicz

Tammy Rogers

Born January 18, 1965, Rogersville, TN.

Tammy Rogers's distinctive fiddle style has been heard on records by folks from Neil Diamond to the Jayhawks (she's even on the soundtrack to the film, So I Married an Axe Murderer!). But with two albums to her credit, she has established herself as one of the most versatile performers to emerge from Nashville during the 1990s. As business partner in the independent Dead Reckoning record label with Kevin Welch, Kieran Kane, Mike Henderson, and Harry Stinson, Rogers is one of the few women in Nashville to assume such a role.

what's available: In the Red ♪♪♪♪ (Dead Reckoning, 1995, prod. Tammy Rogers, Don Heffington, Kieran Kane, David Vaught) is a predominately instrumental duet album with ex–Lone Justice drummer Don Heffington. Tammy Rogers ♪♪♪ (Dead Reckoning, 1996, prod. Harry Stinson, Tammy Rogers) is a pleasant, well-produced follow-up that leans more heavily on Rogers's vocals and songwriting. It's marred only by her somewhat dispassionate vocal performance.

influences:

◀◀ Mark O'Connor, Alison Krauss

Stephen L. Betts

Linda Ronstadt

Born July 15, 1946, in Tucson, AZ.

Any assessment of Linda Ronstadt stands or falls upon how strongly you feel about songwriting as an artistic credential. If you believe that not writing your material is creative treason, Ronstadt will give you ulcers. But the profound influence of Ronstadt's singing mandates a place for her, along with such artists as Emmylou Harris, as a major voice in the 1970s fusion of folk, rock, and country. Where Harris leaned toward the mountain and bluegrass traditions, Ronstadt mined the throbbing, emotional territory once owned by Patsy Cline. In doing so, she established a model for any number of subsequent country-rock belters and future country divas. She arrived in Los Angeles at the end of the 1960s as singer for the Stone Poneys (Bobby Kimmel on guitar, Kenny Edwards on bass). With them, she scored her first chart success, 1967's "Different Drum," but the group broke up the following year. Ronstadt eventually emerged as princess of the California rock Mafia that included the Eagles, John David Souther, and Jackson Browne—a prominence that grew as she worked with producer Peter Asher. Their collaboration on 1974's Heart like a Wheel produced the Number One hit "You're No Good" and established Asher's trademark formula: torchy, country-tinged pop seasoned with oldies (Hank Williams, Buddy Holly) and untried material (Karla Bonoff, Kate & Anna McGarrigle). This approach made Ronstadt a force on both the pop and country charts for most of the 1970s. Nevertheless, her boredom with the game plan grew as the decade ended. Although she would release one more pure pop album (1982's Get Closer), she was beginning a period of experimentation that included a Broadway fling with Gilbert & Sullivan (The Pirates of Penzance), three big-band collections with conductor Nelson Riddle, and two albums of mariachi music.

what to buy: Heart like a Wheel ♪♪♪♪♪ (Capitol, 1974, prod. Peter Asher) and Prisoner in Disguise ♪♪♪♪♪ (Asylum, 1975, prod. Peter Asher) exemplify Asher's influential production style and Ronstadt's emotional country rock. In the poignant title tunes, memorable duets with Harris, and carefully chosen remakes (such as Smokey Robinson and the Miracles' "Tracks of My Tears"), Ronstadt successfully walks the line dividing sadness from sappiness. Some of her best singing of the 1980s is on the spare, mountain-acoustic arrangements of Trio ♪♪♪♪♪ (Warner Bros., 1987, prod. George Massenburg), her collaboration with Harris and Dolly Parton.

what to buy next: Hasten down the Wind ♪♪♪♪ (Asylum, 1976, prod. Peter Asher) completes the 1970s trio of Ronstadt/Asher mega-successes and spotlights excellent songwriting by Bonoff and Warren Zevon. Those interested in pre-Asher Ronstadt should seek out A Retrospective ♪♪♪½ (Capitol, 1977), which collects the best of her early output.

what to avoid: Mad Love ♪♪ (Asylum, 1980, prod. Peter Asher) is an ill-advised foray into tough-posturing punk that kind of reminds one of the time the Girls' Citizenship president tried to smoke her first cigarette and swallowed instead of inhaling. Except for the rueful "Hurts So Bad," it's a yowl.

the rest:

(With the Stone Poneys) Stone Poneys ♪♪ (Capitol, 1967/1995)
(With the Stone Poneys) Evergreen Volume 2 ♪♪ (Capitol, 1967) Hand Sown, Home Grown ♪♪½ (Capitol/EMI, 1969)
Silk Purse ♪♪♪½ (Capitol, 1970)
Linda Ronstadt ♪♪♪ (Capitol, 1972)
Don't Cry Now ♪♪♪½ (Capitol, 1973)
Greatest Hits Volume 1 ♪♪♪♪ (Asylum, 1975)
Simple Dreams ♪♪♪½ (Asylum, 1977)
Living in the USA ♪♪½ (Asylum, 1978)
Greatest Hits Volume 2 ♪♪♪ (Asylum, 1980)
Get Closer ♪♪♪ (Asylum, 1982)
What's New ♪♪♪½ (Asylum, 1983)
Lush Life ♪♪♪½ (Asylum, 1984)
For Sentimental Reason ♪♪♪½ (Asylum, 1986)
'Round Midnight: The Nelson Riddle Sessions ♪♪♪½ (Elektra, 1986)
Canciones De Mi Padre (Songs of My Father) ♪♪♪ (Elektra, 1987)
(With Aaron Neville) Cry like a Rainstorm, Howl like the Wind ♪♪♪ (Elektra, 1989)
Mas Canciones ♪♪♪ (Elektra, 1991)
Frenesi ♪♪♪ (Elektra, 1992)
Winter Light ♪♪♪½ (Elektra, 1993)
Feels like Home ♪♪♪♪ (Elektra, 1995)
(With the Stone Poneys) Stone Poneys and Friends, Volume 2 ♪♪½ (Capitol, 1995) Dedicated to the One I Love ♪♪♪ (Elektra, 1996) worth searching for: Ronstadt has made myriad guest appearances on an assortment of albums. Two of the most interesting (and varied): Philip Glass's 1000 Airplanes (Virgin Classics, 1989), on which her singing humanizes Glass's ethereal minimalism; and Kermit Unplugged (Jim Henson, 1994), on which she and the frog duet on "All I Have to Do Is Dream."

influences:

◀◀ Patsy Cline, Elvis Presley, Lola Beltran

▶▶ Trisha Yearwood, Kathy Mattea, Rosanne Cash

Elizabeth Lynch

Rooftop Singers

Formed 1962, in New York, NY; Disbanded 1967.

Erik Darling (born September 25, 1933, in Baltimore, MD), vocals, guitar, banjo; Bill Svanoe (born Willard Hooker Svanoe), vocals, guitar; Lynne Taylor (died 1982), vocals (1962–64); Mindy Stuart, vocals (1965–67).

Today remembered only for their infectious 1963 chart-topper "Walk Right In," the Rooftop Singers were in fact a musical amalgamation of impeccable pedigree and rare foresight. As they boldly stated on the back cover of their very first album, "We consider the main body of folk song as iron ore, so to speak, to be tempered into expressions of those things we wish to sing about," and with each member's varying musical backgrounds and abilities the results were never less than fascinating. After many years spent in the good musical employ of the Tarriers and the Weavers, as well as appearances as accompanist of choice on more than 30 other records by a wide range of artists, Erik Darling had finally completed an album of his own for Vanguard in 1962 when a tape arrived one day in the mail. On it, a young jazz vocalist named Lynne Taylor, fresh from stints with the Benny Goodman and Buddy Rich bands, had made a recording of herself singing harmony vocals along with each track off that very same album. Naturally intrigued, Darling sought her out and, along with his old friend Bill Svanoe, they came together, initially only to record a version of an old Gus Cannon Jug Stompers tune freshly arranged for 12-string guitar. Impulsively naming themselves the Rooftop Singers and letting Vanguard release the track, all parties involved were happily surprised to see "Walk Right In" quickly bolt to the Number One position nationwide within weeks of release. A successful appearance at the 1963 Newport Folk Festival led to four and a half years of worldwide touring, during which time they recorded three albums and did their fair share to help popularize the acoustic 12-string. Since their disbanding, Darling has continued performing and recording both as a solo artist and an accompanist, just as he had prior to the Rooftop Singers' brief but spectacular moment in the sun.

what's available: For a thoroughly enjoyable overview of their work, The Best of the Rooftop Singers ♪♪♪ (Vanguard, 1992, comp. prod. Mary Katherine Aldin) presents a well-chosen 16 tracks from their trio of original, high-spirited long-players. "Working on the Railroad" is particularly infectious, in a Sesame Street sorta way, while Lynne Taylor's jazz training is put to good use on the Peggy-Lee-meets-the-Journeymen arrangement of Duke Ellington's "It Don't Mean a Thing."

solo outings:

Erik Darling:

Border Town at Midnight ♪♪♪ (Folk Era Productions, 1994, prod. David Anthony)

influences:

◀◀ Kingston Trio, Leon S. Kurzer, Peter, Paul & Mary

▶▶ Seekers, Washington Squares, Satchel Lass Singers

Gary Pig Gold

Phil Rosenthal

See: Seldom Scene

John Rossbach

See: Mac Benford

Kevin Roth

Born December 1, 1957 in Philadelphia, PA.

Kevin Roth's career began at the age of 16, when his unique and innovative style of mountain dulcimer playing and singing was heard by Moses Asch, founder of the Folkways Records. In 1974 the first of his 12 recordings for Folkways was released, launching a distinctive and impressive career. His unusual dulcimer stylings, songwriting, and interpretive performance skills have all contributed to his popularity. In 1984 Roth's career took an unexpected turn. He recorded his first children's album, which won an American Literary Association award. Over the next 10 years, Roth recorded a dozen new recordings for family audiences, winning over a dozen awards and receiving critical acclaim from such magazines as Entertainment Weekly, Parents, Good Housekeeping, American Baby, and others. He has his own series of Random House publications called "Kevin Roth Presents" and his voice is heard daily singing the theme to the hit PBS-TV show Shining Time Station. His concerts include performances with the Philadelphia Orchestra and at concert halls throughout the country, and several national television appearances. Roth's recordings can be purchased from Star Gazer Productions, P.O. Box 1637, Hockessin, Delaware 19707.

what to buy: Roth's latest recording for family audiences is Now I Lay Me down to Sleep ♪♪♪½ (Star Gazer Productions, 1996, prod. Kevin Roth) and features "lullabies for all ages." This is perhaps the best introduction to Roth's children's material and features nursery rhymes and Roth originals. His latest adult project is a new album titled Searching for Angels ♪♪♪½ (Star Gazer Productions, 1997, prod. Kevin Roth), featuring songs performed on the piano, dulcimer, and zither. For those more interested in Roth's dulcimer-playing, he has released a number of albums on Folkways that showcase his unusual style. Two good examples are The Mountain Dulcimer Instrumental Album ♪♪♪ (Folkways, 1977, prod. Kevin Roth) and Mountain Dulcimer Instrumental Album, Volume II: The First Few Words ♪♪♪ (Folkways, 1978, prod. Kevin Roth). Both are still in print and available in CD format and both offer compelling evidence of his prowess as a dulcimer player.

what to buy next: Train Songs and Other Tracks ♪♪♪ (Star Gazer Productions, 1996, prod. Kevin Roth) contains Roth's rendition of the Shining Time Station theme as well as 15 other train songs.

the rest:

Sings and Plays Dulcimer ♪♪♪ (Folkways, 1975)
Somebody Give Me Direction ♪♪½ (Folkways, 1976)
The Other Side of the Mountain ♪♪½ (Folkways, 1976)
Dulcimer Instruction ♪♪♪ (Folkways, 1979)
New Wind ♪♪♪ (Folkways, 1980)
Women ♪♪½ (Folkways, 1981)
The Living and Breathing Wind ♪♪♪ (Folkways, 1981)
Dulcimer Man ♪♪♪ (Folkways, 1982)
The Quiet Times ♪♪♪ (Folkways, 1982)
Don't Wait for Me and Songs of the First Decade ♪♪½ (Folkways, 1983) Unbearable Bears ♪♪½ (Star Gazer Productions, 1986)
The Secret Journey ♪♪½ (Star Gazer Productions, 1987) (cassette only) After the Rain ♪♪♪ (Star Gazer Productions, 1988) (cassette only)
The Sandman ♪♪♪ (Star Gazer Productions, 1989) (cassette only)
The Toy Maker's Christmas ♪♪½ (Star Gazer Productions, 1989) (cassette only) Strings of Joy ♪♪♪ (Star Gazer Productions, 1990) (cassette only) Lullabies for Little Dreamers ♪♪♪ (Star Gazer Productions, 1990)
Camp and Fireside Songs ♪♪½ (Star Gazer Productions) (cassette only) Dinosaurs and Dragons ♪♪½ (Star Gazer Productions, 1992) (cassette only) Animal Crackers and Other Tasty Tunes ♪♪½ (Star Gazer Productions, 1992) (cassette only)
The Gentleness in Living ♪♪♪ (Star Gazer Productions, 1993)
Daddy Songs ♪♪½ (Star Gazer Productions, 1993) Travel Song Sing-Alongs ♪♪½ (Star Gazer Productions, 1994) (cassette only) Adventures of Sir Rabbit & Bunny Junction Train Station ♪♪♪ (Star Gazer Productions, 1996)

influences:

◀◀ Jean Ritchie, Richard Fariña, Shari Lewis

▶▶ Raffi, Cathy Fink & Marcy Marxer

Neal Walters

Sandy Rothman & Steve Pottier

Formed 1991.

Sandy Rothman (born in Miami, FL), guitar; Steve Pottier (born in Denver, CO), guitar.

Sandy Rothman and Steve Pottier have had entirely separate careers, although they're both long established in the lively California bluegrass scene and have both garnered reputations as notable disciples of the great Clarence White. Their recent partnership grew naturally out of knowing and admiring each other for many years, and the result has been one memorable album of bluegrass guitar duets. A perusal of their respective resumes reveals a long history of inhabiting other people's liner notes. Rothman became a bluegrass habitué during the early '60s—in fact, in 1964 he and old friend Jerry Garcia drove halfway across the country together in a van following the Kentucky Colonels. He was already an alumnus of Bill Monroe's Blue Grass Boys when he ended up in Boston that summer, and his experience rooming for a period with Clarence White (then the Colonels' guitarist) was a watershed experience in Rothman's musical career. He later spent time in Ohio with Earl Taylor's Stoney Mountain Boys, and with the B Natural Boys with Tom Ewing, another Monroe alumnus. Rothman also reunited with Garcia in Garcia's Acoustic Band during the late '80s, and has spent much time in Japan preaching the gospel of the "high, lonesome sound."

Pottier's career paralleled Rothman's in many ways. Although he became a White enthusiast a bit later and saw his hero play only a few times before White's death, he collected a nearly legendary personal library of Colonels recordings and made a deep study of the unique guitarist's style, a facility for which he's still known. Pottier is also a veteran of many influential Bay Area bands, including Done Gone and High Country. The story goes that Pottier started coming around and visiting Rothman in 1991, convincing him to play some guitar again (Rothman had become better known as a banjo player). A few solo engagements went well enough to convince them to hit the recording studio, issuing an album in the spirit and memory of their hero and mentor, Clarence White.

what's available: When you listen to these two guys play, and you find yourself savoring not just the sweet, woody notes that come out but the spaces between them, you know the spirit of Clarence White lives on in Bluegrass Guitar Duets ♪♪♪½ (Sierra, 1994, prod. Sandy Rothman, Steve Pottier). Originally issued in 1991 on LP, this ingratiating set of acoustic guitar duets feels as relaxed, spontaneous, and simpatico as if performed while sitting on the front porch. It's said that White could knock people out with the notes he didn't play—and while this album is by no means a run-through of his repertoire (none of the tunes here are White's or are particularly associated with him), the understated punch these two players provide show they've learned from the master well. In a musical landscape ruled by a fastest-gun-in-the-West mentality, this is a cool breeze indeed.

influences:

◀◀ Clarence White, Doc Watson, Don Reno, George Shuffler, Larry Sparks

▶▶ Steve Kaufman, David Grier, Scott Nygaard

Chris Rietz

Peter Rowan

Born July 4, 1962, in Boston, MA.

Raised in a household of musical fanatics, multi-instrumentalist/songwriter Peter Rowan's career is filled with the gyrations of someone unwilling to settle into any one musical form and excelling at all of them. Reared on the Boston folk circuit in the outfit Mother Bay State Entertainers, Rowan first made his bluegrass mark nationally singing and playing guitar for Bill Monroe's Blue Grass Boys during the mid-1960s. Torn by the experimental musical offshoots of the latter part of that decade, Rowan hooked up with mandolinist David Grisman (the beginning of a 30-year relationship) and formed Earth Opera, scoring a minor chart hit in 1969 with "Home to You." He would find greater commercial viability with the acoustic-fusion Seatrain a few years later before forming the on-again-off-again Rowan Brothers with siblings Chris and Lorin. A live 1973 bluegrass show at San Francisco's Boarding House featuring Rowan, Grisman, Jerry Garcia, Vassar Clements, and John Kahn became the highly regarded one-off Old and in the Way album, highlighted by a pair of Rowan songwriting gems, "Midnight Moonlight" and "Panama Red" (both covered by New Riders of the Purple Sage, who also recorded Rowan's "LA Cowboy"). Since that time Rowan's projects have included yet another bluegrass amalgam, Muleskinner; Mexican Air Force featuring accordionist Flaco Jimenez (continuing a life-long love of Tex-Mex soundings); as well as the Wild Stallions.

what to buy: Proof of Rowan's durability is the fact that his most recent release, Bluegrass Boy ♪♪♪♪ (Sugar Hill, 1996, prod. Peter Rowan, Jim Rooney), is as satisfying as anything he's done, and therefore not a bad place to start. Joining Rowan on this set of quality bluegrass standards and originals is Laurie Lewis, Del McCoury, plus old Seatrain cohort Richard Greene.

what to buy next: Those who've longed for another set of Old and in the Way can run out and grab High Lonesome Sound ♪♪♪♪ (Acoustic Disc, 1996, prod. David Grisman), which unearths more supple sounds of Rowan, Garcia, Grisman, Clements, and Kahn from the Boarding House in October 1973.

the rest:

Peter Rowan ♪♪♪ (Flying Fish, 1978)
Medicine Trail ♪♪♪ (Flying Fish, 1980)
Texican Badman ♪♪♪ (Appaloosa, 1981)
Walls of Time ♪♪♪½ (Sugar Hill, 1981)
Peter Rowan with the Red Hot Pickers ♪♪♪½ (Sugar Hill, 1984/1995)
The First Whippoorwill ♪♪♪½ (Sugar Hill, 1985)
New Moon Rising ♪♪♪½ (Sugar Hill, 1988)
Dust Bowl Children ♪♪♪♪ (Sugar Hill, 1990)
All on a Rising Day ♪♪♪ (Sugar Hill, 1991)
Awake Me in the New World ♪♪♪½ (Sugar Hill, 1993)
(With the Rowan Brothers) Tree on a Hill ♪♪♪ (Sugar Hill, 1994) (With Jerry Douglas) Yonder ♪♪♪½ (Sugar Hill, 1996) worth searching for: The Great American Eagle Tragedy ♪♪♪½ (Elektra, 1969, prod. Peter K. Siegel), a sort of Boston-psychedelia-meets acoustic-bluegrass set, includes the chart-scraper "Home to You."

influences:

◀◀ Bill Monroe, Beatles, Jerry Garcia

▶▶ John Dawson, Nashville Bluegrass Band

David Simons

Tom Rozum

See: Laurie Lewis

Rude Girls

Formed in New England, ca 1985. Disbanded 1991.

Lyn Hardy, guitar, vocals, banjo, percussion; Selma Kaplan, piano, keyboard, accordion, vocals; Debby Saperstone, autoharp, vocals; other members include Donna Hébert, vocals, fiddle, viola.

Rude Girls was a New England–based group that flourished during the late 1980s. There's a reason they were called Rude Girls. Maybe it's explained by some of the songs on Mixed Messages: "Safety First," about condoms; "Rag on Blues," about a lousy time of the month; and "I Can See Your Aura," about—well, about a really ugly aura. But the music of this bluegrass-based group was sweet and friendly.

what's available: Mixed Messages ♪♪♪ (Flying Fish, 1990, prod. Abby Newton) is mixed to be sure. It opens with a song about safe sex, then detours into trad territory with "Run the Riggin'." From there the composers range from Richard Thompson ("Dimming of the Day") to Ronee Blakley ("She Lays It on the Line"). Guests include Abby Newton on cello and Molly Mason on bass. Rude Awakening ♪♪♪ (Flying Fish, 1987, prod. Cathy Fink) has a more consistent bluegrass sound and more instrumentals, perhaps because of the presence of string wizard Hébert.

influences:

◀◀ Ronnie Gilbert, Tom Lehrer

▶▶ Chenille Sisters, Iona, Venus Envy

Pamela Murray Winters

Runrig

Formed 1973.

Rory MacDonald, bass, vocals, accordion (1973–present); Calum MacDonald, percussion, vocals (1973–present); Blair Douglas, accordion (1973–74, 1978–79); Donnie Munro, vocals (1973–97); Robert MacDonald; Malcolm Jones, guitars, accordion, pipes, hurdy gurdy, whistle, jaw's harp (1979–present); Richard Cherns, keyboards (1981–86); Iain Bayne, drums, percussion, timpani (1984–present); Peter Washart, keyboards, keyboard programming (1986–present).

Beginning as a university band playing traditional dance tunes, Runrig has come a long way in 25 years. Their Gaelic folk-rock anthems (with emotional lyrics commenting on social and political conditions past and present) have won them a huge following in Scotland, where their concerts fill large stadium-like venues. Late in the summer of 1997, longtime vocalist Donnie Munro left Runrig to pursue a career in politics.

what's available: Although Runrig's 1988 release The Cutter and the Clan was issued in the United States by Chrysalis, it is only available now as an import. The only Runrig album presently licensed to a U.S.-based label is Maral ♪♪♪♪ (Chrysalis, 1995/Avalanche Communications, 1996, prod. Brian Young, Runrig). It's pretty standard late-period Runrig, with Munro's charismatic voice leading the charge over the instrumentalists' energetic, rocked-up march rhythms. "Lighthouse" is a really effective track, not as bombastic as several others, but with a melody that remains in your mind long after the first time you hear it. The thoughtful lyrics use the metaphor of a lighthouse as a refuge to relate modern feelings of alienation and confusion.

worth searching for: If you can find it as an import, The Cutter and the Clan ♪♪♪♪½ (Chrysalis, 1988) is worth picking up. It contains two really strong songs with environmental themes: "Protect and Survive" and "Our Earth Was Once Green."

influences:

◀◀ Dick Gaughan, Battlefield Band, Tannahill Weavers, Fairport Convention, Bruce Springsteen, Five Hand Reel

▶▶ Capercaillie, Oyster Band, Billy Bragg, Rawlins Cross, Wolfstone

Ken Roseman

Kate Rusby

Born 1974, in Yorkshire, England.

A charter member of the 1990s English folk scene's "brat pack," vocalist Kate Rusby has made quite a name for herself in just a few short years. In 1993 she recorded several tracks for Intuition, a sampler featuring women singers from Yorkshire. That same year Rusby started working in a duo with Kathryn Roberts. The duo actively toured for two years and produced one album, Kate Rusby & Kathryn Roberts. Then came big changes. Rusby and Roberts teamed up with fellow bratpackers the Lakeman Brothers (a predominantly instrumental trio) to form a super-group called the Equation. Expectations and hopes were high, but that really wasn't a comfortable situation for Rusby. As she explained an interview with Scottish magazine Living Tradition: "we joined up with the Lakeman Brothers and called ourselves The Equation and tried to get some bigger gigs, because they didn't have a singer and we wanted to make a bigger sound. It was a good set up but after a while we were offered a deal from a major recording company. I didn't want to go into pop music, but they did, so I left." Instead, Rusby joined the Poozies, an all-female band (Karen Tweed, accordion, backing vocals; Patsy Seddon, lead and backing vocals, gut-strung harp, electro-harp, fiddle; Mary MacMaster, lead and backing vocals, metal strung harp, electro-harp) whose main singer, Sally Barker, had left to have a baby. In addition to her commitments with the Poozies, the busy Rusby has also developed quite a solo career. She guested on the Battlefield Band's Quiet Days and sang two songs for the soundtrack album for the television series Sharpe. In 1997 she released her first solo album, Hourglass.

what's available: So far, Rusby has only been involved with two full-length recordings. Kate Rusby & Kathryn Roberts ♪♪♪♪ (Pure Records, 1995, prod. John McCusker) came first and shows that the two Yorkshire lasses were quite effective as a duo, sounding a bit like Maddy Prior and June Tabor's incarnation as the Silly Sisters, but with sparser, more acoustic instrumental arrangements. Rusby's solo effort, Hourglass ♪♪♪♪ (Pure Records, 1997, prod, John McCusker), continues in a similar vein, with spare, acoustic settings and a focus on traditional material. There's a particularly fine version of "Bold Riley" where Rusby's voice is complemented perfectly by Andy Cutting's tasteful accordion playing.

worth searching for: Rusby is featured on three tracks of the Intuition ♪♪♪♪ (Fat Cat, 1993) sampler, one of which is a great rendition of the well-known ballad "Bonny Light Horseman." And just to show she's not always a pure traditionalist, she also sings lead on a lovely rendition of Mary Chapin Carpenter's "The Moon and St. Christopher," with Kathryn Roberts on piano and backing vocals by Pat Shaw and Julie Matthews. The Sharpe series soundtrack is on Over the Hills and Far Away: The Music of Sharpe ♪♪♪♪ (Virgin, 1996).

influences:

⏮ Nic Jones, Nanci Griffith, June Tabor, Annie Briggs, Robin & Barry Dransfield, Watersons, Dave Burland

⏭ Eliza Carthy, Sileas, Poozies

Ken Roseman

Tom Rush

Born February 8, 1941, in Portsmouth, NH.

Tom Rush began his performing career in the Boston area during the early 1960s while attending Harvard. Even before graduating in 1963, he had become a fixture on the coffeehouse and college circuit. Mixing blues and traditional songs, his early recordings were released on the Prestige label, but it wasn't until signing with Elektra that Rush and his sweet, interpretive tenor began reaching a wider audience. His self-titled debut album featured a bottleneck guitar tribute to Bukka White. His second Elektra set, 1966's Take a Little Walk with Me, showed Rush's more electric side and featured compositions by Bo Diddley and Buddy Holly and arrangements by Al Kooper. 1968's The Circle Game, with its poignant originals, interpretations of material by then-unknowns Jackson Browne and Joni Mitchell, and cover art by Linda (later-to-become-McCartney) Eastman, was a commercial and artistic career highlight. Rush moved to Columbia in 1970 where he recorded a series of albums that marry country, blues, and folk with charming and disarming ease. He has always been visionary in his choice of material, and his voice sounds as rich, soothing, and inviting today as it did when he first played Cambridge's tiny Club 47. In the early '80s, when folk singers no longer hit the charts (and Rush had already enjoyed eight hit albums), he formed his own management company, booking agency, and record label. He then sold out three consecutive concerts at Boston's Symphony Hall, documented on 1982's Tom Rush: New Year. Today, still sounding as vibrant and youthful as ever, Rush continues to play venues large and small. Over the years, Rush has not only been synonymous with contemporary folk music, but he's an artist's artist, cited by stars including Garth Brooks and James Taylor as a major influence.

what to buy: The gentle classic The Circle Game ♪♪♪♪ (Elektra, 1968, prod. Arthur Gorson) shows Rush's growth as a songwriter, and features his gorgeous instrumental "Rockport Sunday" and "No Regrets," a song about coming to terms with a heartbreaking break-up that sounds as fresh today as it did upon release 30 years ago. But Circle Game also finds Rush with a knack for discovering and interpreting songs by just-emerging songwriters Jackson Browne ("Shadow Dream Song"), Joni Mitchell ("Urge for Going," "Tin Angel," "The Circle Game"), and James Taylor ("Something in the Way She Moves," "Sunshine Sunshine") with distinction.

what to buy next: In his liner notes to Tom Rush: New Year/Live at Symphony Hall ♪♪♪♪ (Night Light Recordings, 1982, prod. B.R.V. Productions, Inc., Glenn Berger), Rush writes, "Symphony Hall, set up cabaret-style, is about as close to heaven-on-earth as a performer can get." With a stellar back-up band and a program of classic Rush material, including the six-and-a-half-minute "Urge for Going" finale, this concert album is a treasure. The Best of Tom Rush ♪♪♪♪ (Columbia, 1975, prod. Ed Freeman, Tom Rush, Mark Spector, David Briggs) contains highlights from Rush's early-'70s Columbia years, including "These Days," "Ladies Love Outlaws," and his intimate interpretation of Murray McLauchlan's haunting, coming-of-age "Child's Song," originally included on Rush's self-titled 1970 Columbia release.

the rest:
At the Unicorn ♪♪♪ (Night Light Recordings, 1962)
Blues, Songs, and Ballads ♪♪♪½ (Prestige, 1963/Fantasy, 1989)
Tom Rush ♪♪♪½ (Columbia, 1970)
Ladies Love Outlaws ♪♪♪ (Columbia, 1974)
Late Night Radio ♪♪♪½ (Night Light Recordings, 1984)

worth searching for: Released on his own label, Work in Progress ♪♪♪½ (Night Light Recordings, 1994, prod. Trevor Veitch, Glen Jordan) is a behind-the-scenes, limited edition, close-up of modern-day Rush, who describes this collection as "a kind of sketch book" of six songs in various stages of completion. It may not be slick, but it captures the singer in fine voice, tackling some pretty heavy issues, including survival and true friendship.

influences:
◀◀ Woody Guthrie, Eric Von Schmidt
▶▶ Jackson Browne, James Taylor, Garth Brooks

David Sokol

Russell Family

Formed 1972, in Pipers Gap, VA.

Roscoe Russell, Galax-style dulcimer, ukulele; Bonnie Russell, Galax-style dulcimer; Roy Russell, guitar.

The Russell Family from Pipers Gap, Virginia, performs traditional music featuring the Galax-style mountain dulcimer, so called because this particular instrument is associated primarily with the Galax, Virginia, area. The instrument has a double bottom (for volume), a tear-drop shape, and all four strings are commonly tuned in unison, either to D (to play in the keys of D and G) or to E (to play in the keys of E and A). The Russells have strong first-hand ties with the formidable Galax dulcimer tradition. Ruth Russell, Roscoe's wife and mother to Bonnie and Roy, is the daughter of Jacob and Lina Melton, both of whom were recorded in 1937 by the Library of Congress, and members of the Melton family have been among the leading makers and players of dulcimers in the Galax tradition for generations. Bonnie Russell, whose dulcimer playing is the highlight of their only album release, was only 13 years old at the time Mountain Dulcimer Galax Style was originally released in 1972, but she exhibited a mastery of her instrument rarely equaled by performers of any age. In these days of youthful "phenoms," it is not unusual for someone as young as Bonnie to be so accomplished a musician but, in the words of Richard Nevins, "it is quite uncommon for mountain music to be as impressively ardent and incisive as Bonnie's is."

what's available: Mountain Music Galax Style ♪♪♪♪ (County, 1972/1994, prod. Richard Nevins) is a marvelous recording spotlighting the vitality, drive, and sureness of Bonnie Russell's dulcimer playing. Roscoe Russell adds impressive backup on an unusual mountain instrument—the three-string ukulele—masterfully played in a three-finger style. This is a seminal recording of traditional dulcimer music that anyone who is interested in the genre should own.

influences:
◀◀ Jacob Melton, Raymond Melton
▶▶ Phyllis Gaskins

Neal Walters

Tom Russell

Born February 8, 1955, in Oklahoma City, OK.

Tom Russell may be best known for "Outbound Plane," which he wrote with Nanci Griffith and which became a Top 10 hit for country artist Suzy Bogguss in 1993. However, his story is more complex than that. After growing up in California, he began his career playing strip joints in Vancouver, British Columbia before moving to Austin, Texas and recording two albums with pianist Patricia Hardin. He then quit the business and moved to New York to write novels. Eventually he started playing again and later toured Europe as a cowboy singer in a Puerto Rican carnival. He recorded three albums in Norway before finally establishing himself in the States. Russell's songs are literate and literary: his best songs are narratives, often involving real people. "Blue Wing" is about a man who was once jailed with blues great Little Willie John; "William Faulkner in Hollywood" traces the novelist's disastrous run at writing screenplays to pay off Southern loan sharks; and "Haley's Comet" (written with Dave Alvin) traces the downward spiral of rock 'n' roll progenitor Bill Haley. Russell has also worked as a producer, and in 1995 he co-produced the best of the Merle Haggard tribute albums, Tulare Dust.

what to buy: Poor Man's Dream ♪♪♪½ (Philo, 1989, prod. Andrew Hardin, Charles Caldarola, Tom Russell, Jonas Fjeld) contains Russell's original version of "Outbound Plane" plus the narrative "Blue Wing" and two salt-of-the-earth anthems, "The

rusty & doug

Heart of the Working Man" and "Veteran's Day." And don't discount "Gallo Del Cielo," perhaps the best song ever written about a cock fight. Hurricane Season ♪♪♪½ (Philo, 1991, prod. Tom Russell, Andrew Hardin) cuts a wide cultural swath, name-checking Argentinean composer Astor Piazzolla and boxing legend Jack Johnson. The album also features Russell and Alvin's ode to Bill Haley and includes one of Russell's best non-narrative songs, "Beyond the Blues," co-written with Peter Case and Bob Neuwirth.

what to buy next: Cowboy Real ♪♪♪½ (Philo, 1992, prod. Tom Russell) is a charming collection of mostly original cowboy-style songs, and it includes two duets with folk great Ian Tyson, notably "Navajo Rug," which was the 1987 Country Music Association single of the year. To get a feel for Russell's full range as a writer and performer, check out one of two albums he has recorded with R&B wild man Barrence Whitfield: Hillbilly Voodoo ♪♪♪½ (East Side Digital, 1993, prod. Tom Russell) has a loose, roadhouse feel and a terrific song list that includes Bob Dylan's "Blind Willie McTell," Jesse Winchester's "Mississippi, You've Been on My Mind," and Jimmy Driftwood's "What Is the Color of the Soul of a Man?"

the rest:
Road to Bayamon ♪♪♪ (Rounder, 1987)
Box of Visions ♪♪♪½ (Philo, 1993)
(With Barrence Whitfield) Cowboy Mambo ♪♪♪ (East Side Digital, 1994)
Rose of the San Joaquin ♪♪♪½ (HighTone, 1995)
Songs of the West: Cowboy Collection ♪♪♪½ (HighTone, 1997)
The Long Way Around ♪♪♪½ (HighTone, 1997)

worth searching for: The import-only release The Early Years: 1975–79 ♪♪♪ (Dark Angel, 1994), which Russell recorded with Patricia Hardin, combines the duo's early efforts, Ring of Bone and Wax Museum, plus bonus tracks. Beyond St. Olav's Gate, 1979–92 ♪♪♪♪ (Round Tower, 1992) is an import-only best-of collection. Russell's debut as a solo artist, Heart on a Sleeve ♪♪♪ (Bear Family, 1984), has never been issued in the United States.

influences:
Merle Travis, Merle Haggard, Bob Dylan, Gram Parsons, William Faulkner

Nanci Griffith, Dave Alvin

Daniel Durchholz

Rusty & Doug

See: Doug Kershaw

Sonia Rutstein

See: disappear fear

Cathie Ryan

Born November 26, 1959, in Detroit, MI.

In recent years there has been a resurgent interest in female performers of Celtic music. No wonder; with voices as haunting and mystical as that of harpist Aine Minogue, Canadian songstress Loreena McKennitt, or the ever present Celtic/New Age performer Enya, the sound is stunningly beautiful and captivating. One of the latest upon the scene is Detroit native Cathie Ryan, formerly the lead singer of the renowned New York group Cherish the Ladies. Ryan's parents were from Kerry and Tipperary, Ireland, and Ryan gained much of her Irish musical influence from her grandmother and her own father, a singer at the Gaelic League and Irish American Club. They taught her the value of choosing the right songs. From age seven she learned the sean nós (pronounced "shan-nos") unaccompanied singing style and participated in All-Ireland competitions. Eventually Ryan moved to New York, where she studied under legendary sean nós singer Joe Heaney. She gained other influences in her music, however, from friends who were fans of country music, Motown, and traditional blues. Eventually, Cherish the Ladies' director and flutist Joannie Madden, who had heard Ryan sing at a party, asked Ryan to join the troupe. She spent seven years with Cherish the Ladies, singing and playing bodhrán (Irish drum) before moving on to a solo career with New Jersey–based Shanachie Records.

what's available: Ryan is nothing less than phenomenal on her self-titled debut Cathie Ryan ♪♪♪♪ (Shanachie, 1997, prod. Seamus Egan). She sings in a variety of Celtic styles, from traditional Gaelic to contemporary, her voice gracing melodies by Dougie Maclean, Dave Swarbrick, and Ralph McTell, as well as the steady, buoyant rhythms of her own "Eveline," inspired by James Joyce. Particularly good is the sadly affecting love poem by John Frazier and Sean Tyrrell, "The 12th of July (Lament for the Children)," which calls for unity among people: "Your badge my patriot brother /It's the everlasting green for me /And we for one another." Though the sean nós singing she is known for is present here, so are Ryan's American influences, the rhythms and styles that have shaped the rest of her career.

worth searching for: Recorded during her tenure with Cherish the Ladies, The Back Door ♪♪♪½ (Green Linnet, 1992, prod. Gabrielle Donohue, Ilene Ivers) is titled for Ryan's song, a tribute to Irish immigrants in the United States. Another effort worthy of a concerted search is the Ladies' Out and About ♪♪♪½ (Green Linnet, 1993, prod. Johnny Cunningham).

influences:

◀◀ Hank Williams, Emmylou Harris, Joe Heaney, Delores Keane, her grandparents

see also: Cherish the Ladies

Stephen Ide

Saffire—The Uppity Blues Women

Formed 1990, in Fredericksburg, VA.

Ann Rabson, vocals, piano, guitar; Gaye Adegbalola, vocals, guitar, harmonica, percussion; Earlene Lewis, vocals, bass (1990–91); Andra Faye McIntosh, vocals, fiddle, mandolin, guitar, bass (1994–present).

Saffire could easily have depended only on the gimmick of being a women's blues band. Fortunately, they're too talented for that. The group's central member is the wizardly Ann Rabson, whose deep voice and boogie-woogie piano sets the tone for the rest of the group. (Amazingly, Rabson didn't begin concentrating on piano playing until the 1980s.) Gaye Adegbalola and Andra Faye McIntosh play a variety of instruments and provide strong lead and harmony vocals.

what to buy: Saffire—The Uppity Blues Women ♪♪♪♪ (Alligator, 1990, prod. Saffire, Bruce Iglauer) is representative of the group's best work. Highlights include the group's best-known song, "Middle-Aged Blues Boogie," which won composer Adegbalola a W.C. Handy Award for Song of the Year.

what to buy next: Old, New, Borrowed, and Blue ♪♪♪♪ (Alligator, 1994, prod. Saffire, Bruce Iglauer) is worth a listen for new member McIntosh's bluegrassy instrumental touches and Rabson's excellent cover of "'T'aint Nobody's Business."

the rest:
Hot Flash ♪♪♪♪ (Alligator, 1991)
Broadcasting ♪♪♪½ (Alligator, 1992) Cleaning House ♪♪♪♪ (Alligator, 1996)

editor's choice
11 country/folk albums

Peter Rowan, Dust Bowl Children (Sugar Hill)
Terri Allard, Rough Lines (Reckless Abandon)
Barry & Holly Tashian, Harmony (Rounder)
Ian & Sylvia, Nashville (Vanguard)
Peter Kessler & Gail Fratar, Take Me Up (Rolling Robin)
Kevin Maul, Toolshed (Mandala Hand)
Laurie Lewis, Earth and Sky (Rounder)
Crowe & McLaughlin, Going Back (Rounder)
Bob Dylan, Nashville Skyline (Columbia)
Todd Phillips, In the Pines (Gourd)
Laurie Lewis & Tom Rozum, The Oak and the Laurel (Rounder) worth searching for: The Alligator Records Christmas Collection ♪♪♪♪♪ (Alligator, 1992) contains Saffire's rendition of Adegbalola's "One-Parent Christmas."

solo outings:
Ann Rabson:
Music Makin' Mama ♪♪♪♪½ (Alligator, 1997)

influences:

◀◀ Big Mama Thornton, Pinetop Perkins, Koko Taylor, Willie Dixon

▶▶ Satan & Adam

Pamela Murray Winters

Buffy Sainte-Marie

Born February 20, 1941, in Piapot Reserve, Saskatchewan, Canada.

The anti-war and pro–Native American anthems that Buffy Sainte-Marie sang during the 1960s has given way to soundtrack composing, Sesame Street appearances, and a doctorate of fine arts. Her fourteenth album, Coincidences and Likely Stories, reveals a continued strength in her songwriting and singing. Born to full-blooded Cree Indians on an Indian reservation in Saskatchewan, Canada, Sainte-Marie was orphaned and adopted as an infant, and raised in Massachusetts. Her interest in music was sparked while attending the University of Massachusetts. After graduating with a degree in Oriental philosophy, she moved to New York's Greenwich Village and became enraptured by the folk-music scene. Following a guest performance at an open mic at the Gaslight Cafe, she signed a management deal and began touring throughout the East Coast. Signed by Vanguard, Sainte-Marie recorded her first album, It's My Way, in 1964. Highlighted by her chilling survey of Native American struggles, "Now That the Buffalo's Gone," the album helped to spread the word of her potent songwriting. Sainte-Marie's greatest success came in 1966 when her song "Universal Soldier" was recorded by folk-pop singer Donovan and became an anthem of the growing anti-war movement. Sainte-Marie's songs have subsequently been covered by vocalists ranging from Neil Diamond to Glen Campbell. Topical songs represent only a portion of her repertoire. While her early albums took a sparsely produced, acoustic folk approach, she has increasingly broadened her musical palette. Fire and Fleet and Candlelight, her 1967 album, included one of the earliest interpretations of Joni Mitchell's "Circle Game," while I'm Gonna Be a Country Girl Again was recorded the following year in Nashville and reflected Sainte-Marie's love of country music. Beginning during the late 1970s, Sainte-Marie, who had settled in Hawaii, and her son, Dakota Starblanket Wolfchild, were regulars on Sesame Street, singing about a variety of social and political issues. Composer of soundtracks for such films as Starman, Jewel of the Nile, and 9 1/2 Weeks, she received an Oscar in 1982 as co-writer of "Up Where We Belong," the theme song of the film An Officer and a Gentleman, produced by her husband, Jack Nitzche.

buffy sainte-marie

what to buy: Sainte-Marie's debut album, It's My Way! ♪♪♪♪½ (Vanguard, 1964) remains one of folk music's most chilling recordings. Accompanying her tremolo-heavy alto on acoustic guitar and mouth bow, Sainte-Marie takes direct aim at U.S. society. The opening track, "Now That the Buffalo's Gone," is a haunting overview of Native American history, while "The Universal Soldier," later a hit for Donovan, became a theme song of the anti-war movement.

what to buy next: Recorded in Nashville, I'm Gonna Be a Country Girl Again ♪♪♪ (Vanguard, 1968, prod. Bob Lurie, Maynard Solomon) pays tribute to Sainte-Marie's country music influences. Accompanied by Nashville session players, including Grady Martin (electric guitar), Junior Huskey (bass), Floyd Cramer (piano), and Sonny Osborne (banjo), she shows her mastery of rural music and pre-dates Dylan's Nashville Skyline by a year.

the rest:
Many a Mile ♪♪♪ (Vanguard, 1965)
Little Wheel, Spin and Spin ♪♪½ (Vanguard, 1966)
Fire and Fleet and Candlelight ♪♪½ (Vanguard, 1967) Illuminations ♪♪½ (Vanguard, 1969)
The Best of Buffy Sainte-Marie, Volume I ♪♪♪ (Vanguard, 1970)
She Used to Be a Ballerina ♪♪½ (Vanguard, 1971)
Moonshot ♪♪½ (Vanguard, 1972)
Quiet Places ♪♪½ (Vanguard, 1973)
Buffy ♪♪½ (Vanguard, 1974)
Native North American Child (An Odyssey) ♪♪♪ (Vanguard, 1974)
Changing Woman ♪♪½ (Vanguard, 1975)
Sweet America ♪♪ (Vanguard, 1976)
Coincidence and Likely Stories ♪♪½ (Chrysalis, 1992) Up Where We Belong ♪♪♪ (EMI, 1996)

influences:
◀◀ Bob Dylan, Joan Baez
▶▶ Joni Mitchell, Donovan

Craig Harris

Salamander Crossing

Formed 1991, in Amherst, MA.

Andrew Kinsey, bass, vocals; Rani Arbo, fiddle, viola, vocals; Jeff Kelliher, guitar, harmonica, vocals; Tim Farnham, banjo.

This New England quartet infuses spirited and melodic originals and songs by artists ranging from Tim O'Brien to the Beatles with a strong respect for bluegrass tradition to evoke a folky back-porch friendliness. Its reverential but contemporary sound has made Salamander Crossing a favorite on the festival circuit. Dobro/banjo wizard Tony Furtado guests on Passion Train.

what to buy: Salamander Crossing ♪♪♪ (Signature Sounds, 1995, prod. Guy DeVito), the group's debut album, is an inviting collection of rootsy contemporary folk played with living-room informality. Passion Train ♪♪♪ (Signature Sounds, 1996, prod. Brooks Williams), the group's second album, reached the Top 10 of the Americana chart with its friendly mix of evocative original songs and nods to Bill Monroe and Bruce Springsteen.

the rest:
Bottleneck Dreams ♪♪♪♪ (Signature Sounds, 1998)

Saffire (Photo by Marc Norberg)

les sampou

influences:

Bill Monroe, Seldom Scene

Blue Highway

David Sokol

Les Sampou

Born November 4, 1961, in Norwalk, CT.

Les Sampou's music reflects blues, folk, and rock influences. Although she's been compared with Bonnie Raitt and Rory Block, Sampou has created her own unique eclectic sound. Raised in a suburb of Boston, she toyed with her father's guitar and taught herself to play harmonica as a youngster. Although she became a regular concert-goer, she didn't take music seriously until attending a show by Ellen McIlwaine at the Harvard Square folk music coffeehouse Passims. Inspired by McIlwaine's dynamic performance, she became a devoted guitar student of Boston-based acoustic blues master Paul Rishell. Sampou's debut album, Sweet Perfume, was hailed as one of the top acoustic albums of 1993. She continued to evolve the following year when she participated in Christine Lavin's songwriting retreat on Martha's Vineyard and was a finalist in the Boston Acoustic Underground Competition. In addition to being named New Folk Artist of the Year by radio station WUMB-FM in Boston, she won the prestigious New Folk award at the Kerrville Festival in Texas. Sampou has continued to evolve with her second album, Fall from Grace.

what to buy: With her second album, Fall from Grace ♪♪♪ (Flying Fish, 1996, prod. Mason Daring), Sampou took a further step as a songwriter with all original material. Although less blues-oriented than Sweet Perfume, the album showed that she'd lost none of the gutsy fire of her earlier work. Accompanied by former Muddy Waters harmonica player Jerry Portnoy and guitarist Duke Levine, Sampou emerged as a powerful songsmith. She offers a sensitive view at life in a trailer park ("Holy Land") and provides insightful looks at difficult relationships in "The Things I Should've Said," "Weather Vane," and "I Already Know." While the emphasis is on folk-rooted songs, the blues remained an important ingredient of Sampou's repertoire. "Bulls-Eye" is a hard-rocking blues tune featuring Portnoy on harmonica.

what to buy next: Sampou's debut album, Sweet Perfume ♪♪♪ (MoNando, 1993, prod. Les Sampou, Paul Caruso), marked her as a promising newcomer. With instrumental support by such stellar players as Johnny Cunningham (fiddle), James Montgomery (harmonica), and Tim Archibald (bass), she displayed her songwriting skills, with such tunes as "Chinatown" and the title track, and showed her interpretative talents with soulful renditions of Robert Johnson's "Traveling Blues" and Bessie Smith's "It Won't Be You."

influences:

Ellen McIlwaine, Bonnie Raitt, Rory Block, Paul Rishell

Anni Clark, Maria Sangiolo, Barbara Kessler

Craig Harris

Tommy Sands

Born in Rostrevor, Co. Down, Ireland.

Tommy Sands is a singer, a guitarist, and one of Ireland's truly great songwriters. His songs deal most often with questions of reconciliation, personal and political, and it's no surprise; the small farm in war-torn Northern Ireland where he grew up with his parents and six siblings was often the locus where Catholics and Protestants got together in friendly, intimate circumstances for music, dancing, and fun. His father and six uncles all played the fiddle, his mother played the accordion, and his six aunts lilted for dances, so there was never an absence of music. His first recollections of tunes and songs are from a time when he was too young to participate; he would hear the music of the session coming in under the bedroom door. Catholics and Protestants making music together demonstrated to the young Sands children that the lines drawn between us by political allegiance are artificial, and that they can be transcended by ordinary people.

The sessions also gave Sands his start as a musician and songwriter. After taking up the fiddle for a while, he became more interested in singing, and eventually in songwriting, which he initially saw as a direct outgrowth of traditional music, marking a continuity of traditional creativity. Sands left the farm to go to college, where he studied philosophy and theology. He was nearing home on his final return from university, unsure of his future, wondering if he'd end up working in the ditches like the men he passed along the way, when a black taxi filled with his siblings passed him going the other way. It stopped, and his brother Colum rolled the window down. "We're going to play a concert," he said. "We've got your guitar in the back of the car." Tommy hopped in the taxi, and became a professional musician. The Sands Family, composed of Tommy, Eugene, Ben, Colum, and Ann Sands, all siblings, became one of the great groups of the 1960s and 1970s

Irish folk revival. Tommy remembers feeling the influence of the Clancy Brothers, as well as that of American folk music, people like Pete Seeger and Joan Baez. A first-place award in a national ballad-group contest won them a concert trip to New York City in 1970; eventually they were playing Carnegie Hall. But the political troubles at home made the family want to stay closer to Ireland, so most of their touring over the years was in Europe. During one of those tours, in 1975, tragedy struck the family. Their youngest brother, Eugene (or Dino, as he was known), was killed in an auto accident going from gig to gig. After that, the family's professional life underwent some major changes. Ann didn't have the heart to tour Germany anymore, so any family tours there were restricted to the three brothers, Ben, Colum, and Tommy. Meanwhile, Tommy had started his weekly radio program, which is now well into its second decade. The Sands Family, after 14 albums and numerous tours, was reunited as a professional group only once a year for the summer music festivals in Ireland. And Tommy started to tour the world on his own. This situation, for the most part, prevails to this day. Sands can often be seen in the United States, touring on his own, occasionally with the Green Fields of America, with Mick Moloney, or with accordion player Mairtin O'Connor.

what to buy: Singing of the Times ♪♪♪♪♪ (Green Linnet, 1989, prod. Colum Sands) features two of Tommy's best-known political songs, "There Were Roses" and "Daughters and Sons." The first of these is probably his most powerful song of all; it recalls a sad event in Sands's youth when two of his friends, a Catholic and a Protestant, were murdered in the Northern Irish "troubles." Another nice touch is the inclusion of some old Sands Family tracks, two of which feature the late Dino Sands. Backing musicians, in addition to the Sands family, include Dónal Lunny (bouzouki), Arty McGlynn (guitar), Nollaig Casey (fiddle), and Desi Wilkinson (flute).

what to buy next: Beyond the Shadows ♪♪♪♪ (Green Linnet, 1992, prod. Tommy Sands, Colum Sands, Kieran Goss) has several challenging songs on it. "1999" is a call for peace in Northern Ireland, as urgent today after the "cease-fire" as it was in 1992. "Dresden" explores the feelings of people who have suffered under oppression their whole lives. From the Nazis to the allied bombardment to occupation to the Iron Curtain, and finally to the toppling of the Berlin wall, the song follows the story of one small family. Like "There Were Roses," both are quiet and sad songs that don't preach. Beyond the Shadows also features Sands's rollicking emigration ballad, "When the Boys Come Rolling Home," and his piece about Sean O'Casey, "Shadow of O'Casey." Guests this time include Steve Cooney (guitar, bass, keyboards), Martin O'Connor (button accordion), and Tao Seeger (voice and percussion). Sands's third album, The Heart's a Wonder ♪♪♪♪ (Green Linnet, 1995, prod. Tommy Sands), also explores these themes. Like everyone in Northern Ireland, he views the recent cease-fires as a reason to hope for the future. He knows, however, that a solution will only be reached by hard work. "No matter what the eventual solution is to be," he says, "ordinary people have to learn to live together." To that end, he has written "The Music of Healing," his most celebrated song since "There Were Roses." It is a plea for understanding, for love, and for peace. In its refrain, "sing me the music of healing," it crystallizes the prayers of many Irish people. Another of his songs from the album, "The Age of Uncertainty," makes it clear how far we still have to go to get back to simpler days of peace, like the peace, however fleeting, that the Sands family enjoyed as children: "And someone, surely somewhere, somehow can recall the time/ When people didn't lock their doors to strangers in the night time /And we were neighbor's children then and dancers danced in time /And we couldn't wait for twelve o'clock till our parents said goodnight." worth searching for: Apart from Sands's albums, there are currently no CDs by the Sands Family available in the United States. However, keep a lookout in the used record bins; the Sands family recorded 14 albums for companies in Ireland and Germany, and any of them is a collector's item today.

influences:

◀◀ Pete Seeger, Joan Baez, the Clancy Brothers & Tommy Makem, the Sands Family

▶▶ Colm Sands, Ben Sands, Sean Tyrrel

Steve Winick

Maria Sangiolo

Born December 10, 1963, in Dorchester, MA.

Soprano-voiced singer-songwriter Maria Sangiolo explores issues of the heart through sensitive, acoustic melodies. Whether she's singing a romantic song or a political ballad, she expresses a direct and honest vision. The niece of an opera singer, Sangiolo didn't write an original song until after she had graduated from Simmons College in Boston with a degree in communications in 1988. Sharpening her singer-songwriter skills at open mics, she first attracted attention for her deeply personal lyricism and emotional vocals. While the first of two self-produced albums, Hard Words, helped spread the word, the second, Eyes of the Heart, produced by singer-songwriter Brooks Williams, enabled her to become a nationally touring artist. Sangiolo's third album, Follow Your Own Road, was co-produced by multi-instrumentalist John Curtis of the Pousette-Dart Band.

what to buy: Sangiolo's second album, Eyes of the World ♪♪♪♪ (Raging River, 1993, prod. Brooks Williams), marked her as an artist deserving further attention. With her delicate finger-style acoustic guitar and warm vocals accompanied by Jennifer Hirsch (acoustic bass), Susan Wybiral (percussion), and Ron Curcio (piano and backing vocals), Sangiolo allows her poetic words to glide with emotion. Guest musicians include Orrin Star (mandolin) and Chris Smither (guitar).

what to buy next: Sangiolo's first nationally released album, Follow Your Own Road ♪♪♪♪ (Signature Sounds, 1997, prod. Maria Sangiolo, John Curtis), follows the emotional approach of its self-produced predecessor. Backed by an all-star band that includes John Sands (percussion), Richard Gates and Jen Hersh (bass), Jim Henry (acoustic guitar), Matt Leavenworth (fiddle), Gideon Freudmann (cello), and co-producer Curtis (mandolin and guitar), Sangiolo leads the listener on an sensitive journey through her emotions.

the rest:
Hard Words ♪♪♪ (Raging River, 1992)

influences:
◀◀ Joan Baez, Judy Collins, Joni Mitchell, Carolyn Hester

▶▶ Brooks Williams, Greg Greenway, Ellis Paul

Craig Harris

Maggie Sansone

Born in Miami, FL.

Maggie Sansone brings a unique beauty and vision to the ancient music of the Celts. As a musician, she has been a major force in the developing popularity of the hammered dulcimer in Celtic music, both through her recordings and also through her performances at Celtic, Renaissance, and folk festivals. As a teacher, she created an innovative music book series for the hammered dulcimer and has published several music books through Mel Bay Publications. As an independent label executive, she owns and operates Maggie's Music in her adopted home town of Annapolis, Maryland. The label has released nearly 25 albums for worldwide distribution, most focusing on the music of the Celts. The label has received four "Wammie" Record Label of the Year awards from the Washington (D.C.) Area Musicians Association. Sansone's own albums have also received Indie awards from the Association for Independent Music (AFIM). She has been featured on CBS-TV's Sunday Morning and National Public Radio's All Things Considered, Performance Today, and Thistle and Shamrock. Her albums ring with a Renaissance spirit, a fusion of ancient sounds and modern sensibility, fueled by rich arrangements and innovative use of new and old instruments.

what to buy: On A Scottish Christmas ♪♪♪♪♪ (Maggie's Music, 1996, prod. Charlie Pilzer), Sansone teams up with Scottish fiddler Bonnie Rideout and guitarist Al Petteway for one of the best seasonal albums ever. Featuring pipes, bells, hammered dulcimer, fiddle, and cello, it lifts you away to castle banquet halls with roaring fires and to desolate snow-filled forests, in a celebration of Christmas, Hogmanay, and the New Year. On Ancient Noels ♪♪♪♪ (Maggie's Music, 1993, prod. Charlie Pilzer), Sansone teams with Ensemble Galilei, Rideout, percussionist Ben Harms, and guitarist and citternist Zan McLeod to deliver an unusual and special holiday recording that you'll want to have available all year long. Renaissance rhythms and haunting medieval hymns bring to life images of desert landscapes, stone monasteries, and the origins of Christmas.

what to buy next: Dance upon the Shore ♪♪♪♪ (Maggie's Music, 1994, prod. Charlie Pilzer) finds Sansone in a jazzy crossover into what she calls a "cool Celtic voyage to Ireland, Scotland, Brittany, and the Isle of Man." It features her hammered dulcimer but also adds Bob Read's soprano saxophone, clarinet, and alto flute, Steve Bloom's excellent percussion, and the stringed wizardry of both Robin Bullock and Petteway to the mix.

the rest:
Sounds of the Season ♪♪♪♪ (Maggie's Music, 1988)
Traditions ♪♪♪½ (Maggie's Music, 1989)
Mist and Stone ♪♪♪♪ (Maggie's Music, 1990)
Sounds of the Season II ♪♪♪♪ (Maggie's Music, 1991) (With Sue Richards, Bonnie Rideout, and Ensemble Galilei) Music in the Great Hall ♪♪♪½ (Maggie's Music, 1992)

influences:
◀◀ Bonnie Rideout, Malcolm Dalglish

▶▶ Ceoltoiri, Karen Ashbrook

see also: Bonnie Rideout, Al Petteway

Neal Walters

Savoy-Doucet Cajun Band

Formed 1978, in Lafayette, LA.

Marc Savoy, accordion, vocals; Ann Savoy, guitar, vocals; Michael Doucet, fiddle, vocals.

This occasional band is dedicated to the perpetuation of traditional Cajun music; their music is rooted in the sound of the Gulf Coast Cajun culture. They record and tour whenever member Michael Doucet's busy schedule (he is the leader of the popular progressive Cajun band Beausoleil) allows. Although well known for his inventive fiddle forays with Beausoleil, Doucet's playing with Savoy-Doucet is firmly within the tradition; he is conversant with and mindful of the work of his fiddling forebears at all times. He has been particularly influenced by Dennis McGee and two great Creole fiddlers, Canray Fontenot and Amédée Ardoin. Marc Savoy is probably the most accomplished accordionist in traditional Cajun styles and is also well known as an accordion builder. His wife Ann, born in St. Louis and raised in Virginia, is a Cajun by marriage and has embraced the musical traditions of the Cajun culture enthusiastically. She is a forceful rhythm guitarist and singer. Their instrumental work is exemplary, and they are fine singers as well.

what to buy: Home Music with Spirits ♪♪♪♪½ (Arhoolie, 1992, prod. Chris Strachwitz) contains classic waltzes, two-steps, stomps, and blues from the Cajun repertoire. It also includes a wonderful version of the "Cajun national anthem," "Jolie Blonde." Two-Step d' Amédée ♪♪♪♪½ (Arhoolie, 1988, prod. Chris Strachwitz, Savoy-Doucet Cajun Band) is a mix of live and studio cuts, just as good as Home Music with Spirits with the added excitement of seven live cuts. An all-live set from three dances, Live! At the Dance ♪♪♪♪½ (Arhoolie, 1994, prod. Chris Strachwitz) effectively captures the palpable excitement of traditional Cajun dance music.

what to buy next: On Now and Then ♪♪♪♪ (Arhoolie, 1996, prod. Scott Ardoin), Ken Smith, another outstanding fiddler, less adventurous, perhaps, and more melodic than Doucet, sits in on another outstanding bunch of Cajun classics with the Savoys.

worth searching for: Cajun Jam Session ♪♪♪½ (Arhoolie, 1989, prod. Chris Strachwitz) features Doucet along with guitarist Alan Senauke and accordionist Danny Poullard in an impromptu recording of a live radio show from 1983. It's an enjoyable, if occasionally ragged, set of traditional Cajun music.

solo outings:
Michael Doucet:
Beau Solo ♪♪♪♪ (Arhoolie, 1989)

Marc Savoy:
(With Dewey Balfa and D.L. Menard) Under a Green Oak Tree ♪♪♪♪½ (Arhoolie, 1977)
(With Wallace Read) Cajun House Party ♪♪♪½ (Arhoolie, 1979) Oh, What a Night ♪♪♪♪ (Arhoolie, 1981)

influences:

◀◀ Iry LeJeune, Harry Choates, Cleoma Falcon, Canray Fontenot, Amédée Ardoin, Dewey Balfa, Nathan Abshire, Dennis McGee

▶▶ Steve Riley, Balfa Toujours, California Cajun Orchestra

Randy Pitts

The Saw Doctors

Formed 1986, in Tuam, Co. Galway, Ireland.

Leo Moran, guitar, vocals; Davy Carton, vocals, guitar; Pearse Doherty, bass, vocals, whistle; John Donnelly, drums, vocals. Past members include John "Turps" Burke, vocals, mandolin, Hammond organ, bodhrán, acoustic guitar, electric guitar, tambourine, mandocello, harmonica, fiddle; Padraig Stevens, drums; Anthony Thistlethwaite, guitar, saxophone; Mary O'Connor.

The Saw Doctors are an excellent rock 'n' roll group whose music is based as much on their rural Irish roots as on great rock music from all over. Influenced by a diverse array of people, including the Undertones, Bruce Springsteen, Bob Dylan, and Jimi Hendrix, the Saw Doctors locate their direct roots in the Tuam punk band Blaze X, which featured soon-to-be Saw Doctor Davy Carton. Several years after Blaze X broke up, Carton's friends Leo Moran and Mary O'Connor drafted him into a band that was playing some of his old Blaze X material. Soon, they christened themselves the Saw Doctors. The lineup had already changed several times by the time they began recording, but the focus remained the same: folk/pop/rock songs that dealt with issues of concern to people who lived real lives in rural Ireland. A touch of Irish traditional music lightens their sound on occasion, and the influence of the Irish song tradition can be heard in their songwriting.

what to buy: The group's Irish roots are most apparent on their second disc, All the Way from Tuam ♪♪♪♪♪ (Shamtown, 1992, prod. Phil Tennant). The title track and the album opener are both modeled on traditional Irish songs extolling the virtues of a favorite place. "All the Way from Tuam" tells of the local characters and events of the band's hometown, in the rich dialect of Tuam, which is far more impenetrable than that of Galway city:

"They'd be callin' us smokies, the lads from the city/But I didn't care what they called me/Just plank it in lively across for the noodle, sham/His jills with the KD's a Gomey." The most energetic song on the album is "Broke My Heart," the tale of a missed opportunity on the soccer field that ruins a young man's outlook as surely as a failed romance. It also reveals a great deal about life in rural Ireland and what matters to people there in a concrete and direct way that is refreshing. Like the words, the music on the disc is inflected by the Irish tradition; several songs are built on riffs that are really reels. One of these, "Hay Wrap," which became a number one single in Ireland, contains a blazing display of mandolin and guitar work for fans of electrified Irish dance music, while the other, "Never Mind the Strangers," is more laid back. This album may be the Saw Doctors' most complete album, with only a few missteps among its songs.

what to buy next: If This Is Rock & Roll, I Want My Old Job Back ♪♪♪♪ (Shamtown, 1991, prod. Phil Tennant, Mike Scott) is a set of finely crafted, poppy, rock 'n' roll songs with a bit of Irish flavor. The best are the ones that will get you dancing uncontrollably. "I Useta Lover," the group's smashing hit single, is one of these, a delightful rave-up mixing sex and religion in dangerous ways: "I useta see her up the chapel when she went to Sunday Mass/And when she'd go up to receive I'd kneel down there and watch her pass/The glory of her ass . . ." Similarly, "Presentation Boarder" has to do with a nubile young boarding school student in the care of the presentation order of nuns. And, perhaps most scandalous of all, "That's What She Said Last Night" is a barroom conversation with a cad who kisses and tells. All of these have catchy choruses and happy beats. Other highlights are the wistful "N 17," about missing the road that leads home, and "Why Do I Always Want You," a very intense love song. "Red Cortina," a sweet song about first love, expresses the opinion that "first love stays with you forever." Indeed, and so will this album. Same Oul' Town ♪♪♪♪ (Shamtown, 1996, prod. Phil Tennant, Jim Higgins, Kenny Ralph, Saw Doctors) shows off the Saw Doctors in a mellower mood. In addition to a few songs that show Tuam's rough edges a bit, it includes songs about controversial and painful issues; "Every Day," which is overtly about women making a "joyless journey to Britain," is actually about abortion, which is illegal in Ireland and therefore the cause of many such boat trips. Cleverly, the band avoids overt reference to abortion. They also avoid moralizing about the issue, recommending only that such forlorn travelers be welcomed home with love. Most of the other songs are in this more reflective mood, though there are exceptions: "I Want You More," for example, features a Ramones-like chorus reminiscent of "I Useta Lover," classic country-rock style low guitar, and silly lyrics like "I want you more than the stars in the sky, a mountain bike or a GTI." In short, Same Oul' Town has all the elements that make their other albums such classics, but in slightly different proportions that make it a bit less over-the-top, a bit richer, and just a touch more serious.

influences:
◀◀ The Undertones, Blaze X, the Waterboys

Steve Winick

Scartaglen

See: Connie Dover

Claudia Schmidt

Born early 1950s, in MI.

Multi-instrumentalist and raspy-voiced vocalist Claudia Schmidt sets poetic lyricism and heartfelt storytelling to acoustic melodies. A frequent guest on Garrison Keillor's National Public Radio show, A Prairie Home Companion, the gap-toothed songstress weaves a unique musical tapestry of traditional folk, jazz, Tin Pan Alley, blues, protest songs, and Quaker hymnal influences. Schmidt, who's released seven solo albums and two albums with folksinger Sally Rogers, became smitten with music after moving to Chicago in 1974 to take a job as a secretary and officer manager. Discovering a thriving acoustic music scene, she taught herself to play dulcimer, 12-string guitar, and the deluxe pianolin, a 52-string, zither-like instrument that's plucked or strummed with the left hand and bowed with the right. Giving notice at her day job, she turned her attention to a musical career. Within five years, she had signed with Flying Fish and had released her debut solo album. Although she moved for a while to Wisconsin and Minnesota before settling with her husband, Bill Pallardino, on Beaver Island on Lake Michigan, Schmidt continued to establish herself as an leading acoustic artist. In 1992 her original score, composed with noted director Frank Galati, for a new translation of Bertold Brecht's The Good Person of Setzuan received a prestigious Jefferson award for outstanding achievement in Chicago-area theater. Since 1995 most of her attention has been focused on a bed and breakfast that she and her husband operate at an old log farmhouse that they restored.

what to buy: Schmidt's most recent album, It Looks Fine from Here ♪♪♪ (Red House, 1994, prod. Claudia Schmidt), showcases her romantic lyricism in an intimate, acoustic, setting. Accompanying herself on 12-string guitar and mountain dulcimer and joined by Dean McGraw (six-string guitar) and percussionist Marc Anderson, Schmidt sings of winter love, quiet hills, and stars at night.

what to buy next: With Essential Tension ♪♪♪ (Red House, 1991, prod. Eric Bain Peltoniemi), Schmidt sets her songs to spirited arrangements featuring piano, keyboards, guitar, bass, drums, percussion, fiddle, harp, and a three-piece horn section.

the rest:
Claudia Schmidt ♪♪ (Flying Fish, 1979)
Midwestern Heart ♪♪½ (Flying Fish, 1981)
New Goodbyes, Old Helloes ♪♪½ (Flying Fish, 1983)
Out of the Dark ♪♪ (Flying Fish, 1985)
(With Sally Rogers) Closing the Distance ♪♪½ (Flying Fish, 1987)
Big Earful ♪♪♪ (Red House, 1987)
(With Sally Rogers) While We Live ♪♪½ (Red House, 1992)

influences:
Bob Gibson, Steve Goodman, Jean Ritchie

Sally Rogers, Anne Hills

see also: Sally Rogers

Craig Harris

David Schnaufer

Born c. 1953, in Hearne, TX.

By virtue of talent and location, David Schnaufer has become one of the best-known mountain dulcimer players of his time. A Nashville resident, Schnaufer is the dulcimer player of choice for country music, and he has played on albums by Kathy Mattea, the Judds, Mark O'Connor, and others. Schnaufer, originally a harmonica player, was first drawn to the dulcimer after seeing one in a music shop, but he soon became proficient enough on the instrument to win the Walnut Valley National Mountain Dulcimer Championship in 1976. He performed and recorded with West Virginia dulcimer player Alan Freeman, Karen McKay, Fred Meyer, and Bonnie Carol before moving to Nashville in 1985. There, in addition to his solo and session work, he played with the country-rock group the Cactus Brothers during the late '80s and early '90s. He continues to live and perform in Nashville, where he also teaches dulcimer. His students have included Cyndi Lauper, with whom Schnaufer recorded on her Sisters of Avalon album.

what to buy: Schnaufer recorded two cassettes, Dulcimer Player and Dulcimer Deluxe, during the late '80s and put the bulk of them on Dulcimer Player Deluxe ♪♪♪½ (SFL, 1989, prod. John Lomax III, Mark Miller, Melanie Wells), a 73-minute, 26-track CD with tunes ranging from "Wildwood Flower" and "Wings of a Dove" to "Over the Rainbow" and the Beatles' "Here Comes the Sun." Schnaufer has a canny knack for blending the commercial with the traditional, and his follow-up, Dulcimer Sessions ♪♪♪♪ (SFL, 1992, prod. John Lomax III, Mark Miller, David Schnaufer, Melanie Wells), features guests ranging from guitarists Mark Knopfler and Albert Lee to Tejano star Santiago Jimenez, and material ranging from "Down Yonder" and "Blackberry Blossom" to the Everly Brothers' "All I Have to Do Is Dream" and Ben E. King's "Spanish Harlem."

the rest:
(With the Cactus Brothers) The Cactus Brothers ♪♪♪ (Liberty, 1993) (With the Cactus Brothers) 24 Hrs., 7 Days a Week ♪♪♪ (Capitol, 1995) worth searching for: Schnaufer has a 90-minute instructional video called Learning Mountain Dulcimer (HMS, 1996).

influences:
Emmylou Harris, Gram Parsons, Jean Simmons Jennings, Bonnie Russell

Steve Siefert, Lee Rowe, Lorraine Lee Hammond

Brian Mansfield

Steve Schneider

Born August 20, 1951, in New York, NY.

Innovative and talented New York City musician Steve Schneider has played hammered dulcimer on movie soundtracks, television, and radio and was the first dulcimist to play in Broadway's The Secret Garden from 1991 to 1993. Schneider trained as a classical pianist and he combines that precision with expressiveness and creativity in his hammered dulcimer and accordion music. He is a frequent performer and teacher at festivals, sharing his expertise and encouraging dulcimists across the country. Schneider's musical journeys have introduced him to many talented musicians, many of whom have collaborated with him on various recordings, such as Paul Oortz, a native of Belgium and a master of classical and steel string guitars, and Dave Neiman, a hammered dulcimer player from Cambridge, Massachusetts.

what to buy: Momentum ♪♪♪♪½ (Salient MusicWorks, 1997, prod. Steve Schneider, Paul Oorts) is a stunning release from Schneider and Paul Oorts, and it features a heaping helping of Schneider's tasteful and innovative hammered dulcimer playing (and arranging). Hearing either of these two musicians alone is a treat; hearing them together is about as good as it gets. Their musical interests range from the samba sounds of Brazil to the music of the Beatles, and they don't just play the tunes, they make them their own. They get excellent help from Sprocket J. Royer (bass), Semyon Fridman (cello), Rosie Rounds (flute), Joyce Anderson (violin), and Vanderlei Periera (percussion).

what to buy next: Tuesday's Child ♪♪♪♪ (Salient MusicWorks, 1991, prod. Abby Newton) is Schneider's first recording and features six original compositions interspersed among such traditional tunes as "Webb's Hornpipe," a Welsh hornpipe, "Farewell Marion/La Petite Soeur," an English and French tune, and "Zoierli/Landerli," where he assimilates a Swiss Appenzeller yodel and waltz on the hammered dulcimer and accordion. His original pieces flow nicely with this collection and include "The Shepherdess" and "When Peanuts Are Emeralds." Several excellent musicians assist on this recording, including John Kirk (violin), Christa Patton (flute, recorder, pennywhistle, guitar, bodhrán), and Selma Kaplan (piano). The Door to Christmas ♪♪♪♪ (Water Lion Music, 1993, prod. Steve Schneider, Dave Neiman) features the hammered dulcimer playing of Schneider and Dave Neiman, but Schneider's exceptional piano playing is highlighted throughout. They are assisted by Brian Koonin (guitars, bass), Semyon Fridman (cello), Roy Sansom and Roxanne Layton (recorders), and Susan Worland (violin). There are many familiar Christmas melodies, like "Angels We Have Heard on High," with two Schneider originals, "The Eagle King's Carol" and "The Door to Christmas." All of Schneider's recordings are available from Salient MusicWorks, P.O. Box 34, Congers, NY 10920, including A Place Just Right, a recording with Simple Gifts.

influences:

◀◀ Victor Borge, Elmer Bernstein, the Beatles, the Incredible String Band, Keith Jarrett, Rafael Rabello, Phil Cunningham, Bill Evans, Bill Spence

▶▶ Walt Michael, Malcolm Dalglish see also: Simple Gifts

Heidi Cerrigione

Helen Schneyer

Born January 10, 1921, in New York, NY.

Helen Schneyer is one of the living treasures of American traditional music. She began singing professionally a half-century ago with Pete Seeger, Woody Guthrie, and others at New York hootenannies. Since then, she's sung at the White House for Franklin and Eleanor Roosevelt, performed on A Prairie Home Companion, and helped found the Folklore Society of Greater Washington (D.C.). She has also lectured on music at colleges and universities and collected songs from African American communities in upstate New York, Maryland, and Virginia. Her rough-hewn contralto is a perfect storytelling vehicle and is surprisingly suited to spirituals, as she proves on "Soon One Morning" on Somber, Sacred, and Silly. Schneyer now lives in Vermont.

what's available: Somber, Sacred & Silly ♪♪♪♪♪ (Straight Arrow, 1992, prod. Michael Billingsley, Helen Schneyer) is an excellent collection of traditional and old-timey songs, recorded in a Vermont meeting house with piano, cello, and backing vocals, but often just with Schneyer's own room-stilling voice.

the rest:

Ballads, Broadsides, and Hymns ♪♪♪♪ (Folk-Legacy, 1974)
On the Hallelujah Line ♪♪♪♪½ (Folk-Legacy, 1981)

influences:

◀◀ Woody Guthrie, Pete Seeger, Alan Lomax

▶▶ Norma Waterson, Marianne Faithfull, Bob Franke

Pamela Murray Winters

Schooner Fare

Formed 1975, in Portland, ME.

Chuck Romanoff, vocals, 12-string guitar, four-string banjo; Steve Romanoff, vocals, six-string and 12-string guitars, four-string banjo; Tom Rowe, vocals, electric bass, pennywhistle.

Schooner Fare combines the maritime tradition of sea chanteys with the energetic, congregation-like harmonies of the Kingston Trio, Chad Mitchell Trio, and the Clancy Brothers. Over the past two decades, the trio has effectively interwoven interpretations of folk classics, including "Wild Mountain Thyme" and "Si Bheag Si Mhor," with the reworking of such pop tunes as Harry Belafonte's "Jamaica Farewell" and "Banana Boat Song" and Ray Charles's "Hit the Road Jack," tradition-rooted originals, including a memorable tribute to whales, "Leviathan," and a celebration of their home town, "Portland Town." The band originated in 1975 during an impromptu backstage jamming session by brothers Chuck and Steve Romanoff, who were members of a short-lived folk group, and Tom Rowe. Initially conceived as a brother duet, the group expanded when Rowe left the band he was with and became a full-time member. Securing a weekly gig at the Holy Mackerel in Portland and performing in pubs and folk music coffeehouses on the East Coast, Schooner Fare developed a unique musical approach. Although the band's earliest albums—Day of the Clipper and Closer to the Wind—established it as a leading purveyor of maritime music, Schooner Fare has continued to expand its musical vocabulary. The group's 1987 album, Home for the Holidays, features traditional carols and seasonal songs sung in Hebrew, French, German, and Spanish, while its 1997 recording, KidSongs, is aimed at the youngest members of their audience. The group re-recorded many of its best-known tunes with a small orchestra conducted by Michael Braz for their 1989 release, Classic. Their songwriting skills are reflected on their 1993 album, For the Times, which includes six original tunes, including the hilarious ditty "Too Funky for the Folkies (But Too Folky for the Times)."

what to buy: Schooner Fare celebrated its tenth anniversary with the live The First 10 Years ♪♪♪♪ (Outer Green, 1986, prod. Ken Ford). A two-LP set, recorded at the Birchmere in Alexandria, Virginia, the collection shows the diversity of the trio's repertoire. In addition to traditional sea-related tunes, such as "Barrett's Privateers," "The Banks of Sicily," and "Cape St. Mary's," the group adapts their boisterous vocal harmonies to pop songs, including a medley of songs by the Seekers, "Will You Still Love Me Tomorrow" by Carole King and Gerry Goffin, and "Ease on down the Road" from the musical The Wiz.

what to buy next: The traditional songs that made up Schooner Fare's initial repertoire are resurrected on Finnegan's Wake ♪♪♪½ (Outer Green, 1995). While many of the tunes are standards of traditional folk music, including "Nancy Whiskey," "Moonshiner," "The Wild Colonial Boy," and "Drunken Sailor," the trio's enthusiasm brings a fresh approach to their material.

the rest:

Day of the Clipper ♪♪½ (Outer Green, 1978)
Closer to the Wind ♪♪½ (Outer Green, 1981)
Live! ♪♪♪ (Outer Green, 1983)
We the People ♪♪♪½ (Outer Green, 1985)
Home for the Holidays ♪♪♪½ (Outer Green, 1987)
Classic ♪♪♪ (Outer Green, 1989)
Signs of Home ♪♪ (Outer Green, 1990)
For the Times ♪♪½ (Outer Green, 1993) KidSongs ♪♪♪ (Outer Green, 1997)

influences:

Pete Seeger, the Weavers, the Kingston Trio, the Chad Mitchell Trio, the Limeliters

Gordon Bok, Cormac McCarthy, Devonsquare

Craig Harris

Tracy Schwarz /Tracy Schwarz Cajun Trio

Born September 13, 1938, in New York, NY.

New York City–born and raised, Tracy Schwarz began working with the New Lost City Ramblers as a replacement for Tom Paley in 1962, and shortly thereafter met a young Dewey Balfa at the Newport Folk Festival. The two men hit it off and so began a long friendship. Schwarz's development as a Cajun fiddler and accordionist is chronicled on individual tracks of various New Lost City Ramblers albums. His first collaboration with Balfa was the Folkways LP How to Play Cajun Fiddle, released in 1976. The two worked together at many festivals and workshops. You can hear the Balfa family influence in the plain lonesome quality of Schwarz's music, along with some hint of the Appalachian music mined by the New Lost City Ramblers.

what to buy: On Mes Amis! ♪♪♪♪ (Swallow, 1996, prod. Lee Blackwell, Tracy Schwarz, Chuck Eller, Matt Haney), what you get is consistent quality. Schwarz is never going to overwhelm you with emotions like Michael Doucet or leap through syncopated modulation like Steve Riley; instead you'll get something that's steady and dignified.

what to buy next: Les Quatre Vieux Garçons ♪♪♪♪ (Folkways, 1984, prod. Quatre Vieux Garçons) brings together Tracy and Peter Schwarz with Dewey and Tony Balfa to play some old favorites. Peter had been studying with Dewey and the project gave them a chance to record their fiddle interplay. Papa Tracy adds accordion and fiddle to the mix. Tony is Rodney Balfa's son and plays guitar in the same driving percussive way.

the rest:

(With Dewey Balfa) How to Play Cajun Fiddle ♪♪♪½ (Folkways, 1976) (cassette only) Louisiana and You ♪♪♪ (Marimac, 1990) (cassette only) Tracy Schwarz Cajun Trio ♪♪♪½ (Swallow, 1993)

worth searching for: Souvenirs ♪♪♪♪½ (Swallow, 1985, prod. Tracy Schwarz) was made under Dewey Balfa's name, but features the same group as on Les Quatre Vieux Garçons with the addition of superb accordionist Robert Jardell. Recapturing some of the old Balfa magic, this album consists primarily of Dewey Balfa originals played on three fiddles, with Dewey in the lead, Peter Schwarz an octave below, and Tracy playing the tenor parts in the middle. The record also contains "Bienvenue Au Paradis," a Tracy Schwarz original written after the tragic

the 1990s

The last decade of the millennium has spawned yet another folk revival of sorts, largely at a more grass roots level. Although the major record labels continued to ignore all but the most established draws with a folkie bent, labels like Rounder, Shanachie, Green Linnet, and Sugar Hill flourished, bringing new artists to national prominence. Later in the decade, several new "designer" labels like Waterbug, Signature Sounds, and 1-800-Prime-CD championed the latest of the steady crop of talented singer-songwriters to step into the fold. World Music became a genre, and adventurous performances by traditional musicians from all corners of the world started to garner sales and airplay. Publications like Dirty Linen, Performing Songwriter, Folk Roots, and a revitalized Sing Out! started to make more regional artists national stars, and a coffeehouse and house concert circuit started to flourish. The advent of the Internet allowed information to be disseminated rapidly (and sometimes fervently) about new artists like Dar Williams and Ani DiFranco. The North American Folk Music and Dance Alliance was established as a national clearing house and advocacy group for acoustic music, as well as a meeting point for people in the increasingly diverse acoustic music field. As the millennium wanes, folk music in all its various forms is healthier, more diverse, and more popular than it had been since the sixties.

Michael Parrish

death of Dewey's brothers, Rodney and Will, in an automobile accident.

influences:

◀◀ Balfa Brothers, Lawrence Walker, Nathan Abshire

▶▶ Balfa Toujours, Horace Trahan, Steve Riley

see also: Steve Riley, New Lost City Ramblers, Tracy Schwarz & Ginny Hawker

Jared Snyder

Tracy Schwarz & Ginny Hawker

Formed 1988.

Tracy Schwarz (born September 13, 1938, in New York, NY); Ginny Hawker (born in VA).

In the liner notes to their one CD together, Ginny Hawker and Tracy Schwarz admit "It would be an unthinkable sin against nature for two people like us not to sing together. It's part of who we are individually, and therefore a cornerstone of our relationship." This "need" to sing is one of the reasons Schwarz and Hawker are such a perfect match. Through their shared experiences they can pull out these old, Southern, mountain songs and sing them with a feeling that is clearly audible to the listener. Their roots run deep into many different levels of Southern song, from bluegrass to country to the sacred songs of the Primitive Baptists. Schwarz, of the New Lost City Ramblers and numerous other solo and band projects, provides tasteful musical accompaniment to their two voices, which blend together to tell you stories about their lives and people like them in old-time southern Appalachia.

what's available: Schwarz and Hawker teamed up on Deep Hollows and High Ridges ♪♪♪♪♪ (Marimac, 1995, prod. Tracy Schwarz, Ginny Hawker) and recorded one of the best CDs of traditional southern mountain music ever released. This 13-track CD can be seen as a cross section of the lives of these two fabulous singers. You have songs from the beginning of commercial country music, from Wade and Julia Mainer and the Carter Family that they love so much; then there are bluegrass duets by the Louvin Brothers, the Stanley Brothers, and Bill Monroe/Jimmy Martin; and then the pure mountain music of Almeda Riddle and Hazel Dickens. It is all here on this one recording, and all of it is done perfectly. This is a splendid set from start to finish.

influences:

◀◀ Primitive Baptist Hymnal, Hazel Dickens & Alice Gerrard, Louvin Brothers

▶▶ Ann & Phil Case

see also: New Lost City Ramblers, Tracy Schwarz, Ginny Hawker & Kay Justice

Steve Gardner

Carla Sciaky

Born 1954, in Brooklyn, NY.

Carla Sciaky (pronounced See-AH-kee) traces her love for music to the earliest stages of her childhood, when her mother worked as a nursery school teacher and camp counselor. "I sang and danced when I was two," she says, "it was a very natural part of my life." She yearned to play the piano like her mother. By the time she was in grade school, her formal training was underway. Sciaky's musical bent took a decided twist after she spent a couple of consecutive summers with her grandmother in Mexico City. It was there that she learned to play the guitar. By then she was listening to a lot of the protest and folk-rock singers of the late '60s, and her first formal band was a high school folk-rock group, Propinquity, which played music "as heavy as the Grateful Dead and as gentle as Joni Mitchell." In college, she took up urban studies, a move designed to keep her mind off of music. Within two years, she was smitten by the music bug all over again, lured by a recorder workshop. The teacher suggested she join an early music ensemble at the college and it was there that she developed her taste for traditional and ethnic music. She started her solo career in 1981 and now plays a dozen instruments, including the Bulgarian gudulka (violin), the psaltery, and the concertina. Her distinctively pure and agile voice (think Bonnie Dobson or Kathy Larisch) is immediately enticing, while her versatility adds depth and spice. Though she sees herself as a singer/guitarist who writes songs rather than as a songwriter, Sciaky has written some excellent material. In addition to her solo work, she has played off and on for several years with different groups in Denver, including a trio with Mary Stribling and guitarist Mary Flower and as a longtime member of a raucously entertaining all-woman band called the Mother Folkers, the "most carefully pronounced name in show business." Acclaimed for her soprano voice and her award-winning songwriting, Sciaky is also a talented instrumentalist, adding violin, concertina, and guitar fingerpicking backup to her songs.

what to buy: The Awakening ♪♪♪♪ (Green Linnet, 1995, prod. Pete Sutherland) is a gorgeous album with superior production values and a superb collection of supporting musicians, including Claudia Schmidt and Mollie O'Brien on vocals. Sciaky has served as artist-in-residence at elementary schools throughout the country, and in songwriting workshops has guided school children in composing lyrics and music; Wishes and Dreams ♪♪♪ (Alacazam, 1981) is the result. The songs are funny, hopeful, poignant, and insightful. Titles include "A Rainy Day," "School Lunch," and "Growing Up." Tim O'Brien on mandolin and vocals, and several fellow Mother Folkers all serve to reinforce the strength of Sciaky's sensitive songwriting and distinctively clear voice. Her songs reach into many emotional landscapes. The title cut expresses the excitement of waking up to the world within and without, while the musically striking "I Cannot Tell You" and "Is This Water?" explore more shadowy sides of the same. Heartbreak is evident in the country-tinged "There Are Three Reasons," while her trademark humor takes over in "Insomnia Blues," an audience favorite.

what to buy next: Either Spin the Weaver's Song ♪♪♪½ (Green Linnet, 1992, prod. Pete Sutherland) or The Undertow ♪♪♪½ (Green Linnet, 1991, prod. Pete Sutherland) would be excellent purchases. The former is a celebration of weaving, spinning, and sheep-shearing songs from all over the world, telling the stories of women and men that have carried the process "from sheep to shawl" over the years. Sciaky's homage to the craft is warm, witty, and as classic as the craft itself. The latter features songs that are memorable and performances that are no less than exquisite. The Undertow is full of understatement yet filled with a sense of honesty and emotion. In addition to her own material, she does songs by Clive Gregson, Jane Gillman, and Tim O'Brien.

the rest:
In Between ♪♪♪ (Propinquity, 1985)
Under the Quarter Moon ♪♪♪ (Propinquity, 1988)

influences:
Bonnie Dobson, Joan Baez
Priscilla Herdman, Cindy Kallet

Neal Walters

Darrell Scott

Darrell Scott is a talented songwriter and multi-instrumentalist (guitar, pedal steel, drums, bass, dobro, banjo, mandolin, autoharp, harmonica, and seemingly everything else that can be plucked, beat, or blown) who has worked with Sam Bush, Tim O'Brien, and Guy Clark. He also has written some songs that have been recorded by others, but 1997's Aloha from Nashville marked his first time out as a solo artist showcasing and playing his own material.

what's available: Aloha from Nashville ♪♪♪½ (Sugar Hill, 1997, prod. Darrell Scott) is his debut solo release. On it Scott shows his versatility by touching on Western swing in "Head South," storytelling folk in "The Ballad of Martha White," and a bout of light-hearted fun in "Spelling Bee Romance." The best song on this album, however, is "You'll Never Leave Harlan Alive," which is the sad tale of a family married (for better or for worse) to the coal mines of eastern Kentucky. If there is any justice in this world, this song will become a folk standard for anyone trying to tell a story with a guitar and a voice.

influences:
⏪ Sam Bush, Guy Clark

Steve Gardner

Mike Scott

See: The Waterboys

Earl Scruggs

See: Flatt & Scruggs

Seals & Crofts

Formed 1969, in Los Angeles, CA.

Jim Seals, vocals, guitar, saxophone, fiddle; Dash Crofts (born Darnell Crofts), vocals, mandolin, keyboards, guitar, drums.

Jimmy Seals and Dash Crofts are two Texas natives who met on the club circuit during the '50s. They wound up playing together in the Champs ("Tequila") and later moved to Los Angeles, where they worked sessions, formed bands, and finally settled into working as a duo. Devout followers of the Baha'i faith, Seals and Crofts scored a recording contract in 1971 and were on radio in short order with seminal soft-rock hits such as "Summer Breeze," "Hummingbird," "Diamond Girl," and the high school yearbook special "We May Never Pass This Way Again."

what's available: You'll find all the duo's hits on Greatest Hits ♪♪♪♪ (Warner Bros., 1975, prod. Louie Shelton), a collection of tuneful, sturdy melodies. The duo's fourth album, Summer Breeze ♪♪ (Warner Bros., 1972/1994, prod. Louie Shelton), is also available but is wholly inessential. These days, Seals and Crofts rarely play together; Seals farms coffee in Costa Rica, while Crofts was last seen plying his trade in Nashville.

influences:
⏪ Crosby, Stills & Nash, the Lettermen, New Christy Minstrels ⏩ England Dan & John Ford Coley, Indigo Girls, Behan Johnson

Gary Graff

John Sebastian

See: Lovin' Spoonful

Sector 27

See: Tom Robinson

Mike Seeger

Born August 15, 1933, in New York, NY.

Half brother of Pete Seeger, Mike Seeger was raised in Washington, D.C. His parents, Charles and Ruth Seeger, were classical musicians and composers who became interested in traditional American music during the 1930s. As a result, their children, Mike included, were brought up in a home full of Library of Congress recordings and informal singing sessions. Even a woman who worked at Mike's childhood home, Elizabeth Cotton from Carrboro, North Carolina, was influential in his musical development when he learned that she was a magnificent guitar player. (Seeger would eventually record her performing in 1957.) From 1958 until 1979, Seeger was a member of the New Lost City Ramblers, which was one of the most important bands of the '60s folk music and old-time string band revivals. Not only an important musician, he is significant for the numerous field recordings he made of traditional musicians, including American Banjo Scruggs Style, which Neil Rosenberg cites in his Bluegrass: A History as the first bluegrass LP. Seeger is still releasing important field recordings. In 1997, with Smithsonian-Folkways, he released Close to Home: Old Time Music from Mike Seeger's Collection, which showcases such musicians of the '50s and '60s as Elizabeth Cotton, Tom Ashley, Wade Ward, and Dock Boggs.

what to buy: Recommending just a few of Seeger's albums is tough. He has so many sides that without at least a handful of releases you aren't getting the full picture. However, Solo: Old-Time Country Music ♪♪♪♪½ (Rounder, 1991, prod. Mike Seeger) is a record that presents him as you would probably see him today in concert, going solo and performing a lot of the old-time songs that he loves so much. Seeger is at his best, though, when he is performing with a friend so they can bounce ideas off of each other and let the creative juices do the rest of the work. Way down in North Carolina ♪♪♪♪½ (Rounder, 1996, prod. Paul Brown, Mike Seeger) is such a recording, and is well worth checking out.

what to buy next: Third Annual Farewell Reunion ♪♪♪♪ (Rounder, 1994, prod. Mike Seeger) is more about what Seeger sees as important and entertaining in the world of folk music today than about Seeger himself. But that's no complaint; this is one terrific album, with an all-star lineup of guests including Ralph Stanley, Jones and Leva, Tim O'Brien, Tommy Jarrell, and another fellow once well-known in the folk music world . . . Bob Dylan.

the rest:
American Banjo Scruggs Style ♪♪♪♪♪ (Folkways, 1957)

Old-Time Country Music ♪♪♪♪ (Folkways, 1962)
Mike Seeger ♪♪♪½ (Vanguard, 1964)
Tipple, Loom, and Rail, Songs of the Industrialization of the South ♪♪♪♪ (Folkways, 1965)
(With Peggy Seeger) Mike and Peggy Seeger ♪♪♪ (Argo, 1966)
(With wife, Alice Gerrard Seeger) Mike and Alice Seeger in Concert ♪♪♪ (King (Japan), 1970)
(With Peggy Seeger) American Folk Songs for Children ♪♪♪♪ (Rounder, 1970/1987)
Music from the True Vine ♪♪♪½ (Mercury, 1971)
Second Annual Farewell Reunion ♪♪♪♪ (Mercury, 1972)
(With Alice Gerrard) Mike Seeger and Alice Gerrard ♪♪♪♪ (Greenhays, 1980)
Fresh Old-Time String Band Music ♪♪♪♪ (Rounder, 1988)
(With Penny and Peggy Seeger) American Folk Songs for Christmas ♪♪♪½ (Rounder, 1989)
(With Peggy, Barbara, and Penny Seeger) Animal Folk Songs for Children ♪♪♪½ (Rounder, 1992)
Close to Home: Old Time Music from Mike Seeger's Collection ♪♪♪♪ (Smithsonian-Folkways, 1997)

worth searching for: Get Acquainted Waltz ♪♪♪♪ (Arhoolie, 1975/1997, prod. Mike Seeger, Chris Strachwitz) features Seeger alongside Hazel Dickens and his then-wife Alice Gerrard, backed by Seeger's New Lost City Ramblers bandmate Tracy Schwarz, all billed as the Strange Creek Singers.

solo outings:
A. Robic and the Exertions:
Old Time Music Dance Party ♪♪♪♪ (Flying Fish, 1987)

influences:
⏮ Elizabeth Cotton, Kilby Snow, Dock Boggs, Tommy Jarrell ⏭ Bob Dylan, Fuzzy Mountain String Band, Bruce Molsky

see also: New Lost City Ramblers, Paul Brown, Strange Creek Singers, Hazel & Alice

Steve Gardner

Peggy Seeger

Born Margaret Seeger, June 17, 1935, in New York, NY.

The oldest daughter of musicologist Charles Seeger and his second wife, Ruth Crawford (one of the most influential women composers of the twentieth century), Peggy Seeger is the sister of Mike Seeger, the half-sister of Pete Seeger, and the widow of late Scottish folklorist and songwriter Ewan MacColl. During the more than 40 years since her self-titled debut recording, Seeger has combined political activism with the folk song tradition. While she's excelled as an interpreter, Seeger, who plays banjo and guitar, has also made her presence felt as a songwriter. Her best-known compositions include "Gonna Be an Engineer," which has become an anthem of the women's movement, and "The Ballad of Springhill," a powerful song about a 1958 Nova Scotia mining disaster.

Seeger grew up surrounded by music. Although she studied classical harmony, music theory, and orchestration at Radcliffe College in Cambridge, Massachusetts, folk music has remained her prime focus. Self-taught on the banjo, she plays in the old, frailing style. Europe has been the setting for most of Seeger's adult life. After traveling to Holland, Belgium, France, and Italy to collect folk songs, in 1955, she returned to England the following year to perform in a radio play, Dark of the Moon, at the request of folklorist Alan Lomax. While in England, she met and fell in love with MacColl, who wrote his classic tune "The First Time Ever I Saw Your Face" for her. They were married in 1958 and remained musical collaborators until MacColl died in 1989. Although she moved to England, Seeger has continued to perform at folk coffeehouses and festivals in the United States. In addition to her solo recordings and duo albums with MacColl, Seeger has recorded with Guy Carawan, Tom Paley, her brother Mike, and younger sisters Penny and Barbara. The Long Harvest, a 10-album collection of traditional British and American folksongs recorded by Seeger and MacColl, received a prestigious Audio award in 1967. Seeger was the subject of a six-part 1994 radio documentary produced by Jim Lloyd for the BBC. Her book, The Peggy Seeger Songbook, Warts and All, was published by Music Sales in 1997.

what to buy: Seeger's most productive years came when she recorded for Folkways. That era is documented on the CD The Folkway Years 1955–92: Songs of Love and Politics ♪♪♪ (Folkways, 1992). Highlights include her original recording of "Gonna Be an Engineer" and her rendition of her late husband and singing partner Ewan MacColl's love song, "The First Time Ever I Saw Your Face."

what to buy next: Classic Peggy Seeger ♪♪♪½ (Blackthorne, 1996) brings together tracks recorded by Seeger and released on the Topic label during the early 1950s.

best of the rest:
(With Mike and Penny Seeger and families) American Folksongs for Christmas ♪♪ (Folkways, 1955/Rounder, 1989)
Peggy Seeger ♪♪ (Topic, 1956)
(With Barbara and Penny Seeger) Three Sisters ♪♪½ (Prestige, 1957)
(With Mike Seeger) American Folksongs for Children ♪♪♪½ (Folkways, 1957/ Rounder, 1977)

(With Guy Carawan) We Sing America ♪♪ (Redwood, 1958)
(With Guy Carawan and Alan Lomax) Folksong Saturday Night ♪♪ (Prestige, 1958)
(With Ewan MacColl) Classic Scots Ballads ♪♪♪♪ (Tradition, 1959/1997)
(With Ewan MacColl) Lover's Garland ♪♪½ (Pye, 1962)
(With Mike Seeger) Mike and Peggy Seeger ♪♪♪ (Argo, 1966)
(With Mike Seeger) American Folk Songs for Children ♪♪♪♪ (Rounder, 1970/1987)
(With Ewan MacColl) At the Present Moment ♪♪½ (Rounder, 1973) Familiar Faces ♪♪ (Riverside, 1988)
(With Penny and Mike Seeger) American Folk Songs for Christmas ♪♪♪½ (Rounder, 1989)
(With Mike, Barbara, and Penny Seeger) Animal Folk Songs for Children ♪♪♪½ (Rounder, 1992)
(With Irene Scott) Almost Commercially Viable ♪♪½ (Kapp, 1992)
Odd Collection ♪♪½ (Rounder, 1996)
(With Ewan MacColl) Folk on Two ♪♪♪♪ (Cooking Vinyl, 1996)

influences:

Ronnie Gilbert, Jean Ritchie, Elizabeth Cotton, Pete Seeger, Charles Seeger, Ruth Crawford Seeger

Anne Hills, Priscilla Herdman, Cindy Mangsen, Sally Rogers, Ewan MacColl, Billy Bragg

see also: Pete Seeger, Mike Seeger, Guy Carawan, Ewan MacColl

Craig Harris

Pete Seeger

Born May 3, 1919, in New York, NY.

Regarded as America's best-loved and most influential modern folksinger, Pete Seeger has touched millions of lives with ballads rich in history, humor, and a sense of social justice. The son of a musicologist and a concert violinist, Seeger took his trademark five-string banjo to the road during the 1930s, where he joined Woody Guthrie at labor union rallies and formed the Almanac Singers. In 1948 Seeger formed the Weavers, popularizing such classics as "On Top of Old Smokey" and Leadbelly's "Goodnight Irene." But during the early '50s—at the peak of the group's success—Seeger lost bookings and record contracts when he was blacklisted during the anti-communist witch-hunts of the day. But his political convictions grew more resonant, and during the 1960s he emerged as a solo artist for the cause of social justice. Singing at rallies to support such notables as Martin Luther King Jr., Seeger produced the hits "If I Had a Hammer" and "We Shall Overcome"—which were embraced as anthems for the civil rights movement. The '60s also witnessed Seeger's memorable appearances at the Newport Folk Festivals, with rousing audience singalongs of Spanish, African, and Negro work ballads, as well as new protest songs. Seeger's writing gift provided numerous memorable hits, including "Guantanamera" and his remarkable casting of the biblical Ecclesiastes "Turn! Turn! Turn!" Additionally, he helped engineer the '60s folk revival by introducing such bright young talents as Bob Dylan, Tom Paxton, Arlo Guthrie, and Peter, Paul, and Mary. Seeger has since published dozens of articles and more than 20 books on folk music, and started the popular folk song journal Sing Out! He was awarded the nation's highest artistic honors at the Kennedy Center in 1994—a small vindication after the McCarthy debacle—while in 1996 he was inducted into the Rock and Roll Hall of Fame. And just when you might expect the seasoned sage to rest on his laurels, he recorded the 1997 Grammy Award–winning CD Pete—at the ripe young age of 77. Of his long and prolific career Seeger said, "What I want to do . . . is give people something that encourages the creative process and gets people out of the boxes they've been put in." And regarding a job well done Joan Baez responded that Seeger's "life and music have been a continuum of contributions to the uplifting of the human spirit, and the betterment of the human condition everywhere in this world."

what to buy: Folk aficionados maintain that no one ever left a Pete Seeger concert unchanged—and not surprisingly his classic live album is very evocative. The two-CD, digitally remastered We Shall Overcome ♪♪♪♪♪ (Columbia, 1989, prod. John Hammond), originally recorded in 1963 at the acoustically fine Carnegie Hall, features Seeger at his peak, for 122 minutes (40 songs in all) of musical bliss. Stories, traditional numbers, covers of emerging artists, and a smattering of Seeger originals—all are dressed in the simple elegance of Pete's banjo accompaniments and his ingenious personal style. And his amazing rapport with his audience is evident throughout, with rousing sing-along choruses to get you going. Most notable are Tom Paxton's "My Rambling Boy" and "What Did You Learn in School Today," as well as Bob Dylan's "Who Killed Davey Moore?" and "A Hard Rain's a-Gonna Fall." Traditional favorites include "Oh Freedom" and "Deep Blue Sea," while Woody Guthrie's "This Land Is Your Land" shines of American liberty. But most touching is Seeger's own musical rendering of a poem by the Cuban nationalist Jose Marti—"Guantanamera." We Shall Overcome stands as the definitive recording of folk music's definitive performer. And a nice complement to this gem is A Link in the Chain ♪♪♪♪♪ (Columbia, 1996, prod. Lawrence Cohn). Despite a little overlap in song titles, the latter features the best-available sampling of Seeger's original material, re-mastered from live recordings throughout the '60s. The two-CD set opens with Pete picking and whistling through his instrumental composition "Living in the Country." Continuing with levity, the original "Get up and Go" answers the proverbial question, "How do I know my youth is all spent? /My get up and go has got up and went." Other fine Seeger compositions include "Waist Deep in the Big Muddy," "Oh, Had I a Golden Thread," "My Name Is Liza Kalvelage," "Last Train to Nuremberg," "This Old Car," and his spiritual anthem "Turn! Turn! Turn!." Finally, Seeger's haunting ballad "Where Have All the Flowers Gone?" reverberates with the anguish of a burgeoning war in Vietnam. This album will endure as a vital "snapshot" of a most tumultuous and artistically rich decade of American history.

Pete Seeger (© Jack Vartoogian)

what to buy next: American Industrial Folk Ballads ♪♪♪♪½ (Folkways/Smithsonian, 1956, prod. John Hammond) is more vintage Seeger, but this time as a studio recording, presenting the joys and struggles of miners, farmers, and textile workers. With liner notes and a new introduction, this album is a historic landmark in a union town, set in the modest fidelity of pre-stereo recording—a real collector's item. And finally, the Grammy Award–winning CD Pete ♪♪♪♪♪ (Living Music, 1996, prod. Paul Winter, Tom Bates) shows Seeger back into the studio for the first time in decades, with a generous selection of his best-known numbers. And, at age 77, his undiminished energy and spirit will have you wondering what kind of vitamins he's on. Joined by several choruses and some notable guest musicians, Seeger delivers in decent voice: "Kisses Sweeter than Wine," "Garbage," "Sailing down My Golden River," "The Water Is Wide," "My Rainbow Race," and more. Regarding his continuing purpose in music Seeger muses: "The artist in ancient times inspired, entertained, and educated his fellow citizens. Modern artists have an additional responsibility—to encourage others to be artists." Mission accomplished.

best of the rest:

Darling Corey and Goofing-Off Suite ♪♪♪♪½ (Folkways/Smithsonian, 1950)
American Folk Songs for Children ♪♪♪♪ (Folkways/Smithsonian, 1953)
Birds, Beasts, Bugs and Little Fishes ♪♪♪♪½ (Folkways, 1954)
Song and Play Time ♪♪♪♪ (Folkways, 1958)
Folk Songs for Young People ♪♪♪♪ (Folkways/Smithsonian, 1959)
Abiyoyo and Other Story Songs for Children ♪♪♪♪ (Folkways/Smithsonian, 1960)
American Game and Activity Songs ♪♪♪♪ (Folkways, 1962) Carry It On: Songs of American Working People ♪♪♪♪ (Flying Fish, 1963) Traditional Christmas Carols ♪♪♪♪½ (Folkways/Smithsonian, 1967)
Waist Deep in Big Muddy and Other Love Songs ♪♪♪♪½ (Legacy, 1967)
The World of Pete Seeger ♪♪♪½ (Columbia, 1974)
(With Arlo Guthrie) Together in Concert ♪♪♪♪½ (Reprise, 1975)
Singalong Demonstration Concert ♪♪♪½ (Folkways/Smithsonian, 1980) (With Arlo Guthrie) Precious Friend ♪♪♪½ (Warner Bros., 1982)
(With Arlo Guthrie) More Together Again in Concert ♪♪♪½ (Rising Son, 1994) (With Carolyn Hester) Pete Seeger and Carolyn Hester ♪♪♪½ (United Audio Entertainment)

worth searching for: Pete Seeger's Family Concert ♪♪♪♪ (Sony, 1992, prod. Jim Brown, Ginger Brown, Harold Leventhal) was recorded near the artist's home on the banks of the Hudson River to promote his environmental action group, the Clearwater Foundation. This out-of-print disc shows up periodically at used record stores.

influences:

⏮ Stephen Foster, Lee Hays, Leadbelly, Uncle Dave Macon, Woody Guthrie, Malvina Reynolds, Willie Dixon, Paul Winter

⏭ Weavers, Bob Dylan, Tom Paxton, Arlo Guthrie, John Prine, Peter, Paul & Mary, Bill Staines, Byrds, Judy Collins, Joan Baez, just about everyone else who has recorded folk music

see also: Weavers

Art Wojtowicz

Geoff Seitz

Born December 5, 1954, in MO.

Geoff Seitz started his musical career by learning to play drums at age eight. He added guitar and piano over the years, and took up the fiddle at age 19. Missouri fiddling is primarily dance music, and that was Seitz's main interest from the start. He reads music—unusual for an old-time fiddler—and that has enabled him to draw on the Old-Time Fiddler's Repertory, the extensive written collection published by the University of Missouri Press. He has played with the Sweetwater String Band, the Rural Valley Revelers, Cousin Curtis and the Cash Rebates, and the Ill-Mo Boys. He has won numerous fiddle contests, in his home state of Missouri and in other places, such as at the Old-Time Fiddler's convention in Galax, Virginia, and the Appalachian String Band Festival in Clifftop, West Virginia. Seitz lives in St. Louis, where he builds and restores stringed instruments.

what to buy: Seitz's most recent recording is The Good Old Days Are Here ♪♪♪♪½ (Oceana Productions, 1995, prod. Geoff Seitz). Your feet won't keep still when you listen to this CD, but it isn't just dance music—it's dance music with some of the most unusual instruments you've ever heard accompanying the fiddle, and it's a heck of a lot of fun. A piano always sounds good behind a dance fiddler, and Emily Buckhannon's touch adds a lot to these tunes. There's highly competent guitar and banjo accompaniment, provided mostly by Jim Nelson and Rich Hibbs, respectively. There's also the mandolin (Curt Buckhannon) and the bass (Forrest Rose). But hold on, we're not done yet: there's also the bones, hands clapping, a wood whiskey box being thumped vigorously with something (by Seitz), a bass drum, a jawbone, corrugated roofing, and—no kidding—a water pump. Okay, so the water pump isn't really used as a percussion instrument. But the others are, and all of this stuff works extremely well. It comes across loud and clear that these folks had a ball making this disc. Other musicians making an appearance are Jeff Miller (banjo), Tom Mittlebronn (guitar), Dave Landreth (banjo), Kevin McKeever (piano), and Larry McNally (button accordion). Michelle Belanger provides the sound of dancing feet. Many of these musicians have played with Seitz in other bands; Nelson and Curt Buckhannon were the other two Ill-Mo Boys. The tune selection is primarily from Missouri, and includes "Lantern in the Ditch," one of several beautiful tunes from Missouri fiddler Bob Walters that were documented in The Old Time Fiddler's Repertory. There's also a smattering of tunes from elsewhere, including standards like "Arkansas Traveler" and "Cumberland Gap," a tune from the Irish harper Turlough O'Carolan, and a rousing composition by Seitz called "Chicago Fiddlin'," a hard-driving dance tune that is one of the disc's most enjoyable selections. No dance is complete without a waltz, and this disc winds up the evening with a delightful one called the "Rose of Sharon Waltz," also written by Seitz. The Good Old Days Are Here might be hard to find in record stores, but you can order it from Oceana Productions, 4175 Loughborough Ave., St. Louis, MO 63116.

what to buy next: You can hear more of Seitz, along with Buckhannon and Nelson, on two cassettes of the Ill-Mo Boys, Fine as Frog's Hair ♪♪♪ (Marimac, 1991, prod. Larry McBride) and Timely Old Tunes and Beyond ♪♪♪ (Marimac, 1988, prod. Larry McBride), which consist primarily of dance music from Missouri and Illinois. The latter also contains many familiar tunes and a few Midwestern surprises.

influences:

⏪ Bob Walters, Charlie Walden

⏩ Ill-Mo Boys, Volo Bogtrotters, Chirps Smith

Dave Shombert

The Seldom Scene

Formed 1971, in Arlington, VA.

John Duffey (died December 10, 1996), mandolin, lead and harmony vocals (1971–96); Ben Eldridge, banjo, vocals (1971–present); Mike Auldridge, dobro (1971–95); John Starling, guitar, lead vocals (1971–77, 1992–94); Tom Gray, bass (1971–86); Lou Reid, guitar, lead vocals (1986–92); Phil Rosenthal, guitar, lead vocals (1977–85); T. Michael Coleman, bass guitar (1986–95); Moondi Klein, guitar, lead vocals (1994–95); Dudley Connell, guitar, lead vocals (1996–present); Ronnie Simpkins, bass, vocals (1996–present); Fred Travers, dobro, vocals (1996–present).

Former Country Gentlemen John Duffey and Ben Eldridge founded the highly influential Seldom Scene, noted far and wide for mixing traditional tunes with country, pop, and folk songs. The band has survived numerous personnel changes to remain one of the most renowned bands in bluegrass for a quarter century. Mike Auldridge, T. Michael Coleman, and Moondi Klein left the Scene in 1995 to work full-time with Chesapeake. Duffy's death in late 1996 left a big hole as well.

what to buy: Scene 20: 20th-Anniversary Concert ♪♪♪♪½ (Sugar Hill, 1991, prod. T. Michael Coleman) was recorded over two nights at the legendary Birchmere in Alexandria, Virginia, the group's regular home for many years. It reunites different lineups of the band and features a guest appearance by Emmylou Harris.

what to buy next: For Like We Used to Be ♪♪♪♪½ (Sugar Hill, 1994), John Starling briefly returned to the band and left behind this terrific collection of 13 songs ranging from standards by the Stanley Brothers and Woody Guthrie to the original "I'll Take You Home."

the rest:

Act 3 ♪♪♪½ (Rebel, 1973)
Old Train ♪♪♪ (Rebel, 1974)
Recorded Live at the Cellar Door ♪♪♪½ (Rebel, 1975)
The New Seldom Scene Album ♪♪♪ (Rebel, 1976/1989)
. . . At the Scene ♪♪♪ (Sugar Hill, 1983)
The Best of the Seldom Scene, Volume I ♪♪♪ (Rebel, 1986)
A Change of Scenery ♪♪♪ (Sugar Hill, 1988)
Scenic Roots ♪♪♪½ (Sugar Hill, 1990) Dream Scene ♪♪♪½ (Sugar Hill, 1996) worth searching for: Act II ♪♪♪ (Rebel, 1973) is worth a look.

solo outings:

Mike Auldridge:
Mike Auldridge and Old Dog ♪♪♪ (Flying Fish, 1978)
(With Lou Reid and T. Michael Coleman) High Time ♪♪♪ (Sugar Hill, 1989)
Treasures Untold ♪♪♪ (Sugar Hill, 1990)
Eight String Swing ♪♪♪ (Sugar Hill, 1992)

John Starling:
Long Time Gone ♪♪♪ (Sugar Hill, 1990)
Waitin' on a Southern Train ♪♪♪ (Sugar Hill, 1995)

influences:

⏪ Country Gentlemen, New Shades of Grass

⏩ Alison Krauss & Union Station, Chesapeake see also: Country Gentlemen, Chesapeake

Douglas Fulmer

Martin Sexton

Born 1966, in Syracuse, NY.

With multi-octave tenor vocals, sensitive acoustic guitar playing, and poetic lyricism, Martin Sexton has been setting ears aflame with his music. Only a few years from his days as a Harvard Square street singer, Sexton has built a following from coast to coast and is one of acoustic music's most successful new artists. The winner of Boston Music Awards as Outstanding New Acoustic Act of 1995 and Best Song/Best Songwriter of 1996 for his song "Glory Bound," Sexton was the recipient of a prestigious Artist of the Year award at the National Academy of Songwriters' Underground Acoustic concert at the Troubadour club in Hollywood, California, in 1994. The youngest of six boys, Sexton was the tenth child in an Irish Catholic family of a dozen children. His music awakening came when he discovered a copy of the Beatles' Abbey Road that one of his siblings left in the basement. The experience left Sexton with an unquenchable thirst for music. As a youngster, he attracted crowds at school with his impersonations of Stevie Wonder; throughout his teenage years he played with bands in his hometown, singing the Top 40 hits of the 1980s. By 1989, however, he had gone as far as he could with music in Syracuse and moved to Boston. Although he planned to move in with a brother, he found his own apartment and a job as a waiter in a cafe within a day, and was beginning to audition for bands. His musical direction changed after seeing a street musician for the first time. After being fired from his cafe job, he switched to acoustic guitar and took to the streets himself. Relocated to western Massachusetts, Sexton has continued to advance in great strides, going from opening shows for Jackson Browne, John Hiatt, Stephen Stills, and Art Garfunkel to headlining clubs and coffeehouses on his own.

what to buy: Sexton's long-awaited debut CD, Black Sheep ♪♪♪♪♡ (Black Wolf, 1995), has placed him in the upper echelon of new acoustic music. Accompanied by Joe Donnelly (percussion), Greg Holt (bass), and Brad Hatfield (piano and synthesizer), he showcases his multi-octave voice and unique, horn-like, vocal improvisations.

what to buy next: Sexton had just switched to acoustic guitar when he recorded In the Journey ♪♪♪ (self-released, 1990/1997, prod. Martin Sexton) in a friend's attic studio. Despite its low budget, the nine-song collection sold an impressive 16,000 copies when released on cassette. Reissued on CD, the album remains a powerful display of soulful vocalizing and poetic lyricism.

worth searching for: One of Sexton's earliest compositions, "Free World," was included on the CD soundtrack album of the film Two Days in the Valley.

influences:

◀◀ Beatles, Louis Armstrong, Al Jarreau, Ray Charles

▶▶ Ellis Paul, Peter Mulvey

Craig Harris

Morgan Sexton

Born January 28, 1911, near Linefork, KY. Died January 1992.

Electronic media—radio, movies, the phonograph—have been with us for three-quarters of a century now, and there may not be very many artists like Morgan Sexton left. He learned to play the old songs and dance tunes on the banjo as a youngster, not with any self-conscious notion of being an "artist" but because this was what folks did to entertain themselves, and the indigenous music of southeastern Kentucky was what they knew. Sexton's father died in the great influenza epidemic in 1918, and a few years later Sexton left the fourth grade to work to help his struggling family. His education finished, he spent the rest of his life in Linefork, working at lumber camps, rock and limestone quarries, and finally (like so many in the high Appalachians) the coal mines. But it was in 1928 when, still an adolescent, he bought his first "real" banjo: a Stella, ordered from the Sears and Roebuck catalog for $10.86. He had already learned some of the basics from his older sister Hettie, a good player, and the acquisition of the new banjo blew his smoldering interest into a bright flame: Sexton found himself playing constantly, sometimes even falling asleep with the instrument across his body. He would have lived and died playing at schools and family functions except that another musician—his nephew, Lee Sexton—introduced him to some of the music producers at Appalshop, a cultural media center in nearby Whitesburg, an imprint of which is the June Appal record label. In 1988, at age 77, Sexton performed on a concert stage for the first time in his life, at Appalshop's Seedtime on the Cumberland festival. His first recording, Rock Dust, was released in 1989 to much acclaim, and was followed by appearances at the Celebration of Traditional Music at Berea College, Kentucky; the Augusta Heritage Festival in Elkins, West Virginia; and the Tennessee Banjo Institute in Lebanon, Tennessee. Finally, in 1991, the National Endowment for the Arts awarded Sexton the prestigious National Heritage Fellowship award. He died of cancer at age 81 in January 1992.

what's available: June Appal issued the Rock Dust album in its entirety, along with a generous helping of newly recorded material, all on a treasure of a CD, Shady Grove ♪♪♪♪ (June Appal, 1990, prod. Nancy Adams), which now stands as this unique artist's complete recorded legacy. Sexton's music is nearly as free of artifice as may be humanly possible: unpolished and completely without self-consciousness, it's a direct artifact of who he was, and how and where he lived and died. His voice is as honest and rough-hewn as the handle of a grubbing hoe, and his banjo has a timeless-sounding pentatonism of almost startling delicacy and warmth. These songs, and this intimate personal style, are a brief glimpse into a distant past, when southeast Kentucky's forbidding mountains kept its people in near-isolation from the rest of the world.

influences:

◀◀ His father, his sister, his neighbors

▶▶ Bascom Lamar Lunsford, Roscoe Holcomb, Jean Ritchie

Chris Rietz

Bob Shank

Born November 3, 1950, in Morgantown, WV.

Bob Shank is a veteran hammered dulcimer player who has been playing for more than 20 years, both as a solo artist and as a member of Hickory Wind, one of the first bands to feature a hammered dulcimer during the '70s. Shank has also played a lot of dance music as a member of bands like the Percolators and Curmudgeon. He currently plays mostly solo and is focusing on his new recording studio business, Otter Slide Studios.

what's available: Hammer Dulcimer Solos ♪♪♪♪ (Otter Slide Productions, 1996, prod. Bob Shank, Otter Slide Studios) demonstrates Shank's inventive playing and arranging, as he begins simply and then builds in musical complexity, incorporating variation after variation. This seemingly bottomless well of inspiration elevates his playing of these more or less familiar tunes from the merely ordinary. The solos include such selections as the Shaker melody "Simple Gifts," a gentle hymn "In the Garden," and several toe-tapping contra-dance tunes like "Cuffy" and "Morpeth's Rant." Hammer Dulcimer Solos is available from the artist at Otter Slide Productions, 1225 Corvet Avenue, Morgantown, WV 26505.

worth searching for: There are three 1970s-era releases by Hickory Wind: At the Wednesday Night Waltz ♪♪♪ (Adelphi, 1974, prod. Gene Rosenthal, Black Dog Productions), Fresh Produce ♪♪♪ (Flying Fish, 1975, prod. Michael Melford), and Crossing Devil's Bridge ♪♪♪ (Flying Fish, 1978, prod. Michael Melford), all of which are out of print. Shank's hammered dulcimer is found on about half the cuts, but you'll hear his banjo, guitar, and vocals along with fellow musicians Pete Tenney (fiddle, mandolin), Sam Morgan (mandolin, Dobro, guitar, vocals), Glen McCarthy (bass, vocals), and Mark Walbridge (guitar, vocals).

influences:

◀◀ Russell Fluharty, Paul Van Arsdale, Sam Rizzetta

▶▶ Linda Thomas, Walt Michael, Rick Thum

Heidi Cerrigione

Sharon Shannon

Born June 8, 1967, in Ruan, Co. Clare, Ireland.

Sharon Shannon is at the top of a stellar crop of young Irish musicians bringing traditional music to the attention of a new generation in Ireland and the United States. An amazingly talented musician with a firm grasp of traditional music and killer chops on both button accordion and fiddle, Shannon has taken her solid foundation in Irish music and expanded upon it, adding influences from the world of popular music and from other cultures whose music she is drawn to.

Growing up in North Clare, one of the hotbeds of Irish traditional music and the home turf of the legendary Kilfenora Ceili Band, Shannon was surrounded by dancers and musicians from an early age. Her brother Gary, a fine flute player, and sister Mary, the banjo player with the Irish band the Bumblebees, were early influences, as was Frank Custy, a local music teacher credited with giving many of Clare's young musicians the right start. She was performing professionally at an early age as a member of the band Disirt Tola, a group that also counted Gary and Mary Shannon, piper Ronan Browne, and concertina player Gearoid O'hAllmhurain among its members. They were active through the '80s and released one album in 1984. Shannon was also active in Comhaltas Ceoltoiri Eireann tours during the 1980s, where she met the great piano accordion player Karen Tweed, whose repertoire and style were very influential in Shannon's development. After a short period with the group Arcady during the late 1980s, Shannon was asked by Mike Scott to join the Waterboys. She spent a year and a half touring and recording with the band and being exposed to a whole host of new musical ideas and styles. After Scott changed the band's direction to a less folk-oriented style, Shannon left the group to pursue a solo career.

Her first solo album, recorded in 1990, mixed traditional tunes with a somewhat pop-oriented acoustic backing and featured appearances by Liam O'Maonlai of Hothouse Flowers and Adam Clayton from U2, as well as many of her former Waterboys bandmates. Their support put her name in front of the Irish popular music press and made her a star to young Irish audiences. Her appearance on the 1992 A Woman's Heart album, the best-selling album in Irish history, cemented her status as one of Ireland's leading young artists. Since then she has toured throughout the United States and Europe and recorded two more albums.

Shannon is a dynamite musician on both fiddle and accordion, her playing is firmly rooted in the Irish tradition, and she has a great store of traditional tunes. She is also a young, adventurous musician completely at home in a pop-music idiom. As a result, her arrangements are often more adventurous than on many Irish traditional albums, employing drum machines, synthesizers, saxophones, and other instruments rarely heard in traditional Irish music. While her adventurous style often irritates hard-core traditionalists, her playing is firmly rooted in Irish traditional style, and anyone who wants to hear the best

716 lauchlin shaw & a.c. overton

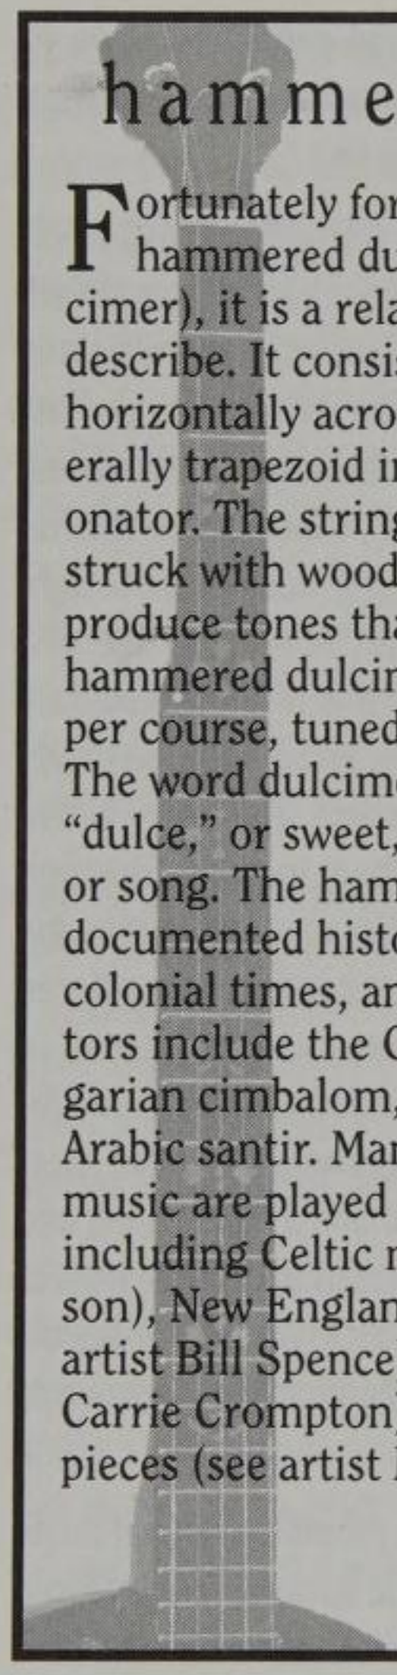
hammered dulcimer



Fortunately for those who have never seen a hammered dulcimer (also hammer dulcimer), it is a relatively simple instrument to describe. It consists of metal strings stretched horizontally across a shallow wooden box, generally trapezoid in shape, which acts as a resonator. The strings vary in length and are struck with wooden mallets (hammers), to produce tones that vary in pitch. A typical hammered dulcimer has two or three strings per course, tuned in unison, similar to a piano. The word dulcimer comes from the Greek "dulce," or sweet, and the Latin word "melos," or song. The hammered dulcimer has a well-documented history in America, dating back to colonial times, and its European/Asian ancestors include the German hackbrett, the Hungarian cimbalom, the Greek santouri, and the Arabic santir. Many different styles of folk music are played on the hammered dulcimer, including Celtic music (see artist Joemy Wilson), New England contra dance music (see artist Bill Spence), Baroque music (see artist Carrie Crompton), or contemporary folk choir pieces (see artist Malcolm Dalglish).

Heidi Cerrigione

contemporary players of traditional Irish music is obligated to give her a listen.

what to buy: Each Little Thing ♪♪♪♪ (Green Linnet, 1997, prod. Dónal Lunny), Shannon's third album, is her most cohesive and self assured. Working with producer Dónal Lunny and a crack crew of musicians, including guitarist Steve Cooney and fiddler Winnie Horan, Shannon has produced an album that combines traditional and contemporary influences in a completely personal musical statement. From the adventurous version of Grace Jones's "Libertango," featuring vocalist Kirsty MacColl, and a cover of Fleetwood Mac's "Never Going Back Again" to a sweet version of Junior Crehan's "With Her Lovely Long Hair," Shannon mixes her influences into a tasty musical stew, with the steady hand of producer Lunny keeping things from getting too far out of control. While not everything works (for example the hooked-on-classics sounding programming on "Bag of Cats"), everything betrays the stamp of an artist exploring new ideas and synthesizing new music out of the old.

what to buy next: Sharon Shannon ♪♪♪♪ (Philo, 1991, prod. John Dunford) was Shannon's debut album, and her most musically conservative. While her playing is astounding as always, the arrangements are spare and subdued, with less of the adventurousness of her later recordings. Highlights include the slow air "Marbhna Luimni," and a killer set of box tunes from the pen of Phil Cunningham. Shannon's adventurousness in repertoire is well-displayed with an imaginative pairing of a Kerry slide and a Cajun dance tune, as well as a recording of a Portuguese Corodinio. If you're a hard-core traditional Irish music fan, this would be the album to purchase.

what to avoid: Mind the Gap ♪♪♪ (Green Linnet, 1995, prod. Dennis Bovell, John Dunford) is an album by an artist searching for a style. The control and sophistication developed by Shannon for her Each Little Thing album were not yet there when she made this recording. As usual, her taste in tunes is tremendous, and her playing is great, but saxophonist Richie Buckley has little feel for traditional music and producer Dennis Bovell's tracks seem too restrained. All in all, the pieces just don't fit together.

worth searching for: One of Shannon's first recorded appearances was on Ceol Tigh Neachtain ♪♪♪♪ (Gael Linn, 1989, prod. Brendan O'Regan), a sampler featuring many of the fine young musicians in Galway at the time. Other highlights include appearances by fiddler Sean Smyth and Sean Nos singer Deirbhile Ni Bhrolchain. Good luck finding the Disirt Tola album; you'll have to search used record stores in Ireland.

influences:

- Tommy Peoples, Karen Tweed, Martin O'Connor

see also: Ashley MacIsaac, Mary Custy Band, Natalie MacMaster, Eileen Ivers

The Waterboys

Tony Ziselberger

Lauchlin Shaw & A.C. Overton

Formed c. 1952, in Lillington, NC.

Aaron Chauncey "A.C." Overton (born 1926, in Chatham County, NC), banjo; Lauchlin Shaw (born February 10, 1912, in Anderson Creek, NC), fiddle.

Lauchlin Shaw and A.C. Overton are two old-time musicians from the Piedmont (central) area of North Carolina. Shaw lives on a 200-acre farm in southern Harnett County, North Carolina, and plays the fiddle. Overton, who lives near Raleigh now, plays two finger banjo. Many of the tunes that they play have only been found in central North Carolina, which is rare. Most of the fiddle and banjo tunes that were collected in North Carolina were taken from the mountain country east of where these two traditionalists grew up.

what's available: Sally with the Run-down Shoes ♪♪♪♪ (Marimac, 1996, prod. Wayne Martin) was a recording made at the request of the North Carolina Arts Council, which wanted to document these two musicians and their music. It is a wonderful recording with extremely interesting liner notes that give full biographies of the two men along with informative notes about the songs. This recording will be well received by both the academic who wants to learn more about fiddle and banjo stylings outside of the southern Appalachians, and the fan who just wants to hear some great old-time fiddle and banjo dance music.

influences:

◀◀ Virgil Craven, Colin Shaw, Herman Overton, Uncle Dave Macon

▶▶ Marvin Gaster, Evelyn Shaw

Steve Gardner

Shegui

See: The House Band

Cosy Sheridan

Born December 11, 1964, in Concord, NH.

Cosy Sheridan has a light voice reminiscent of Janis Ian's, and it's matched by a light sense of humor, even when dealing with some very heavy topics. The New England–based singer-songwriter began her career singing in bars in Maine and New Hampshire and picking up tricks of the trade from other musicians. With 1992's Quietly Led, her star was on the ascendancy, and she's turned out a remarkably consistent set of albums since then.

what's available: Quietly Led ♪♪♪♪ (Waterbug, 1992, prod. Kent Allyn, Rick Watson, Cosy Sheridan) includes "Losing Game," a sharp-tongued look at how culture warps a woman's perception of her body. Its concluding track, "Lullabies," is a sentimental glimpse of childhood bedtime worthy of Robert Louis Stevenson. Saturn Return ♪♪♪ (Waterbug, 1994, prod. Cosy Sheridan, Kent Allyn, Gerry Putnam) has some excellent Sheridan compositions, including "Me and My Father." One Sure Thing ♪♪♪♪ (Waterbug, 1996, prod. Darleen Wilson), a live album, contains a good sampling of Sheridan's songs.

influences:

◀◀ Janis Ian, Cheryl Wheeler

▶▶ Lisa McCormick, Susan Werner

Pamela Murray Winters

Richard Shindell

Born August 3, 1960, in NJ.

Richard Shindell is a New York–based singer-songwriter whose finely crafted original ballads are set to sensitive, acoustic-based melodies. While his songs have been covered by Dar Williams ("Nora") and Joan Baez ("Fishing," "Money for Floods," "Reunion Hill"), Shindell has continued to make great strides on his own with his intimate solo performances and three masterful albums—Sparrows Point, Blue Divide, and Reunion Hill—placing him among the upper echelon of contemporary acoustic music. A former student of religion at the Union Theological Seminary in New York, Shindell has continued to explore his religious convictions through songs like "The Ballad of Mary Magdelena" and "Beyond the Iron Gate." Growing up on Long Island, he honed his early musical skills as a guitarist. As a student at Moravian College in Pennsylvania, he performed with the Razzy Dazzy Spasm Band, an informal cover band that included future singer-songwriter John Gorka as one of two frontmen. Leaving the band and transferring to Hobarth College in New York, where he earned an undergraduate degree in philosophy, Shindell continued to evolve as a musician. After attending Union Theological Seminary for two years, in the mid-1980s, he left school to focus on his music. He recorded several songs for the Fast Folk Musical Magazine, including his first recording, "On a Sea of Fleur-de-lis," in 1988. Signed by Shanachie, he made his presence felt from the start with the sarcastic kiss-off song, "Are You Happy Now?," the opening track of Sparrow's Point. In 1997 he toured the United States, as opening act and guitarist for Dar Williams, and Europe, with a showcase of "new" talent hosted by Joan Baez.

what to buy: Shindell's third album, Reunion Hill ♪♪♪♪ (Shanachie, 1997, prod. Larry Campbell), combines the poetic balladry of his debut, Sparrows Point, with the production values of his second effort, Blue Divide. With his storytelling lyrics set to the pedal steel guitar, lap steel, fiddle, mandolin, banjo, fiddle, and bouzouki melodies of Larry Campbell, and the harmonies and duet singing of Lucy Kaplansky, Shindell shows his strength as a songsmith. The collection includes two songs—"Money for Floods" and the title track—that were covered by Joan Baez on her 1997 album, Gone from Danger.

what to buy next: Shindell's debut, Sparrows Point ♪♪♪ (Shanachie, 1992, prod. Richard Shindell, David Seitz, Steve Addabbo), marked him as a songwriter worthy of further attention. The opening track, "Are You Happy Now?," is an unforgettable, tongue-in-jowl, farewell to an ex-lover.

the rest:
Blue Divide ♪♪½ (Shanachie, 1994)

influences:
◀◀ Bob Dylan, Townes Van Zandt, John Gorka
▶▶ Dar Williams, Lucy Kaplansky

Craig Harris

Michelle Shocked

Born Michelle Johnston, February 24, 1962, in Dallas, TX.

One of the most gifted and outspoken artists to emerge from the late-'80s singer-songwriter movement that spawned Tracy Chapman and Suzanne Vega, Michelle Shocked can be a captivating storyteller. She possesses a sassy, soulful voice and an endearing blend of east Texas charm and New York street savvy. But she also exhibits a stubborn commitment to her art that sometimes overwhelms her good intentions and rubs against the greedy grain of the music industry. Discovered playing around a campfire in 1986 at Texas' legendary Kerrville Folk Festival, Shocked became an instant overseas sensation after a Walkman-recorded tape of her songs got released on London's Cooking Vinyl Records. She signed to Mercury in 1988 but the relationship was acrimonious at best: the two parties bickered over everything from album-cover art (she proposed posing in blackface on the cover of 1991's Arkansas Traveler to drive home the belabored point that black musicians have been robbed of their legacy by white artists) to the stylistic direction of her jazzy Captain Swing. When Mercury balked at releasing the dark, brooding songs she proposed for Kind Hearted Woman, she filed suit against the label, citing a California labor law that sets a seven-year term limit on personal services contracts. The feud was settled out of court in April 1996, allowing Shocked to sign an unusual contract with Private Music that (a) gives her the freedom to pitch stylistically diverse projects to different record companies if Private chooses not to release them; and (b) stipulates performance levels for the label in terms of the promotion and marketing of her music. Her devious parting shot was a retrospective called Mercury Poise—a sly twist on Graham Parker's infamous diatribe against the label, "Mercury Poisoning."

what to buy: Kind Hearted Woman ♪♪♪♪½ (Private Music, 1996, prod. Bones Howe), inspired by the death of her grandmother, is a soul-stirring, intensely personal work about loss and the painful search for closure. The howling midwife crisis of "Stillborn" and the dark-humored blues of "Eddie" are startling, but her stark, hushed delivery of the mournful "A Child like Grace" is both riveting and revelatory. Her poignant major-label debut, Short Sharp Shocked ♪♪♪♪ (Mercury, 1988, prod. Pete Anderson), blends rustic reminisces about her east Texas childhood with chugging country-rockers and the Dylanesque "Anchorage," which remains her most touching and timeless song.

what to buy next: The Texas Campfire Tapes ♪♪♪½ (Mercury, 1986, prod. Pete Lawrence) contains the intimate, now-mythical Kerrville recordings, complete with crickets and low-fidelity sound. Three songs—"Fogtown," "Don't You Mess around with My Little Sister," and "The Secret to a Long Life"—would be rerecorded on later albums.

what to avoid: Captain Swing ♪♪ (Mercury, 1989, prod. Pete Anderson) has its nostalgic charms, but such novelties as "God Is a Real Estate Developer" and "Looks like Mona Lisa (Smells like Tuna Fish)" cross the line between lighthearted and lightweight.

worth searching for: Since leaving Mercury, Shocked has been recording limited-edition, hand-numbered CDs in her New Orleans home that she's selling exclusively at her shows. The original solo electric guitar versions of songs destined for Kind Hearted Woman (self-released, 1994) vanished quickly. Artists Make Lousy Slaves (self-released, 1996) is a direct-to-DAT duo effort that finds her sharing lead vocals with Fiachna O'Braondin of Hothouse Flowers and includes the jaunty "Laundry Day" and an a cappella reading of "The Water Is Wide."

the rest:
Arkansas Traveler ♪♪♪½ (Mercury, 1991)
Mercury Poise: 1988–95 ♪♪♪ (Mercury, 1996)

influences:
◀◀ Jean Ritchie, Guy Clark, Woody Guthrie
▶▶ Ani DiFranco

David Okamoto

Jon Sholle

Jon Sholle is an incredibly versatile guitarist who has played bluegrass with Peter Rowan and Andy Statman, new acoustic music with the David Grisman Quintet, pop with the likes of Melissa Manchester and Bette Midler, jazz with giants like Esther Phillips and Sonny Stitt, and even backed beat poet Allen Ginsberg on several recordings. In a career spanning three decades, Sholle has released only two albums under his own name, but both are worthy of attention.

Michelle Shocked (© Ken Settle)

what's available: Catfish for Supper ♪♪♪ (Rounder, 1979) is a lively, eclectic recording that delves into classic jazz, Western swing, and bluegrass. Out of the Frying Pan ♪♪♪ (Rounder, 1996) is a straighter bluegrass offering on which Sholle plays with most of the New York bluegrass mafia (Andy Statman, Kenny Kosek, Tony Trischka, and Keith Edwards). David Grisman plays on Sholle's Dawgish swing tune, "Jon's Jump."

influences:

◀◀ T. Bone Walker, Django Reinhardt, Lester Flatt

▶▶ Scott Nygaard, David Grier

see also: David Grisman, Andy Statman

Michael Parrish

Shooglenifty

Formed 1994, in Edinburgh, Scotland.

Iain Macleod, mandolin, tenor banjo; Angus R. Grant; Carry Finlayson, banjo, banjax; Malcolm Crosbie, acoustic guitar, electric guitar; Conrad Iviteky, bass; James MacKintosh, drums, percussion, piano.

At the forefront of Scotland's '90s generation of "roots" bands is Shooglenifty. The group describes itself as "hypnofunkadelic ambient trad" or "acid croft." If that doesn't help, think of a buzzing fusion of traditional Scottish dance music with modern pop/rhythm grooves. Equally at home playing on a folk/world music festival stage or at urban concert halls and dance clubs, the band has traveled extensively, thrilling audiences in the United Kingdom, Poland, Spain, Denmark, and as far afield as

Hong Kong, Kuala Lumpur, and Malaysia. Shooglenifty has recorded two studio albums and one live set, and members of the band also participated in the Afro Celt Sound System recording project.

what's available: The group's first album, Venus in Tweeds ♪♪♪♪ (Greentrax, 1994, prod. Jim Sutherland), is a bit softer than its successor, A Whiskey Lass ♪♪♪♪♪ (Greentrax, 1996, prod. Jim Sutherland). On A Whiskey Lass the rhythms are tougher; drums are more prominent and much better used to become a fully integrated part of the band. The band as a whole played with more confidence and their music acquired an exciting edge.

worth searching for: Live at Selwyn Hall (WOMAD Select/Real World, 1996, prod. Iain Macleod, James MacKintosh) is the group's only other recording.

influences:

◀◀ Mouth Music, Capercaillie, Moving Hearts, Edward II

▶▶ Afro Celt Sound System, Peatbog Faeries, Old Blind Dogs, Talitha Mackenzie, Mary Jane Lamond

Ken Roseman

Jane Siberry

Born October 12, 1955, in Toronto, Ontario, Canada.

A Canadian musician who brings song, poetry, film, and technology together, Siberry sings in a style that makes her nearly impossible to fit into any format—although "electrified, modern folk" is as close a description as you can get. From a humble recording beginning, Siberry financed her first record, No Borders Here, by tips earned from waitressing as she studied microbiology at the University of Guelph. Since then, she has tackled rock and jazz in styles reminiscent of Laurie Anderson—only more melodic. Her most recent works are fodder for easy-listeners who like something a little sexy and blue with their love songs. Siberry's concert performances wow audiences with self-produced videos, stream-of-consciousness rambles, and even question-and-answer sessions. "How do you do your hair?" is one question that seems to pop up frequently to this multi-coiffed musician.

what to buy: When I Was a Boy ♪♪♪♪♪ (Reprise, 1993, prod. Jane Siberry, Brian Eno, Michael Brook) is a dark, beautiful masterpiece. It's a wash of vocal and keyboard textures, and some of the songs resemble short movies, complete with a cast of singing angels and medieval-style sinners, such as the electronic "Temple" or "An Angel Stepped Down," both heavy on Old Testament imagery.

what to buy next: Bound by the Beauty ♪♪♪♪ (Reprise, 1989, prod. Jane Siberry, John Switzer) has the excellent title track and "Something about Trains," two k.d. lang–like country-folk-rock songs anchored by Siberry's powerful, angelic voice. No Borders Here ♪♪♪½ (Duke Street, 1984, prod. Jon Goldsmith, Kerry Crawford, Jane Siberry, John Switzer) was Siberry's first release, and is worth getting for "Mimi on the Beach," an underground hit in Canada.

what to avoid: Siberry recorded 13 songs she wrote as a teenager on the appropriately titled Teenager ♪♪ (Sheeba, 1996). Clean and sparse, the songs charm in their innocent way—they're recommended for die-hard fans, but are best for a historical point of view.

the rest:
The Walking ♪♪♪ (Reprise, 1988)

worth searching for: Siberry's brooding "She's like the Swallow," on Hector Zazou's Arctic-song collection Songs from the Cold Seas ♪♪♪½ (Sony, 1995, prod. Hector Zazou) is a gem following in the same style as When I Was a Boy.

influences:

◀◀ Laurie Anderson, Joni Mitchell, Kate Bush, Emmylou Harris, Peter Gabriel, Brian Eno, Daniel Lanois

▶▶ Suzanne Vega, Sinéad O'Connor, k.d. lang, Enya, Björk

Jack Jackson

Rockin' Sidney

Born Sidney Simien, April 9, 1938, in Lebeau, LA.

Rockin' Sidney Simien began playing guitar and harmonica before discovering accordion (he also played organ in Lake Charles lounges). He started playing professionally in his late teens and had his first regional hit in 1957. His 1962 hit record "No Good Woman" was backed with "You Ain't Nothin but Fine," which would eventually be covered by Rockpile. During his days on the soul circuit he was Count Rockin' Sidney and performed wearing a turban. Like Lynn August, he also worked the Lafayette circuit as an organist. Starting in the 1970s he began to work more in a zydeco vein that owed much to Clifton Chenier, but in 1985 he struck gold with the unlikely hit "My Toot Toot." This song is loosely based on a French expression for a term of endearment, "my special all and all." "Toot Toot" won a Grammy and received radio airplay far outside of the normal spectrum for zydeco recordings. As to be expected, Sidney's sound is much more soul- and R&B-influenced than most other zydeco performers. His recordings are almost always a mixed bag.

what to buy: My Toot Toot ♪♪♪ (Maison de Soul, 1986, prod. Sidney Simien) includes the more band-oriented version of "My Toot Toot," probably the most well-known zydeco song there is. He covers his hits with a good solid band that includes Katie Webster, Warren Storm, and Marcus Miller, but the record is still missing the level of passion and excitement found on most zydeco records.

what to buy next: Sidney plays all the instruments on My Zydeco Shoes Got the Zydeco Blues ♪♪½ (Maison de Soul, 1984, prod. Sidney Simien). Sometimes this works, sometimes it doesn't. It contains many of the same tunes as My Toot Toot.

the rest:
Give Me a Good Time Woman ♪♪♪ (Maison de Soul, 1982)

worth searching for: Forget about "Toot Toot"; Rockin' Sydney and His Dukes: They Call Me Rockin' ♪♪♪♪ (Flyright, 1974, prod. Floyd Soileau) is the record that you want to check out. It's not zydeco or Cajun music, it's the R&B that you could find in the same area in the 1960s and 1970s. This is what Rockin' Sidney is really known for, and it brings together his hits and his B-sides. The most famous track here is "You Ain't Nothin' but Fine," but there are plenty of excellent tunes to go around.

influences:

- Clifton Chenier
- Nathan Williams, Lynn August, Zydeco Force, John Delafose

Jared Snyder

Paul Siebel

Born 1937, in Buffalo, NY.

Even though Paul Siebel hasn't been active as a working musician since the early 1980s, he has achieved near-legendary status, ranking alongside such icons as Joni Mitchell and Bob Dylan as one of the best writers to come out of the "folk scare" of the 1960s. Siebel's songs endure as masterpieces of modern songwriting: unforgettable melodies paired with an uncanny instinct for blending poetry, storytelling, and incisive character sketches. His songs have been covered by Bonnie Raitt ("Louise," "Any Day Woman"), Linda Ronstadt, Emmylou Harris, Waylon Jennings, and many others. Siebel is also a passionate and intense singer, with the ability to be tender, sarcastic, occasionally joyful, but more often melancholy and regretful. The nasal quality of his voice is reminiscent of Dylan—but a Dylan with a huge vocal range, who sings in tune, and is a hellacious yodeler. Born in upstate New York at the tail end of the depression, Siebel taught himself to play guitar while in his teens, drawing ideas, inspiration, and vocal stylings from such country music stars as Hank Snow and Hank Williams. After serving in the military, he returned home and began performing in local folk clubs in 1962. In 1965 he moved to Greenwich Village, at that time a hotbed of talented folk musicians including Dylan, Jerry Jeff Walker, the Lovin' Spoonful, and Dave Van Ronk. In 1969 Elektra record producer Peter Siegel made a demo recording of Siebel, backed by guitarist David Bromberg, which he passed on to Elektra Records A&R man Jac Holzman. Holzman offered Siebel a very modest recording contract; there was only enough money for four three-hour recording sessions, which resulted in Siebel's debut album, Woodsmoke and Oranges. Perhaps the tiny budget was a blessing in disguise, for Woodsmoke and Oranges is exceptional in its emotional spontaneity. Siebel continued to tour through the 1970s, but became disenchanted with the music business and retired from performing during the early '80s. He had never had any enthusiasm for the interviews, rehearsals, and publicity events that go along with the business side of making music. His songwriting muse seemed to have deserted him too, after two albums, and he found himself getting irritated when fans would ask him whether he'd written any new songs. As he said in 1996, "I wasn't moving. It got to a point of either go forward with this or stop."

what to buy: The recent Paul Siebel ♪♪♪♪♪ (Philo/Rounder, 1995, prod. Peter K. Siegel, Robert W. Zachary Jr.) contains Siebel's landmark debut album in its entirety and much of his follow-up album as well. Here are his best-known songs, "Louise" and "Any Day Woman," but also many little-known gems like the sardonic "Miss Cherry Lane," a scathing depiction of a groupie: "She's really quite commonplace, she pencils it on her face, and very well-read, reading magazines." "Long Afternoons" is a wistful remembering of a bygone love affair. Both the poignant "Bride 45" (a great version of this song has been recorded by Rosalie Sorrells) and "My Town" expose the dark underside of post–World War II suburbia. Woodsmoke and Oranges may be one of the best albums of all time, of any genre. Every single song on it is a work of genius. As if Siebel's incredibly intense singing and his beautifully crafted songs weren't enough, the album also features a crack backup band, including guitar virtuoso David Bromberg, fiddler Richard Greene, and veteran Nashville steel player Weldon Myrick.

what to buy next: If you can find it, buy Jack-Knife Gypsy ♪♪♪½ (Elektra, 1970, prod. Robert W. Zachary Jr.). This will give you the six tracks from Siebel's second album that didn't make the Philo reissue, including such really fine songs as the Cajunesque "The Captain's Daughter" and "Hillbilly Child," which (like "Then Came the Children" on Woodsmoke and Oranges) is sung from the vantage point of the disillusioned, world-weary older generation trying to relate to someone who is just beginning adulthood.

what to avoid: Although Siebel is listed as appearing on Woodstock Mountains/Music from Mud Acres (Rounder, 1987), he's not actually on this CD; look for the LP instead.

worth searching for: Live at McCabes ♪♪♪ (Rag Baby LP, 1981) was recorded at McCabe's in Santa Monica, California, with accompaniment by David Bromberg and Gary White, both of whom played on Woodsmoke and Oranges. In addition to his familiar originals, Siebel also sings songs from some of the musicians who inspired him, such as Jimmie Rodgers. Siebel can also be heard singing the Hank Williams classic "Weary Blues" on the LP compilation Woodstock Mountains ♪♪½ (Rounder, 1977, prod. Happy Traum).

influences:

◀◀ Jimmie Rodgers, Hank Snow, Hank Williams, Bob Dylan, Dave Van Ronk ▶▶ Bonnie Raitt, Iain Matthews, Emmylou Harris, Butch Hancock, Robert Earl Keen see also: David Bromberg

Suzy Rothfield Thompson

Dick Siegel

Born December 28, 1948, in Newark, NJ.

A veteran of several semi-successful Midwest bands during the '70s and '80s (most notably Siegel Schwall), Dick Siegel didn't really hit his stride until he went solo during the mid-'70s. His work is based on folk music, but the folk is taken uptown and uptempo with a big jolt of finger-snapping jive. His songs have an old-fashioned feel—his venues are "joints," and they're usually "jumpin'." Lyrically, Siegel sticks with the simple subjects like listening to a favorite band or the joys of eating breakfast at a favored Ann Arbor, Michigan, hangout. In 1992 he won a New Folk award at the Kerrville Folk Festival and has since become a popular fixture on the folk circuit.

what to buy: Siegel first released Snap! ♪♪♪♪ (Boo-Kay, 1980/Schoolkids, 1992, prod. Neil Scott, Dick Siegel) on his own tiny Boo-Kay records, but it wasn't until its re-release more than a decade later that the record found a wider audience for its jazzy swing sound.

what to buy next: On Angels Aweigh ♪♪♪½ (Schoolkids, 1994, prod. Paul Pearcy, Dick Siegel), Siegel loses some of the jazziness and puts the emphasis on a gentler folk sound.

what to avoid: Siegel's turn with '80s party band Tracy Lee and the Leonards on the cassette-only Tomorrow Morning ♪ (Schoolkids, 1993, prod. Dick Siegel, George Bedard, Greg Ward) sounds dated now.

worth searching for: During the '80s, Siegel made a compilation of his live performances with his band the Ministers of Melody on the cassette-only Dick Siegel Live ♪♪½ (Boo-Kay, 1984, prod. Dick Siegel).

influences:

◀◀ Dr. John, Bob Dylan

▶▶ Townes Van Zandt, Mark Eitzel, John Doe (X)

Jill Hamilton

Sileas

Formed 1985, in Scotland.

Patsy Seddon, vocals, harps; Mary Macmaster, vocals, harps.

Using unusual rhythms and a sense of their Scottish heritage, Patsy Seddon and Mary Macmaster have created a new standard in Scottish harp music. The only professional harp duo in Scotland, they have imbued their native music with their own creativity, and brought it alive with their vibrant harping. They have brought a variety of new repertoire to the harp, importing exciting reels and strathspeys from pipers, and bringing dance music alive. This is an amazing feat, especially considering that the two never set out to become musicians. They were both drawn to the harp at separate times of their lives, but somehow came together, with the help of a workshop, a college, and the formation of a band called Sprangeen. They are also a part of the Poozies. There are an abundance of singing harpers in the folk scene, but usually they are primarily a harper or primarily a singer, not both. One of the things that makes Sileas so unusual is the dual talent of both Macmaster and Seddon. Both women have dynamic voices and use them to create rich harmonies paired with stunning melodies throughout their music. Their mouth music and waulking songs are phenomenal, combining traditional lyrics and melodies with their own sense of rhythm and harmony, weaving a new texture to the fabric of the music. Along with these compelling vocals, they add their exciting harping. Seddon studied with Alison Kinnaird for four years as a child, where she gained a solid understanding of the Scottish style of playing. Macmaster is self-taught, but still plays a mean harp. The two have explored the versatility of the instrument, bringing it to new levels with their own techniques and voices. Their sound is distinct, both due to their terrific blend of voices and the combination of wire-strung, gut-strung, and electro harps.

what to buy: Delighted with Harps ♪♪♪♪½ (Lapwing, 1986/ Green Linnet 1987, prod. Freeland Barbour) captures the spirit of traditional Scottish music with such treats as "The North Brig o' Edinburgh," a delightfully rhythmic strathspey, and "Da Day Dawn," a dreamy air singing praise of the morning. Their evocative singing of the waulking song "Tha Mulad" can give one chills. Beating Harps ♪♪♪♪½ (Green Linnet, 1988 prod. Freeland Barbour) continues the high standards set in their first album. Of particular note are a haunting love song, "Ca' the Yowes," and a fun march/strathspey/reel set featuring "The Devil in the Kitchen."

what to buy next: Play on Light ♪♪♪♪ (Greentrax, 1996, prod. Jim Sutherland) continues in the strong tradition of the first two albums, with delightful tracks, including the sad tale of "May Colvin," a fascinating rendition of "Ain't No Sunshine," and a show-stealing set that includes the sparkling original "Planxty Crockery" and the memorable and traditional "Domhnall Dubh." There's a touch heavier production to this one, which makes it a little less live and exciting.

what to avoid: Harpbreakers ♪♪♪ (Lapwing, 1990) is a nice album with excellent tunes, but it has a heavier use of the electro harp, which causes it to lose the traditional, acoustic feel the rest of their albums have.

influences:

Alison Kinnaird, Alan Stivell, Easy Club, Salif Keita, Morag MacLeod

Sue Richards, Knodel & Valencia

Jo Hughey Morrison

Silly Sisters

See: June Tabor, Steeleye Span

Silly Wizard

Formed 1972, in Edinburgh, Scotland. Disbanded 1988.

Andy M. Stewart, vocals, banjo; Phil Cunningham, accordion, keyboards, whistle; John Cunningham, fiddle, vocals; Gordon Jones, acoustic guitar, bodhrán, vocals; Martin Hadden, bass, guitar, vocals.

Characterized as one of the most traditional of all folk bands, Silly Wizard was known for their electric playing of mostly acoustic instruments. John Cunningham's flying fiddle, his brother Phil's amazing accordion, Andy Stewart's stirring vocals, and Gordon Jones's accompanying guitar helped define the band's sound. Rivaling the best of contemporary folk groups, Silly Wizard brought a unique chemistry to the stage, through its members' good-natured humor and technically brilliant musicianship, not to mention a passion for the music and performance itself. Rivaling Steeleye Span in its focus and aim, Silly Wizard's music was distinctly different from anything else popular on the folk circuit of the day. Perhaps this was largely due to the group's unquestionably Scottish sound and Stewart's powerful sense of song and ballad. The group's history was tumultuous. It started as a threesome (Gordon Jones, Bob Thomas, and John Cunningham), working around Cunningham's schedule, as he was only 14 at the time. These three recorded an album with singer Maddy Taylor, but it was never released. Soon after this, Stewart joined the group, along with John's younger brother Phil, on accordion. Living in squalid digs and fighting to keep their heads above water, they finally had a major breakthrough with a huge recording offer from a London firm. However, the deal fell through, leaving them to find their own way to the top. They eventually recorded 10 albums and toured all over Europe and America, building a reputation as solid as their musicianship. Their fiery dance tunes and soulful ballads live on in their excellent recordings, despite the band's demise.

what to buy: Widely considered the ultimate Silly Wizard recording, Live Wizardry ♪♪♪♪ (Green Linnet, 1988, prod. Phil Cunningham) captures the scope and spirit of the band in concert, playing their best-loved tunes. Live performance definitely brings out the best in this group, as shown through such tracks as the moving "The Valley of Strathmore" and the energetic "The Queen of Argyll." Another excellent collection of the band's work is The Best of Silly Wizard ♪♪♪♪½ (Shanachie, 1985, prod. Silly Wizard), which includes a number of its most popular songs.

what to buy next: With a delightful selection of tunes, So Many Partings ♪♪♪♪½ (Highway, 1978/ Shanachie, 1989, prod. Archie Fisher, Silly Wizard) may show the best mix of ballads and dance tunes of any of the albums. Standout tracks include Andy Stewart's "The Highland Clearances," a heartfelt lament about the loss of natural landscape in Scotland, and the stirring "Donald McGillavry/O'Neill's Cavalry March." Caledonia's Hardy Sons ♪♪♪ (Highway, 1978/Shanachie, 1989, prod. Silly Wizard, John Zollman) displays the excellent accordion work of Phil Cunningham and includes two of the group's best ballads, "Fhear a Bhata" and "Broom o' the Cowdenknowes."

what to avoid: Golden, Golden ♪♪♪♪ (REL/Green Linnet, 1989) and Silly Wizard: Live in America ♪♪♪♪ (REL/Green Linnet, 1989) are a pair of recordings that captured the band in concert in Boston. These two were later released on a single album, Live Wizardry. Live Wizardry is missing only one track from the original pair, so is the better choice for most fans.

the rest:
Wild and Beautiful ♪♪♪ (Highway, 1981/Shanachie, 1982)
Kiss the Tears Away ♪♪ (Highway, 1983/Shanachie, 1987) Glint of Silver ♪♪ (Green Linnet, 1986)

influences:
◀◀ Dougie MacLean, Boys of the Lough, Whistlebinkies, Planxty ▶▶ Capercaillie, Tannahill Weavers

see also: John Cunningham, Phil Cunningham, Andy Stewart, Nightnoise

Jo Hughey Morrison

Shel Silverstein

Born November 23, 1932, in Chicago, IL.

A man of varied talents, Shel Silverstein divided his creative life into two parts: a writer/cartoonist who wrote both children's books and social commentary for Playboy; and a witty songwriter who wrapped novel lyrics around simple folk tunes. In 1969 Johnny Cash recorded Silverstein's "A Boy Named Sue" live at San Quentin Prison, and the song eventually flew to #2 on the Hot 100 to become the commercial highlight of Cash's career. Loretta Lynn recorded "One's on the Way," and Dr. Hook and the Medicine Show got a pair of huge hits out of the writer's "Sylvia's Mother" and "Cover of the Rolling Stone."

what's available: Where the Sidewalk Ends ♪♪♪ (Sony Kid's Music, 1976/1992) shows Silverstein's gift for penning kids tunes with stuff like "Ickle Me, Pickle Me, Tickle Me Too" and "Crocodile's Toothache."

the rest:
The Great Conch Train Robbery (Flying Fish)
A Light in the Attic ♪♪♪ (Sony Kid's Music, 1992)

worth searching for: Freakin' at the Freakers Ball ♪♪♪ (CBS, 1969, prod. Roy Halee) became a 1969 cult classic due to its abundance of counterculture/hippie themes, including the hilarious title track, "I Got Stoned and I Missed It," and "Don't Give a Dose to the One You Love Most," while 1972's Songs and Stories ♪♪♪ (Parachute, 1972, prod. Ron Haffkine) includes such commendable titles as "Never Bite a Married Woman on the Thigh" and "Someone Ate the Baby."

influences:
◀◀ Tom Lehrer
▶▶ Dr. Hook

David Simons

Simon & Garfunkel

Formed 1956, in New York, NY. Disbanded 1970.

Paul Simon (born October 13, 1941, in Newark, NJ), vocals, guitar; Art Garfunkel (born November 5, 1941, in New York, NY), vocals.

Never mind that their first hit happened after they had broken up a second time; Simon and Garfunkel proved one of the most durable of the folk groups of the '60s—and all-time. Boyhood friends who had a minor hit ("Hey, Schoolgirl") in 1957 as Tom and Jerry, they recorded on and off, including a folk album, Wednesday Morning, 3 A.M., in 1964 before Simon headed off to England. It might have ended there, but for producer Tom Wilson; the rock backing that he added to "The Sounds of Silence" sounds more forced and intrusive today than it did back then, but it proved perfect radio fare for the mid-'60s alongside the chiming guitars of the Byrds' "Turn, Turn, Turn" and the Beatles' "We Can Work It Out." Simon returned and came up with literate, ambitious songs like "Homeward Bound," "I Am a Rock," "The Dangling Conversation," "The Boxer," and "Mrs. Robinson"—the latter a massive hit in the soundtrack for The Graduate. With equally ambitious production, they became some of the era's biggest hits and threaded together the folk/protest movement of the early '60s, Simon's earlier Brill Building apprenticeship, and the burgeoning singer/songwriter movement. If his confessional lyrics often seemed pretentiously literary (see "Richard Cory") and were considered sophomoric tripe by some critics, they were also seen as poetry by the baby boom generation entering college. In fact, Simon's lyrics often found their way into college literature and poetry courses. The obvious disparity and tension in the act—Simon was musically adept, wrote the songs and sang most of them; Garfunkel played no instrument, sang harmony and occasional lead—resulted in their parting while they were at a creative and commercial peak with Bridge over Troubled Water, their most successful album and, with the title track (their last Number One), Garfunkel's best moment. Garfunkel went on to films (Catch-22, Carnal Knowledge) and a part-time recording career. Simon began a more successful solo career. They have collaborated occasionally since then, including a massive reunion concert in New York's Central Park during 1981. After Simon and Garfunkel, any nerd with a sensitive lyric, a few guitar moves, and a friend singing would become fair game for the pop market.

what to buy: Bookends ♪♪♪♪♪ (Columbia, 1968, prod. Paul Simon, Art Garfunkel, Roy Halee) holds together like a concept album, with the film hit "Mrs. Robinson" crassly tacked on at the end. Parsley, Sage, Rosemary and Thyme ♪♪♪♪½ (Columbia, 1966, prod. Bob Johnston) is their real first album together as S&G.

what to buy next: Bridge over Troubled Water ♪♪♪♪ (Columbia, 1970, prod. Paul Simon, Art Garfunkel, Roy Halee) is considered their masterpiece, though today it sounds overproduced. Sounds of Silence ♪♪♪♪ (Columbia, 1966, prod. Bob Johnston) is basically an electric reworking of The Paul Simon Songbook (CBS UK, 1965), adding the electrified "Sounds of Silence."

what to avoid: Yes, The Graduate ♪ (Columbia, 1968, prod. Teo Macero) was an important soundtrack; no, it doesn't have anything new on it except "Mrs. Robinson." The Concert in Central Park ♪ (Warner Bros., 1982, prod. Paul Simon, Art Garfunkel, Roy Halee, Phil Ramone) is a too-late attempt to recapture the magic.

the rest:
Wednesday Morning, 3 A.M. ♪♪♪ (Columbia, 1964)
Greatest Hits ♪♪♪ (Columbia, 1972)
Old Friends ♪♪♪½ (Columbia, 1997) worth searching for: Collected Works ♪♪♪♪♪ (Columbia, 1990, prod. various) combines all the studio albums on three compact discs.

influences:
◀◀ Pete Seeger, Weavers, Peter, Paul & Mary, Bob Dylan, Kingston Trio, Beach Boys, Everly Brothers

▶▶ James Taylor, George Harrison, Jim Croce, Jackson Browne, Mary Chapin Carpenter, Joe Henry, Sheryl Crow

see also: Paul Simon, Art Garfunkel

Leland Rucker

Carly Simon

Born June 25, 1945, in New York, NY.

Carly Simon's career began more than 30 years ago when she dueted with her sister, Lucy, on "Winken Blinken, and Nod," a modest hit on the Kapp label. After a couple of false starts, Simon—whose father co-founded the Simon & Schuster publishing house and who was married to James Taylor between 1972–83—landed a deal with Elektra and her self-titled debut was released in 1971. Her warm, often vulnerable-sounding vocals share romantic intimacies, child-like wonders, and bold observations. Though she's released a continuous stream of recordings, the '70s remain her most accomplished decade; part of her appeal, as well as a problem, is that no one knows quite what to expect from one recording to the next—an artistically bold approach but one that hasn't helped Simon build a loyal, dependable audience. Her spotty Hotcakes album is a case in point; she scored a hit with the buoyant "Mockingbird" (a duet with Taylor), but it was her more introspective and heartfelt songs, such as "Haven't Got Time for the Pain," that rang the truest.

what to buy: Simon's first three albums remain her best. No Secrets ♪♪♪♪ (Elektra, 1972, prod. Richard Perry) is forthright, passionate, and wonderfully outspoken, particularly on the great put-down classic "You're So Vain." Her debut, Carly Simon ♪♪♪♪ (Elektra, 1971, prod. Eddie Kramer), is a fine melding of rock, pop, blues, country, and ballads. She landed a deserved Top 10 with the lead track, "That's the Way I Always Heard It Should Be." Anticipation ♪♪♪½ (Elektra, 1971, prod. Paul Samwell-Smith) is not as varied and lacks the instrumental depth of Simon's debut, but her vocals carry the album in an increasingly confident and, at times, confidential manner.

what to buy next: Coming around Again ♪♪♪ (Arista, 1987, prod. various) is a mature, confident work with hits in the title track, "All I Want Is You," and "Give Me All Night." Letters Never Sent ♪♪♪½ (Arista, 1994) takes an interesting concept—notes and letters that Simon has stashed away—and turns it into a rich, personal musical outing.

what to avoid: Simon's to attempts to cover American popular standards generally wind up in failure. Though her heart may be in Torch woof! (Warner Bros., 1981) and My Romance woof! (Arista, 1990), her pipes and tone are incompatible, so removed from the high quality of the real thing as to be an embarrassment.

the rest:
Hotcakes ♪♪½ (Elektra, 1974)
Playing Possum ♪♪ (Elektra, 1975)

mountain dulcimer

The mountain dulcimer is often referred to as a fretted dulcimer, Appalachian dulcimer, or lap dulcimer, in an effort to differentiate it from the hammered dulcimer, which is no relation. The mountain dulcimer heard in most folk recordings is a long, narrow, fretted instrument played flat on one's lap, most often strung with three or four strings. Early mountain dulcimers evolved in the late eighteenth century in the southern Appalachian mountains from a German instrument called the scheitholt. The dulcimer was considered a safe and proper instrument by those God-fearing people who felt the fiddle to be a rakish instrument only for rowdy dances. The dulcimer was perfect for accompanying the old songs and hymns and became a popular parlor instrument. Old-timers today can still remember having them in the house when they were growing up. Dulcimers are commonly played with bare fingers, but various "picks" are utilized, including turkey quills, willow switches, and of course, standard guitar picks. On rare occasions a dulcimer is played with a bow. Typically the left hand is used for noting the strings, but occasionally dulcimer players will use a wooden "noter" to fret the strings. One fine example of the many different styles of mountain dulcimer playing can be heard on Masters of the Mountain Dulcimer (Susan Trump Music, 1997).

Heidi Cerrigione

The Best of Carly Simon ♪♪♪ (Elektra, 1975/1987)
Another Passenger ♪♪½ (Elektra, 1976)
Boys in the Trees ♪♪ (Elektra, 1978)
Spy ♪½ (Elektra, 1979)
Come Upstairs ♪♪½ (Elektra, 1980)
Hello Big Man ♪½ (Warner Bros., 1983)
Spoiled Girl woof! (Epic, 1985)
Heartburn ♪♪ (soundtrack; Arista, 1986)
Working Girl ♪♪ (soundtrack; Arista, 1988)
Greatest Hits Live ♪♪½ (Arista, 1988)
Have You Seen Me Lately ♪ (Arista, 1990)
Postcards from the Edge ♪♪ (soundtrack; Arista, 1990)
This Is My Life ♪♪ (soundtrack; Qwest, 1992)
Clouds in My Coffee: 1965–95 ♪♪½ (Arista, 1995) Film Noir ♪♪½ (Arista, 1997)

influences:

James Taylor, Cat Stevens, Joni Mitchell, Carole King, Laura Nyro, Judy Collins, William Butler Yeats

Melissa Manchester, Olivia Newton-John, Helen Reddy, Yvonne Elliman

Patrick McCarty

Paul Simon

Born October 13, 1941, in Newark, NJ.

Riding high on the success of Simon and Garfunkel's "Bridge over Troubled Water"—the duo's last gasp—Paul Simon began strong as a solo artist, churning out five hits from his first three albums before cooling off. His attempt at a movie about the life of a touring rock act (One Trick Pony) flopped, and his 1983 Hearts and Bones—which started as a reunion album with Garfunkel—is still his worst-seller. In 1986 he took a chance, recording with South African musicians and then adding his own lyrics to the instrumental tracks. The resulting collaboration, Graceland, became one of the most influential albums of the '80s, exposing African music to American mainstream audiences like never before. Since then, he has recorded only one studio album, The Rhythm of the Saints, a less-successful attempt to fuse Brazilian music and his lyrics. Still, he remains one of the rock era's most accomplished and ambitious artists. His musical, The Capeman, written with Derek Walcott, appeared on Broadway in early 1998.

what to buy: Graceland ♪♪♪♪♪ (Warner Bros., 1986, prod. Paul Simon) is an amazing comeback and still the best collaboration between a Western songwriter and African musicians. Paul Simon ♪♪♪♪ (Warner Bros., 1972, prod. Paul Simon, Roy Halee) picks up the world music groove—which he lightly pursued with former partner Art Garfunkel—on the hits "Mother and Child Reunion" and "Me and Julio down by the Schoolyard."

what to buy next: Live Rhymin' ♪♪♪♪ (Columbia, 1974, prod. Phil Ramone), is a well-recorded live set that features the Dixie Hummingbirds singing backup and the Peruvian folk troupe Urubamba. Still Crazy after All These Years ♪♪♪♪ (Warner Bros.

Paul Simon (© Ken Settle)

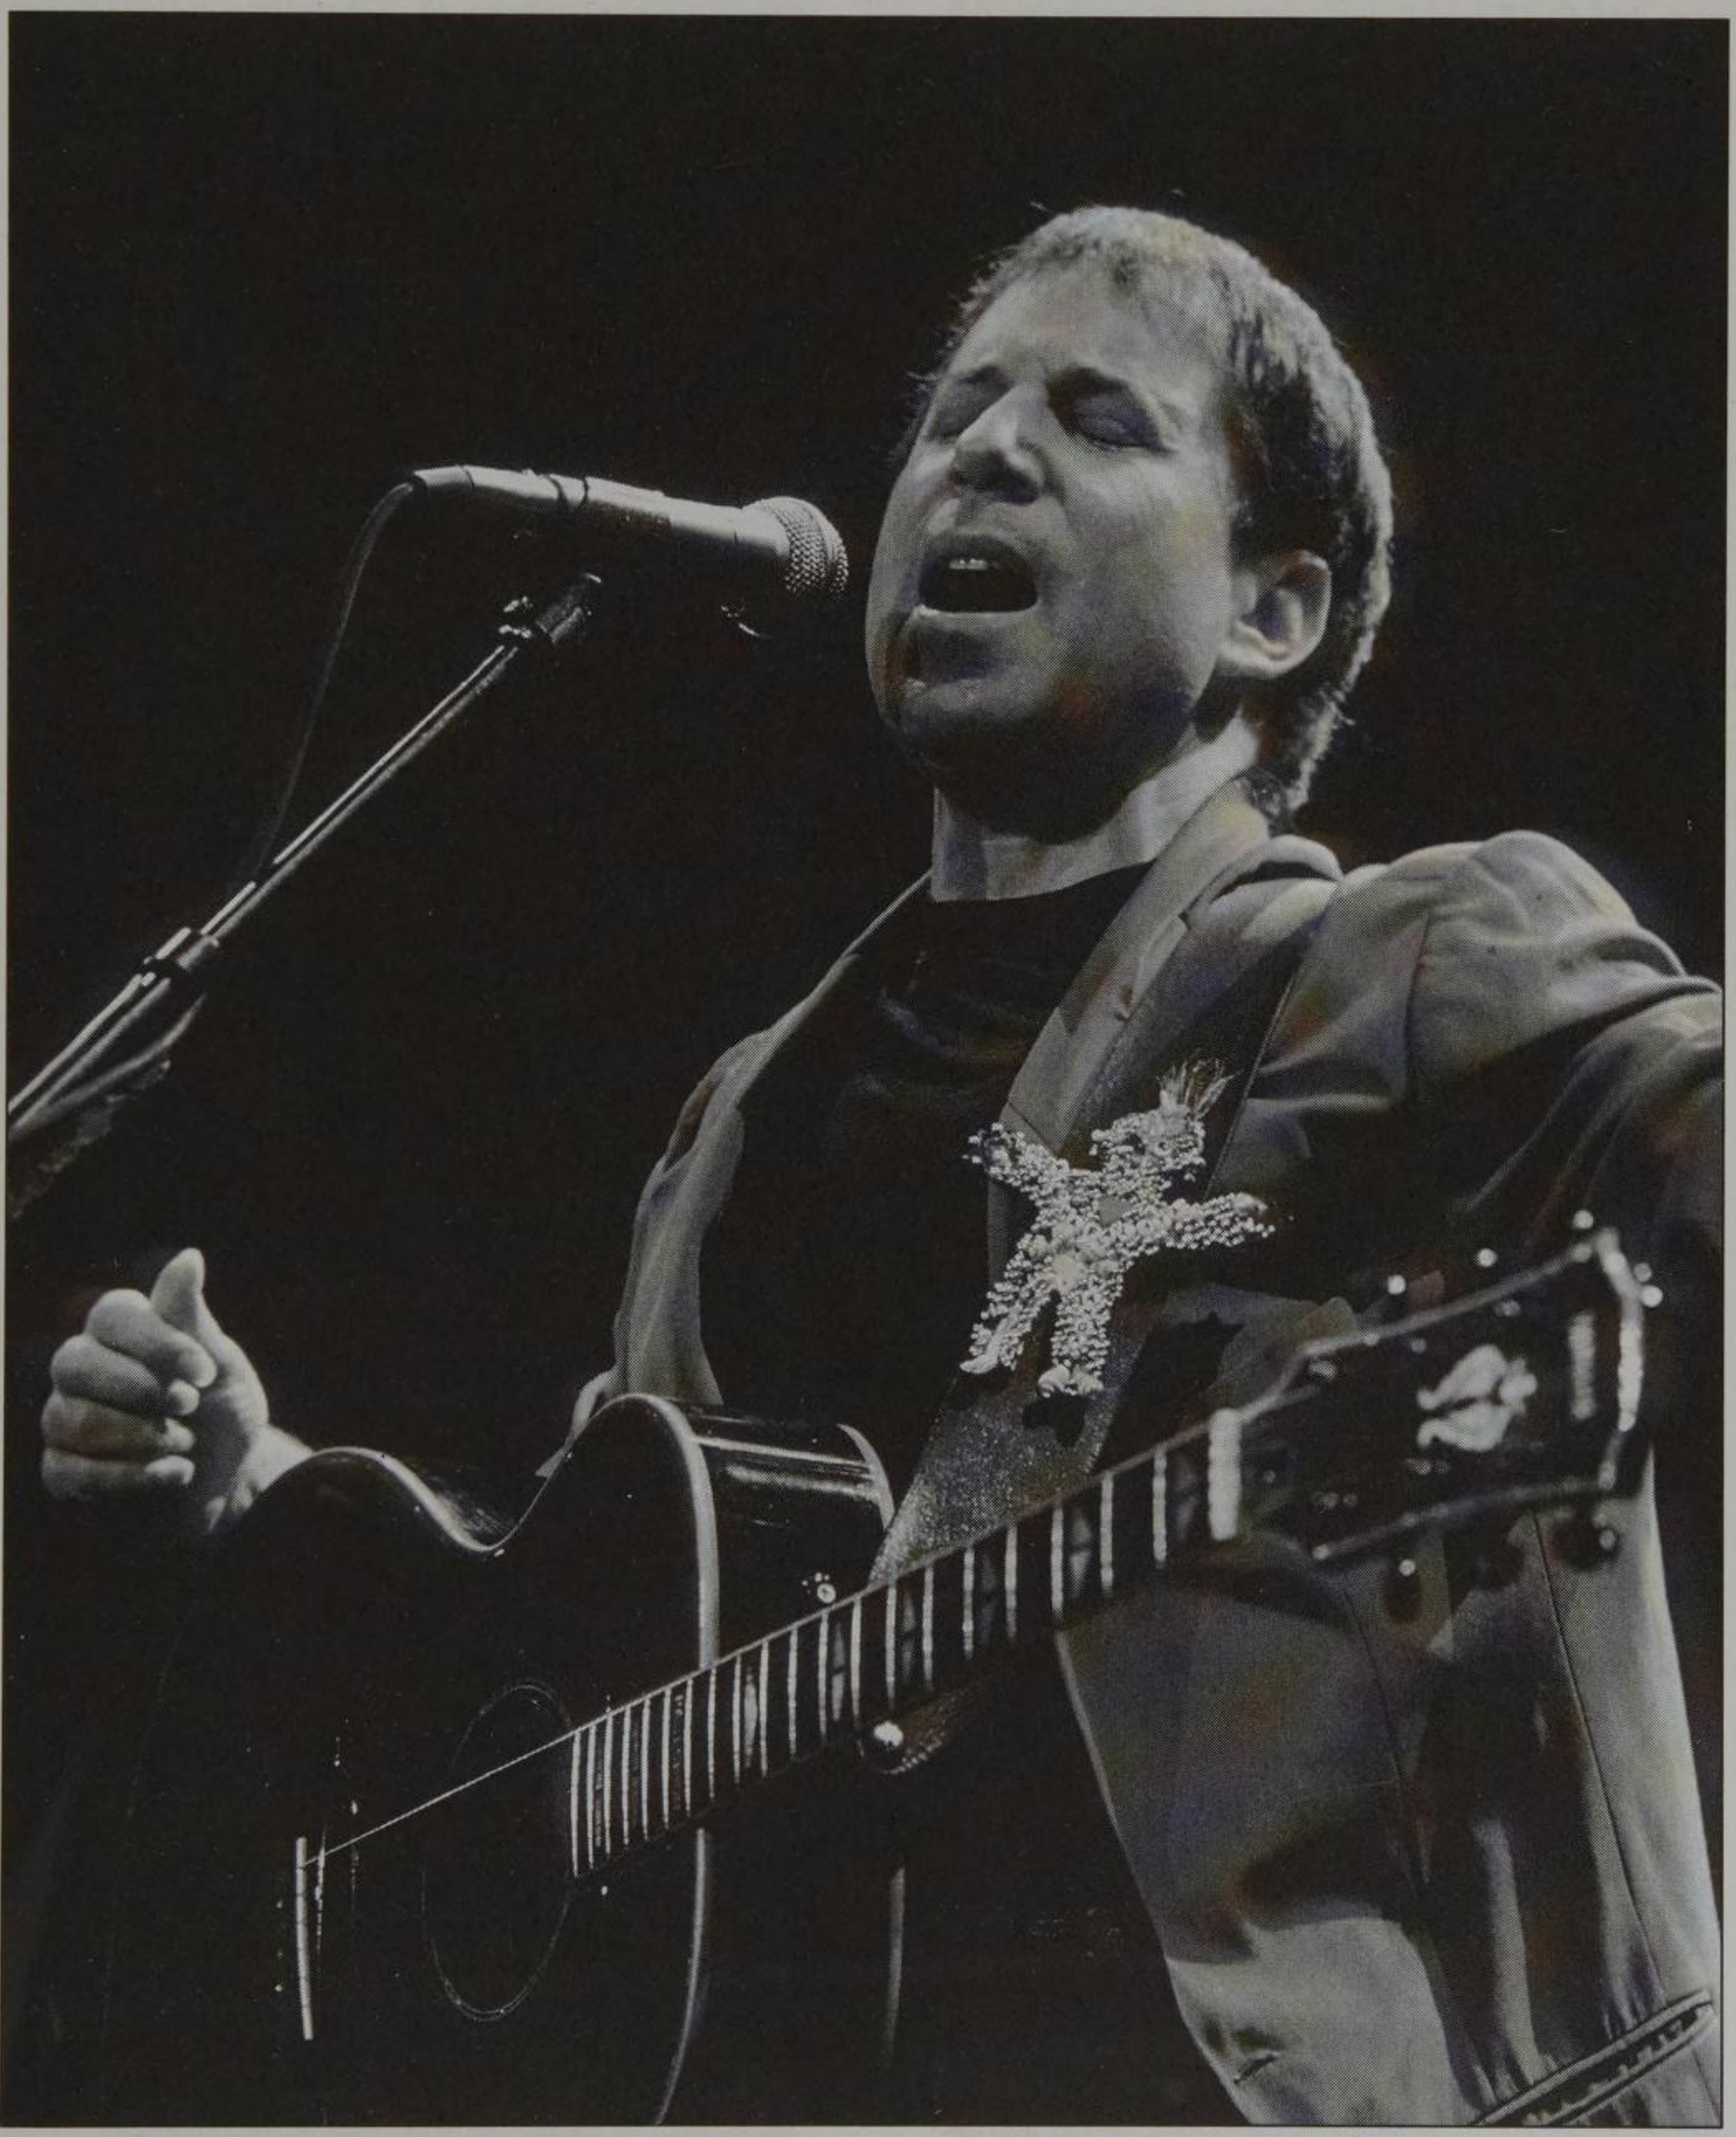
paul simon 7 2 7



mark simos

1975, prod. Paul Simon) features classy songs caught in a rich, '70s-styled production.

what to avoid: Hearts and Bones ♪♪ (Warner Bros., 1983, prod. Paul Simon, Russ Titelman, Roy Halee, Lenny Waronker) contains one great song ("The Late Great Johnny Ace"), but also features selections such as "When Numbers Get Serious" and "Cars Are Cars," which are as silly as their titles imply.

the rest:
There Goes Rhymin' Simon ♪♪♪ (Columbia, 1973)
Greatest Hits, Etc. ♪♪♪ (Columbia, 1977)
One Trick Pony ♪♪ (Warner Bros., 1980)
Negotiations and Love Songs ♪♪♪½ (Warner Bros., 1988)
The Rhythm of the Saints ♪♪♪½ (Warner Bros., 1990)
Paul Simon's Concert in the Park ♪♪♪½ (Warner Bros., 1991)
Paul Simon 1964/1993 ♪♪♪½ (Warner Bros., 1993)
Songs from the Capeman ♪♪♪♪ (Warner Bros., 1997) worth searching for: Paul Simon: The Collection ♪♪♪ (Warner Bros., 1991), a three-volume Japanese set that includes a selection of Simon's hits, a live set from his "Graceland" tour, and an interview, is worth scouting for.

influences:
◀◀ Pete Seeger, Weavers, Peter, Paul & Mary, Bob Dylan, Kingston Trio, Beach Boys, Everly Brothers

▶▶ James Taylor, George Harrison, Jim Croce, Jackson Browne, Mary Chapin Carpenter, Joe Henry, Sheryl Crow

see also: Simon & Garfunkel

Leland Rucker

Mark Simos

Born July 11, 1956, in Cleveland, OH.

Mark Simos is a modern-day traditionalist, a songwriter, and fiddler extraordinaire who has carved out a niche that includes bluegrass, Irish, Klezmer, Southern old-time, and Quebecois music. He calls his style "traditional music from imaginary countries," and there's a worldly spirituality that flavors his compositions, be they upbeat traditional, old-time fiddle music, contradance confections, or moving country-folk ballads. Back during the 1970s, Simos was a mainstay in California's Irish music scene, and over the years he's performed and recorded with many top-notch American and Irish traditional musicians. Simos appears on albums by Childsplay, John Whelan and Eileen Ivers, and Mick Moloney and Eugene O'Donnell, among others. His songs have been recorded by various artists including Alison Krauss, Ranch Romance, Kate Brislin and Jody Stecher, and Laurie Lewis. Simos's website, which shares its name with that of his publishing company, is www.devachan.com.

what's available: Race the River Jordan ♪♪♪♪ (Yodel-Ay-Hee, 1995, prod. Peter Langston, Mark Simos), subtitled "New Old-Time Style Fiddle Tunes," is the first Simos album to bear only his name (it's billed as Mark Simos and Friends). Consisting of original fiddle tunes and fresh Southern old-time material, the instrumental album (only the title track contains vocals) sparkles with a friendly, familiar back-porch spontaneity. Besides Simos's fiddle and piano (he calls it "frontier piano"), the impressive cast of players and friends includes Molly Tenenbaum (banjo), Daniel Steinberg (piano, flute), David Cahn (bass, mandolin, guitar), Dirk Powell (banjo, fiddle, bass, accordion), Jere Canote (guitar), and co-producer Langston (acoustic bass, guitar). Simos's considerable sense of humor comes through in the liner notes, which describe various songs as being inspired by reasons to give up coffee, a strange smell at a party, and a cat who went from crying piteously to meowing along with the fiddle while hearing a tape by Luther Strong.

worth searching for: These won't be hard to find. Alison Krauss and Union Station's So Long So Wrong ♪♪♪♪ (Rounder, 1997, prod. Alison Krauss and Union Station) contains two Simos compositions, "Deeper than Crying" and the album's first single, "Find My Way Back to My Heart." Laurie Lewis and Tom Rozum's Grammy-nominated The Oak and the Laurel ♪♪♪♪ (Rounder, 1995, prod. Laurie Lewis, Tom Rozum) features Simos's gorgeous love song, "Sleepy Eyes."

influences:
◀◀ The Band, Martin Carthy, Clare fiddler and flute player Joe Murtagh

▶▶ Alison Krauss, Laurie Lewis

David Sokol

Simple Gifts

Formed 1989, in Lemont, PA.

Linda Littleton, violin, recorder, bowed psaltery, hammered dulcimer (1989–present); Rachel Hall, English concertina, piano (1994–present); Karen Hirshon, violin, mandolin, banjolin, guitar, spoons, tambourine (1995–present); Toby Carlson, recorders, viola da gamba, bass viol (1989–94); Paul Oorts, guitar, mandolin, banjo (1991–95); Mark Fowler, mountain dulcimer (1989–91).

Simple Gifts presents an exciting and varied sound of international folk music that reflects the wide range and broad musical background of its members. Drawing on an impressive variety of ethnic folk styles, the group plays everything from lively Irish jigs and down-home American reels to hard-driving Klezmer frailachs and haunting Gypsy melodies, spicing the mix with distinctive rhythms of Balkan dance music, the lush sounds of Scandinavian twin fiddling, and original compositions written in a traditional style. Linda Littleton studied classical music for many years and serves as principal second violin of the Nittany Valley Symphony. She has always been intrigued by other styles and hopes to further the group's exploration into the music of her own eastern European and Jewish ancestors. Rachel Hall began playing piano for Cincinnati contra dances when she was in junior high school. A Watson fellowship allowed her to spend a year studying traditional dance music in Norway, the Shetland Islands, Scotland, and Ireland. Karen Hirshon is a native of Illinois and was a founding member of the bluegrass band Whetstone Run. As the newest member of Simple Gifts, this multi-instrumentalist brings a deep love of American music and some interesting percussion ideas. Former band members include Toby Carlson, a founding member of Nova Consort, which performs Renaissance and medieval music; and Paul Oorts, a native of Belgium who plays in all styles, from bluegrass to ragtime to new acoustic to more traditional folk.

what to buy: Down by the Sally Gardens ♪♪♪♪ (Purple Finch Productions, 1992, prod. Simple Gifts) is a collection of instrumental music from England, Ireland, and America that includes some contra and square-dance music, like "Liberty/St. Anne's Reel" and "Off to California/The Rights of Man," and English country dance tunes, like "Heartsease" and "Hole in the Wall." Oorts's outstanding guitar begins the title cut, underscored by Carlson's excellent viola da gamba, and then the two are joined by Littleton's sweet lyrical violin. Later in the recording, Celia Wyckoff (recorder, bass) joins Simple Gifts on two selections.

what to buy next: A Place Just Right ♪♪♪♪ (Purple Finch Productions, 1994, prod. Linda Littleton, Paul Oorts) includes talented Steve Schneider (hammered dulcimer, accordion), a wonderful addition to the Simple Gifts ensemble. This collection of traditional and original folk melodies contains two of Schneider's original compositions, "Jonah's Waltz" and "Zachary Duncan," as well as Littleton's "Nathan's Song," and the "Second Anniversary Waltz" written with Oorts. The arrangements are clearly innovative and feature the incredible talent of all four musicians. The newest recording, Other Places, Other Times ♪♪♪½ (Purple Finch Productions, 1996, prod. Seth Austen, Linda Littleton, Rachel Hall), is the result of a collaboration among three women of material from their most recent musical adventures to eastern Europe and Scandinavia. The selections include Klezmer, Romanian, Bulgarian, Irish, English, Scandinavian, Israeli, American, and original tunes. Although they treat each style of music with respect, you won't find the usual arrangements here. All of the Simple Gifts recordings are presented with comprehensive liner notes and are available from Simple Gifts, P.O. Box 968, Lemont, PA 16851.

the rest:
Simple Gifts ♪♪♪ (Purple Finch Productions, 1991) (cassette only)

influences:
◀◀ Natalie MacMaster, House Band, Helicon, Eileen Ivers ▶▶ Broadside Electric, No Strings Attached

see also: Steve Schneider

Heidi Cerrigione

Martin Simpson /Martin & Jessica Ruby Simpson /Band of Angels

Born May 5, 1953, in Scunthorpe, South Humberside, England.

Band of Angels: Jessica Ruby Simpson, vocals, percussion; Martin Simpson, guitar, vocal; Lisa Ekstrom, accordion, whistle, vocals; Alisa Fineman, harmonium, guitar, vocals; Kimball Hurd, mandolin, mandola, guitar, vocals; Barry Phillips, cello, bowed psaltery, harmonium, percussion, vocals.

That one so young as Martin Simpson is mentioned in the same breath as Martin Carthy and John Renbourn testifies to the skill of this innovative British guitarist. Simpson began playing guitar as the age of 12. By 18 he was opening for Steeleye Span on its British tour and had released his first album. In the years that followed, he has accompanied June Tabor, briefly joined the Albion Band, worked with Metamora, and released a number of albums. Since 1987 he has been living in the United States with his American wife, poet Jessica Ruby Simpson, with whom he has worked with the Band of Angels. American blues and gospel play a significant part in Simpson's musical style, and he moves between genres with great ease. A friend suggested an alternate title for Cool and Unusual: "Celtic Schmeltic."

what to buy: Cool and Unusual ♪♪♪♪½ (Red House, 1997, prod. Martin Simpson) ambles over the musical landscape, with Simpson on guitar and banjo accompanied by bowed tambour, marovany, cello, lap slide acoustic guitar, etc. The lack of vocals adds to the album's sense of mystery; the melodies could be from anywhere.

what to buy next: Simpson and wife's Band of Angels ♪♪♪½ (Red House, 1996) won't appeal to everyone. Ruby Simpson's voice–frail, wavering, sometimes flat—is an acquired taste. Her lyrics, however, are intriguing and filled with imagery. The instrumentation has the eerie, Eastern-Celtic effects found on some of Richard and Linda Thompson's albums.

best of the rest:
Closer Walk with Thee ♪♪♪½ (Gourd, 1994) Live ♪♪♪♪ (Red House, 1997)

worth searching for: Simpson's guitar work is a fitting accompaniment to June Tabor's voice on their album together, A Cut Above ♪♪♪♪ (Topic, 1989/Green Linnet, 1992, prod. Paul Brown).

influences:
◀◀ Martin Carthy, Richard & Linda Thompson, David Lindley ▶▶ Béla Fleck & the Flecktones

Pamela Murray Winters

Martin & Jessica Simpson

See: Martin Simpson

Sixteen Ninety-One

See: The Bothy Band

Ricky Skaggs

Born July 18, 1954, in Cordell, KY.

One of the most successful country artists of the 1980s, and also one of the most influential, Ricky Skaggs is credited with bringing bluegrass and roots music back into vogue shortly after the troubling Urban Cowboy phase had mercifully been laid to rest. A mandolin whiz before he hit his teens and a member of Ralph Stanley's Clinch Mountain Boys at age 15, alongside boyhood pal Keith Whitley, Skaggs retreated to the Washington, D.C., area by 19, tiring of life as a traveling bluegrass musician. However, his early retirement was short-lived after the Country Gentlemen invited him to tour with them. Following stints with J.D. Crowe and the New South and the Seldom Scene, Skaggs formed Boone Creek, adding electric instruments and drums to his band's sound. After Boone Creek's demise, he joined Emmylou Harris's Hot Band in 1977, replacing Rodney Crowell and putting his own bluegrass stamp on a string of Harris's late 1970s and early 1980s records, like the acoustic Roses in the Snow. Following a pair of critically acclaimed records on Sugar Hill during the late 1970s, Skaggs signed with Epic and began an impressive hitmaking streak, scoring 10 Number One singles in four short years, including his 1984 smash "Uncle Pen," the first bluegrass song to hit the top since Flatt and Scruggs's "Ballad of Jed Clampett" in 1963. Skaggs married Sharon White, of the Whites, in 1981 and joined the Grand Ole Opry in 1982. In 1985 the Country Music Association named him its Entertainer of the Year. After leaving Epic, he signed with Atlantic in 1995. Although some time has passed since Skaggs had a big charting single, he's still involved in several musical ventures, including a concert series taped for TNN at the historic Ryman Auditorium, as well as producing records for Dolly Parton and the Whites. Seen by many as a sort of successor to the late Bill Monroe, Skaggs prefers instead to be considered as one of many merely carrying on Monroe's legacy. The best of Skaggs's recorded work, however, would suggest otherwise.

what to buy: Bluegrass Rules ♪♪♪♪½ (Skaggs Family/Rounder, 1997, prod. Ricky Skaggs) is an energetic, faithful "mainstream" bluegrass record that sacrifices none of the traditional sound to gain accessibility. It's a real winner, and truly a bright spot in Skaggs's recent career. Highways and Heartaches ♪♪♪♪♪ (Epic, 1982, prod. Ricky Skaggs) contains three Number One singles, including Guy Clark's "Heartbroke," and stands as simply one of the best country albums of the 1980s, though it's certainly rivaled by its predecessor, Waitin' for the Sun to Shine ♪♪♪♪½ (Epic, 1981, prod. Ricky Skaggs).

what to buy next: Prior to his Epic signing, Skaggs was signed to independent Sugar Hill, where he made two exceptional records that leaned more heavily on bluegrass, but still showed Skaggs's penchant for experimentation. Sweet Temptation ♪♪♪♪½ (Sugar Hill, 1979) is a bluegrass/honky-tonk mixture, and Skaggs and Rice ♪♪♪♪½ (Sugar Hill, 1980), with guitarist Tony Rice, is a pure delight with spare instrumentation and an old-time sound.

the rest:
Family and Friends ♪♪♪♪ (Rounder, 1982/1986)
Don't Cheat in Our Hometown ♪♪♪½ (Sugar Hill/Epic, 1983)
Country Boy ♪♪♪♪½ (Epic, 1984)
Live in London ♪♪♪♪ (Epic, 1985)

Ricky Skaggs (© Jack Vartoogian)

Love's Gonna Get Ya! ♪♪♪ (Epic, 1986)
Comin' Home to Stay ♪♪♪ (Epic, 1988)
Kentucky Thunder ♪♪♪½ (Epic, 1989)
(With Keith Whitley) Second Generation Bluegrass ♪♪♪½ (Rebel, 1990)
My Father's Son ♪♪♪½ (Epic/Word, 1991)
Super Hits ♪♪♪ (Epic, 1993)
That's It ♪♪♪½ (Rebel, 1994)
Solid Ground ♪♪♪ (Atlantic, 1995)
Country Pride ♪♪♪ (Sony Music Special Products, 1995)
Country Songs ♪♪♪ (Sony Music Special Products, 1996)
Life Is a Journey ♪♪♪½ (Atlantic, 1997)
The Best of Ricky Skaggs N/A (Epic/Legacy, 1998) worth searching for: With a band that includes Skaggs, Jerry Douglas, and Terry Baucom, Boone Creek ♪♪♪♪ (Sugar Hill, 1977) is pretty progressive stuff, featuring horns, synthesizers, and Skaggs taking a few lead vocals, including a fair Ralph Stanley impression on "Drifting Too Far from the Shore."

influences:

◀◀ Emmylou Harris, Bill Monroe, Ralph Stanley

▶▶ Jerry Douglas, Keith Whitley, Steve Wariner

Stephen L. Betts

Skeeter & the Skidmarks

Formed 1984, in Galax, VA.

Edwin Lacy, banjo, vocals; Scott Freeman, fiddle, mandolin, vocals; Willard Gayheart, guitar, vocals; Sandy Grover, bass, vocals.

Skeeter and the Skidmarks successfully combine a bluegrass style with the old-time mountain sound that bluegrass sprang from and adds in some beautifully done a cappella pieces.

what to buy: Their most recent recording is Hubbin' It ♪♪♪½ (Hay Holler, 1996, prod. Kerry Hay), a mix of traditional tunes and their own compositions. The band is tight instrumentally and vocally, with very well done harmony arrangements, such as on "Lead Me Gently Home, Father." "When the Roses Bloom in Dixieland" also stands out on this disc. It's unusual for a band that has a strong bluegrass orientation to use the clawhammer banjo style, and Edwin Lacy's clean and crisp playing stands out in this regard. Scott Freeman's fiddle is sweet and smooth, and Willard Gayheart and Sandy Grover provide rock-steady backup on guitar and bass, respectively. Fans of bluegrass and old-time music alike will enjoy this recording.

what to buy next: The group's earlier release, Alternate Roots ♪♪♪½ (Hay Holler, 1994, prod. Kerry Hay) is a similar mix of accompanied vocals and pure instrumentals, ranging from such old standards as "Liberty" to some of the group's own compositions. All four combine vocals on a rousing gospel piece, "I Know the Lord (Has Laid His Hands on Me)." The sound is the same as on their later release, not hard-core bluegrass but not strictly traditional, either, and should appeal to fans of both.

influences:

◀◀ Highwoods String Band

▶▶ Freighthoppers, Primitive Characters

Dave Shombert

The Skillet Lickers

Formed c. 1926, in and around Atlanta, GA.

James Gideon "Gid" Tanner (born June 6, 1885, in Thomas Bridge, GA; died May 13, 1960), fiddle, banjo; Clayton McMichen (born January 26, 1900, in Allatoona, GA; died in 1970), fiddle; Riley Puckett (born May 7, 1894, in Alpharetta, GA; died in 1946), guitar, vocals; Fate Norris, banjo; Lowe Stokes, fiddle; Bert Layne, fiddle.

The Skillet Lickers were the preeminent old-time string band of the 1920s. Led by Gid Tanner, with his wild red hair and wacky stage antics, the Skillet Lickers had a profound impact on musicians, as well as in radio and recording, both in their infancy and during the band's heyday. The group featured four fiddlers including Tanner, whose comic routines became as well known as their music. Riley Puckett, the blind singer and guitarist, played in a style that would be imitated especially successfully by groups like the Carter Family. Invited to record in New York in 1924, Tanner and Puckett were teamed up with Clayton McMichen and Fate Norris in order to give the band a bigger sound. The combination worked immediately, and by 1926, when their first recordings were released, the Skillet Lickers were a hit. Recordings of their comic skits were bigger sellers than their fiddle music, and Puckett's vocal recordings also sold well. This created a shift in the focus of the group and a name change, to the rather unwieldy "Gid Tanner and His Skillet Lickers with Clayton McMichen and Riley Puckett." The group began to splinter, and McMichen, who had worked in the studio with Jimmie Rodgers, left to form Clayton McMichen and His Georgia Wildcats. Tanner recorded with Puckett one last time in 1934, for Bluebird, with his teenage son joining them, along with mandolin player Ted Hawkins. McMichen would go on to form a Dixieland band in 1944, and couldn't escape the old-time/folk revival of the 1960s. Puckett worked for a number of years on various radio programs and recording with only moderate success. Today few people understand the strong influence the Skillet Lickers had on the development of string band music.

what's available: Sadly, their catalog hasn't been treated with the respect it deserves, but, with a little hunting, fans will find music from this seminal outfit available. The only CD release to date is The Skillet Lickers: Old Time Fiddle Tunes and Songs from North Georgia ♪♪♪♪ (County, 1996). It's a good introduction to the band and should be readily available.

worth searching for: There are a number of LPs on both County and Rounder still available at yard sales. Don't let them get away.

influences:

- Clayton McMichen & His Georgia Wildcats, Fiddlin' John Carson
- Freighthoppers, Mac Benford & His Woodshed All-Stars

see also: Riley Puckett

Stephen L. Betts

Patrick Sky

Born Patrick Lynch, October 2, 1940, in College Park, GA.

The strange and sometimes sordid saga of Patrick Sky can be interpreted in many ways, most obviously as a musical David and Goliath fable, but one thing is without question: unlike countless numbers of his contemporaries in the so-called '60s Protest Movement, when push came to heave-ho Sky was never once afraid to put his mouth where his harmonica was, nor to risk it all—career, reputation and peace of mind—for songs and stands he truly believed in. Sky's musical background is not that much different from those of his fellow Greenwich Villagers: disillusioned with what society was offering the college-age man of the era, he found solace, and then inspiration, in the writings of Will Rogers and the songs of Woody Guthrie, and no less an authority than Dave Van Ronk was soon proclaiming Sky to be "one of the best storytellers I know." His live sets from the time were alternately moving and annoying, witty and scatological, bitter and bittersweet, but never less than memorable, and by the time of his first album released in 1965 he was already becoming a force to be reckoned with in folk music circles. As the decade progressed, and Sky (along with girlfriend Buffy Sainte-Marie) became more involved with issues pertaining to the plight of the Native American, his songwriting became more biting and his performances, now legendary for their unpredictability, less frequent. When he did sing in those days, his shows consisted more and more of a series of songs so confrontational in its lyrical stance that many wondered if the acceptable bounds of satire had somehow been breached. The song titles themselves, "Bake Dat Chicken Pie," "Ramblin' Hunchback," "Vatican Caskets," and "Child Molesting Blues," were enough to frighten away many listeners, to say nothing of the many record companies who rejected outright an album's worth of such material recorded during March 1971. Despite a high-profile campaign in The New York Post by journalist Al Aronowitz begging for its release, this album languished unheard for two years until it was finally picked up by a small label called Adelphi and unleashed upon an incredulous world under the title Songs That Made America Famous. It has since become legendary, as much for its cover art and label design (two butt cheeks proudly pressed flat together in a parody of the Apple Records logo) as for its musical content. Not surprisingly perhaps, Sky hasn't been much heard from since, though he remains active in record production (he supervised Mississippi John Hurt's final sessions) and apparently even performs sporadically to this day. One interesting, perhaps vindicating footnote however: on a recent trip to his ancestral homeland, Sky happened upon a most unusual Irish village where the townsfolk gather in the local pub every Friday night to sing Songs That Made America Famous in its entirety, word for word and note for note.

what to buy: The album that was simultaneously being hailed as "the social commentary disc of the decade" and scorned as "a disgrace to the nation" when it was first issued in 1973, Songs That Made America Famous ♪♪♪♪♪ (Adelphi, 1997, prod. Alex Bennett, Patrick Sky) sounds no less offensively brilliant today. The daddy of all things politically incorrect, this album proves Sky did much more than simply walk the social-commentary walk when it came to confronting Nixonian America, and he did it, as he always did, with a hearty if suspect smile. Meanwhile, Dylan was shopping for pottery and scoring Peckinpah Westerns, just to put things in their proper historical perspective.

what to buy next: His debut disc, Patrick Sky ♪♪½ (Vanguard, 1965/1995), is a comparatively meek and mild offering, sweet and competent and, in comparison to what lay ahead, inconsequential. Call it "The Freewheelin' Pat Sky."

worth searching for: Although they're becoming increasingly hard to find, A Harvest of Gentle Clang ♪♪♪ (Vanguard, 1966), Reality Is Bad Enough ♪♪♪½ (Verve/Forecast, 1968), and Pho- tographs ♪♪♪½ (Verve/Forecast, 1969) are all worth acquiring as important elements of the overall Sky experience.

influences:

◀◀ Bertolt Brecht, Lenny Bruce, the Marquis de Sade

▶▶ John Butler Train, G.G. Allin, Lenny Molotov

Gary Pig Gold

Skyedance

Formed 1995, under the name Alasdair Fraser Band. Renamed Skyedance, 1996.

Alasdair Fraser, fiddle, viola; Eric Rigler, Great Highland Bagpipes, uilleann pipes, Scottish small-pipes; Chris Norman, wooden flute, piccolo; Paul Machlis, piano, organ, keyboards; Mick Linden, fretless bass; Peter Maund, percussion.

Combining the creative talents of fiddler Alasdair Fraser, flautist Chris Norman, keyboardist Paul Machlis, and piper Eric Rigler invites a whole new idiom in folk music onto the scene. This is exactly what happened upon the formation of Skyedance. Norman's classically traditional values and Machlis's New Age/modern keyboard technique blend with the traditional roots of Fraser and Rigler to form a fascinating and exciting blend of modern traditional music with a Scottish edge. Adding the talents of Mick Linden on bass and Peter Maund on percussion, this band achieves a great depth of emotion through their music. Named for a collection of Gaelic song and dance tunes put together on the Isle of Skye in the 1700s, the group manages to capture those Celtic roots and use them as a basis from which to grow. Their music is characterized by soaring fiddle lines, lilting flute, haunting bagpipe strains, and a percussive background of piano, bass, and bodhrán. Their repertoire is almost entirely original music; music that shows a depth of knowledge and a variety of backgrounds spun together to form a delightful web of sound, ready to snare its listener.

what's available: Way out to Hope Street ♪♪♪½ (Culburnie, 1997, prod. Skyedance) ranges from the seductively gentle sound of the haunting Norman-penned "Lupine" to the driving beat and kicking rhythms of the title track, "Way out to Hope Street." This album features a delightful mix of gentle, lazy airs, toe-tapping dance tunes, and New Age melodies, all with a bit of a Celtic twist. All the members show a true talent for music composition. Despite the excellence of the collection of original works, the recording's highlight has to be the intoxicating arrangement of a traditional Scottish set, "The Skyedance Reels: Ruilleadh Cailleach/The Bird's Nest/Harris Dance."

influences:

◀◀ Buddy MacMaster, Hamish Moore, Alain Froment, Helicon

▶▶ Nightnoise, Battlefield Band

see also: Alasdair Fraser, Chris Norman, Baltimore Consort

Jo Hughey Morrison

Skylark

Formed c. 1987, in Ireland.

Len Graham, vocals; Garry Ó Briain, mandocello, guitar, keyboards; Gerry O'Connor, fiddle, viola; Máirtin O'Connor, accordion.

Teaming up a bunch of guys who were all outstanding solo musicians before they came together doesn't always guarantee a good mix, but Skylark brings together great solo talent and comes up with gold. Len Graham won the All-Ireland championship of traditional singing in 1971 and, after a stint with Boys of the Lough, made a strong solo career. Garry Ó Briain is widely regarded as one of the top accompanists, as well as a solid soloist. He played formerly in several bands, including Aengus and Buttons and Bow. Gerry O'Connor, formerly of Kinvara, has won multiple fiddle awards for his outstanding playing. Máirtin O'Connor, of Delores Keane's band and De Danann fame, has been wowing audiences with his amazing accordion technique for many years. It might seem that combining all that talent in one group would produce a battle of the egos and a fight for supremacy, but not here. The four blend their gifts deftly into a sweet, intoxicating brew.

what's available: Light and Shade ♪♪♪½ (Claddagh, 1992, prod. Skylark) features a good blend of dance tunes and soulful songs. This is truly a treasure-trove of traditional tunes, all beautifully performed. The upbeat and exciting accordion lines bring this album to life. All of It ♪♪♪ (Claddagh, 1989/Green Linnet, 1989, prod. P.J. Curtis) combines some beautifully arranged traditional material with several new tunes, and the listener is hard-pressed to tell which ones aren't traditional. Among the best tracks is a delightful lilting duel of fiddle and accordion, "The Contradiction Set," and a couple of heart-felt love songs, "Siúil a Rún" and the Irish version of a Scottish song, "The Braes of Balquhidder."

the rest:

Wildflower ♪♪♪½ (Collectables, 1996) worth searching for: Skylark ♪♪♪½ (Claddagh, 1987/Shanachie 1989, prod. P.J. Curtis) (cassette only) and Raining Bicycles ♪♪♪ (Claddagh, 1996, prod. Garry Ó Briain) are nice albums, if all but impossible to find. Skylark, at least, was put out by Shanachie in the United States so you may find a copy in the cutout bins. It has a great version of "Molly Bán a Stóir" led by Sarah and Rita King, outstanding traditional singers from Caherlistrane, County Galway. Raining Bicycles is now out on CD so it may be a bit more accessible.

solo outings:
Len Graham:
Do Me Justice ♪♪♪ (Claddagh, 1984)
Ye Lovers All ♪♪♪ (Claddagh, 1984)

influences:
◀◀ Joe Holmes, Patsy Touhy, Dolores Keane
▶▶ Patrick Street, Altan, Chieftains

see also: La Lúgh, De Danann, Dolores Keane, Boys of the Lough

Jo Hughey Morrison and Neal Walters

Fred Small

Born November 6, 1952, in Plainfield, NJ.

Fred Small gave up a promising career as a staff attorney for the Conservation Law Foundation in Boston to concentrate on a career as a topical singer-songwriter. During the two decades since, he's yet to look back. Singing songs in the politically conscious tradition set by Woody Guthrie, Tom Paxton, and Phil Ochs, Small has continued to use folk-style music as the setting for his message. In addition to being featured on his six solo albums, his tunes have been covered by Pete and Peggy Seeger, Rosalie Sorrells, Steve Gillette, Priscilla Herdman, and the Flirtations. In 1992, his song "Everything Possible" was used as the finale of the nationally touring AIDS-benefit musical Heart Strings. The grandnephew of influential painter Thomas Hart Benton, Small graduated Phil Beta Kappa from Yale University and earned a degree in law and a master's in natural resources policy at the University of Michigan. Although he didn't write his first song until the morning of his first law school examination, he grew up listening to his parents' Kingston Trio records. Many of Small's earliest gigs were at anti-nuclear benefits, including the M.U.S.E. concerts in 1978. Encouraged by the response he received, he resigned from his job as an attorney and turned his full-time attention to music. After releasing a single of his parody "Walk on Supply Side," to the tune of Lou Reed's "Walk on the Wild Side," he recorded his debut album, Love Will Carry Us, in 1981.

what to buy: Recorded during a concert at the Old Cambridge Baptist Church in Cambridge, Massachusetts, on March 26, 1993, Everything Possible ♪♪♪½ (Flying Fish, 1993, prod. Johnny Cunningham) reprises songs from throughout Small's career. While many of the songs, including "The Hug Song," "Friends First," and "Peace Is," are anthemic calls for human interaction, Small shows his sense of humor with songs like "Hot Frogs on the Loose," a humorous ballad about radioactive amphibians escaping from laboratories. "The Marine's Lament, or, the Pink Peril" satirizes military attitudes towards homosexuality.

what to buy next: Small offers a wide view of modern society on Heart of the Appaloosa ♪♪♪ (Rounder, 1983, prod. John Curtis, Fred Small). The title track is a dramatic look at the plight of Native Americans. "Talking Wheelchair Blues" looks at the difficulties of the physically handicapped, while "Annie" presents a heartfelt view of the struggles of a lesbian schoolteacher. "Death in Disguise" focuses on industrial poisoning. "Peace Is" is a modern anthem of world peace. Small's sense of humor is reflected during "Dig a Hole in the Ground, or, How to Prosper during the Coming Nuclear War" and "Larry the Polar Bear." His songs are set to acoustic-rooted arrangements featuring such stellar players as Alison Brown (banjo), Matt Glaser (fiddle), Howie Tarnower (mandolin), Leo Kretzner (dulcimer), Betsy Rose (piano), and a large vocal choir that includes Geoff Bartley, Martha Leader, Willie Sordill, Michelle Wilson, and Marcia Taylor.

the rest:
Love Will Carry Us ♪♪ (Aquifer, 1981)
No Limit ♪♪ (Rounder, 1985)
I Will Stand Fast ♪♪♪½ (Flying Fish, 1988) Jaguar ♪♪♪ (Flying Fish, 1991)

worth searching for: Small released a humorous two-song CD single in 1992. "Hot Frogs on the Loose" is based on an article in the Boston Globe and tells the story of radioactive frogs, while "Sergei in the Milky Way" is a space-age saga set to the tune of the Kingston Trio's "The M.T.A. Song."

influences:
◀◀ Tom Paxton, Phil Ochs, Pete Seeger, Woody Guthrie ▶▶ Priscilla Herdman, Si Kahn, John McCutcheon

Craig Harris

Judy Small

Born in New South Wales, Australia.

Judy Small is an Australian singer who writes songs. Educated in psychology and the law, Small has chosen to spend the last dozen or so years of her life traveling the world singing her songs and gathering material for her ever increasing repertoire. Any experience or event can end up in a song if Small is around. She grew up in the small northern seaside town of Coffs Harbour, New South Wales, and loved the popular music of the '50s and '60s. It wasn't long before she started writing her own songs about issues close to her heart, using the styles of the traditional Celtic, as well as contemporary folk, music. She has remained true to these styles, even though she has increasingly experimented with other genres, and many of her later songs show some rock, jazz, or country music influence. She began singing in the folk clubs of Sydney. In 1982, with her career starting to take off in Australia, Small left her full-time government job and took a world trip. At the Vancouver Folk Festival that year, fellow Australian Eric Bogle invited her up from the audience and asked her to sing a couple of her songs, and Small's North American career was born. She has never looked back. Judy's talent lies in her ability to capture experiences in her songs in a way that allows the listener to identify personally. "Sky of the Southern Cross," an "anti-patriotic song about love of country," leaves listeners all over the world feeling homesick for a country most have never seen; "Charlesworth Bay," a song about the environmental ravages caused by the "development" of a bay near Small's hometown, evokes images of places that are close to the heart of listeners everywhere. "I Thought I'd Be Much Older" and "No Tears for the Widow" touch personal themes that are common to many, and allow deeply felt but frequently unspoken emotions to be expressed as a prerequisite to grieving and healing. Her song about a disastrous vacation, "Apart from That," leaves audiences weak with laughter when they recall similar (but not as extreme) vacations they have had themselves. And of course, her classic ballad, "Mothers, Daughters, Wives," is still acclaimed as the definitive musical statement of women's experiences of war in the twentieth century. Over a decade later, with eight albums (one a compilation), hundreds of songs, and a songbook to her credit, Small continues to delight fans with her soaring voice, her powerful delivery, and her songs of peace, justice, love, hope, and fun. Her performances have been acclaimed by critics on three continents, and a Judy Small concert is occasion for laughing, crying, thinking, and going away with a warm feeling that lasts long after the concert is over. Well loved and respected in her homeland, Small was honored in 1993 at the Maleny Folk Festival in Queensland with a tribute concert, organized by other performers who sing her songs. Watched by an audience of over 1,000, performers from all over Australia sang their versions of favorite Judy Small songs. The local Aboriginal women presented her with a songstone, a sacred tradition among their people, and rarely given to non-Aboriginals. Small was also recognized by her industry with a 'Mo' Award for Folk Performer of the Year in 1990 and she holds these two honors as her most treasured.

what to buy: Most of Small's back catalog is out of print. Fortunately, there are two strong albums available to choose between. Second Wind ♪♪♪½ (Crafty Maid, 1993, prod. Judy Small) represents a new musical direction for Small. Working with pianist David Bates, her music takes on a new depth and sophistication without losing any of the power or humor which have become the hallmark of her songwriting. Her collaboration with Bates on this album brings out a new dimension to her work, which is sure to please even the most avid Small fans. Global Village ♪♪♪½ (Crafty Maid, 1995, prod. Sue Dyson) is a continuation of that new musical direction with more help from Bates and the rest of a strong supporting cast. She covers the information age in "Living in the Fast Lane," the importance of rain in "We Know It's Gonna Rain," the ways in which two people can live together as strangers in "No Love Lost," and pays tribute to other women who provide the music to keep the "movement" going strong.

what to buy next: All of Small's earlier work is not gone, though. The Best of the '80s ♪♪♪ (Crafty Maid, 1993, prod. Judy Small) preserves some of the highlights from her first four albums, all released between 1982 and 1988, including her anti-war anthem, "Mothers, Daughters, Wives."

influences:

◀◀ Ronnie Gilbert, Odetta, Holly Near

▶▶ Priscilla Herdman, Tret Fure, Cris Williamson

Neal Walters

Smith Sisters /Debi Smith

Formed 1981 in Falls Church, VA.

Debi Smith (born December 30, 1953, in Philadelphia, PA), guitar, bodhrán, vocals; Megan Smith (born December 29, 1958, in Arlington, VA), bass guitar, vocals.

What do the Bitchin' Babes, the Smith Sisters, and the Hags (an all-woman Irish group in the '80s) have in common? One answer is Debi Smith. Whether she's performing as a soloist, as one of Four Bitchin' Babes (with Camille West, Sally Fingerett, and Megon McDonough), or with sister Megan as the Smith Sisters, Smith is one of the most promising new singer-songwriters on the contemporary American music scene. As a sister act, Debi and Megan Smith have been performing together professionally since 1981 (though they have, of course, been together a few years longer than that). They grew up in Falls Church, Virginia, and both now reside in the Washington, D.C. area. Their show embodies a blend of original, traditional, and country-folk tunes interspersed with warm, humorous interaction with each other and their audiences. Debi sings lead vocal, plays guitar and bodhrán (Irish hand drum), and generally plays straight man to Megan, who sings harmony vocals and plays the electric bass. The Smiths have four releases as a duo on the Flying Fish/Rounder label, and feature such instrumentalists as Doc and Merle Watson, Mark O'Connor, Sam Bush, T. Michael Coleman, and Al Petteway, among others. Their two children's albums, on the American Melody label, have received Parents' Choice and American Library Association awards. Debi now records and tours solo and with Christine Lavin, Sally Fingerett, and Megon McDonough in "Life According to Four Bitchin' Babes," while Megan, who is working on her master's degree in the environmental sciences, has a separate career in the renewable energy field. Debi's new solo album, More Than Once, was released in early 1998.

what to buy: A Canary's Song ♪♪♪♪ (Flying Fish, 1993, prod. Bill Wolf, Debi Smith, Megan Smith) is the most recent album by the Smiths as a duo and contains a nice mixture of Debi Smith originals combined with some great covers of Robin and Linda Williams's "Leavin' Train," Cheryl Wheeler's "Arrow," and a couple of songs, including the title cut, from Buddy Mondlock. It also contains their version of "The Bramble and the Rose" (which they first recorded on Roadrunner in 1989), a song that purportedly brought tears to Garrison Keillor's eyes. As the Washington Post put it, "Like the best sibling groups, the Smiths have been singing together for so long that their voices merge in effortless and graceful harmony."

what to buy next: In My Dreams ♪♪♪♪ (Amerisound, 1995, prod. John Jennings) is Debi Smith's first solo album. Her songwriting is top notch and this album gives her a chance to really stretch out. Her backup band includes John Jennings (of Mary Chapin Carpenter fame) and acoustic guitar master Al Petteway, and the album is a mixture of original songs that contain a full helping of her humorous material.

the rest:

Bluebird ♪♪♪ (Flying Fish, 1984) (cassette only) Mockingbird ♪♪♪ (Flying Fish, 1986) (cassette only) (With others) One Wide River ♪♪♪ (American Melody, 1988)
Roadrunner ♪♪♪ (Flying Fish, 1989)
I See the Moon ♪♪♪ (American Melody, 1991)

solo outings:

Debi Smith:

(With others) The Juniper Tree ♪♪♪ (American Melody, 1994) (With others) Laugh Tracks ♪♪♪ (Shanachie, 1997)

influences:

◀◀ Burns Sisters, Doc & Merle Watson

▶▶ Four Bitchin' Babes, Anne Hills, Cindy Mangsen

see also: Four Bitchin' Babes

Neal Walters

Bessie Smith

Born April 15, 1894, in Chattanooga, TN. Died September 26, 1936, in Clarksdale, MS.

Bessie Smith is without question the greatest of all "classic blues" performers. She began her career as a vaudeville dancer while still in her teens, but her potential as a singer sparked Ma Rainey's interest early on. She established herself while touring with Rainey's Rabbit Foot Minstrels, and by the end of World War I was a bona fide star on the T.O.B.A. (Theatre Owners Booking Association) circuit. Her first record, the straight, round-toned "Down Hearted Blues," was made in 1923 and sold 780,000 copies in less than six months. A slew of hit records followed, each more remarkable than its predecessor in terms of intonation and inflection. Smith's voice has withstood the test of time. "Jailhouse Blues" is an early example of her mastery of slides, "drop-offs," and other melismatic embellishments, fully realized on later recordings such as "Careless Love" and "Whip It to a Jelly." Her judicious use of guttural inflections on tunes like "Cemetery Blues" and "Dirty No-Gooder's Blues" further illustrates her artistry. Through careful employment of these and other vocal devices, Smith convincingly conveyed many moods on record. In somber and wistful songs like "Nobody Knows You When You're Down and Out" or the amazing "St. Louis Blues," she brought an uncanny sense of loss and melancholy by a simple turn of phrase or lightening of tone. By contrast, the exuberance she created in tunes like "Alexander's Ragtime Band" frequently sent listeners into finger-popping, toe-tapping frenzies. In fact, just about everything she sang was warmly received by an admiring, record-buying public. Smith put her unique spin on popular songs ("I Ain't Got Nobody"), hokum pieces ("I Want Every Bit of It," "I Need a Little Sugar in My Bowl"), and even gospel what to buy: The Complete Recordings, Volume II ♪♪♪♪♪ (Columbia/Legacy, 1991, prod. Lawrence Cohn) contains sides recorded between April 1924 and November 1925, in a well-suited, small-group setting. (Louis Armstrong is one of the most notable accompanists.) In contrast to earlier recordings, Smith's vocal delivery is markedly more authoritative at this juncture in her career, as evidenced by the plaintive numbers "Reckless Blues" and "Careless Love Blues." The highlight is "St. Louis Blues," a masterpiece of controlled tension. The Complete Recordings, Volume III ♪♪♪♪♪ (Columbia/Legacy, 1992, prod. Lawrence Cohn) contains more recordings from Smith's artistic zenith (late November 1925 to mid-February 1928). Highlights include the magnificent "Back Water Blues," "After You've Gone," "Muddy Water," "Trombone Cholly," "Lock and Key," and "A Good Man Is Hard to Find." For those wanting but one representative set.

("On Revival Day"), in addition to straightforward blues numbers. She was an anomalous success, every bit deserving of the title "Empress of the Blues." No star shone brighter than Bessie's throughout the "classic blues" heyday. However, by the early 1930s, at the onset of the Depression, even Smith's popularity was waning. She died tragically in an automobile accident in 1937, just as she was beginning to make in-roads with a new, decidedly more contemporary, swing-oriented style.

what to buy next: The Complete Recordings, Volume I ♪♪♪♪♪ (Columbia/Legacy, 1991, prod. Lawrence Cohn) contains Smith's first 38 recordings, among them the magnificent debut, "Down Hearted Blues," the blues-inflected pop tune "Baby Won't You Please Come Home," and her mesmerizing rendition of "T'ain't Nobody's Bizness If I Do." Most sides feature her with sparse and rather pedestrian piano accompaniment. The Complete Recordings, Volume IV ♪♪♪♪♪ (Columbia/Legacy, 1993, prod. Lawrence Cohn) showcases Smith's late 1920s and early 1930s recordings. As the Depression hit America, vaudeville was on the decline and fewer people were listening to the blues. Sadly, by July of 1930 Smith could do no better than bottom billing at Harlem's Apollo Theater. Understandably, her voice had begun to show signs of wear by the time of these sessions, yet recordings like "Empty Bed Blues" and "Nobody Knows When You're Down and Out" are nevertheless powerful.

what to avoid: The Complete Recordings, Volume V: The Final Chapter ♪♪♪ (Columbia/Legacy, 1996, prod. Lawrence Cohn) contains the rest of Smith's 1931 recordings and a 1933 session for OKeh, along with alternate takes, the St. Louis Blues soundtrack, and a 72-minute interview with Smith's niece, Rudy Smith. The 1933 session is especially fine and hints at the new musical directions Smith was exploring at the time of her death. The rest of this set, however, will find more favor with collectors and serious fans.

the rest:
Bessie Smith 1925–33 ♪♪♪♪ (Nimbus, 1987)
The Collection ♪♪♪♪ (Columbia, 1989)
Empress of the Blues ♪♪♪ (Charly, 1992)
Alexander's Ragtime Band ♪♪♪ (Four Star, 1994)
Bessie Smith 1923 ♪♪♪ (Classics, 1994)
Bessie Smith 1923–24 ♪♪♪ (Classics, 1994)
Mama's Got the Blues ♪♪♪ (Pearl, 1994)
Bessie Smith 1924–25 ♪♪♪ (Classics, 1995)
Bessie Smith 1927–28 ♪♪♪ (Classics, 1995)
Bessie Smith 1928–29 ♪♪♪ (Classics, 1995)
American Legends—Volume 14 ♪♪♪ (Laserlight, 1996) Sings the Blues ♪♪♪♪ (Sony Music Special Products, 1996)

worth searching for: Bessie Smith ♪♪♪♪♪ (Time-Life, 1982, prod. Michael Brooks) is the best single-package overview of Smith's recorded legacy. The accompanying 46-page booklet, written by Smith biographer Chris Albertson, is packed with rare photos, anecdotes, and informed musical commentary.

influences:
◀◀ Ma Rainey

▶▶ Mahalia Jackson, Odetta, Jimmy Rushing, Ella Fitzgerald, Billie Holiday

D. Thomas Moon

Betty Smith

Born October 15, 1926 in Salisbury, NC.

Betty Smith didn't set out to be a folk singer, but she is certainly one of our finest. She loves to sing traditional ballads and she does it either unaccompanied or with the help of her exceptional ability on mountain dulcimer, guitar, psaltery, or autoharp. She has performed, taught, and shared the traditional music of the South for over 30 years in classrooms, concert halls, workshops, and festivals. Her singing touches children and adults of all ages who respond to the music that has been passed down by generations of singers. Smith says she knows about 300 songs, many learned aurally from her parents, covering Southern, Appalachian, and British ballads, folksongs, hymns, and children's songs and games. She has been a visiting artist in schools and colleges, done workshops, concerts, and festivals in the United States, Canada, and the British Isles, and carried her music to everyone from kindergarten students to Elderhostel participants. She has helped to organize festivals and workshops throughout the country and is just as active now as she has ever been. As an author, she recently completed a biography of singer Jane Hicks Gentry, which is being published by the University of Kentucky Press. In 1982 Smith was awarded the Bascom Lamar Lunsford award for significant contributions to the folk traditions of the Southern mountains.

what to buy: Both Sides, Then and Now ♪♪♪♪♪ (Bluff Mountain Music, 1994, prod. Betty Smith) is Smith's only CD, but it provides an excellent opportunity to get acquainted with her music. She sings a selection of her best-loved traditional tunes as well as several newer songs. In addition to her own accompaniment on mountain dulcimer, autoharp, psaltery, guitar, and lap psaltery, she is ably assisted by Roger Howell on fiddle, banjo, and guitar, and by Carroll Best on banjo. There are 17 cuts in all, including several examples of her exquisite psaltery playing that alone are worth the price of the CD. "Seasons of Peace," by Bob Beers, is a Smith staple and is guaranteed to send chills up your spine. The first nine cuts are all traditional in keeping with Smith's commitment to traditional music, particularly the music of her native North Carolina, but she also performs more contemporary material by such writers as Billy Edd Wheeler, Elmer Beal Jr., Bob Beers, Barry Etris, Bettie Sellers, and her own son Bill. It's not difficult to understand why these are among her most requested.

what to buy next: Psaltery Concert ♪♪♪♪♪ (Bluff Mountain Music, 1984, prod. Betty Smith) (cassette only) is Smith's all-psaltery album and is exquisite. The plucked psaltery is the perfect complement to Smith's pure soprano and she is unique in her ability to play it. Her playing is inspired and has to be heard to be believed. This album and those listed below are available only on cassette from Bluff Mountain Music, 1444 Bluff Road, Hot Springs, NC 28743.

the rest:

Betty Smith: Songs Traditionally Sung in North Carolina ♪♪♪♪ (Folk-Legacy, 1975) (cassette only)

For My Friends of Song ♪♪♪♪ (June Appal, 1977) (cassette only)

A Bluff Mountain Christmas ♪♪♪♪ (Bluff Mountain Music, 1988) (cassette only) worth searching for: It's worth noting that Smith also makes an appearance on a very nice compilation album, Masters of the Mountain Dulcimer ♪♪♪♪ (Susan Trump Music, 1997, prod. Susan Trump), which features some 19 dulcimer players in a generous program of dulcimer instrumentals.

editor's choice
5 bluegrass gospel albums

Ralph Stanley & the Clinch Mountain Boys, Cry from the Cross (Rebel)

Don Rigsby, A Vision (Sugar Hill)

Paul Williams, Ain't God Good (Rounder)

Chestnut Grove Quartet, The Legendary Chestnut Grove Quartet (County)

Doyle Lawson & Quicksilver, Kept and Protected (Sugar Hill)

Neal Walters

influences:

⏪ Bascom Lamar Lunsford, Beers Family

⏩ Sheila Barnhill, Lois Hornbostel, Elaine Purkey

Darden Smith

Born 1962, in Brenham, TX.

Darden Smith's music has grown by leaps and bounds since his first album in 1986. His sound has transformed itself from the country-folk of his debut release to country, country-rock, and, with his latest album—the stark Deep Fantastic Blue—to a more raw, almost hard folk sound. A farm boy who moved to the big city of Houston as a teenager, Smith soaked up country, folk, rock, and pop influences and developed a keen eye for observing the little details of life and love. He moved to Austin to attend the University of Texas and joined a burgeoning singer/songwriter scene, following in the footsteps of Lyle Lovett. He has worked with Lovett and fellow Texans Nanci Griffith and Chip Taylor, and he's found great inspiration in an ongoing partnership with English singer/songwriter Boo Hewerdine, with whom he released one album.

what to buy: Smith's most commercial record is also his most consistent. Little Victories ♪♪♪♪ (Chaos, 1993, prod. Richard Gottehrer, Jeffrey Lesser) reflects on life's ups and downs but never gives up hope.

what to avoid: Smith took an ill-advised left turn with the spare, monotonous Deep Fantastic Blue ♪♪ (Plump, 1996, prod.

740 debi smith

Stewart Lerman), with stripped-down production and Spartan arrangements that don't do his songs about transition and redemption much justice.

the rest:
Native Soil ♪♪♪½ (Watermelon, 1986)
(With Boo Hewerdine) Evidence ♪♪♪ (Compass, 1989) Trouble No More ♪♪♪ (Columbia, 1990)

influences:
◀◀ Guy Clark, Rosanne Cash, Nanci Griffith
▶▶ Shawn Colvin, Lyle Lovett

Doug Pullen

Debi Smith

See: Smith Sisters, Four Bitchin' Babes

Jerry Read Smith

Born 1949, in Warsaw, NY.

Hammered dulcimer recording artist Jerry Read Smith is also one of America's premier craftsman, building hammered dulcimers and bowed psalteries in Black Mountain, North Carolina. His trilogy of recordings are an instrumental journey borne out of the life and work of a hammered dulcimer maker. Smith describes that it really all came about quite by surprise. Not only the music recordings, as it was never a vocation or an academic pursuit, but also the world of craftsmanship. It began with a chance encounter one winter's eve in 1970, seeing the hammered dulcimer for the first time in the gifted hands of John McCutcheon. An urge to construct, followed by a yearning to play, soon led to an unlikely and unplanned career. The music represented in the trilogy begins with a gift, moves on to a revelation, and finally settles upon a vision. The recordings are an instrumental "dream" that expresses a journey through time filled with flights of fancy, time for thought and reflection, and emotional confrontation.

what's available: The Strayaway Child ♪♪♪½ (Song of the Wood, 1981/Silent Planet, 1996, prod. Jerry Read Smith) is the first volume of the trilogy. It begins with "The Dream," then weaves its way through Celtic melodies, a New Orleans waltz, and Bach's "Jesu, Joy of Man's Desiring." Smith is joined by Tom Fellenbaum (guitar, bouzouki, bass), Chris Abell (Irish flute, whistle, bodhrán), Don Jackson (fiddle, guitar), and Phil Johnson (slide dobro). Heartdance ♪♪♪½ (Song of the Wood, 1986/Silent Planet, 1996, prod. Jerry Read Smith) is the second volume, the middle of a three-part journey, and expresses the awakening from the dream, with melodies that dance through jigs and reels with fiddles, flutes, whistles, and lots of dancing strings. Homecoming ♪♪♪½ (Song of the Wood, 1992/Silent Planet, 1996, prod. Jerry Read Smith) is the trilogy's final volume and includes such selections as "Childgrove" and "Amazing Grace," following the theme of that still, small voice that beckons us home. Smith is joined by his wife, Lisa Maria Smith (flute, whistle), with some beautiful duets featuring the hammered dulcimer and flute. All three recordings are available from Song of the Wood, 203 West State Street, Black Mountain, NC 28711.

influences:
◀◀ Malcolm Dalglish, John McCutcheon, Bothy Band, De Danann ▶▶ Madeline MacNeil, Sam Rizzetta, Steve Schneider

Heidi Cerrigione

Lynn "Chirps" Smith

Born Lynn William Byron Smith, October 11, 1952, in Pekin, IL.

Lynn "Chirps" Smith was born and raised in Illinois. When he was 20 he heard some Ry Cooder recordings, plus a now-forgotten bluegrass musician, and was inspired to learn the mandolin. A few years later he heard a record by the Da Costa Woltz's Southern Broadcasters (featuring Ben Jarrell, Tommy Jarrell's father) and was instantly hooked on old-time music. It wasn't long after that that his first band, the Indian Creek Delta Boys, was formed. About that same time he started looking for evidence of Illinois fiddle players and the tunes that they played. During this time he also had picked up the fiddle and was starting to become proficient on that instrument. Today, Chirps is thought of mainly as a fiddler, although he still will lend some mandolin to a track now and then. He currently is in one of the best "Young Fogie" old-time bands around, the Volo Bogtrotters. All Volo Bogtrotter releases to date have been on cassette only on the Marimac label out of Crown Point, Indiana; however, in early 1998, Marimac released a new Volo Bogtrotter CD, Old Time Stringband with Vocal Accompaniment. Based on the previous Volo Bogtrotter releases, this should also be non-stop fun and well worth adding to your collection.

what to buy: Midwestern Harvest ♪♪♪½ (Marimac, 1994, prod. Larry MacBride, Lynn "Chirps" Smith) is Smith's only release that can be found on CD. The fiddling on this album is very "notey," yet smooth at the same time. He performs in a variety of arrangements from solo to a full band. There is one cut in particular that alone makes the CD a worthwhile addition to any old-time collection: that is his solo take on the tune "Money in Both Pockets," which he learned from Toledo, Illinois, fiddler Jesse James Abbott. As you can guess by the title of the CD, many of the tunes on this album are from the Midwest.

the rest:

(With the Volo Bogtrotters) Backside of Buncombe ♪♪♪♪♪ (Marimac, 1989) (cassette only) (With the Volo Bogtrotters) The Volo Bogtrotters ♪♪♪♪♪ (Marimac, 1990) (cassette only) Prairie Dog and Other Fiddle Tunes from the Midwest ♪♪♪ (Marimac, 1991) (cassette only) (With the Volo Bogtrotters) Tough Luck ♪♪♪♪ (Marimac, 1991) (cassette only)

influences:

◀◀ Noah Beavers, Garry Harrison, Mark Gunther

▶▶ Ill-Mo Boys, Geoff Seitz

Steve Gardner

Michael Smith

Born September 7, 1941.

Michael Smith began his musical career in the early 1960s, performing in a Kingston Trio–style folk combo. Although he worked steadily, in a pop-folk vein, throughout the '70s, he was first brought to wide public attention when Steve Goodman began recording his stunning songs like "The Dutchman" and "Spoon River." In the late '80s, Smith was tapped to serve as musical chorus and songwriter for Steppenwolf Theater Company's wildly successful adaptation of The Grapes of Wrath. In 1993 he debuted his own autobiographical musical play, Michael, Margaret, Pat, and Kate, in Chicago and later in San Francisco. Always a prolific songwriter, Smith tours steadily both as a soloist and in a duet act with Anne Hills. (Note that Smith is Michael P. Smith, not to be confused with Christian music superstar Michael W. Smith.)

what to buy: Michael Smith/Love Stories ♪♪♪♪♪ (Rounder, 1992, prod. Anne Hills) is a reissue of Smith's two landmark Flying Fish albums, Michael Smith (1986) and Love Stories (1988). This generous CD offers as much evidence as one should need to prove that Smith is one of the finest songwriters working today—period. His own versions of "The Dutchman" and "Spoon River" hold a knowing irony that is absent in most of the many covers of these tunes. Less familiar treasures include his carnally passionate "Vampire," the close-focus humor of "Dead Egyptian Blues" and "Last Day of Pompeii," and the claustrophobic paranoia of "Three Monkeys."

what to buy next: Time ♪♪♪♪ (Flying Fish, 1994, prod. Anne Hills), is another finely crafted album of oblique, passionate musical novellas. This album finds Smith waxing nostalgic about his own past in the wistful "I Brought My Father with Me" and "Ballad of Elizabeth Dark." "Gamble's Guitar" melds a Floridian travelogue with reminiscences about the spell the late Gamble Rogers wove with his instrument. In "We Become Birds," Smith grafts some haiku-like quotes from children describing God onto an airy, delicate melody.

worth searching for: Smith privately released the soundtrack Michael, Margaret, Pat, and Kate ♪♪♪♪½ (self-released, 1993, prod. Anne Hills), and it is a gem that is in some ways superior to his contemporary "official" album, Time. Recorded with the quartet of musicians he worked with onstage, the disc offers compelling new versions of familiar Smith songs like "Vampire," along with fine new work.

influences:

◀◀ Roy Rogers, Bob Gibson, Beatles

▶▶ Dar Williams, Small Potatoes, Trout Fishing in America

see also: Anne Hills, Steve Goodman

Michael Parrish

Chris Smither

Born 1945, in New Orleans, LA.

Although perhaps best known for writing "Love Me like a Man" and "I Feel the Same," two of Bonnie Raitt's most enduring songs, Smither is a gifted folk-bluesman in his own right. His urgent vocals and fingerpicked guitar come across best with little or no accompaniment.

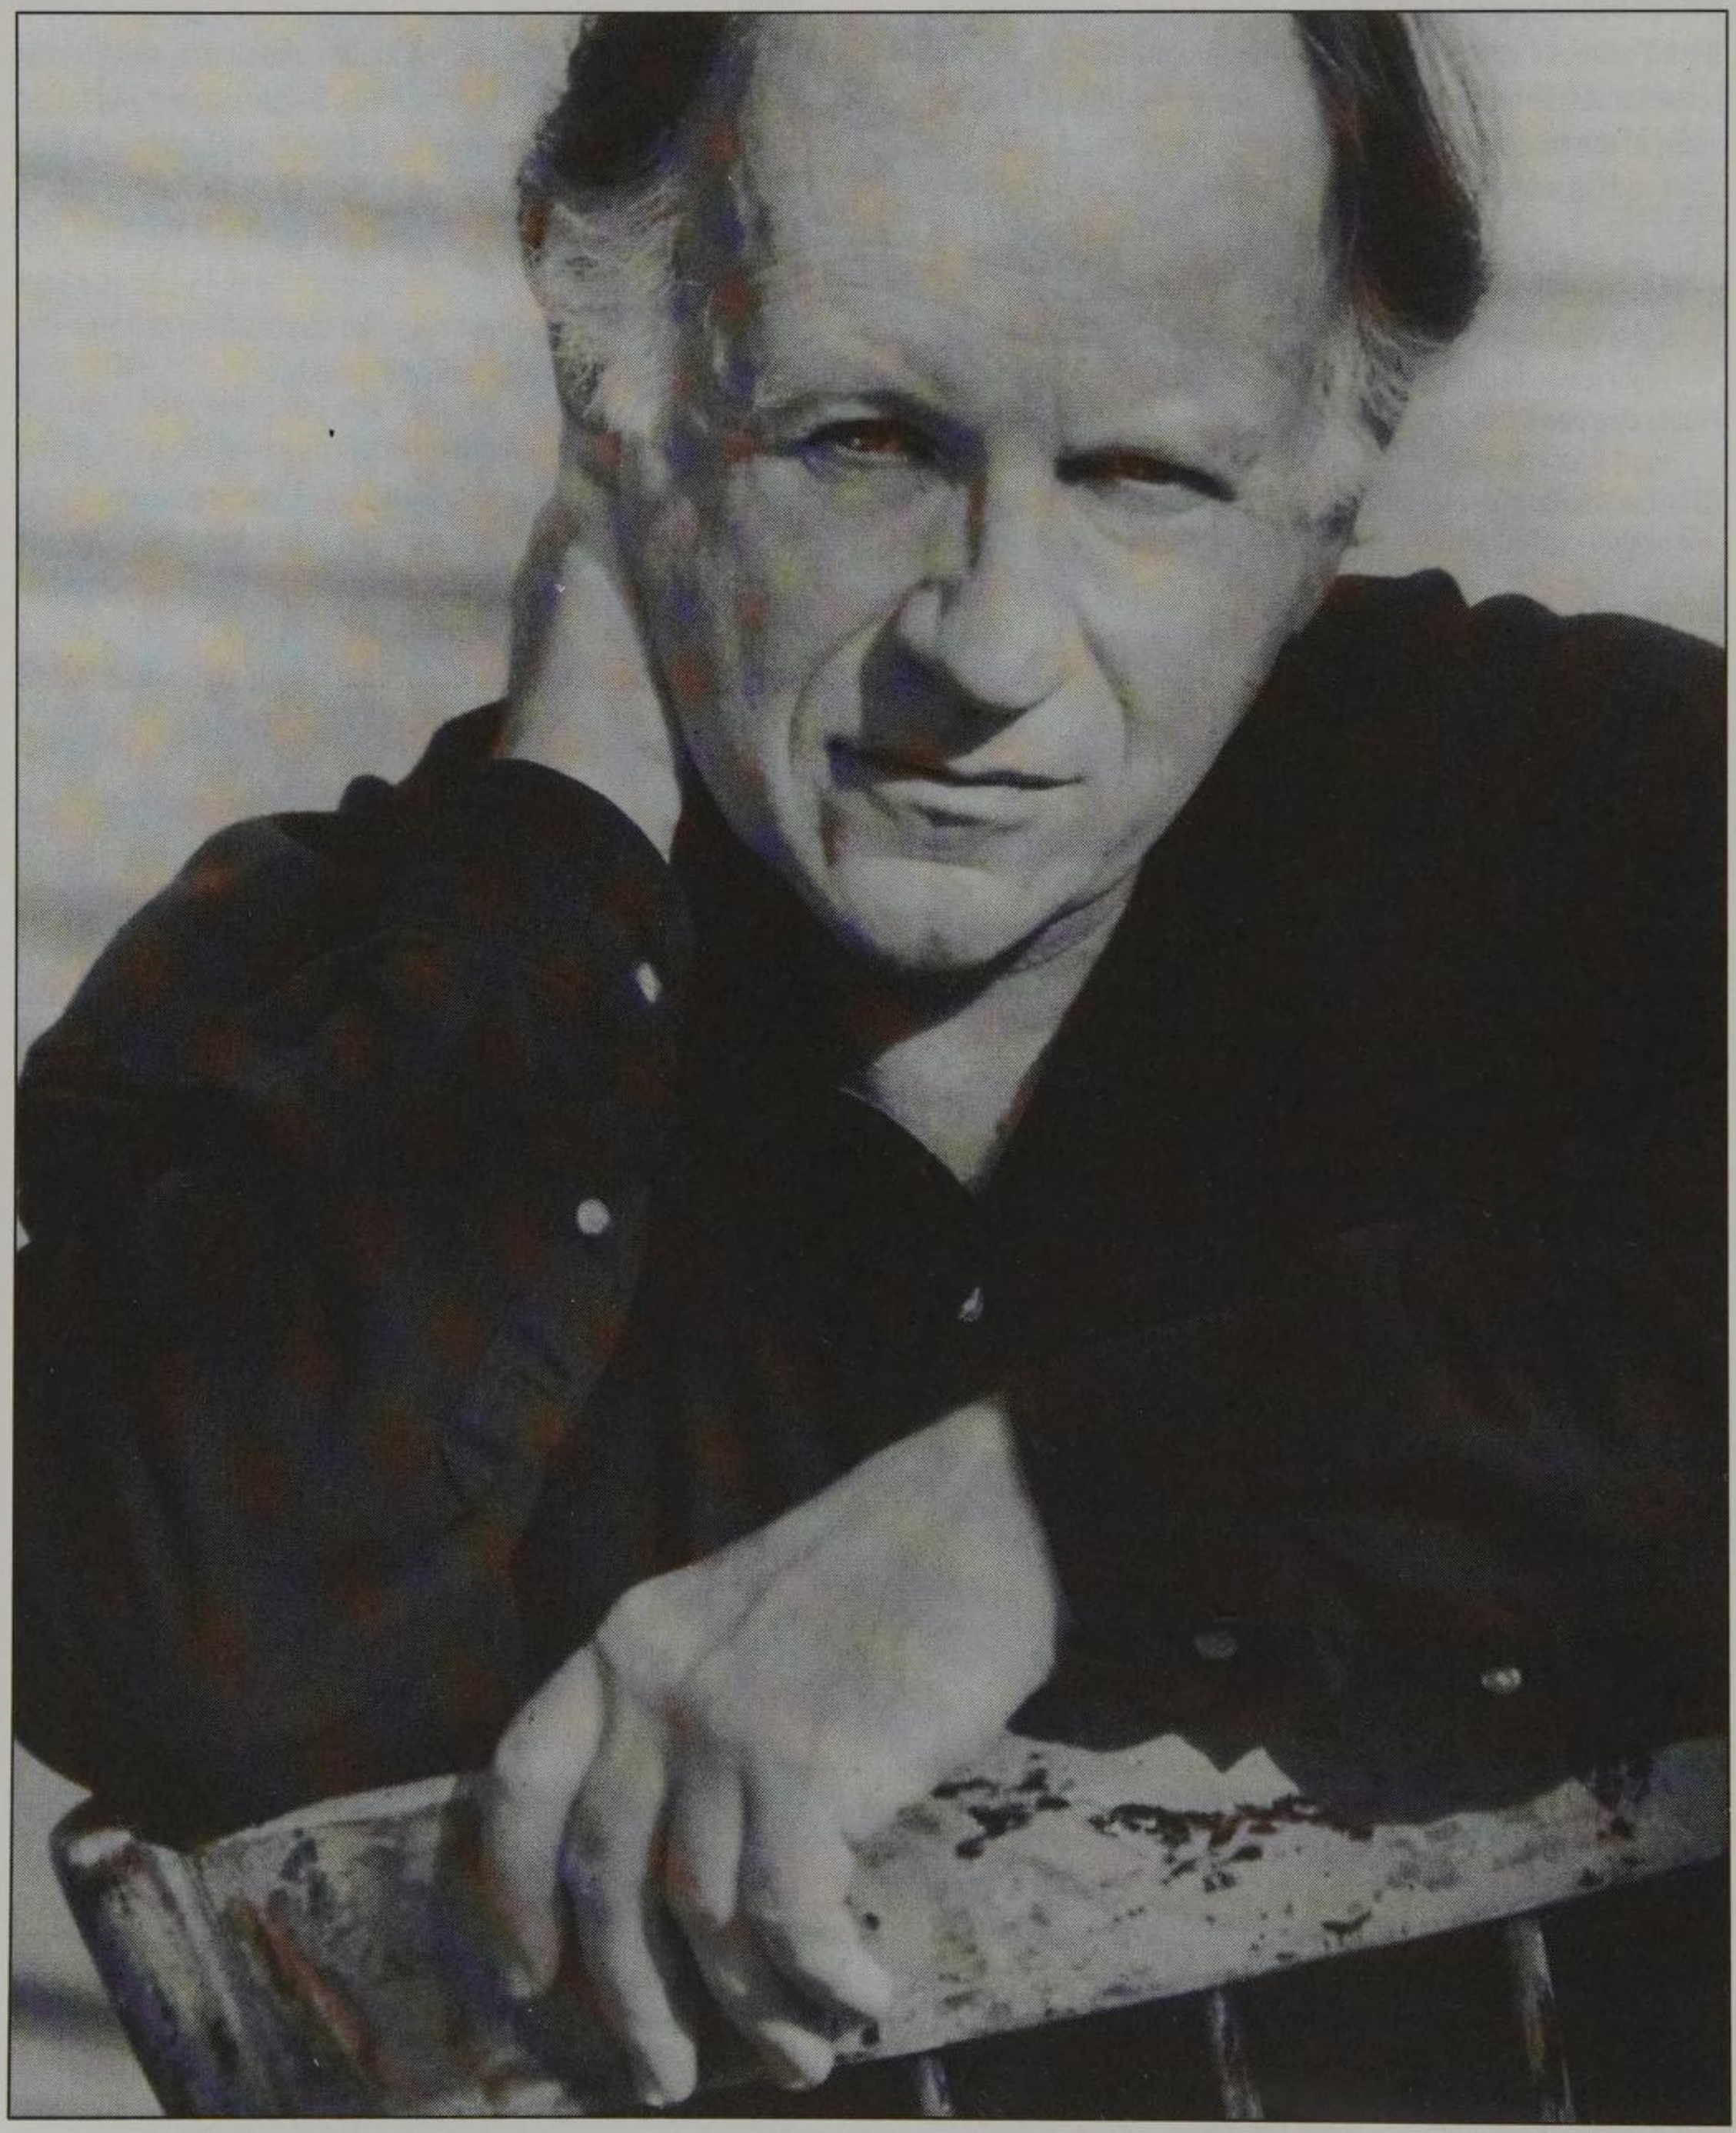
what to buy: Another Way to Find You ♪♪♪♪ (Flying Fish, 1991, prod. John Nagy), an intimate solo acoustic album recorded live in the studio, is a career retrospective on which Smither reprises material from both of his excellent, long-out-of-print albums for Poppy.

what to buy next: Up on the Lowdown ♪♪♪½ (HighTone, 1995, prod. Stephen Bruton), recorded with a sympathetic backing band, is further proof of Smither's unassuming brilliance as a singer, songwriter, and guitarist.

the rest:

Happier Blue ♪♪♪ (Flying Fish, 1993)
Small Revelations ♪♪♪½ (HighTone, 1997)

chris smither



worth searching for: Smither recorded two albums during the early 1970s—I'm a Stranger Too ♪♪♪♪ (Poppy, 1971, prod. Ronald Frangipane, Michael Cuscuna) and Don't It Drag On ♪♪♪♪ (Poppy, 1972, prod. Michael Cuscuna)—that eclipse virtually all of the rootsy singer/songwriter competition of the era. They were reissued as a single package on Collectables Records in 1997.

influences:

◀◀ Mississippi John Hurt, Eric Von Schmidt

Bill Friskics-Warren

Smothers Brothers /Pat Paulsen

Formed 1959.

Tom Smothers (born February 2, 1937), guitar; Dick Smothers (born November 20, 1939), bass; Pat Paulsen (born July 6, 1927 in South Bend, WA; died April 24, 1997).

The controversy surrounding the cancellation of the Smothers Brothers' CBS-TV variety hour in 1969 tends to obscure their history as recording artists. This is unfortunate because their finest, most enduring work resides on the LPs they recorded for Mercury during the 1960s. Under the guise of earnest, college-aged folk singers and historians, the Smothers' zany sibling bickering (riddled with pop culture vernacular and buzzword psychology) put a fresh face on the traditional comedy team formula. Besides possessing a tender, expressive tenor, Dick Smothers was an underrated straight man whose slow-burns and snappish reactions spurred brother Tom's "disruptive dumb-guy" pronouncements to greater heights of hilarity. Music was the backbone of their act; the brothers were genuinely fine musicians and singers whose instrumental mastery and full harmonies gave their efforts a surprisingly rich sound and provided distinctive and pleasing segues for their comedy. The Smothers began as part of the Casual Quintet until comedian Ronnie Schell, noting the glut of straight folk-music acts, advised them to strike out as a duo and emphasize their humor. By 1960 they were working hip coffeehouses and nightclubs such as the Hungry i, Mr. Kelly's, and the Troubadour, as well as charming TV audiences with guest shots on the Jack Benny, Steve Allen, Jack Paar, and Garry Moore shows. Most of their repartee was improvised and then refined over the course of many performances, but several funny songs and structured routines were contributed by their friends Mason Williams and Pat Paulsen. Between 1960 and 1968 the duo recorded 12 LPs for Mercury, their biggest sellers—The Two Sides of the Smothers Brothers and The Songs and Comedy of the Smothers Brothers—focusing as much on music as comedy. Think Ethnic, Curb Your Tongue, Knave, Mom Always Liked You Best, and others emphasized the comedy with only occasional musical interludes. The Smothers' success in television signaled the end of the their recording career. After a flop sitcom, the brothers debuted their variety show in 1967. They struck cultural pay dirt by enhancing the standard musical comedy format with irreverent, topical humor informed by folk music anger (something they never did on LP). Their last two LPs were a collection of vignettes from the TV show and brother Dick's lone solo outing, Saturday Night at the World.

A frequent segment of the Smothers Brothers Comedy Hour featured the droll, dead-pan wit of Pat Paulsen, whose satirical presidential candidacy was so effective it actually changed the way many Americans viewed politics. Paulsen continued his comedic "campaigns" under the aegis of the Straight Talking American Government (STAG) party until his death. The controversy stirred up by the show seems tame by today's standards, but during the late '60s, the inclusion of Pete Seeger singing "Waist Deep in Big Muddy" was seen as such a flagrant shot at President Johnson that CBS censored the show. After many subsequent battles with the network (under pressure from the Oval Office), the Smothers were "fired," their career effectively derailed. They took parts in films, returned to TV in several shows that never measured up to their hour on CBS, and toured extensively (eventually adding a yo-yo to their act), but they never recorded another LP. Still touring when they're not tending to their successful winery, the Smothers Brothers are the last of the great musical comedy teams.

what to buy: A fine sampler of material from their salad days as a top recording act, Sibling Revelry ♪♪♪♪½ (Rhino, 1994, compilation prod. Bill Inglot, Tom Smothers, Dick Smothers, David Carroll) features several of their greatest routines ("I Talk to the Trees," "Mom Always Liked You Best," "You Can Call Me Stupid," "The Saga of John Henry"), but still leaves one wanting more.

what to buy next: The daffy satire of their 1965 Grammy Award–winning children's album, Aesop's Fables—The Smothers Brothers Way ♪♪♪♪ (Music for Little People, 1992, prod. David Carroll), still plays well. The boys were at their peak here.

worth searching for: Paulsen's days as a coffeehouse comedian are well preserved in the hilarious Pat Paulsen—Live at the Ice House ♪♪♪♪ (Mercury, 1970, prod. David Carroll). Also, Pat Paulsen for President ♪♪♪♪ (Mercury, 1968, prod. Cecil Tuck, Gary Blair) is a wonderful compilation of Paulsen's deadpan comedic run for our country's highest elected office. Even funnier now than it was back then.

Michael Smith (Photo by Irene Young)

influences:

◀◀ Weavers, Kingston Trio, Martin & Lewis, Mort Sahl

▶▶ Mason Williams, David Frye, Will Durst

Ken Burke

Todd Snider

Born October 11, 1966, in Portland, OR.

One of the freshest voices on the alternative-country scene, Todd Snider successfully mixes Dylanesque wordplay, Springsteen and Mellencamp populism, and Steve Earle's renegade country rock. He's a bit of an uncomfortable fit for Nashville, since he has no trouble occasionally tweaking the Religious Right, but Snider is an adept storyteller, a moralist with a sense of humor, and a ragged-but-right vocalist. A talent to watch, for sure.

what's available: True to its title, Snider's debut, Songs for the Daily Planet ♪♪♪½ (Margaritaville/MCA, 1994, prod. Tony Brown, Michael Utley) reads like dispatches from the newspaper of a modern Metropolis. The sardonic "My Generation (Part 2)" tweaks Generation X with a laundry list of its flash-in-the-pan iconography. "Easy Money" details a scam artist's dealings over a brassy R&B backing. On the serious side, the tempestuous rocker "This Land Is Our Land" offers the Native American spin on the white man's idea of progress. But lest he get too deep, Snider offers "Alright Guy," perhaps the ultimate "What? Me worry?" anthem. The album may be rough around the edges, but that's part and parcel of Snider's considerable charm.

what to buy next: Snider's sophomore effort, Step Right Up ♪♪♪½ (Margaritaville/MCA, 1996), takes him into even more rock-oriented territory than his debut, and it moves further afield ideologically as well. In the statement-of-purpose opener, "I Believe," Snider goes far beyond Garth Brooks's level of tolerance, declaring "I believe in gangster rap/Gays and geeks and ghosts." He offers plenty of wry observations in "Sideshow Blues" and "Moondawg's Tavern," but provides some necessary lyrical grit on "T.V. Guide" and "Prison Walls."

the rest:

Viva Satellite ♪♪♪½ (MCA, 1997)

worth searching for: Snider portrays a naive hitchhiker in the radio-play-style audio version of Hunter Thompson's classic gonzo journalism screed, Fear and Loathing in Las Vegas ♪♪♪½ (Margaritaville/Island, 1996, prod. Laila Nabulsi). He also wrote and performed incidental music for the production.

influences:

◀◀ Bruce Springsteen, Bob Dylan, John Mellencamp, Steve Earle

Daniel Durchholz

Leo Soileau

Born January 19, 1904, in Ville Platte, LA. Died August 2, 1980, in Ville Platte, LA.

Leo Soileau was one of the most popular band leaders and recording artists in Cajun music from the late 1920s to the 1940s. He grew up learning fiddle from Dennis McGee and Sady Courville. He performed old-time fiddle duets with his cousin and made two records that show him in command of the traditional form. He was also a visitor at the home of master accordionist Adam Fontenot, father of Canray Fontenot and good friend of Amédée Ardoin. Soileau's recordings with accordionists Moise Robin and Mayuse LeFleur from this period are regarded as classics, and many of the songs continue to be performed. But Soileau is remembered for neither the old fiddle tunes nor the accordion duets. Instead, he began to follow the string-band style that was being popularized by the Hackberry Ramblers. His band, the Three Aces (later the Four Aces and finally the Rhythm Boys), played Cajun tunes in an almost hillbilly style, with Soileau's fiddle never quite escaping its roots in the countryside outside of Ville Platte. This music and the rolling quality of Soileau's fiddle bow strokes captivated younger fiddlers like Dewey Balfa.

what to buy: Pioneer Cajun Fiddler (1929–37) ♪♪♪♪♪ (Arhoolie, 1993, prod. Chris Strachwitz) includes a couple of the classic Soileau and Robin tunes, "La Valse de Josephine" and "Demain c'est pas dimanche," but the rest of this release is all the rough and smoking string-band sound of Soileau and his Rhythm Boys. What's amazing is the interplay between his guitar players and the drummer, which sounds at times more like a Caribbean or African band than a hillbilly group.

what to buy next: Raise Yur Window—A Cajun Music Anthology, Volume II ♪♪♪♪♪ (CMF, 1994, prod. Country Music Foundation) is a great compilation of early Cajun music. It shows

Solas (© Jack Vartoogian)

Soileau in three very different settings. First there is a cut of Soileau Couzens with Leo and Alius Soileau playing in the archaic style of which Dennis McGee and Sady Courville were masters. Then there's the infamous "Mama, Where You At" with accordionist Mayuse LaFleur, who was killed shortly after making the recording. Finally, there is Leo Soileau and His Three Aces playing Cajun string music with a driving beat.

worth searching for: Cajun String Bands: Cajun Breakdown ♪♪♪♪♪ (Arhoolie, 1997, prod. Chris Strachwitz), an anthology of great Cajun string bands, includes four great cuts by Leo and his musical Aces. This includes the definitive version of the "Port Arthur Blues."

influences:

- Dennis McGee, Hackberry Ramblers
- Wallace "Cheese" Reed, Michael Doucet, Dewey Balfa, Harry Choates

Jared Snyder

Solas

Formed 1995, in New York, NY.

Seamus Egan, flute, tres, nylon-string guitar, tin whistle, low whistle, uilleann pipes, bodhrán, background vocals (1995–present); Karan Casey, lead vocals (1995–present); John Doyle, acoustic guitar, background vocals (1995–present); Winifred Horan, fiddle, background vocals (1995–present); John Williams, accordion, concertina, background vocals (1995–present).

Solas has established itself as one of the top Irish-folk groups on either side of the Atlantic. Following the example of Washington's Celtic Thunder, Solas balances male and female contributions as well as instrumental and vocal traditions within the music. Providing the male influence in the New York–based quintet are two All-Ireland champions, accordionist John Williams and multi-instrumentalist Seamus Egan, as well as hard-driving rhythm guitarist John Doyle. Providing the female flavor are fiddler Winifred Horan from Cherish the Ladies and the Sharon Shannon Band and singer Karan Casey, born in Ireland's County Waterford. On the instrumental numbers, Egan and Horan lead the way, pushed through the uptempo jigs, reels, and hornpipes by Doyle and Williams. On the songs, Casey takes the foreground with her supple soprano, which is framed by her four bandmates, who play with such sympathy they might as well be harmony singers. The linchpin of Solas is Egan, who won All-Ireland Junior Championships on flute, tenor banjo, tin whistle, and uilleann pipes by the time he was a 16-year-old kid from Philadelphia. That was how old he was when his debut solo album was released in 1985. By the time he was 27, he had released four solo albums, contributed to four soundtrack albums, recorded with Eileen Ivers, John Whelan, and Living Colour's Vernon Reid, and co-founded Solas. In 1996 he became the youngest musician to ever win the Irish Echo's Traditionalist of the Year award.

what to buy: Solas ♪♪♪♪ (Shanachie, 1996, prod. Johnny Cunningham), guided through its paces by Silly Wizard's Johnny Cunningham, immediately established this new American quintet as a major force in Celtic music. The dance tunes combine rhythmic verve and melodic invention, and the songs give the instruments as much expressive room as the vocals. The group proved the best possible setting for Egan's special gifts. On the even better follow-up album, Sunny Spells and Scattered Showers ♪♪♪♪½ (Shanachie, 1997, prod. Johnny Cunningham), Casey manages to make an ancient song, "The Wind That Shakes the Barley," sound as if it had been ripped from today's headlines, and to make a modern feminist anthem, "Vanished like the Snow," sound as if it had been handed down for generations. The instrumental medleys gallop along with the aggressive energy only a young band can muster.

what to buy next: Egan's debut solo album, Traditional Music of Ireland ♪♪♪ (Shanachie, 1985, prod. Mick Moloney), showcased the prodigious skills of the 16-year-old multi-instrumental whiz but lacked emotional heft. That would come with the second all-instrumental album, A Week in January ♪♪♪♪ (Shanachie, 1990, prod. Mick Moloney, Seamus Egan), whose title track is one of the classics of modern Irish-American folk music. The co-producers achieved a chamber-folk intensity in their arrangements. The Brothers McMullen: Original Motion Picture Soundtrack ♪♪♪♪ (Arista, 1995, prod. Mick Moloney, Seamus Egan) may be the best introduction to Egan's work, for it includes the half-dozen best tracks from A Week in January and the five best tracks from When Juniper Sleeps. It also includes "I Will Remember You," a song with lyrics and a vocal by Sarah McLachlan based on Egan's "Weep Not for the Memories." That tune can also be found on When Juniper Sleeps ♪♪♪♪ (Shanachie, 1996, prod. Michael Aharon, Seamus Egan), an album that found Egan, collaborating with Horan, Doyle, and Williams, and thus laying the groundwork for Solas. Three Way Street ♪♪♪½ (Green Linnet, 1993, prod. Mick Moloney) is a trio album that matches Egan with his two Philadelphia mentors, Moloney and Eugene O'Donnell, in a lovely session of mutual admiration and affection. Egan also produced Karan Casey's debut solo album, Songlines ♪♪♪½ (Shanachie, 1997, prod. Seamus Egan). Though four-fifths of Solas are represented on Songlines, this is very much a solo album, for Casey sings in the spare, understated style of her hero, Dolores Keane. Both women deliver the lyrics' story with crisp articulation and genuine empathy and carry the melody in a flush tone with little embellishment. This puts the emphasis where it should be—on the song, not the singer.

influences:

◀◀ Cherish the Ladies, Irish Tradition, Celtic Thunder

▶▶ Trian, Eileen Ivers, Sharon Shannon

Geoffrey Himes

Solomon's Seal

See: Lorraine (Lee) Hammond

Jo-El Sonnier

Born October 2, 1946, in Rayne, LA.

Jo-El Sonnier is an internationally known French-Cajun accordionist. He started playing accordion at the age of three, and by the time he was 13, he had already cut his first record—"Tes Yeaux Blues" ("Your Blue Eyes"), which became a regional hit. Between 1972–80 Sonnier bounced between Nashville and Los Angeles, establishing himself as a songwriter and studio musician. In 1975 he signed with Mercury and scored a few minor hits with "I've Been around Enough to Know," "Always Late (With Your Kisses)," and "He's Still All over You." In 1980 he returned to his Cajun roots and recorded Cajun Life, which was sung entirely in Acadian French. Similar heritage-related projects were Cajun Roots (1994) and Cajun Pride (1997). During the 1980s he penned songs for George Strait, Johnny Cash, Conway Twitty, Loretta Lynn, Emmylou Harris, and John Anderson, and he backed new wave rock icon Elvis Costello on his critically acclaimed album King of America. In 1987 Sonnier signed with RCA and cracked the country Top 40 with "Come on Joe." The following year, his "No More One More Time" and the Cajun-inflected "Tear-Stained Letter" hit the country Top 10.

what to buy: On Cajun Pride ♪♪♪♪ (Rounder, 1997, prod. Jo-El Sonnier), Sonnier pays homage to his musical heritage, especially in the rollicking "Lake Arthur Special" and "Johnnie fais bien," a rockin' Cajun version of "Johnny B. Goode." Cajun Roots ♪♪♪½ (Rounder, 1994, prod. Michael Doucet), which is sung entirely in Old World French, shows Sonnier covering the music of his native Louisiana with style, grace, and expert musicianship, as exhibited by the artist's intricate accordion playing and powerful tenor. Standout tracks include "Huppes Taiauts," "Amedee Two Step," and "La Chere Toute-Toute," which features dazzling guitar-fiddle interplay between Sonnier and Beausoleil's Michael Doucet.

what to buy next: Cajun Life ♪♪♪½ (Rounder, 1980, prod. Earl Ball, Alex Broussard) shows Sonnier reveling in the traditional Acadian sounds of Louisiana's bayou country.

the rest:
The Complete Mercury Sessions ♪♪♪ (Mercury, 1992)
(With Eddy Raven) Cookin' Cajun ♪♪♪ (K-Tel, 1996)
Live in Canada ♪♪♪ (Stony Plain, 1996)

worth searching for: Come on Joe ♪♪♪ (RCA, 1988, prod. Bill Halverson, Richard Bennett) and Have a Little Faith ♪♪♪½ (RCA, 1990, prod. Bill Halverson, Richard Bennett, Josh Leo) were Sonnier's two best major-label albums. Come on Joe contains his biggest hits, "No More One More Time" and "Tear-Stained Letter." The hits from Have a Little Faith, "Blue, Blue, Blue" and "If Your Heart Should Ever Roll This Way Again," didn't chart as high, but the album has excellent covers of John Hiatt's "Have a Little Faith in Me" and "I'll Never Get over You."

influences:
◀◀ Iry LeJeune, Amédée Ardoin, Joe Falcon, Lawrence Walker, Vorris "Shorty" LeBlanc ▶▶ Michael Doucet, Beausoleil, Wayne Toups, Zachary Richard

Rick Petreycik

Sons of the Never Wrong

Formed 1993, in Chicago, IL.

Sue Demel, vocals; Bruce Roper, guitar, vocals; Nancy Walker, vocals.

You might expect Sons of the Never Wrong to be Generation X misfits. Turns out they're not so young: they're from the fallout end of the baby boom—old enough to have processed a lot of music and have a really good sense of what they're doing. Bruce Roper, Nancy Walker, and Sue Demel specialize in quirky original songs delivered with soaring harmonies backed by music that mixes bluegrass with rock. The Sons are not for everyone; the approach can be maddeningly self-conscious. The voices (except Walker's classic, smooth alto) aren't particularly notable individually. But the group's sound is so joyous that if you like the Sons for five minutes, you'll like them for a whole CD.

what's available: The Sons' debut, Three Good Reasons ♪♪♪½ (Waterbug, 1995, prod. Sons of the Never Wrong, Victor Sanders), cements the group's sound, inasmuch as one can "cement" something so deliberately goofy. It's full of invention, odd sounds, and whimsy. "Tattoo" is a great Roper composition about finding his match in a "marked woman." Demel and Walker's voices blend beautifully on "Tiny Blue Flowers." Consequence of Speech ♪♪♪ (Waterbug, 1997), the follow-up, is more of the same, for good or ill.

influences:
◀◀ Roches, Timbuk 3, Grateful Dead, B-52's, Peter, Paul & Mary ▶▶ Nields

Pamela Murray Winters

Sons of the Pioneers

Formed as the Pioneer Trio, 1934, in Los Angeles, CA.

Bob Nolan (born April 1, 1908; died June 15, 1980); Leonard Slye, a.k.a. Roy Rogers (1934–37); Tim Spencer (died June 26, 1974), (1934–37, 1937–49); Karl Farr (died September 20, 1961), guitar (1936–61); Hugh Farr, fiddle (1934–58); Lloyd Perryman, vocals (1936–42, 1946–77); Pat Brady (1937–43, 1947–59, 1959–67); Ken Carson (1942–47); Shug Fisher (1943–46, 1949–53, 1955–59); Ken Curtis (1949–53); Tommy Doss (1949–63); Dale Warren (1953–present); Deuce Spriggins (1953–95); Roy Lanham (1961–present); Rusty Richards (1961–66, 1974–present); Billy Armstrong (1964–72); Bob Mensor (1967); Luther Nallie (1968–74, 1980–present); Billy Liebert (1974–81); Rome Johnson (1977–80); Dale Morris (1981–present).

The Sons of the Pioneers certainly kept the "western" in country & western music throughout their celebrated career. Original members Bob Nolan, Tim Spencer, and Roy Rogers created the group and soon added brothers Karl and Hugh Farr. Staff changes continued through the years, but the original trio was memorialized by induction into the Country Music Hall of Fame in 1980. With a burgeoning film career during the 1940s and the advent of television a decade later, Rogers (also a solo Hall of Fame inductee in 1988) epitomized the dashing, heroic dogooder. His singing cowboy image brought millions of dollars into Hollywood, mostly through a tally of dimes from afternoon matinees in Anytown, USA. Still, somebody had to play harmonica and provide the indispensable harmonies. More importantly, the music had to sound fresh, had to capture a dreamy youth's imagination. For that reason, Nolan and Spencer proved vital as well to the initial Sons of the Pioneers lineup. Nolan wrote and arranged the ensemble's signature pieces "Cool, Cool Water" and "Tumbling Tumbleweeds" with clear, infectious harmonies. Spencer, who quit singing in the group but still managed it until 1955, penned more hits, such as "Careless Kisses," "Cigarettes, Whisky and Wild, Wild Women," and "Roomful of Roses."

what to buy: Country Music Hall of Fame ♪♪♪♪♪ (MCA, 1991, prod. Country Music Foundation) contains the group's classic performances, culled from more than 20 years' worth of recordings, including the original versions of "Tumbling Tumbleweeds" and "Cool, Cool Water."

what to buy next: The recordings on Columbia Historic Edition ♪♪♪♪ (Columbia, 1982, prod. Art Satherly) were made in 1937 for the American Recordings Corporation. Spencer had left the group temporarily and been replaced by Lloyd Perryman, who sings on these recordings, notable for the emphasis on the fine instrumental work of the Farr brothers and for some of Rogers's exquisite, fluid yodeling on "The Devil's Great Grandson" and "Cowboy Night Herd Song."

what to avoid: Country & Western Memories ♪♪ (Pair, 1991) has only two cowboy tunes and a bunch of smoothed-out country-pop. Why would anybody want to listen to the Sons of the Pioneers sing anything but cowboy songs?

the rest:
Cool Water ♪♪♪ (RCA Nashville, 1960)
Songs of the Trails ♪♪♪ (Pair, 1990)
Sunset on the Range ♪♪♪♪ (Pair, 1990)
Tumbling Tumbleweeds ♪♪♪½ (MCA Special Products, 1994)

influences:
◀◀ Carson Robison & the Pioneers, Jimmie Rodgers ▶▶ Gene Autry, Tex Ritter, Riders in the Sky

see also: Roy Rogers

Craig Shelburne and Brian Mansfield

Son Volt

See: Uncle Tupelo

Rosalie Sorrels

Born 1933, in ID.

A self-described "storyteller who uses music," Rosalie Sorrels embodies the free-spirited, feminine side of traditional and tradition-rooted folk songs. The inspiration for Nanci Griffith's song "Ford Econoline," Sorrels has spent more than four decades collecting and recording songs that voice the struggles and joys of America's rural population. Sorrels's love of storytelling was inherited from her mother, Nancy Stringfellow, who owned a book store. Although she listened to jazz as a teenager, she was lured to the oral tradition of folk music. With her then-husband, Jim Sorrels, she began collecting stories and songs in Idaho and Utah after taking a course, "An Introduction to American Folk Songs," taught by folklorist Wayland Hand. Sorrel's 1961 debut album, Folk Songs of Idaho and Utah, made her a leading proponent of traditional folk music. Although she's continued to interpret the songs she's collected, Sorrels has also composed many roots-based songs. When her marriage broke up in 1966, Sorrels and her two children loaded everything they owned into a van, later immortalized by Nanci Griffith's tribute, and moved to San Francisco. After meeting singer-songwriters Bruce U. "Utah" Phillips and Malvina Reynolds shortly after her arrival on the West Coast, she added their songs to her repertoire. Sorrels's musical success has been balanced by considerable sorrow. She had an illegal abortion at the age of 16, and gave up a baby for adoption a year later. In 1976 her oldest son, David, took his own life. Although a brain aneurysm in 1988 nearly halted her career, she continues to record, perform, and influence folk and acoustic music.

what to buy: Recorded with old friend and kindred musical spirit Bruce U. "Utah" Phillips, The Long Memory ♪♪♪½ (Red House, 1996, prod. Samantha Wright) explores the musical traditions of the American working class. In a celebration of the Industrial Workers of the World, the Western Federation of Miners, and the Farm Workers of America, the two balladeers share lead vocals and harmonies on Aunt Molly Jackson's "I Am a Union Woman," Si Kahn's "Aragon Mill," and traditional folk songs, including "Bury Me in My Overalls" and "Dump the Bosses off Your Back."

what to buy next: With Sorrels singing her mother's favorite songs, Report from Grimes Creek ♪♪♪½ (Green Linnet, 1991, prod. Rosalie Sorrels) pays homage to the rustic folk sounds and laid-back charm of her birthplace in Idaho. Accompanying herself on acoustic guitar and joined by Johnny "Shoes" Pisano (mandolin, bass), Charlie Burry (fiddle), and Father Jim Watkinson (piano), Sorrels sings and tells stories of lush gardens, fishing, forests, and romance. Then Came the Children ♪♪♪ (Aural Tradition, 1984/Green Linnet, 1992, prod. Rosalie Sorrels) was recorded during a performance at the Vancouver East Cultural Center in February, 1984.

the rest:
Folk Songs of Utah and Idaho ♪♪½ (Folkways, 1961)
Always a Lady ♪♪½ (Green Linnet, 1976/1993)
Traveling Lady Rides Again ♪♪♪ (Green Linnet, 1978/1992)
Miscellaneous Abstract Record No.1 ♪♪♪ (Green Linnet, 1982/1992)
Be Careful, There's a Baby in the House ♪♪♪ (Green Linnet, 1990)
Lonesome Roving Wolf ♪♪♪ (Green Linnet, 1992)
What Does It Mean to Love? ♪♪½ (Green Linnet, 1994) Borderline Heart ♪♪♪ (Green Linnet, 1995)

influences:
Hank Williams, John Jacob Niles, Jean Ritchie
Bruch U. "Utah" Phillips, Nanci Griffith, Carolyn Hester

Craig Harris

Larry Sparks

Born September 15, 1947, in Lebanon, IN.

Larry Sparks is one of the most distinctive and compelling lead singers in bluegrass music. Probably the best of the traditional-style lead guitarists, he and his band the Lonesome Ramblers have been in the forefront of traditional bluegrass for many years. Sparks filled in with the Stanley Brothers as lead guitarist while still in his teens, and after Carter Stanley's death he joined the Clinch Mountain Boys as lead vocalist and lead guitarist, his fierce, percussive flatpicking style much in evidence even then. In 1969 he left to lead his own band and has been a favorite of traditional bluegrass lovers ever since, cutting many songs that have become much identified with him. His rich, deep vocals and fiery guitar work, along with his penchant for bluesy material set to bluegrass, have made him a festival favorite for years, and he has cut many fine recordings, a handful of which ("A Face in the Crowd," "Blue Virginia Blues," "John Deere Tractor") have achieved modern classic status in bluegrass circles.

what to buy: Classic Bluegrass ♪♪♪♪½ (Rebel, 1989, prod. Gary B. Reid) contains the three songs mentioned above, plus "Tennessee 1949," "Kentucky Girl," and "Great High Mountain," all wonderful, and Sparks's guitar workout on "Cannonball Blues" is mind-boggling. Silver Reflections ♪♪♪½ (Rebel, 1988, prod. Larry Sparks) has "The Girl of My Dreams" and "The Natural Thing to Do," two of Sparks's cooler songs.

what to buy next: On Sings Hank Williams ♪♪♪½ (Rebel, 1977, prod. Larry Sparks), Williams's lyrics and Sparks's voice and bluegrass arrangements go together very nicely. The Rock I Stand On ♪♪♪ (Rebel, 1994, prod. Larry Sparks) is a nice gospel set.

the rest:
(With the Lonesome Ramblers) Thank You Lord ♪♪♪ (Old Homestead, 1975)
Travelin' ♪♪♪ (Rebel, 1992)
Blue Mountain Memories ♪♪♪ (Rebel, 1996)

influences:
Carter Stanley, George Shuffler
James King, David Parmley

Randy Pitts

Special Consensus

Formed 1975, in Chicago, IL.

Greg Cahill, banjo; Colby Maddox, mandolin; Diana Phillips, bass; Bobby Burns, guitar. Previous members include Don Stiernberg, mandolin; Drew Carson, mandolin; Al Murphy, fiddle; Dallas Wayne, bass; Robbie Fulks, guitar; Marty Marrone, guitar; others.

Banjo virtuoso Greg Cahill has spearheaded the Special Consensus since 1975, through a long series of personnel changes and forays into different flavors of bluegrass. The band has always featured strong instrumental lineups, in keeping with Cahill's own flashy, inventive picking style.

what to buy: Featuring one of the strongest lineups in the group's history, Strong Enough to Bend ♪♪♪♪½ (Pinecastle, 1996, prod. Mark Schatz) features intriguing covers like Nanci Griffith's "Outbound Plane" and Kathy Kallick's "Call Me a Taxi," original songs by the new vocal front line of Bobby Burns and Diana Phillips, and instrumentals by mandolin player Colby Maddox ("Third Coast Breakdown") and Cahill ("Money Creek").

what to buy next: Another high point in Special Consensus history was the four-piece lineup with Cahill, guitarist Marty Marrone, fiddler Al Murphy, and bassist/vocalist Dallas Wayne. The upbeat Hey Y'All ♪♪♪ (Turquoise, 1991, prod. Greg Cahill) emphasizes Wayne's appealing vocal performances on the title tune and a winning bluegrass cover of "Viva Las Vegas."

the rest:
A Hole In My Heart ♪♪½ (Turquoise, 1989)
Green Rolling Hills ♪♪♪ (Turquoise, 1993) Roads and Rails ♪♪½ (Shy Town, 1995) bowed psaltery

The bowed psaltery (pronounced salt-ree) is a narrow triangular two-octave chromatic instrument. The 24 strings are perpendicular to the narrow end and the instrument is played by drawing a bow across the ends of the strings on either side. On one side are the steps of a major scale and on the other side are additional sharps and flats, similar to a standard keyboard layout. Typically one melody note is played at a time, unless you use multiple bows, which is an advanced technique. The instrument is played cradled in the crook of one arm with the other hand wielding the bow. When playing with two bows, you lay the instrument on your lap or a table. The bowed psaltery is not a true holdover from the past but was invented in the twentieth century, probably in Germany. In addition to the bowed psaltery, there is also a plucked psaltery. This instrument was somewhat popular in Europe prior to the fifteenth century, but it dates back at least two thousand years and is one of the instruments mentioned in the Bible: "the sound of the cornet, flute, harp, sackbut, psaltery, dulcimer" (Daniel 3:5). Although it has now all but died out in Europe, the Finnish kantele and the Russian gusli are both descendants, while the Turkish qanun is considered to be its direct ancestor. In turn, this type of psaltery is possibly the hammered dulcimer's immediate ancestor. In the United States, the plucked psaltery is closely associated with musician Bob Beers. The instrument he plays is actually thought to be a nineteenth-century hammered dulcimer that he chose to pluck instead; it is a much larger instrument resembling a harpsichord and enclosed in a wooden, free-standing case. The plucked psaltery is typically played by plucking with both hands. Traditional folk musician Betty Smith, who plays both types of psaltery, is perhaps the best plucked psaltery player around.

Heidi Cerrigione and Neal Walters

worth searching for: Both Special Consensus Bluegrass ♪♪♪ (Tin Ear, 1979) and Blue Northern ♪♪♪ (Acoustic Revival, 1983) appeared on vinyl but are now out of print.

solo outings:

Greg Cahill:
Lone Star ♪♪♪ (Independent, 1980)

Greg Cahill and Don Steirnberg: Blue Skies ♪♪♪ (Turquoise, 1992)

influences:

◀◀ Flatt & Scruggs, Bill Monroe

▶▶ Radio Flyer, Alison Krauss & Union Station, Suzy Bogguss

Michael Parrish

Bill Spence

Born August 1940, in Iowa City, IA.

Bill Spence is the master hammered dulcimer player of contra dance music in New England. His interest in the dulcimer began in 1969; the following year he formed a string band named Fennig's All-Stars with musicians living in the Albany, New York, area. The group's first album, 1973's The Hammered Dulcimer, was one of the first recordings of hammered dulcimer available, and this lively "feel good" recording captured the fancy of a new generation of musicians and inspired hundreds of new hammered-dulcimer enthusiasts. Spence and his wife, Andy, are the founding members of Old Songs, Inc., a not-for-profit corporation whose mission is to present folk and traditional music and dance to the general public through concerts and group instruction. The Spences also founded Front Hall Records, which recorded many popular folk artists from 1973 to 1993, and Andy's Front Hall, a mail-order catalog company for books and music of selected instruments, specializing in folk, traditional, and acoustic music.

what's available: If you own only one hammered dulcimer recording of contra dance music, The Hammered Dulcimer ♪♪♪♪♪ (Front Hall, 1990, prod. Bill Spence) is the definitive one to own. This CD is a select combination of Fennig's All-Star String Band's first two LPs, with 14 cuts from the 1973 release The Hammered Dulcimer, and six cuts from 1975's Saturday Night in the Provinces. The group's infectious tunes and great energy—joining Spence are Tom McCreesh on fiddle, Jon Pederson on banjo, and Joan Pelton and Toby Fink Stover trading off on piano—make it hard to keep your foot from tapping. The album was chosen as a Recording of Special Merit in Stereo Review magazine and its version of "Gaspe Reel" was used for the theme music of the PBS series Crockett's Victory Garden. The Hammered Dulcimer Returns! ♪♪♪♪½ (Front Hall, 1993, prod. Fennig's All-Stars) is a second recording available on CD, featuring a line-up that includes George Wilson (fiddle, banjo) and Toby Stover (piano, keyboard). The dance tune selections range from a medley of English jigs ("Glacky Hornpipe/The Quickstep/Young Scotty") to a pair of French Canadian reels, ("Reel de Chantier," "Pont au Pic") to a beautiful Irish waltz ("Bridgett O'Malley"). These recordings are available from Andy's Front Hall, P.O. Box 307, Voorheesville, New York 12186-0307.

worth searching for: The Hammered Dulcimer Strikes Again ♪♪♪½ (Front Hall, 1977, prod. Bill Spence) is an instrumental recording with many French Canadian tunes, and Fennigmania ♪♪♪½ (Front Hall, 1980, prod. Bill Spence, Fennig's All-Stars) is a collection of Irish tunes, Cape Breton melodies, and some wonderful Uncle Dave Macon songs.

influences:

◀◀ Howie Mitchell

▶▶ Cathy Barton, Walt Michael, Rick Thum, Scott Jackson

Heidi Cerrigione

Joseph Spence

Born August 3, 1910, in Small Hope, Andros, Bahamas. Died March 18, 1984, Nassau, New Providence, Bahamas.

One's first response to the music of Bahamian singer/guitarist Joseph Spence may be amusement. But, very quickly, any smirking brought on by Spence's spontaneous growls and eccentric phrasing will likely be replaced with delighted smiles. His music may be an acquired taste, but, given time, its savory qualities are inescapable. Spence grew up on Andros, the largest island in the Bahamas. He took up the guitar as a teen and was soon playing dances around his Small Hope home. His distinctive two-finger picking technique so impressed locals that when folklorist Sam Charters came to the Bahamas in 1958 and asked to meet the best guitarist around, he was repeatedly directed to Spence. Charters came upon the Nassau-based, 48-year-old stone mason in Small Hope, where he happened to be visiting family. Charters recorded an hour of music, which was released by Folkways under the title Music of the Bahamas, Volume One. Inspired by that pivotal recording, Fritz Richmond of the Kweskin Jug Band and producer Paul Rothchild (who'd go on to work with the Doors, among others) ventured south to find and record Spence in 1964. Spence continued recording and performing until his death, adopting everything from dance tunes to Christmas carols, pop songs to hymns, to fit his inimitable style.

what to buy: Joseph Spence and the Pinder Family are featured on The Spring of Sixty-Five ♪♪♪♪½ (Rounder, 1991, prod. Peter K. Siegel, Jody Stecher), culled from sessions conducted in Nassau as well as a New York City performance from the same year. Spence is in top form, working in tandem with vocalists Edith, Raymond, and Geneva Pinder.

what to buy next: Happy All the Time ♪♪♪♪ (Hannibal/Rykodisc, 1985) was recorded in 1964 by Fritz Richmond and Paul Rothchild. A relaxed collection, it's highlighted by a nearly 13-minute-long version of "Hallelujah Side."

the rest:

Complete Folkways Recordings ♪♪♪♪ (Smithsonian/Folkways, 1958) Good Morning Mr. Walker ♪♪♪½ (Arhoolie, 1972/1990)

worth searching for: Kneelin' down inside the Gate: The Great Rhyming Singers of the Bahamas ♪♪♪♪ (Rounder, 1994, prod. Peter K. Siegel) was recorded in 1965. This 15-track field recording documents the spiritual music of Spence and other rhyming islanders. (Rhyming is a distant relative of rapping). Spence is the best known of the featured performers, who include Bruce Green, Clifton Green, Tweedie Gibson, the Pinder Family, Stanley Thompson, Clifford Ellis, Frederick McQueen, the Rev. W.G. McPhee, and Shelton Swain.

influences:

◀◀ Blind Blake

▶▶ Ry Cooder, Leo Kottke, John Fahey

Steven Stolder

Davy Spillane

See: Moving Hearts

Spirit of the West

Formed 1983, in Vancouver, British Columbia, Canada.

Geoffrey Kelly, vocals, flute, harmonica, guitar, bodhrán; John Mann, vocals, guitar; Vince Ditrich, drums, vocals; Hugh McMillan, guitar, bass, mandolin, keyboards, vocals; Linda McRae, vocals, accordion, bass (left band 1996).

Spirit of the West is a venerable Canadian folk-based band with a strong pop sensibility. The band began in 1983 as a trio that included John Mann and Geoffrey Kelly. Other members have come and gone, most notably Linda McRae, whose departure in 1996 led some to fear the end of the band. Earlier albums show their folk roots most strongly, while later offerings have more of an alternative-radio sound, but all feature powerful vocals, innovative instrumental arrangements, and a lyrical emphasis on questioning authority.

what to buy: Save This House ♪♪♪♪ (Warner, 1990, prod. Danny Greenspoon) is captivatingly odd, with powerful, rock-schooled vocals and strong folk elements.

best of the rest:
Labour Day ♪♪♪♪ (Flying Fish, 1988)
Two Headed ♪♪♪♪ (Warner, 1995)
Open Heart Symphony ♪♪♪½ (Warner, 1996)

influences:
◀◀ Fairport Convention
▶▶ The Proclaimers, Moxy Früvous, Counting Crows

Pamela Murray Winters

Jeanie Stahl /Jeanie Stahl & Mason Daring

Born 1951, in Geneva, Switzerland.

The jazz and pop songs of the 1920s and '30s are linked to the singer-songwriter tradition by Switzerland-born and Marblehead, Massachusetts-based vocalist and acoustic guitarist, Jeanie Stahl. Her recordings, both as a soloist and as a member of a popular folk duo with producer and multi-instrumentalist Mason Daring, have spanned heartfelt interpretations of everything from Duke Ellington, Irving Berlin, and Edith Piaf tunes to covers of modern folk classics by Bill Staines and Robin Batteau. Stahl is equally strong as a songwriter and has written, alone or with lyricist Harriet Reisen, sensitive and reflective ballads ("Sweet Melodies in the Night" and "Jersey Shore") and playful ditties ("Chocolate Is It!"). After meeting in a folk music coffeehouse in 1974, Stahl and Daring performed as a duo for more than a decade. They also performed, along with Staines, Guy Van Duser, and Billy Novick, in a folk supergroup, the Passim All-Stars. Daring and Stahl continue to work together. Daring has produced Stahl's solo recordings and several of their songs have been used in the soundtracks of John Sayles–produced films including Lianna, Brother from Another Planet, Matewan, and Passion Fish. Shortly after the release of Stahl's 1983 debut album, I'm Just Fooling Myself, she was seriously injured while wind surfing and was unable to perform for two years.

what to buy: The Early Years ♪♪♪♪ (Daring, 1992, prod. Mason Daring, Jeanie Stahl, Robin Batteau) assembles cuts from Daring and Stahl's first decade of recordings and includes harmonious interpretations of Staines's "River" and "The Boats They Come and the Boats They Go," and Batteau's "Take This Heart" and "The Eyes of the Beholder." While Stahl's roots in 1940s jazz vocals are reflected in her expressive rendition of the Bert Kalmer and Harry Ruby–penned "Nevertheless" and in her own swinging compositions, "I Do for You, You Do for Me" and "Chocolate Is It!," Daring hits the mark with his folk classic, "Marblehead Morning."

what to buy next: Mysteries ♪♪♪½ (Daring, 1995, prod. Mason Daring), the follow-up to Stahl's 1987 solo album, All Grown Up, wasn't released until 1995, but its mix of original tunes, Old English ballads, and covers of Randy Newman and Bill Staines songs show that Stahl had lost nothing during the absence.

the rest:
(With Mason Daring) Sweet Melodies in the Night ♪♪♪ (Daring, 1978)
(With Mason Daring) Heartbreak ♪♪♪ (Philo, 1980) All Grown Up ♪♪♪ (Daring, 1987)

influences:
◀◀ Simon & Garfunkel, Gordon Lightfoot, Fats Waller, Aztec Two-Step ▶▶ Bill Staines, Guy Van Duser & Billy Novick see also: Mason Daring

Craig Harris

Bill Staines

For over 25 years, Bill Staines has traveled North America, singing and accompanying his original songs at folk festivals, concerts, clubs and coffeehouses. Getting his start in the Boston-Cambridge folk scene in the early 1960s, Staines built his international popularity with a blend of simple but elegant melodies, witty lyrics, and a warm baritone voice. Staines's songs present slices of Americana, ranging from the Midwest to the Yukon, where lush landscapes and ordinary people have sparked his muse. A bespectacled, flannel-shirted man with an unassuming demeanor, Staines has made a host of local PBS and network television appearances, as well as regular showings on Garrison Keillor's A Prairie Home Companion. In addition to his 14 recorded albums, his songs have been covered by Nanci Griffith, Mason Williams, Grandpa Jones, Priscilla Herdman, Jerry Jeff Walker, and others. Now in his fourth decade of performing, Staines still tours the continent by car, doing what he loves best: writing about the people he sings for.

what to buy: As an itinerant balladeer, Staines logs more than 60,000 miles per year on his car—and appropriately he dedicated a greatest-hits collection to his crossing the six-digit threshold: The First Million Miles ♪♪♪♪½ (Rounder, 1989, prod. Mason Daring, others). This CD is a great opportunity to sample the artist's varied repertoire (18 tracks in all) without spending a bundle. The opener, "Place in the Choir," is a singalong with a gaggle of critters that "clap their hands, paws, or anything they got." "Bridges" waxes eloquently of spanning the "foreboding canyons" that separate people. And Staines's classic "Roseville Fair" warms the heart with fiddles, dancing, and falling in love. If CDs can wear out, this one could be the first to go. Looking for the Wind ♪♪♪♪ (Red House, 1995, prod. Brian Wood) opens with a dose of simple wisdom: "Every long journey is made of small steps." And this collection is certainly an enjoyable step along the way. Showcasing Staines's later writing styles, "Every Long Journey," "Men of the Fields," and "Only Remembered" will likely endure as classics. And Staines's sentimental rendition of Gordon Lightfoot's "Early Morning Rain" is rich and warm. Going to the West ♪♪♪♪½ (Red House, 1993, prod. John Hill, Laurie Hill) is another fine collection of soon-to-be classics. Nancy Griffith says: "This album is so fresh. It's dusk in summer of fireflies in the yard, and it's dark of winter in comfort and warmth. A masterpiece for us to treasure that will never grow tiresome or dated." One listen will verify Griffith's sincerity. Most notably, "River," one of the most popular folk songs of all time, paints life's grand picture: "Someday when the flowers are blooming still,/someday when the grass is still green,/my rolling water will round the bend,/and flow into the open sea."

what to buy next: Tracks and Trails ♪♪♪♪ (Philo, 1991, prod. Mason Daring) is a fine collection of heartfelt ballads. "The Streets of Old Quebec" and "Gold Dust in Our Eyes" showcase Staines's gift for turning lyrical phrases that conjure up unforgettable images. And just when you think the folk process has depleted its potential supply of interesting new train songs, the lonesome whistle blows again with "Winter on the Railroad" and "The Long Trains." Just Play One More Tune ♪♪♪½ (Folk-Legacy, 1994, prod. Brian Wood) features some good guitar work by Guy Van Duser and vocal harmonies by folks from Hartford, Connecticut's Sounding Board coffeehouse—a more than decent blending of talents. "White Mountain Goodbye" is characteristically rich with nature images, while "The Boats They Come and the Boats They Go" presents a not-so-common opportunity to read metaphor into Staines's writing. And where would folk music be if old men didn't tip the bottle once in a while? Without "Rye Whiskey Joe," and that would be a shame. Redbird's Wing ♪♪♪ (Philo, 1988, prod. Mason Daring) includes the playful "Place in the Choir" and sentimental "Yellowstone Winds" before their re-release on The First Million Miles. The avid collector will want to hear these in their original context. The title song and "Bird in the Wind" are more than uplifting. Staines's concert charisma is nicely preserved in Bridges ♪♪♪♪ (Red House, 1992, prod. Steve Smulian). The title song justifies the purchase. And for the young at heart, the children's number "The Porcupine Talks to Itself" is bound to tickle the funny bone.

the rest:
Miles ♪♪♪ (Mineral River, 1976)
The Whistle of the Jay ♪♪♪½ (Folk-Legacy, 1981)
Sandstone Cathedrals ♪♪♪½ (Mineral River, 1982)
Wild, Wild Heart ♪♪♪♪ (Philo, 1985)
Rodeo Rose ♪♪♪ (Philo, 1989)
The Happy Wanderer ♪♪♪♪ (Red House, 1993) Alaska Suite ♪♪♪½ (Mineral River, 1994)

influences:
◀◀ Pete Seeger, Nanci Griffith, Roger Miller, Gordon Lightfoot ▶▶ Peter Keane, David Wilcox, Greg Brown

Art Wojtowicz

The Stanley Brothers

Formed 1946, in VA.

Carter Stanley (born August 27, 1925, in McClure, VA; died December 1, 1966), guitar, vocals; Ralph Stanley (born February 25, 1927, in Stratton, VA), banjo, vocals.

Combining their true Appalachian mountain upbringing with the increasingly popular "bluegrass" sound emerging during the 1950s, Carter and Ralph Stanley became and remain one of the most influential duos in old-time, bluegrass, country, and indeed in American music in general. At 14 Carter got his first guitar, and formed the Lazy Ramblers, with Ralph playing banjo. In 1946, following high school and stints in the service, the brothers began recording as a duo, working on various radio stations, including WCYB in the Tennessee/Virginia border city of Bristol. Forming the Clinch Mountain Boys, the Stanley Brothers began recording for the Rich-R-Tone label in nearby Johnson City, Tennessee, in 1947. They signed to Columbia in 1948, where they recorded 22 tracks. During this time Carter briefly left to sing lead for Bill Monroe. The brothers reunited in 1952 and resumed recording for Columbia until the next year when they signed to Mercury, recording there for the next five years. The bulk of their recordings, however, were done for King and Starday, beginning in 1958, when they also relocated to Florida. Although they had few genuine hits, this era yielded some of their most highly regarded recordings. In 1966 the Stanley Brothers came to an abrupt end with the death of Carter, at age 41. While Ralph carried on, the magic of their harmony singing was clearly gone. The Stanley Brothers are an American treasure, however, and clearly influenced many musicians with their impressive body of work.

what to buy: Angel Band: The Classic Mercury Recordings ♪♪♪♪♪ (Mercury, 1995, comp. prod. Colin Escott) is one scary record! This is such beautiful, even ghostly music, that it may take some getting used to, but the Stanleys didn't get much better.

what to buy next: The Complete Columbia Stanley Brothers ♪♪♪♪♪ (Legacy, 1996) collects all sides recorded for Columbia from 1949 to 1952, including classic performances like "Little Glass of Wine." Quintessential bluegrass for sure.

the rest:

Stanley Series, Volume III, No. 3—May 4, 1958 ♪♪♪♪ (Copper Creek, 1990)
On Radio ♪♪♪½ (Rebel, 1991)
The Early Starday/King Years ♪♪♪♪ (Starday/King, 1993)
Stanley Series, Volume II, No. 1—June 3, 1956 ♪♪♪♪ (Copper Creek, 1993)
20 Bluegrass Originals ♪♪♪½ (Deluxe, 1994)
Clinch Mountain Bluegrass ♪♪♪½ (Vanguard, 1994) Gospel Songs from Cabin Creek ♪♪♪½ (Rebel, 1994) (cassette only) Hymns and Sacred Songs ♪♪♪½ (King, 1994)
The Stanley Brothers and the Clinch Mountain Boys ♪♪♪½ (King, 1994)
Sacred Songs from the Hills ♪♪♪ (Starday, 1994)
On WCYB Bristol ♪♪♪ (Rebel, 1994)
On Radio: Volume I ♪♪♪ (County, 1995) (cassette only) Shadows of the Past ♪♪♪½ (Copper Creek, 1996)
Stanley Series, Volume IV, No. 1—July 29, 1956 ♪♪♪♪ (Copper Creek, 1996)
Little Old Country Church: Volume I ♪♪♪ (County)
Long Journey Home: Volume II ♪♪♪ (County)
Uncloudy Day: Volume III ♪♪♪ (County)
Stanley Brothers of Virginia: Volume IV ♪♪♪½ (County) 16 Greatest Gospel Hits ♪♪♪½ (Hollywood, 1997) 16 Greatest Hits ♪♪♪½ (Hollywood, 1997)

influences:

◀◀ Bill Monroe

▶▶ Ralph Stanley & the Clinch Mountain Boys

Stephen L. Betts

Ralph Stanley /Ralph Stanley & the Clinch Mountain Boys

Born February 25, 1927, in Stratton, VA.

Although he continued to grieve his brother, Carter's death in 1966 at age 41, Ralph Stanley decided within weeks to return to performing with the popular bluegrass duo's band, the Clinch Mountain Boys. With former Lonesome Pine Fiddler Curly Ray Cline, Melvin Goins on guitar, and George Shuffler, Stanley re-formed the Boys, adding lead vocalist Larry Sparks. Through the years some impressive talent moved through the ranks of the Clinch Mountain Boys, including vocalists Roy Lee Centers, Keith Whitley, Charlie Sizemore, Sammy Adkins, Ernie Thacker, and Ralph Stanley II. Mandolin players for the group have included Ricky Skaggs and Ron Thomason (later of Dry Branch Fire Squad). The basic premise for the Clinch Mountain Boys never changed, and Stanley has remained incredibly active as a touring act, and recording artist. In 1980 he was honored with a National Heritage fellowship by President Ronald Reagan and earned an honorary doctorate from Lincoln Memorial University, becoming "Dr. Ralph Stanley." While a great many of his recordings remain in print, many are available only on cassette. But the many CD reissues, and new recordings available attest to Stanley's pure staying power. Keeping old-time bluegrass music alive and vibrant has been a lifelong quest, and he has more than contributed to the preservation of the style he and brother Carter (along with Bill Monroe, Lester Flatt, Earl Scruggs, and others) helped define.

what to buy: Bound to Ride ♪♪♪♪½ (Rebel, 1991, prod. various) is a sterling 20-song collection dating mostly from the early '70s and featuring various band configurations.

what to buy next: Ralph Stanley: Classic Bluegrass ♪♪♪♪½ (1990, Rebel, prod. various) covers even more ground, focusing on the group's 15 years and 20 albums with Rebel.

the rest:

Hills of Home ♪♪♪½ (King, 1969/1996)
Live in Japan ♪♪♪ (Rebel, 1971/1997)
Stanley Sound Today ♪♪♪ (Rebel, 1981/1994)
I Can Tell You the Time ♪♪♪ (Rebel, 1985/1994)
Lonesome & Blue ♪♪♪ (Rebel, 1986/1994)
I'll Answer the Call ♪♪♪½ (Rebel, 1987/1994)
(With Raymond Fairchild) Ralph Stanley & Raymond Fairchild ♪♪♪ (Rebel, 1989/1994)
Pray for the Boys ♪♪♪♪ (Rebel, 1991)
Saturday Night, Sunday Morning ♪♪♪♪ (Freeland, 1992)
Almost Home ♪♪♪♪ (Rebel, 1992)

The Memory of Your Smile ♪♪♪♪ (Rebel, 1994/1997)
50th Anniversary Collection ♪♪♪♪ (Rebel, 1995)
16 Years ♪♪♪♪ (Copper Creek, 1995)
Short Life of Trouble: Songs of Grayson and Whitter ♪♪♪♪ (Rebel, 1996) My All and All ♪♪♪½ (Rebel, 1997)

influences:
◀◀ Bill Monroe, Flatt & Scruggs
▶▶ Keith Whitley, Ricky Skaggs, Bob Dylan

Stephen L. Betts

Pops Staples

Born December 2, 1915, in Winona, MS.

Roebuck "Pops" Staples made his name while transforming his clan of siblings from southern-bred gospel singers (reflecting his own church-reared youth) to soul-pop hit makers that rose to prominence with Stax in the late 1960s. Pops himself didn't go the solo route until late in life.

what's available: Released at age 77, Peace to the Neighborhood ♪♪♪½ (Pointblank, 1992, prod. Roebuck Staples), is a startlingly vibrant and seer-like distillation of blues and gospel. Portraits of a troubled homeland fraught with violence, addiction and spiritual decay drift across the album as if seeking Staples's own visions of peace and healing. Staples's firm but ultimately gentle stance and delivery win out (no doubt assisted by a crack guest list and daughter Mavis's able pipes). Staples followed up with the equally strong Father Father ♪♪♪♪ (Pointblank, 1994), which earned him a Grammy for Best Contemporary Blues Album.

influences:
◀◀ Charley Patton, Howlin' Wolf, Sam Cooke
▶▶ The Staple Singers

Allan Orski

Andy Statman

One of the most versatile of contemporary traditional musicians, Andy Statman is a world-class bluegrass mandolin player and an equally gifted clarinet player who is both a jazz cat and one of the shining lights of contemporary Hasidic music. New Yorker Statman's explorations of klezmer music led him into the spiritual reaches of the Bill Monroe sound.

what to buy: Between Heaven and Earth: Music of the Jewish Mystics ♪♪♪♪♪ (Shanachie, 1997) is a spectacular recording on which Statman and his quartet (pianist Kenny Werner, bassist Harvie Swartz, and drummer Bob Weiner) use Niggunim (eighteenth- and nineteenth-century Chassidic liturgical vocal pieces) as springboards for soaring, free-jazz improvisations in the spirit of the transcendent work of '60s players like John Coltrane and Albert Ayler. Always an expressive musician, this work brings out new emotional depths in Statman's extraordinary clarinet playing; his note bending on the opener "Maggid" is particularly noteworthy.

what to buy next: Songs for Our Fathers ♪♪♪♪ (Acoustic Disc, 1996, prod. David Grisman, Andy Statman), a wonderfully reverent, sentimental exploration of traditional Jewish melodies by two masters of contemporary acoustic music, features a splendid supporting cast including bassists Edgar Meyer and Jim Kerwin, percussionist Hal Blaine, tuba player Zachariah Spellman, and guitarist Enrique Coria.

the rest:
Flatbush Waltz ♪♪♪½ (Rounder, 1980)
(With David Grisman) Mandolin Abstractions ♪♪♪♪ (Rounder, 1982)
(With David Grisman) Nashville Mornings, New York Nights ♪♪♪ (Rounder, 1986)
(With Andy Statman Klezmer Orchestra) Klezmer Music ♪♪♪½ (Shanachie, 1992)
(With Andy Statman Klezmer Orchestra) Jewish Klezmer ♪♪♪ (Shanachie, 1994) Andy's Ramble ♪♪♪ (Rounder, 1994)

influences:
◀◀ Bill Monroe, Dave Tarras ▶▶ Klezmatics, New Orleans Klezmer Allstars

see also: David Grisman

Michael Parrish

Red Steagall

Born Russell Steagall, December 22, 1937, in Gainesville, TX.

Red Steagall grew up in the ranching community of Sanford, Texas, north of Amarillo. He wanted to be a bull rider, but those dreams were dashed when he contracted polio as a teen. Instead, he began playing guitar and also learned mandolin, eventually graduating from West Texas State University with a degree in animal science and agronomy. Steagall wrote Ray Charles's hit "Here We Go Again," and he first recorded in 1969. He had many moderate hits for Capitol, ABC/Dot, and Elektra between 1972 and 1980, the biggest being "Lone Star Beer and Bob Wills Music," which reached Number 11 in 1976. Steagall has also worked as a rodeo rider, a breeder of quarter horses, and an actor (his credits include Benji, The Hunted and Dark before Dawn). He began his own syndicated radio show, Cowboy Corner, in 1984 and once served as chairman of the board of the Academy of Country Music. He also once encountered a petite redhead belting out the national anthem at a rodeo in 1974 and introduced her to some of his music-industry contacts. Reba McEntire has been grateful to him ever since.

what to buy: Born to This Land ♪♪♪½ (Warner Western, 1993, prod. Steve Gibson) is a sentimental mix of stories, poems, and songs that won the National Cowboy Hall of Fame Western Heritage Award for original music.

what to buy next: The Cowboy Code ♪♪♪ (Eagle, 1996) is a two-disc collection of poems and songs that features many Steagall originals, plus familiar songs like Jimmy Driftwood's "Tennessee Stud," Gene Autry's "Ridin' down the Canyon" and the traditional "I'd Like to Be in Texas for the Roundup in the Spring."

the rest:
For All Our Cowboy Friends ♪♪♪ (MCA)
Faith and Values ♪♪♪ (Warner Western, 1995)
Dear Mam, I'm a Cowboy ♪♪♪ (Warner Western, 1997)

influences:
◀◀ Gene Autry, Rex Allen
▶▶ Don Edwards, Waddie Mitchell

Brian Mansfield and Craig Shelburne

Stealers Wheel /Gerry Rafferty

Formed 1972 in London, England. Disbanded 1975.

Gerry Rafferty (born April 16, 1947, in Paisley, Scotland), guitar, vocals (1973–75); Joe Egan, keyboards, vocals (1973–75); Paul Pilnick, guitar (1973); Tony Williams, bass (1973); Rod Coombes, drums, vocals (1973); Joe Jammer, guitar (1974–75); Gary Taylor, bass (1974–75); Andrew Steele, drums (1974–75); Bernie Holland, guitar (1975); Dave Wintour, bass (1975).

A couple of Scottish guys (Joe Egan and Gerry Rafferty) with a penchant for writing plaintive folk/pop songs somehow wound up in the studio with Leiber and Stoller (the team behind the Coasters) producing. The result was Stealers Wheel, one of the great debut albums of the '70s, with its hit single, "Stuck in the Middle with You." The combination of Beatles-esque harmonies, slightly off-kilter production, and heartfelt melodies served the band well artistically and critically, but it wasn't quite enough to enable Egan and Rafferty to weather personality and management problems. All three Stealers Wheel albums are worth seeking out; along with Badfinger, Big Star, the Hollies and others, the band kept a certain style of British pop songwriting alive at a time when most others (most notably the Beatles) had abandoned the form.

what to buy: Start with Stealers Wheel ♪♪♪♪ (A&M, 1974, prod. Jerry Leiber, Mike Stoller) and Rafferty's City to City ♪♪♪♪ (United Artists, 1974, prod. Hugh Murphy, Gerry Rafferty), which includes the huge hit "Baker Street."

what to buy next: Rafferty's Can I Have My Money Back ♪♪♪½ (Blue Thumb, 1971, prod. Hugh Murphy, Gerry Rafferty) reveals his considerable talents as a songwriter and singer. The title song in particular is lots of fun.

what to avoid: Gerry Rafferty ♪♪ (Visa, 1974, prod. Bill Leader) is a compilation of tracks recorded when Rafferty was in the Humblebums with Billy Conolly. Some good songs, but not as sure-footed as his later work.

the rest:
Stealer's Wheel:
Right or Wrong ♪♪♪♪ (A&M, 1975)

Gerry Rafferty:
Night Owl ♪♪♪ (United Artists, 1979)
Snakes and Ladders ♪♪♪½ (United Artists, 1980)
Right down the Line: The Best of Gerry Rafferty ♪♪♪♪ (EMI, 1989/Gold Rush, 1997)
North and South ♪♪ (Avalanche, 1995)
On a Wing and a Prayer (Avalanche, 1995)
Over My Head (Avalanche, 1995)

worth searching for: The single version of Stealers Wheel's "Everyone's Agreed That Everything Will Turn out Fine" was originally recorded with an arrangement reminiscent of "Stuck in the Middle" and is far superior to the version recorded for the Ferguslie Park album.

influences:
◀◀ The Everly Brothers, the Beatles, the Hollies
▶▶ The Proclaimers

Shane Faubert

Jody Stecher & Kate Brislin

Formed 1974, in Spokane, WA.

Jody Stecher (born 1946); Kate Brislin, vocals.

Jody Stecher was raised in Brooklyn in a family that always had music around the house. He started playing guitar at age 11 and spent a lot of time listening to Brunswick reissues of Uncle Dave Macon, Woody Guthrie, and Bradley Kincaid. The first banjo player he heard on record was Dock Boggs. He then picked up a fretless banjo at age 12. At 14 he was playing mandolin in a bluegrass band at his high school. Add fiddle and the Indian sarod to that mixture and you are just getting to the tip of Stecher's musical iceberg. Kate Brislin, Jody's wife, played in the Blue Flame String Band, a pioneering all-woman old-time band. She is well known as the person that can lend beautiful harmony singing to anyone. Together Jody and Kate are a wonder. You can drop the needle (or laser) on any of their records together and you will find an amazing song, instrumentally and vocally. They seemingly can take any song and make it their own. It wouldn't surprise me a bit if they could take a Guns 'n Roses song and not only make it their own, but make it sound brilliant. Thankfully though, Stecher and Brislin are great song hunters who don't necessarily need to rely on the most popular of popular music. From traditional music to Iris DeMent, they continue to record one fine CD after another.

what to buy: Deciding which Stecher and Brislin CD is the best is pretty much a coin toss. They are all amazing. If you like your music acoustic, your arrangements sparse, and your harmonies lonesome, then anything from the duo will do. A Song That Will Linger ♪♪♪♪♪ (Rounder, 1989, prod. Jody Stecher) is a personal favorite due to their fabulous renditions of "Red Rocking Chair," "Hard Times/Dusty Miller," and "Paul and Silas." Heart Songs: The Old Time Country Songs of Utah Phillips ♪♪♪♪♪ (Rounder 1997, prod. Jody Stecher) is a collection of songs penned by Utah Phillips, recorded for the most part with just two guitars for accompaniment.

what to buy next: Our Town ♪♪♪♪♪ (Rounder, 1993, prod. Jody Stecher) is a CD based mainly on traditional songs. A few modern cuts from such writers as Iris DeMent ("Our Town") and Barbara Keith ("The Bramble and the Rose"), however, are fashioned to fit right into the mix of the rest of the album. Blue Lightning ♪♪♪♪♪ (Rounder, 1991, prod. Jody Stecher) leans a little more toward the blues than other recordings. A slow, bluesy take on "Sittin' on Top of the World" is especially good, as well as their version of the old-time classic "Elkhorn Ridge." Stay Awhile ♪♪♪♪♪ (Rounder 1995, prod. Jody Stecher) contains many great songs including "Blue Mountain," "Willie Moore," and Seven Year Blues." worth searching for: Stecher recorded the now-out-of-print solo album Going up on the Mountain ♪♪♪♪ (Bay, 1977, prod. Jody Stecher) and included one song, "The Hills of Isle Au Haut" on it twice because he loved it so much. One of those renditions contains one of the earliest pairings with his future wife Brislin. To those who heard this song the first time around, this cut must have been an exciting foreshadowing of the wonderful music these two would create in the future.

influences:

◀◀ The Carter Family, Bruce U. "Utah" Phillips

▶▶ Tracy Schwarz & Ginny Hawker

Steve Gardner

Davy Steele

See: Ceolbeg

Steeleye Span

Formed 1969, in England.

Maddy Prior, vocals (1969–97); Tim Hart, vocals, guitar, dulcimer, harmonium, five-string banjo, fiddle, (1969–82); Ashley Hutchings, electric bass, vocals (1969–71); Terry Woods, electric guitar, five-string banjo, mandola (1969–70); Gay Woods, vocals, bodhrán (1969–70, 1994–present); Peter Knight, violin, vocals (1971–76, 1980–present); Martin Carthy, vocals, guitar, banjo, organ (1971–72, 1977–78); Bob Johnson, vocals, guitar (1972–76; 1980–present); Rick Kemp, bass, vocals (1972–87); Nigel Pegrum, drums, (1974–89); John Kirkpatrick, vocals, accordion (1977–78); Tim Harries, bass, keyboards, vocals (1989–present); Ham Genocky, drums (1989–present).

Steeleye Span was (and is) one of the most important and influential British folk-rock bands. Ashley Hutchings developed a serious interest in traditional music after having worked on the seminal Liege and Lief as a member of Fairport Convention. He wanted to form a group devoted exclusively to creating new interpretations of traditional ballads and tunes, and Steeleye Span was born. Their first line-up: Hutchings, Prior, Hart, Gay Woods and Terry Woods was short lived. They recorded one album: Hark! The Village Wait and then the Woods duo left. They were replaced by Martin Carthy, already a "star" on the British folk scene, and Peter Knight. With this incarnation, the famous Steeleye Span sound characterized by Maddy Prior's crystal clear soprano and the ensemble's precise choral-like harmonies over electric instrumentals (led by fiddle and electric guitar) began to develop. This second incarnation did play live and recorded two remarkable albums: Please to See the King and Ten Man Mop or Mr. Reservoir Butler Rides Again. After those projects, Carthy and Hutchings departed. Hutchings began his lifelong career of producing English-rooted contemporary music, which has included leading all the various permutations of the Albion Country Band (the Albion Band, the Albion Dance Band and being involved with many special one-time-only projects). Carthy returned to solo work, but his career has also included membership in the Albion Country Band, the Watersons, Brass Monkey, and Waterson, Carthy. Stepping in for Hutchings and Carthy were Bob Johnson and Rick Kemp. With these new members, Steeleye Span was in for its headiest period yet, which included hit singles in Great Britain and regular concert tours of North America, Britain, and continental Europe. The group's sound became definitive with this incarnation; the vocal harmonies even tighter and the rhythms rocked up courtly dances. Drummer Nigel Pegrum came on board in time to record Now We Are Six, which cemented the group's "medieval Jefferson Airplane" sound. The next big changes came when Johnson and Knight left in 1977 after producing an outside recording, The King of Elfland's Daughter. Carthy rejoined the band, bringing with him accordionist/vocalist John Kirkpatrick. Kirkpatrick's accordion brought a different color to Steeleye Span's music, and on Storm Force Ten, the group's only studio recording in this incarnation, they presented distinctive arrangements of "The Black Freighter" (from The Threepenny Opera) and "The Wife of the Soldier." For several years after that, Steeleye Span rested until re-forming in 1979 with its mid-1970s membership: Prior, Hart, Johnson, Knight, Kemp, and Pegrum. In 1976 Prior had taken some time off to record an acoustic album with June Tabor—Silly Sisters—and, in 1978 she used the break from Steeleye Span to release two albums of contemporary songs: Woman in the Wings and Changing Winds, both of which are in 1980 Steeleye Span-released Sails of Silver. After that, Hart left for good; he worked as a producer and issued one solo album. The next Steeleye studio album, Back in Line, appeared in 1986 and then came another "Silly Sisters" set (produced by avant garde folkie, Andrew Cronshaw), No More to the Dance, in 1988. Steeleye Span's 20th anniversary album, Tempted and Tried, appeared the following year, and was followed by the live collection Tonight's the Night in 1992. In addition to all this Steeleye activity, Prior teamed with "early music" folk ensemble the Carnival Band for a series of tours and recordings that continues to this day. Gay Woods returned to the Steeleye fold in 1994, and her distinctive vocals (just a little rougher and lower than Ms. Prior's) can be heard on Steeleye Span's 1995 release Time. In late 1997 Prior officially left Steeleye Span to pursue other projects. In fact, her latest solo album, Flesh and Blood, was released earlier in 1997.

steeleye span

what to buy: Some of Steeleye Span's best loved songs ("Boys of Bedlam," "False Knight on the Road,") along with fiery instrumentals featuring Martin Carthy on electric guitar (a rare sight now!) and Peter Knight on fiddle appear on Please to See the King ♪♪♪♪♪ (B&C, 1971/Shanachie, prod. Sandy Roberton). Below the Salt ♪♪♪♪½ (Chrysalis, 1972/Shanachie, 1988, prod Steeleye Span, Jerry Boys) includes a number of songs that have also become Steeleye classics: the grim supernatural ballad "King Henry," the more pastoral "Spotted Cow" and "Rosebud in June," and their unforgettable interpretation of "Gaudete," a sixteenth-century religious piece sung entirely in Latin. The line-up that recorded Storm Force Ten ♪♪♪♪½ (Chrysalis, 1977/BGO, 1996, prod. Steeleye Span, Mike Thompson) only lasted a short time but produced remarkable music. They never toured North America, which makes this album essential for U.S. and Canadian fans. However, one of the special treats for those who attended "Steeleye Span: The Journey," an eight hour mega-concert held September 2, 1995 at the Forum in London, England, that featured almost everyone who'd ever been a member of Steeleye Span, was the short set by a reunited Storm Force Ten line-up. Spanning the Years ♪♪♪♪½ (Chrysalis, 1995, prod. various) is a compilation featuring tracks from all periods of Steeleye Span's 25-plus year history. The CD booklet includes an informal, informative essay by Prior with John Tobier and Lynda Morrison.

best of the rest:
Hark! The Village Wait ♪♪♪♪ (RCA, 1970/Shanachie, 1991)
Parcel of Rogues ♪♪♪♪ (Chrysalis, 1973/Shanachie, 1987)
Live at Last ♪♪♪♪ (Chrysalis, 1978/BGO, 1997)
Tempted and Tried ♪♪♪♪ (Shanachie, 1989)
Time ♪♪♪♪ (Shanachie, 1995) worth searching for: There are two Steeleye Span concert videos released in the United States: A 20th Anniversary Celebration (Shanachie, 1989) and Steeleye Span 25 Live ♪♪♪♪½ (Teal Entertainment/Wienerworld Limited/Anchor Bay Entertainment, 1995)

solo outings:

Maddy Prior:
Woman in the Wings ♪♪♪♪½ (Chrysalis, 1978/BGO)
Changing Winds ♪♪♪♪ (Chrysalis, 1978)
Year ♪♪♪♪½ (Park, 1993)
Memento: The Best of Maddy Prior ♪♪♪♪ (Park, 1995) Flesh and Blood N/A (Park, 1997)

Tim Hart:
Tim Hart ♪♪♪ (Chrysalis 1979/BGO 1997)

Peter Knight:
Ancient Cause ♪♪♪½ (Shanachie, 1991)

Maddy Prior & Tim Hart:
Folk Songs of Old England Volume I ♪♪♪♪½ (Mooncrest, 1968)
Folk Songs of Old England Volume II ♪♪♪♪½ (Mooncrest, 1968) Summer Solstice ♪♪♪♪ (Mooncrest, 1971/Shanachie, 1991)

Maddy Prior & June Tabor:
Silly Sisters ♪♪♪♪♪ (Chrysalis, 1976/Shanachie, 1988)
No More to the Dance ♪♪♪♪♪½ (Shanachie, 1988)

Maddy Prior and the Carnival Band:
A Tapestry of Carols ♪♪♪♪½ (Saydisc, 1987)
Sing Lustily and with Good Courage ♪♪♪♪ (Saydisc, 1990) Carols and Capers ♪♪♪♪½ (Park, 1991)
Hang up Sorrow and Care ♪♪♪♪½ (Park, 1995)

Rick Kemp:
Escape ♪♪♪½ (Fellside, 1997)

influences:
◀◀ The Copper Family, Young Tradition, Jefferson Airplane, Fairport Convention, the Watersons, Mr. Fox

▶▶ Connie Dover, Clarion, Garmarna, Varttina, Blyth Power, Pyewackett, the Spriguns, Hedgehog Pie, New St. George, the Klezmatics, Polly Bolton, Iron Horse

see also: Sweeney's Men, Martin Carthy, June Tabor

Ken Roseman

Rafe Stefanini

Born November 29, 1954, in Bologna, Italy.

Rafe Stefanini grew up in Italy, but that didn't stop him from becoming one of America's finest old-time musicians of the younger generation. Stefanini got his first taste of traditional American music from recordings of the New Lost City Ramblers and Doc Watson. Eventually, his interests turned to the older musicians. He began playing fiddle during the late 1970s and the banjo during the early 1980s, influenced by the playing of Uncle Bunt Stephens, Kyle Creed, and others. Stefanini's first band, the Moonshine Brothers, consisted of him and his brothers. After coming to the United States, he played and recorded with the Wildcats and the L7s. Stefanini currently lives near Philadelphia, Pennsylvania and makes a living repairing and restoring stringed instruments. He plays and records with the old-time band Big Hoedown and teaches at dance and music camps around the country.

what's available: Old Paint ♪♪♪½ (Yodel-Ay-Hee, 1995, prod. Rafe Stefanini, Bob Herring) isn't really a Stefanini recording. He teams up with Indiana musician Bob Herring for a variety of fiddle/banjo and fiddle/guitar duets, with the lead fiddle role changing hands often. These two fiddlers have different styles that complement each other well, and they are equally skilled at backing each other up. Stefanini plays several archaic tunes, such as "Old Time Train 45," in an almost spooky style that does justice to tunes like this. Bob's fiddling has more of the midwestern smoothness to it, as in "John Robinson." Many of this disc's tunes are not heard or recorded often enough, such as Wilson Douglas's "Little Rose" and Allan Sisson's "Rocky Road to Dublin." It also contains a number of unusual versions of common tunes, such as "Brown's Dream." Also included are a vocal by Lydia Herring (with the boys backing her up on harmony vocal and guitar) and a banjo/guitar version of "Sally Ann." This disc goes way beyond the standard fare of old-time music, presenting a couple of different styles and a wide geographic range of source material. Sources for the tunes are given, as are the fiddle tunings. All in all, it's a fine recording from two of the finest of the current generation of old-time musicians, and it represents a wide cross-section of the genre.

influences:
◀◀ Bunt Stephens, Marcus Martin, Kyle Creed, Fred Cockerham

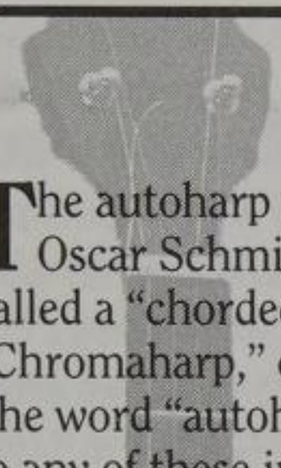
▶▶ Big Hoedown, Bruce Molsky, Dirk Powell

Dave Shombert

Cat Stevens

Born Steven Demetri Georgiou, July 21, 1947, in London, England.

Despite immensely popular folk-rock songs that have become international standards, Cat Stevens is the pop star who didn't want to be a pop star. In 1966, just a year after he started performing professionally, he had his first hit; by 1968 he was semi-retired with tuberculosis. Stevens was turned off by the pop star life, and when he resurfaced in 1970 with Mona Bone Jakon, the music was more developed and the lyrics more mature and sensitive. Stevens's fame grew during the next few years, as the music became more orchestrated and spiritually concerned. By 1973 he was even more reclusive; he moved to Brazil as a tax exile and donated the savings to charities. This pattern followed through the '70s as his record sales eventually flagged. A devout Muslim by 1979, Stevens changed his name to Yusef Islam and retired from music; he stirred controversy in 1989 by endorsing the Ayatolla Khomeini's decree that The Satanic Verses author Salman Rushdie deserved to die for alleged blasphemies in the book. He has since reversed that position.



autoharp

The autoharp (a registered trademark of Oscar Schmidt-International) is sometimes called a "chorded zither," a "dulciharp," a "Chromaharp," or any of a dozen other names. The word "autoharp" is commonly used to refer to any of these instruments, much like the word "dobro" is used to refer to any kind of resophonic guitar, and is played by many folk musicians today. A typical autoharp has 36 or 37 strings and is played by depressing felted chord bars (with the left hand) against the open strings while strumming (or plucking) the strings, usually with thumb and finger picks on the right hand. Many elementary school music teachers strum the autoharp to accompany their singing students, but an increasing number of musicians have discovered the autoharp's melody-playing potential. The invention of this instrument is attributed to Karl Gutter of Germany in the late 1800s and was soon after manufactured by Charles F. Zimmermann of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, and sold widely in the rural south through catalog sales. Initially the instrument was played flat on a table or sound box (as done by Ernest "Pop" Stoneman and Sara Carter), and played rhythmically as accompaniment to singing. After the breakup of the Carter Family, Mother Maybelle Carter popularized holding the instrument in her arms and playing melodies. The Oscar Schmidt-International Company continues to manufacture autoharps today, and there are many fine custom luthiers building autoharps, including George Orthey, Tom Fladmark, and Mark Fackeldey. Many styles of folk music can be played on the autoharp and there are dozens of fine players. Bryan Bowers, Mike Fenton, and Mike Seeger are three of the best and all are members of the Autoharp Hall of Fame.

Heidi Cerrigione

what to buy: Even though he'd had a few hits, Tea for the Tillerman ♪♪♪♪♪ (A&M, 1971, prod. Paul Samwell-Smith) blasted Stevens into international superstardom. "Wild World," "Father and Son," "Where Do the Children Play," "Hard Headed Woman," and others made Stevens an album-rock radio staple. The album's cartoon cover art and the innocence expressed in the songs were perfect for the flower-child ethos. Teaser and the Firecat ♪♪♪♪½ (A&M, 1971, prod. Paul Samwell-Smith) is almost as good, particularly the (then) side-two combination of "Morning Has Broken," "Bitterblue," "Moonshadow," and "Peace Train."

what to buy next: Foreigner ♪♪♪♪ (A&M, 1973, prod. Cat Stevens) offers a taste of the more orchestral side of Stevens's music. The composition "Foreigner Suite" is a complex long form that veers away from lyrics and displays his talent as a musician. Classics—Volume 24 ♪♪♪♪♪ (A&M, 1987, prod. various) is an aptly titled hits collection, including songs he recorded for the dark cult comedy Harold and Maude.

what to avoid: Izitso ♪♪ (A&M, 1977, prod. Cat Stevens, Dave Kershenbaum) delves into electronics to little avail, though there are some revealing personal tales on a couple of songs.

the rest:
New Masters ♪♪♪ (Deram, 1967)
Mona Bone Jakon ♪♪♪½ (A&M, 1970)
Very Young and Early Songs ♪♪♪ (Deram, 1972)
Catch Bull at Four ♪♪♪♪ (A&M, 1973)
Buddah and the Chocolate Box ♪♪♪♪½ (A&M, 1974) Greatest Hits ♪♪♪♪½ (A&M, 1975)
Numbers ♪♪♪♪½ (A&M, 1976)
Back to Earth ♪♪ (A&M, 1979)
Greatest Hits Volume II (A&M, 1987)

worth searching for: Matthew and Son ♪♪♪ (Deram, 1967) provides an early earful of the straight folk sound of one guy with a guitar and a song to sing.

influences:
◀◀ Bob Dylan, Paul Simon
▶▶ Jackson Browne, James Taylor, Joe Henry, 10,000 Maniacs

Lawrence Gabriel

Al Stewart

Born September 5, 1946, in Glasgow, Scotland.

With his cerebral lyrics, light vocal delivery, and understated guitar work, Al Stewart was something of an antidote for the disco-crazed '70s. His recordings were pleasant-sounding excursions that delved into such unusual topics as Nostradamus. With roots in folk and arid vocals, Stewart needed somebody to push him over the top. Who better than the over-the-top producer himself, Alan Parsons? Each complemented the other:

Stewart sang with greater confidence and had lush multi-tracked layers of sound backing him, while Parsons was limited to the amount of sound he could produce lest he squash Stewart's sensitive sensibilities. Despite a few hits—"Year of the Cat," "Song on the Radio," "Time Passages"—Stewart's older material doesn't time-travel well. But he continues to make new music that's gripping and forward looking.

what to buy: Between the Wars ♪♪♪♪♪ (Messa/Bluemoon, 1995, prod. Al Stewart, Laurence Juber) is a terrific album that doesn't sound much like the older Stewart. He and guitarist Juber fashion 13 songs that conjure up musical memories of '30s swing-time Paris, with looser arrangements and a full backing band that includes bass, drums, strings, reeds, and percussion.

what to buy next: The Best of Al Stewart ♪♪♪ (Arista, 1988, prod. various) is a 13-track thumbnail sketch of his work with Parsons and others. It includes material from Year of the Cat, Time Passages, 24 Carrots, and the rest of his most well-known, if not best, periods.

what to avoid: The thematic bent of Russians and Americans ♪♪ (Passport, 1984/Mesa-Bluemoon, 1994) is a noble concept, but it ends up interfering with the album's musical flow.

the rest:
Past, Present, and Future ♪ (Columbia, 1974/Rhino, 1992)
Modern Times ♪♪ (Janus, 1975/Rhino, 1992)
Year of the Cat ♪♪♪ (Arista, 1976)
Time Passages ♪♪♪ (Arista, 1978)
24 Carrots ♪♪♪ (Arista, 1980/Razor & Tie, 1993)
Rhymes in Rooms ♪♪♪♪ (Messa/Blue Moon, 1992) Famous Last Words ♪♪♪ (Mesa/Bluemoon, 1994) worth searching for: Stewart was more of a lovelorn folkie when he recorded Orange ♪♪♪, (Columbia, 1972/Beat Goes On, 1993), but guests Rick Wakeman and Brinsley Schwarz brought some muscle to his muse.

influences:
◀◀ Donovan, Bob Dylan, King Crimson, Alan Parson Project ▶▶ Sting, Rupert Holmes, Nick Gilder

Patrick McCarty and Gary Graff

Andy M. Stewart

Born 1952, in Perthshire, Scotland.

Andy M. Stewart is one of the greatest living interpreters of traditional Scottish and Irish songs. As a member of the historically crucial band Silly Wizard, and later as a solo singer and as part of several duos, Stewart has taken his rich, sweet voice and produced definitive versions of some of the gems of the song tradition. He has also been an important interpreter of the works of poet Robert Burns, a singer of songs by other revival songwriters, and the author/composer of some of his own that have become folk revival standards. Although Stewart comes from a well-known extended family of singers, his experiences as a professional musician began in high school, in Blairgowrie, the town where he was raised. He and several schoolmates, including Dougie MacLean and Martin Hadden, formed a folk band called Puddock's Well. They gigged around the Scottish Highlands and served as house band at their local folk club. They were happy to be playing music, and when they finished school they all got day jobs and kept at the band in the evenings. One of the gigs Puddock's Well landed in the early 1970s was as the opening act for a trio called Silly Wizard. The two groups hit it off, and when the chaps in Silly Wizard found themselves short a few members, they called Stewart and Hadden to fill their ranks. After a few more reorganizations, the lineup stabilized with Stewart on voice and tenor banjo, Hadden on bass, Gordon Jones on voice and guitar, Phil Cunningham on accordion and keyboards, and Johnny Cunningham on fiddle. They were a powerhouse band, one of the most successful acts the Scottish folk scene ever produced. In addition to packing as much fun as he could into his years with the legendary band, Stewart made use of his association with Silly Wizard to cement his reputation as a consummate performer and songwriter. As frontman for one of the most brilliant bands on the scene, he entertained thousands of listeners all over the world. The songs he wrote with the band, including "The Queen of Argyll," "The Ramblin' Rover," "The Blackbird," "Golden, Golden," and "A Lover's Heart" became staples of Silly Wizard's repertoire and standards within the folk scene. In 1985, during a break from Silly Wizard, Stewart was slated to go on tour with Phil Cunningham when Cunningham got into a bad car accident. Stewart called Irish guitarist and bouzouki player Manus Lunny. Lunny agreed to fill in, and a new partnership emerged that lasted six years and carried Stewart beyond the breakup of Silly Wizard in 1988. The two toured many times and released four albums, one as a trio with Phil Cunningham, one credited as a Stewart solo disc, and the other two as Andy M. Stewart and Manus Lunny. By 1991 Lunny's main gig was with Scottish folk-pop band Capercaillie, and he was no longer able to be Stewart's touring partner. Another Irish guitarist, Gerry O'Beirne, stepped in to fill Lunny's shoes. Today Stewart regularly tours with O'Beirne. The pair have released two CDs, credited as Stewart solo discs but arranged and produced largely by O'Beirne.

what to buy: Dublin Lady ♪♪♪♪♪ (Green Linnet, 1987, prod. Manus Lunny, Andy M. Stewart), recorded with Lunny, is a classic of the genre on which Stewart interprets some fine old songs. Tracks include Stewart's lovely version of "Bogie's Bonnie Belle" as well as the hilarious Irish drinking song "The Humours of Whiskey," both of which are definitive performances. "Dinny the Piper," a great ballad from the 1798 rebellion in Ireland, tells of a misunderstanding involving a soldier, a bagpipe player, and an apparently carnivorous cow; perhaps the first recorded case of Mad Cow Disease? Two of the original songs on this album, "Take Her in Your Arms" and "Where Are You (Tonight I Wonder)" have become favorites on the folk revival circuit, with numerous cover versions on the market. In addition to the fine singing by Stewart, Lunny contributes vocals to one song and guitar and bouzouki accompaniment throughout the disc. Other accompanists include Phil Cunningham (accordion, keyboards), Aly Bain (fiddle), and Sean Og Potts (uilleann pipes and whistles).

what to buy next: Donegal Rain ♪♪♪♪½ (Green Linnet, 1997, prod. Gerry O'Beirne) is another refreshing album of folk standards and new treasures. Some of the traditional ballads recorded here will stand as definitive versions of magnificent songs; Stewart's version of "Matt Hyland," a rare Scottish ballad with a happy ending, hasn't been outdone on record, and his treatment of "The Banks of Sweet Dundee" is absolutely beautiful. "The Irish Stranger" is given an appropriately solemn treatment, as is "Ramblin' Irishman"; both are sad songs of emigration, but with glimmers of hope and perseverance. More lighthearted material is here as well, mostly songs of sexual dalliance like "Tibbie Fowler o' the Glen" and "Queen amangst the Heather." Three Stewart originals fill out the album's 11 selections. The arrangements are a nice blend of the Celtic and acoustic with a touch of rock and roll here and there. Another very fine showing from Stewart and friends. Man in the Moon ♪♪♪♪ (Green Linnet, 1994, prod. Gerry O'Beirne) features accompaniments by O'Beirne as well as other top names in Irish and Scottish music, but the focus is on Stewart's resonant voice. Several well-known traditional songs are given the Stewart treatment, including "The Echo Mocks the Corncrake," "The Gaberlunzie Man," and "The Lakes of Ponchartrain." In addition, he has adapted words by Thomas Moore, Sir Walter Scott, and others. There are two songs in particular that will stand out in the memories of Stewart's fans. "The Errant Apprentice" was written by Bill Watkins and set to music by Stewart and O'Beirne. It's a clever, if somewhat bizarre, ballad about a failed love affair, and its hilarious words and simple tune will remind fans of "The Ramblin' Rover," one of Stewart's best-loved songs from Wizard days. "The Land of the Leal" appeared on Silly Wizard's very first (and now very hard to find) LP. Like that album, Man in the Moon ends with this sweet and moving song about heaven. By the Hush ♪♪♪½ (Green Linnet, 1983, prod. Phil Cunningham), released at the height of Silly Wizard's popularity, was Stewart's first album without the band. It features two songs, "The Ramblin' Rover" and "The Parish of Dunkeld," that were highlights of the Wizard's early repertoire, and these versions suffer a bit by comparison with the band's arrangements. The other songs, mostly slow sad ballads, are lovingly arranged and performed. The painful ballads of Patrick Sheehan's enlistment and of an unnamed Irishman's immigration to a Civil War-torn America get a silk-smooth treatment by Stewart rather than the usual, harder-edged arrangements of angrier singers. Stewart's originals deal with unhealed wounds, both personal and political. In all, this is Stewart's darkest and most melancholy album, with unfulfilled longings haunting almost all the songs. His honeyed voice is the perfect vehicle for them. As a testament to its quality, this album was named Melody Maker's folk album of the year in 1983.

the rest:

(With Manus Lunny and Phil Cunningham) Fire in the Glen ♪♪♪ (Shanachie, 1985)
(With Manus Lunny) At It Again ♪♪♪ (Green Linnet, 1990) Songs of Robert Burns ♪♪♪ (Green Linnet, 1991)

influences:

◀◀ Archie Fisher, Lucy Stewart, Silly Wizard

▶▶ Ed Miller, Tony Cuffe see also: Silly Wizard

Steve Winick

John Stewart

Born September 5, 1939, in San Diego, CA.

John Stewart took a giant step upon leaving the Kingston Trio in 1967. His first album, California Bloodlines, recorded at the same time as Bob Dylan's Nashville Skyline with some of the same musicians, became a classic and set the foundation for a lengthy solo career. Working from the enthusiasm of the Kennedy years (with the Trio, he wrote "New Frontier" for John F. Kennedy, and the songs he wrote while traveling with the 1968 Robert Kennedy presidential campaign are a continuing thread through his albums for the next decade), Stewart wrote with a liberal's unabashed love of country, good humor, and compassion and sang with a deep voice that seemed older than its years. He bounced from label to label through 1980, with only the strangely ironic "Gold," recorded for RSO—a label that marketed him alongside the Bee Gees and Saturday Night Fever—as his only real hit. Many of his songs have been recorded by others, the most famous being the Monkees' 1967 smash "Daydream Believer." Stewart's later albums, on small labels and often for his own Homecoming imprint, continue in the same vein, and he stays busy as a live and recording act. Though his optimism has been shaken and his images have turned darker and more impressionistic over the decades, Stewart remains a durable and formidable songwriter.

what to buy: Stewart's early albums are available on compact disc mostly in European import configurations. The best is still California Bloodlines/Willard Minus 2 ♪♪♪♪♪ (Bear Family, 1989, prod. Nick Venet), written in 1968 while Stewart traveled with the Robert Kennedy campaign. It captures the yin and yang of that period as well as anything. Now packaged with its equally charismatic 1970 follow-up Willard on one CD, it's an incredible bargain even at import prices. The Phoenix Concerts—Live ♪♪♪♪♪ (Capitol, 1974/One Way, 1997, prod. Nick Venet) is a superb live recording with one of Stewart's best ensembles, and the new reissue adds two songs to the original album. Bullets in the Hourglass ♪♪♪♪ (Shanachie, 1992, prod. John Hoke, John Stewart) shows the ever-widening direction and more subjective imagery of his recent songwriting.

what to buy next: Airdream Believer ♪♪♪♪ (Shanachie, 1995, prod. John Stewart) includes several new songs and a retrospective that even reaches back into his Trio days, including the pre-rap "The Rev. Mr. Black." Secret Tapes '86 ♪♪♪♪ (Homecoming, 1986, prod. John Stewart) includes medleys of some old favorites and strong songs such as "Justiceville" and "Unchained Beast." Lonesome Picker Rides Again ♪♪♪♪ (Warner Bros., 1971, prod. Michael Stewart) and Sunstorm ♪♪♪♪ (Warner Bros., 1972, prod. Michael Stewart) are Americana song collections in the manner of California Bloodlines that got lost in the shuffle.

what to avoid: On the heels of "Gold," RSO pushed for another Bombs Away Dream Babies, and Stewart came up with Dream Babies Go Hollywood ♪ (RSO, 1980, prod. John Stewart), an attempt to retain some dignity while going Hollywood. That he failed was perhaps best for the label and Stewart.

the rest:

(With Buffy Ford) Signals through the Glass ♪♪ (Capitol, 1968)
Cannons in the Rain/Wingless Angels ♪♪♪ (Capitol, 1973, 1975/Bear Family, 1990)
Fire in the Wind ♪♪♪♪ (RSO, 1977)
Bombs Away Dream Babies ♪♪♪ (RSO, 1979/Razor & Tie, 1994)
Blondes ♪♪♪½ (Allegiance, 1982)
(With Nick Reynolds) Revenge of the Budgie ♪♪♪ (Takoma, 1983)
Trancas ♪♪♪½ (Affordable Dreams, 1984)
The Gathering ♪♪ (Homecoming, 1984)
Centennial ♪♪ (Homecoming, 1984)
Trio Years ♪♪♪ (Homecoming, 1986/Laserlight, 1996)
Punch the Big Guy ♪♪♪ (Shanachie, 1987)
Secret Tapes II ♪♪♪ (Homecoming, 1987)
American Sketches ♪♪♪ (Laserlight, 1991)
(With the Cumberland Three) Songs of the Civil War ♪♪ (Rhino, 1991)
American Originals ♪♪♪ (Capitol, 1992)
Chilly Winds ♪♪♪ (Folk Era, 1994)
(With Buffy Ford) The Essential John and Buffy ♪♪♪ (Feegie, 1994) American Folk Song Anthology ♪♪♪½ (Laserlight, 1996)
(With Buffy Ford) Live at the Turf Inn Scotland ♪♪♪♪ (Folk Era, 1996) Rough Sketches ♪♪♪♪ (Folk Era, 1997)
Bandera ♪♪♪ (Folk Era, 1997)

worth searching for: The Last Campaign ♪♪♪♪½ (Homecoming, 1985/Laserlight, 1996, prod. John Stewart) gathers together some songs written during the late '60s, specifically about the Robert Kennedy campaign, most of which had ended up as pieces of other albums. It's now packaged with American Folk Song Anthology and Trio Years as a low-priced three-disc set, American Journey ♪♪♪♪ (Laserlight, 1996). Neon Beach ♪♪♪♪ (Line, 1992, prod. John Stewart) is a ragged, exciting live tape with a rock band that includes some classic '80s songs and weird, yet affecting, covers—"Lady Came from Baltimore," "Shake, Rattle, and Roll," even Paul Simon's "The Boy in the Bubble," but it's only available as an import.

influences:

◀◀ Cumberland Three, Kingston Trio, Dave Guard

▶▶ Lindsey Buckingham, Beat Farmers

Leland Rucker

Wendy Stewart

Born in Edinburgh, Scotland.

Combining more than 30 years of harp-playing experience with the influences of a variety of traditions has made Wendy Stewart into a unique voice in the folk harp world. Born and raised in Scotland, she moved to Northern England for 15 years just when she seemed to be emerging as a fully developed talent in Scottish harping. These years in Lancaster allowed her to absorb the sounds of many types of music, including Scandinavian, Irish, and Paraguayan, which have blended with her traditional Scottish background to create a deeper, more diverse music than others with similar Scottish heritage are bringing to the harp scene. Her touch on the strings varies, from gentle, evocative caresses on her airs to a firm, rhythmic grasp on dance tunes. Her original works are particularly eclectic, defying category, but unquestionably effective. When she was young, Stewart regularly won competitions on the harp, competing with other shining harpers such as Alison Kinnaird and Patsy Seddon. She was a contributor to Kinnaird's ground-breaking album The Harp Key, and seemed about to emerge as a recording artist herself, when she disappeared from the music scene for a while. Following her reemergence, she joined the band Ceolbeg and soon recorded her first album, titled About Time, for it seemed about time for her to begin recording. Her talent and ear for good music are unmistakable, and her teaching abilities are a highly sought commodity. She is currently at the Royal Scottish Academy of Music and Drama in Glasgow, where she teaches as part of a degree course on traditional Scottish music.

what's available: About Time ♪♪♪♪ (Greentrax, 1992) displays Stewart's harping gift through stirring dance tunes and lulling airs. Although mostly solo harp, she is joined on a few tracks by Alan James on clarinets, Jim Walker on percussion, and Colin Matheson on keyboards, as well as accompanying herself on concertina, and singing a couple of delightful songs. Stewart's voice is an elegant surprise, for so many singing harpers are either really singers who play a little harp, or really harpers who sing a little, while Stewart excels at both. Stewart's voice, though seldom used, is strong and delightful, and can sound earthy or ethereal, as best fits each particular piece. Among the delights on this album are a rousing march, strathspey, reel set "Bonawe Highlanders, Stirling Castle, Rachel Rae," an ethereal lullaby "St. Bride's Coracle," and an evocative snapshot through music, the Stewart original "Silent Rain." About Time 2 ♪♪♪♪ (Greentrax, 1997, prod. Jack Evans) continues where she left off on the first album. Excellent harping and choice music make this another stand-out recording for Stewart. Calling on the talents of fellow-Ceolbeg members Colin Matheson on guitar, Gary West on pipes and whistles, and Jim Walker on percussion, Stewart brings energy and a modern twist to traditional tunes, as well as presenting several more contemporary works, including three of her own. This album contains more songs displaying Stewart's versatile voice. Among other exciting tunes, there is a moving cover of the Sandy Denny song "Fotheringay," a delightful arrangement of the pipe tune "The Little Cascade," and a wonderfully melancholy version of "Rachel Rae."

influences:

◀◀ Jean Campbell, Alison Kinnaird

▶▶ Sileas, Sue Richards, Knodel & Valencia

see also: Ceolbeg

Jo Hughey Morrison

Stephen Stills

See: Crosby, Stills & Nash

Alan Stivell

Born Alan Cochevelou, in January 1944, in Riom, Auvergne, France.

Alan Cochevelou (who later took the pseudonym Stivell) made his public debut playing the Breton harp in 1953, at age nine. The harp had been built by Jord Cochevelou, his father, based on the plans of the famous medieval Irish "Brian Boru" harp, and was the first of this ancient type in Brittany. Stivell can justifiably claim to have been the first person to play the "Breton Harp," but only with the qualifying explanation that it was built from Irish plans. Later, Stivell learned to play the bombarde, a double-reeded shawm or oboe, and then the Scottish bagpipes. He joined the bagad Bleimor, or Bleimor pipe band, in 1954, became the band's pen-sonneur, or head piper, in 1961, and won the 1966 pipe-band championships. He also won championships for his duo piping with his friend Youenn Sicard. During the same period, he recorded the first-ever records of Breton harp music, beginning with a few singles and EPs in 1959. Finally, after proving himself in all these ways, he set out to innovate in the fields of Breton folk, Celtic rock, and world music. Stivell's innovative albums of the early 1970s chronicle his explorations of Breton music for ensembles. These albums, including Reflets (1970), Renaissance de la Harpe Celtique (1971), à L'Olympia (1972), Chemins de Terre (1973), and E Langonned (1974), revolutionized Breton music. They introduced the Celtic harp to the Breton recording scene, and admitted influences from the folk music of Ireland, Scotland, Wales and the United States, as well as from classical, pop, and rock 'n' roll. The resultant catalog resembled, in Stivell's words, "an inventory of the possibilities for untried marriages of instruments." As the years progressed Stivell tried everything from orchestral arrangements to new-age soundscapes to rock 'n' roll, all in the context of the Celtic melodies of Brittany. He is undoubtedly the single most influential musician on the Breton music scene; his ideas about arranging Breton music for ensembles have affected every band since his own during the early '70s, and his introduction of the harp to Brittany influenced a whole generation of performers on that instrument.

what to buy: 70/95 ZOOM ♪♪♪♪♪ (Dreyfus, 1997, prod. Alan Stivell) is a two-CD compilation of Stivell's most influential recordings from 1970 (when he recorded his first full-length album) to 1995. It features all the styles in which Stivell has played, from simple harp arrangements of traditional dance tunes through compositions evoking Breton folk stories, acoustic ensemble playing, gentle new-age music, fiery folk-rock, and beyond to quasi-symphonic compositions. In accordance with Stivell's pan-Celtic idealism, there is a lot of Irish and Scottish music here alongside the more purely Breton pieces and newer compositions. This set can serve not only as an introduction to Stivell's music, but also as a road map to his many albums; he has played in so many styles it is hard for any one reviewer to guide listeners to CDs they will enjoy.

what to buy next: Renaissance of the Celtic Harp ♪♪♪♪ (Rounder, 1972, prod. Franck Giboni) stands up remarkably well after 25 years, and shows the seeds of many of Stivell's future ideas: orchestral arrangements, New Age flourishes, and rock 'n' roll influences are beginning to make their way into his music. The second side of the original LP—the last track on the CD—is a 19-minute foray into Gaelic music from Scotland, Ireland, and the Isle of Man, ingeniously compiled and boldly arranged. Live in Dublin ♪♪♪♪ (Dreyfus, 1975, prod. Alan Stivell, Peter Rice) captures an important Stivell folk-rock band. A couple of years after electric guitarist Gabriel Yacoub went off to form the group Malicorne, this line-up still packed a great deal of punch when it was captured live in '75. Featuring several excellent bagpipe and bombarde players, fiddle, flute, and organ as well as bass, drums, and harp, they are capable of a wide variety of textures and a rich, full sound, and they deliver all they promise, from gentle harp airs to bouncy Irish dance tunes and on to fairly heavy electric arrangements. Electric guitarist Dan ar Braz (who played briefly with the English band Fairport Convention) and piper Patrick Molard have gone on to careers in some of Brittany's most important bands. Again ♪♪♪ (Dreyfus, 1993, prod. Alan Stivell, Kate Bush) includes new renditions of some of Stivell's influential mid-'70s hits, with more of a world-music/pop flavor this time around. Guests include Shane MacGowan and Kate Bush. Although this album was not a revelation to Stivell's fans, it is valuable in that many of the original albums on which the earlier arrangements of these songs appeared are out of print. Harpes du Nouvel Age ♪♪♪ (Rounder, 1985) is an album of harp music arranged by Stivell's father, the harpmaker Jord Cochevelou. It's got a lot of Irish and Scottish music on it, as well as the many Breton tunes. Mostly low-key, it would be appropriate for new-age fans, as its title suggests. For those who share Stivell's love of Celtic mythology, new age, choral arrangements, and symphonic music, the CD Celtic Symphony ♪♪♪ (Dreyfus, 1979) should fit the bill. It's impressive for its scope and atmosphere rather than for electrifying performances. Finally, for an album poised between new-age and world music, with a few nods to dance club beats, Brian Boru ♪♪♪ (Dreyfus 1995, prod. Martin Meissonnier) is Stivell's latest new release. It features as guests many younger faces on the Celtic music scenes in Ireland and Scotland, and they all give good performances.

what to avoid: The Mist of Avalon ♪♪ (Dreyfus, 1991, prod. Alan Stivell)

the rest:
Journée à la Maison ♪♪♪ (Dreyfus, 1978)
Legende ♪♪ (Celtic Music, 1983)

worth searching for: A number of Stivell's groundbreaking LPs are out of print or unavailable in the United States. Chemins de Terre ♪♪♪♪♪ (Mercury, 1973) was one of Stivell's first forays into Celtic rock with an all-star band. It's a brilliant album, which was released in the United Kingdom as From Celtic Roots. The live album A l'Olympia ♪♪♪♪♪ (Mercury, 1972, prod. Franck Giboni) features many of the same players as Chemins de Terre, but a different set of songs. It's also brilliant, and it's a pity we can't get our hands on it on CD. E Langonned ♪♪♪♪ (Mercury, 1974, prod. Philippe Lerichomme) was a sort of antidote to the previous two albums, a completely acoustic affair on which Stivell paid homage to Celtic roots with renditions of Breton, Irish, Scottish, and Welsh folk music. The sleeve notes to this album, a manifesto explaining Stivell's ideas about music and life, are as interesting as the music. This is one of Stivell's most underrated LPs. There are still more LPs by Stivell that remain unissued on CD, including Reflets ♪♪♪ (Mercury, 1970), Trema'n Inis (Keltia III, 1976), Before Landing (Keltia III, 1977), and Terre des Vivants (Keltia III, 1981). As a rule of thumb, practically all of Stivell's LPs are worth hearing.

influences:
◀◀ Sean O' Riada, Chieftains, Bagad Bleimor, Goadec Sisters ▶▶ Malicorne, Gabriel Yacoub, Dan Ar Braz, Kornog, Gwerz

Steve Winick

Fred Stoneking

Born 1933, in Johnson County, MO.

Missouri native Fred Stoneking was raised in a musical household, son of a champion fiddler, yet strangely enough did not take up the fiddle seriously until he found himself a homesick young soldier in the middle of the Korean War and his father sent him a fiddle to help pass the time. His early playing was received with something less than universal acclaim—he returned to the barracks one evening and found the instrument smashed to pieces by an unknown critic—but he persevered, and by the time he returned from military service he was an accomplished fiddler. Once back in the states, however, he found himself preoccupied with the duties of raising his own family and making a living, with little time left over for music. After several years of playing little, or not at all, he was playing guitar for his father in a 1960s contest which his father, Lee Stoneking, won. Impressed with how easy it seemed, it occurred to him that with a little practice, he might actually make a little money at this fiddling thing, and within a couple of years he was winning consistently in contests all over Missouri, Kansas, Iowa, and Nebraska. He is currently regarded as one of the leading players of the Ozark-Missouri style of dance fiddling, renowned for his ability to maintain a strong, steady rhythm while exploring melodic variations. In 1996 the Rounder-released Saddle Old Spike, an extensive collection of newly recorded tunes by Stoneking in this distinctive style. Stoneking now lives in Springfield, Missouri.

what's available: Saddle Old Spike: Fiddle Music from Missouri ♪♪♪♪ (Rounder, 1996, prod. Mark Wilson, Gordon McCann) is a fine sampler of the particular brand of Missouri square dance music Stoneking is known for. Entirely instrumental, no vocals—it's terrific fiddle music, but it helps if you're prepared to sit and listen to it an hour or so at a time. Contrary to the notion that "all fiddle tunes sound alike," though, there's a lot of variety in this collection.

worth searching for: Although they're difficult to find, Stoneking appears as a guitarist backing up Missouri fiddler Pete McMahan on at least one privately produced LP. In addition, he's a supporting musician on a couple of father Lee Stoneking's albums. Record vendor stalls at old-time music festivals and fiddlers conventions may be the best places to look for these rare LPs.

influences:

⏪ Lonnie Robertson, Lyman Enloe

⏩ Charlie Walden, Chirps Smith, Ill-Mo Boys

John Lupton

Ernest Stoneman /The Stoneman Family

Born May 25, 1893, in Carroll County, VA. Died June 14, 1968.

Ernest "Pop" Stoneman, along with his wife Hattie and his progeny, bestrode the first 40 years of the history of recorded country music; he made more than 200 recordings before 1930, suffered a severe decline along with the country during the Depression, and re-emerged as a force in country music during the 1950s and 1960s. Ernest and Hattie recorded together during the 1920s, he as a singer, autoharpist, harmonica player, guitarist, and clawhammer banjo stylist, she as fiddle accompanist, for many labels and took part in the famed Bristol Sessions. They had 15 children who lived to adulthood, and most of them played music at least semi-professionally. Patsy, Scott, Donna, Jimmy, Roni, and Van all grew to be skilled multi-instrumentalists and members of the Stoneman Family for varying lengths of time. Scott is one of the most influential bluegrass fiddle stylists ever; his influence far outreaches any personal commercial success he ever had. Donna is a very good bluegrass mandolin player, and Roni, who has gained some measure of notoriety as a comic on television's Hee Haw, is a first-rate bluegrass banjo picker. Patsy, Jimmy, and Van are all skilled professionals as well, although none of them ever attained the level of virtuosity of Scott, Donna, and Roni. Of them all, Scott, who died in 1973, was the true genius, and he is sadly underrepresented on recordings today—as is the whole family, although Ernest recorded for virtually every available label during his good years in the 1930s, and the Stonemans as a family band have a long recording history with everyone from MGM to RCA to Starday during the 1960s and 1970s, when they were a unique part of the folk revival going at the time. They never really successfully integrated themselves into either the folk or country mainstream, but they made some very odd records in the attempt, most of them out of print today.

what's available: Ernest V. Stoneman's Edison Recordings—28 ♪♪♪♪ (County, 1996, reissue prod. Gary B. Reid) contains 22 samples of the songs that made Pop Stoneman a star—the first time. From fiddle tunes to gospel favorites to sentimental parlor songs of the day to transplanted English ballads, these are the types of songs that made up the repertoire of early country music recording stars.

worth searching for: Ernest V. Stoneman and the Blue Ridge Corn Shuckers ♪♪♪♪ (Rounder, 1975) includes more of Stoneman's commercial recordings from the 1920s.

the story 7 6 7

solo outings:
Scott Stoneman:
(With Bill Emerson) Fiddle and Banjo Bluegrass a.k.a. 20 Fiddle and Banjo Hits ♪♪♪♪½ (Arion, 1967/1990)
With the Kentucky Colonels ♪♪♪♪½ (Sierra, 1976)

influences:
Freighthoppers

Randy Pitts

Stoney Lonesome

Formed 1980, in Minneapolis-St. Paul, MN.

Kevin Barnes, vocals, banjo, Dobro; Kate MacKenzie, vocals, guitar (1980–95); Chris Kaiser (Chris Silver), vocals, mandolin, guitar (1980–93); Brian Wicklund, vocals, fiddle; Patty Shove, bass (1980–93); John Niemann, fiddle, mandolin, vocals (1980–87, 1993–present); Brian Barnes, guitar, mandolin (1980–87, 1993–present); Bill Liners, guitar (1995–present); Kathleen Liners, bass (1995–present); Andy Olsen, bass (1995–97).

Since Minnesota is not generally thought of as "bluegrass country," it's something of a paradox that Stoney Lonesome is one of the most widely known bluegrass bands in the United States and Canada, by virtue of their numerous appearances over the years on Garrison Keillor's A Prairie Home Companion. The band had barely formed in 1980 before they found themselves on stage in front of Keillor's radio audience of more than two million—for lead singer Kate MacKenzie, it was only her third or fourth time in front of an audience, having not begun her singing career until her late 20s—but there's little question that they've acquitted themselves well since that auspicious debut and shown bluegrass in a very favorable light to an audience that's not generally viewed as "bluegrass-friendly." Featuring the husky, bluesy lead vocals of MacKenzie, the instrumental talents of the band are rock solid as well, firmly rooted in the classic styles of Bill Monroe and the Stanley Brothers. The same can be said of the harmony vocals; the trios are especially noteworthy. The various band members have contributed a substantial amount of fine original material to their recordings, but their treatments of traditional and classic bluegrass and old country material make them one of the more versatile bands in bluegrass. Although MacKenzie left the band in 1995 to pursue a solo career, Stoney Lonesome is still active and much in demand in its Twin Cities stomping grounds under the leadership of Kevin Barnes. Don't be surprised to hear Stoney Lonesome coming over the airwaves from Lake Wobegon and into your living room some Saturday evening in the not-too-distant future.

what to buy: Blue Heartache ♪♪♪♪½ (Red House, 1992, prod. Stoney Lonesome) is a recording made just prior to MacKenzie's departure, but as if to emphasize the fact that Stoney Lonesome is much more than just a backup band for MacKenzie, the album opens with a Barnes-penned instrumental, "Mason Harris." While Kate does indeed shine on two of her own songs, as well as on such others as Utah Phillips's "Goin' Away" and Greg Brown's "The Train Carrying Jimmie Rodgers Home," if your taste in bluegrass leans toward solid, hard drivin' pickin' and down-and-bluesy vocals, you'll likely find Blue Heartache very satisfying.

what to buy next: Lonesome Tonight ♪♪♪½ (Red House, 1991, prod. Stoney Lonesome) is not quite as solid an effort as Blue Heartache, but there's much to be savored here as well, with standout versions of Ola Belle Reed's "I've Endured" and Bill Monroe's "Highway Of Sorrow" worthy of special note.

the rest:
Meet Me at Midnight ♪♪♪ (Train on the Island, 1988) (cassette only) Stoney Lonesome Christmas ♪♪♪ (SLP, 1988) (cassette only) Walking with My Lord ♪♪♪ (SLP, 1989) (cassette only)

influences:
Bill Monroe, the Stanley Brothers
Laurie Lewis & Grant Street, Claire Lynch & the Front Porch String Band, Good Ol' Persons see also: Kate MacKenzie

John Lupton

Noel Paul Stookey

See: Peter, Paul and Mary

The Story

Formed 1990, in Boston.

Jennifer Kimball (born August 14, 1962) vocals; Jonatha Brooke (born January 23, 1964, in IL) guitar, piano, vocals.

Forged out of a friendship beginning at Massachusetts-based Amherst College in 1981, the Story's story began when Jennifer Kimball and Jonatha Brooke first began singing together as the folk duo Jonatha and Jennifer. With their unique blend of vocal jazzy-pop harmonies and bouncy, quirky songs and rhythms, they were an immediate success at coffeehouse concerts. Finishing college, they went their separate ways—Brooke to a dance company and Kimball to a publishing firm—but they continued to stay in touch and play music together. After a wildly successful concert date in Boston, Brooke's husband convinced the two of them to submit a demo of their song "Over Oceans" to Green Linnet in 1989, and they were promptly signed by the label. Changing their name to the Story, auditioning a band, gigging constantly, and working on the songs for Grace in Gravity took up most of 1991. The album met with widespread critical acclaim upon its release, and the duo embarked on a non-stop touring schedule to promote it. Their second release, Angel in the House, was delivered in 1993, supported by a video and another round of breakneck touring across America in 1994. In October of that year, Kimball and Brooke decided to end their partnership after 10 years, citing personal and creative differences. Brooke went on to release two solo albums, while Kimball still performs around the country as a singer-songwriter and does sessions as a back-up vocalist.

what's available: Grace in Gravity ♪♪♪♪ (Green Linnet, 1991/Elektra, 1992, prod. Ben Wittman) is a swooping, creative exercise in jazz rhythms and folk-rock with flashes of brilliance and charm. Backed by a stellar cast of musicians consisting of Alain Mallet (keyboards) Ben Wittman (percussion), Mike Rivard (bass), and Duke Levine (guitar), Grace in Gravity floats effortlessly across the musical horizon, delivering lyrical punches of wit and wisdom with a feminine edge. Notable album cuts that dig deep into emotional minefields include "The Perfect Crime," "Easier than Sorry," and "Just One Word." The Angel in the House ♪♪♪½ (Elektra, 1993, prod. Ben Wittman, Alain Mallet) was released to glowing praises from fans and the media. Carrying on the Story tradition of tight harmonies, flickering tempos, and sparkling acoustic guitar fingerpicking, The Angel in the House is an earthshake of moods, ranging from the Latin-tinged "Fatso" to the new age overtures of "So Much Mine." Brooke, a descendant of Virginia Woolf, writes poetry set to music that carries you up and over the plains of ho-hum experience and into a dreamworld of ambiguity and paradox. Characters and situations she fashions in her songs are dangerously detached and illusive.

solo outings:
Jonatha Brooke:
Plumb ♪♪♪ (Blue Thumb, 1995)
10-Cent Wings ♪♪♪♪ (Refuge/MCA, 1997)

influences:

⏪ Joni Mitchell, Chaka Khan, Nanci Griffith, Bruce Cockburn

⏩ Shawn Colvin, John Gorka, Paula Cole, Patty Larkin, Carrie Newcomer

TJ McGrath

Don Stover

Born in WV.

Don Stover learned how to play clawhammer banjo from his mother, Norma Stover, when he was young. In 1945 he heard Earl Scruggs playing for Bill Monroe on the Grand Ole Opry and tried to emulate his three-finger style of playing. At first he wasn't quite getting it right, the reason being that he was using two fingers instead of three. A traveling salesman that came through his home town of White Oak, West Virginia, set him straight, and after Stover fashioned some metal finger picks out of an old Prince Albert Tobacco can ("there wasn't no music stores around where I grew up") he was on his way to becoming one of the best banjo pickers in bluegrass music. He ended up playing with legendary bluegrass musicians such as Bill Monroe, Doc Watson, Bill Harrell, Frank Wakefield, Buzz Buzby, Tex Logan, and the Lilly Brothers.

what to buy: Things in Life ♪♪♪♪♪ (Rounder, 1995, prod. Don Stover) is Stover's crowning moment. On this, his first solo album, he shows his expertise on some of the bluegrass standards such as "Done Gone," "Lonesome Pine Breakdown," and "Ole Liza Jane," and shines on his own originals. "Things in Life" is probably the song for which he is most well known. This album is a bluegrass classic from start to finish.

what to buy next: Lilly Brothers and Don Stover: Early Recordings ♪♪♪♪♪ (Rebel, 1991, prod. David Freeman) present recordings that were made in 1956 and 1957 for the Event label and are compiled here on one CD. This compilation, although short, is an exciting look at the beginning of this musical pairing of the Lilly Brothers with Stover. The Lilly Brothers and Don Stover: Live at Hillbilly Ranch ♪♪♪♪ (Hay Holler, 1996, prod. Fred Pement, Kerry Hay) was recorded by a fan, Fred Pement, on July 4, 1967. He captured one of the group's gigs at the Boston club. This CD is a good one specifically for capturing the spontaneous nature of this group in a live performance. Stover stands out on many tunes including "Flint Hill Special" and "Shenandoah Breakdown."

influences:

⏪ Norma Stover, Earl Scruggs

⏩ Bill Keith, Sammy Shelor

Steve Gardner

Strange Creek Singers

Formed 1968, in Washington, DC.

Mike Seeger, vocals, mandolin, fiddle, banjo, guitar, autoharp, harmonica; Alice Gerrard, vocals, guitar; Tracy Schwarz, vocals, fiddle, guitar, Dobro; Hazel Dickens, vocals, bass; Lamar Grier, banjo.

By the time the late '60s rolled around, four of the five members of the Strange Creek Singers were well-established figures in the revival of old country and bluegrass music that came out of the "Great Folk Scare" of the early '60s. Hazel Dickens and Alice Gerrard had made a number of landmark recordings together, while Mike Seeger, half-brother of folk icon Pete Seeger, was a well-regarded musician, musicologist, and folklorist in his own right, and a founding member (with John Cohen and Tom Paley) of the New Lost City Ramblers. By 1962 Tracy Schwarz had replaced Paley in the Ramblers, and all four had become good friends—Seeger and Gerrard, in fact, were married in 1970. They met the fifth Strange Creek Singer, banjo player Lamar Grier (who actually does not sing on the record) through their friend Dick Spottswood, a longtime country and bluegrass DJ in the Washington area, who was emceeing a radio show that featured the band Grier was playing in at the time. Spottswood (who is still on the air in D.C.) would eventually write the liner notes for the album. Although relatively unknown at the time, Grier would later achieve renown through a long stint with Bill Monroe's Blue Grass Boys. While the music on their one recording is a wonderful sampler of the soulful side of old country music and bluegrass, it's interesting to note that West Virginia native Dickens is the only one of the five to have been raised in the country, the daughter and sister of coal miners. Californian Gerrard came east as a student at Antioch College and was introduced to bluegrass and old-time music by fellow student Jerry Foster. Schwarz is a New York native who took up fiddling as a teenager. Seeger, of course, grew up in a family steeped in folk music, his father Charles was a pre-eminent scholar in the field. By the time the sole Strange Creek album was recorded, Seeger and Gerrard were living near Schwarz in York County, Pennsylvania. Dickens was living in Washington, D.C., not all that far away. Gerrard recalls that it was Seeger who, after many informal sessions together, suggested they record and tour. Most of the album was recorded in early 1969, and the finished product gave each of the five band members a chance to display their individual talents, while at the same time doing some masterful ensemble work. As might be expected, the powerful vocal combination of Hazel and Alice provides some of the most arresting passages, many have tried to emulate their mountain harmonies over the years, but few have come at all close. Nearly 30 years later, all five of the Strange Creek Singers are still going strong. Seeger continues to perform and record as a solo performer, as well as with good friends like North Carolina fiddler Paul Brown. Schwarz performs often with his wife Ginny Hawker, who also sings beautiful old-time duets with her partner, Kay Justice, in the best tradition of Hazel and Alice. Gerrard now lives in Durham, North Carolina, where she is the editor of the Old Time Herald, a quarterly magazine devoted to old-time music. She continues to perform and in recent years has played and sung often with Matokie Slaughter as the Back Creek Buddies. Dickens still lives in Washington, D.C., and has collaborated often with Dudley Connell of the Johnson Mountain Boys. Although still a fine banjo player, over the last decade or so, Grier has perhaps become better known as the father of the superlative guitarist David Grier.

what to buy: Get Acquainted Waltz ♪♪♪♪½ (Arhoolie, 1997, prod. Mike Seeger, Chris Strachwitz), originally released on LP as Strange Creek Singers in 1972, is the only recording of these five people in this configuration, although they have performed and recorded with each other in numerous other settings. This album comprises 14 songs drawn from sources that span a virtual encyclopedia of early country music, from the familiar (Carter Family, Blue Sky Boys, Louvin Brothers) to the relatively obscure (rockabilly Terry Fell, George "Shortbuckle" Roark). Some of the material is traditional ("In the Pines," "Sally Ann," "New River Train," "Will the Circle Be Unbroken"), but two original songs also are included: Schwarz's "Poor Old Dirt Farmer," and the track that is easily the album's standout, Dickens's stark, mournful, a cappella rendition of her song "Black Lung."

worth searching for: As noted above, since the '60s "glory days" of the folk boom these five people have been responsible, individually and collectively, for enough great recorded music to fill several pages here. Let's just say that if you enjoy what they've done as the Strange Creek Singers, then keep your eyes peeled for any of the recordings of the New Lost City Ramblers or Hazel and Alice.

influences:

◀◀ New Lost City Ramblers, Hazel & Alice, Carter Family

▶▶ Jody Stecher & Kate Brislin, Kay Justice & Ginny Hawker, Ann & Phil Case, Lynn Morris, Johnson Mountain Boys

see also: Mike Seeger, Hazel & Alice, Tracy Schwarz

John Lupton

Syd Straw

A gifted singer, Syd Straw honed her chops on the New York alternative rock scene during the '80s, guesting on recordings by Golden Palominos, the dBs and many others. Her voice is powerful and mellifluous, but it can also be soft and vulnerable, with a pronounced drawl that isn't traceable to her geographic origins. Though Straw's songwriting has been somewhat uneven, her best compositions, which tend toward folky jangle-pop, have both depth and quirk.

what to buy: Her debut album Surprise ♪♪♪ (Virgin, 1989, prod. Syd Straw) features guest appearances by a large roster of friends and collaborators, notably Richard Thompson, Michael Stipe, Bernie Worrell, dB Peter Holsapple, Van Dyke Parks, and Peter Blegvad. After this album tanked, Straw continued singing on other people's records and even rented out her pipes for a beer commercial—it was one of the most strangely emotional jingles ever to air on radio—but ultimately landed another deal.

what to buy next: Her sophomore release, War and Peace ♪♪♪ (Capricorn, 1996, prod. Syd Straw) was recorded with the sturdy accompaniment of the Skeletons.

influences:

◀◀ Michael Stipe, Richard Thompson, Matthew Sweet

Simon Glickman

Chic Street Man

Born Charles Edward Streetman on July 31, 1946, in Augusta, GA.

Talent and purpose combine to give Chic Street Man's music a special vitality. An artist of great integrity, he is a role model whose life choices are documented in his song writing. "I have no illusions about changing the world," he says, "but I have hope." Like many musicians, Street Man's entry into music was not direct. After receiving a B.A. in psychology from the University of California at Santa Cruz, he directed the department of psychodrama at the community hospital of the Monterey Peninsula in Carmel, California. He served a stint as the executive director of a fair housing program in Hayward, California and then instructed a course titled "Creative Response" at Occidental College in Los Angeles. However, the music was always calling to him. After spending more than a decade in and out of the business, things finally came together in 1975 when he traveled to France and recorded his first album, Growing Up. In it he relates some of the complexities of life facing young people growing up in America. After the release of Growing Up, he toured throughout Europe and finally landed in Santa Barbara, where he founded Chic Street Man's School of Performing Arts. During the summer of 1987 he was invited to be the artistic director for the Boston production of the international play Peace Child. After the play's successful run in Boston, he toured with the company in Russia and Poland. In 1988 Street Man starred in the Mark Taper Forum production of Lost Highway, the story of Hank Williams. Then, in 1989, his career took a new and exciting turn when he composed the music and starred in the acclaimed off-Broadway show SPUNK! adapted by George C. Wolfe from the works of Zora Neale Hurston. SPUNK! enjoyed successful runs at the New York Shakespeare Festival, the Crossroads Theater, the Royal Court in London, the Mark Taper Forum in Los Angeles, and the Seattle Repertory Theater. Street Man received an AUDELCO Award in 1990, and in 1992 an NAACP Theater Arts Award for his music and performance in SPUNK! In 1994 he composed the music and starred in Bertolt Brecht's Caucasian Chalk Circle for the Berkeley Repertory Theater, and in 1995 he starred in Aint Nothin' but the Blues at the Denver Center Theater, the Cleveland Playhouse, and the Arena Theater in Washington, D.C. He has been a featured performer at the Paleo Festival, the Montreux Jazz Festival, and the Berne Festival in Switzerland. Among his many memorable experiences is being the featured performer at the General Assembly of the United Nations for the International Day of Peace. In 1991 and 1992 he gave benefit concerts for the United Nations Human Rights Center in Geneva, Switzerland and, in 1992, a benefit concert for relief to Somalia. Street Man has appeared in two films: Triple Bogey and Hangin' with the Homeboys. He released two albums in 1994, Guns Away and Everybody Be Yo'self, and, in 1996, the album Beau-ti-ful.

what to buy: Beau-ti-ful ♪♪♪ (Mo' Street Music, 1996, prod. Chic Street Man, Karen Sorensen) is Street Man's latest and it succeeds in demonstrating how he successfully manages to mix his jazz, funk, and blues approach with a growing social consciousness. The groove is certainly there with both Street and Keb Mo' doing some sparkling guitar playing. The blues are there too but there's a lot more. From reminding us that there is beauty in everyone to beseeching us to have a little mercy on Mother Earth, Street Man is out front with his politics and his message is effective.

what to buy next: Either of Street Man's earlier CD releases, Guns Away ♪♪♪ (Mo' Street Music, 1994, prod. Chic Street Man, Karen Sorensen) or Everybody Be Yo'self ♪♪♪ (Backyard Audio/Mo' Street Music, 1994, prod. Chic Street Man, Karen Sorensen) are worth picking up. Street Man's music is both entertaining and educational. He uses his guitar as a percussive tool to support his "rap recitations" and proves that he is indeed "a nice guy with serious things on his mind."

the rest:
Make It thru the Night ♪♪ (Right Soul Productions, 1987) worth searching for: Growing Up ♪♪♪ (Saravah, 1975) was released in France and is out of print. It's worth searching for, certainly if you happen to be in Paris anyway.

influences:

◀◀ Big Bill Broonzy, Sonny Terry & Brownie McGhee, John Lee Hooker

▶▶ Taj Mahal, Keb Mo', Charles Bevel

Neal Walters

Strength in Numbers

Formed mid-1980s.

Sam Bush, mandolin; Mark O'Connor, fiddle; Béla Fleck, banjo; Jerry Douglas, Dobro; Edgar Meyer, bass violin.

A bluegrass supergroup where each member is considered a master of his instrument, Strength in Numbers has played in various combinations on each others' projects and appears regularly at the Telluride Bluegrass Festival.

what's available: While not as flashy as their live shows, the group's one studio album, The Telluride Sessions ♪♪♪♪ (MCA, 1989, prod. Strength in Numbers), could be described as chamber bluegrass, stressing precise ensemble work over individual soloing.

worth searching for: O'Connor and Meyer team up with cellist Yo-Yo Ma on Appalachia Waltz ♪♪♪♪ (Sony Classical, 1996), a collection that combines bluegrass and classical in a truly original way. Sort of Copland-goes-country.

influences:

◀◀ David Grisman, New Grass Revival, Béla Fleck & the Flecktones

▶▶ Alison Brown, Russ Barenberg

see also: Béla Fleck, Jerry Douglas, Sam Bush

Bob Cannon

Stringbean

Born David Akeman, June 17, 1915, in Annville, KY. Died November 11, 1973, in Nashville, TN.

David Akeman—lovingly known as "Stringbean"—was raised on a Kentucky farm and taught to play banjo by his father, who gave him his first instrument at age 14. Soon Stringbean was playing on local radio shows and touring or performing with the likes of Bill Monroe, Ernest Tubb, Red Foley, and Uncle Dave Macon. Macon particularly became a mentor to Stringbean, who picked up much of his picking style. Stringbean joined the Grand Ole Opry in 1942 and essentially took over Macon's role after his death in 1952. The 6-foot 2-inch Stringbean combined elements of vaudevillian comedy and old-time banjo playing in his shows, and he flip-flopped his proportions by wearing long shirts and small pants that made his torso appear to comprise three-fourths of his body. He was an audience favorite for his comedy, but he was also a fine banjo player, and he was an original member of the Hee Haw cast upon its TV debut in 1969. In one of the most shocking crimes in Nashville's history, Stringbean and his wife were murdered by burglars upon returning to their home after his Opry appearance November 11, 1973.

what's available: There's a lot of overlap, at least in song titles, on the three Stringbean albums currently in print. All of them, for instance, contain "I'm the Man That Rode the Mule around the World," one of his most popular numbers. On A Salute to Uncle Dave Macon ♪♪♪ (Hollywood/IMG, 1963/1986, prod. various), Stringbean makes a nod to his mentor with an album of vaudevillian proportions: it includes humorous songs ("There'll Be Moonshine in the Old Kentucky Hills"), folk songs ("John Henry") and gospel ("Take My Hand, Precious Lord"). Hee Haw Corn Shucker ♪♪♪ (Country Road, 1976) plays off his association with the syndicated TV series Hee Haw and features Stringbean's novelty songs, as does Front Porch Funnies ♪♪♪ (King Special, 1993), which is the only one of the three albums available on CD.

influences:

◀◀ Uncle Dave Macon

▶▶ Grandpa Jones

Brian Mansfield

Strings & Things

See: Tina Bergmann

772 the subdudes

dobro

The resophonic guitar, the most familiar models of which bear the name Dobro, was created in 1925 by John Dopyera, who sought to manufacture a louder version of the Hawaiian style slide guitar. Dopyera rigged an aluminum resonator plate where the soundhole sits on a regular guitar, amplifying the instrument and giving it a distinctly sweet, metallic sound, particularly when played with a slide bar. Although Dopyera originally built his guitars of steel, he later set the resonator plate into a wooden body, which remains the most common configuration today (as opposed to the steel-bodied guitars that National and other companies continued to produce). Through the next 50 years or so, Dopyera and two brothers manufactured various styles of these guitars for several different companies, often in competition with each other. Generally played in the lap or held horizontally with a strap, the dobro is most often tuned to an open G chord. The dobro's plaintive sound was a mainstay of country music during its formative years, and became an integral part of bluegrass music, with Josh Graves the first recognized master of the instrument. With its sweetly booming tone and expressive voicings, the dobro proved to be a perfect foil to the equally loud banjo. From the '70s to the present, it became less a textural instrument and more of a lead voice in the hands of virtuosos like Mike Auldridge, Jerry Douglas, and Sally Van Meter. Douglas, in particular, has also made the instrument a familiar sound on contemporary country radio.

Michael Parrish

The subdudes

Formed 1987, in New Orleans, LA. Disbanded 1997.

John Magnie, keyboards, accordion, vocals; Tommy Malone, guitar, vocals; Johnny Ray Allen, bass, vocals; Steve Amedee, percussion.

The subdudes played music that was both simple and pure in its roots, but also hybridized with a pragmatic, non-purist's sense of style. Like the group's percussive gimmick—Amedee pounded his funky multi-rhythms on a tambourine, not a full drum set—the group was willing to try, and use, whatever works. But the music's essential purity came from its deep base in New Orleans funk and R&B; Malone's understated, bluesy guitar playing, and the soulful vocal interplay between Malone and Magnie, which recall nothing if not the Band in its glory days. Like the Band, the 'dudes knew each other so well they played almost intuitively together. Malone, Allen, and Amedee all grew up together in the upriver town of Edgard, Louisiana, before running off to New Orleans, eventually playing in a group called the Continental Drifters (now headed by Peter Holsapple). Magnie, a Colorado native, relocated to New Orleans during the '70s, attracted by the city's indigenous funky piano-playing. The subdudes formed out of necessity: Magnie played a regular Tuesday solo gig at Tipitina's, and the only way the rest of the group could sit in was as an acoustic outfit. Hence Amedee's tambourine and Malone's acoustic guitar, which he played more often than not in the early days. To escape the then-oppressive Crescent City music scene, which required cover material from bands instead of original songs, the band moved as a unit, families and all, to northern Colorado in late '87 and began tearing up the Denver area club scene with its acoustic-based grooves and original songs that already sounded like timeless R&B classics. Every album still includes a couple of these classic-sounding songs, but the group's live show is what makes converts out of skeptics, partly because producers have found it hard to capture the enormous live sound of the tambourine on tape. The band added touring member and studio session guitarist Willie Williams in 1994 as an unofficial member. Magnie still lives and plays in Colorado, but the other three have since formed a new group, Tony Town, with Nashville-based singer-songwriter Pat McLaughlin.

what to buy: the subdudes ♪♪♪♪ (Atlantic, 1989, prod. Don Gehman), the group's debut, includes some of its best songs to date and staples of its live shows: "Light in Your Eyes," "Got You on His Mind," and "Need Somebody." Annunciation ♪♪♪♪ (High Street, 1994, prod. subdudes, Keith Keller, Glyn Johns) is the best-produced of the 'dudes' albums, featuring strong songs and passionate, churchy performances.

what to buy next: Primitive Streak ♪♪♪½ (1996, High Street, prod. Clark Vreeland) found the band finding its feet as a recording group, with balanced studio performances but some weaker songs. Malone's "Carved in Stone" is a beautiful tribute to a deceased friend.

the rest:
Lucky ♪♪♪ (EastWest, 1991)
Live: At Last ♪♪♪♪ (High Street, 1997)

influences:
◀◀ Band, Eric Clapton, Neville Brothers, Wild Tchoupitoulas, Earl King, Bonnie Raitt ▶▶ Continental Drifters

Gil Asakawa

Sundown Playboys /Lesa Cormier & the Sundown Playboys

Formed 1948, in Elton, LA.

Janet Mott Aguillard, violin; Murnell Babineaux, violin; Danny Cormier, steel guitar, vocals; Jacob Cormier, triangle; Lesa Cormier, drums; Raymond Cormier, violin; Don Faul, bass guitar; Darrell Higginbotham, guitar, vocals; Homer LeJeune, accordion, vocals; Wallace Touchet, fiddle. Past members include: Pat Savant, accordion; Lionel Cormier, accordion.

Like many Cajun bands, the Sundown Playboys are more an institution than a band. They were originally led by accordionist Lionel Cormier, who died on the bandstand in 1971 while playing "Church Point Breakdown." The band was taken over by his son Lesa Cormier, but it was the ambitious young accordion player Pat Savant that launched the Sundown Playboys into history by submitting a 45 to Apple Records. The Beatles licensed the record from Ville Platte's Swallow Records and Saturday Night Special became the most widely distributed Cajun record of the 1970s. The band couldn't maintain that height, but it continues to be led by Lesa Cormier with longtime members Danny Cormier, Darrel Higginbotham, and Wallace Touchet playing a tight dancehall style of music that evokes names like Lawrence Walker and Aldus Roger.

what to buy: Saturday Night Cajun Music ♪♪♪♪ (La Louisiane, c. 1994, prod. Carol Rachou) finds the Sundown Playboys playing solid Cajun dance music. Lesa Cormier's drumming sets a standard for the dance-band format. The tunes run the gamut from instrumentals like "Hathaway Two-Step" that show off Homer LeJeune's chops to the zydeco standard "Hey Hey Lucille."

what to buy next: Hier et Aujourd'hui ♪♪♪♪ (Swallow, 1993, prod. Floyd Soileau) shows how Cajun music just absorbs and adapts from itself. There are a couple of Aldus Roger chestnuts here, including "Creole Stomp," but there is also Paul Daigle's "If I Could Forget." In between, the band kicks in a bunch of originals and adaptations including a rare polka from the repertoire of the late Lionel Cormier.

the rest:
Cajun Spirit ♪♪♪ (Swallow, 1994)

worth searching for: If you find Saturday Night Special/Valse de Soleil Coucher ♪♪♪♪ (Apple, 1972, prod. Floyd Soileau), you have a true collectors item. Keep it away from the Beatlemaniac in the house.

influences:
◀◀ Aldus Roger, Lawrence Walker
▶▶ California Cajun Orchestra, Sheryl Cormier

Jared Snyder

Sunshine Skiffle Band

Formed 1979, in Washington, DC.

Wes Butts, washtub bass; Don Rouse, clarinet; Gil Carter, leader, rhumba box; Dan Cassidy, fiddle; Tom Layton, washboard, kazoo; Bill Pitt, musical saw; Marv Reitz, jug, clarinet, bass clarinet; Dave Robinson, cornet, comb, kazoo, alto valve, trombone, tambourine, slide whistle; Dick Sackett, tenor banjo, kazoo; Harvey Stewart, washboard; Henry Stinson, harmonica, kazoo, slide whistle, fake trumpet, whistling; others.

What do you do if you want to play music and you don't have enough money to buy an instrument? You grab whatever's lying around the house–jugs, saws, washtubs, washboards, bones, combs, wax paper, screen wire, and cigar boxes–and make music with that. During the first part of this century a lot of people in the poverty-stricken South and Appalachia did precisely that, forming aggregations that were alternately known as jug bands or skiffle bands. Some of them became quite popular and even made some wonderful recordings. The Washington area's Sunshine Skiffle Band is a tribute to that delightful tradition. The troupe's fluctuating membership hovers around 11, and they play a lot of store-bought instruments–fiddle, clarinet, cornet, trombone, banjo, and harmonica–in addition to homemade instruments like kazoo, washtub bass, saw, washboard, and rhumba box. They got started at the Washington Folk Festival in 1979 and kept going by playing both the local Dixieland jazz circuit as well as folk festivals.

what to buy: Beat It, Blow It, Strum It, Hum It ♪♪♪ (Flying Fish, 1992, prod. Gil Carter) is the Sunshine Skiffle Band's one and susquehanna string band

only album. It includes such items as Tampa Red's 1928 blues, "Tight like That"; the California Ramblers' 1920 Charleston-dance tune, "Crazy Words, Crazy Tune"; the Dixieland Jug Blowers' 1926 novelty number, "Boodle am Shake"; George Lewis's Dixieland march, "Walking with the King"; and the Rouse Brothers' 1939 hillbilly classic, "Orange Blossom Special." A combination of all the above influences can be heard in the group's sweet jazz solos, gutbucket blues attitude, and very danceable rhythms.

influences:

Gus Cannon's Stompers, Mound City Blue Blowers

John Sebastian's J-Band

Geoffrey Himes

Susquehanna String Band

See: Dan Duggan

Pete Sutherland

Born 1951, in Burlington, VT.

Pete Sutherland is a Vermont native who grew up listening to opera and show tunes, played rock 'n' roll as a teenager, went on to popularized folk music and bluegrass, and eventually found his niche in traditional folk music. Best known as a fiddler, Sutherland also plays banjo and guitar and is self-taught on all three instruments. His fiddle playing spans Celtic, Appalachian, and Quebecois styles. He was influenced by local fiddler Louie Beaudoin, and by the playing of Tommy Jarrell and Ed Haley. His original compositions have been recorded by him and by numerous other artists. Sutherland lived in Bloomington, Indiana, for several years and was also influenced by the late fiddler/poet/philosopher Lotus Dickey. He has performed since 1973, first with the Arm & Hammer String Band, later as part of the trio Metamora, and currently plays with Mac Benford and the Woodshed All-Stars and Vermont's Clayfoot Strutters. He also performs with his wife and music partner Karen Billings. They make their home in Monkton, Vermont.

what to buy: Sutherland's only CD at present is Mountain Hornpipe ♪♪♪♪½ (Epact Music, 1994, prod. Pete Sutherland). The opening selection on this disc is well chosen, as it typifies his creative approach to presenting traditional music. He sings (a cappella) an uncommon schoolhouse rhyme that fits perfectly to the tune of the well-known "Old Dan Tucker," then jumps into a smooth version of the fiddle tune "Old Natchez." There's lots of variety on this disc, both in the selections and the instrumentation. Sutherland plays fiddle, banjo, guitar, mandolin, bass, and keyboards. Grey Larsen (also of Metamora) plays flute, piccolo, tin whistle, and concertina. Martin Simpson plays bottleneck guitar and bass, and piper Timothy Britton puts in an appearance on uilleann pipes. If that's not enough variety for you, there's also the hammered dulcimer (Malcolm Dalglish) and the tabla, dumbek, and mrdang (Willy Schwarz). Billings lends her superb voice on a couple of numbers. There's mountain music here, all right, but a lot more besides. One high point is "A Psalm of Life," three verses from Longfellow's poem by the same name, sung to a tune written by Lotus Dickey. On "Old Smokey," Sutherland and Billings sing the familiar words in the style of the Kentucky singer Roscoe Holcomb, intertwined with the fiddle tune "Pretty Little Girl" to produce a haunting effect. Sutherland's clean banjo playing stands out on "Jenny Get Around," and the fiddle, whistle, and pipes combine beautifully with his voice on "Highlands of Heaven." This is an imaginative presentation of traditional music by a group of imaginative musicians. It might be hard to find in stores but can be obtained from Epact Music, P.O. Box 123, Monkton, Vermont 05469.

what to buy next: Sutherland has also recorded an LP titled Poor Man's Dream ♪♪♪♪ (Flying Fish, 1984, prod. Grey Larsen, Pete Sutherland). This is a more conventional presentation of some traditional tunes and some of his own compositions. One of the latter is the well-known "Shacks and Chalets," a song about the disparities of life that he observed in Kentucky. It's followed by the Scottish pipe tune "Coleman's March," played on the Hardanger fiddle, that is by itself worth the price of the recording. Other musicians on this recording are Bob Carlin, Grey Larsen, Tina Liza Jones, Mark Graham, and Billings.

worth searching for: Also available is a cassette titled Eight Miles from Town ♪♪♪♪ (Epact Music, 1982, prod. Pete Sutherland). This leans more towards Sutherland's Appalachian side and consists only of him on fiddle, banjo, and guitar. "Coleman's March" is also on this recording, as are three of his fiddle compositions and one by Larry Becker. The rest are Southern tunes, mostly well known with a few unusual ones thrown in. The tune by Becker, "New England Sleigh Ride," highlights Sutherland's sterling banjo playing.

influences:

Tommy Jarrell, Ed Haley

Metamora

Dave Shombert

Kirk Sutphin

Born April 25, 1968, in FL.

North Carolina's Kirk Sutphin is one of the best young musicians in the world of old-time music. An outstanding performer on both banjo and fiddle, Sutphin has a deep love and understanding of traditional mountain music. In addition to his own performing and recording, he has worked hard to expose people to the music of older local musicians such as Dick Freeman and Bert Edwards. Sutphin's father and grandfather were both musicians who taught him the basics and introduced him to the great music of banjoist Charlie Poole, fiddler Tommy Jarrell (under whom Sutphin studied), and other great North Carolina musicians. Though not often seen outside of the South, Sutphin was featured on the "Masters of the Banjo" tour that traveled the country in 1993 and 1994.

what's available: Old Roots and New Branches ♪♪♪♪♪ (County, 1994, prod. Joe Wilson), Sutphin's only CD release, is a treasure for old-time music fans as he explores the Southern mountain music with which he was raised. Ably assisted by his wife, Lisa, and stalwarts Paul Brown, Greg Hooven, and Wayne Henderson, Sutphin plays rare fiddle tunes he learned from neighbors and some sweet fingerstyle banjo pieces in the style of Poole. Two fine songs sung by Sutphin's longtime musical partner Greg Hooven round out the program. It's good to know that the music of front-porch jam sessions and grange hall dances is still alive and vibrant and, in the hands of master young musicians like Sutphin, will be for a long time to come.

worth searching for: Sutphin has recorded several projects that are somewhat difficult to find, including a solo cassette, Fiddlin' Around ♪♪♪♪ (Flying Cloud, 1992, prod. Kirk Sutphin) and an album with the Old Hollow Stringband, Old Hollow String Band ♪♪♪ (Flying Cloud, 1991, prod. Kirk Sutphin), that nicely capture his sound. He has also recorded with several of western North Carolina's legendary older musicians, including banjo player Dick Freeman and fiddler Bert Edwards.

influences:

◀◀ Tommy Jarrell, Charlie Poole

▶▶ Greg Hooven, Bruce Molsky

Tony Ziselberger

Dave Swarbrick

Born April 5, 1941, in New Malden, Surrey, England.

Dave Swarbrick's friend Beryl Marriott deserves the thanks of music fans everywhere. She is believed to have persuaded the young Swarb to switch instruments from piano to fiddle. Swarbrick made the fiddle his lover: he made it sing and groan, he danced and crooned with it, he wore out his instruments and, in turn, let them nearly wear him out. Swarbrick began as a folk artist with the Ian Campbell Folk Group. After guesting on Fairport Convention's Unhalfbricking, he joined the group for its seminal Liege and Lief. The lovely machine called Fairport, which transformed so many who passed through it, changed Swarbrick into a singer and composer as well as a fiddler. He remained with the group until 1979, and his departure ended the band, however briefly. Years of electrified fiddling had left him nearly deaf. He continued working, mostly in acoustic settings, with fellow Fairport alum Simon Nicol, with Martin Carthy (with whom he had first worked in 1968), and in the group Whippersnapper with Chris Leslie (who joined Fairport in 1996). He was also in the Keith Hancock Band with Ruari MacFarlane and Carthy. Still performing, though diminished by health problems, Swarbrick shows up at Fairport's reunion festivals from time to time. His imprint on the group as both a performer and a personality has been its most consistent characteristic. As a solo performer and in his other projects, Swarb is likewise full of fire and passion, romanticism and rough-hewn minstrelsy.

what to buy: Smiddyburn/Flittin' ♪♪♪♪♪ (Raven, 1981/1996) is the essential Swarb starter kit. Swarbrick says in the liner notes that both albums were recorded within a two-week period in July 1981. Joining Swarbrick are Simon Nicol, Dave Pegg, Dave Mattacks, Richard Thompson, Beryl Marriott, Bruce Rowland, John McCormick, and Roger Marriott in various configurations. Aside from the marvelous instrumentals, Swarb sings Sandy Denny's "It Suits Me Well"—and it does indeed. Folk on 2 ♪♪♪♪♪ (Cooking Vinyl, 1996), recorded in 1991 as a commemoration of Swarb's 50th birthday made for the BBC, is an excellent collection of solo and group recordings, including several with Fairport Convention.

what to buy next: Swarbrick/Swarbrick II ♪♪♪♪♪ (Transatlantic, 1976–77/Castle, 1996, prod. Bruce Rowland), a re-release of Swarbrick's first two solo albums on one CD, features many of his cronies, including Carthy. His 1991 live performance, released as Live at Jackson's Lane ♪♪♪♪ (Gadfly, 1996), is rather spare—just voice and fiddle—but it's a rare chance to hear Swarb in concert, droll comments and all.

influences:

◀◀ Beryl Marriott, Ian Campbell, Martin Carthy

sweeney's men

Sandy Denny, Ric Sanders, Eliza Carthy, Ashley MacIsaac

see also: Fairport Convention, Martin Carthy

Pamela Murray Winters

Sweeney's Men

Formed 1966, in Galway, Ireland. Disbanded 1969, in London, England.

Andy Irvine, mandolin, harmonica guitar; Johnny Moynihan, bouzouki, tin whistle; Terry Woods, six- and 12-string guitar. Other members included Joe Dolan, guitar; Henry McCullough, guitar.

During the late 1960s in Ireland, a new kind of folk group began to emerge. Influenced by the head-on ballad-singing style of the Clancy Brothers and Tommy Makem, by the urban grit of the Dubliners, by the English folk club scene, and by Sean O' Riada's ideas as expressed by the Chieftains, young people began to blend sensitive singing, basic accompaniment, and arranged instrumental passages in a totally new way. Among the first of these groups to make recordings were Sweeney's Men. Usually remembered as the great Irish folk group of the 1960s, Sweeney's Men was formed in Galway in 1966, but spent much of its time on the Dublin and London folk scenes in the late 1960s. The group consisted on its recordings of Andy Irvine (later of Planxty and Patrick Street), Johnny Moynihan (later of Planxty and De Danann), and Terry Woods (later of Steeleye Span and the Pogues), who replaced original member Joe Dolan. Rock guitarist Henry McCullough, later of the Grease Band, was a member in between their two LPs and greatly influenced the later one. Indeed, many have contended that McCullough's period in Sweeney's Men was one of the earliest manifestations of folk/rock in Britain or Ireland.

what's available: The compilation Time Was Never Here 1968–69 ♪♪♪♪ (Transatlantic/Demon, prod. Bill Leader) features almost all of the music from the Sweeney's two LPs, Sweeney's Men 1968 and 1969's The Tracks of Sweeney. It echoes with historic moments. You'll hear, among other firsts, the first time that most beloved of Greek imports, the bouzouki, was used in Irish music. It was Moynihan who started that trend. There's also the first time "Willy O' Winsbury" was sung to its now-familiar tune, as popularized by Ann Briggs, Pentangle, and other singers; Irvine erred when cross-referencing a ballad collection with its tune index, and connected the wrong tune to these words. It's a fabulous combination, and Irvine's sweet voice never sounded better than it does on this simple solo track. Still, this disc isn't a history lesson, but a vibrant recording of contemporary Irish folk. Listened to as such, it has many pleasures to offer. Woods's banjo and singing sound remarkably Appalachian, while Irvine's guitar, mandolin, and harmonica and Moynihan's bouzouki and whistle clearly foreshadow the Planxty/De Danann style of playing that was yet to develop. The traditional material holds up better over time than the Sweeney's originals, (heck, they were already a century old in 1968, so how's a few more years going to matter?) but most of the goods are wonderfully played, if quirkily sung, and still quite fresh. Another bonus here is the sleeve notes, which contain a lot of information taken from interviews with band members and friends. It adds up to a rare and wonderful glimpse of a remarkable band and a remarkable moment in history, and an absolute must for serious Irish music fans.

worth searching for: Sweeney's Men 1968 ♪♪♪♪ (Translatlantic, 1969), now out of print, contained mostly traditional material which stands the test of time.

influences:

Clancy Brothers & Tommy Makem, Dubliners, Chieftains

Planxty, De Dannan, Patrick Street, East Wind, Steeleye Span, Pogues, Horslips

Steve Winick

Sweet Honey in the Rock

Formed November 1973, in Washington, DC.

Bernice Johnson Reagon, vocals; Nitanju Bolade Casel, vocals; Aisha Kahlil, vocals; Ysaye Maria Barnwell, vocals; Shirley Childress Johnson, vocals; Evelyn Maria Harris, vocals.

Arising from a theater workshop that Bernice Johnson Reagon hosted at the Black Repertory Company in Washington, D.C. in the early 1970s, Sweet Honey in the Rock has surpassed even their founder's vision. Accompanying themselves solely with rhythm instruments and using tradition-rooted harmonies, the women sing out against racism, economic struggle, and sexual oppression. From their inception, Sweet Honey in the Rock's mixture of spirituals, gospel, jazz, blues, rap, and traditional African songs have made them one of the top-ranked contemporary folk groups. Their song, "Emergency," was nominated for a Grammy award in 1990 and the group received a Grammy the following year for their interpretations of two Leadbelly songs—"Sylvie" and "Gray Goose"—on the album Vision Shared. One of the first groups to feature a full-time ASL language interpreter (Shirley Childress Johnson), Sweet Honey in the Rock celebrated their 20th anniversary with a book, We Who Believe in Freedom, published by Anchor/Doubleday in 1993. Sweet Honey in the Rock has been heard in numerous films and television documentaries. Their performance at a concert to observe the first national holiday celebration of Martin Luther King Jr.'s 60th birthday in 1989 was broadcast by PBS. Their version of Sojourner Truth's tribute to the Colored Michigan regiment, set to the music of "John Brown's Body," was heard in Jim Brown and Ken Burns's series, The Civil War, in 1991.

what to buy: With 34 tracks covering Sweet Honey in the Rock's first dozen years, the double CD, Selections 1976–88 ♪♪♪♪½ (Flying Fish, 1997, comp. Bernice Johnson Reagon) is a masterpiece of inspiring harmonies, African American hand percussion, and politically conscious lyricism.

what to buy next: Recorded during a November 1987 performance, At Carnegie Hall ♪♪♪♪ (Flying Fish, 1988) captures the group's dynamic energies and ability to raise awareness during their concerts.

the rest:

Sweet Honey in the Rock ♪♪♪ (Flying Fish, 1976)
B'lieve I'll Run on . . . See What the End's Gonna Be ♪♪♪ (Redwood, 1978)
The Other Side ♪♪♪ (Flying Fish, 1986)
Good News ♪♪♪ (Flying Fish, 1982)
Feel Something Drawing Me On ♪♪♪ (Flying Fish, 1989)
Breaths ♪♪♪♪½ (Flying Fish, 1989)
All for Freedom ♪♪♪♪½ (Music for Little People, 1989)
In This Land ♪♪♪ (Earth Beat, 1992)
I Got Shoes ♪♪♪ (Music for Little People, 1992)
We Who Believe in Freedom ♪♪♪ (Earthbeat!, 1993)
Still on the Journey ♪♪♪♪½ (Earthbeat!, 1993) Sacred Ground ♪♪♪ (Earthbeat!, 1995)

worth searching for: A live version by Sweet Honey in the Rock of "Crying for Freedom" is included on Ben and Jerry's Newport Folk Festival: Turn of the Decade ♪♪♪ (Red House, 1991, prod. Bob Feldman).

influences:

◀◀ Odetta, Paul Robeson, Freedom Singers, Pete Seeger

▶▶ Tracy Chapman, Toshi Reagon, Casselberry-Dupree, Kim & Reggie Harris

see also: Bernice Johnson Reagon, Toshi Reagon

Craig Harris

Sweethearts of the Rodeo

Formed 1974, in southern CA.

Janis Gill, vocals; Kristine Oliver, vocals.

One of country's great disappointments, this talented vocal duo has been around a long time but seldom lived up to the potential of its first few records. Sisters Janis and Kristine Oliver formed the duo in southern California during the early 1970s, when country-rock's popularity surged thanks to such artists as Linda Ronstadt and the Eagles. The Sweethearts stopped to raise families during the early 1980s but returned anew by the middle of the decade, securing a deal with Columbia just before they won the Wrangler Country Showdown in 1985. The Sweethearts' glittering harmonies and sparse, sweetly sung arrangements draw not only from their obvious traditional and new wave country roots, but also from 1960s folk, pop, rock, and bluegrass. The duo scored such hits as "Since I Found You" (written by Foster & Lloyd, another overlooked duo) and "Chains of Gold," and Buffalo Zone (complete with a Byrds-inspired cover) was a solid album. Sadly, their first four albums are no longer in print. North Carolina's Sugar Hill Label, home to many an iconoclastic singer and writer, signed the duo and has released a pair of albums that seemed to resuscitate them.

what's available: Rodeo Waltz ♪♪ (Sugar Hill, 1993, prod. Janis Gill) found them covering an array of rootsy songs, but not always as impressively. Beautiful Lies ♪♪½ (Sugar Hill, 1996, prod. Janis Gill) is a more focused improvement.

worth searching for: No album showcased the sisters' natural harmonies, adroit song selection, and effortless ability to blend traditional country with modern touches better than Buffalo Zone ♪♪♪½ (Columbia, 1990).

influences:

◀◀ Byrds, Poco, Everly Brothers, Bob Seger

▶▶ Alison Krauss, Suzy Bogguss

Doug Pullen

June Tabor

Born December 31, 1947, in Warwick, England.

June Tabor says that she wasn't allowed to sing in her girls' school choir because her voice was too low. Little did they know that she would grow up to wield one of the finest vocal instruments in folk music—a rich, smoky contralto capable both of great power and of subtle nuance. Throughout her career, she has avoided all musical compromise; to this day, she refuses to use overdubs, recording her voice and all instruments live in the studio, or in the case of Aleyn, in front of an inaudible audience. Perhaps as a result, she didn't earn her living from music until quite recently, supporting herself instead as a librarian and restaurateur. From her early days in the folk clubs singing a cappella ballads to her current work as an interpreter of contemporary songs, her style has remained immediately recognizable, and her mastery of dramatic understatement unrivaled.

what to buy: The album that first brought Tabor to the attention of the world was her duet with Maddy Prior, Silly Sisters ♪♪♪♪♪ (Chrysalis, 1976, prod. Maddy Prior, Robin Black). Featuring an all-star cast of musicians (including Martin Carthy, Nic Jones, and Danny Thompson), and spotlighting the stunning harmonies of Tabor and Prior, this album remains a touchstone of 1970s British folk. Following this auspicious debut, Tabor made several excellent solo records, characterized by stark arrangements and production, and mostly traditional material. The best of these is Abyssinians ♪♪♪♪♪ (Topic, 1983, prod. Andrew Cronshaw), an almost unbearably intense set of meditations on loss, longing, and death. Although Tabor is largely unaccompanied, the occasional instrumental backing by Martin Simpson (guitar), Dave Bristow (piano and synthesizer), and Ric Sanders (violin) augments the melancholy mood perfectly, especially on Mike and Lal Waterson's "The Scarecrow."

what to buy next: The same crew returned on Tabor's next record, the somewhat more congenial Aqaba ♪♪♪♪½ (Topic, 1988, prod. Andrew Cronshaw), which includes a surprisingly jazzy version of the 10,000 Maniacs song "Verdi Cries." During the '90s, Tabor changed her band, producer, and record company, and she embraced the role of chanteuse, concentrating more on contemporary songs than traditional ones. Her three albums in this style benefit from the inventive piano playing of Huw Warren, but are slightly marred by excessive reverberation and the occasional weak song. The best of the bunch is Angel Tiger ♪♪♪♪ (Green Linnet, 1992/Cooking Vinyl, 1997, prod. John Ravenhall).

what to avoid: Tabor's attempt at jazz standards, Some Other Time ♪♪ (Hannibal, 1989, prod. Joe Boyd), is an interesting failure, but a failure nevertheless; she seems uncomfortable and stiff in this new milieu. Her collaboration with the Oyster Band, Freedom and Rain ♪♪♪½ (Rykodisc, 1990, prod. Oyster Band), aside from a couple of outstanding tracks, is perfunctory, and a serious disappointment considering the assembled talent. Aspects ♪♪♪ (Conifer, 1990) and Anthology ♪♪♪♪½ (Music Club, 1993), collections of songs drawn from across her career, contain no new material and are therefore superfluous to anyone who purchased the original albums.

the rest:
Airs and Graces ♪♪♪♪ (Topic, 1976)
Ashes and Diamonds ♪♪♪♪½ (Topic, 1977)
(With Martin Simpson) A Cut Above ♪♪♪♪ (Topic, 1980)
(With Maddy Prior) No More to the Dance ♪♪♪♪ (Shanachie, 1988)
Against the Streams ♪♪♪ (Green Linnet, 1994)
(With Savourna Stevenson and Danny Thompson) Singing the Storm ♪♪♪ (Cooking Vinyl, 1996) Aleyn ♪♪♪♪ (Green Linnet, 1997)

worth searching for: June Tabor: The Peel Sessions ♪♪♪½ (Strange Fruit, 1986, prod. Pete Ritzema) is an EP of four unaccompanied songs, three of which are unavailable elsewhere, and contains one of her finest performances in "Donal Og." Despite the 1986 release date, it was recorded in 1977.

influences:
◀◀ Anne Briggs, Lal Waterson
▶▶ Heidi Berry, Polly Bolton, Christine Collister

Tim Walters

James Talley

Born November 9, 1944, in Mehan, OK.

James Talley is a songwriter/singer whose thoughtful, compelling lyrics and folk/country/blues music documents and champions the lives and struggles of working-class people. Talley's family moved to the state of Washington before settling in Albuquerque, New Mexico. After graduating from the University of New Mexico, he began writing songs about the hopes, dreams, ambitions, and fears of the working class. He traded his carpentry skills for studio time and recorded Got No Bread, No Milk, No Money, but We Sure Got a Lot of Love in 1975, which led to a contract with Capitol for three more critically acclaimed albums. He has lived in Nashville for many years, where he is in the real estate business and releases the occasional album.

what to buy: You simply can't go wrong with Got No Bread/Tryin' like the Devil ♪♪♪♪♪ (Bear Family, 1989, prod. James Talley, Steve Mendell) or Blackjack Choir/Ain't It Some- thin' ♪♪♪♪½ (Bear Family, 1989, prod. James Talley), the four Capitol albums repackaged on two CDs. All are understated song treasure chests, with production touches that perfectly emphasize the country/blues amalgam for which Talley's expressive voice and lyrics are so well suited.

the rest:
American Originals ♪♪♪♪ (Bear Family, 1985)
Love Songs and the Blues ♪♪♪ (Bear Family, 1989) Live ♪♪♪ (Bear Family, 1994)

worth searching for: "The Road to Torreon: Photographs of New Mexico Villages" by Cavalliere Ketchum, songs by James Talley ♪♪♪♪ (Bear Family, 1992, prod. James Talley), a song cycle written after a period Talley spent as a welfare worker among Chicanos in New Mexico, includes a 107-page book of photos.

influences:
Lee O'Daniel & the Light Crust Doughboys, Bob Wills & the Texas Playboys, Jimmie Rodgers, Hank Williams, Woody Guthrie, Lefty Frizzell

Leland Rucker

Tamarack

Formed 1978, in Canada.

Alex Sinclair (born October 26, 1952, in Bassano, Alberta, Canada), guitar, mandolin, vocals; James Gordon (born July 2, 1955, in Scarborough, Ontario, Canada), guitar, accordion, pennywhistle, hammered dulcimer, banjo, harmonica, percussion, vocals; Molly Kurvink (born January 27, 1956, in Detroit, MI), bass, vocals.

What started as a group performing traditional Canadian folk songs, Tamarack has become one of the most respected acts in the country, with a growing following in the United States, as well. In the tradition of Stan Rogers and Gordon Lightfoot, Tamarack has dipped into the well of Canadian life, mining for gems about history, people, and the stories they have to tell about logging camps, fishing grounds, mines and mills. Even their new songs sound as if they were drawn from the tradition—a reflection of the variety of influences that have driven each incarnation of the band. The name "Tamarack" is derived from a tree that was important to early Canadian settlers because it didn't decay. They used it for foundations for cabins and other structures because of its resilience. In many ways, the group Tamarack lives up to that enduring nature. The group has been playing for about 20 years. It has survived countless personnel changes, but remains an acoustic trio. Their tastefully appointed music is filled with harmony-rich choruses, and rousing, emotional verses that tug at the very nature of Canadian life. Based in Guelph, Ontario, they have recorded 12 albums and have performed live on television and radio. Previous members of Tamarack have included Cowboy Junkie Jeff Bird (a founding member), fellow Cowboy Junkie Margo Timmins, Daniel Lanois (a guitarist and producer of Bob Dylan, Emmylou Harris, and U2), Gwen Swick, Melanie Doane (Mamas & the Papas), Jane Siberry (James Gordon's former college roommate), and many others. The group was formed in 1978 by songwriter Gordon, Bird, and Randy Rutherford. They toured extensively though Canada, the United States, and Mexico playing mostly traditional Canadian folk songs. In 1987 Bird left for the Cowboy Junkies. The group recorded Gordon's song "Mining for Gold" on its hit album Trinity Session. By 1989 Sutherland had left to work in the computer field. Around that time, the group started writing its own material about Canada's history. Singer-songwriter Alex Sinclair joined in 1985. A prolific songwriter, he also runs Snowy River Records and writes satirical songs for CBC Radio, for films, theater productions, labor organizations, arts groups, and many others. Roots-rock singer Molly Kurvink joined in 1995. A well-known singer and bass player in Guelph, she draws influences from the Detroit music scene, and has fronted several Ontario-based groups. Gordon, meanwhile, has been the group's hingepin, consistently providing fine instrumentation, vocals, and songs on each of the group's albums. He has released children's albums, and with former band member David Archibald has written five family musicals about the environment and conflict resolution. He runs a recording studio, tries his hand at symphonic arrangements, and writes songs for CBC Radio.

what to buy: The most striking and memorable album is Frobisher Bay ♪♪♪♪½ (Folk Era, 1993, prod. Jeff Bird, Pat Mooney), a lovely gathering of mostly originals about the Yukon and Alaska. There are historical touches as Gwen Swick, Alex Sinclair, and Gordon tell of Klondike gold seekers, the construction of the Alaska Highway in 1942 and of the British loyalists who fled the states to Canada during the American Revolution. Their a cappella title track is inspirational as it captures the passions and dangers of Arctic whaling, while Swick's joyous "Vacuum Song" relates fond thoughts of muck, music, and memories. The sparse production calls in acoustic guitar, recorder, violin, hammered dulcimer, mandolin, and bass, as needed. Also impressive is On the Grand: The Story of a River ♪♪♪♪½ (Folk Era, 1994, prod. Tamarack). The album, based on stories and themes related to the Grand River, tells the affecting true story of a slave called "Pawpine," speaks of broken promises in "Our White Man's Word," displays striking vocals and strings in "The Virginia Brand" (sung by Carol LeClair), and evokes the nostalgia of someone who grew up along "The Grand River Canal."

what to buy next: On Leaving Inverarden ♪♪♪♪½ (Folk Era, 1995, prod. Tamarack), the group sings about the workers who helped to forge the nation, from fur trading, to iron and furniture makers and miners. Gordon sings of a 1930s flash flood in Ontario in "Banks of the Rocky Saugeen," its personal tone relaying its tragic outcome. "The Huntsville Fire" recalls the great fire that destroyed Huntsville, Ontario in 1894. They mourn the demise of tugboats that carried timber and tourists to isolated communities in "Tugboat Days," and they sing the a cappella "The Pride of Muskoka," a tribute to a 100-year-old steamboat that plies Ontario's Muskoka Lakes. "Le Sergent," sung in French, tells the story of a Quebecois who went to fight the British during the American Revolution. Kurvink brings a smoky, June Tabor-like emotional voice to the recording.

the rest:

Fields of Rock and Snow ♪♪♪½ (Folk Era, 1991)
Tamarack on the Prairies ♪♪♪ (SGB Productions, 1993)
Muskoka's Calling ♪♪♪♪ (SGB Productions, 1996) Tamarack Thirteen N/A (Folk Era, 1998)

worth searching for: For a good review of the group's early years, The Tamarack Collection ♪♪♪½ (SGB Productions, 1985, prod. Tamarack) contains tracks from their albums from 1980 to 1985. However, it is out of print. The band itself has only archival copies of the cassette. Included is an early version of "Mining for Gold," along with "The Old Ragadoo," a rendition of the traditional song many know as "The Red-Haired Boy." Other gems here: "Scarborough Settler's Lament" and the Western ranges tune "Buffalo Skinners." The 15th Anniversary Concert ♪♪♪ (SGB Productions, 1995, prod. Jeff Bird, James Gordon) is a reunion of many of the various members of Tamarack over the years, the proceeds of which go to the Ontario Lung Association. Several out of print albums worth searching for include: Music of Canada (SGB Productions), A Pleasant Gale (SGB Productions, 1983), Ontario: 200 Musical Years (SGB Productions, 1984), and Shave the Bear (SGB Productions, 1989).

influences:

- Gordon Lightfoot, Ian Tyson, Martin Carthy, Fairport Convention, Steeleye Span, Neil Young, Leonard Cohen, the music of Motown, '20s and '30s jazz
- Stan Rogers

Stephen Ide

Tannahill Weavers

Formed 1968, in Paisley, Scotland.

Roy Gullane, guitar, vocals; Phil Smillie, flute, bodhrán, whistles, vocals; Leslie Wilson, guitar, bouzouki, keyboards, bass pedals, vocals; John Martin, fiddle, cello, mandolin, viola, vocals; Duncan Nicholson, Highland bagpipes, Scottish small-pipes, whistles, keyboards.

Ever since their earliest years, the Tannahill Weavers have established their niche deep in the heart of traditional music, staying almost purely acoustic in nature, and using predominantly traditional Celtic tunes, or new material that sounds so traditional it is indiscernible from the old. This has made them unique in the field of Celtic music; for most groups that start with their feet firmly rooted on traditional soil soon find themselves wandering into new territory, leaving the realm of the traditional altogether. Combining this deep-rooted tradition with skilled instrumentalists, tight harmonies, an intensity of rhythm, and a well-rounded sound has defined a new voice in Celtic music, the Tannahill Weaver sound. Boasting a cast of more than 20 members during nearly three decades as a group, the Tannahill Weavers have seen a variety of talent come and go, but have always managed to maintain the integrity of the group's sound through their excellent arrangements. The signature of the Tannies has to be the use of the Highland bagpipes in their music. The first professional Scottish folk group to include full-sized pipes on stage, they quickly drew the attention of music lovers and critics alike. The various pipes, combined with hearty vocals, soaring flute lines, and a fiery violin, carry the group through a wide variety of traditional tunes, keeping listeners humming along. The cast of pipers has been represented by Alan MacLeod, Iain MacInnes, Kenny Forsyth, and Duncan Nicholson. Phil Smillie's flute lines and Roy Gullane's work on guitar and mandolin combine to add to the depth of the music, and their vocal work is the all-essential icing on the cake. The Tannahill Weavers have been creating hearty, enjoyable music for their listeners for a quarter of a century.

what to buy: The group reached a musical peak with The Mermaid's Song ♪♪♪♪½ (Green Linnet, 1992) and Capernaum ♪♪♪♪½ (Green Linnet, 1994). Both albums display top-of-the-line piping by Kenny Forsyth and some amazing fiddle work by John Martin. The choice of tunes on these albums is particularly wonderful, mixing delightful dance tunes and heartfelt ballads, perfectly distributed throughout the albums. Capernaum won the Indie Award in the United States at the 1994 National Association of Independent Record Distributors conference for Celtic Album of the Year.

what to buy next: Although it lacks the pipe sound characteristic of the Tannies during the rest of their career, their first album, Are Ye Sleeping Maggie ♪♪♪♪ (Plant Life, 1976/Hedera 1993), contains a wonderful selection of tunes passionately performed by the group. The opening thunderstorm on the first and title track, "Are Ye Sleeping Maggie," is indicative of the highly charged performance to come. Also from their early days, Tannahill Weavers ♪♪♪♪ (Plant Life, 1979/Green Linnet, 1982/Hedera 1993) won the group the Scotstar Award for Best Folk Group in 1980. Tannahill Weavers IV ♪♪♪♪ (Plant Life, 1982/Green Linnet, 1982/Hedera 1993) rounds out the "top of the Tannies" set, with a collection of exciting and memorable dance tunes.

what to avoid: Passage ♪♪♪ (Green Linnet, 1984) was a definite diversion for the group, where they toyed with electric instruments and a more modern sound. This album contains some excellent numbers, but it doesn't stand out the way the rest of their work does. Their two "favorites" albums, The Best of the Tannahill Weavers 1979–89 ♪♪♪ (Green Linnet, 1989) and Choice Cuts 1987–96 ♪♪♪½ (Green Linnet, 1997) are both good collections, but true fans will want the rest of the material that comes on the original albums. Since neither collection contains any new material, they are somewhat superfluous.

the rest:
Old Woman's Dance ♪♪♪½ (Plant Life 1978/Hedera 1993)
Land of Light ♪♪♪½ (Green Linnet, 1985)
Dancing Feet ♪♪♪ (Green Linnet, 1987)
Cullen Bay ♪♪♪ (Green Linnet, 1990)
Leaving St. Kilda ♪♪♪½ (Green Linnet, 1996)

influences:
◀◀ Davy Spillane, Alan MacDonald
▶▶ Silly Wizard, Capercaillie

Jo Hughey Morrison

Barry & Holly Tashian

Husband-and-wife duo from Westport, CT.

Barry and Holly Tashian both grew up in New England and attended the same high school. In 1964 Barry and his Boston-based rock 'n' roll band, the Remains, achieved near-stardom when they toured with the Beatles. Barry and the Remains couldn't top that feat, however, and quickly disbanded. Tashian then joined Gram Parsons in the country/rock outfit the International Submarine Band and married Holly in 1972. Holly's musical experience encompasses both bluegrass and madrigal singing. The couple formed a country band, called the Outskirts, that was pretty far away from the sweet, acoustic music they're known for today. In 1980 Barry was asked to join Emmylou Harris's Hot Band, and began a nine-year stint with the group, replacing Ricky Skaggs on guitar and harmony vocals. After Barry exited the Hot Band, the Tashians began their recording career, first with Northeastern Records, then with Rounder in 1993. Their records are marked not only by their tight harmony, but also by the fact that they write much of their material. They've also contributed vocals, and songwriting skills to records by other artists. Favorites on the folk and bluegrass festival circuits, the Tashians' music is warm and gentle, not entirely bluegrass, but not strictly folk, enjoyable, if maybe a bit safe.

what to buy: Ready for Love ♪♪♪½ (Rounder, 1993, prod. Jim Rooney) showcases the best of the duo.

the rest:
Trust in Me ♪♪♪½ (Northeastern, 1989)
Straw into Gold ♪♪♪½ (Rounder, 1994)
Live in Holland ♪♪♪ (Strictly Country, 1995)

influences:
◀◀ Emmylou Harris, International Submarine Band ▶▶ Sweethearts of the Rodeo, Laurie Lewis & Tom Rozum

Stephen L. Betts

Tasso

Formed as McCauley, Reed & Vidrine, 1990. Became Tasso in 1992, after Cory McCauley left group.

Philip Allemond, accordion, vocals; Mitchell Reed, fiddle; Randy Vidrine, guitar, vocals; Cory McCauley, accordion, vocals (1990–92).

Tasso is a Cajun term for raw meat that is hung on a wire and dried for preservative purposes. A picture of traditional Tasso adorns the front cover of The Old Timey Way CD by the group Tasso. Yet if you go to LeJeune's Meats outside of Eunice, you'll find that tasso is a delicious Cajun delicacy. The same could be said for this group. They play with a hard-core reverence to traditional Cajun music, carefully picking not only the songs, but the most traditional approach they can find to playing the music. Mitchell Reed's sliding, sometimes raw fiddle emulates the style that all Cajun players played before the advent of amplification.

what to buy: Tasso's emulation of the Cajun porch sound comes to a head on The Old Timey Way ♪♪♪♪ (Swallow, 1994, prod. Floyd Soileau, Benny Graeff). The record was recorded

7/8/2 eric taylor

James Taylor (© Jack Vartoogian)

live with the three musicians sitting in a circle and it captures the excitement of live performance. Reed plays like a young Canray Fontenot and Philip Allemond's singing is particularly strong. There are lots of buzzes and wheezes on this record, all captured with modern recording equipment.

what to buy next: Michael Doucet grins ear to ear when he talks about Tasso, probably thinking about how proud someone like his mentor Dennis McGee would feel after listening to their Viens à Ma Maison (Come to My House) ♪♪♪½ (Swallow, 1994, prod. Michael Doucet). Like The Old Timey Way, this has a live sound. Reed plays in a drier, rougher style than almost any other fiddler of his generation, but he's emulating the sound of legendary Cajun fiddlers like McGee and Adam Landreau, who played with even more sawing in their bow strokes. The thing about Tasso is how they seem to love this really old-time music for its emotional power and not as some kind of relic in need of preservation. 1929 and Back: Traditional Cajun Music ♪♪♪♪ (Swallow, 1991, prod. Benny Graeff, Tasso) is an earlier version of the group called McCauley Reed Vidrine, which featured Cory McCauley on accordion.

worth searching for: Catch My Hat ♪♪♪½ (Swallow, 1993, prod. Benny Graeff), by the Mamou Praire Band, includes Bobby and Rick Michot, along with Reed and Randy Vidrine in a more contemporary Cajun setting.

influences:

- Michael Doucet, Balfa Brothers, Dennis McGee, Amédée Ardoin
- Horace Trahan, Balfa Toujours

Jared Snyder

Eric Taylor

Born 1950, in Atlanta, GA.

Eric Taylor grew up near Atlanta, where he was equally entranced by such '60s soul singers as Otis Redding and such folkies as Bob Dylan and Tim Hardin. He was hitchhiking to California when he got a ride to Houston, saw Lightnin' Hopkins and Townes Van Zandt his first two days there, and decided to stay. He soon became the young up-and-comer on a Houston singer-songwriter scene that eventually included Hopkins, Van Zandt, Guy Clark, Jerry Jeff Walker, Rodney Crowell, and Steve Earle. Lyle Lovett wrote about Taylor for his school paper in 1979 and eventually co-wrote "Fat Babies" with Taylor. Taylor and Nanci Griffith were romantically linked for a while; she's on the cover of his 1981 debut album and later recorded several of his songs. After a promising start, however, Taylor fell into amphetamine and alcohol problems and didn't get clean until 1983. Now he splits his time between music and his second career as a drug counselor in Texas.

what's available: It took Taylor 14 years to follow up his debut effort with Eric Taylor ♪♪♪½ (Watermelon, 1995, prod. Mark Hallman, Iain Matthews), his only CD release. He sings in the blues-drenched drone of Van Zandt and their common hero, Lightnin' Hopkins, but Taylor's lyrics come in longer lines with more narrative and visual detail than Van Zandt's elliptical riddles. Taylor's new batch of songs provide striking portraits of a Georgia murderer, a South Dakota barfly, Houston hobos, Rust Belt refugees from Indiana, and Jack Kerouac's pal Neal Cassady, and they're fascinating precisely because they're so paradoxical. The songs are nicely framed with backing vocals by Lovett and Matthews and fiddle by George Strait's Gene Elders.

worth searching for: Shameless Love ♪♪♪♪ (Featherbed, 1981, prod. Eric Taylor, John & Laurie Hill), Taylor's self-released, vinyl-only debut album, is a real treat if you can find it. Backed by Griffith, future Lovett cellist John Hagen, and future Lucinda Williams guitarist Gurf Morlix, Taylor sings delightful songs full of detail and irony in a dry, deadpan drawl.

influences:

◀◀ Lightnin' Hopkins, Townes Van Zandt, Guy Clark

▶▶ Lyle Lovett, Nanci Griffith, Steve Earle

Geoffrey Himes

editor's choice

5 songs that shook the folk-rock world

The Byrds, "Turn, Turn, Turn"
Fairport Convention, "Tam Lin"
Nick Drake, "Northern Sky"
Richard Thompson, "The Poor Ditching Boy" Steeleye Span, "Allison Gross"

James Taylor

Born March 12, 1948, in Boston, MA.

Regardless of what he says in the song "Steamroller," of the many things that James Taylor is, has been, or may someday be, a "churnin' urn of burnin' funk" is not one of them. Perhaps the dictionary definition of the sensitive male singer/songwriter, Taylor's confessional odes and gentle, folk-inflected R&B covers to this day make whole amphitheaters full of boomers swoon. One of the Beatles' initial signings to Apple Records, Taylor ushered in an era of—depending on your point of view—ruthless self-examination or hopeless navel-gazing. It's telling that he actually began his career as a songwriter after checking himself into a mental institution. Songs such as "Fire and Rain" were the result, but Taylor (who once was married to singer Carly Simon) actually had greater success covering the work of others, notably Carole King's "You've Got a Friend." Once a dependable hit maker, if an erratic songwriter, Taylor has for the most part vanished from the scene, save for semi-annual summer tours, political campaigns, and public-television pledge drives. If that doesn't sum up the mellow music of the '70s, what does?

what to buy: Greatest Hits ♪♪♪½ (Warner Bros., 1976, prod. various) would seem the natural place to start, but "Carolina in My Mind" and "Something in the Way She Moves" are re-recorded versions, not the originals. If you're looking for Taylor's best single album, you have to go all the way back to Sweet Baby James ♪♪♪♪ (Warner Bros., 1970, prod. Peter Asher), which contains a number of songs that became his fans' favorites, including the title track, "Fire and Rain," "Country Road," and "Steamroller Blues"—Taylor's own personal "Freebird." Since Taylor lacks a hits collection that covers his entire career (excepting the import Classic Songs), (Live) ♪♪♪½ (Columbia, 1993, prod. Don Grolnick, George Massenburg) has to do. All the requisite songs are here, but Taylor's performance is disappointingly subdued. The set is also available in an abridged one-disc version, Best Live ♪♪♪½ (Columbia, 1994, prod. Don Grolnick, George Massenburg).

7 8
4 livingston taylor

what to buy next: Taylor's debut, James Taylor ♪♪♪½ (Apple, 1969/Alliance, 1997, prod. Peter Asher) lets you feel his pain as he helps establish the singer/songwriter genre with "Rainy Day Man," "Carolina in My Mind," and "Something in the Way She Moves," as well as the upbeat "Knockin' around the Zoo." Gorilla ♪♪♪½ (Warner Bros., 1975, prod. Lenny Waronker, Russ Titelman) was Taylor's comeback album after a self-imposed exile during the early '70s; it contains the delightful original "Mexico" but also eased his transition from confessional singer/songwriter to craftsman-like cover man with Marvin Gaye's "How Sweet It Is (to Be Loved by You)." One of his better mid-period albums, J.T. ♪♪♪½ (Columbia, 1979, prod. Peter Asher) includes the sunny hit "Your Smiling Face," the requisite R&B cover "Handy Man," and the charming "Secret o' Life," plus "Bartender's Blues," which Taylor wrote for George Jones. More recently, New Moon Shine ♪♪♪½ (Columbia, 1991, prod. Danny Kortchmar, Don Grolnick) offers Taylor's sharpest and most relevant set of lyrics in some time, notably on "Slap Leather" and "Shed a Little Light."

what to avoid: Never Die Young ♪♪ (Columbia, 1988, prod. Don Grolnick) is a slight collection, even by Taylor's sometimes lightweight standards.

the rest:
Mud Slide Slim and the Blue Horizon ♪♪♪ (Warner Bros., 1971)
One Man Dog ♪♪ (Warner Bros., 1972)
Walking Man ♪♪ (Warner Bros., 1974)
In the Pocket ♪♪ (Warner Bros., 1976)
Flag ♪♪♪ (Columbia, 1979)
Dad Loves His Work ♪♪½ (Columbia, 1981)
That's Why I'm Here ♪♪ (Columbia, 1985)
Never Die Young ♪♪♪ (Columbia, 1988)
Hourglass ♪♪♪½ (Columbia, 1997)

worth searching for: James Taylor and the Original Flying Machine 1967 ♪ (Euphoria, 1971/Gadfly, 1996) is an interesting curio that contains demos—studio chatter included—of "Night Owl," "Rainy Day Man," and "Brighten Your Night with My Day" that Taylor and guitarist Danny Kortchmar recorded in 1967. The seven-song album saw the light of day only after Taylor hit pay dirt elsewhere and was released without his permission.

influences:

◀◀ Simon & Garfunkel, Bob Dylan, Carole King, Beatles

▶▶ Jackson Browne, Duncan Sheik, Garth Brooks

Daniel Durchholz

Livingston Taylor

Born 1951, in Weston, MA.

Although his commercial success has never reached that of his older brother, James, Livingston Taylor has built his musical career with a similar mix of folk, pop, and rock influences. Accompanying his self-described "scratchy baritone vocals" on acoustic guitar and banjo, Taylor turns every performance into a highly entertaining interaction with his audience. The youngest of three sons and one daughter born to a dean of a medical school and a lyric soprano, Taylor grew up in New England and Chapel Hill, North Carolina, surrounded by music. His oldest brother, Alex, exposed him to R&B while AM radio provided a grounding in pop music. Along with his siblings, Taylor struggled with emotional problems as a youngster. While attending a Quaker-run high school in Pennsylvania, he suffered from acute depression and was hospitalized in McLean Hospital, a private sanitarium near Boston. Music became an important part of his therapy. After his release during the late 1960s, he moved back to Weston, Massachusetts, a rural suburb of Boston, and began performing in folk music clubs and coffeehouses. Although he released several folk-pop albums during the 1970s and had minor hits with "Carolina Day" and "Get Out of Bed," he remained in the shadow of his more famous brother. Taylor maintained a low profile during the 1980s. After releasing the disappointing album Man's Best Friend, co-produced by John Boyland and ex–Doobie Brothers guitarist Jeff Baxter, he didn't return to the recording studio until 1988, releasing Life Is Good, produced by Artie Traum and Scott Petito.

what to buy: Taylor's true magic comes out as an entertainer. With the release of his 1994 album Unsolicited Material ♪♪♪♪ (Whistling Dog, 1994), the excitement of his shows is finally captured. Songs range from long-time favorites, including "Carolina Day," from Taylor's first album, to more recent material. The romanticism of "Save Your Heart for Me" and "No Easy Way to Break Somebody's Heart" is balanced by the joviality of "Railroad Bill," "I Hate Country Music," "Pajamas," and "Jason (Waltzing with Bears)." An extended segment featuring the banjo links bluegrass classic tunes—"Earl's Breakdown" and "Eight More Miles to Louisville"—with a humorous collection of "Songs That Should Never Be Played on the Banjo." The album concludes with a tender version of "Over the Rainbow," from The Wizard of Oz.

what to buy next: The original studio cuts of Taylor's best-known songs are assembled on Echoes ♪♪♪½ (Capricorn,1979, prod. Ed Freeman, Jon Landau).

the rest:
Livingston Taylor ♪♪♪ (Capricorn, 1970)
Liv ♪♪♪ (Capricorn, 1971)
Over the Rainbow ♪♪♪½ (Capricorn, 1973)
Three-Way Mirror ♪♪♪ (Epic, 1978)
Man's Best Friend ♪♪♪½ (Epic, 1980)
Life Is Good ♪♪♪♪½ (Critique, 1988)
Good Friends ♪♪♪ (Chesky, 1993)
Our Turn to Dance ♪♪♪ (Vanguard, 1993)
Bicycle ♪♪♪½ (Coconut Bay, 1996)
Arial ♪♪♪½ (Chesky, 1997)

influences:
James Taylor, Alex Taylor, Earl Scruggs

Greg Greenway, David Wilcox, Brooks Williams

Craig Harris

Sonny Terry & Brownie McGhee

Sonny Terry born Saunders Teddell, October 24, 1911, in Durham, NC; died March 11, 1986, in Mineola, NY; Brownie McGhee born Walter Brown McGhee, November 30, 1915, in Knoxville, TN; died February 23, 1996, in Oakland, CA.

As important a team in blues as Lennon and McCartney were in rock 'n' roll or Ruth and Gehrig in baseball, harpist Sonny Terry and guitarist Brownie McGhee had several significant bonds that created a prolific and influential life-long partnership. McGhee overcame polio as a child, though he had to walk on crutches for years; Terry lost almost all his eyesight in two separate childhood accidents. They met in 1939, after Terry had recorded with Blind Boy Fuller and McGhee hadn't yet recorded his influential Columbia recordings as "Blind Boy Fuller #2." (Terry found himself onstage at Carnegie Hall, as one of many performers in John Hammond's important From Spirituals to Swing concert, in 1939.) They hooked up in the early 1940s, and it was immediately obvious that Terry's enthusiastically squawking harp lines fit nicely above McGhee's understated guitar strumming—and their folksy harmonies (punctuated with Terry's occasional trademark whoops) were just perfect for McGhee's singalong songwriting style. After World War II, when they had business problems with record companies, they took to the streets and made occasional Broadway appearances in such plays as Cat on a Hot Tin Roof and Langston Hughes's Simply Heavenly. Soon they were swept up in the American folk movement, performing with Leadbelly, Woody Guthrie, Josh White, Pete Seeger, and other leftists who believed traditional music could be used to effect important societal change. (Bob Dylan and Joan Baez were among the 1960s artists to build effectively on this approach.) Where rock 'n' roll destroyed the careers of many popular bluesmen, especially traditional acoustic ones, Terry and McGhee timed everything just right. They caught on in Europe in the late 1950s, while Elvis Presley and Jerry Lee Lewis were exploding in the States, and returned just in time for the 1960s blues revival. Their European tours and American festival work gave them extraordinary career longevity, although there was reported friction which slowed down the partnership in the 1970s. McGhee was always the more prolific solo artist, although Terry made several excellent R&B singles for various record labels in the 1950s. But they're the most influential duo in blues history and one of a select few in popular music in general.

what to buy: Start with two important solo collections: Terry's Whoopin' the Blues: The Capitol Recordings, 1947–50 ♪♪♪♪½ (Capitol, 1995, prod. Pete Welding) collects all 16 of his Capitol blues combo sides, some with McGhee on guitar and some with his guitarist brother, "Drinking Wine Spo-Dee-O-Dee" hitmaker Stick McGhee; the two-disc The Complete Brownie McGhee ♪♪♪♪ (Columbia/Legacy, 1994, prod. various) includes many soft-spoken, occasionally spooky and depressing, solo sides as Blind Boy Fuller #2, but despite the eloquence of "Death of Blind Boy Fuller" and "Back Door Stranger" it's clearly lacking Terry's playful harp element. Among the best of many duo compilations are Brownie McGhee and Sonny Terry Sing ♪♪♪♪♪ (Smithsonian Folkways, 1958/Rounder, 1990), Back to New Orleans ♪♪♪♪ (Bluesville, 1961/Fantasy, 1989), and the 1948–51 recordings Hometown Blues ♪♪♪♪½ (Mainstream/Legacy, 1993, prod. Bob Shad).

what to buy next: McGhee and Terry recorded six and eight albums each for Folkways between 1944 and 1963, and although they got separate star billing, most of the songs were basically Terry-McGhee duo recordings. The original albums are hard to find, but the best available collections are McGhee's The Folkways Years 1945–59 ♪♪♪♪ (Smithsonian Folkways/Rounder, 1991, prod. various), which includes the solemn "Grievin' Hearted Blues" and the lecherous "'Fore Day Creep;" and Terry's The Folkways Years 1944–63 ♪♪♪♪ (Smithsonian Folkways/Rounder, 1991, prod. various), with "Going down Slow," "Custard Pie Blues," and "Harmonica with Slaps."

what to avoid: On Terry's Whoopin' ♪♪½ (Alligator, 1984, prod. Johnny Winter), the harpist sounds like he's coasting, and the presence of the great bassist Willie Dixon and ex-Muddy Waters guitarist Johnny Winter only works to twist the sound in an unfocused direction.

the rest:
Back Country Blues ♪♪♪½ (Savoy, 1958)
Sonny's Story ♪♪♪ (Original Blues Classics, 1960)
At Sugar Hill ♪♪♪½ (Original Blues Classics, 1961/Fantasy, 1991)
At the Second Fret ♪♪♪ (Original Blues Classics, 1962/Fantasy, 1993)
The Best of Brownie McGhee ♪♪♪ (Storyville, 1971)
Sonny and Brownie ♪♪♪½ (A&M, 1973)
Sonny Terry ♪♪♪ (Collectables, 1987)
Blowin' the Fuses: Golden Classics ♪♪♪½ (Collectables, 1989)
California Blues ♪♪♪½ (Fantasy, 1990)
Midnight Special ♪♪♪ (Fantasy, 1990)
Sonny Is King ♪♪♪ (Original Blues Classics, 1990)
Brownie's Blues ♪♪♪ (Original Blues Classics, 1990)
Chain Gang Blues ♪♪♪½ (Collectables, 1991)
Just a Closer Walk with Thee ♪♪♪ (Original Blues Classics, 1991)
Giants of the Blues ♪♪♪ (Legacy, 1992)
Facts of Life ♪♪♪ (Blue Rock-It, 1992)
1958 London Sessions ♪♪♪ (Collectables, 1994)
Po' Boys ♪♪♪ (Drive Archive, 1994)
Climbin' Up ♪♪♪½ (Savoy Jazz, 1995)
Blues Is Truth ♪♪♪ (Blues Alliance, 1996)
Mr. Brownie & Mr. Sonny ♪♪♪ (Prestige, 1996)
Not Guilty Blues ♪♪♪ (Collector's Edition, 1996) Going It Alone ♪♪♪ (Blues Alliance, 1997)

worth searching for: The original Folkways albums, including Sonny Terry's Washboard Band ♪♪♪♪ (Smithsonian Folkways) and Sonny Terry, Harmonica ♪♪♪½ (Smithsonian Folkways), have long since been trumped by the 1991 CD collections, but they're excellent holy grails for collectors.

influences:
◀◀ Sonny Boy Williamson I, Josh White, Leadbelly, Blind Boy Fuller ▶▶ Woody Guthrie, Bob Dylan, Joan Baez, Buddy Guy, Junior Wells, Charlie Musselwhite

Steve Knopper

Rosetta Tharpe

Born Rosetta Nubin, March 20, 1915, in Cotton Plant, AR. Died October 9, 1973, in Philadelphia, PA.

Rosetta Tharpe was the best-known of the guitar playing female gospel singers, her high-pitched rough voice enhanced by an exuberant and dynamic guitar style inspired by jazz, early rock 'n' roll, and, most of all, the blues. She had a forceful presence on stage and exuded happiness and delight. Tharpe started singing in church and playing guitar at a very early age with her mother, an itinerant evangelist. Her experience on the road with her mother led to torrid sessions in Chicago's Church of God in Christ in the early 1930s. In 1934 she married Pastor Thorpe, and the trio had success in the storefront churches of Florida before settling down in New York in 1936. In 1938 she made her first gospel records as Sister Rosetta Tharpe (from Thorpe), "Rock Me" and "That's All," and the same year, as star attraction, she played the Cotton Club in Harlem, fronting Cab Calloway's band and recording with Lucky Millinder and his orchestra, Louis Jordan, and Noble Sissle. The sides she recorded for Decca between 1944 and 1954 with the Sammy Price Trio and her duos with Marie Knight ("Didn't It Rain?"), graced by her biting guitar and strong voice, are masterpieces of swing, dripping with rejoicing and contagious joy. In 1950 she recorded a moving album for Verve with her mother, Katie Bell Nubin, and the ceremony of her second marriage in 1951 was recorded and issued on Decca. She was busy from the late 1950s on. A colorful artist, she was the flamboyant gospel counterpart to Memphis Minnie, and she deserves the strong following of collectors and specialists.

what to buy: Sister Rosetta Tharpe ♪♪♪♪♪ (Frémeaux & Associates, 1994, prod Jean Buzelin) offers the best sides from the period 1938–43. Live at the Hot Club de France ♪♪♪♪ (Flame, 1966/Milan, 1992, prod. J. Morgantini), a solo, live session, is the best of the gospel evergreens. Sister R. Tharpe ♪♪♪♪♪ (Rosetta, 1988, prod. Rosetta Reitz) offers a nice selection of 1941–69 sides. Sister R. Tharpe ♪♪♪♪♪ (MCA, 1975) is a multi-volume series with the best sides recorded between 1944–56 with the Sammy Price Trio, Marie Knight, and various groups.

what to buy next: The two-volume Sister Rosetta Tharpe Complete Recorded Works ♪♪♪♪♪ (Document, 1995, prod. Johnny Parth) includes 53 tracks, her complete output from 1938–44, and is worthwhile not only for completists. Not to be overlooked is Live in Paris—1964 ♪♪♪♪ (France's Concerts, 1988), which includes two live shows; one with Otis Spann, Ransom Knowling, and Willie Smith and a second with the Original Tuxedo Jazz Band.

influences:
◀◀ Big Bill Broonzy, Memphis Minnie ▶▶ Sister O.M. Terrell, Dinah Washington

Robert Sacré

Hans Theessink /Blue Groove

Born April 5, 1948, in Enschede, the Netherlands.

Blue Groove: Hans Theessink, guitar, vocals; Jon Sass, tuba; Dorretta Carter, harmony vocals; Ali Thelfa, harmony vocals, percussion.

He's a bluesman. He's from the Netherlands. His accompanist plays the tuba. No, it's not the plot of a Robin Williams movie; it's the true story of Hans Theessink. In the 1960s, the blues captured the attention of white American college students, British rock bands, and a Dutch kid who played the mandolin. Hearing Big Bill Broonzy and Leadbelly on late-night radio changed the direction of Theessink's life. In an unlikely development, he taught himself to be a respected blues guitarist. He spent some time in America learning from the originals: "The first time I went down to Mississippi I was really shocked to find that some of these great bluesmen were living in such poverty," he recalled in a Sing Out! interview. Theessink proves that "derivative" isn't always a bad word. But his music has its moments of inspired originality. Part of its distinctive charm comes from tuba player Jon Sass, who frequently adds oomph to Theessink's blues. Sass and Theessink first teamed up in 1986 for Baby Wants to Boogie. Their work is unusual, in that both play lead and accompaniment; their "voices" meld perfectly.

what to buy: Call Me ♪♪♪♪ (Deluge, 1993, prod. Colin Linden, Hans Theessink) contains a kick-ass cover of "Mabelline" (sic); "Lonely Days and Lonely Nights," featuring great piano by Richard Bell and contributions by Colin Linden, Maceo Parker, and Pee Wee Ellis; and Theessink's signature song "Call Me." The album also features Garth Hudson, Rick Danko, Bobby King, and tuba-tooter Sass.

what to buy next: Theessink's earthy baritone is especially striking on Baby Wants to Boogie ♪♪♪♪ (Flying Fish, 1988). The album is a delight throughout, particularly because of such unexpected touches as Flaco Jimenez's accordion. Most of the songs are Theessink originals, but he plays some gorgeous slide on Robert Johnson's "Stones in My Passway."

best of the rest:

Johnny and the Devil ♪♪♪½ (Flying Fish, 1990)
Hard Road Blues ♪♪♪♪ (Blue Groove, 1994)
Hans Theessink and Blue Groove: Live ♪♪♪♪ (Blue Groove, 1993) Crazy Moon ♪♪♪½ (Blue Groove, 1997)

influences:

◀◀ Leadbelly, Big Bill Broonzy

▶▶ Martin Sexton, Keb' Mo'

Pamela Murray Winters

Them

See: Van Morrison

Chris Thile

Born February 20, 1981, in Oceanside, CA.

Chris Thile began playing mandolin at age five and added fiddle and guitar to his arsenal at ages eight and nine respectively. He won the prestigious Walnut Valley Championship in 1993 and released his first bluegrass-rich album in 1994, at the age of 13. Playing mandolin with a dexterity and sophistication that's jaw-dropping-unusual in someone so young, Thile performed and toured for several years with bluegrass/C&W band Nickel Creek and is a founding member of the Grass Is Greener with Richard Greene and David Grier.

what's available: Leading Off ♪♪♪½ (Sugar Hill, 1994, prod. Pete Wernick) is a bluegrass showcase introducing an eighth-grader with the sensitivity, chops, and musical friskiness of an adult. Thile wrote or arranged 11 of the 13 tracks here and is joined by luminaries including fiddlers Byron Berline and Stuart Duncan and guitarist Scott Nygaard. Thile is even more agile and self-assured on sophomore outing Stealing Second ♪♪♪½ (Sugar Hill, 1997, prod. Sam Bush), recorded in Nashville with an all-star line-up that includes Jerry Douglas, Russ Barenberg, and producer Bush. The album's title is part baseball reference as the young mandolinist happens to be a huge Chicago Cubs fan. The material is all original, and song titles include "Hop the Fence," "Road to Wrigley," and "Ryno's Lament," a bluesy tribute to Thile's hero Ryne Sandberg.

worth searching for: Tinsel Tunes ♪♪♪½ (Sugar Hill, 1996, prod. Barry Poss) is a generous, various artists collection of bluegrassy holiday material performed by artists from the Sugar Hill roster. Thile arranged "Bring a Torch, Jeanette Isabella" for the project, which also includes tracks by Chris Hillman and Herb Pedersen, Sam Bush, Mollie O'Brien, Robert Earl Keen Jr., the Laurel Canyon Ramblers, and others.

influences:

◀◀ Bill Monroe, Alison Krauss

▶▶ Dr. Banjo's Bluegrass Youth All-Stars

David Sokol

iiird tyme out

open tunings for guitar

In the most common (E) tuning, a guitar must be fretted on several strings to form a major chord. In several cultures, most notably Hawaiian and African American, the instrument's tuning was altered to either produce a major or minor chord without fretting or to create distinctive voicings such as the DADGAD tuning common to music of the British Isles. Guitars in such "open" tunings can either be played with a slide or fingerpicked, with two or more fingers plucking the strings directly, often playing a bass line on the upper strings while playing the melody on the lower ones. Guitarists like Merle Travis, the Reverend Gary Davis, and Richard Thompson have made this approach a high art, often sounding like two or more instrumentalists when playing solo. As fingerstyle guitarists have become more numerous, tunings have become more numerous and complex, and guitarists have resorted to multiple capos (which strap across a guitar's frets and raise the pitch of one or more strings) to allow them to switch tunings quickly onstage. Another approach taken by Indian classical guitarists like Debashish Bhachttayara, who utilize a slide, and American instrumentalists like William Eaton and the late Michael Hedges, is to add additional strings to the guitar, increasing its tonal range and allowing a drone accompaniment to their solo playing. Most folk guitarists utilize some open tunings, and players like Patty Larkin, Martin Simpson, and David Wilcox have made incorporation of these unique voicings a high art.

Michael Parrish

IIIrd Tyme Out

Formed 1991.

Russell Moore, guitar, lead vocals; Ray Deaton, bass guitar, vocals; Mike Hartgrove, fiddle; Wayne Benson, mandolin, vocals (1993–present); Steve Dilling, banjo, vocals (1994–present); Terry Baucom, banjo (1991–92); Alan Bibey, mandolin (1991–92); Barry Abernathy, banjo (1993).

Founded by veterans of Doyle Lawson and Quicksilver, IIIrd Tyme Out made an immediate impact on the bluegrass world when their debut album received an "Album of the Year" nomination by the International Bluegrass Music Association. A single from that album, "Erase the Miles," spent two months at Number One on the Bluegrass Unlimited chart. The band has won several awards for their vocal work and is noted for producing a contemporary sound while staying firmly within the genre's traditions.

what to buy: Puttin' New Roots Down ♪♪♪♪½ (Rebel, 1992, prod. IIIrd Tyme Out), a more than worthy follow-up to their successful debut, once had four songs in Bluegrass Unlimited's Top 30. It includes songs from Hank Williams, Jimmy Rodgers, Lionel Delmore, and others.

what to buy next: The band's first Rounder album, Letter to Home ♪♪♪♪ (Rounder, 1995, prod. IIIrd Tyme Out), includes an inspired a cappella cover of the Platters' "Only You (And You Alone)" plus Wes Golding's classic "Raining in LA."

the rest:

IIIrd Tyme Out ♪♪♪½ (Rebel, 1991)
Grandpa's Mandolin ♪♪♪½ (Rebel, 1993)
Across the Miles ♪♪♪ (New Haven, 1994) Living on the Other Side ♪♪♪½ (Rounder, 1996)

influences:

◀◀ Doyle Lawson & Quicksilver
▶▶ Blue Highway, Lonesome River Band

Douglas Fulmer

Anthony Thistlewaite

See: The Waterboys

Buddy Thomas

Born October 10, 1935 in Emerson, KY. Died October 4, 1974.

Oldtime fiddler "Buddy" Elwood Carl Thomas grew up on an isolated mountain farm in eastern Kentucky, one of 10 children in a family that raised all the food they ate; Thomas used to joke that his family was "so poor, even the poor folks said we were poor." He was one of the last generation of regional fiddlers to learn music without the influence of radio or records. As a boy, he was sickly, and was unable to walk until age 11. He learned to play on a homemade fiddle, starting with his grandfather's tunes which he had heard his mother whistle around the house. Most of Thomas's fiddling was done when carousing at the homes of friends or for small square dances in his community, but towards the end of his brief life he appeared at the Smithsonian National Folk Festival in Washington, D.C. In 1973 Mark Wilson and Gus Meade ran across Thomas at a small folk festival in Kentucky and began visiting with him, and taping his remarkable repertoire of uncommon traditional tunes. Selections from these field recordings were issued as Kitty Puss. Sadly, Thomas died just a few months after the last recordings were made. He had lain down for a nap during a strenuous square dance, and never got up again. All his life, Thomas had suffered from ill health; harsh living conditions, poor nutrition, and inadequate medical care cut his life short.

what to buy: Kitty Puss ♪♪♪♪ (Rounder, 1998, prod. Mark Wilson, Guthrie T. Meade), the CD release of Thomas's 1976 masterpiece, showcases his elegant melodic fiddling, backed simply on the guitar by his sister, Leona Stamm. Thomas's repertoire was already rare at the time Kitty Puss was recorded (1973–74), for it hearkened back to an era a century before bluegrass music was invented, with archaic echoes of minstrelsy, Scots-Irish airs, and the bluesy tunes carried to the region by black settlers. Originally issued in 1976, Kitty Puss stands as a prime distillation of a master fiddler's distinctive personal and regional style, and has influenced many of today's most important old-time fiddlers. Thomas's seminal versions of "Briarpicker Brown" and "Yellow Barber" alone make this album worth buying; his vivid melodies meander about, bobbing and dancing, curving and bending, yet they remain light, simple and firmly grounded in the rhythmic tradition of dance fiddling. This is a must-have for anyone seriously interested in American fiddle music.

what to buy next: Traditional Fiddle Music of Kentucky: Volume I, Up the Ohio and Licking Rivers (Rounder, 1996, prod. John Harrod, Mark Wilson) is an anthology which includes six cuts by Thomas that do not appear on Kitty Puss.

influences:

◀◀ Doc Roberts, Ed Haley, Clark Kessinger, J.P. Fraley

▶▶ Roger Cooper, Bruce Greene, John Hartford, Bob Carlin

Suzy Rothfield Thompson

Henry "Ragtime Texas" Thomas

Born reportedly 1874, in TX. Death date unknown.

When the Los Angeles blues-rock group Canned Heat hit with "Going up the Country" in December 1968, the song charted at Number 11 on its eerie pan-pipe backing. If the ethereal tune seemed transported from another time, it was. The pipes and the song's lilting melody were lifted from Texas drifter Henry Thomas, the oldest known singer to record the blues at the start of its recorded history in the late 1920s—likely the clearest link to the birth of the blues. Thomas's delicate ragtime and ballad-influenced blues, sung in a rasping baritone, seem born of the nineteenth century, more naturally sung around a wagon train campfire than in a juke joint. Thomas was a one-man-band of sorts who could dive off into a rapid reel, backing himself both on the pan pipes—an instrument of several reeds also called "quills"—and guitar. His "Run, Mollie, Run" speeds along at a dizzying clip, sounding like a drunk band of hornpipe-blowing sea dogs. His version of black composer Irving Jones's "Honey Won't You Allow Me One More Chance?" was definitive, appropriated years later by a young Bob Dylan on Freewheelin', and his "Fishing Blues" has become a folk standard. A traveling minstrel who likely roamed with medicine shows, Thomas reportedly rode the boxcars as far as St. Louis and Chicago. He made repeated trips to Chicago, showing up twice in 1927 and again in 1928 and 1929, recording 23 sides for Vocalion, ranging from songster classics like "John Henry" to spirituals like "Joshua in the Wilderness." Unlike fellow Texans Leadbelly and Texas Alexander, Thomas could not be tamed. He hit the rails and disappeared, leaving only his ageless music as his legacy.

what to buy: The first comprehensive release of Thomas's stirring sides is Texas Worried Blues ♪♪♪♪♪ (Yazoo, 1990, prod. Richard Nevins), accompanied by as definitive a history of his life as can be gleaned by the scant details turned up by researchers. The Austrian version, Henry Thomas 1927–29 ♪♪♪♪♪ (Document, 1991, prod. Johnny Parth), has the same exquisite 23 songs but fewer scholarly notes.

influences:

▶▶ Leadbelly, Bob Dylan, Taj Mahal, Canned Heat

Steve Braun

Linda Thomas & Dan DeLancey

Formed 1991, in Raytown, MO.

Linda Thomas (born April 17, 1947, in Nevada, MO); Dan DeLancey (born May 19, 1961, Kansas City, MO).

Though the members of this duo have been acquainted for 15 years, Linda Thomas and Dan DeLancey formed their musical partnership of old-time music played on hammered dulcimer and guitar less than a decade ago. Thomas and DeLancey describe themselves as modern-day minstrels playing old world tunes, having grown up surrounded by traditional American music in Missouri. They specialize in adapting a wide variety of fiddle tunes, waltzes and schottisches to their chosen instruments. Both musicians are award-winning players and practitioners of traditional acoustic music with DeLancey being a former Kansas and two-time Oklahoma State Flatpick Guitar Champion, and Thomas being a finalist in hammered dulcimer competitions in Arkansas and Texas.

what's available: The Gathering Place ♪♪♪♪ (Thomas/DeLancey, 1997, prod. Linda Thomas, Dan DeLancey) offers an instrumental collection of such favorite songs of inspiration as "Amazing Grace," "How Great Thou Art," and "Wayfaring Stranger," featuring the wonderful blend of hammered dulcimer and guitar. They are joined by Scott Tichenor, who adds an exceptional mandolin throughout, and Ronnie DeLancey on acoustic bass who completes the ensemble sound of the recording. Merry Christmas ♪♪♪♪ (Thomas/DeLancey, 1995, prod. Linda Thomas, Dan DeLancey) is a special treat for fans looking to add an acoustic touch to their holidays! A review in the Kansas City Star says "If you want instrumental Christmas music that sets a warm peaceful mood, buy this one." In addition to the supporting musicians on The Gathering Place, Annie Tichenor adds rhythm guitar. Among Old Friends ♪♪♪♪ (Thomas/DeLancey, 1996, prod. Linda Thomas, Dan DeLancey) includes the most requested tunes from their first two recordings Plain and Simple and Music from the Heart plus a few new favorites. This assortment of fiddle tunes is described as "reminiscent of the sounds one might expect to hear at an Irish farmhouse dance." The tunes are played with plenty of energy and also include such wonderful waltzes as "Kentucky Waltz" and "Midnight on the Water." Any of these recordings are available through County Sales or directly from the artists at 7911 Hunter, Raytown, Missouri 64138.

worth searching for: Plain and Simple ♪♪♪ (Thomas/DeLancey, 1993, prod. Linda Thomas, Dan DeLancey) and Music from the Heart ♪♪♪ (Thomas/DeLancey, 1994, prod. Linda Thomas, Dan DeLancey) are the two recordings from which Among Old Friends was drawn. These older recordings (available on cassette tape) feature Thomas's dulcimer made by Harvey Printz, while on their newest recording The Gathering Place, she plays a David Lindsey "Baby Grand" hammered dulcimer.

influences:

◀◀ Bill Monroe, Doc Watson, Walt Michael, Steve Kaufman

▶▶ Scott Jackson, Kendra Ward-Bence, Tina Bergmann

Heidi Cerrigione

Carol Thompson

Born December 4, 1941.

Carol Thompson is one of America's foremost players of the Celtic harp. She began at age 13 with classical lessons from Pennsylvania harpist Dorothy Knauss. After years of playing classical music, she allowed her lifelong interest in traditional folk music to take the fore, and learned to play several different variants of her instrument. Unlike most harpists, she plays the familiar orchestral pedal harp, the bright-sounding diatonic neo-Celtic harp, and the difficult, chromatic Welsh triple harp. Like many folk musicians, Thompson is a touring performer, a recording artist, and an influential teacher. She can be found at concerts, festivals, and workshops across the United States.

what to buy: Thompson's harp playing on Carolan's Welcome ♪♪♪♪♪ (Dorian, 1993, prod. David H. Walters) is impeccable, and the varied program of tunes is both interesting and beautiful. The characteristic crystalline tone of her harps and the plaintive nature of the airs makes them sound both fragile and expressive under Thompson's expert fingers. Her guests Jack Coen, Billy McComiskey, and Darcy Fair all add their own special talents, and Thompson is generous enough to share the limelight and play accompaniment. McComiskey, one of this generation's finest Irish accordionists, plays lovely "continental waltzes" from the repertoire of his mentor Sean McGlynn. Coen, a National treasure, adds some tunes on the wooden flute paced for leisurely listening. Fair, one of Thompson's former star pupils, plays lead harp on a hornpipe, a reel, and on the title cut, an air by O'Carolan. The airs are gentle and lovely and the dance tunes aren't over-the-top, so the overall feel of this album, like that of most harp albums, is subdued. It will be cherished by anyone who likes Irish traditional music's quieter side.

what to buy next: The Peacock's Feather ♪♪♪♪ (Dorian, 1996, prod. Debbie Reynolds) marked Thompson's return to totally solo recording after Carolan's Welcome. Unlike that album, The Peacock's Feather features music not only from Ireland, but also from England, Scotland, and Wales. Her impeccable taste in selecting among traditional slow airs, lilting dances, and the gentle baroque compositions of Turlough O'Carolan make this a wonderful album of solo harp music. Scholarly liner notes by folklorist Darcy Fair help illuminate the history of each melody. The Enchanted Isles ♪♪♪♪ (Dorian, 1989, prod. Craig Dory, Douglas Brown) was Thompson's first solo CD on the Dorian label. Like The Peacock's Feather, it contains selections of music from all over Britain and Ireland, masterfully played on neo-Celtic and triple harps. It also features a few tunes on the large pedal harp. This album made a big splash when it came out, both in the United States and abroad; in Hong Kong, it even entered the pop charts. On Wild Swans ♪♪♪½ (Bonaventure, 1995, prod. Ron Bach), Thompson teamed up with literature scholar and poetry reader Jack Vickrey to record an album of poetry readings and harp music. The 13 selections include accompanied readings, solo harp tunes, and a few instrumental duets on which Vickrey plays viola da gamba. Thompson achieves a full, measured, and beautiful sound on her harps. Vickrey's dramatic readings bring equal sonic power to the works of poets like William Butler Yeats, Dylan Thomas, and Gerard Manley Hopkins. This album won't do for those who use harp albums as quiet background music; the 12-minute reading of Tennyson's "The Lady of Shalott," backed by a sixteenth-century Spanish tune, requires a serious commitment of attention. But it pays off in the end, and the album is a satisfying pairing of poetry and music.

influences:

◀◀ Dorothy Knauss, Jack Coen

▶▶ Darcy Fair

Stephen Winick

Eric & Suzy Thompson

Formed 1976, in San Francisco, CA.

Eric Thompson (born March 21, 1946 in Stockton CA), guitar; Suzy Thompson (born September 20, 1954 in Frankfurt Germany), fiddle, guitar, vocals.

Veteran performers and alumni of such groups as the Blue Flame String Band, the Backwoods Band, and the California Cajun Orchestra, Eric and Suzy Thompson brilliantly cover a wide range of acoustic music territory, from the down-and-out blues to old time fiddle-guitar duets to Cajun waltzes and stomps. Their 22 years of performing together give them an unusual combination of technical virtuosity, unpretentious delivery, and a strong commitment to retaining the essential feel of the many roots styles they tackle. The Thompsons have learned their craft from rare recordings, and directly from older generations of traditional musicians. They take their inspiration from old-time greats like Memphis Minnie and Mance Lipscomb, both legendary blues singers and guitarists; the Cajun musicians they have visited in Louisiana, including Dewey Balfa, Dennis McGee, and the late Cheese Read; 1920s string bands such as the East Texas Serenaders and A.L. Steeley's Redheaded Fiddlers; Karakosta, the Greek clarinet king; and other important figures in roots music, both obscure, like blueswoman Hociel Thomas, and well-known, like bluegrass great Bill Monroe. Eric Thompson has been active as an acoustic guitarist since the mid-1960s when he won the championship at Union Grove and has worked with Jerry Garcia, David Grisman, Mike Seeger, Michael Doucet, and the Balfa Brothers. Frets magazine calls him "a virtual encyclopedia of flatpicking." His playing stands out for its soulfulness and speed, and for its exceptional tone. Eric's classic Bluegrass Guitar album is a staple of many serious bluegrass record collections; a later duet recording with Alan Senauke, Two Guitars, also explores Irish reels, ragtime and blues, and Greek rembetika. Suzy Thompson grew up in the Northeast, studied classical violin as a child, and became enamored of Cajun music after hearing the Balfa Brothers in 1976. She is a prize-winning fiddler and an impassioned vocalist whose specialties are classic blues of the 1920s and Cajun French songs. She learned Cajun music in Louisiana under an NBA fellowship with her Cajun fiddle mentor, Dewey Balfa. Her finger-style guitar playing, inspired by blueswoman Memphis Minnie, lays out a rock-solid rhythm behind her powerful voice. The Thompsons' virtuosity, the breadth of their repertoire, and the sheer energy they infuse into their music results in a show that leaves audiences not only thoroughly entertained but also educated and inspired.

what to buy: Adam and Eve Had the Blues ♪♪♪♪ (Arhoolie, 1989, prod. John Lumsdaine, Eric and Suzy Thompson) has the duo doing what they do best: country blues and Cajun songs and tunes. Suzy's fiddling and singing is a treat and Eric contributes his usual boxcar-load of hot guitar licks. On the classic blues of Ma Rainey or Bessie Smith, Eric's sparkling lead guitar weaves and darts around Suzy's pyrotechnical vocals. When they pick up their fiddles for a Cajun waltz or two-step, the interplay between the two is hypnotic. And Suzy's steady rhythm guitar provides the perfect foil for Eric's flashy flatpicking solos. The supporting cast includes Laurie Lewis, David Grisman, and George Winston to name but a few.

what to buy next: Either of the Thompson's two albums with the California Cajun Orchestra, Not Lonesome Anymore ♪♪♪♪ (Arhoolie, 1991, prod. Jody Stecher, Suzy Thompson) or Nonc Adam Two-Step ♪♪♪♪ (Arhoolie, 1995, prod. Jody Stecher, Suzy Thompson, Bob Shumaker) are worth pursuing. Both contain large helpings of some of the best Cajun dance music you'll hear anywhere.

the rest:
Some Kind of Love ♪♪♪ (Fourteen Carrot, 1985)
(With the Backwoods Band) Jes' Fine ♪♪♪½ (Rounder, 1979)
(With the Blue Flame Stringband) The Blue Flame Stringband ♪♪♪ (Flying Fish, 1982)

worth searching for: The Thompsons appear on two Rounder compilations that everyone should own. The Young Fogies ♪♪♪♪♪ (Rounder, 1994) and The American Fogies ♪♪♪♪½ (Rounder, 1996) are both treasures of American old time and roots music. Eric Thompson's first solo album, Bluegrass Guitar ♪♪♪♪ (Kicking Mule, 1979, prod. Eric Thompson) is a classic of the genre and features Thompson with a supporting cast that includes David Grisman, Tony Rice, Paul Shelasky, and Todd Phillips. It's sadly out-of-print. Suzy also appears in the film J'ai Etais au Bal (aired on PBS as French Dance Tonight) playing fiddle with D.L. Menard and Danny Poullard.

solo outings:
Eric Thompson:
Flatpicking Guitar Festival ♪♪½ (Kicking Mule, 1976)
Flatpicking Guitar ♪♪½ (Kicking Mule, 1979)
(With Alan Senauke) Two Guitars ♪♪♪ (Flying Fish, 1986)
(With Charles River Valley Boys) Beatle Country ♪♪♪ (Rounder, 1995)

Suzy Thompson:
(With Any Old Time Stringband) I Bid You Goodnight ♪♪♪♪ (Arhoolie, 1978/1980/1996)

influences:
Dewey Balfa, Dennis McGee, Cheese Read, Hociel Thomas, Clarence White

California Cajun Orchestra, Balfa Toujours

see also: California Cajun Orchestra, Any Old Time Stringband

Neal Walters

Linda Thompson

See: Richard Thompson

Richard Thompson /Linda Thompson /Richard & Linda Thompson

Formed 1972.

Richard Thompson (born April 3, 1949, in London, England), vocals, guitar; Linda Thompson (born 1948), vocals.

Richard Thompson was an original member of the innovative folk-rock band Fairport Convention and has in the intervening years carved out a niche as a supremely gifted songwriter and guitarist. With his deep, burnished vocals and generally dark songs, he has modernized the British folk idiom in several ways; his expressive, often baroque fretwork joins a number of different traditions—imagine a Celtic Hendrix in Morocco—and has hugely influenced Mark Knopfler of Dire Straits, among many others. Thompson met Linda Peters while working with the group Bunch, a loose aggregation of Fairport alumni; they married during the early '70s, converted to Islam in 1974, and divorced in 1982. (Richard subsequently married Nancy Covey.) Richard began his solo career first, with 1972's Henry the Human Fly, then joined forces with Linda for some of the most emotionally bare music ever produced in the pop idiom. After they split up, Richard re-activated his solo career, worked with avant-gardists Fred Frith, Henry Kaiser, and John French, was a busy gun-for-hire (Nick Drake, J.J. Cale, Robert Plant, Bonnie Raitt, Crowded House, Suzanne Vega, the Golden Palominos, Syd Straw), and wielded enough influenced to inspire a 1994 tribute album featuring a bevy of cutting-edge acts. Linda moved into theater before releasing a solo album in 1985 and a retrospective in 1996.

what to buy: The couple's Shoot out the Lights ♪♪♪♪♪ (Hannibal, 1982, prod. Joe Boyd)—the release of which barely preceded their divorce—is a devastating, virtually flawless set of performances and the last of their collaborations. Their first release, I Want to See the Bright Lights Tonight, ♪♪♪♪ (Hannibal, 1974/Rykodisc, 1991, prod. Richard Thompson, John Wood) is an equally gripping and somewhat happier dialogue. Richard's Rumour and Sigh ♪♪♪♪ (Capitol, 1991, prod. Mitchell Froom) is his personal masterpiece, highlighted by the ironic "I Feel So Good" and the updated Irish ballad "1952 Vincent Black Lightning."

what to buy next: Richard's best solo work is collected in the hefty but consistently engaging three-disc set Watching the

Richard Thompson (© Jack Vartoogian)

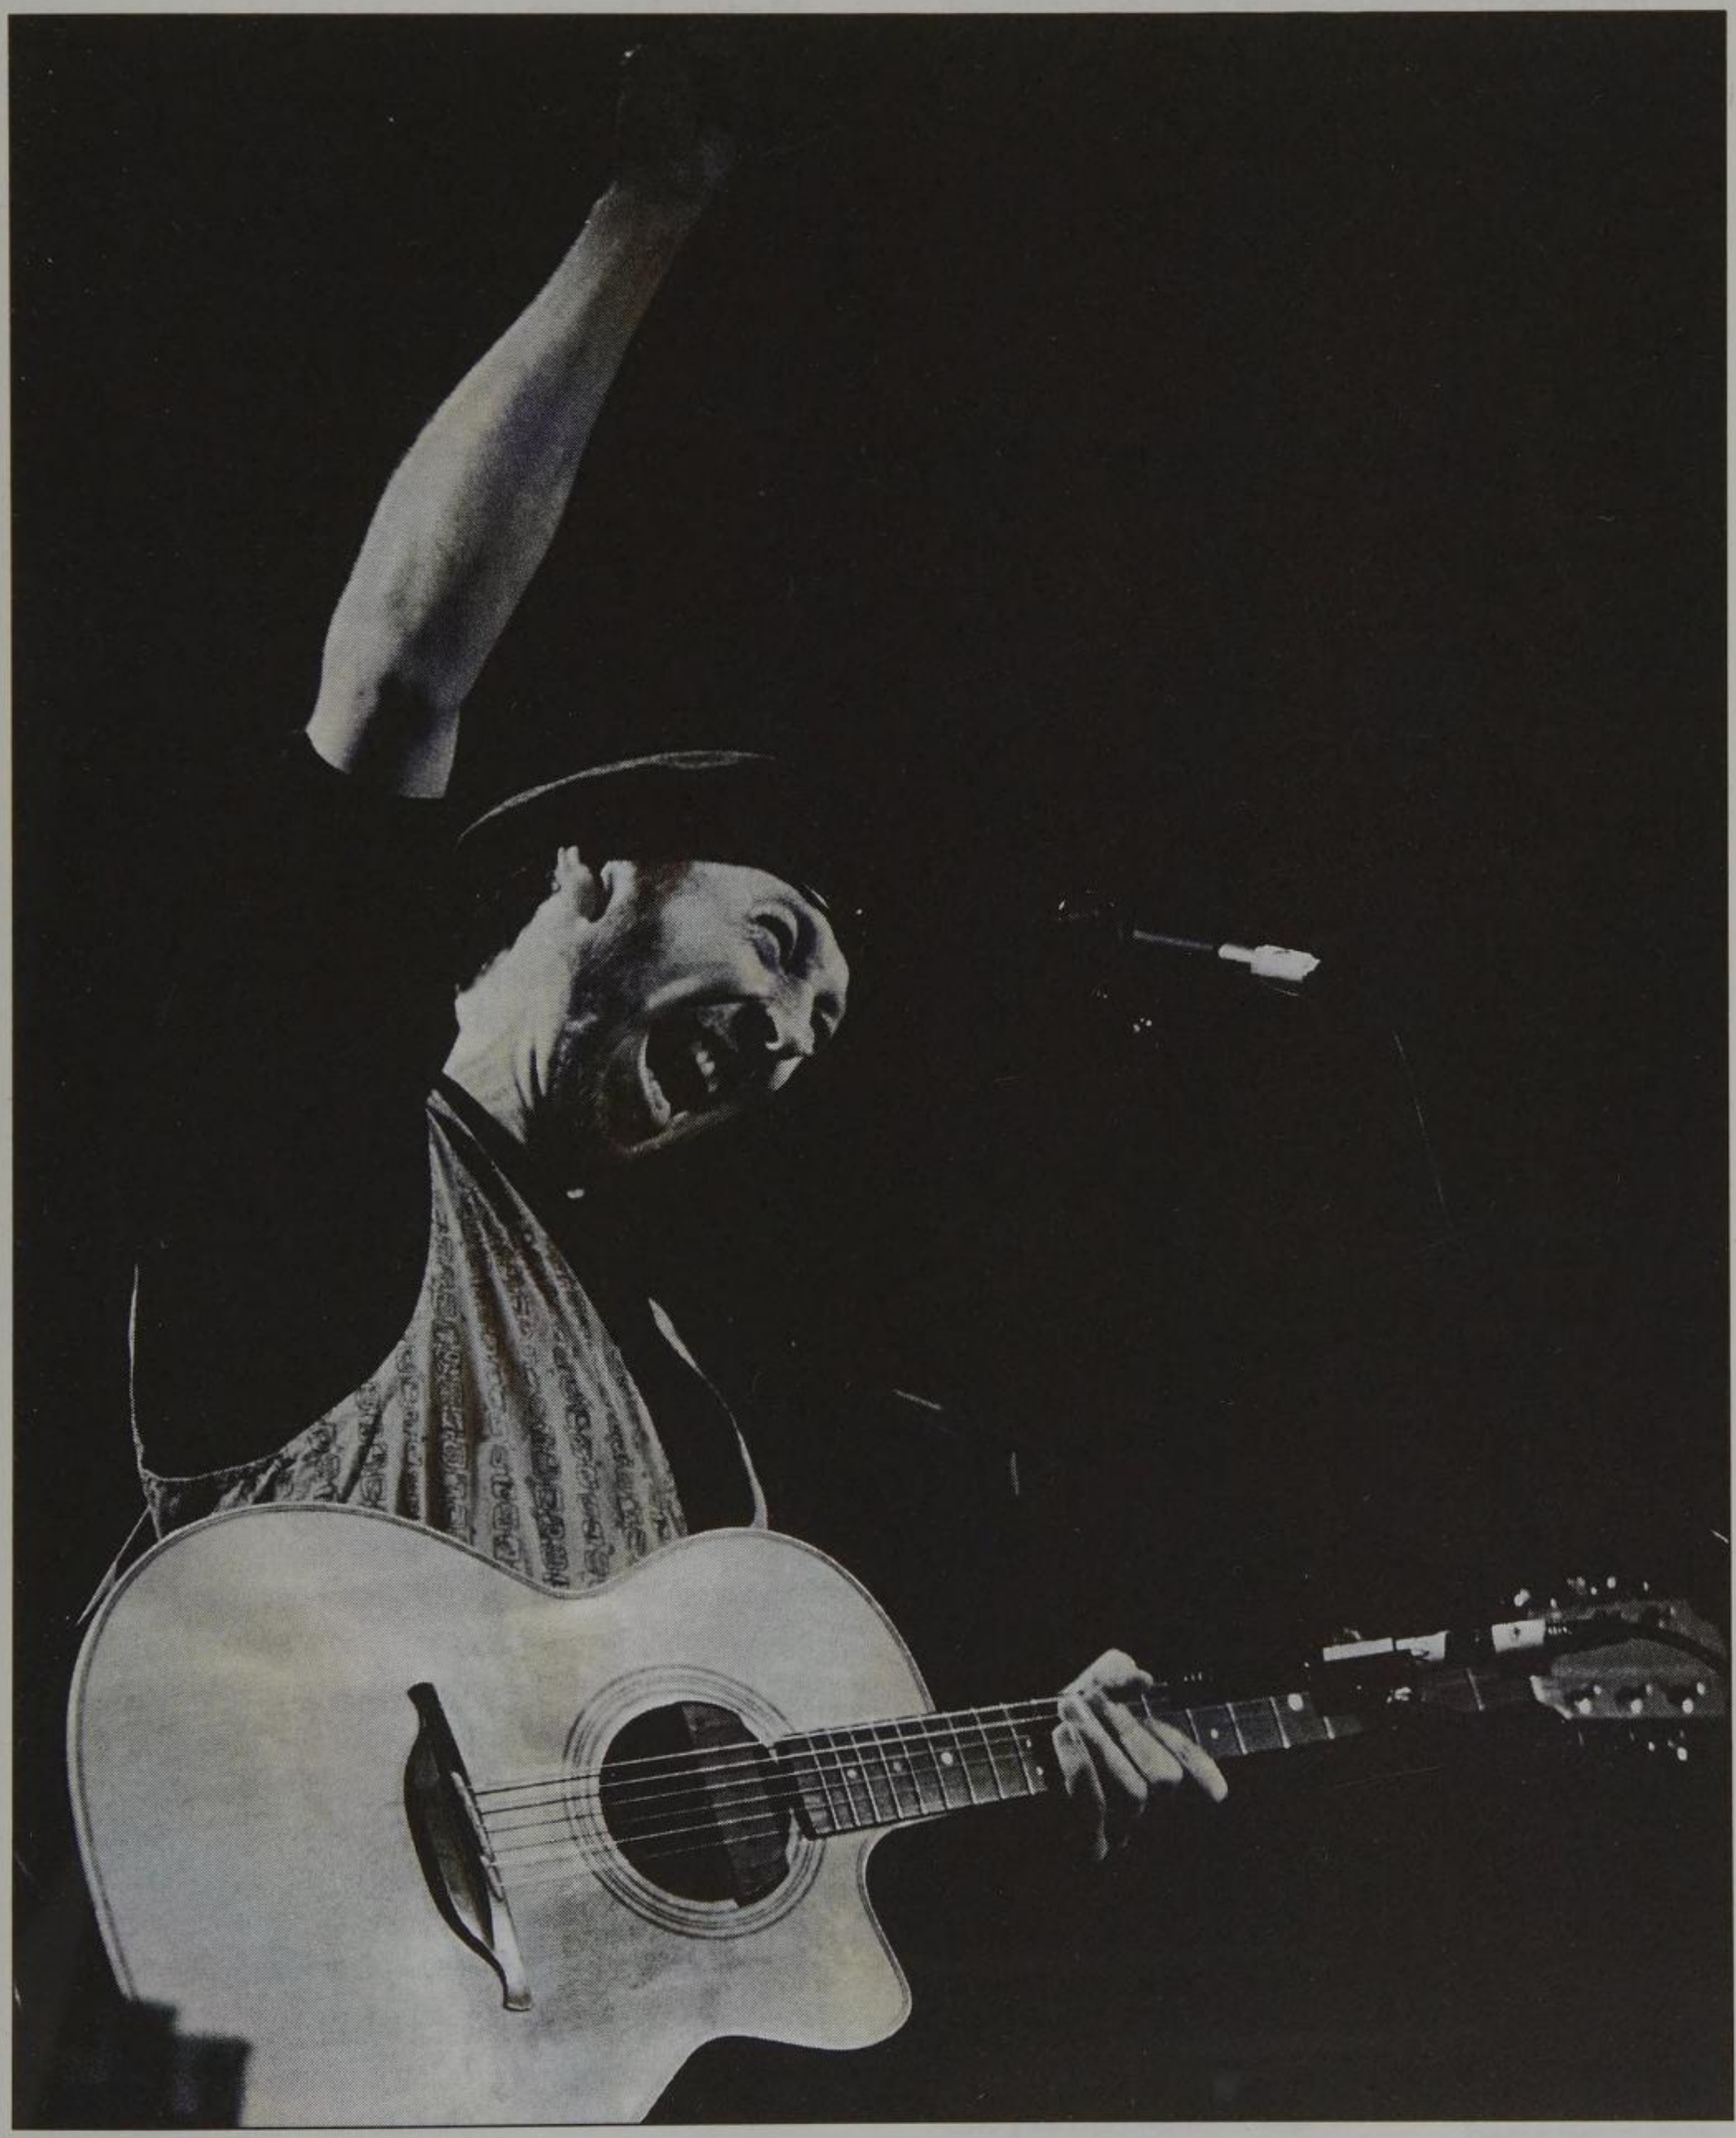
richard thompson



Dark: The History of Richard Thompson ♪♪♪♪ (Rykodisc/Hannibal, 1993, prod. various). Linda's Dreams Fly Away ♪♪♪½ (Rykodisc/Hannibal, 1996, prod. various) is a 20-track overview of her career, from before Richard to her post-divorce work.

what to avoid: Richard Thompson Live! (More or Less) ♪♪½ (Island, 1977, prod. Joe Boyd) was originally paired with I Want to See the Bright Lights Tonight as a double album—but didn't deserve to be.

the rest:
Henry the Human Fly ♪♪♪½ (Warner Bros., 1972/Rykodisc-Hannibal, 1991)
(Guitar, Vocal) ♪♪½ (Island, 1976/Rykodisc-Hannibal, 1991)
Strict Tempo! ♪♪♪ (Hannibal, 1981)
Hand of Kindness ♪♪♪½ (Hannibal, 1983/Rykodisc-Hannibal, 1991)
Small Town Romance ♪♪♪ (Hannibal, 1984)
Across a Crowded Room ♪♪♪ (Polydor, 1985)
Daring Adventures ♪♪♪½ (Polydor, 1986)
Amnesia ♪♪♪½ (Capitol, 1988)
Mirror Blue ♪♪♪ (Capitol, 1994)
You? Me? Us? ♪♪♪ (Capitol, 1996)

worth searching for: Worth looking for is Lonely Hearts ♪♪♪♪ (Silver Rarities, 1995), a wonderful two-disc bootleg set that captures Richard and Linda's performances from 1981 and 1982, with a few Fairporters guesting on the latter.

solo outings:

Richard and Danny Thompson:
Industry (Hannibal/Carthage, 1997)

Richard and Linda Thompson:
Hokey Pokey ♪♪♪ (Hannibal, 1975/Rykodisc-Hannibal, 1991)
Pour down like Silver ♪♪♪½ (Hannibal, 1975/Rykodisc-Hannibal, 1991)
First Light ♪♪♪ (Carthage, 1978/Rykodisc, 1992) Sunnyvista ♪♪♪ (Carthage, 1979/Rykodisc, 1992)

Linda Thompson:
One Clear Moment ♪♪♪ (Warner Bros., 1978)

French, Frith, Kaiser, and Thompson:
Live, Love, Larf and Loaf ♪♪♪ (Rhino, 1987) Invisible Means ♪♪♪ (Windham Hill, 1990)

influences:
◀◀ Wes Montgomery, Django Rheinhardt, Jimi Hendrix, Nick Drake, Van Morrison, Bob Dylan

▶▶ Dire Straits, Elvis Costello, Jeff Buckley, Womack & Womack

see also: Fairport Convention

Simon Glickman and Gary Graff

Rick Thum

Born October 6, 1953, in St. Louis, MO.

Hammered dulcimer recording artist Rick Thum won the 1994 Southern Regional Championship and placed third in 1995 in the Winfield National Championships. His musical career began with rock 'n' roll guitar and drums during his high school and college years, and those influences of rhythm and musical expression are clearly evident in his hammered dulcimer playing. While the hammered dulcimer is his main focus, selling, repairing, teaching, and playing musical instruments of all types has become his career. He currently performs solo or as part of Cabin Fever, a five-piece old-time string band what's available: A Reason to Dance ♪♪♪ (RT Audio, 1997, prod. Rick Thum) is a fine example of five fine musicians gathered together in an exciting jam environment. Thum's energetic (but not overbearing) hammered dulcimer interacts superbly with Dan Levenson's banjo, Gary Hunt's guitar, and Marc Renard's fiddle, all supported by Vince Corkery's bass. The tune selection includes old and new alike, from "Forked Deer" to Chris Romaine's "Black Widow Romp," plus two original waltzes by Rick Thum titled "Front Porch Waltz" and "Morning's Waltz." The CD liner notes are well done with complete information about each tune. Hammered Fiddle Tunes ♪♪½ (RT Audio, 1994, prod. Rick Thum) is a short collection of well-known fiddle tunes from "Soldier's Joy" to "Flop Eared Mule" played with a great amount of energy and unique syncopated rhythms. One variation from the fiddle tune theme is a beautiful rendition of "The Meeting House," written by Rick Kuethe. Steve Craig (banjo) and Renee Poirier (hammered dulcimer) contribute on several tracks. These two recordings are available from the artist at RT Audio, 36 Villawood, St. Louis, Missouri 63119.

influences:
◀◀ Cathy Barton, Ken Kolodner, Dana Hamilton, Jim Hudson, Ed Hale

▶▶ Kendra Ward-Bence, Walt Michael

Heidi Cerrigione

Kathryn Tickell

Born June 8, 1967, in Wark, North Tyne Valley, Northumberland, England.

Kathryn Tickell has almost single-handedly brought the Northumbrian smallpipes to international fame, establishing herself as an outstanding folk musician along the way. Tickell's technique on the bellows-blown pipes is only excelled by her general musicianship, allowing emotion to flow through the pipes as she plays. From hard-driving, almost rocking reels and hornpipes to evocative airs and waltzes, Tickell covers a broad spectrum of musical images when performing. She is not only an excellent piper, she has also distinguished herself as a fiddler, winning several awards in Open Competitions. Growing up in a family of musicians greatly influenced Tickell. Her father is a ballad singer, her mother is a concertina player, and both grandfathers were musicians as well. Folk music was always there for her, and her desire to learn was evidenced early in life. She began on piano at age six and started learning both the smallpipes and the fiddle by age nine. At 13 she was winning piping competitions and appearing at major festivals. A local radio station encouraged her to make her first recording while she was still in high school, which resulted in On Kielder Side, a brilliant first recording. That same year, Tickell was named official piper to the Lord Mayor of Newcastle-upon-Tyne. Through the ensuing years, she has developed into a musical force to be reckoned with, having five more albums under her belt and a long list of self-authored tunes. She has also collaborated with numerous fine musicians, including Sting (she is on at least three of his albums), John Surman, and the Chieftains. She also works to encourage new folk musicians, both through personal appearances and through a charity she established to assist lower-income children in receiving music lessons.

what's available: Tickell's most recent release, The Gathering ♪♪♪♪ (Park, 1997, prod. Kathryn Tickell), showcases a mix of traditional and original music. Her own tunes are soulful, playful, and traditional in nature, while branching out rebelliously towards rock 'n' roll at times. This recording displays Tickell's mature understanding of music, her highly developed expert fingering and technique, and a fiery passion that is typical of her work. On Kielder Side ♪♪♪½ (Saydisc, 1984, prod. Keith Proud), Tickell's first album, features traditional music from Northumberland, Ireland, and Scotland, all brilliantly played when she was only a teenager. From the lively full-band sound on "The Peacock Followed the Hen," featuring pipes, fiddle, keyboards, and guitar, to the exciting smallpipe solo "Jean's Reel," Tickell shows her versatility and virtuosity. Other highlights include a moving Shetland tune "Da Slockit Light" and an uplifting air and hornpipe set, "Border Spirit/A.B. Hornpipe/Billy Pigg's Hornpipe." worth searching for: Tickell's other four albums appear to be in limbo at the moment, having been retired by Black Crow in June 1997. They are all well worth hearing, especially her work with the Kathryn Tickell band (which includes guitar, bass guitar, and accordion) on The Kathryn Tickell Band (Black Crow, 1991) and Signs (Black Crow, 1993), which feature an energetic, contemporary sound.

influences:

◀◀ Alistair Anderson, Tom Anderson, Will Atkinson, Joe Hutton, Willy Taylor, Mike Tickell

▶▶ Chris Ormston, Billy Bragg, Pogues, Oyster Band

Jo Hughey Morrison

Steve Tilston & Maggie Boyle

Steve Tilston born March 6, 1950, in Liverpool, England; Maggie Boyle born December 24, 1956, in Battersea, London, England. Began as a duo c. 1986.

The Guinness Who's Who of Folk Music describes Steve Tilston's guitar playing as having a classical sensibility; this quality helps distinguish him from England's many other fine guitarists. Tilston released his first album in 1971 and has been steadily growing as an artist ever since. He and his wife, Maggie Boyle, have performed with many of Britain's finest musicians, and were members of John Renbourn's group Ship of Fools. Boyle's Irish origins inform her vocal style, particularly its simplicity and warmth.

what to buy: All under the Sun ♪♪♪♪ (Flying Fish, 1996, prod. Steve Tilston, Maggie Boyle) benefits from Boyle's lovely vocals, but Tilston is also a compelling singer with an appealingly understated style.

the rest:

Of Moor and Mesa ♪♪♪½ (Green Linnet, 1992)

Silently the Snow Falls ♪♪♪ (Shanachie, 1989)

solo outings:

Steve Tilston:

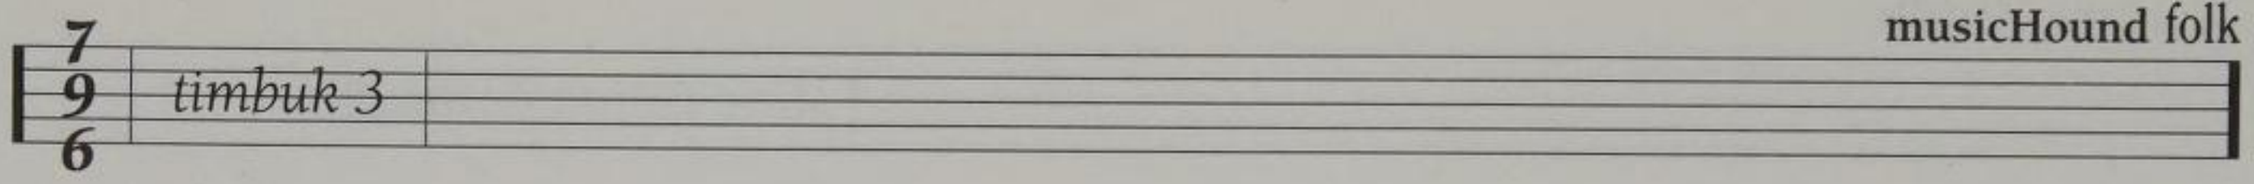
And So It Goes . . . ♪♪♪½ (Flying Fish, 1996)

influences:

◀◀ John Renbourn, Richard & Linda Thompson

▶▶ Fairport Convention, Chris Smither

Pamela Murray Winters



Timbuk 3

Formed 1978, in Madison, WI.

Pat MacDonald, vocals, guitar, harmonica, bass; Barbara Kooyman MacDonald, vocals, guitar, harmonica, violin, mandolin; Wally Ingram, drums (1991–present); Courtney Audain, bass (1991–present).

Ever since their bluesy anti-nuclear diatribe "The Future's So Bright, I Gotta Wear Shades" was adopted as a yuppie-lifestyle anthem in 1986, this Austin, Texas-based husband-wife duo has been thwarted by the Randy Newman Principle: if you use tongue-in-cheek humor to get under the skin, you'll wind up going over the heads of most listeners. Their compelling blend of hypnotic rhythms, clever wordplay, stinging guitars and sweet-and-sour harmonies helped them score big on college radio with underdog-championing commentaries on homelessness ("Dirty Dirty Rice"), the religious right ("Prey"), jingoism ("National Holiday"), and shallow values ("Hairstyles and Attitudes"). Once relying on a beatbox for backing, Timbuk 3 expanded to a four-piece band on its last two albums. But lack of commercial success and personal strife led to the MacDonalds breaking up both their band and their marriage after 1995's A Hundred Lovers. Barbara continues performing on the Austin club scene; Pat has been collaborating with artists ranging from Brazilian singer Marina Lima to Cher and released his first solo album, Pat MacDonald Sleeps with His Guitar, in 1997 on Miles Copeland's new Ark 21 label.

what to buy: The MacDonalds' bluesy cynicism runs rampant through Greetings from Timbuk 3 ♪♪♪½ (I.R.S., 1986, prod. Dennis Herring), the launch pad of such college favorites as "The Future's So Bright," "Life Is Hard," and "Just Another Movie." Eden Alley ♪♪♪½ (I.R.S., 1988, prod. Dennis Herring) broadens their musical base and expands their targets to include "Sample the Dog" (which predicted technology's chilling effect on education and the arts), the ska-flavored "Too Much Sex, Not Enough Affection" and a reggae-tinged hymn of devotion called "A Sinful Life." Edge of Allegiance ♪♪♪½ (I.R.S., 1989, prod. Denardo Coleman, Timbuk 3) boasts some of Pat MacDonald's darkest compositions, including "Standard White Jesus," "Daddy's down in the Mine," "B-Side of Life," and "Acid Rain."

what to buy next: Espace Ornano ♪♪♪ (Watermelon, 1993, prod. Timbuk 3) is a live band album recorded in France that mixes longtime favorites like "Tarzan Was a Bluesman" and "Reckless Driver" with the previously unreleased "Rage of Angels," "Throw Down Gun," and "Bleeding Heart."

what to avoid: Looks like Dark to Me ♪♪ (Windham Hill, 1994, prod. Timbuk 3), a stopgap EP with alternate versions of two songs found on A Hundred Lovers: a spooky rearrangement of "The Future's So Bright" and a bland cover of Steppenwolf's "Born to Be Wild."

the rest:
Big Shot in the Dark ♪♪♪ (I.R.S., 1991)
Field Guide: Some of the Best of Timbuk 3 ♪♪♪ (I.R.S., 1992)
A Hundred Lovers ♪♪♪ (Windham Hill, 1995) worth searching for: Just in Time for Christmas ♪♪♪ (IRS, 1990, prod. various) includes Timbuk 3's bluesy diatribe against children's war toys, "All I Want for Christmas (Is World Peace)."

solo outings:
Pat MacDonald:
Pat MacDonald Sleeps with His Guitar ♪♪♪ (Ark 21, 1997)

influences:
◀◀ Muddy Waters, Talking Heads, Leonard Cohen, Jim Kweskin Jug Band

▶▶ Lisa Loeb, Penelope Houston, Luscious Jackson

David Okamoto

Toast String Stretchers

See: Paul Brown

Touchstone

See: Nightnoise

Horace Trahan

Born June 12, 1976, in Lafayette, LA.

Horace Trahan is the Cajun traditionalist, a student both of Cajun music and Cajun culture. Perhaps the only Eddie LeJeune or Cory McCauley plays a more traditional style of Cajun accordion. Equally, he sings with great sincerity and authority. That is the stunning part, since Trahan is still in his early 20s! Trahan wasn't born until the third year of the Festival Acadian, which had only one performer under 40 in its first year. Like most of the kids of his generation he started out on guitar wanting to play rock 'n' roll. Once that had lost its romance he started playing country music. When he became interested in the accordion he went to his father for guidance. His father took him to visit his cousin Felix Richard, an accomplished Cajun accordionist who had taught Zachary Richard. "Mr. Felix" tutored Trahan almost daily after school. It was not just music, but an appreciation for Cajun culture that the teacher imparted to the impressionable young man. Trahan was frustrated by his limited mastery of the Cajun language and made a pact with family and friends to speak only French with him so he could improve. It made him aware of how important the Cajun language is to Cajun music and how easy a thing it is to lose. He honed his musical skills on his own and by touring and recording with D.L. Menard and Kristi Guillory.

what to buy: Ossun Blues ♪♪♪♪♪ (Swallow, 1996, prod. Terry Huval) is as good a Cajun record as has been made since The Balfa Brothers Play Traditional Cajun Music. While Trahan's accordion playing is truly something special (the best comparison may be Eddie LeJeune), his singing is his most impressive talent. Trahan has a true unaffected Cajun voice, there are no hints of rock 'n' roll or country in his style. He compares most favorably with a very young Dewey Balfa or Iry Lejeune in his full-throated style. He has picked a mix of classics from Nathan Abshire, Iry Lejeune, Dewey Balfa, and D.L. Menard and mixed in his own originals that fit into the style seamlessly.

what to buy next: Reveille: The New Cajun Generation ♪♪♪ (Swallow, 1994, prod. Terry Huval) is listed under Kristi Guillory and Bill Grass, but it features Trahan playing rhythm guitar and sharing the lead vocals with Kristi Guillory. Each member of this band was under 20 at the time of the recording, but the only way you'd know it is from the friskiness of their playing. Trahan's rich voice evokes the great traditional Cajun singers on traditional tunes like "T'en a Eu, T'en Auras Plus" and "L'Anse aux Pailles." His and Guillory's deep voices intertwine together on "Les Veuves de la Coulée" and "Les Flammes d'en Fer" a bit like Marc and Ann Savoy's duets.

worth searching for: The American Fogies, Volume I ♪♪♪♪ (Rounder, 1996, prod. Ray Alden), an anthology of American bands playing roots music, includes a track of Trahan playing Douglas Belair's "Les Barres de la Prison" with Mitch Reed of Tasso and the Mamou Praire Band.

influences:

◀◀ Nathan Abshire, Balfa Brothers, Iry Lejeune

▶▶ Tasso, Balfa Toujours

see also: Kristi Guillory, D.L. Menard

Jared Snyder

Trapezoid

Formed 1975, in Elkins, WV.

Paul Reisler, hammered dulcimer, guitar, electric guitar, guitar synthesizer (1975–present); Sam Rizzetta, hammer dulcimer, fretted dulcimer,(1975–80); Paul Yeaton, dulcetta, mandolin (1975–77); Pete Vigour, dulcimer, banjo, pennywhistle (1975–77); Ralph Gordon, bass, cello, bass dulcimer, vocals (1978–86); Tina Lisa Jones, vocals, banjo, concertina, mandolin, dulcimer (1977–80); Stuart Light, harmony vocals, fiddle, bass, dulcimer, guitar, pedal steel (1977–80; Lorraine Duisit, mandola, bowed psaltery, harp, guitar, vocals (1980–88); Freyda Epstein, violins, viola, vocals (1981–88); Michael Aharon, piano, cello, bass, synthesizer (1986–88); Cheryl Hurwitz, violin, electric violin, vocals (1988–91); Bob Read, saxophones, clarinet, flute, piano, synthesizers, percussion, vocals (1988–94); Tim Valdes, percussion, drums, mandolin (1988–91); Anne Louise White, keyboards, vocals (1988–90); Martha Sandefer, guitar, vocals (1990–present); Cecil Hooker, violin, vocals (1991–present).

Beginning in 1975 and starting with hammered dulcimer as a lead instrument, Trapezoid created a unique musical tapestry of southern folk music, mountain ballads, jazz, swing, and Irish songs. Their albums were an eclectic mix of Scott Joplin rags, bluegrass instrumentals, Mozart preludes, O'Carolan planxtys, songs by Si Kahn, Richard Fariña and Jay Unger, and original pieces by Lorraine Duisit and Paul Reisler. Trapezoid initially formed around hammered dulcimer players Sam Rizzetta and Reisler. Their first album focused on old-time tunes using the dulcimer—sometimes a dulcimer quartet—as the lead instrument. Rizzetta left after the first few albums, but Reisler persisted, enlisting classically trained musicians to form a group that evolved from a straight-ahead old-time band in the 1970s to—by the time of their last album in 1990—a New Age group complete with synths, reeds, keyboards, and percussion. Their eight albums chronicle the evolution of the group—from the decidedly traditional direction of Trapezoid to the innovative fusion of their most recent album of all Reisler originals, Remembered Ways. Their 20th anniversary collection, Long Time down This Road charts the long and somewhat twisted path that their music has followed. The music can be roughly divided into three eras: 1. the traditional from 1975–79 (Trapezoid, Three Forks of Cheat), 2. the fusion of the traditional with the contemporary from 1980–88 that featured the haunting vocals of Lorraine Duisit and Freyda Epstein (Now and Then, Another Country, Cool of the Day), and 3. the original contemporary acoustic music of the band from 1988 on that features the original songs and instrumentals of Reisler (Moon Run, Remembered Ways). It is music that exists in some new territory—outside the borders of pop, classical, folk, new age, or world music; but in a place where all these musics find they speak the same language. In addition to their own albums, they have been featured on recordings of many other artists, including Holly Near, Si Kahn, John McCutcheon, and Sally Rogers. Reisler continues to lead the group that includes Cecil Hooker on violin and vocals and Marta Sandefer on vocals, bass, and guitar and he writes almost all of the Trapezoid material. He also tours solo and has just completed an original instrumental album with former "Zoid" and Bruce Hornsby Band saxman Bob Read. Reisler also has numerous producer credits, including a number of John McCutcheon's albums. He's currently composing a children's symphony with Tom Paxton and an album of original songs with Charles John Quarto. Watch out for Birth of a River by Reisler and Read, an album of original instrumentals by these "Zoids." Read now plays in the Bruce Hornsby Band. Some of the group's albums may be hard to find, but all are available with the exception of Trapezoid (1975) from: Trapezoid, P.O. Box 38, Washington, Virginia 22747-0038 (zoid@pobox.com).

what to buy: Long Time down This Road ♪♪♪♪ (Azure, 1995, prod. Paul Reisler) is the band's retrospective recording, and includes cuts that span their 20-year history as well as containing four previously unreleased cuts. Trapezoid: Another Country ♪♪♪ (Flying Fish, 1981, prod. Trapezoid, Bill McElroy) featured Reisler's hammered dulcimer weaving heavily syncopated melodies. This version of the band was, in many peoples eyes, perhaps the best version of the band and they had a nice run in the 1980s playing a combination of traditional material and Duisit originals. While they perform spirited versions of traditional folk songs, "Wagoner's Lad" and "Little Billy Wilson," they show their flexibility on songs ranging from Al Jolson's "Back in Your Own Backyard" to Si Kahn's "Sailing Alone" and Richard Fariña's "Another Country" and "The Quiet Joys of Brotherhood." Duisit shows her songwriting skills with her original tunes including the African-like "Kora," based on Bai Konte's "Baa To Toto," "Indian Paintbrush," "Dragontree," and "Pt. Reyes." Cool of the Day ♪♪♪ (Sugar Hill, 1985, prod. Paul Reisler, Russ Miller) was a bit more ambitious in terms of production and clearly signaled the new direction the group was taking, adding percussion, saxophone, synthesizer, and piano to the mix.

the rest:
Three Forks of Cheat ♪♪♪ (Rounder, 1978)
Now and Then ♪♪♪ (Rounder, 1980)
(With Holly Near) Watch Out! ♪♪♪ (Redwood, 1989)
Moon Run ♪♪♪ (Narada, 1990)

worth searching for: Trapezoid: Hammered Dulcimer String Band ♪♪♪ (Skyline, 1975)was the original album and it's long out of print but worth searching out if only for the novelty of the four dulcimer combination. You may also find Trapezoid represented on several of the more popular Narada collections of new age material.

influences:
◀◀ Richard Fariña, Jean Ritchie, Turlough O'Carolan ▶▶ John McCutcheon, Sally Rogers, Lorraine Hammond

see also: Sam Rizzetta, Tom Espinola & Lorraine Duisit

Craig Harris and Neal Walters

Artie Traum

Born 1943, in New York City, NY.

Artie Traum was led by his older brother, Happy, into folk music and blues. But he's shown continually that he's no mere follower. A sought-after session guitarist, Traum accompanied such folk and rock performers as Judy Roderick, Jean Ritchie, and John Sebastian during the 1960s. Traum made his recording debut in 1964 with the True Endeavor Jug Band, a folk-ragtime band featuring Sam Charters and Danny Kalb. He later performed with the Danny Kalb Quartet, a blues-rock group that evolved into the Blues Project. In addition to performing with such short-lived bands as the Children of Paradise and Bear, Traum composed and recorded the score for a film, Greetings. He collaborated with his older brother on an instructional book, Rock Guitar during the early 1970s. After moving to Woodstock, New York, during the late 1960s, Traum joined his brother in an acoustic duo and in a folk supergroup, the Woodstock Mountain Revue. Although the two brothers continue to work together, Traum has maintained his own separate identity. In addition to producing albums for Priscilla Herdman and Livingston Taylor and co-hosting a National Public Radio show, Bring It on Home, for four years, he's released an impressive string of atmospheric, new age-meets-folk instrumental albums that showcase his musical skills.

what to buy: Traum's early solo albums hinted of his mastery of the acoustic guitar. But the world took notice when his all-instrumental recording, Letters from Joubee ♪♪♪♪ (Shanachie, 1994, prod. Scott Petito), spent six weeks in the top position of the Gavin Report. Accompanied by such musicians as Tony Levin (bass), Cyndi Cashdollar (Dobro and electric lapsteel), and David Torn (electric guitar and guitar loops), Traum creates an impressionistic sound-painting with his fluid and imaginative acoustic guitar melodies.

what to buy next: After two albums recorded with Nashville-based singer-songwriter Pat Alger, Traum launched his journey into instrumental music with Cayenne: Spicy New Music for Acoustic Guitar ♪♪♪♪ (Rounder, 1986). His sensitive compositions and virtuoso guitar playing, backed by Woodstock musicians including Jay Unger, Lance Hoppen, Robbie Dupree, Johnny Average, Rick Derringer, Cyndi Cashdollar, and his brother, Happy, testify to the expressive strengths of acoustic music.

the rest:
Life on Earth ♪♪♪ (Rounder, 1974)
From the Heart ♪♪♪½ (Rounder, 1980)
The View from Here ♪♪♪♪ (Shanachie, 1996)

influences:
◀◀ Brownie McGhee, Pat Alger, Will Ackerman, Alex de Grassi ▶▶ Priscilla Herdman, Livingston Taylor

Craig Harris

Happy Traum /Happy & Artie Traum

Born 1939, in New York City, NY.

Happy and Artie Traum were one of the most influential folk duos of the late 1960s, inspiring Dylan and the Band with their rustic mixture of traditional folk music, bluegrass, ragtime, and acoustic blues. The oldest of the two Greenwich Village-raised brothers, Happy Traum made his recording debut on the 1963 album, Broadsides, recorded during a historic session at Folkways studios. In addition to songs by Phil Ochs, Pete Seeger, Peter LaFarge, and the Freedom Singers, the album featured several tracks by Bob Dylan, using the pseudonym "Blind Boy Grunt." In addition to performing the world premier of Dylan's song, "Blowin' in the Wind," with his band, the New World Singers, Traum sang a duet with Dylan on "I Will Not Go down under the Ground." Dylan repaid the debt by writing the liner notes for the New World Singers' self-titled debut album. Traum's knowledge of music theory and guitar playing has been expressed in a variety of mediums. He published the first of more than a dozen instructional books, Fingerpicking Styles for Guitar, in 1965 and served as editor of Sing Out! from 1967 to 1970. During the late 1960s, the Traum brothers moved to Woodstock, New York, and formed a duo. Their first two albums, 1970's Happy and Artie Traum and 1971's Double Back, were released by Capitol. Their third album, Hard Times in the Country, featured liner notes by poet Allen Ginsberg. Happy Traum continued to collaborate with a wide spectrum of influential musicians. In 1971 he played guitar, bass, banjo, and sang harmony on several tracks recorded for Dylan's album Greatest Hits, Volume II. The following year, the two brothers gathered musical friends from the Woodstock area, including Maria Muldaur, John Herald, Eric Kaz, Jim Rooney, and Bill Keith, and recorded an impromptu album, Mud Acres—Music among Friends, as the Woodstock Mountain Revue. They expanded the format to include Eric Andersen, Rory Block, John Sebastian, and Paul Butterfield for a follow-up recording, More Music from Mud Acres. Traum's solo albums have included an impressive debut, Relax Your Mind in 1985 and a 1988 collection, Buckets of Songs, that included tracks from his first two solo sessions during the 1970s. He has continued to periodically perform and record with his younger brother. They served as hosts of a "live performance" radio show broadcast for four years by National Public Radio. A two-CD set, released by Sony, includes performances from the show by Rick Danko, David Wilcox, Rory Block, and many others. Their most recent duo album, Test of Time, was released in 1994. With his wife Jane, Traum began Homespun Tapes in 1967. In the two decades since, the company has become the leading distributor of recorded music instruction taught by top-notch instrumentalists including Doc Watson, Richard Thompson, Béla Fleck, Tony Rice, Dan Crary, Russ Barenberg, and David Grisman.

what to buy: Happy and Artie Traum's first duo album in two decades, The Test of Time ♪♪♪♪½ (Roaring Stream, 1993, prod. Scott Petito, Artie Traum), picks up where they left off. Accompanied by fellow Woodstock musicians including Rick Danko, John Sebastian, Diane Ziegler, Béla Fleck, and Howard Levy, the Traums serve up a smorgasbord of musical influences. In addition to performing gutsy, acoustic, versions of Dylan's "It Takes a Lot to Laugh, It Takes a Train to Cry," Tom Waits's "The Heart of Saturday Night," and Rex Fowler's "The Road to Ba Vinai," the brothers show their distinct talents. Happy pays homage to his roots with a skillful rendition of Brownie McGhee's "Betty and Dupree" and a re-recording of "Mississippi John," his early-70s tribute to ragtime/blues guitarist Mississippi John Hurt. His younger brother's instrumental wizardry and songwriting is showcased by five original tunes including the title track, which he wrote with Nashville songwriter Pat Alger.

what to buy next: Buckets of Rain ♪♪♪♪ (Shanachie, 1988, prod. Stefan Grossman, Happy Traum, Andy Robinson) samples the two solo albums that Traum recorded on the Kicking Mule label and reveals a true mastery of traditional folk music and blues. Although none of the songs are originals, he injects his musical persona into tunes ranging from Charlie Patton's "Dark Road Blues" and Leadbelly's "When I Was a Cowboy" and "Relax Your Mind" to Woody Guthrie's "Gypsy Davey" and Bob Dylan's "Buckets of Rain." Arrangements remain sparse and intimate. In addition to five songs that he plays solo, Traum performs duets with mandolinist Alger ("Relax Your Mind"), cellist Judi Vogel ("American Stranger"), and vocalist Betty McDonald ("Delia's Gone").

the rest:
Happy Traum ♪♪♪½ (Kicking Mule, 1975)
Relax Your Mind ♪♪♪½ (Kicking Mule, 1976)
Bright Morning Stars ♪♪♪½ (Greenhays, 1980) worth searching for: Traum's first recording, Broadsides (Folkways, 1963), remains a treasured artifact of early-1960s folk music. The two-CD set, Bring It on Home (Sony/Legacy, 1994), was recorded during the four years that the Traums hosted their National Public radio show. In addition to tracks by the brothers and friends, the collection includes performances by Maria Muldaur, John Herald, Rick Danko, John Hall, Amy and Leslie, Livingston Taylor, John Sebastian, Rory Block, and Jorma Kaukonen.

solo outings:
Happy and Artie Traum:
Happy and Artie Traum ♪♪♪ (Capitol, 1970)
Doubleback ♪♪♪ (Capitol, 1971)
Hard Times in the Country ♪♪♪½ (Rounder, 1975)

influences:
◀◀ Brownie McGhee, Bob Dylan, Jimmie Rodgers, Mississippi John Hurt

▶▶ Bob Dylan, the Band, the Eagles

see also: Artie Traum, Woodstock Mountain Revue

Craig Harris

Mary Travers

See: Peter, Paul & Mary

Merle Travis

Born November 29, 1917, in Rosewood, KY. Died October 20, 1983, in Tahlequah, OK.

Beginning his career shortly after World War II, guitarist Merle Travis wrote, recorded, and had covered some of the most enduring (and sometimes amusing) songs in the country collection, among them "Smoke, Smoke, Smoke That Cigarette," "So Round, So Firm, So Fully Packed," and "Dark as a Dungeon." His most memorable tune, "16 Tons," became a huge hit for Tennessee Ernie Ford and perhaps one of the biggest country standards of the century. That would be enough for anyone's resume, but Travis's ultimate claim to fame is his singular guitar fingerpicking style, known appropriately as "Travis picking," which he developed with a nod to Everly Brothers' pop Ike Everly and which has been used far and wide by folkies and rockers alike for the past 50 years.

what to buy: Best of Merle Travis ♪♪♪♪ (Rhino, 1990, prod. James Austin) is a 20-year collection of prime Travis, featuring the above-mentioned gems in addition to other blatantly misogynist and totally memorable entries like "I Like My Chicken Fryin' Size," "Fat Gal," and "Divorce Me C.O.D."

what to buy next: Folk Songs of the Hills ♪♪♪♪ (Capitol, 1947/1996, prod. Lee Gillette) is the most worthwhile set of Travis songs he recorded during the late 1940s, including his popular blue-collar ode "I Am a Pilgrim" plus his own rendition of the Hall of Famer, "16 Tons."

the rest:
(With Joe Maphis) Country Guitar Giants ♪♪♪ (CMH, 1979)
Guitar Standards ♪♪♪ (CMH, 1980)
Light Singin' and Heavy Pickin' ♪♪♪½ (CMH, 1980)
Travis Pickin' ♪♪♪ (CMH, 1981)
(With Mac Wiseman) Clayton McMichen Story ♪♪♪ (CMH, 1982)
(With Grandpa Jones) Merle and Grandpa's Farm and Home ♪♪♪½ (CMH, 1985)
Rough, Rowdy, and Blue ♪♪♪ (CMH, 1986)
Merle Travis Story ♪♪♪ (CMH, 1989)
Guitar Rags and a Too Far Past ♪♪♪♪ (Bear Family, 1992)
Guitar Retrospective ♪♪♪½ (CMH, 1995) Walkin' the Strings ♪♪♪ (Capitol, 1996)

influences:
◀◀ Ike Everly

▶▶ Everly Brothers, Chet Atkins, Bob Dylan, David Bromberg

David Simons

Trian

Formed 1987, in Baltimore, MD.

Billy McComiskey (born in 1951, in Brooklyn, NY), button accordion, concertina; Daithi Sproule (born 1950, in Derry, Northern Ireland), guitar, vocals; Liz Carroll (born in 1956, in Chicago, IL), fiddle.

Trian easily ranks among the best traditional Irish groups in America. Indeed, only top acts from abroad, like Altan, even come close to their superb musicianship. All of the members of Trian were renowned musicians before forming the group, and, as with many groups on the North American Irish music scene, they had played together in various formations for years before coming together as a touring ensemble. Raised in an exclusively Irish neighborhood, Billy McComiskey was exposed to the country's music very early in his life. He began to play accordion during the 1960s, influenced first by Bobby Gardiner and then by the great Sean McGlynn. In 1970 he came in second in the all-Ireland accordion championships, becoming the first American to place so highly. In 1975, having moved to Baltimore, he formed the Irish Tradition, in its day the most successful traditional Irish music group in the Baltimore/Washington area. After the Irish Tradition went their separate ways in the 1980s, McComiskey remained active in the traditional music scene. He reckons it was about 1987 when he formed Trian with Liz Carroll and Daithi Sproule. Carroll took up the fiddle when she was nine years old, and honed her technique in sessions with Chicago musicians like Johnny McGreevy, Joe Shannon, and Jimmy Keane. In 1974 she won the junior all-Ireland fiddle championship, and returned the following year to capture the senior title. She has been a member of some of the outstanding lineups of traditional Irish music in America, including the Green Fields of America and Cherish the Ladies. She is currently known not only as a member of Trian, but also as a solo fiddler and a composer of magnificent tunes. Daithi Sproule's early musical influences were mostly from American and British folk artists, people like Joan Baez and Bert Jansch. He combined this love of folk music with his strong interest in the Irish language when he formed the Irish-language singing group Skara Brae with Triona, Mairead, and Micheal Ó Domhnaill in the early 1970s. When Skara Brae broke up, Triona and Micheal Ó Domhnaill went on to found the Bothy Band, while Sproule went south to Dublin. During the late 1970s, Sproule immigrated to the United States, where he quickly became part of the nationwide Irish music community by joining forces with fiddler James Kelly and accordionist Paddy O'Brien. This trio appeared regularly and recorded two LPs, cementing Sproule's reputation as one of the foremost guitar accompanists and bilingual singers in the Irish music world. Sproule is currently a member of two of the top Irish traditional bands in existence, Trian and Altan, and is in heavy demand as an accompanist, arranger, and solo artist. The trio of McComiskey, Carroll, and Sproule did not immediately settle on the name Trian as a moniker for the band. They first used the name as the title of their 1991 debut album, which is credited to them under their individual names. In the next few years, as their reputation grew and demand for them increased, they settled on Trian as a name for the band.

what to buy: Trian ♪♪♪♪♪ (Flying Fish, 1991, prod. Liz Carroll, Daithi Sproule, Billy McComiskey) is truly one of the landmark Irish CDs of the 1990s. Most of the album is made up of dance tunes played by all three musicians. In these trio arrangements, McComiskey's accordion and Carroll's fiddle weave in and out of one another effortlessly, sounding like one instrument, while Sproule's guitar keeps the rhythm with interesting and precise picking. Listen closely to McComiskey's accordion and you'll hear ornamentation you never would have thought possible from 10 fingers. Carroll's fiddle playing is equally impressive, and Sproule's guitar makes sure your feet keep tapping. In addition, McComiskey and Carroll each give us a few solo tunes to prove their mettle, and leave the listener in awe, if not in tears. Sproule's lovely, shrill singing voice treats four songs, two in Gaelic and two in English; of these, Peggy Seeger's "My Dearest Dear" stands out as the best.

what to buy next: Trian II ♪♪♪♪½ (Green Linnet, 1995, prod. Billy McComiskey, Liz Carroll, Daithi Sproule), the unimaginatively named follow-up to Trian, is another brilliant recording featuring McComiskey and Carroll's tight melodic duets accompanied by Sproule's bright, quick guitar work. A bit less flashy and ferocious, more subtle and controlled, than its predecessor, it takes their collaborations a step further, featuring more original compositions and more challenging arrangements. Sproule's songs on this outing include his melodic setting of the old ballad "The Death of Queen Jane," which he had given to Micheal Ó Dhomhnaill in the early 1970s; Ó Dhomhnaill recorded it with the Bothy Band, but this is the first time Sproule himself did so.

solo outings:

Liz Carroll:

A Friend Indeed ♪♪♪ (Shanachie, 1978)

Liz Carroll ♪♪♪♪ (Green Linnet, 1988)

Billy McComiskey:

Makin' the Rounds ♪♪♪♪ (Green Linnet, 1981)

Daithi Sproule:

A Heart Made of Glass ♪♪♪♪½ (Green Linnet, 1993)

influences:

Skara Brae, Irish Tradition, Green Fields of America, Sean McGlynn, Johnny McGreevy, John Healy

Altan, Cherish the Ladies

see also: Liz Carroll, Billy McComiskey

Stephen Winick

Ed Trickett

See: Bok, Muir & Trickett

Trillium

See: Margaret MacArthur

Tony Trischka

Born January 16, 1949, in Syracuse, NY.

An innovative and influential banjo player, Tony Trischka was one of the first to play jazz on the five-string. In addition to working as a solo artist, he's played with Country Cooking, Breakfast Special, Skyline, the Big Dogs, and Psychograss, and is currently putting together the Tony Trischka Band. Trischka was Béla Fleck's first banjo instructor.

what to buy: Dust on the Needle ♪♪♪♪½ (Rounder, 1987), a collection of the best from Trischka's first six albums, documents his early experiments with jazz fusion.

what to buy next: Virtually a history of the banjo, World Turning ♪♪♪♪ (Rounder, 1993) traces the instrument's developments from its roots in Africa up though its most modern stylings.

the rest:
Banjoland ♪♪♪ (Rounder, 1978)
Robot Plane Flys over Arkansas ♪♪♪ (Rounder, 1982)
Hill Country ♪♪♪ (Rounder, 1985)
(With Tom Adams and Tony Furtado) Rounder Banjo Extravaganza ♪♪♪♪ (Rounder, 1988)
(With Béla Fleck) Solo Banjo Works ♪♪♪♪ (Rounder, 1992)
(With Joe Ayers, Clarke Buehling, Bob Carlin, Rob Flesher, and Bob Winans) Minstrel Banjo Style (Rounder, 1994)
Glory Shone Around: A Christmas Carol ♪♪♪ (Rounder, 1995)

worth searching for: Fiddle Tunes for Banjo (Rounder, 1981) features some interesting picking with fellow banjoists Bill Keith and Béla Fleck.

influences:
◀◀ Bill Keith, Country Cooking
▶▶ Béla Fleck, Tony Furtado, Alison Brown

Douglas Fulmer

Trout Fishing in America

Formed 1979, in Houston, TX.

Ezra Idlet, guitar, vocals; Keith Grimwood, bass, vocals.

If you've never heard of Trout Fishing in America, here are the fundamental things to know, in order: (1) They're a kids' band. (2) They're not just a kids' band. Ezra Idlet and Keith Grimwood met when the Houston Symphony went on strike, forcing Grimwood out of a job. He joined the band St. Elmo's Fire, of which Idlet was a member, and the two were thrown together as the ones who drove the equipment truck. When St. Elmo's Fire burned out, Trout Fishing in America was born. The duo are best known as children's performers. Their three children's albums get frequent, and deserved, airplay on radio geared to children. Less known to their fans' parents are their adult-oriented albums, which contain the same smart wit and friendly energy found in the kids' fare.

what to buy: Kids of all ages will enjoy Mine! ♪♪♪♪ (Trout, 1994, prod. Carl Finch). A warning about this album: It contains a counting song called "18 Wheels on a Big Rig" that's sort of the preschool version of "99 Bottles of Beer." It's hopelessly addictive. Trout Fishing in America has helpfully given the phone number of the composer, Heywood Banks, in the liner notes (with the warning "Ask your parents first!"). My guess is that Banks has gotten lots of calls from addled parents in the past four years. For the other side of the band, try Over the Limit ♪♪♪♪ (Trout, 1992, prod. Carl Finch), an excellent pop album with bluesy touches. The standout track is "Dead Egyptian Blues," which feels like a collaboration between Louis Prima and Randy Newman.

the rest:
Big Trouble ♪♪♪ (Trout, 1991)
Who Are These People? ♪♪♪ (Trout, 1994)
Reel Life ♪♪♪ (Trout, 1996)
My World ♪♪♪½ (Trout, 1997)

influences:
◀◀ Shel Silverstein, Everly Brothers, Randy Newman
▶▶ Electric Bonsai Band

Pamela Murray Winters

Susan Trump

Born January 13, 1951, in Columbus, OH.

Susan Trump grew up outside of Washington, D.C., before moving to New York, where she now resides. She spent summers at her grandparents' home in Brinkhaven, Ohio (population less than 100, including the dogs), and taught herself to play the guitar on their front porch swing. Music was important to her family as both parents played violin in the community orchestra. Saturday nights often were spent singing around the piano.

This background perhaps explains Trump's ability to link the pastoral, tranquil images of traditional rural America to our contemporary life. Her songs touch the heart, recall the past, and inspire the times ahead. Her sense of humor always adds a fresh touch to her performances, combined with her outstanding artistry on the guitar, banjo, fretless banjo, and mountain dulcimer. Trump is also a much sought-after instructor and performer whose work has included residencies at Kentucky Music Week in Louisville; Appalachian State University at Boone, North Carolina; Artpark, Sagamore Institute, and the Chautauqua Institution in New York; Pinewoods Folk Music Camp in Massachusetts; and festivals nationwide. She has won awards in both banjo and mountain-dulcimer competitions. Her interest in traditional folk culture was stimulated by leading youth groups to work with disabled miners in West Virginia. Since then she has conducted extensive studies of Appalachian life, arts, music, and instrument makers. Her love of Anglo-American music has taken her from the mountains of Southern Appalachia and the Adirondacks to the British Isles, where she has collected and performed traditional music. Trump also enjoys sharing her music with children. She has been associated with the New York Foundation for the Arts since 1986, and has been awarded several "Meet the Composer" grants for songwriting from the National Endowment for the Arts.

what to buy: Tree of Life ♪♪♪½ (Susan Trump Music, 1994, prod. Susan Trump) features several originals as well as covers of songs by Dolly Parton, Kate Wolf, Bill Staines, T.R. Ritchie, Ewan MacColl, Willie Nelson, and John Stewart. She has a clean fingerpicking guitar style that adds harmony and counter-melodies to vocals. She obviously views her instruments as singing partners and her arrangements reflect her careful approach. She "like(s) to sing poignant songs about people's lives, especially those with a rural flavor. The most important aspect of a song is the message. I want people to be moved by the songs I sing; have something to think about, and be inspired and hopeful about life." Trump is also responsible for a nice compilation, Masters of the Mountain Dulcimer ♪♪♪♪ (Susan Trump Music, 1997, prod. Susan Trump), which features 19 of the country's best dulcimer players, including one cut by Trump.

what to buy next: What the Hill People Say ♪♪♪½ (Susan Trump Music, 1989, prod. Susan Trump), her first solo album, is still available and is also nicely done.

influences:

⏪ Jean Ritchie, Maddie MacNeil

⏩ Julie Davis, Gail Rundlett

Neal Walters

Ernest Tubb

Born Ernest Dale Tubb, February 9, 1914, in Crisp, TX. Died September 6, 1984.

Ernest Tubb quite simply defined the term "hard-core honky-tonk." With his paint-peeling voice, his willingness to help other aspiring entertainers, and his inescapable connection to the Jimmie Rodgers tradition, "E.T." cut a wide path across country music over his 50-year career. Tubb worked on radio in both San Antonio and Fort Worth during the mid-1930s and began his recording career with Bluebird in 1936. A visit with the widow of Jimmie Rodgers in 1935 was an important one for Tubb. Carrie Rodgers was so taken with E.T.'s devotion to her late husband's music that she helped secure a pair of recording dates with RCA for him. That year also brought him his first son, Justin, who would later have a successful career of his own in country music. Next came a move to Decca in 1940, but little excitement was generated by initial releases, until the recording of his best-known tune, "Walkin' the Floor over You." Tubb soon appeared in the film Hollywood Barn Dance, and made his way to Nashville in 1942 to appear on the Grand Ole Opry, earning three encores during his debut. Tubb's Texas Troubadours took the stage with him in 1943, by which time he was recording hit after hit. Soon thereafter came the debut of the Midnight Jamboree, the radio show that followed the Opry on WSM, and which originated from the recently opened Ernest Tubb Record Shop. Each year for the next decade there were at least two and, more often than not, several E.T. records in the Top 10, including duets with the Andrews Sisters and comic records with Decca labelmate Red Foley. Later collaborations with the Wilburn Brothers and Loretta Lynn also scored hits for Tubb. During the late 1950s Tubb was hitting the charts less frequently, and hitting the bottle more. The definitive Tubb biography, Ernest Tubb: The Texas Troubadour, by country music historian Ronnie Pugh, contains several lively stories of Tubb's exploits, including a celebrated incident during which he brandished a .357 magnum and fired several rounds, luckily in no one's particular direction, in the lobby at WSM's downtown Nashville studio. 1963's "Thanks a Lot" was Tubb's final entry in the Top 10, although he continued to tour and record over the next two decades. Former Texas Troubadours who went on to successful solo careers include Jack Greene and Cal Smith. Also worth noting is Tubb's "Singing Bus Driver" during the early 1960s, Johnny Wiggins, who is the father of Mercury artist Audrey Wiggins. Tubb helped Audrey make her debut on the Grand Ole Opry at 12 years old, a full four years before meeting the age requirement of 16. Along the way Tubb was an ally to countless artists either seeking their big break, or just a little advice. In 1984 he died in a Nashville hospital, his legend and his legacy by that time well documented and well preserved.

what to buy: For the most complete collection, the best bet is Country Music Hall of Fame ♪♪♪♪♪ (1991, MCA, prod. Country Music Foundation).

what to buy next: Ernest Tubb—The Last Sessions; All-Time Greatest Hits ♪♪♪♪ (First Generation, 1997, prod. Pete Drake) is a two-CD set that collects the same material found on the Step One and Laserlight sets recorded during the late '70s, but with one major difference: it's ALL Ernest, no overdubs by "special guests." They're not the original versions, but they're not bad, considering they were done so late in his life.

the rest:

Greatest Hits ♪♪♪½ (MCA, 1987) (cassette only) Ernest Tubb and Friends: Collection ♪♪♪ (Step One, 1989)
The Legendary Ernest Tubb and Friends ♪♪½ (Laserlight, 1992)
Rainbow at Midnight ♪♪ (Laserlight, 1992)
Soldier's Last Letter ♪♪ (Laserlight, 1992)
It's Been So Long, Darling ♪♪ (Laserlight, 1992)
Walking the Floor over You ♪♪ (Laserlight, 1992)
Waltz across Texas ♪♪ (Laserlight, 1992)
Retropsective, Volume I ♪♪♪½ (MCA, 1994)
Retrospective, Volume II ♪♪♪½ (MCA Special Products, 1994)
Best of Ernest Tubb ♪♪½ (Curb, 1996)
Family Bible ♪♪♪½ (MCA Special Products, 1996)

worth searching for: The three collections Let's Say Goodbye like We Said Hello ♪♪♪♪ (Bear Family, 1994), The Yellow Rose of Texas ♪♪♪♪ (Bear Family, 1993), and Walking the Floor over You ♪♪♪♪ (Bear Family), with more than a dozen discs between them, are much more than anyone, save for completists and researchers, would ever need. But they do well at telling most of the Ernest Tubb story on record, for sure. For a peek into an important aspect of Tubb's career, that of traveling Troubadour, you'll need to be on the lookout for the recently deleted Live 1965 ♪♪♪♪½ (1989, Rhino).

influences:

◀◀ Jimmie Rodgers, Hank Thompson

▶▶ Webb Pierce, Hank Snow

Stephen L. Betts

moses asch (1905–1986)

Moses Asch profoundly changed the way traditional music was viewed outside of ethnomusicology circles. Starting out installing recording equipment in radio stations, Asch later combined his passions for audio technology and exotic music to run a series of record labels. Asch Records, which began in 1939, was the home of influential recordings by Lead Belly, Josh White, Woody Guthrie, Burl Ives, and Pete Seeger, among many others. Asch's subsequent label, Folkways, started in 1948, and ultimately released nearly 2,200 recordings during his lifetime, including traditional American music, contemporary recordings, and a dazzling variety of ethnic recordings spanning the globe. Folkways also drew on Asch's vast collection of vintage 78 RPM records, many of which he stockpiled during the depression. In a policy counter to those of any other recording company, Asch always kept each of the company's catalog selections in print, even if it only sold a few dozen copies. Upon Asch's death, Folkways was inherited by the Smithsonian Institution where, under the leadership of Anthony Seeger, the label has been systematically reissuing the Folkways catalog on compact disc, augmenting the original releases (all of which remained available on cassette) with other recordings drawn from Asch's prodigious vaults and newly recorded selections.

Michael Parrish

Leslie Tucker

Born in VA.

Though she began playing guitar in bands around age 11, Leslie Tucker didn't pursue a music career vigorously until much later—after she'd spent 14 years being a homemaker and raising four children. She began writing and performing again after she became a single parent, and those experiences factor strongly into her music. Signed to banjo player's Alison Brown's eclectic Compass during the mid-'90s, she made an impressive critical splash with her debut, In This Room.

what's available: On In This Room ♪♪♪♪ (Compass, 1995, prod. Garry West), Tucker shows a gentle, accessible style of songwriting that's complemented by the warmth of her voice and the talents of players like mandolin player Mike Marshall, fiddler Stuart Duncan, and cellist John Catchings. Songs like "True Gentleman" and "KB's Garden" may be romantic, but they're not romanticized; Tucker's music, as singer/songwriter Pierce Pettis has said, has an honesty that "can't be made up—it has to be lived."

influences:

◀◀ Linda Ronstadt, Kate Wolf, Maura O'Connell, Clive Gregson & Christine Collister

▶▶ Judith Edelman

Brian Mansfield

Ian Tyson

Born Ian Dawson Tyson, September 25, 1932, in Victoria, British Columbia, Canada.

Ian Tyson is an iconoclast in contemporary country music, one of the few artists still mining the fertile but now overlooked ground of Western music and culture. He's a much bigger star in his native Canada than in the United States, but his influence over the small but growing legion of Western music makers is undeniable. Tyson is a former rodeo rider who took up the guitar while hospitalized with an injury. He got caught up in Toronto's burgeoning folk music scene during the 1960s, where he met his first wife and singing partner Sylvia Fricker. Ian and Sylvia became one of Canada's most popular and best-selling folk acts, thanks to such signature songs as his "Four Strong Winds" and her "You Were on My Mind." Their success opened doors for fellow Canadians Gordon Lightfoot, Joni Mitchell, and Neil Young, and they presaged the neo-traditionalism of the late 1980s and early 1990s with their group Great Speckled Bird, named for the Roy Acuff classic. They released a dozen albums together and hosted their own popular TV show in Canada before separating during the mid-1970s. Tyson returned to western Canada, where he took up ranching and started writing songs about the Western culture he soaked up as an avid reader of Will James's adventures and an admirer of nineteenth-century painter Charlie Russell. Tyson has cut his own swath in modern country and western, turning a grass roots following into a cottage industry.

what to buy: The album that established Tyson's unique voice was Cowboyography ♪♪♪♪ (Vanguard, 1987, prod. Adrian Chornowol), sort of a manifesto for the modern cowboy. The final installment of a so-called "cowboy trilogy," this understated masterpiece put into words and music the honesty, the simplicity, the romanticism, and the magic that was and still is part of the West today.

what to buy next: All the Good 'Uns ♪♪♪½ (Vanguard, 1996, prod. various) isn't as complete a retrospective as it could be. There's nothing from the Ian and Sylvia days, and, perhaps for contractual reasons, the gems from his self-titled 1984 Columbia album aren't here either. But what is included on this 19-song collection of audience and artist favorites represents a formidable body of work in a style and voice that is unique among today's assembly-line country stars. With such songs as "M.C. Horses," "Navajo Rug," "Will James," and " 'Til the Circle Is Through" (with Suzy Bogguss), Tyson casts a sentimental eye to the past and a wary glance to the future of a dying culture.

the rest:

I Outgrew the Wagon ♪♪♪½ (Vanguard, 1989)
And Stood There Amazed ♪♪½ (Vanguard, 1991)
Old Corrals and Sagebrush (1983–84) ♪♪♪ (Vanguard, 1993) 18 Inches of Rain ♪♪♪ (Vanguard, 1994) worth searching for: All of Tyson's solo catalog is available in Canada, including complete versions of Old Corrals and Sagebrush ♪♪½ (Stony Plain, 1983, prod. Ian Tyson) and Ian Tyson ♪♪♪ (Stony Plain, 1984, prod. Ian Tyson). Tyson's hard-core fans can trace the roots of his sound on two compilations of Ian and Sylvia songs, Greatest Hits Volume I ♪♪♪ (Vanguard, 1970, prod. various) and Greatest Hits Volume II ♪♪½ (Vanguard, 1971, prod. various).

influences:

◀◀ Gene Autry, Roy Acuff, Marty Robbins

▶▶ Chris LeDoux, Michael Martin Murphey

see also: Ian & Sylvia

Doug Pullen

U

Uncle Bonsai

See: Electric Bonsai Band

Uncle Tupelo /Wilco /Son Volt

Formed 1987, in Belleville, IL.

Jeff Tweedy, vocals, guitar, bass; Jay Farrar, vocals, guitar, banjo, harmonica, mandolin; Mike Heidorn, drums (1987–92); Bill Belzer, drums (1992); Ken Coomer, drums (1992–94); John Stirratt, bass; Max Johnston, banjo, fiddle, mandolin, steel guitar (1993–94).

Like many important bands before them, Uncle Tupelo's reputation spread fastest after its breakup, and its influence far outdistanced the number of units sold—to the point where they are now seen by some as the Rosetta stone of the alternative/roots/country movement sometimes called No Depression after the title of the group's debut album (which itself was named for an A.P. Carter song). Rising from the factory- and farm-belt community of Belleville, Illinois (near St. Louis) during 1987, the band in its initial incarnation—Jeff Tweedy, Jay Farrar, and Mike Heidorn—drew equally on hardcore country and hardcore punk. Songwriting chores were split between Farrar, whose tunes are oblique and wistful, and Tweedy, who speaks more directly but is no less profound in describing the pair's favorite subject, small-town ennui. Heidorn left the band, and new members Ken Coomer, John Stirratt, and Max Johnston signed on. But just as the new lineup was gaining steam, Farrar left the band to form Son Volt, while Tweedy soldiered on with the rest of Tupelo, switching its name to Wilco. Son Volt, which also includes brothers Jim and Dave Boquist and original Tupelo drummer Heidorn, continues to survey Farrar's trademark brand of alt. country, switching back and forth between blistering rockers and bittersweet acoustic numbers. Wilco, which added guitarist Jay Bennett and cast off multi-instrumentalist Johnston after its first album, at first continued in the vein of pleasant, mid-tempo country rock, only to switch gears on their sprawling second album, which aspires to the range and gritty feel of the Rolling Stones' Exile on Main Street.

what to buy: Anodyne ♪♪♪♪½ (Sire/Reprise, 1993, prod. Brian Paulson) is Uncle Tupelo's swan song but also its finest hour. Alternating between yearning, hard-bitten country-folk ("Slate," "Anodyne") and careening rockers ("The Long Cut," "We've Been Had"), it epitomizes the sound, pacing, and texture of Tupelo's memorable live shows. The group's first two albums, No Depression ♪♪♪♪ (Rockville, 1990, prod. Paul Kolderie, Sean Slade) and Still Feel Gone ♪♪♪♪ (Rockville, 1991, prod. Paul Kolderie, Sean Slade), are of a piece, both of them raucous affairs featuring numerous anthems to booze and boredom.

what to buy next: March 16–20, 1992 ♪♪♪♪½ (Rockville, 1992, prod. Peter Buck) is a fine acoustic effort featuring Buck's minimal production, and spotlighting dour white-gospel tunes and equally grim originals. Farrar wrote the music for Son Volt's debut during long, searching sojourns up and down the highways along the Mississippi River. Trace ♪♪♪♪½ (Warner Bros., 1995, prod. Brian Paulson, Son Volt) reflects the countryside that inspired it. Though lyrically obtuse, Farrar's tunes hit home hard, particularly the hard-country/folk numbers "Windfall" and "Tear-Stained Eye," and the slashing rockers "Drown" and "Loose String." Wilco's second album, Being There ♪♪♪♪ (Reprise, 1996, prod. Jeff Tweedy) jettisons the friendly, mid-tempo country-rock of its debut for a more aggressive stance, clearly inspired by the Stones' Exile. The two-disc set, a series of sketches from the road and fevered noise-rock experiments, succeeds on guts and sheer ambition.

the rest:
(As Wilco) A.M. ♪♪♪½ (Reprise, 1995)
Being There ♪♪♪♪ (Reprise, 1996)
(As Son Volt) Straightaways ♪♪♪½ (Warner Bros., 1997)

worth searching for: The Long Cut + Five Live ♪♪♪ (Sire/Reprise EP, 1993) offers the single from Anodyne plus a handful of live cuts featuring the full, five-piece Tupelo lineup.

influences:

- Gram Parsons, Neil Young, Black Flag, Merle Haggard, the Clash, Louvin Brothers
- Bottle Rockets, Blue Mountain, Old 97's, Honeydogs, Golden Smog

Daniel Durchholz

Jay Ungar & Molly Mason

Jay Ungar, fiddle; Molly Mason, guitar.

Fiddle player Jay Ungar has gained international acclaim with his composition "Ashokan Farewell," the haunting theme of his Grammy Award-winning soundtrack from the PBS documentary The Civil War. With his wife—guitarist Molly Mason—he performs both original and traditional instrumental music: their

Jeff Tweedy of Uncle Tupelo (© Ken Settle)

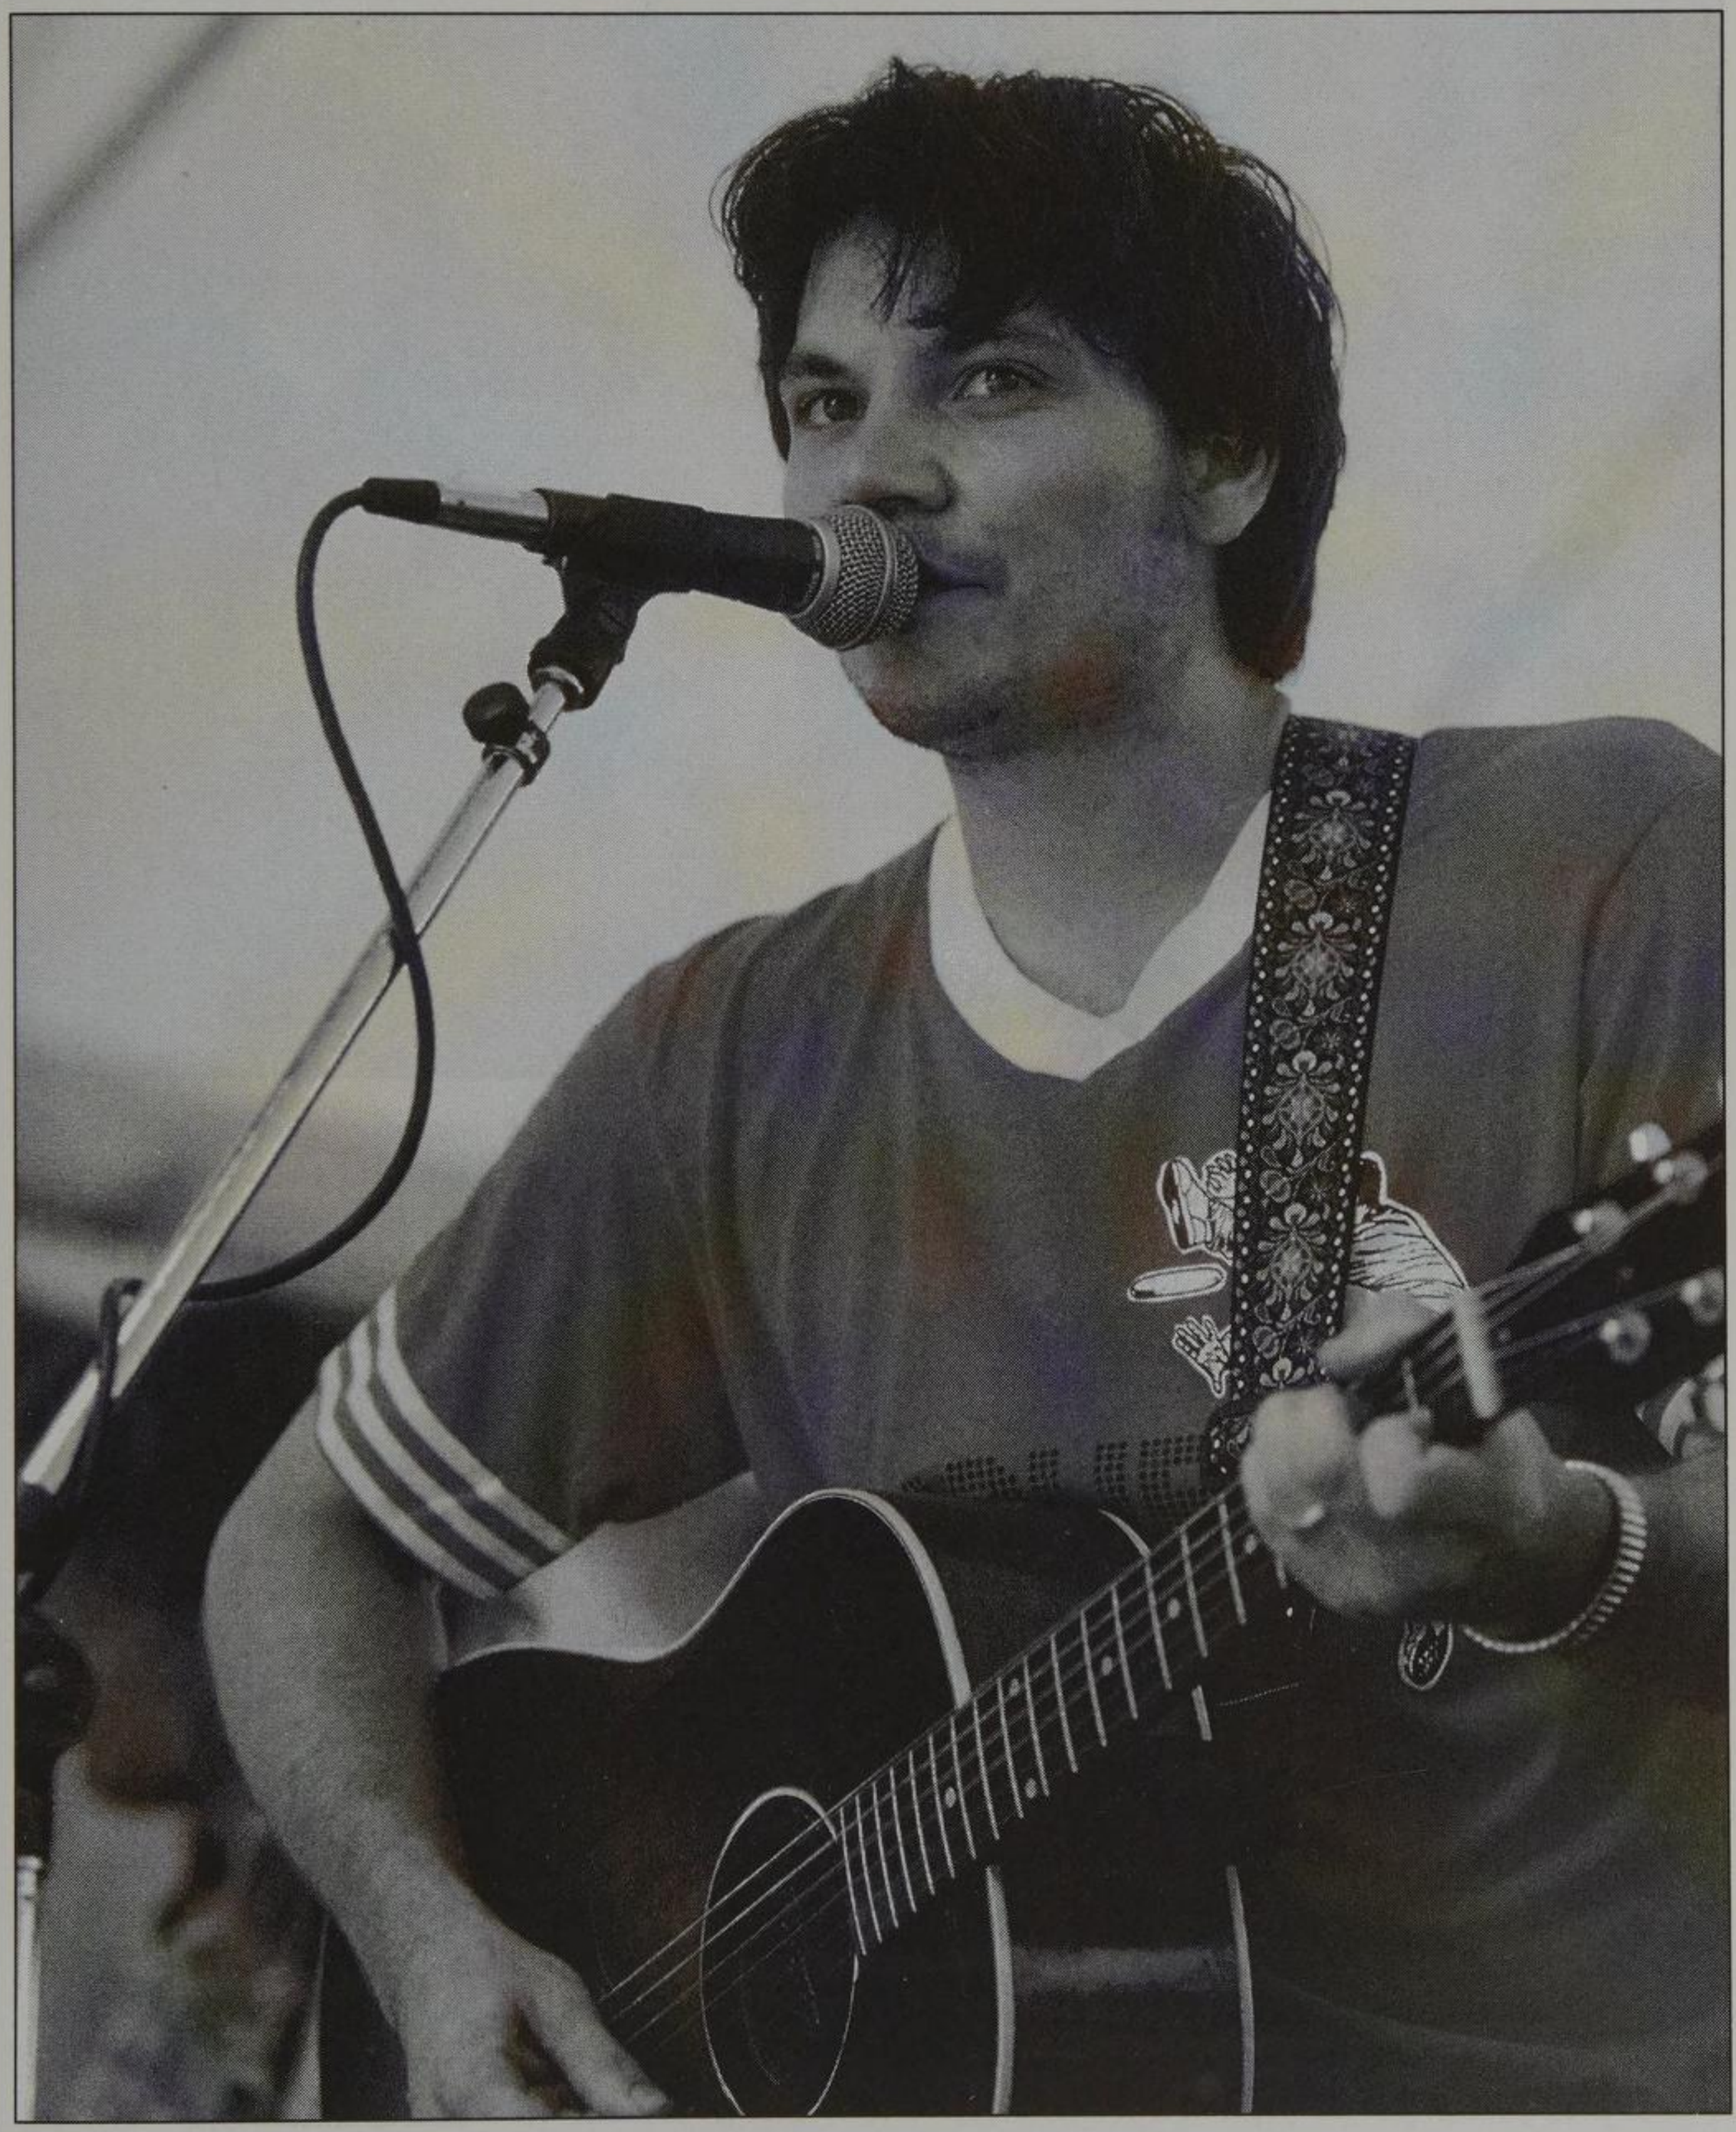
jay ungar & molly mason



jay ungar & molly mason

Jay Ungar (l) with Molly Mason (© Stephen A. Ide)

success on Garrison Keillor's A Prairie Home Companion has gained them a national audience. The duo's portfolio of soundtrack credits includes the PBS series The Civil War, Baseball, and The West, as well as the motion picture Brother's Keeper. Their latest CD, The Lovers' Waltz, features a diversity of composers from Stephen Foster to Fats Waller. For summer fun, Jay and Molly run the "Fiddle and Dance Workshop," at Ashokan (yes, that Ashokan) in upstate New York.

what to buy: Ungar describes The Lover's Waltz ♪♪♪♪½ (Angel, 1997, prod. Jay Ungar, Molly Mason) as a soundtrack to an imaginary movie where the couple meets at a dance, falls in love, gets cold feet—but then returns for a happy ending. Appropriately, the disc opens and closes with sheer pleasure, Ungar's original "The Lovers' Waltz" for violin and piano. The collection continues with the grace of a royal wedding, but punctuated with surprise visits from Fats Waller ("Honey on the Moon") and a few of his swing buddies ("It's All in Your Mind"). As expected, Ungar's compositions take the cake, but the circumspect nature of Mason's accompaniments attest to her musical poise and intuitiveness. Show stomper: the rowdy Klezmer nuptial, "Chosen Challe Mazeltau."

what to buy next: Brother's Keeper ♪♪♪♪½ (Angel, 1993, prod. Jay Ungar, Molly Mason) makes for a nifty introduction to Ungar and Mason's soundtrack artistry, from the motion picture by the same name. Featuring the duo's trademark fiddle, acoustic guitar, and other traditional accompaniments, this score makes a warm backdrop for work or pleasure. Says Garrison Keillor: "This (soundtrack) . . . absolutely stands on its own—I haven't seen the movie and I found the album deeply moving. Jay and Molly make music that is simple and overwhelming . . . they created a work that is an apotheosis of American traditional music, sweet and dark and brooding." Lake Wobegon still doesn't have a movie theater.

the rest:

Catskill Mountain Goosechase ♪♪♪½ (Philo, 1978)
Civil War—Soundtrack ♪♪♪♪½ (Elektra/Nonesuch, 1990)

Songs of the Civil War ♪♪♪♪ (Columbia, 1991)
(With David Levine) Dance of a Child's Dreams ♪♪♪♪ (Angel Records, 1993)
Civil War Classics ♪♪♪♪ (Fiddle and Dance Records, 1994)
The West ♪♪♪½ (Sony, 1996)

solo outings:

Jay Ungar and Lyn Hardy:
Catskill Mountain Goose Chase ♪♪♪♪ (Philo, 1992)

Fiddle Fever:
The Best of Fiddle Fever ♪♪♪½ (Flying Fish, 1990)
Waltz of the Wind ♪♪♪½ (Flying Fish, 1992)

Thomas Hampson:
American Dreamer ♪♪♪ (Angel Records, 1992)

influences:

◀◀ Stephen Foster, Evan Stover, Russ Barenberg, Matt Glaser, Rory Dall O'Cathain, Dizzy Gillespie

▶▶ Fiddle Fever, Lyn Hardy, Thomas Hampson, David Levine, Priscilla Herdman, John Whelan, Mill Run Dulcimer Band

Art Wojtowicz

Union Springs

Formed 1992, in OH.

Dwight McCall, mandolin, vocals; Randy Pollard, banjo, vocals; Jon Weisberger, bass, vocals; Tim Strong, guitar (1994–present); Joe McGinnis, guitar (1992–94).

Dwight McCall, the son of Jim McCall, a former bluegrass sideman for a number of bands in the early days, takes the lead on most of the vocals for the group as well as plays mandolin. His voice is modern and, while not perfect, has enough power to drive many of their songs in the same way Don Rigsby can drive a Lonesome River Band song. A major force behind this band is their aptitude for writing, and, most important, singing great bluegrass songs.

what to buy: Next Train Headed South ♪♪♪½ (Copper Creek, 1995, prod. Chris Kelly, Union Springs) is a good set of driving bluegrass. There are a number of great original songs here, including the title cut written by mandolin player McCall. The Wendy Smith–penned "Carolyn the Teenage Queen" is also on this album. After the Lonesome River Band heard Union Springs do this song, they recorded it themselves for their One Step Forward CD and turned it into a Top 10 bluegrass hit.

what to buy next: Help Me, Lord ♪♪♪ (Vetco, 1994, prod. Union Springs) is an all-gospel CD that highlights the band's songwriting talents as well as their singing. There are also a few old songs on here from Jim and Jesse, Bill Monroe, Jimmy Martin, and Jim McCall. Jason Carter, from the Del McCoury Band, guests on the fiddle. One negative to this recording, and their other Vetco release, is poor production, which makes the band sound a bit thin.

the rest:
Ten Past Midnight ♪♪ (Vetco, 1992)

influences:

◀◀ J.D. Crowe & the New South, Ricky Skaggs, Jim McCall

▶▶ Lonesome River Band

Steve Gardner

Joe Val & the New England Bluegrass Boys

Formed 1970, in MA. Disbanded 1985.

Joe Val (born Joseph Valiante, June 25, 1926, in Everett, MA; died June 13, 1985), mandolin, vocals; Herb Applin, guitar, vocals; Bob French, banjo, vocals; Bob Tidwell, bass. Later members included Dave Dillon, guitar, vocals; Paul Silvius, banjo, guitar, vocals; Eric Levenson, bass; Dave Haney, guitar, vocals; Roger Williams, Dobro; Karl Lauber, banjo, guitar; Jim Buchanan, fiddle; Herb Hooven, fiddle.

Though his Massachusetts upbringing was a far cry from the hills of Kentucky, Joe Val managed to convincingly yodel, moan the blues, and play mandolin as if he were a true Blue Grass Boy. Val began his professional career with the Radio Rangers, and soon discovered West Virginia transplants the Lilly Brothers and Don Stover playing bluegrass in Boston. Prior to joining the Charles River Valley Boys in 1963, he performed with future Blue Grass Boy Bill Keith and folklorist/record producer Jim Rooney at Club 47 in Cambridge. In 1970 Val formed the New England Blue Grass Boys, aided uniquely on high tenor vocals by Herb Applin. The group went through several personnel changes throughout the 1970s and early 1980s, playing their last show in December 1984. Six months later Val died of cancer.

what to buy: One Morning in May ♪♪♪♪½ (Rounder, 1996) is the group's 1971 debut, chock full of high tenor singing and expert playing. The CD version features several unissued tracks and is highlighted by a heart-stopping version of "Sparkling Brown Eyes."

guy van duser

what to buy next: Diamond Joe ♪♪♪♪½ (Rounder, 1995) is basically a Joe Val retrospective, with several incarnations of the New England Blue Grass Boys providing solid support throughout. Five albums are well represented by an impressive 25 tracks.

the rest:
Live in Holland ♪♪♪♪ (Strictly Country, 1981)

influences:
◀◀ Charles River Valley Boys, Lilly Brothers
▶▶ Del McCoury Band

Stephen L. Betts

Guy Van Duser

Born July 9, 1948, in Rochester, NY.

The fingerstyle country melodies of Chet Atkins and Doc Watson inspired the acoustic guitar playing of Guy Van Duser, but the sophisticated lyrical style of jazz pianist Teddy Wilson and the chordal innovations of guitarist George Van Eps inspired him to adapt the six-stringed instrument to the swing jazz repertoire of the 1940s. A former touring and recording partner of folksinger Bill Staines, Van Duser has explored his mix of pre-World War II jazz and acoustic folk music in a duo that he shares with clarinet, saxophone, and pennywhistle player Billy Novick. On his own, Van Duser has composed soundtracks for numerous public broadcasting network programs including Nova and The American Experience, and for a series of language videos, World of English, produced by Disney. His soundtrack for the 1986 film, Hellfire: A Journey from Hiroshima, was nominated for an Academy award. In collaboration with dance choreographer Nikki Hu, Van Duser has performed many shows in schools under the banner of Young Audiences of Massachusetts.

what to buy: American Finger-Style Guitar ♪♪♪ (Rounder, 1987, prod. Guy Van Duser) assembles mostly solo guitar tracks from Van Duser's earlier, out-of-print albums. With Novick occasionally flavoring the melodies on clarinet, soprano saxophone, and pennywhistle, Van Duser runs his fingers across his nylon-strung guitar in a celebration of the jazz and pop music of the early twentieth century. In addition to his lyrical interpretations of tunes by Duke Ellington, Fats Waller, Rodgers and Hart, and the Gershwins, the collection includes the inventive "Great Western Medley" and unique re-workings of "The Syncopated Clock" and "The Stars and Stripes Forever."

what to buy next: With the release of Stride Guitar ♪♪♪ (Rounder, 1981, prod. Guy Van Duser), Van Duser adopts the post-ragtime "stride" piano style to his guitar playing. Virtuoso instrumental renditions of Ellington, Waller, and Jerome Kern tunes are balanced by Van Duser's original piece, "Seneca Slide," and a good-humored version of the Disney classic song, "When I See an Elephant Fly," sung by Novick.

the rest:
(With Billy Novick) Raisin' the Rent ♪♪♪ (Rounder, 1982)
(With Billy Novick) The New Pennywhistle Album ♪♪ (Green Linnet, 1988)
(With Billy Novick) Get Yourself a New Broom . . . ♪♪♪ (Rounder, 1989)
(With Billy Novick) Exactly like Us ♪♪♪ (Rounder, 1989)
(With Billy Novick) Guy and Billy ♪♪♪ (Daring, 1994) (With Billy Novick) Every Little Moment ♪♪♪ (Daring, 1996)

influences:
◀◀ Chet Atkins, Doc Watson, George Van Eps, Teddy Wilson ▶▶ Jeannie Stahl, Bill Staines

see also: Billy Novick

Craig Harris

Sally Van Meter

Born October 7, 1956, in Los Angeles, CA.

One of the few women instrumentalists in bluegrass to have recorded a solo album, California Dobroist Sally Van Meter started her career in 1977 when she joined the Good Ol' Persons, a San Francisco band that also included Laurie Lewis and Kathy Kallick. With a reputation for vibrant tone, dexterity, expressiveness, and creativity, Van Meter continues to play Dobro with the G.O.P. today, in addition to a busy solo career, and has contributed to four Good Ol' Persons albums. Her other recording credits include albums by Lewis, Kallick, Tony Furtado, Sugarbeat, Peter Rowan and the Rowan Brothers, Sarah Elizabeth Campbell, Blue Rose, and John Reischman. She made her solo recording debut in 1991, and in 1994 was one of 10 Dobro players featured on 1995's Grammy-winning The Great Dobro Sessions.

what to buy: All in Good Time ♪♪♪ (Sugar Hill, 1991, prod. Jerry Douglas) shows Van Meter's versatility on the Dobro as she adeptly handles both up-tempo bluegrass ("Road to Columbus," "Crazy Creek") and more atmospheric tunes like "Annie's Waltz" and "Amor de Mi Vida." Three of the tracks also feature vocals, the best of which is a soulful duet on "Blues for Your Own." Guests include Douglas, Kallick, Furtado, and Scott Nygaard. Notable are "Crazy Creek" and "Anne's Waltz," with Van Meter and Douglas trading Dobro licks.

what to buy next: The Great Dobro Sessions ♪♪♪♪ (Sugar Hill, 1994, prod. Jerry Douglas, Tut Taylor), which won the Grammy for "Best Bluegrass Recording" in 1995, presents 10 of the country's leading resophonic guitarists; Van Meter is featured on two cuts. Blue Rose ♪♪♪ (Sugar Hill, 1988, prod, Cathy Fink), a one-shot album by a folk/bluegrass all-star band of the same name, features Van Meter, Lewis, Cathy Fink, Marcy Marxer, and Molly Mason.

influences:

◀◀ Josh Graves, Mike Auldridge, Jerry Douglas

▶▶ Rob Ickes, Kathy Barwick, New Grass Revival, Kathy Kallick

see also: Good Ol' Persons

Jon Hartley Fox and Douglas Fulmer

Dave Van Ronk

Born June 30, 1936, in Brooklyn, NY.

Dave Van Ronk was one of the leading figures in the early 1960s folk-music revival centered in Greenwich Village. Performing alongside Bob Dylan, Odetta, and Phil Ochs, he was known for his growling vocals and unmatched repertoire of obscure blues, folk, and jug-band tunes. In the early 1960s he recorded several classic albums for Prestige and Folkways. While recording sporadically over the next several decades for a series of small labels, Van Ronk has continued to perform at small clubs and festivals. A big bear of a man sporting a gravel voice tinged with honey, he can sing the most wretched blues and "Teddy Bears' Picnic" with equal conviction. It's easy to imagine him singing drinking songs hour after hour with a group of Dutch sailors just arrived in port. Hunched over his guitar with a shock of greasy hair falling in his face, he exhibits a complete commitment to his music. His acoustic guitar playing is heavily influenced by Piedmont-area pickers like the Rev. Gary Davis and Brownie McGhee.

what to buy: Inside Dave Van Ronk ♪♪♪♪½ (Fantasy, 1989) combines two separate releases recorded in April, 1962. The first, comprising 13 selections, was originally titled Folksinger ♪♪♪♪½ (1962) and is Van Ronk's crowning achievement. Passionate singing and instrumental mastery distinguish these songs, which sound like they're forcing their way out to be heard. The fearsome visions of "Samson and Delilah" start things off with a wallop, while "Motherless Children" looks unblinkingly at absolute despair and loneliness. On each song, Van Ronk's guitar work, whether intricate or spare, reinforces the mood and propels the story. The second half is the original release of Inside Dave Van Ronk ♪♪♪♪ (1962), and it's a different kettle of fish—a pleasant album of British- and Appalachian-style folk songs with Van Ronk on 12-string guitar, autoharp, and dulcimer. From . . . Another Time and Place ♪♪♪♪ (Alcazar, 1995) is an excellent set of acoustic blues and folk songs, with Van Ronk covering old favorites of his like "Lovin' Spoonful," the Reverend Gary Davis's humorous look at sex, and Carr & Blackwell's "Down South Blues." Several original compositions, including the gorgeous "Honey Hair," first recorded three decades ago, add a gentler, folk-music element. His Southeast-style finger picking is as good as ever. Van Ronk has made his career by playing other people's music. In a well-deserved tribute to himself, Going back to Brooklyn ♪♪♪♪ (Gazell, 1991), he recorded 14 of his own compositions accompanied only by his guitar. Included are the anti-war diatribe "Luang Prabang," a hilarious song made up entirely of the names of New Jersey cities, and his terrific, after-hours "Last Call," with the great line: "If I'd been drunk when I was born, I'd be ignorant of sorrow." what to buy next: The Folkways Years: 1959–61 ♪♪♪½ (Smithsonian/Folkways, 1991) is a compilation of Van Ronk's Folkways recordings at the height of the "folk revival." It includes great story-songs like "Duncan and Brady" and "Gambler's Blues," classic rag-style guitar picking on "Hesitation Blues," and the spare emotion of "Please See That My Grave Is Kept Clean." A Chrestomathy ♪♪♪½ (Gazell, 1992) is the only Van Ronk retrospective covering his entire career and wisely includes five cuts from Folksinger. Other songs showcase him with various groups, including the Red Onion Jazz Band, the Hudson Dusters, and the Ragtime Jug Stompers. As might be expected, the stylistic range is enormous—from the novelty pop of "Alley Oop" and "My Little Grass Shack" to the heartfelt tribute of "John Hurt." Hummin' to Myself ♪♪♪½ (Gazell, 1990, prod. Sam Charters) offers a charming set of jazz standards on which Van Ronk is backed by an excellent combo, including John Pizzarelli on guitar and Harry Allen on tenor sax. He sounds perfectly at home swinging his way through "Making Whoopie," "Jack You're Dead," and Hoagy Carmichael's classic "Hong Kong Blues."

the rest:

Let No One Deceive You ♪♪♪½ (Flying Fish, 1990)
Peter and the Wolf ♪♪♪ (Alacazam, 1990)
To All My Friends in Far-Flung Places ♪♪♪ (Gazell, 1994) worth searching for: Sunday Street ♪♪♪½ (Philo, 1976, prod. Dave Van Ronk) and Songs for Aging Children ♪♪♪ (Cadet, 1973, prod. Michael Brovsky) are out-of-print vinyl releases from the 1970s that reveal Van Ronk's varied interests. Sunday Street is all acoustic, a collection of blues, rags, and jive, while Songs for Aging Children mixes blues, rock, and Brecht. Several of the songs show up on A Chrestomathy, but it's worth having both entire sessions.

8 1
2 townes van zandt

influences:

⏪ Rev. Gary Davis, Brownie McGhee, Mississippi John Hurt

⏩ David Bromberg, Bob Dylan

David Feld

Townes Van Zandt

Born March 7, 1944, in Fort Worth, TX. Died January 1, 1997, in Smyrna, TN.

Born into a wealthy and prestigious Texas oil family, Townes Van Zandt found his life's work to be a far more spiritual calling. Bent on hard living and heavy drinking, he aged quickly and died early of a heart attack at age 52, but not before leaving behind an indelible legacy of American music. "Townes Van Zandt is the best songwriter in the world, and I'd stand on Bob Dylan's coffee table in my cowboy boots and say that," declared Steve Earle in an oft-repeated quote. And while Van Zandt's notoriety never approached Dylan's household-name status, it's worth noting that Dylan and Willie Nelson once dueted on Van Zandt's classic "Pancho & Lefty" on a prime-time network TV special. (Nelson and Merle Haggard took the same song to the top of the country charts in 1983.) While Van Zandt racked up a remarkable catalog of cuts covered by other artists (more than 100 versions of his songs have been recorded by everyone from Hoyt Axton to the Walkabouts), his own recordings are a wellspring of considerable musical magic in their own right. A master lyricist considered by many to be one of the finest poets of his generation, Van Zandt also possessed a gift for darkly beautiful, often melancholy melodies, as well as a plaintive and personable voice, though his singing grew increasingly rougher and deeper in his later years.

what to buy: The Late Great Townes Van Zandt ♪♪♪♪♪ (Poppy, 1973/Rhino, 1994, prod. Jack Clement) was in fact recorded a good quarter-century before his demise and caught Van Zandt at the peak of his artistic instincts. It contains his two best-known tunes, "Pancho & Lefty" and "If I Needed You" (a country smash duet for Emmylou Harris and Don Williams), as well as several other unforgettable songs. Live at the Old Quarter, Houston, Texas ♪♪♪♪♪ (Tomato, 1977, prod. Earl Willis) was recorded during July 1973, completely solo acoustic, and is a de facto overview of his oeuvre to that date, with 27 songs on the original vinyl (though eight are missing on the CD reissue).

what to buy next: Rear View Mirror ♪♪♪♪ (Sundown, 1993, prod. Townes Van Zandt) is a 17-song live recording from 1979 that covers some of the same ground as Old Quarter but in a slightly more augmented acoustic trio format. At My Window ♪♪♪♪ (Sugar Hill, 1987, prod. Jack Clement, Jim Rooney) showed that Van Zandt remained one of country-folk's finest songwriters a good 15 years past his supposed prime, introducing such classics as "Buckskin Stallion Blues" and "Still Lookin' for You." Whereas At My Window benefited from the wisdom of Van Zandt's years, his earliest efforts are equally marvelous for their youthful wonder: For the Sake of the Song ♪♪♪½ (Poppy, 1968), Our Mother the Mountain ♪♪♪♪ (Poppy, 1969/Rhino, 1994, prod. Kevin Eggers, Jack Clement, Jim Malloy), and Townes Van Zandt ♪♪♪♪ (Poppy, 1970/Rhino, 1994, prod. Kevin Eggers, Jim Malloy).

what to avoid: Live and Obscure ♪♪ (Sugar Hill, 1987) doesn't have the coherence or quality of material that Van Zandt's other live recordings possess. Roadsongs ♪♪ (Sugar Hill, 1994), 15 covers of songs by artists ranging from Lightnin' Hopkins to Bruce Springsteen, is of interest to devoted fans but doesn't play to Van Zandt's obvious strengths, and the performances are spotty.

the rest:

Delta Momma Blues ♪♪♪ (Poppy, 1971/Rhino, 1994)
High, Low, and in Between ♪♪♪ (Poppy, 1972/Rhino, 1994)
Flyin' Shoes ♪♪♪½ (Tomato, 1978)
The Nashville Sessions ♪♪½ (Tomato, 1993)
No Deeper Blue ♪♪½ (Sugar Hill 1994)
The Highway Kind ♪♪♪ (Sugar Hill, 1997)

influences:

⏪ Lightnin' Hopkins, Bob Dylan, Hank Williams, Elvis Presley, Woody Guthrie, Mickey Newbury

⏩ Guy Clark, Steve Earle, Joe Ely, Jimmie Dale Gilmore, Butch Hancock, Steve Young, Rodney Crowell, Richard Dobson, Jerry Jeff Walker, Peter Rowan, Nanci Griffith, Lyle Lovett, Emmylou Harris, Garth Brooks, Hal Ketchum, Jonell Mosser, Alejandro Escovedo, Will T. Massey, Son Volt, Walkabouts, Paul K., Tindersticks, Mudhoney

Peter Blackstock

Townes Van Zandt (© Jack Vartoogian)

Suzanne Vega

Born July 11, 1959, in Santa Monica, CA.

Suzanne Vega grew up in New York, attending the prestigious High School of the Performing Arts. She continued at Barnard, where she began playing her own brand of folk songs at small clubs in Greenwich Village. Her light, whispery voice blended with haunting melodies and vivid imagery, building an underground following and, eventually, a larger audience. In 1984 she signed to A&M Records, and since then her career has evolved dramatically. Like Tom Waits, Vega began with sparse coffeehouse folk and has firmly moved forward into new territory. Her 1985 debut revealed insightful lyrics, acoustic guitar playing reminiscent of Joni Mitchell, and the solitary feel of her folk roots. Three albums later, her musical influences have provided her with the skill of successful risk-taking, with expanded instrumentation, more intricate melodies, and even a collaboration with the dance group DNA. While this growth may not be fattening anybody's pockets, her influence as a creative force is incalculable. Her 1987 hit "Luka" helped female performers gain the recognition they long deserved, paving the way for artists such as Tracy Chapman, 10,000 Maniacs, and Sarah McLachlan.

what to buy: Her debut, Suzanne Vega ♪♪♪♪♪ (A&M, 1985, prod. Steve Addabbo, Lenny Kaye) is still her most consistently moving work. This folky album opens with the lyrically wonderful "Cracking," a depiction of someone who is often on the edge of breaking down. The sparse "Straight Lines," the poppy "Marlene on the Wall," and the dark fable "Queen and the Soldier" make this album a complete gem.

what to buy next: Nine Objects of Desire ♪♪♪♪½ (A&M, 1996) continues the sonic experiments Vega began with her 1992 album, 99.9 Degrees, using driving, urban-style drum sounds, strong electric guitars, and keyboards atop the poetic images that are her trademark. More than ever before, she uses eclectic layering of backing vocals, experimental beats, and exotic melodies as a vehicle to emphasize and complement the incredible images that her songs evoke. Days of Open Hand ♪♪♪♪ (A&M, 1990, prod. Anton Sanko, Suzanne Vega) is another of her most ambitious albums. Here Vega successfully makes the jump from accomplished folkster to extraordinary musical artist, flaunting a string arrangement from Philip Glass, heavy use of a Hammond organ and synthesizers for ambient effect, and the eclectic rhythms of drums from around the world. Solitude Standing ♪♪♪½ (A&M, 1987, prod. Steve Addabbo, Lenny Kaye) contains her two biggest hits, "Luka" and "Tom's Diner." The latter actually gained its notoriety three years later, when the DNA took Vega's vocal and added a strong techno beat and a few sound loops.

the rest:
99.9 Degrees ♪♪♪ (A&M, 1992)

worth searching for: One of Vega's greatest attributes is her stage presence, which is never really displayed in her studio work. On the Australian import Live in London ♪♪♪½ (A&M, 1986) we get to hear her sense of humor and excellent storytelling talents, as well as wonderful versions of "Left of Center," "Neighborhood Girls," and other songs.

influences:
◀◀ Tom Waits, Rickie Lee Jones, Joni Mitchell, DNA

▶▶ Shawn Colvin, Tori Amos, 10,000 Maniacs, Tracy Chapman, Sarah McLachlan

Joshua Zarov

The Voice Squad

Formed 1987, in Ireland.

Fran McPhail, vocals; Gerry Cullen, vocals; Phil Callery, vocals.

Unaccompanied harmony singing in the folk tradition got a big boost with the recordings of the Copper Family from Sussex. The Voice Squad's style of singing in harmony does not form part of the Irish singing tradition but McPhail, Cullen, and Callery, already well known in the field of Irish traditional song, have built upon the basic elements of this style to develop a powerful and highly distinctive approach to their own native tradition. Their style and repertoire is nourished by deeper and older wellsprings, especially by the great song traditions of Northern Ireland. The tenor voices of McPhail and Callery contrast with Cullen's bass drone to make the trio one of the most popular and distinctive unaccompanied singing groups performing today.

what to buy: Good People All ♪♪♪½ (Shanachie, 1993, prod. Dan Fitzgerald) is filled with harmony, intensity, and passion. It should appeal to anyone who appreciates fine, robust, and sincere singing, and it goes down particularly well with a tankard of good ale. This is certainly not Rita Keane, Paddy Tunny, or Frank Harte, but then it's not the Clancy Brothers either.

what to buy next: Many the Foolish Youth ♪♪♪ (Tara Records, 1995, prod. Dan Fitzgerald) was the group's first album, originally issued in 1987, but re-released in the wake of the popularity of Good People All. Perhaps they weren't ready for close-harmony Irish singing in 1987? In any case, this stands on its own merit and perhaps proves that what one traditional Irish singer can do well, maybe three can do better. Of course, you won't convince the purists of that, but perhaps you should listen and make up your own mind.

influences:

⏪ Copper Family, Watersons

⏩ Black Family

Neal Walters

Volo Bogtrotters

See: Lynn "Chirps" Smith

Eric Von Schmidt

Born 1931, in CT.

The "folk scare" that swept through Harvard Square in Cambridge, Massachusetts, in the late '50s and early '60s took place as much in the living room of folksinger, acoustic guitarist, painter, and illustrator Eric Von Schmidt as it did in coffeehouses like Tulla's Coffee Grinder and Club 47. When he wasn't hosting late-night parties and jam sessions, he was attracting attention for his Leadbelly-style vocals and his rewritten folk songs, including "Wasn't That a Mighty Storm" and "Joshua Gone Barbados." Dylan recorded "Baby, Let Me Follow You Down" on his first album, mentioning Von Schmidt as the source of the song. The tune's title was also used as the title of Von Schmidt and Jim Rooney's photo-laden chronicle of the Cambridge folk years, published in 1979 and reissued by the University of Massachusetts Press in 1994. The son and grandson of painters, Von Schmidt was inspired by a radio appearance by Leadbelly that he heard in the 1940s. Teaching himself to play acoustic guitar, he fell in with a group of similar-minded musicians and made many trips to play in a tavern in New York. Two years spent in the Army proved pivotal. Stationed in Washington, D.C., Von Schmidt spent hours in the folk song archive of the Library of Congress searching for songs. By the time he moved to Cambridge, following a year in Italy studying art on a Fullbright scholarship, he had a large repertoire of folk and blues tunes. The Cambridge folk scene was initially relaxed and strictly amateur. By 1958, however, things had changed. With Joan Baez' early success, Harvard Square became a mecca for aspiring singer-songwriters, including Tom Rush and Jackie Washington, and Von Schmidt became one of its most influential performers. The scene was still going strong in 1970, when Von Schmidt left Cambridge. Moving to Florida for an unsuccessful second marriage, and, then, to Henniker, New Hampshire, he continued to record for a variety of labels. After an album he recorded with the Cruel Family was released but not listed in the record company catalog by Philo, he retreated from music and turned his attention to his paintings and illustrations. While his performances remain rare treats, Von Schmidt, who currently lives and works in his father's old painting studio in Westport, Connecticut, has recently ventured out more and more as a musician. His first album in 15 years was released in 1995 and included a re-recording of "Joshua Gone Barbados."

what to buy: Von Schmidt's first album in nearly two decades, Baby, Let Me Lay It on You ♪♪♪♪ (Gazell, 1995, prod. Sam Charters, Eric Von Schmidt) retains the earthy potency of his early recordings. In addition to showcasing his talents as a songwriter with 15 original songs, including a re-recording of "Joshua Gone Barbados," Von Schmidt pays tribute to his roots with a faithful rendition of Leadbelly's "De Kalb Blues." The title track is a reworking of the song (written by Von Schmidt with Dave Van Ronk and Reverend Gary Davis) that Dylan renamed and popularized as "Baby, Let Me Follow You Down." With Von Schmidt's vocals, guitar, harmonica, and kazoo joined by Charters on jug and tambourine, Paul Geremia on slide guitar and harmonica, Gideon Freudman on cello, and his partner Linda Clifford on guitar and harmony vocals, the album revives the jovial spirit and ragtime-jug band sounds of an earlier era.

what to buy next: With Von Schmidt's beatnik-like original songs, including "Turtle Beach" and "If I Had Good a Dog (The Male Chauvinist Possum Song)," set to folk-rooted arrangements featuring Geoff and Maria Muldaur, Amos Garrett, Ben Keith, and Paul Butterfield, Second Right Third Row ♪♪♪ (Polydor, 1972, prod. Michael Cuscuna, James K. Rooney) is a classic of early-70s folk music.

the rest:

Folk Blues ♪♪♪ (Folkways, 1964)
Eric Von Schmidt Sings ♪♪½ (Folkways, 1965)
Who Knocked the Brains out of the Sky? ♪♪½ (Smash/Mercury, 1970)
The Cruel Family ♪♪½ (Philo, 1977)

worth searching for: The multi-artist collection Blues with a Feeling, Part Two ♪♪♪½ (Vanguard, 1997, prod. Mary Katherine Aldin) includes a live recording of Von Schmidt performing his original tune, "Grizzly Bear," at the 1965 Newport Folk Festival.

influences:

⏪ Leadbelly, John & Alan Lomax

⏩ Bob Dylan, Maria Muldaur, Tom Rush, Jim Kweskin, Joan Baez

Craig Harris

Jane Voss /Jane Voss & Hoyle Osborne

Born April 20, 1948, in Toledo, OH.

Jane Voss, guitar, vocals; Hoyle Osborne, piano.

Dubbed "an American Piaf" by Venezuelan singer Ana Gilda Leon, folksinging chanteuse Jane Voss grew up in the heart of the Midwest, soaking up the sounds of the vaudeville and country 78's from her father and grandfather's record collections. In her teens, she developed an excited interest in folk music, along with a love for R & B and early rock 'n' roll, quickly making the connection between folk balladry and the songs of Chuck Berry (for example) in their way of telling stories in song. Voss's performing career began in the coffeehouses and bars of San Francisco during the early 1970s, where she made the songs of the original Carter Family her specialty. She soon took to the road, becoming a familiar presence at coffeehouses and folk festivals on both coasts. Voss was among the first participants in Women's Music workshops at festivals, and was known for her strongly feminist stance, both in her originals and her choice of traditional songs. Her feminist anthem, "Standing behind Some Man," has appeared in publications ranging from church hymnals to feminist songbooks. Other songs by Voss have been recorded by Kate Brislin and Jody Stecher, and by Dave Van Ronk. Voss's first album, An Album of Songs, reflects the early years of her career, and features mostly old-time country songs from the Carter Family mixed with traditional-sounding originals. In 1976 Voss joined forces with pianist Hoyle Osborne and began a new musical direction in which popular and traditional jazz forms dominate the repertoire. The duo have released four albums, including the award-winning Get to the Heart.

what's available: Sparkle and Shine ♪♪♪ (Front Hall, 1990, prod. Jane Voss, Hoyle Osborne), the duo's most recent album, is built around five Voss compositions, including the dramatic title song, the poignant "To All My Friends in Far-Flung Places," and the witty, soul-tinged "I'm in Debt." Get to the Heart ♪♪♪ (Green Linnet, 1981, prod. Jane Voss, Hoyle Osborne), which won a Record of the Year Award from Stereo Review, contains some more Voss gems: the bittersweet "Still My Thoughts Go Back to You" (Kate Brislin and Jody Stecher recorded a wonderful version of this song on their album Blue Lightning), and the brassy "Gateway Blues," inspired by the blues belting of Bessie Smith. Pullin' Through ♪♪♪ (Green Linnet, 1983, prod. Jane Voss, Hoyle Osborne) also features several Voss originals, mixed with traditional jazz and blues material from Billie Holiday and Bessie Smith.

worth searching for: An Album of Songs ♪♪♪♪ (Bay LP, 1976, prod. Jane Voss, Mike Cogan) is, hands down, among the finest albums ever made by an interpreter of old-time country songs. It will be hard to find, being unfortunately long out of print, but it's worth the search: Voss does masterly versions of her classic originals, including "Standing behind Some Man" (probably her most well-known song) and "Keep in Mind." These compositions sound so much like older works that they meld seamlessly with emotionally charged renditions of obscure Carter Family and Molly O'Day material.

influences:

◀◀ Carter Family, Molly O'Day, Kitty Wells, Bessie Smith, Billie Holiday, Ida Cox

▶▶ Kate Brislin & Jody Stecher, Iris DeMent, Rosalie Sorrels

Suzy Rothfield Thompson

Stephen Wade

Born 1953, in Chicago, IL.

Stephen Wade grew up listening to many of "the wonderful traditional musicians who had migrated north to the city from both the Mississippi Delta and the Southern Appalachians." Though his family wasn't particularly musical ("my grandmother played pump organ, but I never knew her"), his parents were very supportive. "My mother was a writer, a very literary person, and my father always encouraged me to be a full-time player. I never had to run away to become a musician." Wade began playing guitar at 11, drawn to the urban, down-home blues around his hometown. By his early teens, he had acquired a banjo and made his way to the Old Town School of Folk Music where, in 1971, he met and began an apprenticeship with his longtime mentor, Fleming Brown. Brown had a profound influence on the young Wade, instrumentally and, perhaps, even more important, philosophically. Within a few years, the student inherited his teacher's class and began working as accompanist to his teacher's teacher, Doc Hopkins, the great old-time radio singer from Harlan, Kentucky. Hopkins had appeared on the WLS National Barn Dance from 1930 to 1952. It was under "the loving care and watchful eye of these two musicians" that Wade's playing matured and his musical philosophies took root.

By the mid- to late '70s, Wade began touring folk clubs around the U.S. This travel afforded him the opportunity to immerse himself in the Archive of Folk Culture's collection at the Library of Congress in Washington, D.C. With this background, he created the one-man play, Banjo Dancing, which opened in Chicago in 1979. An amalgam of Wade's fiery clawhammer banjo playing, stories, and, yup, dancing blended with inspirations, tunes, and tales drawn from the Archive to create a show that grew to be an undisputed hit. After a 13-month run in Chicago, punctuated by a performance at the White House on Labor Day of that year, Wade took the show on the road, landing at the Arena Stage in Washington, D.C., where the show lasted eight years, one of the longest running stage shows in the U.S. In 1989, Wade opened a second show, On the Way Home, which also played at the Arena for three years before he began taking both shows (alternately) on the road.

what's available: Wade's own discography consists of two fine releases that focus primarily on his wonderful clawhammer banjo playing. Both Dancing in the Parlor ♪♪♪♪♪ (County, 1997, prod. Stephen Wade) and Dancing Home ♪♪♪♪ (Flying Fish, 1990, prod. Bruce Kaplan, Stephen Wade) are superb and eclectic recordings that showcase the breadth of Wade's interest in old-time tunes and traditions. Either would be a great introduction to one of the country's best showmen.

worth searching for: Throughout Wade's concentration on his theater work, he continued to immerse himself in the AFC's collection, an avocation that has culminated in the release of a 30-cut Archive sampler, A Treasury of Library of Congress Field Recordings ♪♪♪♪♪ (Rounder, 1997, prod. Stephen Wade), a true labor of love.

influences:

◀◀ Fleming Brown, Doc Hopkins

▶▶ Michael Miles, Arnie Naimann and Chris Coole, Bob Carlin

Mark Moss

editor's choice
13 more desert island discs

MusicHound Folk writers make their "desert island" picks:

Steve Stolder: Bob Dylan, John Wesley Harding (Columbia)

Kate Dunlay: Brenda Stubbert, In Jig Time! (Celestial Entertainment)

Lynne Margolis: The Beatles, Meet the Beatles (Capitol)

Steve Winick: Planxty, Planxty (Polydor/Shanachie)

Gary Pig Gold: The Beach Boys, Pet Sounds (The Mono Mix) (Capitol)

Jared Snyder: Various Artists, Cajun Music: Fais Do-Do (Columbia)

Craig Harris: Beach Boys, Pet Sounds (Capitol)

John Lupton: Mike Auldridge, Treasures Untold (Sugar Hill)

Geoffrey Himes: Bob Dylan, John Wesley Harding (Columbia)

Lauri Taylor: Michael Smith, Time (Flying Fish)

Karen Ashbrook: Freyda Epstein & Acoustic Attitude, Midnight at Cabel Hall (Red House)

Dave Shombert: Double Decker String Band, Chasing Rainbows (Marimac)

Tim Walters: June Tabor, Abyssinians (Shanachie)

Loudon Wainwright III

September 5, 1946 in Chapel Hill, NC.

Louden Wainwright has survived being dubbed the latest "New Dylan" and then achieving national recognition for singing about a dead skunk (all together now: "stinkin' to high heaven!") to record 16 eclectic, quirky, and intensely autobiographical albums over a span of three decades. Along the way, he has appeared on the hit TV series *M*A*S*H* as Capt. Calvin Spaulding, a singing surgeon, as well as in two films, The Slugger's Wife, written by Neil Simon, and Jacknife, which starred Robert De Niro. He's also garnered Grammy nominations for I'm Alright in 1985 and More Love Songs in 1986. Johnny Cash covered the Wainwright-penned "The Man Who Wouldn't Cry" on American Recordings (1994). Wainwright, whose father was a well-known Life magazine columnist and editor, began writing his own songs in 1968 and was "discovered" by Milton Kramer the following year while performing at the Village Gaslight in New York. He signed with Atlantic. He wrote "Dead Skunk" in 15 minutes in 1972. Typically, Wainwright's best work takes conventional musical and social

loudon wainwright iii

Loudon Wainwright III (© Jack Vartoogian)

standards and turns them on end, or at least applies intriguing twists. Examples: "Unhappy Anniversary," from More Love Songs," celebrates a failed relationship, one year later; the title track to I'm Alright spoofs blues clichés ("Woke up this morning/Didn't feel that bad/Last night was definitely not one of the worst I'd ever had."). Wainwright's songs often are fiercely personal, addressing issues such as his father's drinking habits and his own shortcomings as a parent. Just as you're comfortable with his humor, he'll land an emotional right cross squarely between the eyes that will leave you floored . . . and duly impressed. Sample "Natural Disaster" from A Live One (1987) or "That Hospital" from Grown Man (1995) as ample evidence.

what to buy: Album III ♪♪♪♪ (Columbia, 1972/Legacy, 1990) which includes the aforementioned "Dead Skunk," is an attractive entree to his early work. A Live One ♪♪♪♪ (Rounder, 1987, prod. John Wood, Loudon Wainwright III), recorded between 1976 and 1978 in England, Scotland, and Los Angeles, finds Wainwright playing solo for appreciative audiences that embrace his eccentricity. The interaction adds vitality to his performances. Also, the stripped-down instrumental setting focuses attention on the man and his songs, which is welcome in light of some of his overproduced later works. I'm Alright ♪♪♪♪ (Rounder, 1985, prod. Richard Thompson, Loudon Wainwright III) features Thompson on guitar and mandolin. A document of a broken relationship, it's the best of his 1980s studio work, followed closely by the more whimsical More Love Songs ♪♪♪♪ (Rounder, 1986, prod. Richard Thompson, Loudon Wainwright III, Chaim Tannenbaum).

what to buy next: Career Moves ♪♪♪ (Virgin, 1993, prod. Jeffrey Lesser, Loudon Wainwright III) was recorded live at the Bottom Line in New York in 1993 and is an excellent update and companion piece to A Live One. Wainwright's more recent studio work on Virgin is uneven, featuring stunning songs but diminished by a variety of production approaches that don't always mesh well and a degree of intimacy that can be disconcerting. Just a little too revealing, it's honest work, but not consistently entertaining. Grown Man ♪♪♪ (Virgin, 1997, prod. Jeffrey Lesser, Loudon Wainwright III) is the better of these Virgin releases, offering glimpses of Wainwright at the top of his tragicomic game, but requiring the listener to pick and choose among cuts. Little Ship ♪♪♪ (Virgin, 1997, prod. John Leventhal, Loudon Wainwright III) is spiced by Wainwright on banjo and ukulele on a couple of songs and unaccompanied on another. Shawn Colvin adds guest vocals.

best of the rest:
Fame and Wealth ♪♪♪ (Rounder, 1987)
Therapy ♪♪♪ (Silvertone, 1989)
History ♪♪♪½ (Charisma, 1992) worth searching for: Attempted Mustache ♪♪♪ (CBS, 1974) and Unrequited ♪♪♪ (CBS, 1975) are now out of print, but look for Legacy reissues in 1998.

influences:
◀◀ Bob Dylan, Ramblin' Jack Elliott, Frank Loesser ▶▶ Bad Livers, Mike Cross

Bryan Powell

Sloan Wainwright

Born May 20, late 1950s, in Bedford, NY.

The obvious questions are answered first: Sloan Wainwright is a woman, the youngest sister of Loudon Wainwright III. Growing up in a musical family undoubtedly influenced her career choice, but aside from skill and wry humor, her songs bear little similarity to her brother's work. She specializes in piano-driven jazz-folk with a theatrical flair that suits her broad vocal range. A skilled songwriter, she can get away with a line like "Hay is for horses, it is not for girls" and still retain dignity and earth-mother warmth. Wainwright is fairly new to the singer-songwriter scene. As a teenager, she performed at coffeehouses and clubs in New York City, where her shyness about personal revelation moved her from original songs to traditional hootenanny music. After leaving music to spend more time with her family, she was drawn back in by her involvement in local children's theater. She's enjoyed great success as a touring artist in the Northeast, both solo and with her band: Liadain Clancy (vocals), Steve Murphy (guitar, mandolin, vocals), Cary Brown (keyboards, vocals), Greg Burrows (percussion), and Doug Wray (bass). Besides being a powerful vocalist, Wainwright operates the Bakers Cafe in Katonah, New York, a fine place for a meal. Her culinary creations are inventive and nourishing—just like her music.

what's available: There's just the one album, Sloan Wainwright ♪♪♪½ (Farkie, 1995/Waterbug, 1996) (prod. Steve Murphy, Sloan Wainwright, Pier, Cary Brown), and it's a winner. The album's two covers suggest her stylistic range; she does the Grateful Dead's "Box of Rain" and Sly and the Family Stone's "Stand"—and great work with each one, too. Her original compositions are by turns introspective ("On a Windy Day"), heartbreaking ("Poison Television"), and rousing (the anthemic "Hey Girl"). "Daddy's Water" places her in the persona of a happy small child, while "Without" reveals a settled woman's secret fantasies of escape. A second album is expected in 1998, and it will be exciting to see what direction this talented artist's work takes next.

influences:
◀◀ Laura Nyro, Joni Mitchell, Joan Armatrading, Over the Rhine, October Project

Pamela Murray Winters

Tom Waits

Born December 7, 1949, in Pomona, CA.

Billy Joel may claim he's the Piano Man, but if you picture the piano being in a smoke-filled bar in some cheap motel by the bus station where grizzled has-beens guzzle bargain brand whiskey, then Waits is "your" piano man. Waits's persona is genuine; he was born in the backseat of a Yellow Cab, grew up worshiping the Beats, learned to play music on cheap Mexican guitars, and dropped out of high school. Waits was living out of his car and working as a bouncer at a small club when he realized he should be inside the club performing his own songs. He drew inspiration for his early material from the burnouts and lowlifes hanging on to their vague impossible dreams that populated the underbelly of Los Angeles.

He had built up a substantial local following by the time he recorded his first album, Closing Time, in 1973. With its songs of raw emotion, lonely longing, and barstool beatnik banter sung in a voice that could generously be described as raspy, and sparsely backed by acoustic instruments, the album was hailed within the industry, but largely ignored by the public. With subsequent albums in the '70s, Waits consistently revisited the same themes and characters, while his music grew more diverse and esoteric and his voice grew more weary and guttural. By the time he switched labels in the early '80s, going from Asylum to Island, Waits had outgrown the confines of his early image. Through the '80s he recorded landmark avant-garde albums like Swordfishtrombones and Rain Dogs while also branching out into acting, playwriting, and soundtrack composing. In the '90s his work has grown even more recondite. For instance, in 1993 he worked with Beat author William Burroughs and opera director Robert Wilson on The Black Rider, a satirical take on an early nineteenth-century opera that melded conventional showtune melodies into a bizarre cacophony. Still, for all his critical acclaim and cultural trailblazing, he's never forgotten his roots; one of his most recognizable film roles was that of a booze-soaked limo driver living in a trailer with his coffee shop waitress wife (a perfectly cast Lily Tomlin) in Robert Altman's Short Cuts, exactly the type of character that Waits himself would have sung about on his early albums.

what to buy: Closing Time ♪♪♪♪♪ (Asylum, 1973, prod. Jerry Yester) is a stunning debut populated with barroom misfits longing for past loves (the heart-wrenching "Martha") and looking for new ones ("I Hope That I Don't Fall in Love with You"). The album also finds Waits's "singing" at his clearest and most melodic. Marking his maturation as an artist, Rain Dogs ♪♪♪♪♪ (Island, 1985, prod. Tom Waits) ups the ante from the equally ambitious Swordfishtrombones, the result being a sprawling 19-track musical collage combining elements from his earlier work, like beatnik scat and the occasional straightforward tune ("Downtown Train," which Rod Stewart would later make a hit), with all-new textures, beats, and instrumentations.

what to buy next: A bitter album that reflects Waits's growing impatience with the tepid audience response to his work, Small Change ♪♪♪♪ (Asylum, 1976, prod. Bones Howe) also marks a point in Waits's career where he both embraces and recoils from his past persona, as illustrated in songs like "The Piano Has Been Drinking (Not Me)" and "Tom Traubert's Blues." From the first track on Swordfishtrombones ♪♪♪♪½ (Island, 1983, prod. Tom Waits), the surreal "Underground," you can tell Waits has made a radical and ultimately rewarding departure from his early period. Though by no means definitive, Anthology of Tom Waits ♪♪♪♪ (Asylum, 1985, prod. Bones Howe, Jerry Yester) serves as a good introduction to Waits's Asylum era, with 13 great tracks, including a duet with Bette Midler on "I Never Talk to Strangers" and "Jersey Girl," which Bruce Springsteen would later make famous. Unfortunately, it's only available on cassette.

what to avoid: Depending on your level of fandom, you could say that The Early Years ♪♪½ (Bizarre/Straight, 1991, prod. Bob Duffey) and The Early Years, Volume 2 ♪♪½ (Bizarre/Straight, 1992, prod. Bob Duffey) offer a fascinating insight into Waits's, well, early years. More than likely, you'll find both volumes filled with unpolished and redundant material.

the rest:
Heart of Saturday Night ♪♪♪♪ (Asylum, 1974)
Nighthawks at the Diner ♪♪♪ (Asylum, 1975)
Foreign Affairs ♪♪♪½ (Asylum, 1977)
Blue Valentine ♪♪♪½ (Asylum, 1978)
Heartattack and Vine ♪♪♪♪ (Asylum, 1980)
Franks Wild Years ♪♪♪♪ (Island, 1987)
Big Time ♪♪♪½ (Island, 1988)
Bone Machine ♪♪♪♪ (Island, 1992)
Night on Earth ♪♪♪ (Island, 1992)
Black Rider ♪♪♪½ (Island, 1993)

worth searching for: Waits has done so many fascinating side projects that this category could merit its own page. He's shown up everywhere from the soundtrack of Bill & Ted's Bogus Jouney to a tribute to German composer Kurt Weill. One album especially worth combing the bins for is the soundtrack to the Francis Ford Coppola film One from the Heart ♪♪♪½ (Columbia, 1982, prod. Bones Howe), which found Waits teamed with an unlikely partner in country star Crystal Gayle. The album even earned Waits an Academy Award nomination for best score.

influences:
◀◀ Ray Charles, George Gershwin, Frank Sinatra, Ken Nordine, Randy Newman, Spike Jones

▶▶ Buster Poindexter, Rod Stewart, Bruce Springsteen, Beck, Bonnie Raitt

Alex Gordon

Frank Wakefield

Born June 26, 1934, in Emory Gap, TN.

Frank Wakefield is one of the most zany characters of bluegrass. A virtuoso mandolin player and songwriter, Wakefield is known for his backward-talking stage persona. The composer of such classic bluegrass tunes as "New Camptown Races," "Leave Well Enough Alone," "I Can't Forget Old What's Her Name," and "Hey Mr. Mando," he has turned the influence of Bill Monroe into a unique form of musical expression. Although Wakefield started his musical career at age five on a guitar he received from his father, he found his instrumental voice at age 16 through a mandolin he received from his mom. After playing guitar and mandolin at square dances and churches, he provided musical accompaniment for an evangelist named Brother Ike. Moving from Tennessee to Detroit in 1953, Wakefield began writing his own tunes. After meeting flatpicking guitarist Harley "Red" Allen, he helped to form a band with Allen, banjo player Don Reno, and fiddler Chubby Wise. In the early 1960s, Wakefield and Allen relocated to Washington, D.C. and formed the Kentuckians, featuring Bill Emerson, Bill Keith, Scott Stoneman, and Wise. The group's debut album was released in 1964. That same year Wakefield replaced mandolin player Ralph Rinzler in the influential urban bluegrass band the Greenbrier Boys. In the late 1960s, he moved to Saratoga Springs, New York. Although he lived for a short period in northern California, Saratoga Springs has remained his home since 1983. In 1974 Wakefield opened a show for the New Riders of the Purple Sage and became friends with their guitar player, David Nelson. The following year, he and Nelson formed the Good Old Boys with Don Reno and Wise. The group remained together for three albums. Wakefield released his most recent solo album, That Was Now, This Is Now, in 1997.

what to buy: Recorded during a 1975 concert, Frank Wakefield and the Good Old Boys ♪♪♪½ (Relix, 1992, prod. Leslie D. Kippel) captures the excitement and spontaneity of Wakefield's mid-'70s band. In addition to new versions of three of Wakefield's compositions, "New Camptown Races," "David, David," and "Jesus Loves His Mandolin Player Number Two," the set includes foot-tapping renditions of Monroe's "Bluegrass Breakdown" and "On and On," the New Riders of the Purple Sage's "Glendale Train," and Peter Rowan's "Panama Red."

what to buy next: The Kitchen Tapes ♪♪♪½ (Acoustic Disc, 1994, prod. David Grisman, Peter K. Siegel) was recorded by Wakefield and Red Allen during an informal session in April, 1963 at Allen's home in Hyattsville, Maryland. A duo recording, the album reflects two old friends and longtime musical collaborators jamming and having fun. In addition to five Wakefield originals, the album focuses on reworking traditional folk songs and seven Monroe tunes.

the rest:
Red Allen, Frank Wakefield, and the Kentuckians ♪♪♪ (Folkways, 1964)
She's No Angel ♪♪½ (Relix, 1974)
Pistol Packin' Mama ♪♪♪ (Round, 1975)
That Was Now, This Is Then ♪♪♪ (Rosewood, 1997)

influences:

- Bill Monroe, Merle Travis, Greenbrier Boys
- New Riders of the Purple Sage, Old and In the Way, David Grisman see also: Henry "Red" Allen

Craig Harris

Jerry Jeff Walker

Born Ronald Clyde Crosby (a.k.a. Paul Crosby), March 16, 1942, in Oneonta, NY.

Jerry Jeff Walker is one of music's most enduringly successful "cult" figures. His claims to national fame are his authorship of "Mr. Bojangles" (which hit the pop Top 10 for the Nitty Gritty Dirt Band in 1971) and his FM radio anthem "Up against the Wall, Redneck Mother." Walker is also credited with being one of the architects of country music's Outlaw movement during the 1970s. Though his raspy, uneven vocal style is an acquired taste, Walker's sly, eclectic songs continue to resonate with his ever-expanding fan base. Born and raised in upstate New York, his musical roots are in the Greenwich Village folk scene. In 1967 he made his first recordings with Circus Maximus, a psychedelic folk-rock band, for Vanguard. His first solo LP, Mr. Bojangles, was well-received by critics, but it sold poorly. Subsequent releases on different labels fared even worse. After moving to Austin, Texas in 1970, Walker signed with MCA and formed the Lost Gonzo Band (later incarnations would be dubbed the Bandito Band and the Gonzo Compadres). His progressive sound and style never caught on with country radio programmers, but he cultivated a reputation as an innovator and did manage to actually sell some albums; he received a gold record for Viva Terlingua in 1973. By the time the Outlaw movement died during the early 1980s, critics complained that Walker's LPs all sounded alike, and sales again fell off. His last major label outing was 1982's Cowjazz, which was an improvement over previous efforts, but didn't sell, either. In 1986 Walker started his own label, Tried and True Music, and sold cassettes to his vast mailing list of fans, expanding its reach via a licensing deal with Rykodisc. Walker's 1989 release Live at Gruene Hall was his most highly regarded LP in nearly a decade. His "comeback" was furthered by his 1991–93 stint as host of TNN's The Texas Connection. At present, Walker's career is on a nice roll: He's planning new releases on Rykodisc, MCA has repackaged much of his old material, and the crowds at his legendary birthday bashes get bigger every year. Iconography has its perks.

what to buy: Great Gonzos ♪♪♪♪ (MCA, 1991, prod. various) contains Walker's best-known songs "LA Freeway," "Up against the Wall, Redneck Mother," "Desperados Waiting for a Train" and more.

what to buy next: Live at Gruene Hall ♪♪♪♪ (Rykodisc, 1989, prod. Jerry Jeff Walker, Jim Rooney) is Walker's best live disc, featuring some funny and observant new material recorded in a Texas honky-tonk. It includes Chris Walls's "Trashy Women."

lawrence walker

Recorded in the mid-1970s, A Man Must Carry On, Volume I ♪♪♪♪ (MCA, 1997, prod. Michael Brovsky) and A Man Must Carry On, Volume II ♪♪♪ (MCA, 1997, prod. Michael Brovsky) show Walker at his most laid-back, with Volume One's busking version of The Music Man's "Pick a Little/Goodnight Ladies" leading into the rollicking "Don't It Make You Wanna Dance?" and Rodney Crowell's classic "Song for the Life." Volume II is mostly live, with lively versions of "Mr. Bojangles" and "LA Freeway," but is weighed down by several tracks of poetry readings. For a best-of set, The Best of Jerry Jeff Walker ♪♪♪♪ (MCA, 1980, prod. Michael Brovsky) is a pretty sparse affair, with only 10 tracks and no liner notes. Still, any collection with "LA Freeway" and "Desperados Waitin' for the Train" has two steps on the competition.

what to avoid: Walker's craggy vocal style doesn't mix well with the seasonal music selections on Christmas Gonzo Style ♪ (Rykodisc, 1994, prod. Lloyd Maines, Jerry Jeff Walker).

the rest:

Mr. Bojangles ♪♪♪♪ (Bainbridge, 1968/Rhino, 1993)
Driftin' Way of Life ♪♪♪♪ (Vanguard, 1968/1991)
Five Years of Gone ♪♪ (Line, 1969/1995)
Viva Terlingua ♪♪♪ (MCA, 1973)
Ridin' High ♪♪♪ (MCA, 1975/1990)
Gypsy Songman ♪♪ (Rykodisc, 1987)
Bein' Free ♪♪♪ (Line, 1990/1995)
Navajo Rug ♪♪ (Rykodisc, 1991)
Hill Country Rain ♪♪ (Rykodisc, 1992)
Viva Luchenbach ♪♪ (Rykodisc, 1994)
Night after Night ♪♪♪ (Tried and True Music, 1995) Scamp ♪♪♪ (Tried and True Music, 1996)

worth searching for: It's a Good Night for Singin' ♪♪♪♪ (MCA, 1976) is one of Walker's better regarded LPs from his peak years, though it's currently out of print.

influences:

◀◀ Guy Clark, Bobby Bare, Townes Van Zandt

▶▶ Steve Earle, Chris Wall

Ken Burke

Lawrence Walker

Born September 1, 1908, in Duson, LA. Died August 15, 1968, in Scott, LA.

Lawrence Walker built a reputation in Cajun music on his excellence in songwriting and the great dancabilty of his bands. He first recorded in the 1920s with his brother Elton on fiddle, playing a traditional Cajun style with strong hillbilly and blues influence. This shows up in their early recordings, which include several songs sung in English. Walker hit his prime in the 1950s with a rock-steady band featuring the superb steel playing of Dick Richard and Johnie Allan. He is renowned today for his compositions, which are considered classics of Cajun music and can be heard weekly in Cajun dance halls. They include the waltzes "Chère Alice," "Valse de Malchenceaux," "Tit Yeaux Noirs," "Bon Ton Rouley," and "Reno Waltz." The two-steps include "Mamou Two Step" and "Walker Special."

what to buy: Tribute to the Late Great Lawrence Walker ♪♪♪♪♪ (La Louisianne, 1985, prod. Carol Rachou Sr.), a best-of collection, contains a number of Walker's most famous waltzes: "Reno Waltz," "Unlucky Waltz," "Tit Yeaux Noir," and "Chère Alice." The recording quality is as funky and as raw as a Nirvana demo tape, but the high caliber of the songs and the musicianship shine through the sonic sludge of the mix.

what to buy next: A Legend at Last ♪♪♪♪♪ (Swallow, 1986, prod Floyd Soileau) brings together most of the other well-know Walker tunes including "Bon Temps Rouler," "Walker Special," and "Tout les Deux par la Memo." These are classic, very funky Cajun recordings with excellent (though unacknowledged) steel and fiddle playing along with Walker's highly influential accordion playing.

worth searching for: Cajun Honky Tonk ♪♪♪♪♪ (Arhoolie, 1995, prod. Chris Strachwitz) brings together Khoury label recordings from the early 1950s, including a number of Walker's tunes, several of which do not appear on either collection above. It's great to hear Walker play his version of Mayuse LeFleur's 1928 "Ton Papa Ma Sta D'ohr" and a smoking version of the "Bosco Stomp."

influences:

◀◀ Joe Falcon & Cleoma Breaux

▶▶ Dewey Balfa, Mark & Ann Savoy, Michael Doucet, Beausoleil

Jared Snyder

Kate Wallace

Born March 11, in Pasadena, CA.

Singer/songwriter Kate Wallace made her first public performance at Los Angeles' Palomino Club and later was a New Folk Finalist at the Kerrville Folk Festival in Texas. Before making her debut album, she had songs recorded by Billy Ray Cyrus and Neal McCoy. Some of the songs for her debut were chosen by surveying users of on-line country-music bulletin boards, who listened to demos and selected their favorite songs for inclusion. Wallace also was the first country act to have a music CD that doubled as a CD-ROM.

what's available: Kate Wallace ♪♪♪ (Honest Entertainment, 1995, prod. Brent Rowan, Rocky Schnaars, Kate Wallace) is solid folk/rock-influenced country and Wallace has a warm alto voice, but this album lacks the one knock-out song to make it special.

worth searching for: Keep an eye out for the promotional three-song CD-PLUS that contains music videos for "Dancin' on the Edge of a Heartache," "Hard Woman to Love," and "Saving It All for You."

influences:

◀◀ Mary Chapin Carpenter, Kim Richey

▶▶ Stephanie Bentley, Caryl Mack Parker

Brian Mansfield

Doug & Jack Wallin

Brother duo from Madison County, NC.

Doug Wallin (born 1919); Jack Wallin (born 1932), in Sodom, NC).

Doug and Jack Wallin come from Madison County, North Carolina, an area in the Appalachian mountains rich with song. Cecil Sharp, the famous British folk-song collector, even came to these mountains where he said singing was as common a practice as singing. Doug and Jack were raised right in the middle of all this music, many of their relatives and neighbors played music and sang. Jack came to prefer instrumental music (he plays fiddle, banjo, and guitar) while Doug likes to sing the old ballads that were popular with his parents during the '20s. In 1989 Doug received the North Carolina Folk Heritage Award and in 1990 he was awarded the prestigious Heritage fellowship from the National Endowment for the Arts in Washington, D.C.

what's available: Family Songs and Stories from the North Carolina Mountains ♪♪♪♪♪ (Smithsonian/Folkways, 1995, prod. Wayne Martin, Beverly Patterson, Daniel Patterson) was recorded due to a grant from the North Carolina Arts Council. The recordings were made in Doug Wallin's home in 1992 and 1993. On this recording you will hear many old ballads including the 15-stanza "The House Carpenter," which is a ballad sung in the Appalachian mountains that originated in England during the seventeenth century. This recording is a must have for fans of the unaccompanied ballad.

influences:

◀◀ Mary Wallin Sands, Lee Wallin, Berzilla Wallin

▶▶ Sheila K. Adams

Steve Gardner

Don Walser

Born September 19, 1934, in Braunfield, TX.

Tagged the Pavarotti of the Plains—for his pure tenor voice and his prodigious girth—Don Walser is a larger-than-life figure in more ways than one. Though he started playing in bands while still in his teens, Walser waylaid his music career until he retired from his day job as an accountant with the National Guard. Having grown up listening to the Grand Ole Opry and watching singing-cowboy movies, Walser remained determined to keep the music of his childhood alive. Now able to live his dream of being a touring and recording musician, Walser is doing just that. He's fond of saying he plays the Top 40—from 40 years ago. And so he does, mixing songs from Sons of the Pioneers, Faron Young, Merle Travis, and Hank Williams in with his own songs, which stand up to the comparison. Walser's high-pitched yodel, perhaps his music's most distinctive attribute, would sound astonishing if it came from a man half his age. But that's true of all his vocals. While some contemporary singers might put a tear in your beer, a weeper in Walser's hands will have you crying buckets. And his up-tempo tunes, with a little help from his Pure Texas Band, will have you thinking that the Texas Playboys are back in the saddle again. Perhaps the strangest thing about Walser's career, though, is that he has become an unlikely bridge between traditional country and the alternative rock scene; Ministry's Al Jourgensen and the Butthole Surfers are among his fans, and Walser is one of the few non-rock acts that can hold his own on the stage of Austin, Texas' alt-rock hot spot Emo's.

what to buy: They don't make 'em like Rolling Stone from Texas ♪♪♪♪♪ (Watermelon, 1994, prod. Ray Benson, T.J. McFarland) anymore, and that's too bad. Walser wrote the swinging title track when he was 18 years old and first recorded it during 1964. It still holds up as well as any other Lone Star state anthem and contains one of Walser's most astonishing yodeling performances. A hot, dusty wind blows through his version of Stan Jones's "Cowpoke," as well as Willie Nelson's "Three Days." Walser generously acknowledges one of his primary influences on "(The Party Don't Start) 'Til the Playboys Get Here," while "The John Deere Tractor Song" neatly pays tribute to family farming, a way of life that is fast disappearing. Altogether, Rolling Stone makes as strong a case as is possible for keeping traditional country music alive.

what to buy next: Nearly as fine is Texas Top Hand ♪♪♪♪½ (Watermelon, 1996, prod. Ray Benson, T.J. McFarland), which features a gorgeous take of the Sons of the Pioneers' "Tumbling Tumbleweeds," plus a high-stepping big-band version of Bob Wills's "Whose Heart Are You Breaking Now?" As a finale, Walser pulls out all the stops on a near-operatic version of the traditional Irish tune "Danny Boy." Bring an extra handkerchief for this one.

the rest:

(With the Pure Texas Band) Archive Series Volume I ♪♪♪½ (Watermelon, 1995)

(With the Pure Texas Band) Archive Series Volume II ♪♪♪ (Watermelon, 1995)

influences:

Jimmie Rodgers, Bob Wills & the Texas Playboys, Slim Whitman, Eddy Arnold

Asleep at the Wheel, Wylie & the Wild West Show

Daniel Durchholz

Joe Walsh

See: The Eagles

Wandering Ramblers

See: Dirk Powell, Carol Elizabeth Jones & James Leva

Kendra Ward & Bob Bence

Formed January 1984, in Bidwell, OH.

Kendra Ward (born July 21, 1961, in Pt. Pleasant, WV), hammered dulcimer, fretted dulcimer; Bob Bence (born September 19, 1963, in Atlanta, GA), guitar.

This duo has appeared on stage with the Statler Brothers, Debbie Reynolds, Bill Monroe, Allison Krauss, John Hartford, and a host of other top performers. They have toured the United States from coast to coast, and are international favorites in England, Scotland, and Wales. Kendra Ward has been described as "the Chet Atkins of the hammered dulcimer" and is "as much fun to watch as she is to hear!" She was raised in the Appalachian mountains and traditional music is her third-generation legacy. The instrument and the music are Ward's cultural heritage, passed down through the generations. She is simply the latest family member to carry forward a tradition which reaches back over a century. Since 1984 Bob Bence, an award-winning musician, has helped Ward create musical magic. His tasteful and unique guitar playing is the perfect compliment to her dynamic dulcimer style, but he is just as well-known for his spontaneous wit and charm. Bence is a multi-talented performer with years of stand-up and sketch comedy on his résumé. These skills help keep the couple's live performances unpredictable and very entertaining. Their recordings truly capture the spirit and energy of their live performances, spotlighting the hammered dulcimer and guitar. A touch of mountain dulcimer and bass have been added on select cuts to better reflect the sounds of their native Appalachia. Ward is also the author of a best-selling hammered dulcimer instruction book and two dulcimer songbooks. Ward and Bence recently began publishing a quarterly magazine for dulcimer lovers, The Dulcimer Times, which includes articles, reviews, music, instruction, and festival information for both the hammered and mountain dulcimer players.

what to buy: Dulcimer Country ♪♪♪♪ (Upcreek Productions, 1995, prod. Kendra Ward, Bob Bence, Jim Martin) is a pleasing selection of classics such as "Chinese Breakdown" and "Listen to the Mockingbird," mixed with traditional sounding originals such as "Roses to Rhubarb" and "Worley's Waltz." The energy and excitement of this duo is evident throughout the recording, with the wonderful waltzes allowing us to breathe for a moment, before they head into the next up-tempo selection. Robin Kessinger adds a nice guitar line on "Devil's Dream," underneath Ward's flying hammers. Some Glad Morning! ♪♪♪♪ (Upcreek Productions, 1994, prod. Jim Martin, Kendra Ward, Bob Bence) is an outstanding compilation of America's best-loved hymns including "Whispering Hope" and "I'll Fly Away." Martha Ward adds a background accordion accompaniment on several cuts which is a nice touch.

what to buy next: Way Down Yonder ♪♪♪½ (Upcreek Productions, 1991, prod. Jim Martin, Kendra Ward, Bob Bence) is a spirited recording of 20 traditional American tunes such as "Foggy Mountain Breakdown" and "Orange Blossom Special." Contributing musicians include Mike Blackburn (guitar) and Jim Martin (bass, tuba, cello, guitar). The Hammered Dulcimer Christmas Sampler ♪♪♪ (Upcreek Productions, 1992, prod. Kendra Ward, Bob Bence, Jim Martin) is a timeless collection of holiday treasures such as "Away in a Manager" and "Jingle Bells." Jim Martin also contributes a nice English horn as well as cello and guitar. All of these recordings are available from the artists at Upcreek Productions, 1513 Upcreek Road, Bidwell, Ohio 45614, or via e-mail upcreekpro@aol.com.

influences:

Kenneth Ward, Worley Gardner

Rick Thum, Scott Jackson

Heidi Cerrigione

Jennifer Warnes

Born March 3, 1947, in Seattle, WA.

A former background singer, Smothers Brothers Comedy Hour regular, and soundtrack diva, Jennifer Warnes has lived to tell the tale. Her singing style through the years has remained appealingly understated, yet it has left her at the mercy of her material, which has ranged from superb to merely middling. After a couple of early hits, including the enduring "Right Time of the Night," Warnes hit it big with songs from a pair of popular films, "Up Where We Belong," sung with Joe Cocker, from An Officer and a Gentleman and "Dirty Dancing (I've Had the Time of My Life)" a duet with Righteous Brother Bill Medley, from Dirty Dancing. While that paid the bills, Warnes revealed a taste for stronger stuff, notably rich interpretations of Leonard Cohen songs. Despite such triumphs as her album Famous Blue Raincoat, Warnes remains a generally underrated artist.

what to buy: Famous Blue Raincoat: The Songs of Leonard Cohen ♪♪♪♪♪ (Cypress, 1986/Private 1991, prod. C. Roscoe Beck, Jennifer Warnes) is a stunning collection that makes Cohen's brooding material accessible without prettifying it too much. Stevie Ray Vaughan adds a tasty guitar solo to "First We Take Manhattan," and Cohen himself sits in on "Joan of Arc."

the rest:

Best of Jennifer Warnes ♪♪♪ (Arista, 1982)
The Hunter ♪♪♪♪ (Private, 1992)

influences:

Leonard Cohen, Joe Cocker, John Prine

Indigo Girls

Daniel Durchholz

The Waterboys

Formed 1981, in London, England. Disbanded 1993.

Mike Scott, vocals, guitar, piano, Hammond organ; Steve Wickham, fiddle, Hammond organ, vocals; Anthony Thistlethwaite, saxaphone, mandolin, organ, harmonica; Colin Blakey, whistle, flute, Hammond organ, piano; Noel Bridgeman, drums, percussion; Jay Dee Daugherty, drums; Sharon Shannon, accordion, fiddle; Trevor Hutchinson, bass, bouzouki; Karl Wallinger, bass, keyboards; Roddy Lorimer, trumpet.

The history of the Waterboys is the story of Mike Scott's ever-evolving musical and spiritual quest. "I've always followed my heart or where my latest musical fascination is, which is rarely where popular trends have been going," says Scott. The band was characterized by a continually changing cast of characters supporting Scott, with one anchor being the musical versatility of Anthony Thistlethwaite. The Waterboys originated the "Big Music," an epic, sprawling, feverish sound of layered acoustic guitars, ecstatic horns, and charging, obscure, expansive poetics reminiscent of the myth making of Yeats and Blake. At its best, the music was transcendent, leading the listener into a new, exotic land brimming with imagery and feeling, and owed a debt to the earlier work of fellow shamans Patti Smith, Van Morrison, and Bruce Springsteen, as well as the Beatles. Scott then changed tactics for the band's fourth album, the astounding "Fisherman's Blues," bringing his Celtic passions to the forefront and toning down the Big Music. That particular "raggle taggle" version of the band broke up after two albums, the Waterboys became Scott and a slew of session players, and music returned to harder guitar riffs, with disappointing results. A recent solo outing by Scott is much closer to the spiritual essence he sought with "Fisherman's Blues," and on the tour supporting that album, Scott promised that next time around, he'd return with a band. So perhaps a new generation of the Waterboys is just around the corner.

what to buy: Different eras of the Waterboys produced distinctly different music. Early Waterboys is best sampled on A Pagan Place ♪♪♪♪ (Chrysalis, 1984, prod. Mike Scott) featuring the strumming acoustic majesty of the title cut. This Is the Sea ♪♪♪♪♪ (Chrysalis, 1985, prod. Mike Scott, Mick Glossop) is a fully realized epic that showcased the Scott-Wallinger partnership and included the shimmering "This is the Sea," "The Whole of the Moon," "Spirit," and "Old England." Late Waterboys is captured in all its glory on Fisherman's Blues ♪♪♪♪♪ (Chrysalis, 1988, prod. John Dunford, Mike Scott) with its embrace of the Celtic tradition. Commencing with the luminous title cut, the album includes a stirring cover of Van Morrison's "Sweet Thing," and the last recorded song written by Scott and Wallinger (with Hutchinson), "World Party." A masterpiece from start to finish.

what to buy next: Best of the Waterboys ♪♪♪♪ (Chrysalis, 1991, prod. Mike Scott) is a good retrospective of the band, with the addition of "Killing My Heart" an early electric version of "When Ye Go Away" and live "Old England." The Secret Life of the Waterboys ♪♪♪♪ (Chrysalis, 1994, prod. Mike Scott) is a collection of unreleased Waterboys studio recordings, radio sessions, live tracks, and "lost" b-sides recorded between 1981 and 1985.

linda waterfall

what to avoid: Dream Harder ♪♪ (Geffen, 1993, prod. Mike Scott, Bill Price) is a lackluster attempt to do the Waterboys without the Waterboys and is hopefully Scott's last attempt to become a guitar god.

the rest:
The Waterboys ♪♪♪½ (Ensign, 1983)
Room to Roam ♪♪♪ (Ensign, 1990)
Pagan Place (Alliance, 1997)
Best Of '81–'90 (Alliance, 1997)

worth searching for: A variety of CD singles and 12-inch releases exist, most prominently from the Fisherman's Blues era on forward. They include: And a Bang on the Ear/Raggle Taggle Gipsy (1989); The Whole of the Moon/Golden Age Medley (1991); Fisherman's Blues/Medicine Bow (Radio 1 Session/Lost Highway, 1991); Bring 'Em All In (with three previously unreleased songs), all on Chrysalis; and The Return of Pan/Karma/Mister Powers (Geffen, 1993).

solo outings:
Mike Scott:
Bring 'Em All In ♪♪♪♪ (Chrysalis, 1995)

Anthony Thistlethwaite:
Aesop Wrote a Fable ♪♪♪ (Rolling Acres, 1993)

influences:
◀◀ Bob Dylan, Patti Smith, Beatles, Bruce Springsteen, Van Morrison, Chieftains

▶▶ U2, Sinead O'Connor, World Party

see also: Sharon Shannon

Martin Connors

Linda Waterfall

Born c. 1950s, in Chicago, IL.

Before the grunge years of the late 1980s and early 1990s, Seattle's folk community created the greatest variety of original music. Linda Waterfall (the surname is an anglicized version of the Swiss, Wasserfallen) has been an active participant in that milieu since the mid-1970s, when she arrived with a freshly minted degree in visual art from Stanford. Raised in a suburban musical family and formally trained as a classical pianist, Waterfall's father actively discouraged her interest in music. Thus goaded in exactly that direction she came to Seattle and first formed Entropy Service, then played bass in a country-rock bar band called the Skyboys. Since release of her first LP in 1977, Waterfall has pursued her own vision as a solo artist. Typically her music is folk only in the broadest sense. That is, she writes her own material and swaddles it in gentle acoustic sounds that reflect interests in soft jazz, world music, and choral composition. That last interest has led to a series of grants from the Seattle Arts Commission and composition of a half-dozen more ambitious choral works.

what to buy: Most of Waterfall's eight releases have been self-released or are now out of print; many of them may still be available from the artist; try her Internet site at http://www.nwlink.com/~bsearle/biogra.htm. A Little Bit at a Time ♪♪♪ (Flying Fish, 1991; prod. Linda Waterfall, Cary Black) is a fair summation of her strengths and weaknesses. The years have made her voice less airy, and given it a rich, pleasing tone. Her songs are full of adult political "correctitude" and are, therefore, either cloying or profound.

what to buy next: As most of Waterfall's work is to be found amid dusty stacks of old vinyl, it's a bit catch as catch can. Body English ♪♪♪ (Flying Fish, 1987; prod. Linda Waterfall, Steve Heinke) is most easily found, and includes one movement in Waterfall's ambitious setting of Walt Whitman's "Leaves of Grass." My Heart Sings ♪♪♪ (Trout, 1979, prod. Linda Waterfall, Chip Hayward, Joe Hadlock) has an innocent charm that led one reviewer to suggest her smile could melt ice cubes. The final track, a lovely cover of "Blue Moon," precedes the Cowboy Junkies' rehabilitation of that classic by a good decade.

what to avoid: Everything Looks Different ♪ (Trout, 1983, prod. Linda Waterfall, Scott Nygaard) is a collaboration between Waterfall and Scott Nygaard, a Northwest new-ageish jazz guitar noodler.

the rest:
Bananaland ♪♪♪½ (Trout, 1981)
Flying Time ♪♪ (Trout, 1994)

worth searching for: Mary's Garden (Windham Hill/Trout, 1977) is notable if only for being one of Windham Hill's earliest releases. A self-titled four-song EP from Entropy Service (1974) is of some interest as an historical artifact.

influences:
◀◀ Joni Mitchell, Joan Baez

Grant Alden

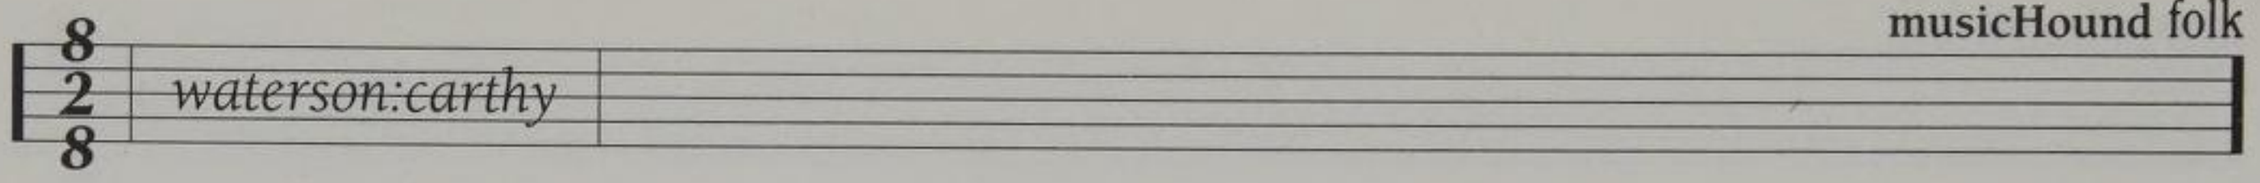
Muddy Waters

Born McKinley Morganfield, April 4, 1915, in Rolling Fork, MS. Died April 30, 1983, in Chicago, IL.

Muddy Waters was and ever will be the grand overlord of blues. Of regal mien, with voice deep and commanding, his body of work is a fundament of the idiom. Though mentored by an archetype—Delta patriarch Son House—he was a stone revolutionary when he hit Chicago, his music slamming the coffin lid on the waning wartime old guard with ruthless finality. Waters's first city recordings were surprisingly subtle and countrified, but soon he was cutting with his kick-ass band, issuing classic after intense classic for Chess. In the ranks of his band James Cotton, Little Walter, Peewee Madison, Otis Spann, Jimmy Rogers, Junior Wells, Buddy Guy, and others served formative stints. Incredible as it seems, by the mid-1960s he was on lean times. The Texas singer Angela Strebli met him in Chicago around that time and recalls that he felt strapped enough to ask her for a loan. Chess's answer to the slump was to jump on the hippie bandwagon with the famously ill-contrived Electric Mud, which came replete with a booklet that (God only knows why) included snapshots of Mud getting his hair conked. Though this LP stiffed decisively, Chess issued yet another attempt at psychedelizing Mud, the obscure After the Rain, the cover of which inexplicably showed Mud clutching a frog, and against all odds, has some—not many—good bits. (On the closing cut, "Bottom of the Sea," Mud gets really revved; his voice and the fuzz-toned guitars start sounding eerily alike, and the song achieves an incantatory power that makes it the most unlikely gem in the Great One's canon.) By the 1970s Waters was doing well again, not because of Chess (far from it, actually) but by fielding bands of such excellence that he was in constant demand at blues fests and in clubs. Example: in 1972 he took to the road with Louis Myers, Peewee Madison, Mojo Buford, Pinetop Perkins, and the drum/bass team of Fuzz Jones and Willie Smith, a unit as highly charged as even those he led in the 1950s. He continued cranking out LPs for Chess, and though he was generally in good voice himself, the projects were usually scuttled by lame sidemen (like the execrable rhythm guitarist whose unvarying skank-space-skank ruined Can't Get No Grinding) or gratuitous rock stars (London Sessions). In the mid-1970s Chess was inoperable, and there was an ominous window of time when Mud's music for the label was out of print. Which made it all the more welcome for him to reprise some of it for Blue Sky, a CBS-distributed label for which Johnny Winter sat at the soundboard. With Winter as his producer, Mud sounded more exciting than he had on any LP he'd done for Chess since the under-rated Fathers and Sons of 1969. It was an impressive career revival, expedited by the Texan eschewing celebrity sessions and/or other crap, and just letting Mud be Mud, backed by his working bands and old buds like James Cotton and Jimmy Rogers. In his latter years Mud was revered throughout the world. His road bands were still strong, his voice majestic, and when he played a slide solo on his trademark red Telecaster, the sound chilled your nape and rippled your blood. In 1983 he took leave of us, but his music and personality will forever be the bedrock of blues.

what to buy: "Long Distance Call," "I Just Want to Make Love to You," "I'm Ready," "She Moves Me," and other history-makers comprise His Best 1947–55 ♪♪♪♪♪ (MCA/Chess, 1997, prod. Leonard Chess). Fathers and Sons ♪♪♪♪♪ (MCA/Chess, 1989), initially released as a two-LP set, has been long undervalued despite an entirely credible studio "side" and a devastating live set on which Mud's henchmen include Paul Butterfield, Mike Bloomfield, "Duck" Dunn, Otis Spann, and the deadly drummer Sam Lay. "Same Thing" is one of the most darkly passionate readings ever of a Willie Dixon tune (and check Mud's poison slide!), while the two-part "Mojo" fairly explodes from one's speakers in what may well be the most frantic, hell-bent, riproaring blues performance ever recorded. Made on Stovall's Plantation in Mississippi, Complete Plantation Recordings: The Historic 1941–42 Library of Congress Field Recordings ♪♪♪♪♪ (MCA/Chess, 1993, prod. Alan Lomax, John Work) shows Muddy's debt to Delta masters Son House and Robert Johnson while still evincing his nascent mojo. Fine music from before he hit the city.

what to buy next: Anyone who thought Mud's latter-day dross on Chess meant he was past it gets comeuppance on Muddy "Mississippi" Waters Live ♪♪♪♪♪ (CBS/Blue Sky, 1989, prod. Johnny Winter), as the Great One goes ballistic. Accompanied by Winter, Cotton, Bob Margolin, and other seasoned cronies, Mud pounds out a relentless "Mannish Boy" glorious in its vigor and braggadocio. On his patented "She's 19 Years Ago" he plays a vicious slide solo, and other cuts similarly threaten the rafters. Pinetop Perkins shouldn't be so low in the mix but otherwise this is an exemplary recording of Mud tearing a place up good. They Call Me Muddy Waters ♪♪♪♪½ (MCA/Chess, 1990) comprises two early 1950s obscurities ("Howling Wolf" and "They Call Me Muddy Waters") and some little-known, mid-period Chess work. Dixon's rollicking paean to payday, "When the Eagle Flies," is a highlight, as are the woebegone "County Jail" and a very lowdown "Crawling Kingsnake." Some very fine stuff here.



what to avoid: Save your pennies for the above and pass these up even if they're in cheapo bins: Super Blues ♪ (MCA/Chess), Muddy—Brass and the Blues ♪ (MCA/Chess, 1966/1989), Can't Get No Grinding ♪ (MCA/Chess, 1973), The Muddy Waters Woodstock Album woof! (MCA/Chess, 1975), London Sessions woof! (MCA/Chess, 1972/1989), and Electric Mud woof! (MCA/Chess, 1968/1996). See above for just a few of the reasons.

best of the rest:
Muddy Waters at Newport ♪♪♪ (MCA/Chess, 1960/1986)
Sings Big Bill Broonzy ♪♪♪½ (MCA/Chess, 1960/1986)
Folk Singer ♪♪♪½ (MCA/Chess, 1964/1987)
The Real Folk Blues ♪♪♪½ (MCA/Chess, 1966/1987)
The Real Folk Blues Volume II ♪♪♪½ (MCA/Chess, 1967/1988)
Live at Mr. Kelly's ♪♪♪½ (MCA/Chess, 1971)
The Chess Box ♪♪♪♪½ (MCA/Chess, 1989)
Hard Again ♪♪♪♪ (CBS/Blue Sky, 1989)
I'm Ready ♪♪♪♪ (CBS/Blue Sky, 1989)
King Bee ♪♪♪ (CBS/Blue Sky, 1989)
His Best 1956–64 ♪♪♪♪ (MCA/Chess, 1997)

influences:
◀◀ Son House, Robert Johnson, Scott Bohanna ▶▶ Rolling Stones, Big Daddy Kinsey, Bob Margolin, Eric Clapton, Stevie Ray Vaughan

Tim Schuller

Waterson:Carthy

Formed c. 1994.

Norma Waterson, vocals; Martin Carthy, guitar, vocals; Eliza Carthy, fiddle, vocals.

Martin Carthy's notes for Common Tongue describe Waterson:Carthy as having "clitzpah"—and indeed, the feminine side of the family group are in the forefront of their recordings. Carthy generally stays in the background, while wife Norma Waterson and daughter Eliza Carthy shape the group's distinctive sound. The guiding spirit of the group is Waterson, whose deep, resonant voice suggests centuries of toil and more than a little pleasure.

what's available: Waterson:Carthy ♪♪♪♪½ (Topic, 1994, prod. Tony Engle) features strong lead vocals by Waterson; though the Carthy father and daughter each get a place at the microphone as well. Eliza Carthy's fiddle blends well with her father's guitar on "Ye Mariners All," which Martin Carthy sings. Common Tongue ♪♪♪♪½ (Topic, 1997, prod. Tony Engle), a more specifically English album than its predecessor, is helped by the presence of various Watersons on backing vocals. Saul Rose's melodeon duetting with Eliza Carthy's fiddle on "Valentine Waltz" is a sweet addition to the first track. Norma Waterson's solo effort, Norma Waterson ♪♪♪♪♪ (Rykodisc, 1996, prod. John Chelew), includes Martin and Eliza Carthy, as well as Roger Swallow (percussion), Danny Thompson (bass), and Richard Thompson (guitar). It emphasizes the work of a wide range of songwriters, including Jerry Garcia and Robert Hunter, Richard Thompson, Billy Bragg, and Lal Waterson. The mother-daughter vocal harmonies on "There Ain't No Sweet Man That's Worth the Salt of My Tears" are exquisite.

influences:
◀◀ Copper Family
▶▶ Marianne Faithfull

see also: Martin Carthy, Eliza Carthy

Pamela Murray Winters

Norma Waterson

See: Waterson:Carthy

The Watersons

Norma Waterson (born August 15, 1939), vocals; Mike Waterson (born January 16, 1941), vocals; Elaine (Lal) Waterson (born February 15, 1943), vocals; John Harrison (born 1966), vocals; Bernie Vickers (born 1972), vocals; Martin Carthy (born May 21, 1940), vocals (1972–present); Rachel Waterson (born April 3, 1966), vocals (1985–?).

The Watersons are one of England's great musical families. The group specializes in four-part harmony singing of both traditional and original material. Since its heyday in the 1960s and 1970s, several of its members have gone on to release solo albums or participate in other projects. Norma Waterson's marriage to Martin Carthy added a new dimension to the group, as Carthy joined them on many occasions. Waterson:Carthy is an instrumentally oriented offshoot featuring Norma and Martin's daughter Eliza Carthy.

what's available: Carthy joins bride Norma's family on For Pence and Spicy Ale ♪♪♪♪ (Shanachie, 1975, prod. Tony Engle), which contains wassails, work songs, and other traditional fare. The presentation is a capella, in a style similar to that of Young Tradition, though more elaborate. The reissue also includes some tracks by individual Watersons.

influences:
◀◀ Copper Family, Young Tradition

Steeleye Span, Richard and Linda Thompson, Cordelia's Dad

see also: Waterson:Carthy, Martin Carthy

Pamela Murray Winters

Doc Watson /The Watson Family /Doc & Merle Watson

Born March 2, 1923 in Deep Gap, NC.

It's difficult to grasp the far reaching influence of Doc Watson on traditional American music; since his "discovery" by folklorist Ralph Rinzler and a subsequent appearance in New York as part of Clarence Ashley's String Band, he has bestrode the traditional music world like the colossus he is. A multi-instrumentalist (guitar, banjo, autoharp, harmonica, mandolin), a wonderful singer with a rich, easy baritone voice, a treasure trove of traditional songs learned from family and friends, and an influence whose reach is incalculable (he popularized the practice of flatpicking fiddle tunes note for note on the guitar, for instance), nearly all Watson's recordings are worthwhile. He has recorded in a wide variety of styles and with a mind-boggling diversity of accompanists and partners, from family members—particularly son Merle (born 1949; died 1986), who became an accomplished slide guitarist and old-time banjo player in his own right—to Flatt and Scruggs, Chet Atkins, Jean Ritchie, and many more. Doc's participation in the Nitty Gritty Dirt Band's Will the Circle Be Unbroken in 1972 exposed him to an ever widening audience.

what to buy: Where to begin? Doc Watson and Clarence Ashley: The Original Folkways Recordings: 1960–62 ♪♪♪♪♪ (Smithsonian/Folkways, 1994, prod. Ralph Rinzler) contains material from the period when Watson was first becoming known in the world of traditional music. Contains 20 tracks previously unreleased. Doc Watson: The Vanguard Years ♪♪♪♪♪ (Vanguard, 1995, prod. Mary Katherine Aldin), four CDs worth of material from Vanguard's holdings recorded between 1963 and 1968, includes much unissued live material in various contexts. An example? Six duets with Watson's idol, Merle Travis, and three tracks with Clarence White, the young bluegrass guitar whiz whom Doc influenced greatly. The Doc Watson Family ♪♪♪♪♪ (Sugar Hill, 1994, prod. John Delgatto) contains material recorded live during the 1960s and early 1970s and features Watson surrounded by talented family members, including father-in-law, fiddler Gaither Carlton, son Merle, wife Rosa Lee, brother Arnold, his mother, and others in a festival of traditional Appalachian material for the most part. Watson Country: Doc and Merle Watson ♪♪♪♪ (Flying Fish, 1995, prod. Mitch Greenhill) is a sampling of Doc and Merle's work together for Flying Fish during the 1980s.

what to buy next: The reissue of 1963's The Watson Family ♪♪♪♪♪ (Smithsonian/Folkways, 1990, prod. Ralph Rinzler) with 11 new tracks makes it just as good as the Sugar Hill release that features Doc amid his talented family members. Old Timey Concert: Doc Watson, Clint Howard, and Fred Price ♪♪♪♪ (Vanguard, 1977, prod. Manny Greenhill)is a 1967 concert recorded live featuring Watson and frequent collaborators guitarist Clint Howard and fiddler Fred Price in a program of mostly traditional material. Docabilly ♪♪♪♪ (Sugar Hill, 1995, prod. T. Michael Coleman), which shows off Doc's rock and commercial-country roots, features guests Marty Stuart, Duane Eddy, and Junior Brown. Riding the Midnight Train ♪♪♪♪½ (Sugar Hill, 1986, prod. Barry Poss) finds Doc right at home surrounded by many of the best young bluegrass pickers in the business, displaying his bluegrass chops. Remembering Merle ♪♪♪♪ (Sugar Hill, 1992, prod. T. Michael Coleman) features Doc and son Merle in informal settings through the years. Although Watson and Monroe often performed duets live, the material on Bill Monroe and Doc Watson: Live Duet Recordings 1963–80 off the Record, Volume II ♪♪♪♪♪ (Smithsonian/Folkways, 1993, prod. Ralph Rinzler) was not available—except on a couple of rare bootlegs—until recently. Watson proves that he is a worthy duet partner for anyone, even the Father of Bluegrass Music.

what to avoid: With the caveat that Doc has never really made a bad record, he seems less comfortable with the mainstream country hotshots of the day in Good Deal! Doc Watson in Nashville ♪♪♪ (Vanguard, 1968, prod. Jack Lothrop) than in nearly any other context.

the rest:

Jean Ritchie and Doc Watson at Folk City ♪♪½ (Smithsonian/Folkways, 1963)
Doc Watson ♪♪♪♪ (Vanguard, 1964)
(With Merle Watson) Doc Watson and Son ♪♪♪♪ (Vanguard, 1965) Southbound ♪♪♪♪ (Vanguard, 1966)
Home Again! ♪♪♪½ (Vanguard, 1966)
Ballads from Deep Gap ♪♪♪♪ (Vanguard, 1967)
(With Flatt and Scruggs) Strictly Instrumental ♪♪♪♪½ (Columbia, 1967/County 1995)
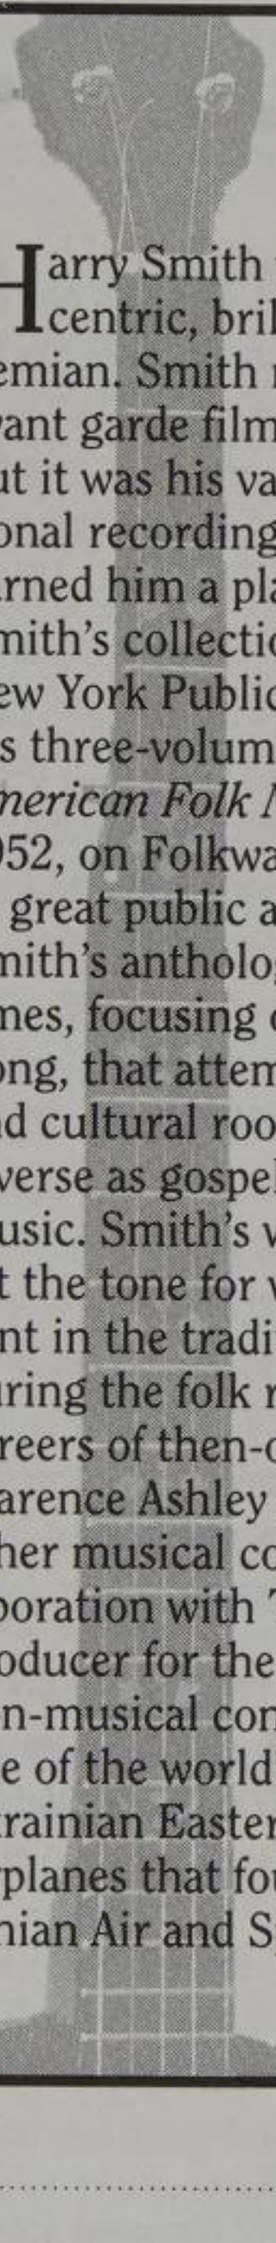
Doc Watson on Stage ♪♪♪♪ (Vanguard, 1970)
The Elementary Doc Watson ♪♪♪½ (Poppy, 1972/Sugar Hill 1993)
(With Merle Watson) Then and Now/Two Days in November ♪♪♪ (Poppy, 1973, 1974/Sugar Hill, 1995)
The Essential Doc Watson ♪♪♪♪ (Vanguard, 1973)



harry smith (1923–1991)

Harry Smith was an American original, eccentric, brilliant, and unapologetically bohemian. Smith made lasting contributions in avant garde film, visual art, and anthropology, but it was his vast collection of early traditional recordings, and how he used them, that earned him a place in folk music history. Smith's collection, which is now housed in the New York Public Library, formed the basis of his three-volume, six-record Anthology of American Folk Music, which first appeared in 1952, on Folkways, and was recently reissued, to great public acclaim, on compact disc. Smith's anthology was grouped in three volumes, focusing on Ballads, Social Music, and Song, that attempted to link the emotional and cultural roots of American music forms as diverse as gospel, country blues, and mountain music. Smith's work was vastly influential and set the tone for what was considered significant in the traditional American repertoire during the folk revival, as well as reviving the careers of then-obscure musicians like Clarence Ashley and Dock Boggs. Smith's other musical contributions include a film collaboration with Thelonius Monk and serving as producer for the first album by the Fugs. His non-musical contributions to culture include one of the world's largest collections of Ukrainian Easter eggs and a collection of paper airplanes that found its way into the Smithsonian Air and Space Museum.

Michael Parrish

Memories ♪♪♪ (United Artists, 1975/Sugar Hill, 1995)
The Watson Family ♪♪♪♪ (Rounder, 1977)
(With Merle Watson) Red Rocking Chair ♪♪♪½ (Flying Fish, 1981)
(With Merle Watson) Pickin' the Blues ♪♪♪½ (Flying Fish, 1983)
(With Merle Watson) The Guitar Album ♪♪♪½ (Flying Fish, 1983)
(With Merle Watson) Down South ♪♪♪♪ (Sugar Hill, 1984)
Portrait ♪♪♪ (Sugar Hill, 1987)
On Praying Ground ♪♪♪½ (Sugar Hill, 1990)
Sings Songs for Little Pickers ♪♪♪ (Sugar Hill, 1990)
Doc Watson and Family ♪♪♪♪½ (Vanguard, 1991)
My Dear Old Southern Home ♪♪♪½ (Sugar Hill, 1992)

worth searching for: Favorites of Clint Howard: Doc Watson and the Blue Ridge Mountain Boys ♪♪♪♪ (Rutabaga, 1988) presents Doc playing the traditional repertoire he seldom tackles these days with a sympathetic band. Reflections ♪♪♪ (RCA Victor, 1980), an interesting pairing of Doc and Chet Atkins, doesn't always work.

influences:
◀◀ Monroe Brothers, Merle Travis
▶▶ Clarence White, Tony Rice

Randy Pitts

Gillian Welch

Born October 2, 1967, in New York, NY.

With her Carter Family values, melancholy voice, and gothic imagery, Gillian Welch stands out from the country music mainstream like a black-and-white photograph in a Jackson Pollock exhibit. Mournful but never morose, the haunting originals that she pens with partner/guitarist David Rawlings recall old-timey country ballads, backwoods blues, and traditional gospel hymns while her lyrics offer the soul-purging proclamations of emotionally spent, hard-luck cases unsure if they can muster the strength for one last stand. Emmylou Harris's cover of "Orphan Girl" on 1995's Wrecking Ball set the stage for Welch's 1996 debut album, Revival, and her songs have also been recorded by Kathy Mattea. Her relentless touring with Rawlings—headlining club shows and opening for such stalwart troubadours as Guy Clark and Townes Van Zandt—has refined the forlorn harmonies and tortured textures of her music and produced one ringer for her forthcoming follow-up album, "Caleb Meyer," the spooky tale of a farmer's wife who kills her would-be rapist with a broken bottle.

what's available: Revival ♪♪♪♪½ (Almo Sounds, 1996, prod. T-Bone Burnett) is the riveting, relentless sound of hope draining out. But the darkness is tempered by striking imagery ("The night came undone like a party dress/and fell at her feet in a beautiful mess"), a knowing wink to country's roots ("Paper Wings" could pass for a Patsy Cline outtake) and the stark but comforting beauty of Welch's singing. The repeat button on

Doc Watson (© Jack Vartoogian)

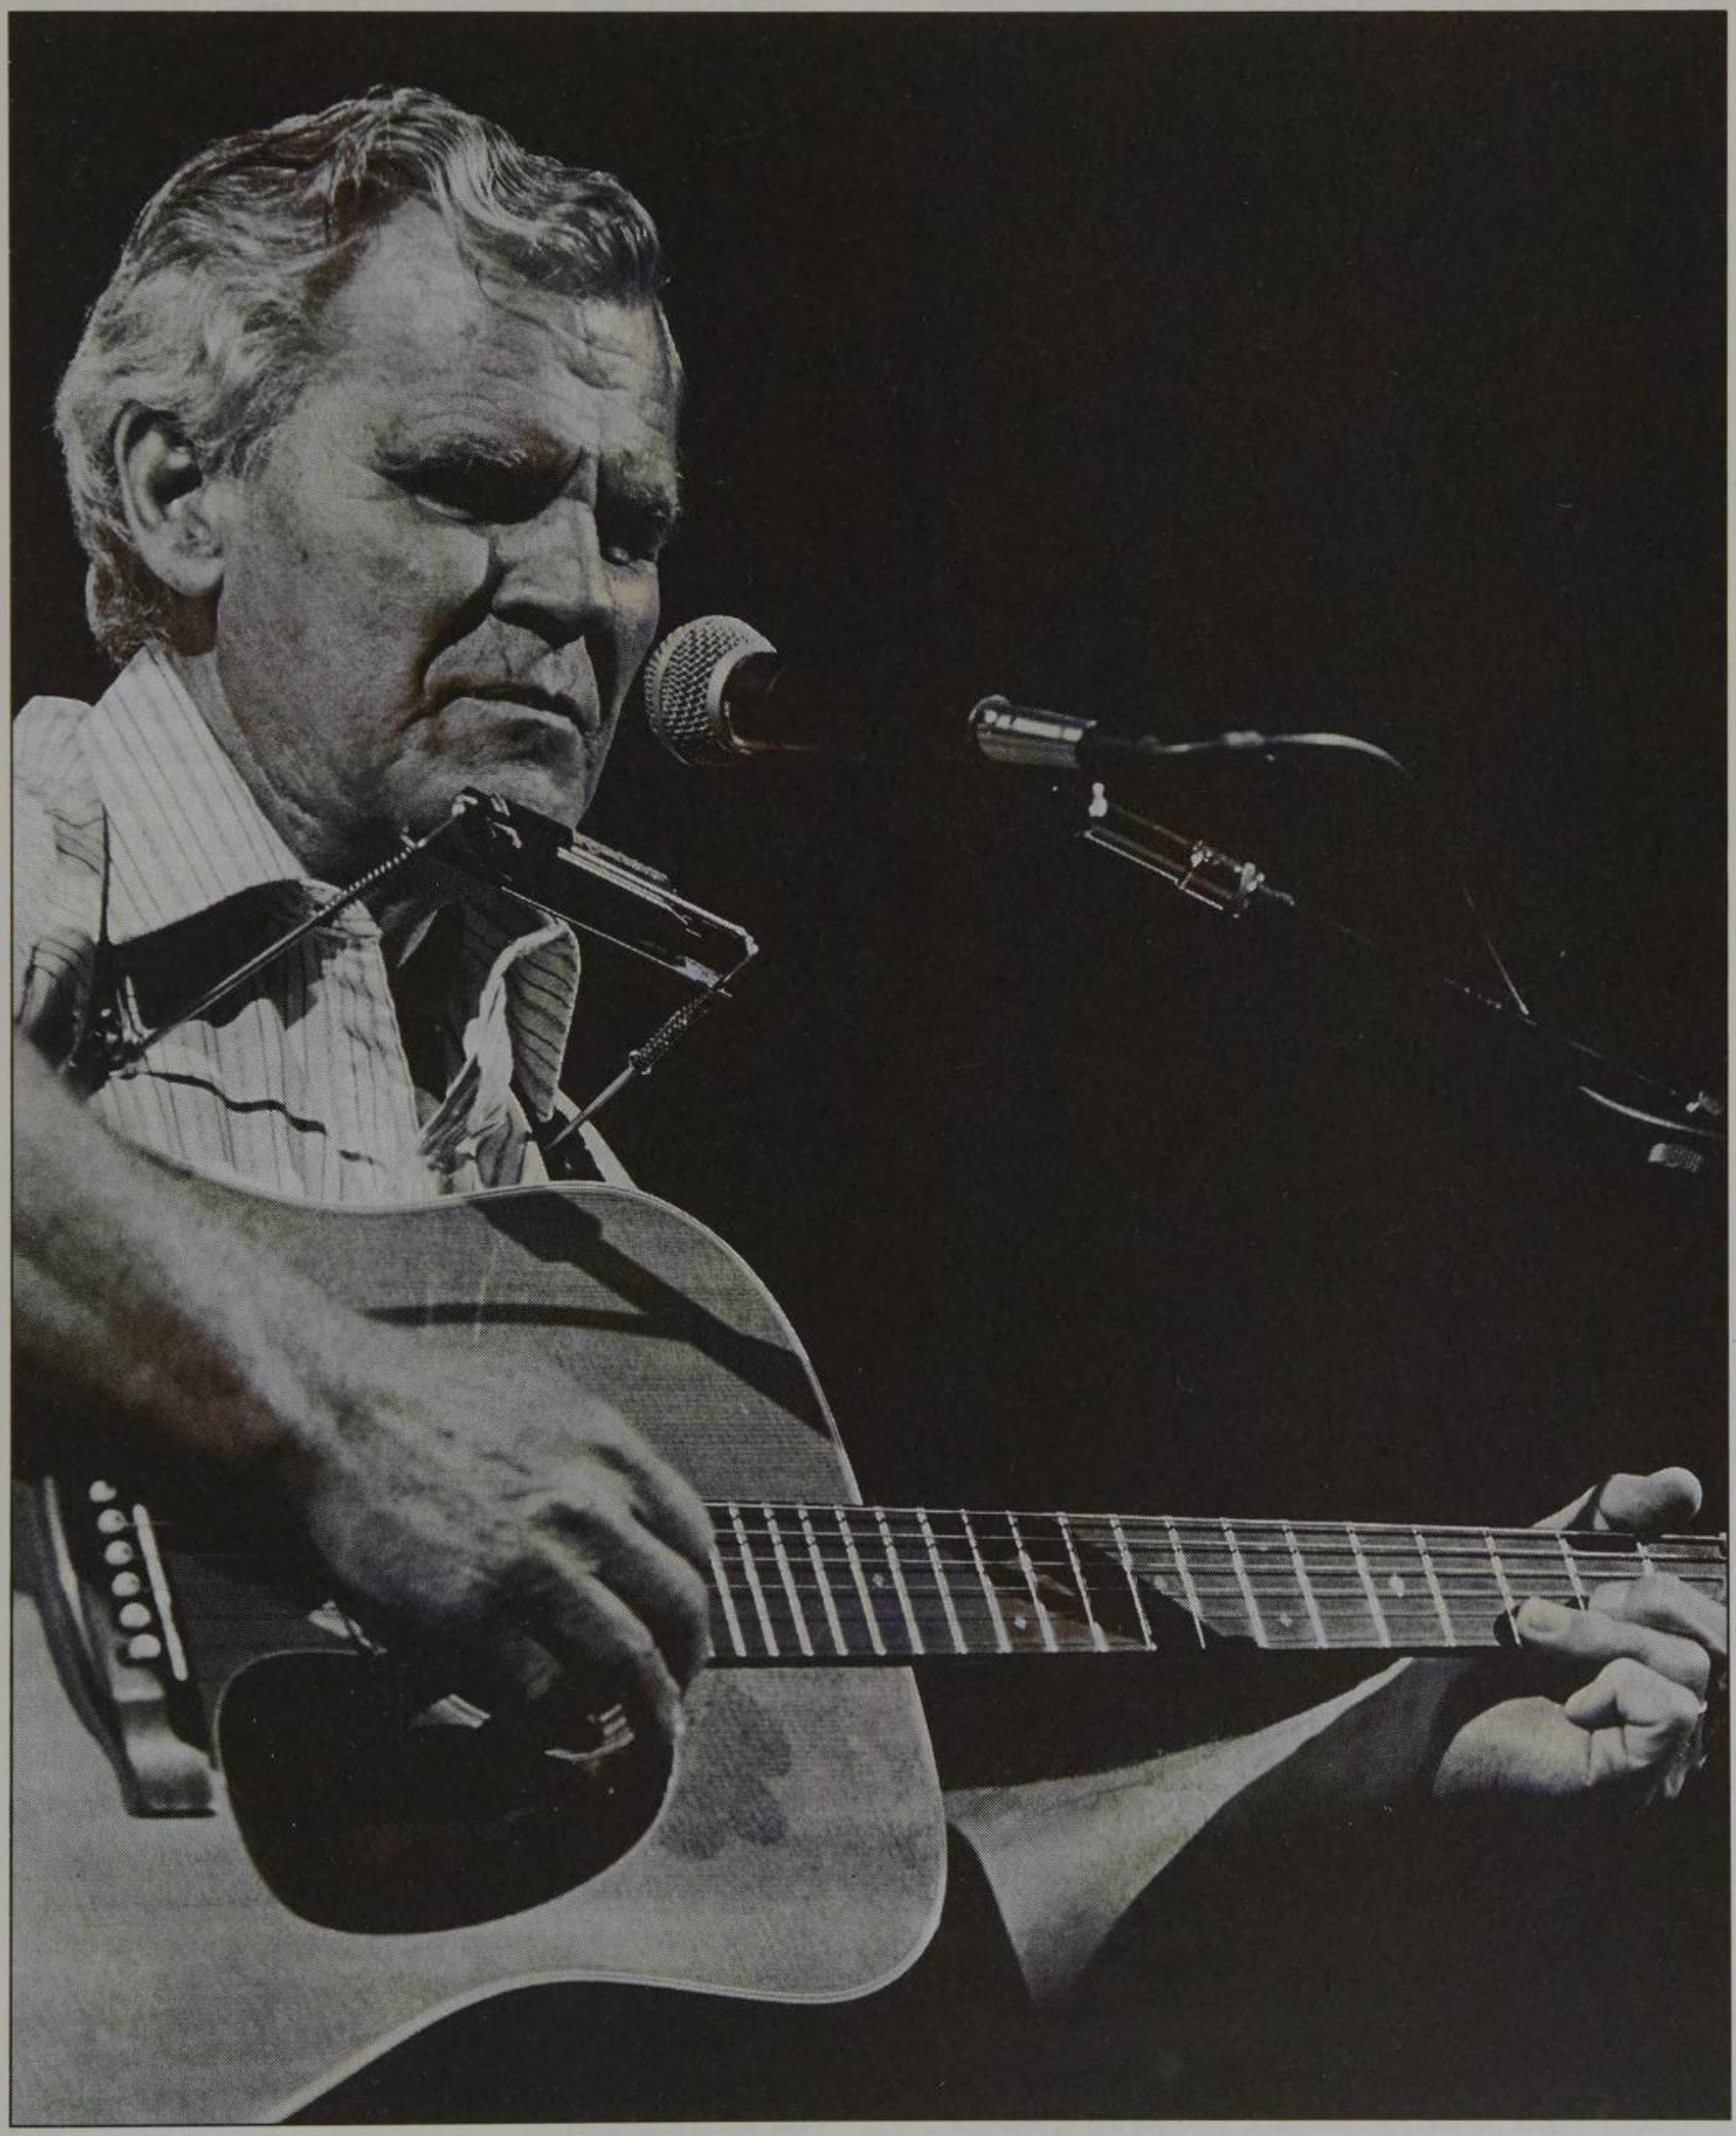
gillian welch



kevin welch

your CD player was designed for the hymn-like "By the Mark" and the chilling "Tear My Stillhouse Down," the deathbed-plea of a cirrhosis-stricken bootlegger.

influences:

Townes Van Zandt, Carter Family, Stanley Brothers

Parlor James

David Okamoto

Kevin Welch

Born August 17, 1955, in Long Beach, CA.

Born in California and raised in Oklahoma, Kevin Welch's alternative-leaning music has more to do with the sound of the Great Plains and left-coast country rock than it does with Nashville. Still, he made his reputation in the Music City song mills, cranking out hits for Gary Morris, Moe Bandy, the Judds, Don Williams, Ricky Scaggs, and others before stepping to the microphone himself. Welch's songs carry a feeling of restlessness that's also conveyed in the term often used to describe them, "Western Beat." Also the name of his second album, Welch has said that it's meant to convey not just an image of cowboys and campfires, but also "beat" in the sense of Jack Kerouac's constantly on-the-move Beat generation. A critical darling, Welch has yet to taste popular acclaim. But rather than play the game in the usual fashion, he has joined with fellow musicians Kieran Kane, Tammy Rodgers, and Harry Stinson to form the artist-run record label, Dead Reckoning.

what to buy: Getting off of the major-label treadmill has been good for Welch. On his first effort recorded for his own imprint, Life down Here on Earth ♪♪♪♪ (Dead Reckoning, 1995, prod. Harry Stinson, Kevin Welch), you can almost hear him relax, playing music he knows is good without having to write to whatever style or topic is currently in fashion. Welch draws on a wealth of sources, including Celtic music ("Pushing up Daisies"), gospel ("Life down Here on Earth"), folk ("Wilson's Tracks"), bluegrass ("The Love I Have for You"), and hard-bitten country ("Troublesome Times"). The cast includes fellow Dead Reckoners Rodgers, Stinson, and Kane, Mike Henderson, former NRBQ guitarist Al Anderson, and gospel group the Fairfield Four.

the rest:

Kevin Welch ♪♪♪½ (Reprise, 1990)
(With the Overtones) Western Beat ♪♪♪½ (Reprise, 1992) worth searching for: On the Dead Reckoners' A Night of Reckoning ♪♪♪ (Dead Reckoning, 1997, prod. Harry Stinson) Welch joins compatriots Henderson, Rodgers, Stinson, Kane, and others for an album-length guitar pull that defines the label's raison d'être as well as anything.

influences:

Gram Parsons, J.D. Souther, Eagles, Guy Clark, Billy Joe Shaver

Daniel Durchholz

Kitty Wells

Born Muriel Deason, August 30, 1919, in Nashville, TN.

The undisputed "Queen of Country Music," Kitty Wells (the name comes from an old folk song) took the role of women in country music to a then-unexplored level during the early 1950s, and became country's first genuine female star. As one half of the Deason Sisters with her cousin Bessie Choate during the 1930s, Wells worked on WSIX radio in Nashville. In 1938 she married Johnny Wright, with whom she performed in a trio, along with his sister, Louise. When Jack Anglin entered the picture, forming a duo with Wright (backed by a band that featured a young fiddler by the name of Chet Atkins), Wells sang with the pair occasionally. Wells's first records, released at the same time Johnnie and Jack were enjoying lots of success, were gospel records that didn't sell. Although she planned to retire to raise a family, Decca executive Paul Cohen asked her to record a song that he felt would be an answer to Hank Thompson's hit, "The Wild Side of Life." In a move that would change the course of musical history for women, Kitty released the playful indictment of the male species, "It Wasn't God Who Made Honky Tonk Angels," which spent six weeks at the top of the country chart in 1952. During the eight-year history of the Billboard charts up to that time, Wells was the first woman to have a solo Number One hit. She wouldn't have another chart-topper until 1961, with "Heartbreak, U.S.A," while her second-biggest hit, "Makin' Believe" (Number Two, 1955), spent 15 weeks trailing Webb Pierce's "In the Jailhouse Now." While the 1960s saw a steady decline in her record sales (Decca dropped her in 1975), Wells remained active, touring and recording for smaller labels. She was elected to the Country Music Hall of Fame in 1976 and remains one of the artists most often cited by female country acts as both an inspiration and a pioneer. In 1988, for a cut on her Shadowland CD, k.d. lang brought together producer Owen Bradley and three of the women whose classic music he produced through the years: Loretta Lynn, Brenda Lee, and Wells.

what to buy: Country Music Hall of Fame ♪♪♪♪♪ (MCA, 1991) features the absolute best-of collection of the indomitable Kitty.

what to buy next: Dust on the Bible ♪♪♪♪ (MCA Special Products, 1994) is one of the few original (non-greatest hits) albums still in print from Kitty. It's a thoroughly enjoyable gospel collection, usually available at a bargain price.

what to avoid: The best thing you can say about Country Spotlight—Kitty Wells ♪♪ (K- Tel, 1991)? It's only 25 minutes long.

the rest:

Greatest Hits ♪♪♪ (MCA, 1987) (cassette only)
The Golden Years ♪♪♪ (Rounder Special Series, 1989) (cassette only) Greatest Hits Volume I ♪♪♪ (Step One, 1989)
Greatest Hits Volume II ♪♪ (Step One, 1989)
Queen of Country Music ♪♪ (Laserlight, 1992)
Greatest Songs ♪♪♪ (Curb, 1995)
20 Hits ♪♪♪ (TeeVee, 1995)
Greatest Hits ♪♪♪ (King, 1995)
It Wasn't God Who Made Honky Tonk Angels ♪♪♪ (MCA Special Products, 1996)

worth searching for: The Queen of Country Music ♪♪♪♪ (Bear Family, 1993) is a four-disc box set that Wells fanatics will find indispensable.

influences:

◀◀ Carter Family, Johnnie & Jack

▶▶ Loretta Lynn, Iris DeMent

Stephen L. Betts

Paula Joy Welter

Born July 1, 1951, Cook County, IL.

A northern California songwriter who only began songwriting during the early '90s, Paula Joy Welter sounds as if she's been writing all her life. The six-time winner of the "Best Song" competition at monthly Northern California Songwriters Association open mike competitions, writes lovely sentimental songs with straightforward rhymes on a diversity of subjects. Some topics are introspective and extremely personal, but she is also capable of writing a song with universal appeal ("A Sky with No Blue"). Her lyrics are emotionally moving and it's easy to simply close your eyes and let her paint a vivid picture in your mind. Welter's intriguing guitar finger picking style is an excellent accompaniment to her resonant alto voice and adds to the appeal of her music.

what's available: Morning Light ♪♪♪♪ (Starry Sky Music, 1995) is Welter's debut recording and consists exclusively of songs she has written. The 10 ballads include "Joanna's Gift," describing a stranger's kindness; "No Matter If," a parent's encouragement to a child about to leave home; and "Calling You Home," which describes the dreaded phone call about a loved one in an accident and how love can overcome the terror. "A Sky with No Blue," is a wishful love song that is expressively accompanied by piano (Barbara Higbie) and soprano saxophone (Jim Rothermal). Nina Gerber produced the album and her touch is evident throughout. A cast of 13 talented musicians including Cary Black, Laurie Lewis, Sally Van Meter, and Gerber on guitar, weave superb support around Welter's beautiful voice. This is an incredible effort for a debut recording and will make you reach for the repeat button for another listen. Morning Light is available from Starry Sky Music, 2850 Mace Road, Placerville, California 95667.

influences:

◀◀ Joni Mitchell, Peter, Paul & Mary

▶▶ Cheryl Wheeler, Joni Bishop

Heidi Cerrigione

Susan Werner

Born c. 1965 in Iowa.

Susan Werner has been playing in the big leagues of folk since the early 1990s. Acclaimed by such critics as the New York Times' Stephen Holden, she's toured with Richard Thompson and Joan Armatrading and enjoys steady airplay on AAA radio. Werner's background is distinctly non-folky: She played piano and saxophone in her native Iowa and studied opera at Temple University. Her jazz background informs her guitar playing as well as her singing. Her cabaret-style vocal delivery sounds forced to some, gorgeous to others. She's a hard worker and a consistently entertaining live performer, and she's beginning to take more chances with her music.

what's available: Midwestern Saturday Night ♪♪♪ (Susan Werner, 1993, prod. Grant MacAvoy) suffers from an excess of tremolo but contains some great songs, notably "Born a Little Late (The Baby Boomer Song)." Live at the Tin Angel ♪♪♪½ (Susan Werner, 1993) provides a taste of Werner in a guitar/vocal setting, and it's a rewarding taste. A couple of her best compositions ("My Mother's Garden" and "Ain't I Lonely Tonight") appear only here, as does an appropriately overdone "La Vie en Rose." Last of the Good Straight Girls ♪♪♪♪ (Private

kelly werts

Music, 1995, prod. Fernando Saunders) represents a creative breakthrough; it's as if the tragicomic masks are slipping. The lush instrumentation stands up to Werner's bold voice, and Paul Simon's "Something So Right" represents an inspired match of song and singer.

influences:

◀◀ Maura O'Connell, Nanci Griffith, John Prine

Pamela Murray Winters

Kelly Werts

See: The Plaid Family

Camille West

Born in 1956, in NY.

The self-styled "Suburban Mother from Hell" is a living example of the classic arrested career: no matter how brilliant you are, your rise to stardom will tend to stall if you have to fix dinner and pick up the kids from soccer practice. Despite having been a protégé of the late Lena Spencer (queen of one of folkdom's most venerable venues, Caffe Lena in Saratoga Springs, New York), and despite having produced one of the most cutting, cohesive programs of funny songs ever released, Camille West remained largely anonymous until two things happened: First, National Public Radio broadcast a feature spot on her album, and in the process created a particular buzz for her sea-chantey sendup "The Nervous Wreck of Edna Fitzgerald"; and early in '97, songwriter/funny girl Christine Lavin retired from the "Four Bitchin' Babes" road show, creating a vacancy West was invited to fill.

what's available: Mother Tongue ♪♪♪♪♪ (Mother Tongue, 1995, prod. Tony Markellis) is the one full album exclusively to West's name, and it may be hard to top. Subtitled "Maternal Madness by Month," the album's 12 songs each correspond to a month in the year, and to a different feminine character. An involved conceit, but the songs are skillfully crafted and relentlessly funny. "Edna Fitzgerald" is here; a paean of unrequited love to a dentist titled "Root Canal of the Heart," a twisted Edith-Piaf-meets-Greenpeace spoof, "Save the Snails," and more. The impeccable production, roster of all-star sidemen, and consistent "stylistic correctness" serve only to make these songs even more funny.

worth searching for: Gabby Road–Out of the Mouths of Babes: Life According to the Bitchin' Babes ♪♪♪ (Shanachie, 1997, prod. Sally Fingerett, Debi Smith) is West's debut with this popular quartet of funny women, currently consisting of West, Debi Smith, and alumni Megan McDonough and Sally Fingerett. West's songs here are all duplicated on the Mother Tongue album, but the live ambiance is refreshing and the foursome's interplay makes it a worthwhile listen.

influences:

◀◀ Christine Lavin, Peter & Lu Berryman

▶▶ Emily Caitz, John Forster, Dar Williams

see also: Four Bitchin' Babes

Chris Rietz

Cheryl Wheeler

Born July 10, 1951, in Baltimore, MD.

Straddling the line between folk and country, Cheryl Wheeler's biggest challenge has been squeezing both of her musical personalities—sensitive songwriter and sinister satirist—onto one album. In concert, the husky-voiced vocalist relies on a wry, raucous sense of humor that sends fans in search of her CDs, only to discover that much of her recorded repertoire consists of introspective ballads. Wheeler's move out of the coffeehouse circuit began in 1986 when Jonathan Edwards hired her to play in his band and produced her self-titled debut album. After releasing Half a Book (featuring the adult contemporary chart-grazer "Emotional Response") on the now-defunct Cypress label, Wheeler signed with Capitol's Nashville division in 1990. But even the Midas touch of noted Randy Travis producer Kyle Lehning couldn't help the label figure out how to promote Circles and Arrows, which ranged from the beautiful "Aces" (a 1992 hit for Suzy Bogguss) to the weird "Estate Sale," a riotous tune about the joys of rifling through dead people's houses in search of bargains. Wheeler has found a more supportive home with Rounder's Philo subsidiary, where she finally hit her stride in 1995 with Mrs. Pinocci's Guitar, the first album that makes her multi-faceted personality come across as a complex human being, not some guitar-toting Jekyll and Hyde.

what to buy: Mrs. Pinocci's Guitar ♪♪♪♪ (Philo, 1995, prod. Jonathan Edwards, Cheryl Wheeler) mixes playful full-band arrangements with spare, demo-like acoustic guitar performances. It also offers the ideal balance of moods and material: in between such love songs as "Further and Further Away" and "So Far to Fall" and the disarmingly vulnerable demo of "One Love," Wheeler copes with a mid-life crisis on "Is It Peace or Is It Prozac?," mocks right-wing conservatism on the Jonathan Swift-like "Makes Good Sense to Me" ("In whose sick mind did it ever occur/that a choice like that should be up to her?"), and rocks with surprising conviction on "Does the Future Look Black?"

what to buy next: Circles and Arrows ♪♪♪♪ (Capitol, 1990/ Rounder, 1995, prod. Kyle Lehning) is her most polished and country-sounding album, thanks to such guests as Mark O'Connor, Vince Gill (who sings harmonies on "Aces"), Pam Tillis, and Jerry Douglas. Given the seamless sound and emotional clout of such acoustic ballads as "Don't Wanna," "Miss You More Than I'm Mad," and "Arrow," the irreverent "Estate Sale" might have worked better as a hidden bonus track.

what to avoid: Her debut album, Cheryl Wheeler ♪♪ (North Star, 1986, prod. Jonathan Edwards) includes "Quarter Moon" and her original versions of "Arrow" and "Addicted" (later a hit for Dan Seals), but the cheesy production lends a goopy sentimentality to songs that are already pushing the emotional envelope.

the rest:
Half a Book ♪♪♪ (North Star, 1987)
Driving Home ♪♪♪ (Philo, 1993)

worth searching for: Christine Lavin Presents: Laugh Tracks, Volume I ♪♪♪ (Shanachie, 1996, prod. Steve Rosenthal, Christine Lavin) collects live performances of neo-novelty songs by the Chenille Sisters, Vance Gilbert, Chuck Brodsky, and others. Wheeler contributes "Potato," a silly ode to the starchy vegetable sung to the tune of "The Mexican Hat Dance."

influences:
◀◀ Phoebe Snow, Tracy Chapman, Christine Lavin ▶▶ Mary Chapin Carpenter, Don Henry, Maura O'Connell

David Okamoto

Erica Wheeler

Born in MD.

Erica Wheeler is one of the promising newer acoustic musicians on the American folk scene. A self-taught vocalist and guitarist, she began writing songs in high school. After graduating from Hampshire College in Massachusetts, she became a mainstay of the Iron Horse, the renowned club in Northampton, Massachusetts. She released her first full-length CD in 1992 and her first album for the Signature Sounds label in 1996. Her conversational alto is a warm, engaging vehicle for her pensive lyrics and melodies.

what's available: The Harvest ♪♪♪♪ (Signature Sounds, 1996, prod. Laurie Lewis) shows a strong bluegrass influence courtesy of producer-fiddler Laurie Lewis. The collection of Wheeler's compositions (and one Claudia Schmidt cover) also features Darol Anger, Barbara Higbie, and Todd Phillips.

influences:
◀◀ Nanci Griffith, Ferron, Bonnie Raitt, Bill Morrissey
▶▶ Salamander Crossing

Pamela Murray Winters

Dan Wheetman

See: Marley's Ghost

John Whelan

Born June 14, 1959, in Luton, England.

Accordion player John Whelan has been a fixture in the American Irish music scene for the past several years. His personal and musical openness has made him a popular addition to many different musical projects. A rhythmic, driving player with an ear for a good tune, Whelan got his first lessons from his father and from the great Clare fiddler Martin Mulkere. A multiple winner of All-Ireland Titles, he has been a professional player since recording his first album, The Boy from Wexford, at the tender age of 14. Whelan has performed in a duo with Eileen Ivers, as a member of the folk rock Kips Bay Ceili Band, and with fiddlers Seamus Connolly and Ruthie Dornfeld. He currently performs with fiddler Liz Knowles and guitarist Robin Bullock, as well as with the Kips Bay Ceili Band.

what to buy: On Fresh Takes ♪♪♪ (1987 Green Linnet, prod. Mick Moloney), Whelan and Ivers take traditional Irish music and bend it, twist it, and shape it to their own desires. Accompanied by guitarist Mark Simos, the duo tear through traditional tunes and their own compositions, stretching a note or phrase here, throwing in a blues or old-time lick there. In the hands of musicians less deeply schooled in the tradition, this kind of approach could destroy the music, but these masters can walk the tightrope between tradition and innovation without falling off. Highlights include the sweet hornpipe "Desuanay," written for a French accordion player, and the killer version of "Darach deBruin's Reel." Both musicians have since gone on to push the Irish/Celtic envelope even further, Ivers with Riverdance and her own recordings and John with his own albums and the Kips Bay Ceili Band.

what to buy next: Celtic Crossroads ♪♪♪ (Narada, 1997, prod. John Whelan) finds our man recording on the Narada label. Formerly the domain of a bunch of boring, new-agey schlockmeis-ters, Narada has sensed gold in the hills of Erin and begun to release a range of "Celtic" music recordings focusing on the more sedate side of the music. In keeping with this program Whelan never breaks loose on this album, but instead explores the more lyrical side of his music, focusing on his own compositions. Joined by a stellar cast including Irish musicians, a string quartet, and Nashville stalwarts Tim O'Brien, Kinny Landrum, and Kathy Mattea, Whelan has made a record straddling, maybe even crossing, the commercial line. What saves this record is his innate sense of a good tune. Even if he doesn't tear through "Miss Monaghan's" or "The Bucks of Oranmore" as we crusty traditionalists would like, he plays good solid tunes that fit within the tradition and maybe push it forward a little bit.

what to avoid: Celtic Reflections: Misty-Eyed Morning ♪♪♪ (Narada, 1996, prod. John Whelan) is just a little too sleepy, and lacking the bluegrass touches that made Celtic Crossroads more lively. The highlight is a new recording of his waltz "My Ballingarry Lady" written for his mother.

the rest:
Flirting with the Edge N/A (Narada, 1998) worth searching for: From the Heart ♪♪♪♪ (Oenoke, 1990, prod. John Whelan), now sadly out of print, was an Irish musician's delight. Strong playing, great settings, and a brace of new tunes by Whelan and others mixed with some old standards. Guests Jerry O'Sullivan and Seamus Connolly keep things hopping, but there's room for a couple of sweet waltzes as well. It's a shame Narada won't go out on a limb and release this fine example of traditional Irish music alongside Whelan's more recent recordings.

solo outings:
Kips Bay Ceili Band:
Digging In ♪♪♪ (Green Linnet, 1993)
Into the Light ♪♪♪ (Green Linnet, 1996)

influences:
◀◀ Seamus Connolly, Brendan Mulkere, Paddy O'Brien ▶▶ Karen Tweed, Seamus Egan, Sharon Shannon see also: Eileen Ivers, Helicon

Tony Ziselberger

Whirligig

Formed in NY.

Greg Anderson, bouzouki, cittern, mandolin, bass, vocals; Lisa Gutkin, fiddle, baritone violin, vocals; Paul Kovit, guitar, mandolin, vocals; Shannon Anderson, vocals (left group in 1996); Matt Darriau, flute, saxes, clarinets, whistles, kaval, gaida; Jerry O'Sullivan, pipes (left group in 1997), Yves Duboin, flute, soprano sax (left group in 1997); Lisa Moscatiello, vocals (1996–present); Cillian Vallely, uilleann pipes, flute, whistle (1997–present).

Sometimes miscast as a Celtic band, Whirligig's style incorporates jazz and klezmer as well as the expected Celtic influences. Like British cousins Fairport Convention, the New York-based group adds and subtracts excellent musicians with diverse pedigrees without ever losing its musical essence. (Another Fairport connection: Paul Kovit produced the Fairport documentary "It All Comes 'round Again.") Something is missing that would make the group into something more than a group of folk whiz kids. The change may come with the arrival of Lisa Moscatiello (formerly of the New St. George), who replaced Shannon Anderson on vocals in 1996.

what's available: In The Wheel ♪♪♪♪ (Quarktet 1996, prod. Greg Anderson), the single "Down to the Sea in Ships" suits Shannon Anderson's dramatic, nearly histrionic vocal style, though she oversells "Mr. Fox" just a bit. The saxophones add diversity to many of the numbers, including the opener, "Open the Door/Maid at the Spinning Wheel."

influences:
◀◀ Altan, Fairport Convention

Pamela Murray Winters

Whistlebinkies

Formed in the late 1960s in Glasgow, Scotland.

Peter Anderson, Scottish side-drum, bodhrán, bongos; Stuart Eydmann, fiddle, concertinas, vocals; Mark Hayward, fiddle; Eddie McGuire, flute, piccolo, clàrsach; Judith Peacock, clàrsach, vocals; Robert (Rab) Wallace, Lowland pipes, Scottish smallpipes.

When a group of musicians formed a bar band in the Scotia Bar in Glasgow, they were joining the latest '60s craze, the Celtic revivalist movement. This early incarnation of the Whistlebinkies became something special when they decided to concentrate on traditional Scottish music. When Eddie McGuire joined in the early '70s, followed soon after by Rab Wallace, the band's identity stood on a more solid foundation as an acoustic, traditional Scottish band. McGuire brought not only high-quality flute and piccolo lines, but composition skill that has been acknowledged across Scotland. Wallace was one of the first to revive the Lowland pipes, and his skill as a piper of all sorts is evidenced in an amazing list of piping awards. Once these two had joined the band, a record contract with Claddagh records soon followed. Now, more than 20 years later, the group has established themselves as one of the cornerstones of Scottish music. Clinging much more diligently to the traditional heritage than most Scottish bands, they have put their emphasis on acoustic sound, striving to play without amplification or the use of reverb. The effect is stunning. The Binkies show themselves to be Scottish music scholars, digging deep to the roots of their musical ancestors, often to unearth music totally new to the modern ear. This sense of history is also portrayed in their choice of instruments, using the three traditional instruments of Scotland—the bagpipes, the clàrsach (Scottish harp), and the fiddle. Using simple arrangements, the Whistlebinkies bring Scottish music alive. It is this gift that has led them to be asked to provide music for a variety of documentaries, films, and theatrical productions. Their reputation has also brought them to numerous special projects, including tours with the Scottish Chamber Orchestra and a production with the Glasgow Festival Strings and Scottish Ballet of Eddie McGuire's ballet The Spirit of Flight.

what's available: A Wanton Fling ♪♪♪½ (Greentrax, 1996, prod. Jim Sutherland) is a recording marvel, featuring the acoustic sound for which the Binkies are best known. This laid-back recording features an almost chamber music quality to it, featuring a wonderful mix of concertina, flutes, harp, fiddle, pipes, and voices. The tunes are not as fast and driving as is typical of Scottish music these days, allowing the listener to pick up on nuances easily missed when presented with a driving beat. Among the unusual and exciting tracks is "Ho-Ro My Young Girl," a waulking song, characteristically sung a capella, but instead of using women's voices, the soloist is backed by a chorus of men. Others include the emotional "Farewell to Muirhead's" and the toe-tapping opening track "The Pipers' Jigs," both featuring the phenomenal piping of Robert Wallace. This album includes more vocals than their other offerings.

worth searching for: The best place to get introduced to the band is Anniversary ♪♪♪ (Claddagh, 1991, prod. Whistlebinkies, Cy Jack, John Wood), a best-of album featuring selected cuts from their first five albums, which are now only available on cassette. Perhaps their most outstanding recording is Inner Sound ♪♪♪♪ (Klub, 1991, prod. Whistlebinkies, Cy Jack), which displays an amazing showcase of Scottish music of all sorts. From the lamenting pipes on "Oran Mor" to the joyful pipes on "The Piper's Controversy," from the journey from sea to land and back again depicted on the opening track "Inner Sound" to the Scottish ballad "The Tryst," this album shows the depth of intensity and emotion this group is capable of, with virtuosic performances from all of the members. Solo piping fans should look for Pipers of Distinction: Robert Wallace ♪♪♪½ (Klub, 1991, prod. Cy Jack), which is an unusual and excellent collection of pipe tunes, beautifully performed on Great Highland Bagpipes. The Binkies also have a number of releases which are available on cassette only in the United Kingdom. These include: Whistlebinkies ♪♪♪ (Claddagh, 1977), Whistlebinkies 2 ♪♪♪ (Claddagh, 1980), Whistlebinkies 3 ♪♪♪ (Claddagh, 1982), Whistlebinkies 4 (Claddagh, 1986), and Whistlebinkies 5 ♪♪♪ (Claddagh, 1989).

influences:

◀◀ Garech Browne, Chieftains

▶▶ Ceolbeg, Sileas, Tannahill Weavers

Jo Hughey Morrison

Buck White

See: The Whites

Bukka White

Born Booker T. Washington White, November 12, 1906, in Houston, MS. Died February 26, 1977, in Memphis, TN.

Let Bukka White tell you he was "Fixin' to Die" (or anything else, for that matter) and you'd be likely to believe him. A big man, White always sang about the big things in life—sex, doing time (in prison and on earth), trains, and good gin—with a searing intensity. Somewhere in all that is a hint that a rambling life might make the rambler sing a worried blues. White belted the blues and literally belted his steel-body guitar in his idiosyncratic, rhythmically jagged style. Over that quirky guitar he sang his moody, plain blues melodies. Legends surround his first recording session for Vocalion because he was supposed to be doing time at Parchman Farm for a shooting. Did someone secure his release for the session? Or did he jump bail? Regardless, he recorded more when the prison sentence was up, but the blues world that had made a hit of "Shake 'Em on Down" in 1937 had changed. Despite the brilliance of his 1940 recordings, White's fortunes faded. A boxer and baseball player before he settled into the blues, White began working in a defense plant to avoid combat during World War II. Music gigs were something he did on the side until folkies Ed Denson and John Fahey found and recorded him in 1963. White played with as much fire as he had two decades earlier and recorded more tunes in his second career than he had in the period when he established himself as a major voice.

clarence white

what to buy: As if White's emotional directness wasn't scary enough, the sonic clean-up on The Complete Bukka White ♪♪♪♪♪ (Columbia Legacy, 1994, prod. Frank Briggs), which collects all 14 sides White recorded for Vocalion and OKeh, puts White in the room with you; it supplants a number of other collections, even the vinyl-only Parchman Farm ♪♪♪♪½ (Columbia, 1970). This is as deep and personal as Robert Johnson's recordings.

what to buy next: Chris Strachwitz says in his liner notes to Sky Songs ♪♪♪♪½ (Arhoolie, 1963, prod. Chris Strachwitz) that White improvised all of these songs for him. It's an impressive, energetic collection that touches all his usual bases and includes the improbably touching "Jesus Died on the Cross to Save the World," which has a "skip" in it. (Did they record the CD master from a turntable?)

what to avoid: 1963 Isn't 1962 ♪♪½ (Genes, 1994, prod. John Fahey, Ed Denson) features White recorded live in 1963 in another fine sonic cleanup, but the producers should have listened a little harder to the way they put it together. The pacing drags, and no White album should DRAG! Even so, many individual cuts, such as "1963 Isn't 1962 Blues," are worthwhile.

the rest:
Memphis Hot Shots ♪♪♪½ (Blue Horizon, 1968)
Baton Rouge Mosby Street ♪♪♪½ (Blues Beacon, 1972)
Big Daddy ♪♪♪½ (Biograph, 1974)
Shake 'Em on Down ♪♪♪½ (ROIR, 1993)

worth searching for: Legacy of the Blues ♪♪♪♪♪ (Sonet, 1969, prod. Ed Denson, John Fahey) features White's energetic return to the recording studio. The Complete Sessions ♪♪♪½ (Travelin' Man, 1976) is an import that features all the Vocalion and OKeh sessions and White's earliest, religious recordings.

influences:
◀◀ Charley Patton, Big Bill Broonzy, Tampa Red ▶▶ Bob Dylan, Captain Beefheart

Salvatore Caputo

Clarence White

See: Kentucky Colonels

Josh White

Born February 11, 1908, in Greenville, MS. Died September 5, 1969, in Manhasset, NY.

Though Josh White's influence never took on the stature of, say, Muddy Waters or Sonny Boy Williamson, he was present at two distinct key periods of blues development. At the beginning of his career, the singer-guitarist befriended Blind Blake, Blind Lemon Jefferson, and other important proponents of the rhythmic, playful East Coast "Piedmont" blues style; his songs, from religious hymns to pre-rock standards like "Milk Cow Blues," were excellent supplements to the sound. He outlasted blues' popularity, fronting the Josh White Singers and the Carolinans, but, like his peers Sonny Terry and Brownie McGhee, found new life in the 1960s folk revival. With Terry, McGhee, Leadbelly, Woody Guthrie and others, he changed his image to a folkie showman and played lucrative gigs at coffeehouses and festivals and appeared in films. White was a major player in both phases: other acoustic bluesmen learned from his early songs, and young 1960s folk musicians, such as Bob Dylan and Joan Baez, helped transfer his ideas to modern-day folk and rock 'n' roll. His son, Josh White Jr., keeps his father's tradition alive by performing his songs.

what to buy: Blues Singer 1932–36 ♪♪♪♪½ (Columbia/Legacy, 1996, prod. various) thoroughly samples White's "first career" as he shifts easily between hymns and playful Piedmont blues numbers.

what to buy next: Complete Recorded Works, Volumes I-IV ♪♪♪½ (Document, 1993, prod. various) fills in the gaps from the Legacy set; it includes absolutely everything White recorded between 1929 and 1941, and if anything it's far too thorough.

the rest:
The Legendary Josh White ♪♪♪ (MCA)
Plays the Blues and Sings ♪♪♪ (Collectables, 1995) worth searching for: Josh White Jr. leads a trio through his father's standards (including "House of the Rising Sun") on Jazz, Ballads, and Blues ♪♪♪ (Rykodisc, 1986).

influences:
◀◀ Blind Blake, Blind Lemon Jefferson, Leadbelly, Woody Guthrie ▶▶ Sonny Terry & Brownie McGhee, Bob Dylan, Joan Baez, Pete Seeger, Cephas & Wiggins, Washboard Sam

Steve Knopper

Josh White Jr.

Born 1940, in New York, NY.

Josh White Jr. is the son and namesake of one of folk music's most influential performers. At the age of four, he began joining his father on stage. They continued to perform together throughout the '50s and '60s. Although he recorded several albums of traditional folk and blues tunes, he has concentrated more on his thespian interests and has acted in many Broadway and Off-Broadway productions. His 1949 acting debut, in the Broadway cast of How Long 'til Summer, earned him a Tony Award as "best child actor." Between 1950 and 1963, he made many television guest appearances. In 1967 he wrote the music for a documentary, The Freedom Train. Throughout the 1960s, White was a regular on the college circuit, performing an average of 150 concerts a year. Although he cut back his schedule in the mid-'70s to spend more time with his children, he has periodically returned to the recording studio. His 1978 album, Josh White Jr, included the FM radio hit, "Marco Polo." White's involvement with children's music was launched in December 1990 when he collaborated with playwright Randi Douglas on a theme song, "My Favorite Toy," composed for a toy exhibit at the Detroit Historical Museum. In addition to writing a children's play, Buster, the Bodacious Bear, White Jr. appeared on Nickelodeon's Eureka's Castle and a special for Detroit public television, Josh and Ron's Family Adventure, featuring Detroit-based folksinger Ron Coden. He released an album of children's music, My Favorite Toy, in 1995. White has presented a lecture and demonstration, "In Role Teaching," that teaches history and civics to children. White returned to more adult programming with his 1996 album, Live at the Soft Rock Cafe.

what to buy: On Jazz, Ballads, and Blues ♪♪♪ (Rykodisc, 1986), White joins forces with violinist, guitarist, and tenor singer Robin Batteau (of folk-pop duo Buskin and Batteau). The result is a treasure chest of tradition-rooted music and includes stirring renditions of "Frankie and Johnny," "Strange Fruit," "St. James Infirmary," "Miss Otis Regrets," and "The House of the Rising Sun."

what to buy next: The intimacy of White's 1970s concerts was captured on Sing a Rainbow ♪♪♪ (Mountain Railroad, 1979, prod. Josh White Jr.). Songs include Michael Smith's "The Dutchman," "St. James Infirmary," and Josh White Sr.'s "One Meat Ball."

the rest:
Josh White, Junior ♪♪½ (Vanguard, 1978) worth searching for: Along with James Earl Jones and Josephine Premice, White provided narration and sang on The Dream Awake (Spoken Arts, 1970), an album-length interpretation of Owen Dodson's epic poem in which "the Black man tells his own story."

influences:

- Josh White, Leadbelly, Sleepy John Estes, Mississippi John Hurt
- Guy Davis

Craig Harris

Roland White

See: Kentucky Colonels

The Whites /Buck White & the Down Home Folks

Family group, originally from TX.

Buck White (born H.S. White, December 13, 1930, in OK), piano; Sharon White (born December 17, 1953, in Abilene, TX), guitar; Cheryl White (born January 27, 1955, in Abilene, TX), bass.

For 30 years, the Whites have functioned as a recording act, and even more amazingly, as a close-knit family, in spite of the obvious perils. Their bluegrass/gospel blend, enhanced by close family harmony, has remained relatively unchanged in those years, providing moments of pure pleasure for fans of fresh, acoustically based music. Buck White grew up in Texas, where he met his wife, Pat, who participated in the music until retiring in the early 1970s. In 1966, with the entire family involved, Buck and Pat, along with Arnold and Peggy Johnston, were the Down Home Folks, and the White and Johnston children formed the Down Home Kids. When the Whites moved to Nashville in 1971, they became Buck and the Down Home Folks, and made their first recording the following year. By the mid-'70s they had made a few more records, and in 1979 recorded with Jerry Douglas, Roland White, and the man who would later marry Sharon, Ricky Skaggs. They followed the album with a live record made in Japan, then soon embarked on a tour with Emmylou Harris, who had Ricky Skaggs in her Hot Band at the time. The group's Capitol debut in 1981 didn't make much noise, but the next year had the first of five Top 10 records with "You Put the Blue in Me" (Number 10, 1982). In 1983, the year they hit the Top 10 for the final time, the Whites became members of the Grand Ole Opry, where they remain a top attraction. Skaggs continues to be involved in their recordings, and they contribute to his, as well as those of other artists from time to time. Whether it's a bluegrass tune, a gospel number, or a country standard, the Whites have made some great music through the years. But, sadly, too little of it remains in print.

the whitstein brothers

cecil sharp (1859–1924)

At the close of the eighteenth century, British folk songs and dance were passed down almost entirely in the oral tradition. Late in life, beginning in 1903, Cecil Sharp undertook a vigorous campaign to preserve and document the traditions of British folk culture. Traveling around England on his bicycle, Sharp began writing down the songs and dances of different regions of the country and released a series of books, beginning with Folk Songs from Somerset in 1904, that made the fruits of his collections available to the masses. In 1911, Sharp founded the English Folk Song and Dance Society, an organization that remains a potent force in preserving British folk traditions today. In 1916, Sharp traveled to America, where he spent two years in rural areas of southern Appalachia and collected nearly 2,000 songs and dances that reinforced the strong cultural links between the folk cultures of that region and those of Great Britain. Today, Sharp's archives are housed in Cecil Sharp house in North London, a mecca for traditional folkies that also served as a wellspring of material and inspiration for contemporary neo-traditionalists like Ashley Hutchings (who presented a one-man tribute to Sharp in the mid-1980s) and Richard Thompson.

Michael Parrish

influences:

Emmylou Harris

Ricky Skaggs

Stephen L. Betts

The Whitstein Brothers

Brother vocal duo from LA.

Robert Whitstein (born March 16, 1944, in Pineville, LA); Charles Whitstein (born December 11, 1945, in Pineville, LA).

Bringing the Louvins and the Delmores clear into the 1990s, the Whitstein Brothers have put an old spin on some new music. That's because, along with standards like "Pitfall," and "Knoxville Girl," they've recorded things like Simon and Garfunkel's "Sounds of Silence" and recent tunes by Nashville writers like Dave Olney, although each time they've tackled a tune they've given it the feel of an old-time brother duet. Raised in central Louisiana, the brothers' dad, R.C., had a weekly radio show in Alexandria. His sons began appearing, winning local talent contests at 11 and 12 years old, and then moved to local TV. Their first record, a single called "Louisiana Woman," was enough of a success during the early 1960s to encourage the duo's move to Nashville. As the "Whitt Brothers," Robert and Charles appeared on the Opry and toured with the likes of Faron Young and Porter Wagoner. Both were drafted into the Marines and eventually returned home, where they recorded a gospel album of Louvin Brothers songs (re-released by Rounder in 1994). A contract with Rounder was offered when label head Ken Irwin received a tape via bluegrass artist Jesse McReynolds. Their 1992 release earned the duo a Grammy nomination. The next year Charles made an album with Charlie Louvin, then in 1994 reunited with Robert, which led to several Opry appearances, and their most recent album. In 1997, due to the distance between their respective homes the brothers split again, and Charles returned to performing and recording with Charlie Louvin.

what to buy: Sweet Harmony ♪♪♪♪½ (Rounder, 1996, prod. Ken Irwin) and Rose of My Heart ♪♪♪♪½ (Rounder, 1986/1994, prod. Ken Irwin) show the Whitsteins holding to a grand tradition and instilling it with new and exciting life.

what to buy next: Sing Gospel Songs of the Louvins ♪♪♪♪ (Rounder, 1994) is a delightfully pure, full-filled Louvins tribute, recorded in 1969 (using the alternate spelling of their family name—Whitstine).

what to buy: The place to start is definitely Greatest Hits ♪♪♪♪½ (Curb/MCA, 1986, prod. various).

what to buy next: After Greatest Hits, Give a Little Back ♪♪♪♪ (Step One, 1996, prod. Ray Pennington) is the group's best in-print album.

the rest:

Doing It by the Book ♪♪♪½ (Word/Epic, 1988)

solo outings:

Buck White:

Poor Folks Pleasure ♪♪♪½ (Sugar Hill, 1978)

More Pretty Girls than One ♪♪♪½ (Sugar Hill, 1980)

the rest:
Trouble Ain't Nothin' but the Blues ♪♪♪½ (Rounder, 1987) Old Time Duets ♪♪♪♪ (Rounder, 1990)

solo outings:
Charles Whitstein:
(With Charlie Louvin) Hoping That You're Hoping ♪♪♪½ (Copper Creek, 1992)

influences:
◀◀ Louvin Brothers, Blue Sky Boys
▶▶ Charlie Louvin

Stephen L. Betts

Wilco

See: Uncle Tupelo

David Wilcox

Comparing David Wilcox with James Taylor is much like comparing a new Martin with a vintage Gibson—the compliment is mutually inclusive. And the accolades for Wilcox are lush and well deserved: Wilcox is "a superb guitarist whose sparkling acoustic accompaniments are anchored in a deep ringing vibrancy," according to the New York Times. Although Wilcox credits Joni Mitchell for inspiring his fluid open-tuning guitar stylings, perhaps Mitchell's greater contribution is the awakening of poetic muse—Wilcox's lyrics speak elegantly of life, love, and spiritual quest. To follow his sojourn through six recordings is to witness a blooming of human spirit, as early expressions of plaintive introspection give rise to later celebrations of hope. Although A&M eventually dropped Wilcox, this "songwriter's songwriter" continues to produce staple nourishment for folk connoisseurs worldwide. Like a favorite flannel shirt, his soft, cotton-texture repertoire provides warmth and comfort. And for the aspiring folk artist, Wilcox leaves an ironic encouragement "it's hard to starve in these United States."

what to buy: A moody artist exorcises some personal demons in the resonant triumph Home Again, for the First Time ♪♪♪♪♪ (A&M, 1991, prod. Ben Wisch). "Chet Baker's Unsung Swan Song" details some last thoughts of a legendary drug-addicted trumpet player, as the "tiny boat" of his recovery sinks one last time. "She's Just Dancing" tells of one woman's solution to being hunted like meat. John Gorka's "Let Them In" preserves a soldier's scribbled poem found in a Philippine hospital during World War II. Wilcox exceeded the success benchmark of an esoteric genre when How Did You Find Me Here ♪♪♪♪♪ (A&M, 1989, prod. Pat McCarthy) sold more than 100,000 copies. In "Jamie's Secret," Wilcox's signature poetics are set to a traditional melody, leaking devastating rumors about a woman who headed west to study poetry and evergreens. "Leave It like It Is" establishes Wilcox in the elite company of acoustic guitar titans like Michael Hedges and Phil Keaggy. As the paint jar tips and splashes the table with random perfection, we are reminded that good life imitates art.

what to buy next: Wilcox describes Big Horizon ♪♪♪♪ (A&M, 1994, prod. Richard Gottehrer, Jeffrey Lesser) as "coming to terms with what comes next." "Show the Way" perks the discouraged agnostic with, "Look, if someone wrote a play to glorify what's stronger than hate, would they not arrange the stage to look as if the hero came too late?" In an expression of maturing faith, Wilcox "plays against the reasons not to try," "keeping just what we're born with . . . only what I remember and believe." This album is a treasure for anyone seeking clean refreshing spirituality, without the proselytizing aftertaste. East Asheville Hardware ♪♪♪ (KOCH International L.P./Fresh Baked, 1995, prod. Nance Pettit, David Wilcox) showcases a repertoire of whimsical crowd pleasers not normally found on Wilcox's studio albums. Even if you think humor is best the first time around, these will grow on you like a spare tire. You'll find yourself wanting to turn your mom on to Chuck Brodsky's "Blow 'Em Away," where an old lady's little poodle (Fifi) falls victim to a drive-by shooting. (Apologies in advance to the animal rights activists.) The Nightshift Watchman ♪♪♪ (Song of the Woods, 1987, prod. Jerry Read Smith) is a snapshot of Wilcox's artistic puberty, a good-looking addition to the junior-high yearbook of debut recordings. And the artist already shows a propensity for successful opening lines as an underground worker in a nuclear missile silo breaks the ice with "I'm the nightshift watchman for the planet."

what to avoid: Turning Point ♪♪♪ (KOCH, 1997, prod. David Wilcox, Ric Hordinski) features the debut of electric guitar in a repertoire that provides shelter for victims of hard-rock warfare. This "big boring middle of my book of life" collection marks a turning point; but Wilcox will likely turn back after sowing some plugged-in oats. You won't be disappointed if it's a bargain purchase: Look for this disk in the neighborhood recycled shop.

worth searching for: (Mostly) Live—Authorized Bootleg (A&M, 1991) shows up occasionally at used record stores, with the marking "promotional copy, not for retail sale." Owning an "authorized bootleg" is a little like not inhaling; if you're hooked on Wilcox you have to find this one.

wild jimbos

influences:

Joni Mitchell, John Martyn, Nick Drake, Richie Havens

Just about every aspiring folk star who owns a CD player

Art Wojtowicz

Wild Jimbos

See: Nitty Gritty Dirt Band

Wildcats

See: Rafe Stefanini, Carol Elizabeth Jones & James Leva

Robert Wilkins

Born January 16, 1896, in Hernando, MS. Died May 26, 1987, in Memphis, TN.

His blues life was a nearly-forgotten phase when the Rev. Robert Wilkins learned in 1968 that one of his old tunes had found new life. His 1929 dirge, "That's No Way to Get Along," had been resurrected by the Rolling Stones as "Prodigal Son" for Beggars Banquet. What Mick Jagger and Keith Richards may have seen as a tribute Wilkins bitterly perceived as a suspicious entreaty from the secular world he had rejected years earlier. Like Ishmon Bracey and other Delta singers who turned away from the earthly pursuit of the blues to join the church, Wilkins came to see his early career as a wayward path—even if, like Bracey, he remained proud of his accomplishments. Because of the many years he spent in Hernando, a Mississippi town just south of Memphis (for many years home to Jerry Lee Lewis), Wilkins's work bore traces both of the rhythmic Delta style and the more rag-tinged urban path of Frank Stokes. But Wilkins was his own man, as his dark one-chord moan, "Rollin' Stone," showed. After his rediscovery in the mid-1960s he told interviewers that he was steeped in the blues from infancy. The legendary Jim Jackson, author of "Kansas City Blues," is said to have often cradled the young Wilkins. After serving with the American Expeditionary Force in World War I, Wilkins started up his blues around Memphis, for a time rivaling Stokes, Jackson, and the young Memphis Minnie. Known for awhile as "Tim Wilkins" (using his middle name), he did some rambling, as far as Chicago for the World's Fair in 1933, but always returned to the Memphis area. Recording between 1928 and 1935, he explained years later, he quit the blues after a bloody brawl interrupted a Hernando performance. He became a gospel singer and minister with the Church of God in Christ, dabbling in extracurricular work as a root doctor. His life remained suspended in time until 1964, when he was found by a new generation of blues researchers. Wilkins refused to play the blues again, but he grudgingly overhauled several of his blues tunes into gospel pieces, including "Prodigal Son." Hurt when the Rolling Stones did not accord him the royalties he thought he deserved from their use of his song, Wilkins withdrew back into the spiritual world. Yet even long after his death in 1987, Wilkins is still being rediscovered by Stones fans intrigued by the band's influences.

what to buy: The Original Rolling Stone ♪♪♪♪♪ (Yazoo, 1989, prod. Richard Nevins) includes Yazoo's masters of these 14 Wilkins classics and a superbly-researched history by blues writer Steve Calt that fleshes out Wilkins's melancholy tale.

what to buy next: A 1971 concert recording, Remember Me ♪♪♪♪ (Genes, 1971, prod. David Evans), displays Wilkins in the service of the Lord, his guitar mastery slightly frayed but still suffused with the scent of the Delta. Wilkins would not play the blues, but in a way, it played him—or through him. Memphis Blues 1929–35 ♪♪♪♪ (Document, 1991) has all 14 of Wilkins's sides, along with tracks by Memphis figures Allen Shaw and Tom Dickinson, but the liner notes are sketchy.

influences:

Jim Jackson, Garfield Akers, Buddy Taylor

Little Son Joe, Rolling Stones

Steve Braun

Brooks Williams

Born in Statesboro, GA.

Acoustic guitar wizardry and James Taylor-like vocals combine with poetic lyricism in Northhampton, Massachusetts-based singer-songwriter Brooks Williams. Balancing sensitive songs with inventive instrumentals, Williams weaves a tapestry of emotion. The son of an opera singer/organist and an Anglican priest, Williams is a product of the Suzuki approach to music education. Playing violin by the age of three, he switched to guitar three years later after a summer-camp cook showed him some blues chords. Initially inspired by the acoustic guitar-based songs played by Southern rock bands like the Allman Brothers Band and Marshall Tucker, Williams became more absorbed with the instrumental mastery of guitar stylists ranging from British folk guitarists John Renbourn, Bert Jansch, and Martin Carthy to distinctive Bahamian guitarist and vocalist Joseph Spence. Williams spent his teenage years living, with his family, in New Haven, Connecticut. He moved to western Massachusetts in 1985. In addition to five solo albums, Williams has released an all-instrumental album, Ring Some Changes, with guitarist Jim Henry. He produced Maria Sangiolo's Eyes of the World and Salamander Crossing's Passion Train.

what to buy: Williams's fourth album and his first national release, Back to Mercy ♪♪♪♪½ (Green Linnet, 1993, prod. Johnny Cunningham) remains a celebration of musical diversity. Accompanying himself on acoustic and bottleneck guitars, Williams sets his songs to the unobtrusive playing of Kent Allyn (fretless and fretted bass, piano) and Doug Plavin (drums, percussion) and the vocal harmonies of Jonatha Brooke and Jennifer Kimball. In addition to showcasing his songwriting skills with seven originals, he shows off his guitar mastery on five innovative instrumentals.

what to buy next: With the release of Jack Knife, his follow-up to Back to Mercy ♪♪♪♪½ (Green Linnet, 1995, prod. Colin Linden), Williams takes a further step. Recorded in Ontario with Canadian session players Gary Craig (drums, percussion) and Johnny Dymond, Williams allows his songs to breathe with deep emotion. Much darker than its predecessor, the album offers a journey into Williams's psyche.

the rest:
Red Guitar Plays Blue ♪♪♪ (Red Guitar Blue Music, 1989)
North from Statesboro ♪♪♪ (Red Guitar Blue Music, 1990)
How the Night-Time Sings ♪♪♪ (Red Guitar Blue Music, 1991)
Inland Sailor ♪♪♪ (Green Linnet, 1994)
(With Jim Henry) Ring Some Changes ♪♪♪½ (Signature Sounds, 1996)
Seven Sisters ♪♪♪ (Green Linnet, 1997)

worth searching for: Williams's heartfelt playing was featured on a treasured compilation, Motherless Children: A Bottleneck Gospel Blues Collection (Time and Strike, 1996).

influences:
◀◀ Allman Brothers Band, Dickie Betts, Marshall Tucker, Joseph Spence, Bert Jansch, Martin Carthy, John Renbourn, Ry Cooder

▶▶ Greg Greenway, Maria Sangiolo, Peter Keane, Salamander Crossing

Craig Harris

Dar Williams

Born Dorothy Snowdon Williams, April 19, 1967, in Mount Kisco, NY.

Dar Williams is the quintessential female folk singer of the '90s, capturing society's awkward social transitions as well as the timeless "big questions" with graceful melodies and intelligent, often wry, lyrics. The daughter of a Yale-educated medical writer and a Vassar grad who raises funds for Planned Parenthood, Williams enjoyed a cozy childhood in an upscale Manhattan suburb. A sensitive soul with a crystalline alto voice and a keen eye for the comical, she wrote her first song at age 11 but shied away from performing until, at age 23, she managed to overcame a serious case of stage fright and hit the Boston coffeehouses. Gender roles, relationships, and stereotypes—from the innocence of childhood androgyny to a sexist boyfriend with roving eyes—are prime targets for Williams's lyrical twists. But she just as easily spins metaphorical tales about the deeper, more subtle tensions and pleasures of life, with either a delicate tug at the heartstrings or a humorous elbow in the ribs. Arrangements are generally kept simple, focusing on Williams's silky voice underpinned by her acoustic guitar, although some tunes feature a full band and, on one, you'll even hear a didgeridoo.

what to buy: Her second release, Mortal City ♪♪♪♪♪ (Razor & Tie, 1996, prod. Steven Miller), is her best, offering a brilliant balance of depth and levity, delicacy and strength. On the boisterous "As Cool As I Am," the narrator dumps her lecherous boyfriend and regains her pride. "This Was Pompeii" likens one of history's most deadly, unforeseen disasters with the ashes of a failed relationship.

what to buy next: Williams's debut, The Honesty Room ♪♪♪½ (Burning Field Music, 1994/Razor & Tie, 1995, prod. Dar Williams, Adam Rothberg, David Seitz, Brooks Williams), has charm and wit but is much more straightforward and less ambitious than Mortal City.

the rest:
End of the Summer ♪♪♪ (Razor & Tie, 1997)

influences:
◀◀ Joni Mitchell, Joan Baez

David Yonke

Don Williams

Born May 27, 1939, in Floydada, TX.

Don Williams rode his velvety smooth tenor to the top of the country charts during the late 1970s and early 1980s, a time when his gentle, breezy songs about love and devotion fit in comfortably alongside the pop stylings of lesser singers such as Kenny Rogers and the more aggressive, rocked-up country of upstarts like Alabama. The soft-spoken Texan is a throwback to country's simpler days, but his sound was commercial enough to cross over to the pop charts on occasion, particularly with his biggest hit, the buttery "I Believe in You," which topped the country charts and cracked pop's Top 30 in 1980. Not that Williams was a stranger to pop music; as a member of the Texas folk trio the Pozo Seco Singers, he'd visited the charts a few times during the 1960s folk boom. Their hits included mid-1960s nuggets "Time," "I Can Make It with You," and "Look What You've Done." But the group broke up after moving to Nashville during the early 1970s. Williams returned to Texas to work in his father's furniture business but made the Music City trek soon after when former Pozo Seco member Susan Taylor invited him to write songs for her. He launched a solo career soon after and scored his first hit with "The Shelter in Your Eyes" in 1972. He went on to become one of Nashville's classiest, most laid-back singers. He's also a fine writer whose songs have been recorded by artists as diverse as Johnny Cash ("Down the Road I Go"), Eric Clapton ("Tulsa Time"), and the Who's Pete Townshend ("'Till the Rivers All Run Dry"). His hitmaking ways continued through the 1980s, but country's growing emphasis on younger, faceless singers in the 1990s left little room for a guy like Williams, who moved to independent American Harvest in 1994 after more than 20 years with majors MCA, Capitol, and RCA. Though forgotten in his native country, where many of his albums are no longer in print, Williams's popularity in Europe, particularly England, thrives.

what to buy: With so few of his studio albums available, the anthology 20 Greatest Hits ♪♪♪½ (MCA, 1987, prod. various) encapsulates the years he was with MCA, one of his most successful and consistent periods. The song selection is pretty obvious, with "I Believe in You," "Tulsa Time," and the beautiful "Amanda" among them, but there's a timelessness to the material and a sincerity in Williams's voice that's hard to find in today's climate.

what to avoid: The performances on Williams's first live album, An Evening with Don Williams: Best of Live ♪♪ (American Harvest, 1995, prod. Don Williams) pale before the studio versions of recent and past hits.

the rest:
Don Williams Volume I ♪♪♪½ (MCA, 1972)
Don Williams Volume III ♪♪♪½ (MCA, 1974)
Greatest Hits, Volume I ♪♪♪ (MCA, 1975)
The Best of, Volume II ♪♪♪ (MCA, 1982)
The Best of, Volume III ♪♪♪½ (MCA, 1984)
The Best of, Volume IV ♪♪♪½ (MCA, 1986)
Greatest Country Hits ♪♪♪½ (Curb, 1993)
The Ultimate Don Williams ♪♪ (Bransounds, 1995)
Borrowed Tales ♪♪♪½ (American Harvest, 1995) Flatlands ♪♪♪ (American Harvest, 1996)

influences:
Bob Dylan, Hank Williams
John Anderson

Doug Pullen

Hank Williams

Born Hiram King Williams, September 17, 1923, in Mount Olive, AL. Died January 1, 1953.

Though Hank Williams died before he turned 30 and recorded for barely six years, he created a mythology as large as those of Elvis Presley or the Beatles in rock. Every songwriter covets his ability to pierce the soul with minimally drawn lines. Every performer craves the kind of charisma that would get them a half-dozen encores at the Grand Ole Opry. And every singer with self-destructive tendencies uses Williams as the measuring glass against which he compares his ability to drink himself to death. The Alabama-born son of a railroad engineer, Williams became a star of the Grand Ole Opry between 1949–52 after stints with radio shows in Shreveport, Louisiana, and Montgomery, Alabama. He has been inducted into both the Country Music and Rock 'n' Roll Halls of Fame. He also recorded as Luke the Drifter.

what to buy: Every single—and then some—in Williams's catalog has become a standard in its genre, making 40 Greatest Hits ♪♪♪♪♪ (Polydor, 1978, prod. Fred Rose) the best place to start delving into Williams's material, both musically and contextually.

what to buy next: It's up for grabs, depending on what you want, because most of Williams's compilations will include some cuts from 40 Greatest Hits. The Original Singles Collection . . . Plus ♪♪♪♪♪ (Polydor, 1990, comp. prod. Colin Escott) expands the Williams oeuvre to three discs but, deceptively, doesn't include many of his singles with wife Audrey. Health and Happiness Shows ♪♪♪♪ (Mercury, 1993) contains eight radio performances from 1949.

what to avoid: 24 Greatest Hits ♪♪ (PolyGram, 1976) and 24 Greatest Hits Volume II ♪♪ (Polydor, 1977), two collections of posthumously overdubbed recordings. The original versions of all these songs are available elsewhere, rendering these collections superfluous. Mercury targeted the alternative-rock crowd with Alone and Forsaken ♪♪♪ (Mercury, 1995), which features Williams's most angst-ridden tunes. British rocker Matt Johnson, who had recorded a Williams tribute album, Hanky Panky ♪♪♪½ (Epic, 1995, prod. Matt Johnson, Bruce Lampcov), opened Alone and Forsaken with a monologue that insulted the many country fans who didn't need to have Williams's greatness explained to them.

the rest:
Greatest Hits ♪♪♪♪♪ (Polydor, 1963)
Beyond the Sunset ♪♪♪ (Polydor, 1963)
Very Best Of ♪♪♪½ (Polydor, 1963)
I Saw the Light ♪♪♪♪ (Polydor, 1968)
Rare Demos: First to Last ♪♪♪♪ (Country Music Foundation, 1990)
I Saw the Light ♪♪♪ (PolyGram Special Markets, 1994)
The Hits Volume I ♪♪♪♪♪ (Mercury, 1994)
The Hits Volume II ♪♪♪♪♪ (Mercury, 1995)
Best Of—American Legends ♪♪♪ (PolyGram Markets, 1995)
Legend Lives Anew ♪♪♪ (PolyGram Special Markets, 1996) Low down Blues ♪♪♪♪ (Mercury, 1996)

worth searching for: The Collectors' Edition ♪♪♪♪♪ (Mercury, 1987), an eight-disc, limited-edition set available only through Tower Records, collected the individual volumes that contained almost every recording Williams made for MGM in chronological order. The Legend of Hank Williams ♪♪♪ (Mercury, 1996, prod. Joseph Wilson) is an abridgment of Colin Escott's Williams biography read by Sammy Kershaw and includes Williams's music.

influences:
◀◀ Carter Family, Roy Acuff
▶▶ Hank Williams Jr., Jimmie Dale Gilmore, every male country singer since

Brian Mansfield

Lucinda Williams

Born January 26, 1953, in Lake Charles, LA.

Unfortunately, the same qualities that make Lucinda Williams's music so great also ensure that there isn't more of it available for public consumption. The daughter of a poet/university professor, Williams is notoriously headstrong and has an artistic temperament ill-suited to issues of career logistics—stories of her clashes with labels and producers are legendary in the music business. Yet she is also one of the finest songwriters of her generation, with a gift for nailing a character or situation with the perfect detail. Her earthy voice also makes Williams her own best interpreter; if only we got to hear more of her songs! At the time of this writing, she has released just four full-length albums in 17 years. Her oft-delayed fifth album, Car Wheels on a Gravel Road, is scheduled to be released in 1998 on American Records.

what to buy: Williams made two early albums before she found her own voice, both as a writer and singer, and they're most notable as acts of homage to her country and Delta blues roots. Her third album Lucinda Williams ♪♪♪♪♪ (Rough Trade, 1988, prod. Lucinda Williams, Gurf Morlix) is one of the signpost albums of post-punk Americana. Drawing on Williams's failed marriage (to Long Ryders drummer Greg Sowders) and eight years of pent-up career frustrations, these songs cut with an unbelievable intensity. The tough-minded feminine perspective of "I Just Wanted to See You So Bad" and "Passionate Kisses" rings absolutely true, and it's as unusual as it is emotionally rich. A triumph. One measure of this album's songcraft is that other singers frequently raid it for material: Mary Chapin Carpenter had a pop hit with "Passionate Kisses" and Patty Loveless a country hit with "The Night's Too Long," while Tom Petty covered "Changed the Locks" on his soundtrack for the 1996 movie She's the One.

what to buy next: The follow-up Sweet Old World ♪♪♪♪ (Chameleon, 1992, prod. Lucinda Williams, Gurf Morlix, Dusty Wakeman) is more self-conscious than its predecessor, but still damned fine. It's also grim, coursing with images of suicide, death, and despair. Fitting, then, that it closes with a cover of the late English cult folkie Nick Drake's "Which Will."

the rest:
Ramblin' on My Mind ♪♪♪ (Smithsonian/Folkways, 1979/1991)
Happy Woman Blues ♪♪♪½ (Smithsonian/Folkways, 1980/1990) Passionate Kisses ♪♪♪ (Rough Trade, 1989)

worth searching for: Williams's "Main Road" is one of the high points of the Victoria Williams tribute Sweet Relief ♪♪♪½ (Chaos, 1993, prod. various). Her most recent recorded work is as duet partner with others—with Steve Earle on "You're Still Standin' There," from his 1996 album I Feel Alright; and on two tracks on Terry Allen's 1996 album Human Remains.

influences:
◀◀ Bob Dylan, Flannery O'Connor, Emmylou Harris, Robert Johnson, Rosanne Cash, Bonnie Raitt ▶▶ Victoria Williams, Joe Henry, Mary Chapin Carpenter, Iris DeMent, Amy Rigby

David Menconi

Mason Williams

Born August 24, 1938, in Abilene, TX.

Something of a modern-day renaissance man, Mason Williams is an entertainment triple threat. Best known as a recording artist and composer, his most popular work is the enduring "Classical Gas," a piece which combines intricate guitar picking with sweeping orchestral accompaniment. But he's also a comedy writer who won an Emmy for his work on the groundbreaking '60s TV show The Smothers Brothers Comedy Hour (it was Williams who conceived the satirical "Pat Paulson for President" gag). Finally, he has written many books of prose and poetry, and is also a conceptual artist whose work includes a short film in which a biplane draws a stem and leaves beneath the sun, turning it into the "world's largest sunflower."

what to buy: A compilation of tracks from his five Warner Bros. records, Music 1968–71 ♪♪♪½ (Vanguard, 1992) shows the range of Williams's work, from "Classical Gas" and "Greensleeves" to more whimsical material such as "The Smothers Brothers Theme" and the wonderfully titled "I've Heard That Tear Stained Monologue You Do There by the Door Before You Go."

what to avoid: Proving there's no accounting for taste, Classical Gas ♪½ (American Grammaphone, 1987)—recorded with new-age techno-wienies Mannheim Steamroller and including a synthesized version of the title track—has proven to be one of Williams's most popular releases.

the rest:
The Mason Williams Phonograph Record ♪♪♪ (Warner Bros., 1968)
A Gift of Song ♪♪½ (Real Music, 1992)

worth searching for: Williams has recorded a dozen or so albums, most of which are out of print. You're welcome to dig them up, but you might also want to stop by the New York's Museum of Modern Art, where his "Bus," a life-sized photographic poster of a Greyhound bus, is in the permanent collection.

influences:
◀◀ Andres Segovia, Flatt & Scruggs
▶▶ Mannheim Steamroller, Ottmar Liebert

Daniel Durchholz

Nathan Williams

See: Nathan & the Zydeco Cha Chas

Robin & Linda Williams

Formed 1973.

Robin Williams (born March 16, 1947), vocals; Linda Williams (born July 7, 1947), vocals.

The folk/country husband-and-wife duo began recording together in 1973 and first gained national exposure through their frequent guest appearances on Garrison Keillor's Prairie Home Companion. They specialize in a cross between folk and acoustic country, drawing heavily on bluegrass and classic country sources, including the Carter Family and Hank Williams.

what to buy: All Broken Hearts Are the Same ♪♪♪♪ (Sugar Hill, 1988) is a superb collection of originals highlighted by the duo's intricate arrangements and electrifying harmony vocals. "Rollin' and Ramblin'" is a poignant tale about the death of Hank Williams.

what to buy next: Turn toward Tomorrow ♪♪♪½ (Sugar Hill, 1993) is toe-tapping country featuring pure, full-country production, including a pedal steel guitar. Included is the honky-tonk drinking song "On the Day the Last Tear Falls."

the rest:
Rhythm of Love ♪♪♪ (Sugar Hill, 1990)
Robin and Linda Williams and Their Fine Group ♪♪♪ (Sugar Hill, 1994) Live ♪♪♪ (Sugar Hill, 1994)
Good News (Sugar Hill, 1995)
Sugar for Sugar ♪♪♪½ (Sugar Hill, 1996)
Close As We Can Get/Nine 'till Midnight ♪♪♪½ (Sugar Hill) Devil of a Dream N/A (Sugar Hill, 1998) worth searching for: Harmony (June Appal, 1981) was the couple's first album together.

influences:
◀◀ Hank Williams, Ian & Sylvia, the Carter Family ▶▶ Tim & Mollie O'Brien, Barry & Holly Tashian

Douglas Fulmer

Victoria Williams

Born 1959, in Forbing, LA.

With her unusual, high-pitched voice and obviously quirky sensibility, Victoria Williams might seem at first like another indie-pop novelty. A few spins of her records, however, indicate a major artist. A superb songwriter and distinctive vocalist, Williams achieved a great deal of press coverage in 1993 and 1994 when she battled multiple sclerosis. Though her struggle against the disease has been an inspiring one—some major rock artists contributed versions of her songs to the tribute/benefit album Sweet Relief in 1993—her work has been somewhat overshadowed by the story. She grew up in Louisiana and attended college there. After trekking around the country, playing her songs for hikers, punks, and anyone else who'd listen, she made her way to Los Angeles, where she waited tables and performed when she could. At last she signed with Geffen, but her debut album sold poorly, as did her subsequent critically acclaimed effort with Rough Trade. It wasn't until the release of Sweet Relief—featuring contributions from Lou Reed, Pearl Jam, Soul Asylum, and many others—that she became better known in the pop world. Her subsequent albums have enjoyed greater attention, though she has remained a bit too unique for the mainstream. Even so, her version of the standard "What a Wonderful World" graced a commercial for Microsoft computer software. She is the subject of the song "Miss Williams' Guitar," by the Jayhawks, of which her husband Marc Olson was a member. A progressive, homespun Christian, Williams spins compassionate tales of friends, family, and nature that evince both childlike wonder and old-soul wisdom. Musically, she draws from an extraordinary pool of influences—gospel, country, folk, acid rock, pop—to create works that never seem derivative. Her live performances reach levels of intimacy and spontaneity that are rare in contemporary music.

Robin & Linda Williams (© Jack Vartoogian)

what to buy: Loose ♪♪♪♪ (Mammoth, 1994, prod. Paul Fox) is Williams's most engaging collection—which is saying something. While it is governed, like the earlier albums, by her luminous world view, her experiences with illness and loss give everything greater heft.

the rest:
Happy Come Home ♪♪♪ (Geffen, 1987)
Swing the Statue! ♪♪♪½ (Rough Trade, 1990)
This Moment: Live in Toronto ♪♪♪½ (Mammoth, 1995)

influences:
Joni Mitchell, Kate Bush, the Roches

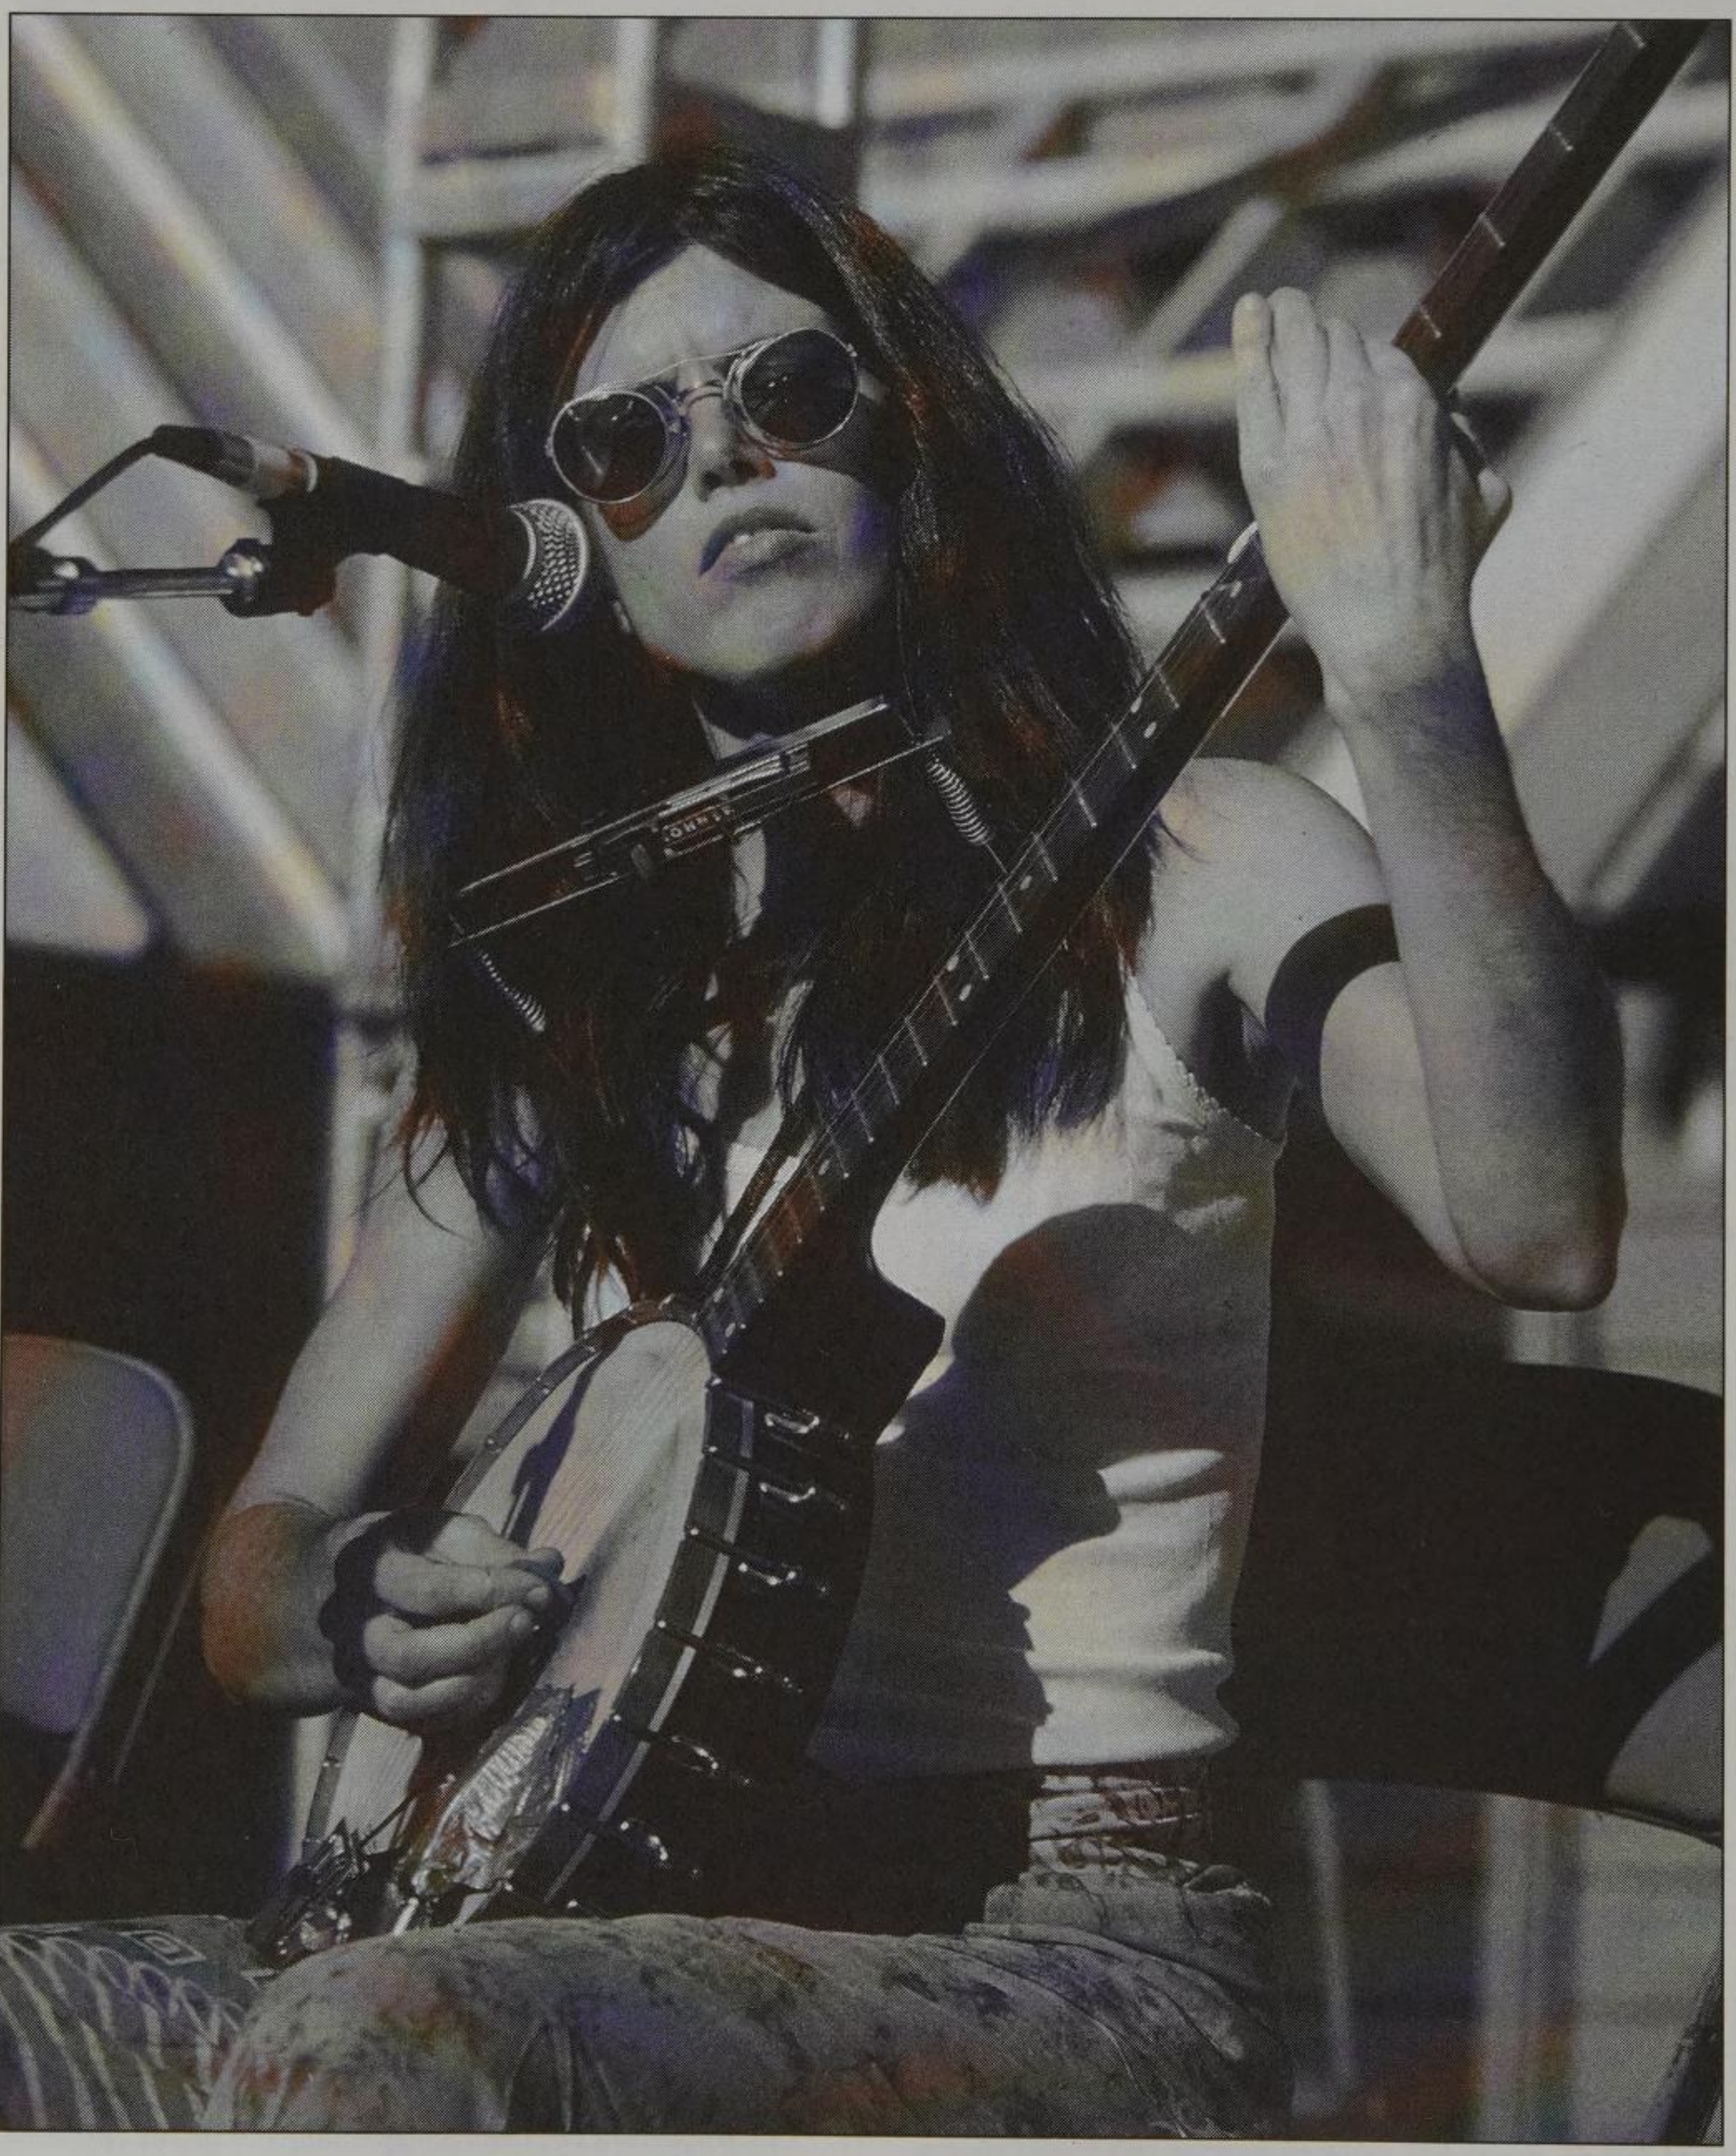
Simon Glickman

Cris Williamson

Born 1955, in SD.

Cris Williamson has been a major influence on the spread of

cris williamson



Women's Music. Her self-produced, all-female 1975 album, The Changer and the Changed, ranks as one of the top-selling independent releases of all time. An American tour with Women's Music innovator Meg Christian in 1982, and a double-LP recorded during their Carnegie Hall concerts, helped to solidify her position in Women's Music. Founder of her own record company, Olivia, in 1978, Williamson recorded 14 albums during the label's 16 years in existence and became one of the first women to write, produce, record, and issue her own music. Many of her songs focus on inner-spirit and the natural beauty of the plains and open spaces of the American West. Waterfalls, horses, and plateaus are recurring images. Other songs take a darker look at modern societal woes including homelessness, aids, hunger, and environmental issues. The daughter of a forest ranger, Williamson grew up in the Black Hills of South Dakota, Colorado, and Wyoming; as a child, her home had no electricity and she listened to music on an old, wind-up, phonograph. Recorded shortly after her 16th birthday, Williamson's self-titled 1971 debut album sold a respectable 11,000 copies. A year later, she rose to prominence with The Changer and the Changed. Williamson's song "Don't Lose Heart" was used as the theme song in the film New Year's Day. A science-fiction fable for children that she wrote, produced, and narrated, Lumiere, received a prestigious award from Parents' Choice. In 1991 Williamson and long-time musical collaborator and romantic interest Tret Fure organized an all-volunteer pediatric AIDS organization, In The Best Interests of the Children.

what to buy: Recorded during a Berkeley, California, concert celebration of the 15th anniversary of the release of Williamson's ground-breaking 1974 album, The Changer and the Changed, Circle of Friends: Cris Live ♪♪♪♪ (Olivia, 1991, prod. Cris Williamson) retains the passionate elegance of the original recording. In addition to heartfelt renditions of songs from The Changer and the Changed, the album includes several previously unrecorded originals and memorable interpretations of James Taylor's "Millworker" and Hank Williams's "Hey, Good Lookin'."

what to buy next: The original spark that ignited the women's music revolution, The Changer and the Changed ♪♪♪♪ (Olivia, 1974, prod. Cris Williamson) continues to be a powerful experience.

the rest:
Artistry of Cris Williamson ♪♪ (Avanti, 1964)
A Step at a Time ♪♪ (Avanti, 1965)
Cris Williamson ♪♪ (Ampex, 1971/Olivia, 1981)
Cris Williamson ♪♪ (Kickback, 1972, EP)
Live Dream ♪♪ (Dream Machine, 1978)
Strange Paradise ♪♪♪ (Olivia, 1978)
Lumiere ♪♪♪ (Pacific Cascades, 1982)
Blue Rider ♪♪♪ (Olivia, 1982)
(With Meg Christian) Meg and Cris at Carnegie Hall ♪♪♪♪ (Olivia, 1983) Portrait ♪♪♪ (Olivia, 1983)
Prairie Fire ♪♪♪ (Olivia, 1984)
Snow Angel ♪♪♪ (Olivia, 1985)
Wolf Moon ♪♪♪ (Olivia, 1987)
(With Teresa Trull) Country Blessed ♪♪♪ (Second Wave, 1989)
The Best of Cris Williamson ♪♪♪ (Olivia, 1990)
(With Tret Fure) Postcards from Paradise ♪♪♪ (Olivia, 1993) (With Tret Fure) Between the Covers ♪♪♪ (Wolf Moon and Goldenrod, 1997)

influences:
◀◀ Meg Christian, Holly Near, Ronnie Gilbert ▶▶ Teresa Trull, Ferron, Phranc, Sinead O'Connor

see also: Tret Fure

Craig Harris

Victoria Williams (© Ken Settle)

Robin Williamson

Born November 24, 1943, in Edinburgh, Scotland.

Rather than ask what Robin Williamson does, it might be more appropriate to ask what he doesn't do. Besides his skills on guitar, Celtic harp, smallpipes, pennywhistle, fiddle, and other instruments, Williamson's talents have been showcased through his songwriting, storytelling, theater work, and even in a collaboration on a spy novel. Perhaps best known for being half of the Incredible String Band, Williamson's career has transformed many times since the ISB broke up in 1974. He has a vast amount of material, from traditional tunes to original work, and from solo to group efforts, including his work with Robin Williamson and His Merry Band between 1977 and 1979. His storytelling and bardic style are highly regarded, and concert-goers reminisce about his one-man shows which frequently included one set-long story backed by music. Williamson has been all but ignored by the harping community; this is a little difficult to understand considering his obvious dexterity and complete understanding of Celtic ornamentation. Perhaps his musical diversity has made him difficult to classify.

Williamson's songwriting is legendary, his talent in this arena unquestionable. However his voice, which is included in most of

alan lomax (1915—)

Ethnomusicologist and visionary Alan Lomax literally learned his craft in the field, working with his father, John, one of the first people to collect songs and make field recordings of traditional music. In 1933, the younger Lomax curtailed his studies at Harvard to accompany his father on the first of several recording expeditions in the deep south. During that expedition, the Lomaxes discovered Lead Belly (Huddie Ledbetter), then an inmate at Angola prison. In 1934, Ledbetter became their driver and assistant, and was later brought up north and managed for a brief time by John Lomax. Alan graduated from the University of Texas in 1936, and became the first funded "Assistant in Charge" of the Archive of American Folk Song at the Library of Congress in 1937. In that position, which he held until 1942, he made essential recordings of Jelly Roll Morton and Lead Belly, as well as more than 3,000 discs of field recordings. In 1942, he made the first recordings of Muddy Waters, who shortly thereafter electrified and spearheaded the Chicago blues phenomenon. Lomax was one of the first broadcasters to bring folk music to a national audience. After spending much of the fifties overseas making field recordings, Lomax worked at Columbia University developing a statistical study of patterns of folk music forms termed cantometrics. Lomax has released dozens of recordings culled from his field recordings, as well as influential books like Mister Jelly Roll and The Land Where the Blues Began. In recent years, Lomax has worked on a CD-ROM project titled the Global Juke Box, intended to tie together his far-flung interests in music, dance, and folk culture.

Michael Parrish

his recordings, leaves a lot to be desired. He has been nominated for several Grammy awards, credited as an influence on a wide variety of songwriters working today, and has worked on a variety of scores for television and movies, including Willow.

Williamson might best be described as creativity in action. Constantly exploring new realms in music and the art of storytelling, he has woven Celtic harp with electronic keyboards, story with song, and world beat with traditional material. All of this results in quite an eclectic collection of solo work, including The Mabinogi, a multimedia theatrical production based on ancient Welsh stories, and Songs for Children of All Ages, a creative arrangement of children's songs. Williamson is truly a bard of our time.

what to buy: Celtic Harp Airs and Dance Tunes ♪♪♪♪ (Greentrax, 1997, prod. Robin Williamson) is a well-chosen collection of Celtic tunes, representing much of Celticdom, including Ireland, Scotland, and Wales. Williamson's harping skills are most fully represented on this album, showing off his feeling for the fine nuances of ornamentation and his gift for simple but effective harp arrangements. From the eerily moody "Mwynen Mon" and the sultry "The Rocks of Pleasure" to the upbeat and catchy "The Scholar," he brings the tunes alive. Wheel of Fortune ♪♪♪♪ (Flying Fish, 1993, prod. Mitch Greenhill) is a live album with guitarist John Renbourn. This shows Williamson at his best, playing rhythm guitar, Celtic harp, and whistle, as well as providing vocals to some of the tracks. Renbourn and Williamson blend beautifully, and seem to have an electricity together. Particularly lovely tracks include "Port Patrick," "Bunyan's Hymn/I Saw Three Ships/English Dance," and "The Snows."

what to buy next: Legacy of the Scottish Harpers, Volume I ♪♪♪ (Flying Fish, 1984, prod. Robin Williamson) and Legacy of the Scottish Harpers, Volume II ♪♪♪ (Flying Fish, 1986, prod. Robin Williamson) contain a fine collection of traditional Scottish tunes performed beautifully by Williamson on solo Celtic harp. He even performs several tunes on a rare Bray harp, which has a distinctive and slightly harsh sound.

what to avoid: Ten of Songs woof! (Flying Fish, 1988, prod. Robin Williamson) has been described as "word jazz," and that seems as good a term as any. The backing music is exciting, but the almost-spoken, almost-sung stream of consciousness is very grating.

the rest:

Journey's Edge ♪♪♪ (Edsel, 1977)
Songs of Love and Parting ♪♪ (Pig's Whisker Music/BMI 1981)
Music for the Mabinogi ♪♪ (Flying Fish, 1984)
Winter's Turning ♪♪ (Pig's Whisker Music/BMI 1986) Songs for Children of All Ages ♪♪♪ (Flying Fish, 1987)

influences:

Mike Heron, Joe Heaney, Sylvia Woods

Jay Ansill, Robert Plant, Chris Caswell, Eurythmics, John Lennon, Bob Dylan

see also: The Incredible String Band, John Renbourn

Jo Hughey Morrison

Bob Wills

Born James Robert Wills, March 6, 1905, near Kosse, TX. Died May 13, 1975.

Inducted into the Country Music Hall of Fame in 1968, Bob Wills never cared much for the fiddle as a youth—that is, until he stood before an anxious crowd. His father was late for the gig, and somebody had to play. So "Jim Rob" did what he could: repeated the same six songs until his dad showed up. The audience responded to the 10-year-old, and an entertainer was born. In 1931 Wills founded the Light Crust Doughboys, named after the sponsor of the group's radio show. Founding member Milton Brown couldn't take Wills's bawdy demeanor and was replaced by Tommy Duncan. Both Wills and Duncan left the Doughboys in 1933 and created the first of many incarnations of the Texas Playboys. Wills blended electric steel with standard guitar for a thrilling new sound, while Duncan supported his reputation as perhaps the greatest of the Playboys' vocalists. Oklahoma farmers and Texas ranch hands packed dance halls throughout the region to see the Playboys, and at the end of the Depression Wills was among the most famous musicians alive. The band had broadened to 18 members under the supervision of guitarist Eldon Shamblin. A revamped vocal version of "New San Antonio Rose," the group's signature tune, swept the country.

World War II threatened to end all their careers, however. Duncan enlisted in the Army shortly after Pearl Harbor, and other members followed right behind him. Wills temporarily disbanded the Playboys and joined the army himself in late 1943. Taking orders was never his strong suit, though, and he and Duncan were soon discharged. The two reunited and formed a smaller, tighter version of the Playboys. In 1943 Wills also married for the sixth time, to Betty Anderson; that union would last until his death. Though Wills outsold the pop-oriented Tommy Dorsey and Benny Goodman for the next decade, the advent of television decimated the dance hall crowds. Poor health, due to his fondness for cigars and drink, kept Wills out of the spotlight as well (he would lead his last sessions from a wheelchair, after suffering a stroke in 1970). Country radio didn't play Wills much, either, but he never considered himself a country artist. Instead, he was "the King of Western Swing"; to him, they were two separate styles of music. Merle Haggard had the opportunity to play fiddle on Wills's final project, and the singer championed the innovator with the 1982 album Tribute to the Best Damn Fiddle Player in the World (Or My Salute to Bob Wills). Asleep at the Wheel paid similar tribute in 1994 with Tribute to the Music of Bob Wills and the Texas Playboys.

what to buy: Assembled with Rhino's usual flair and passion, the two-disc Anthology, 1935–73 ♪♪♪♪♪ (Rhino, 1991, comp. prod. James Austin, Bob Fisher) spans nearly 40 years of Wills's recordings, from his early days on the Vocalion label to his final sessions in December 1973, just a year and a half before his death. The compilation includes most of the Playboys' biggest hits, but it tends (probably rightly) to concentrate on the years when Duncan was the group's vocalist.

what to buy next: Encore ♪♪♪♪ (Capitol, 1994, comp. John Johnson) surveys Wills's career another way. This three-disc box set compiles studio recordings made for Liberty between 1960–63, seven cuts from 1963–64 Ft. Worth, Texas, radio shows and Wills's final recordings, made in December 1973. (Wills had a stroke the night of the first session and remained in a coma for 15 months until his death; Haggard plays fiddle on the final four tracks, recorded the next day.) It's a fascinating look at the latter days of a legend. Columbia Historic Edition ♪♪♪♪ (Columbia, 1982) is an excellent one-disc collection of hits from the group's commercial heyday.

what to avoid: Bob Wills and the McKinney Sisters' Tiffany Transcriptions ♪ (Rhino, 1991), a largely pop-oriented outing with yodeling sisters Dean and Evelyn McKinney.

best of the rest:

21 Golden Hits ♪♪♪ (Hollywood)
The Best of Bob Wills ♪♪♪ (MCA, 1973)
The Best of Bob Wills, Volume 2 ♪♪♪ (MCA, 1975)
King of Western Swing/Wills and His Playboys ♪♪♪ (MCA) 24 Greatest Hits ♪♪♪ (Mercury, 1977)
The Tiffany Transcriptions, Volume I ♪♪♪♪ (Rhino, 1982)
The Tiffany Transcriptions, Volume II ♪♪♪♪ (Rhino, 1984)
The Tiffany Transcriptions, Volume III ♪♪♪♪ (Rhino, 1984)
The Tiffany Transcriptions, Volume IV ♪♪♪♪ (Rhino, 1985)
The Tiffany Transcriptions, Volume V ♪♪♪♪ (Rhino, 1986)
The Tiffany Transcriptions, Volume VI ♪♪♪♪ (Rhino, 1987)
The Tiffany Transcriptions, Volume VII ♪♪♪♪ (Rhino, 1987)
The Golden Era ♪♪♪♪ (Columbia, 1987)
Fiddle ♪♪♪♪ (Country Music Foundation, 1987)
The Tiffany Transcriptions, Volume VIII ♪♪♪♪ (Rhino, 1988)
The Tiffany Transcriptions, Volume IX ♪♪♪♪ (Rhino, 1990)

Greatest Hits ♪♪♪ (Curb, 1990)
Country Music Hall of Fame ♪♪♪ (MCA, 1992)
The Essential Bob Wills and His Texas Playboys (1935–47) ♪♪♪ (Legacy, 1992)
For the Last Time ♪♪♪ (Capitol, 1994)
Classic Western Swing ♪♪♪♪ (Rhino, 1994) worth searching for: Only the misleadingly named 21 Greatest Hits collects Wills 1960s recordings for Dallas, Texas' Longhorn label. The Longhorn Recordings ♪♪♪♪ (Bear Family) does a much better and more complete job.

influences:
◀◀ Milton Brown, Adolf Hofner
▶▶ Asleep at the Wheel, Merle Haggard, Spade Cooley, Johnny Gimble

Craig Shelburne and Brian Mansfield

Joemy Wilson

Born September 1, 1945, in Fort Worth, TX.

Joemy Wilson has been hailed by critics on both sides of the Atlantic as one of the world's foremost interpreters of the music of Turlough O'Carolan, the legendary blind eighteenth-century Irish harper and composer. Raised in a musical family in New Haven, Connecticut, Wilson studied piano and violin as a child and began voice lessons in high school. While at Barnard College in New York, she received her first fretted dulcimer, using it to accompany her singing, and then she took up the hammered dulcimer in 1979. She toured for several years as the musical half of Mime Musica, a performing duo featuring her husband, Jon Harvey. In 1984 they created their independent label, Dargason Music. "Dargason," an English country dance tune, is the title track of Wilson's debut album, Dargason: A Dulcimer Sampler, which features fretted dulcimer and vocals. Her 10 subsequent recordings showcase her brilliant hammered dulcimer playing, with a splendid ensemble of Celtic harp, classical guitar, flute, violin, and bodhrán. As one of the pioneers of the dulcimer renaissance and the Celtic revival of the early 1980s, Wilson calls her style "Baroque Irish chamber music." Irish critic John Paddy Browne writes, "Now, at last, we have a new interpreter who has converted the great man's exquisite music to the hammered dulcimer and restored it to its natural classical setting." In addition to the four Celtic titles, Wilson has recorded three Christmas albums, an album of Beatles tunes, and a recording of lullabies. The Dulcimer Lullabies recording was showcased on the ABC special In a New Light starring Arsenio Hall and Paula Abdul.

what to buy: Carolan's Cup ♪♪♪♪ (Dargason Music, 1984, prod. Joemy Wilson, Scott Fraser) is the first in a series of Celtic recordings and is exclusively works of O'Carolan, from the well-known "Sheebeg and Sheemore" to the lesser known "Number 171" from a collection of numbered O'Carolan tunes without titles. The Carolan Consort of musicians that accompany Wilson's hammered and fretted dulcimer includes Anisa Angarola (guitar), Valarie King (flute, piccolo, alto flute, bass flute), Miamon Miller (violin), and Sylvia Woods (Celtic harp). Carolan's Cottage ♪♪♪♪ (Dargason Music, 1986, prod. Joemy Wilson, Scott Fraser) is the second recording devoted to the music of O'Carolan and includes a beautiful version of "Morgan Megan." The third recording of O'Carolan's tunes, Celtic Dreams ♪♪♪♪ (Dargason Music, 1989, prod. Joemy Wilson, Scott Fraser), also includes other tunes from Ireland, Scotland, and Wales, such as "Coilsfield House." Celtic Treasures ♪♪♪♪ (Dargason Music, 1994, prod. Joemy Wilson, Scott Fraser) includes four O'Carolan pieces as well as works by two other Irish harpers, Cornelius Lyons, and Rory Dall O'Cahan. This recording includes an assortment of jigs, reels, airs, and a hornpipe which is a treasure-chest of Celtic delights. The CD liner notes on each of these recordings are exceptionally well presented with the complete history/background for each tune.

what to buy next: Beatles on Hammered Dulcimer ♪♪♪♪ (Dargason Music, 1989, prod. Joemy Wilson, Scott Fraser) is a fun collection of 12 Lennon/McCartney masterpieces played on the hammered dulcimer as instrumentals. Wilson is accompanied by the same talented musicians as in her Celtic recordings. Dulcimer Lullabies ♪♪♪♪ (Dargason Music, 1991, prod. Joemy Wilson, Scott Fraser) is subtitled "Quiet-time Music for Children on Hammered Dulcimer." These lullabies come from Ireland, Scotland, Wales, Holland, Germany, and the United States and include a lovely Wilson original, "Naya's Song." All of these recordings are available from Dargason Music, P.O. Box 189, Burbank, California 91503 or through e-mail at dargason@earthlink.net.

the rest:
Gifts ♪♪♪ (Dargason Music, 1985)
Gifts, Volume II ♪♪♪ (Dargason Music, 1987) Gifts III ♪♪♪ (Dargason Music, 1990)

worth searching for: Joemy Wilson's cassette-only debut recording, Dargason: A Dulcimer Sampler ♪♪♪ (Back Lot Recordings 1982/Dargason Music, 1986, prod. Joemy Wilson, Scott Fraser), features her fretted dulcimer skills and also includes some nice vocals that are not heard on any of her subsequent recordings.

influences:

Chieftains, Derek Bell, Sean O'Riada, Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart

Madeline MacNeil, Carrie Crompton

Heidi Cerrigione

Jesse Winchester

Born May 17, 1944, in Shreveport, LA.

Early in his career, Jesse Winchester was known as much for his conscientious objection to the Vietnam War that sent him up to Canada during the late 1960s as for the sweet, finely edged country/folk songs, often invoking the American South, that he wrote and recorded beginning in 1970. His first album, produced by Robbie Robertson of the Band and engineered by Todd Rundgren, signaled the emergence of a sensitive and literate tunesmith with a lot on his mind. By the time of his third album, the appropriately titled Learn to Love It (1974), Winchester was familiar with expressing the complexities and frustrations of his exile from the States and his Memphis home, but with his gentle bluesy style, he articulately told the story, sometimes even with a touch of humor, without complaining about it. He became a Canadian citizen in 1973 and still lives in Canada, but was able to return to the States and tour here after President Carter's amnesty for draft resisters in 1977. Though he recorded most prolifically between 1970 and 1981, Winchester's songs continued to be recorded by artists ranging from Wynonna ("Let's Make a Baby King") and Emmylou Harris and Chris Smither ("Thanks to You") to dance-floor proponents Weather Girls ("Well-a-Wiggy"). Canadian label Stony Plain reissued the Winchester album catalog, originally released on Ampex and Bearsville, in 1994, 1995, and 1996.

what to buy: The Best of Jesse Winchester ♪♪♪♪ (Rhino, 1988, prod. various), compiled by Bill Flanagan, collects highlights from the seven albums Winchester recorded between 1970 and 1981 and includes his only Top 40 hit, "Say What" from 1981's Talk Memphis album.

what to buy next: Jesse Winchester ♪♪♪½ (Stony Plain, 1970, prod. Robbie Robertson) and Learn to Love It ♪♪♪½ (Stony Plain, 1974, prod. Jesse Winchester), his first and third album respectively, both recently reissued, were originally critical favorites by the tasteful, then reclusive folk/blues songwriter whose songs have gracefully withstood the test of time.

the rest:

Third Down, 110 to Go ♪♪♪ (Stony Plain, 1972)

Let the Rough Side Drag ♪♪♪½ (Stony Plain, 1976)
Nothing but a Breeze ♪♪♪½ (Stony Plain, 1977)
A Touch on the Rainy Side ♪♪♪½ (Stony Plain, 1978) Talk Memphis ♪♪♪ (Stony Plain, 1981)

worth searching for: His most recent recording, 1988's Humour Me ♪♪♪½ (Sugar Hill, 1988, prod. Jesse Winchester) is Winchester at his most relaxed. Recorded in Nashville, the album features 12 tracks and includes his laid-back readings of "Thanks to You," "Let's Make a Baby King," and "Well-a-Wiggy" with stellar accompaniment by Sam Bush, Béla Fleck, Jerry Douglas, Mark O'Connor, and other top players.

influences:

Bob Dylan, Band

John Prine, Lyle Lovett

David Sokol

Chubby Wise

Born Robert Russell Wise, October 2, 1915, in Lake City, FL. Died January 6, 1996.

A fiddle player's fiddle player, Chubby Wise's music associations read like a who's who of country music. Performing and recording with the likes of Hank Snow (as a member of Snow's Rainbow Ranch Boys), Bill Monroe, Flatt and Scruggs, Mac Wiseman, Connie Gay, Howdy Forrester, and Ervin Rouse (composer of "Orange Blossom Special"), Wise certainly left his mark on country music.

what's available: Wise's final album, An American Original ♪♪♪♪ (Pinecastle, 1995, prod. Sonny Osborne), features backing by the Osborne Brothers, plus guitarist David Crow and bassist Terry Smith. Wise's unique choice of songs makes this album stand out; in addition to public-domain fiddle favorites like "Cotton-Eyed Joe," "Little Liza Jane," and "Under the Double Eagle," Wise also lends his distinctive fiddle tone to the country ballads "I Can't Stop Loving You" and "I'm So Lonesome I Could Cry," plus the beautiful gospel melody of "It Is No Secret (What God Can Do)." Wise's first album for Pinecastle, Chubby Wise in Nashville ♪♪♪½ (Pinecastle, 1994) is almost as good, joined as he is by the Osbornes and members of the Del McCoury Band. The album was recorded in three days in a Nashville house in which Patsy Cline once lived.

worth searching for: There's not much to lead you on the trail to finding Wise and Mac Wiseman's Chubby Wise and Mac Wiseman ♪♪♪—a live recording from Gilley's in Texas—except for the song titles. It's a double-length cassette filled with such country tunes as "Faded Love," "Wabash Cannonball," "The Wreck of the Old '97," and "The Prisoner's Song."

influences:

Bill Monroe, Howdy Forrester

Jimmy Campbell, Stuart Duncan

Randall T. Cook

Mac Wiseman

Born May 23, 1925, in Cremora, VA.

Known as "The Voice with a Heart" because of his distinctive warm, burred tenor voice, renowned bluegrass singer and guitarist Malcolm "Mac" Wiseman began his career playing bass with mountain singer Molly O'Day. An early member of Flatt and Scruggs's Foggy Mountain Boys, Wiseman spent most of 1949 playing guitar with Bill Monroe before launching his own band in 1950. He signed with Dot the following year; that association was long and fruitful, producing a number of best-selling singles and the recordings that earned Wiseman his enduring reputation. Working as a sometimes A&R man for Dot, Wiseman was a prolific recording artist during his career, cutting also for Capitol, Vetco, MGM, RCA Victor, and CMH. One of the few bluegrass singers who didn't maintain a regular band, Wiseman often worked with the Osborne Brothers during the 1980s and 1990s. His pioneering contributions to bluegrass were officially acknowledged in 1994 with his induction into the International Bluegrass Music Association's Bluegrass Hall of Honor.

what to buy: Early Dot Recordings, Volume III ♪♪♪♪½ (County, 1992, reissue prod. Gary B. Reid), drawn from Wiseman's early-1950s Dot material, gives a good feel for the singer's unique and highly enjoyable take on bluegrass. It includes such Wiseman favorites as "Don't Let Your Sweet Love Die," "Goin' like Wildfire," and "I'll Still Write Your Name in the Sand." Volumes one and two also come highly recommended but are unavailable on CD.

what to buy next: Classic Bluegrass ♪♪♪ (Rebel, 1989, prod. Lou Ukelson, Fred Bartenstein), which reissues mid-1970s Vetco recordings, displays Wiseman's facility with sentimental "heart" songs like "Mary of the Wild Moor," "Letter Edged in Black," and "Black Sheep," along with excellent backup from the Shenandoah Cutups. The Mac Wiseman Story ♪♪♪½ (CMH, 1991, prod. Arthur Smith), a slightly stronger set also drawn from mid-1970s recordings, includes solid remakes of many of Wiseman's biggest songs, including "'Tis Sweet to Be Remembered," "Love Letters in the Sand," "I Wonder How the Old Folks Are at Home," and "Jimmie Brown, the Newsboy." The backing band includes Billy Edwards and Tater Tate from the Shenandoah Cut-Ups.

what to avoid: Teenage Hangout woof! (Bear Family, 1993, prod. Richard Weize) is a bizarre reissue that brings together Dot singles from the 1950s aimed at the newly developing teen rock 'n' roll market. It's difficult to imagine a more ill-conceived or badly executed marketing ploy—and the music is bad, too.

the rest:

The Osborne Brothers and Mac Wiseman ♪♪♪½ (CMH, 1979)
24 Greatest Hits ♪♪½ (Deluxe, 1987) Grassroots to Bluegrass: A Very Special Collection ♪♪♪ (CMH, 1990)

influences:

Bradley Kincaid, Blue Sky Boys, Wilf Carter

Glenn Yarbrough, Bobby Osborne, Charlie Waller, Peter Rowan

Randy Pitts and Jon Hartley Fox

Kate Wolf

Born Kathryn Louise Allen January 27, 1942, in San Francisco, CA. Died December 10, 1986, in San Francisco, CA.

A prolific songwriter whose career was just starting to blossom when she died tragically in 1986 of complications from a bone marrow transplant to treat leukemia, Kate Wolf was arguably one of the best songwriters of her generation. She spent her formative years in Berkeley, California, later re-locating to Sonoma County, and her music always reflected her California roots. Although she had musical training in her youth, she did not begin to write and perform seriously until she was almost 30, taking her inspiration from a recording of Rosalie Sorrels singing songs of "Utah" Phillips. She was among the earliest and most successful of independent artists, choosing to produce her recordings on her own Owl label (all have now been re-released on Rhino), rather than sign with a major recording label. She began touring nationally in 1977. Her first studio album was released in 1979 and marked the beginning of a very successful collaboration with talented guitarist Nina Gerber, whose accompaniment provided an excellent complement to Wolf's lyrics. Wolf's songs were intimate and autobiographical, yet always seemed to be speaking directly to each listener. She was at the peak of her powers at the time of her death. During her lifetime, she received several critical awards from the National Association of Independent Record Distributors and Manufacturers (NAIRD) and in 1987, she became the first musician inducted into the NAIRD Independent Hall of Fame.

what to buy: Gold in California ♪♪♪♪♪ (Kaleidoscope, 1986/Rhino, 1994, prod. Kaleidoscope), a two-CD retrospective, is an excellent overview of Wolf's music and also showcases Nina Gerber's remarkable talent.

what to buy next: Give Yourself to Love ♪♪♪♪♪ (Kaleidoscope, 1985/Rhino, 1994, prod. Kate Wolf, Tom Diamant) is another two-CD set recorded live in concert. Close to You ♪♪♪♪♪ (Kaleidoscope, 1981/Rhino, 1994, prod. Bill Griffin, Tom Diamant) is perhaps Wolf's best studio album.

what to avoid: Wolf's family, in collaboration with Nina Gerber, has released several projects of previously unreleased material since her death. Production values and technical quality are marginal at best although the material is worth the attention of dedicated Wolf fans. These include: The Wind Blows Wild ♪♪ (Kaleidoscope, 1988/Rhino, 1994, prod. Nina Gerber), Looking Back at You ♪♪ (Rhino, 1994, prod. Bill Griffin), and Carry It On ♪♪ (Flat Rock, 1996, Nina Gerber). Breezes ♪ (Gadfly, 1995, prod. Lionel Kilberg), is a re-release of a 1973 album called We Walked by the Water on Shoestryng Records. An early and not-ready-for-prime-time collaboration with lyricist Lionel Kilberg, for which Wolf provided only the music, it is thoroughly unrepresentative of her later work. It should be of interest to Wolf "completists" only.

the rest:
Back Roads ♪♪♪ (Owl, 1976/Kaleidoscope, 1976/Rhino, 1994)
Lines on the Paper ♪♪♪ (Owl, 1977/Rhino, 1994)
Safe at Anchor ♪♪♪♪ (Kaleidoscope, 1979/Rhino, 1994)
Poet's Heart ♪♪♪♪ (Kaleidoscope, 1985/Rhino 1994)
An Evening in Austin ♪♪♪ (Kaleidoscope, 1989/Rhino, 1994)

influences:
◀◀ Bruce "Utah" Phillips, Rosalie Sorrels, Gil "Jellyroll" Turner
▶▶ Nanci Griffith

Neal Walters

Wolfstone

Formed 1988, in Scotland (mostly from the east coast of Sutherland).

Duncan Chisholm, electric fiddle; Ivan Drever, vocals, acoustic guitar; Stuart Eaglesham, acoustic and electric guitars, vocals; Struan Eaglesham, keyboards; Mop Youngson, drums; Wayne MacKenzie, bass; Stevie Saint, bagpipes, whistles.

Sounding like a collision between a traditional dance band and a grungy rock outfit, Wolfstone merged the old with the new, the acoustic with the electric, and in so doing breathed new life into old tunes, energized their fans, and made traditional music accessible to rock and pop audiences. Wolfstone took Scottish traditional music, melded with the youthful exuberance of contemporary rock, and carved a significant niche for themselves. The seven members of Wolfstone are from the highlands of Scotland, but eschew the commonly romanticized version of their homeland, presenting a more realistic picture through their music. Portraits of the everyday joys and struggles of the resilient and musically rich people of Scotland are central to Wolfstone's music. Wolfstone began during the late '80s when Duncan Chisholm and some friends formed a professional dance band to play music for ceilidhs. The potent combination of fiddle, bagpipes, and a rock rhythm section played to an audience wanting more from traditional music. The original Wolfstone, including Struan Eaglesham on keyboards and brother Stuart Eaglesham on guitar, subsequently welcomed accomplished guitarist and songwriter, Ivan Drever, into the fledgling group. Wolfstone's first album, Unleashed, released on Iona Records in Scotland, quickly became the label's biggest seller, earning the band a Silver Disc Award by the Scottish Music Industry Association. With the release of The Chase in 1992, Wolfstone's touring schedule expanded to include Europe and North America. Their success at the international Tonder Festival in Denmark caused them to be the only band ever to be invited to perform for three consecutive years. The excitement generated at Wolfstone concerts has been much discussed and is almost legendary among their fans. Unfortunately due to a combination of management problems and record company squabbles, the band called it quits at the end of 1997. Individual members will continue as solo performers and in different ensembles.

what to buy: The Chase ♪♪♪♪♪ (Iona 1992/Green Linnet, 1994, prod. Phil Cunningham), the group's groundbreaking second album, garnered rave reviews from critics all over the world. "Tinnie Run," starting with an in-your-face electric guitar riff and segueing into pumped up traditional tunes, perhaps best exemplifies the Wolfstone sound. The Chase also includes one of the band's most requested songs, "The Prophet." Stuart Eaglesham rocks passionately as he sings of a mysterious sage of Scottish legend. "The Appropriate Dipstick" is a showcase for piper Dougie Pincock on this recording. The album ends with "Cannot Lay Me Down," a set that includes the title song written and sung by Drever and ends with the gorgeous "Lady of Ardross," written by Eaglesham.

what to buy next: The Half Tail ♪♪♪♪ (Green Linnet, 1996, prod. Chris Harley). Working with Chris Harley, a producer for bands like Runrig, this album shows a more rocked up and polished Wolfstone, with more emphasis on the rhythm section. Included is the standout "Bonnie Ship the Diamond" which exquisitely combines a well-known traditional whaling song with "The Last Leviathan" a song from the dying whale's point of view. The album begins with an ethereal wash of synthesizer and percussion followed by the exuberant piping of Stevie Saint. Other standouts are "Gillies," another pipe infused stomper, and "Glenglass" a bit more laid back mix of keyboards and fiddle. From the opening drum roll to the final pipe drone, Year of the Dog ♪♪♪♪ (Green Linnet, 1994, prod. Phil Cunningham) kicks with frenetic fiddling, sparkling piano, and spirited flutes, whistles, and pipes, paired with a grungier background than The Chase and Unleashed. Year of the Dog broke the band out of the earlier more acoustic mode and represented a change to a rockier sound while still appealing to Celtophiles and rock enthusiasts alike; hard-core traditionalists could be found dancing along with rock fans to the tunes from this album. The original songs range from pithy social and political commentary to tender love songs. The tunes are a combination of new and old, but all are derived from the long-ago tradition with a contemporary spin. Producer Phil Cunningham has once again contributed several tunes and placed his well-known production stamp on the project.

what to avoid: Wolfstone I and Wolfstone II are very early versions of the band that even the band would rather not have in circulation. The owner of the master tapes began re-releasing them when Wolfstone began getting worldwide attention.

the rest:
Unleashed ♪♪♪♪ (Iona, 1991/Green Linnet, 1992)
Burning Horizons ♪♪♪½ (Iona, 1993) (EP)
Pick of the Litter ♪♪♪½ (Green Linnet, 1997)
This Strange Place N/A (Green Linnet, 1998)

worth searching for: Wolfstone: Captured Alive Video (Grampian Television/Wolfstone Partnership, 1992) This 68-minute video shot at a concert in Aberdeen, Scotland, is a good look at the band's live shows and you can get a sense of the energy that is talked about so much.

influences:
◀◀ Silly Wizard, Battlefield Band, Runrig, Bothy Band, Planxty

▶▶ Burach, Paperboys, Rock Salt and Nails, Rawlins Cross

Denise Sofranko

Wooden Leg

See: Blood Oranges

Sylvia Woods

Born May 23, 1951, in Oak Ridge, TN.

Largely responsible for the growing popularity of the folk-harp in folk music today, Sylvia Woods got her start the way many folk-harpers do, playing the pedal harp while in college. Soon after graduation, she discovered the lure of the folk harp, and traveled to Ireland and Brittany to learn more. Her enthusiasm for an instrument little known at the time led her to develop teaching material and methods particular for this type of harp. Her book Teach Yourself to Play the Folk Harp is the most-used instruction manual for the instrument. Woods's credits as a performer are long and impressive. She started her career largely through her work with Robin Williamson and His Merry Band, from 1976–79. In 1980 she won the prestigious All-Ireland Harp Championship. She has worked with a wide variety of musicians, including Caswell/Carnahan, Al Stewart, Joemy Wilson, and Jimmy Messina. She has shared her expertise of the folk harp with budding harpers world-wide through workshops, instructional videos, master-classes, and judging of competitions. The focus of her work today seems to be the promotion of the folk harp to the music world.

what to buy: Sylvia's first recording, an original work, The Harp of Brandiswhiere: A Suite for Celtic Harp ♪♪♪♪ (Tonmeister, 1982, prod. Don Snyder, Sylvia Woods) is a ground-breaking recording. It tells the heroic tale of a harper who saves his world with his music. Entirely instrumental, this recording demonstrates Woods's adept handling of her instrument, amazing the listener with the fluidity of the folk harp. Winner of several awards, including Best Fantasy Album, this music has a history of causing radio stations to be swamped with calls when it is played on the air.

what to buy next: Both of Sylvia's Christmas recordings Three Harps for Christmas ♪♪♪½ (Tonmeister, 1985, prod. Don Snyder) and 3 Harps for Christmas Volume II ♪♪♪ (Tonmeister, 1989, prod. Don Snyder) are filled with masterfully performed holiday material. Each recording contains a nice mix of familiar, contemporary, and traditional carols and songs for the season, as played on three different types of folk harp.

influences:

Alan Stivell

Joemy Wilson, Ruth Barrett

Jo Hughey Morrison

Woodshed All-Stars

See: Mac Benford & the Woodshed All-Stars

The Woodstock Mountain Revue

Formed 1973, in Woodstock, NY. Disbanded 1978.

Happy Traum; Artie Traum, Jim Rooney, guitar, vocals; Bill Keith, banjo; John Herald, guitar, vocals; Maria Muldaur; Roly Salley; Pat Alger; others.

The hills of Woodstock, New York, a small artistic town 90 miles north of New York City, came alive during the 1970s with the communal spirit of the Woodstock Mountain Revue. With Happy and Artie Traum setting the pace, the group came together in a sense of fun and musical camaraderie. While traditional material served as the major source for their repertoire, the Revue showcased the folk-like original songs of John Herald, Roly Salley, and Pat Alger and offered unique interpretations of songs by Woody Guthrie, Hank Williams, Flatt and Scruggs, the Delmore Brothers, James Taylor, and Bobby Charles. While the nucleus of the Woodstock Mountain Revue featured the Traums, banjo player Bill Keith and guitarist-vocalists Jim Rooney and John Herald, other musicians, including Maria Muldaur, Eric Andersen, John B. Sebastian, Rory Block, Eric Kaz, and the late Paul Butterfield, made important contributions to their albums.

what to buy: Music from Mud Acres ♪♪♪ (Rounder, 1977, prod. Happy Traum, Artie Traum) includes tracks from the four albums recorded by the Woodstock Mountain Revue. In addition to memorable renditions of tunes by Woody Guthrie, James Taylor, Lester Flatt, and Doc Watson, the collection showcases the original songs of revue members John Herald ("Warm Rain" and "Starry Eyed Song"), Roly Salley ("Killing the Blues," "The First Waltz," and "Pretty Lucky") and Artie Traum ("Barbed Wire" and "Cold Front").

what to buy next: The first album by the Woodstock Mountain Revue, Mud Acres: Music among Friends ♪♪♪ (Rounder, 1974, prod. Happy Traum, Artie Traum) captures like-minded musicians getting together to jam and have fun. The emphasis is on traditional folk music and bluegrass with songs including "Darlin' Corey Is Gone," "Titanic," and "Jackhammer John."

the rest:

Pretty Lucky ♪♪ (Rounder, 1978)

Back to Mud Acres ♪♪♪ (Rounder, 1981)

influences:

Bob Dylan, Band, Greenbrier Boys

Old and in the Way, Peter Rowan see also: Happy Traum, Artie Traum

Craig Harris

Glenn Yarbrough

Born January 12, 1930, in Milwaukee, WI.

Glenn Yarbrough was something of a folk music anomaly, wielding a lyrical tenor voice instead of a more rough-hewn, working-class style. His distinctive tone helped make him a focal point of the Limeliters, the enormously popular folk group Yarbrough joined in 1959. Yarbrough became transformed by music while studying in the Great Books program at St. John's College in Annapolis, Maryland. There, in 1951, he heard a performance by the legendary Woody Guthrie. After the show, Guthrie joined Yarbrough and his roommate, Jac Holzman, in their dorm room, and the three spent all night talking and singing. "Guthrie taught me that music could help change the world," Yarbrough later commented. He headed for New York City and the ultra-happening folk scene in 1955. But the thrill of performing in Greenwich Village gave way to financial realities, and he landed a steady-paying job at Chicago's Gate of Horn Club in 1956, for a weekly salary of $150. The Limeliters discovered his talents when Yarbrough played the Cosmo Alley folk club in Los Angeles in 1959. During Yarbrough's time with the Limeliters (1959–63), the group became one of the best-known folk acts in the country. Led by Lou Gottlieb, who earned a Ph.D. in musicology from UCLA, and Paris-born Alex Hassilev, they were a smash with the smart set, mixing an intellectual brand of humor with traditional and international folk songs. Yarbrough left the Limeliters in 1963 to strike out on his own, signing with RCA the same year. His first album was titled, appropriately, Glenn Yarbrough: Time to Move On, and included the title song, "You Know My Name," and "Four Strong Winds." He followed that in 1964 with One More Round and Come Share My Life. Yarbrough's breakthrough year occurred in 1965, when the single "Baby the Rain Must Fall," from the motion picture starring Steve McQueen, went to Number 12 on the Billboard pop chart. The album of the same name is generally considered his best, featuring such tracks as "Lonesome, Long Time Blues," "She," and "I've Been To Town." Between 1964 and 1968, Yarbrough recorded 12 albums for RCA and was nominated for several Grammy awards. But he was growing tired of the music business. In 1967 he took the bulk of his earnings from RCA and built a school for underprivileged children in the San Bernadino Mountains of California. After leaving RCA in 1968 with a final album, perhaps aptly titled We Survived the Madness, Yarbrough devoted considerable energies to other facets of the business, mainly on the publishing end. He and poet/author Rod McKuen founded their own publishing firm, Stanyan Music Co., around the same time Yarbrough signed with Warner Bros. in 1968. That venture produced a pair of minor anthology albums, with McKuen providing the liner notes. Yarbrough continued to record throughout the 1970s and 1980s, although without a good deal of commercial success. During the late 1980s, he briefly re-formed the Limeliters with new members. Presently, he lives in southern California—mostly on his boat (he's an expert and avid long-distance sailor), and continues to record, both as a solo act and with vocalist daughter Holly as accompanist. Yarbrough performs regularly on the concert tour trail and is involved with two major projects: Through a Lighthouse Window for public radio, and The Forgotten Carols, a solo holiday concert.

what to buy: Baby the Rain Must Fall ♪♪♪♪ (RCA, 1965/Folk Era, 1997, prod. Neely Plumb) remains the finest example of Yarbrough's range and sensibilities.

the rest:
Glenn Yarbrough: Time to Move On ♪♪♪ (RCA, 1964)
Come Share My Life ♪♪♪ (RCA, 1965)
Yarbrough Country ♪♪♪ (Warner Bros., 1969)
Live at the Troubadour ♪♪♪ (Brass Dolphin, 1978)
The Forgotten Carols ♪♪♪ (Calabasas, 1994)
Live at Harrah's Reno ♪♪♪ (Calabasas, 1995)
(With Holly Yarbrough) Family Portrait ♪♪♪ (Folk Era, 1995)
Live at the Troubadour ♪♪♪ (Folk Era, 1995)
(With Holly Yarbrough) Sing Annie Get Your Gun ♪♪♪ (Folk Era, 1996) All-Time Favorites ♪♪♪ (Folk Era, 1997)

influences:
◀◀ Woody Guthrie, Pete Seeger

▶▶ Paul Simon, Neil Young

Bob Paxman

Peter Yarrow

See: Peter, Paul & Mary

Young Tradition

Formed 1964. Disbanded 1969.

Heather Wood, vocals, whistle; Royston Wood (died in 1990), vocals, percussion; Peter Bellamy (died in 1991), vocals, guitar, whistle, concertina.

The Young Tradition suits the seeming oxymoron of its name. Drawing on the simple, unaccompanied folk singing of the Copper Family, the group infused the tradition with its members' influences and ideas, including blues and rock elements and a cheerful irreverence. The group had a short life together, but its influence endured in England as the link between finger-in-the-ear traditional singing and electrified rave-ups. The members' lives were touched by tragedy; Royston Wood was killed in a 1990 auto accident, and Peter Bellamy, who embarked on a solo career but never found his comfortable place in the folk world, committed suicide in 1991. Heather Wood still lives and works in New York City as a writer, lecturer, and musician with the group Poor Old Horse.

what's available: The Young Tradition/So Cheerfully Round ♪♪♪♪♪ (1966, 1967/Transatlantic, 1996, prod. Nathan Joseph) containing largely unaccompanied vocals, highlights the group's strong, creative harmonies. Galleries ♪♪♪♪♪ (Transatlantic, 1968, prod. Bill Leader), a fascinating mix, has instrumental backing from Young Tradition and guests Dave Swarbrick (fiddle), Dolly Collins (portative organ), Sandy Denny (piano), and the Early Music Consort, and the Royston Wood and Heather Wood project No Relation ♪♪♪♪♪ (Transatlantic, 1977, prod. Royston Wood, Tony Platt) were released on a single CD in 1997. No Relation, which features Bellamy along with the unrelated Wood and Wood and thus might as well be a Young Tradition album, is an eclectic group of songs, including a medieval plainchant and an American traditional song, with various musicians providing simple backing. The 1997 combined recording also contains three chanteys known as the "Chicken on a Raft" EP.

worth searching for: Young Tradition and Shirley and Dolly Collins recorded The Holly Bears the Crown ♪♪♪♪♪ (Fledg'ling, 1969/1995, prod. John Gilbert) shortly before the group broke up. It's a wonderfully English holiday recording, featuring passages from Shakespeare and Virginia Woolf and songs sacred and secular, Christian and pre-Christian. "Is It Far to Bethlehem?," with its simple vocals by Shirley Collins and Heather Wood, raises goosebumps.

solo outings:

Peter Bellamy:

Both Sides Then ♪♪♪♪½ (Topic, 1979/Fledg'ling, 1992, prod. Peter Bellamy)

influences:

◀◀ Copper Family, Everly Brothers, Ewan MacColl

▶▶ Sandy Denny, Albion Band, Cordelia's Dad

Pamela Murray Winters

Jesse Colin Young

Born November 22, 1941, in New York, NY.

Like many a folkie who frequented the acoustic circuit of the Village during the early '60s, Jesse Colin Young eventually caught the rock bug, switched to bass, and formed the Youngbloods, a band that lasted a half-dozen years and produced a handful of enduring tracks ("Darkness, Darkness," "Sunlight"). Out on his own again by the early '70s, Young slipped into a smooth-rock persona, writing tunes that reflected the serenity of his Colorado mountain home ("Ridgetop"), his love of family life ("Song for Juli"), and general bliss ("Light Shine"). Though pleasant and well-recorded, a lot of these songs are of their time—the mellowness just doesn't transfer all that well into the modern era. Nevertheless, Young maintains a loyal fan base, and he remains active as a performer to this day.

what to buy: Rather than getting caught in the laid-back bedrock of any single Young album, The Best of Jesse Colin Young: The Solo Years ♪♪♪ (Rhino, 1991, prod. Jesse Colin Young) extracts the occasional highlights—and taken in this form shows that the man knew how to put together a good light pop song. Best includes "Four in the Morning," "Sugar Babe," and "Morning Sun," in addition to his own live (if less effective) version of the Youngbloods classic "Sunlight." Young gets stellar backing along the way from the likes of Hank DeVito, Timothy B. Schmit, John Sebastian, and Mike Porcaro.

the rest:

Together ♪♪½ (Warner Bros., 1972)
Song for Juli ♪♪ (Warner Bros., 1973)
Light Shine ♪♪ (Warner Bros., 1974)
Songbird ♪♪ (Warner Bros., 1975)
On the Road ♪♪ (Warner Bros., 1976)

influences:

◀◀ Bob Dylan, Beatles

▶▶ Dan Fogelberg, Pure Prairie League

David Simons

Neil Young

Born November 12, 1945 in Toronto, Canada.

Because Neil Young is an extremist who never sticks with any one extreme for very long (not to mention that he's a brilliant artist), the length and breadth of his influence is enormous. Who else can claim Sonic Youth as well as Uncle Tupelo as his spiritual progeny? Of course, the rather profound downside is that many of his stylistic shifts seem about as well-thought-out as drunken mood swings. From style to style, the consistent thread in Young's work is his catalog of ongoing obsessions—cars, highways, Indians, ch-ch-changes—with his own stylistic restlessness serving as musical metaphor for his thematic variations on motion. Like an erratic home run hitter, even Young's whiffs are at least somewhat entertaining. His initial impact in the country field was as lead guitarist in the pioneering California country-rock band Buffalo Springfield during the mid-'60s. Since then, he has never gone too long in his wandering without returning to some variation of roots rock. Unfortunately, his folksy singer-songwriter side tends to be less interesting than his primordial guitar-mangling side. His best work comes on those occasions when he unites both halves. Someday, if Young really does put out Decade II (the much-rumored mullet-disc retrospective that has been in the works since the late '80s), maybe it will all make sense.

what to buy: Tonight's the Night ♪♪♪♪♪ (Reprise, 1975, prod. David Briggs, Neil Young) is the spookiest album Young (or anyone else) has ever made. Haunted by images of death and decay, this is macabre honky-tonk music that lands in a pitch-black nether world somewhere between Robert Johnson and Hank Williams. The best albums Young has made since then are all, in some way, Young battling the ghosts he conjured up on Tonight. After the Gold Rush ♪♪♪♪♪ (Reprise, 1970, prod. Neil Young, David Briggs, Kindle Paces) goes down smoother and is almost as powerful as Tonight. Everybody Knows This Is Nowhere ♪♪♪♪½ (Reprise, 1969, prod. David Briggs, Neil Young) is in the same mold as Buffalo Springfield, just with the guitars turned up to 11. Rust Never Sleeps ♪♪♪♪½ (Reprise, 1979, prod. Neil Young, David Briggs, Tim Mulligan) is folklore, yet was also the album that cemented Young's credibility with the punk generation. It has one of his best songs ever, "Pocahontas."

neil young

what to buy next: Harvest ♪♪♪♪ (Reprise, 1972, prod. Elliott Mazer, Neil Young, Jack Nitzsche, Henry Lewy) is one of the landmarks of '70s-vintage West Coast folk-rock, and also Young's most popular album. Harvest Moon ♪♪♪♪ (Reprise, 1992, prod. Neil Young, Ben Keith) is the sequel to the original Harvest. It's surprisingly successful, in part because of the dark imagery lurking within the music's pretty placid surfaces. Of Young's handful of live albums, country/folk fans will probably get the most mileage out of Unplugged ♪♪♪♪ (Reprise, 1993, prod. David Briggs), which offers a career-spanning lineup of songs.

what to avoid: Of all Young's schizoid '80s genre experiments, Old Ways ♪♪ (Geffen, 1985, prod. Neil Young, Ben Keith, David Briggs, Elliott Mazer) is the one that should've worked. His live shows from the period with his band International Harvester were great, and Young has a better feel for straight country than the technopop and blues he was dabbling with before and after. Instead, it's slick and lifeless (although Old Ways is notable because it's the album that got Young sued by his record label for making non-commercial records). Even worse is the rockabilly caricature Everybody's Rockin' ♪♪ (Geffen, 1983, prod. Elliott Mazer, Neil Young), which sounds like Young flailing around in desperate search of God only knows what.

the rest:
Neil Young ♪♪♪ (Reprise, 1969)
Journey through the Past ♪♪ (Warner Bros., 1972)
Time Fades Away ♪♪♪½ (Reprise, 1973)
On the Beach ♪♪♪½ (Reprise, 1974)
Zuma ♪♪♪½ (Reprise, 1975)
Long May You Run ♪♪½ (Reprise, 1976)
American Stars 'n Bars ♪♪♪ (Reprise, 1977)
Decade ♪♪♪♪ (Reprise, 1978)
Comes a Time ♪♪♪½ (Reprise, 1978)
Live Rust ♪♪♪½ (Reprise, 1979)
Hawks & Doves ♪♪♪ (Reprise, 1980)
Re-ac-tor ♪♪♪ (Reprise, 1981)
Trans ♪♪½ (Geffen, 1982)
Landing on Water ♪♪½ (Geffen, 1986)
Life ♪♪♪½ (Geffen, 1987)
This Note's for You ♪♪½ (Reprise, 1988)
Freedom ♪♪♪½ (Reprise, 1989)
Ragged Glory ♪♪♪♪ (Reprise, 1990)
Arc ♪♪ (Reprise, 1991)
Weld ♪♪♪ (Reprise, 1991)
Lucky 13 ♪♪♪ (Geffen, 1993)
Sleeps with Angels ♪♪♪♪ (Reprise, 1994)
Mirror Ball ♪♪♪½ (Reprise, 1995)
Broken Arrow ♪♪½ (Reprise, 1996)
Year of the Horse ♪♪♪½ (Reprise, 1997)

Neil Young (© Ken Settle)

worth searching for: Among the best of Young's array of "lost albums" is Chrome Dreams ♪♪♪♪½, a bootleg made from an acetate copy of an album Young worked on during 1975–76. The album never came out, but the songs—including "Pocahontas," "Too Far Gone," "Sedan Delivery," and "Powderfinger"—later turned up on other albums.

influences:
◀◀ Bob Dylan, Byrds
▶▶ Uncle Tupelo, Jayhawks, Bruce Springsteen, T-Bone Burnett, Joe Henry, R.E.M., Sidewinders, Beat Farmers

see also: Crosby, Stills & Nash

David Menconi

Steve Young

Born July 12, 1942, in GA.

Steve Young's songs have bolstered the careers of others—notably the Eagles, Hank Williams Jr., and Waylon Jennings—but the southern singer/songwriter has never come close to tasting fame on his own. That's hardly surprising, since Young's eclectic style draws on blues, folk, country, rock, and mountain styles: it's simply too diverse to package and sell to the masses. Which is not to say it's not worth checking out. A native southerner, Young moved to the West Coast during the late 1960s, where he was an integral part of the California country-rock movement (Gram Parsons, Chris Hillman, Bernie Leadon, and Gene Clark all appeared on Young's 1969 debut, Rock Salt & Nails). From there he has gravitated toward Austin, Texas, Nashville and, once again, Los Angeles, with varying degrees of success. His songs alone make him well worth checking out, but he's also an agile guitarist and an expressive singer.

what to buy: A de facto best-of release, Solo/Live ♪♪♪½ (Watermelon, 1991, prod. Heinz Geissler) contains acoustic performances of Young's songs that have been made famous by others, including "Seven Bridges Road" (the Eagles) and "Montgomery in the Rain" (Hank Williams Jr.), plus some that have influenced him—the traditional "Go to Sea No More" and Bob Dylan's "Don't Think Twice, It's Alright." Young proves himself more than a great songwriter, though; he's also a terrific guitarist and vocalist.

diane zeigler

what to buy next: Switchblades of Love ♪♪♪½ (Watermelon, 1993, prod. J. Steven Soles) puts him in a full-band setting with impressive results. Highlights include "Angel of Lyon," written with Tom Russell, and the harrowing title track.

the rest:
Honky Tonk Man ♪♪♪ (Mountain Railroad, 1975/Drive Archive 1994)
Seven Bridges Road ♪♪♪½ (Reprise, 1971/Rounder 1982)
To Satisfy You ♪♪♪ (Rounder, 1982)

worth searching for: The best-of collection Lonesome, On'ry & Mean: Steve Young, 1968–78 ♪♪♪♪ (Raven, 1994) is available as an Australian export. Of Young's older, out-of-print material, look for Rock Salt & Nails ♪♪♪½ (A&M, 1969/Edsel, 1994), Renegade Picker ♪♪♪½ (RCA, 1976), and No Place to Fall ♪♪♪½ (RCA, 1978).

influences:
◀◀ Bob Dylan, Hank Williams
▶▶ Steve Earle, Townes Van Zandt, Gary Stewart, Tom Russell

Daniel Durchholz

Z

Diane Zeigler

Born in VT.

Diane Zeigler may be the Greta Garbo of contemporary folk music. After releasing an impressive debut album, Sting of the Honey Bee, in 1995, she announced her retirement from music and headed to the seclusion of western Massachusetts, with her husband, Geoffrey Cary Sather, a private school dean and occasional guitar player, and their daughter. One of five children, Zeigler consistently has balanced her music with humanitarian activism. Shortly after an older brother succumbed to illness, she dropped out of college and traveled to the jungles of Venezuela to become the director of an orphanage. Returning to northern Vermont, Zeigler attracted attention as an actress. Music, however, proved a greater lure. Inspired by the early-1970s folk-pop of James Taylor, Dan Fogelberg, and Jackson Browne, Zeigler, who had taught herself to play guitar, moved to Boston with plans of becoming a singer-songwriter. Performing at open mics and coffeehouses, often with Sather on guitar, she became known for her well-crafted balladry and emotional vocals.

what to buy: Sting of the Honeybee ♪♪♪ (Rounder, 1995, prod. Artie Traum, Scott Petito), Zeigler's only album, documents her understanding and compassion for the "common" folk. Accompanied by a full, acoustic-based band, she offers an insightful glimpse at such memorable characters as a surviving spouse, a struggling artist, and an Atlantic fisherman, and provides uplifting hope with her songs "Leap of Faith" and "Walk on Water." The only non-original tune, James Taylor's "Millworker," fits snuggly into the album's theme.

influences:
◀◀ Jackson Browne, James Taylor, Dan Fogelberg
▶▶ Barbara Kessler, Maria Sangiolo, Jennifer Kimball, Catie Curtis

Craig Harris

Radim Zenkl

Born 1966, in Ostrova, Czechoslovakia

Imagine coming of age in the '70s and '80s in Cold War–era Czechoslovakia. You've already shown talent as a young child, and studied composition and classical guitar in school, but you find your attention drawn to something a little more elusive. Ever since Pete Seeger did a concert in Prague two years before your birth, and Czechs actually started constructing banjos based only on photos of that show, American string music has been something of an underground phenomenon. There are now over 100 bluegrass bands in your country—even some of your friends have defected to America and they're sending back tapes. You love the stuff, and you yearn to go to the source. Add to all that the fact that you're massively talented, possessed of a sheer creative will so powerful that no genre, not even a conventional instrument, can contain it. What then? Well, it means you're mandolin phenom Radim Zenkl, and in 1989, a mere three months before the communist government is toppled, you defect and head immediately to San Francisco to commingle with your musical heroes—among them the legendary David Grisman, who runs his own record label and has never heard anything like you in his life. Zenkl's insertion into the pantheon of American mandolin gods was swift. His first album on Grisman's Acoustic Disc label came out in 1991, the year he got to play for Vaclav Havel at a reception at UCLA. The following year he won the national championship at the prestigious Winfield, Kansas, festival. Now, with three albums to his credit, his reputation continues to grow, although Zenkl still specializes in the unexpected. When most mandolinists content themselves with fiddle tunes, bluegrass, or string-swing, Zenkl writes music so innovative that he has to modify his instrument to near-unrecognizability just to accommodate it. He currently plays a mandolin of his own design, with a standard scale length but a fingerboard width of 3 7/8" (a mile wide for a mandolin), and a custom-designed bridge with adjustable tuners for each string. Needless to say, it's uncommon to see this sort of freewheeling creativity in any genre, and the mandolin world has its share of hidebound traditionalists. Upon hearing Radim's beguiling, unclassifiable music, one wonders if he would be any less a creative force had he taken up jazz, or electronic music, or anything else. Instead, the mandolin is his medium, although to listen to him play one hears not so much a "mandolinist" but a musician.

what to buy: Although he released an album in Czechoslovakia in 1989, Galactic Mandolin ♪♪♪♪♪ (Acoustic Disc, 1991, prod. Radim Zenkl, David Grisman) is for all intents his debut album, and few first albums could have shattered expectations like this. It's all solo mandolin—no other instruments, no overdubs—with a peculiar unifying device: the first cut is played on a mandolin tuned in the normal fashion, on the second one each pair of strings is tuned to a minor second interval, the next a major second, the next a minor third and so on—13 cuts in all. In lesser hands this could be mere gimmickry, but this brilliant album is nothing less than an instrumental, compositional tour de force. The unaccompanied mandolin may never have delivered such sustained energy and variety of musical color as in the hands of this remarkable young master.

the rest:
Czech It Out ♪♪♪½ (Acoustic Disc, 1994)
Strings and Wings ♪♪♪♪ (Shanachie, 1996)

influences:
◀◀ David Grisman, Dave Apollon, Jethro Burns ▶▶ Slavek Hanzlik, Evan Marshall

Chris Rietz

Zydeco Force

Formed 1987, in Lawtell, LA.

Jeffery Broussard, one-row and three-row accordions; Shelton Broussard, guitar; Kent Perre August, guitar; Robby "Mann" Robinson, bass; Herbert Broussard, frattoir; Raymond Thomas, drums.

Robby "Mann" Robinson, originally from Opelousas, Louisiana, got his chops working the northern California blues circuit with acts like Etta James. When he relocated back to his home town, he worked with local performers like Roy Carrier in Lawtell. It was there that he met Jeffery Broussard, the son of late great Creole accordionist Delton Broussard. The two joined forces and created Zydeco Force in 1987. While their best playing tends to emphasize the one-chord vamps and solid grooves similar to the great Lawtell Playboys with which Delton Broussard played for years, Robinson has fueled the transition into a slicker, urban brand of zydeco that distinguishes them from most other rural zydeco groups.

what to buy: It's La La Time ♪♪♪♪ (Flat Town, 1995, prod. Robby "Mann" Robinson) shows the almost schizo nature of Zydeco Force. The traditional tunes are there, including Leo Thomas's updating of Canray Fontenot's "Tit Monde" as "Why You Wanna Make Me Cry?," and "Broken Hearted" from the repertoire of John Delafose. The band sways between this and a more urban sound almost cut by cut.

what to buy next: What makes Zydeco Force unique is how they move between the urban and rural sounds of zydeco. The dominate sound in Zydeco Push ♪♪♪ (Maison de Soul, 1993, prod. Robby "Mann" Robinson) is the more urban sound. Maybe it's just that Robinson originals, which make up most of the songs, lack any of the grit and funk of the more rural side that this group shows in live performance.

the rest:
The Sun's Going Down ♪♪♪ (Maison de Soul, 1995)

worth searching for: Zydeco Shootout at El Sid O's (Rounder, 1991, prod. Scott Billington), a sampler of zydeco bands live at the famous El Sis O's club, features two classics by Zydeco Force. "Madeline" is a Cajun tune made popular by Cajun fiddler and songwriter Adam Hebert that is syncopated into a hard-driving zydeco dance tune by the group. "I'm on My Way" has that odd, old, blues waltz feel that shows up in Creole music like Canray Fontenot's "Bonsoir Moreau" or Beau Jocque's "Moreau." It's a hypnotic kind of groove that is worth the price of the recording.

influences:
◀◀ Rockin' Dopsie, Clifton Chenier, John Delafose ▶▶ Keith Frank, Geno Delafose, Chris Ardoin

Jared Snyder

Zydeco Hi-Rollers

See: Beau Jocque

musicHound

folk

Resources and Other Information

Compilation Albums

Publications

Web Sites

Record Labels

Radio Stations

Festivals and Workshops

musicHound compilation albums

If you're looking for some good folk or roots music by a variety of performers, these compilation albums would be a good place to start. (We've broken the list down by type of music to make your life a little easier.)

Bluegrass

Appalachian Stomp: Bluegrass Classics ♪♪♪♪ (Rhino)
The Best of Bluegrass: Preachin', Prayin' and Singin' ♪♪♪♪ (Mercury)
The Best of Bluegrass, Vol. 1: Standards ♪♪♪♪♪ (Mercury)
Blue Ribbon Bluegrass ♪♪♪♪ (Rounder)
Bluegrass Class of 1990 ♪♪♪♪ (Rounder)
Bluegrass from Heaven: The Essential Gospel Collection ♪♪♪ (CMH)
Bluegrass Super Hits ♪♪♪½ (Columbia)
Bluegrass Suspects ♪♪♪ (Kaleidoscope)
Fifty Years of Bluegrass Hits ♪♪♪ (CMH)
Flatpicking '97 ♪♪♪ (FGM)
Hand-Picked: Twenty-Five Years of Rounder Bluegrass ♪♪♪♪♪ (Rounder)
The Minnesota Album ♪♪ (MBOTMA)
Mountain Music Bluegrass Style ♪♪♪½ (Smithsonian/Folkways)
Rounder Bluegrass Guitar ♪♪♪½ (Rounder)
Son of Rounder Banjo ♪♪♪♪ (Rounder)
Steel Rails, Classic Railroad Songs, Vol. 1 ♪♪♪½ (Rounder)
Steel Rails, Classic Railroad Songs, Vol. 2 ♪♪♪½ (Rounder)
Top of the Hill Bluegrass: The Sugar Hill Collection ♪♪♪♪½ (Sugar Hill)
True Life Blues: The Songs of Bill Monroe ♪♪♪♪ (Sugar Hill)
20 Bluegrass Originals: Hymns ♪♪♪½ (Deluxe)
Will the Circle Be Unbroken ♪♪♪♪ (United Artists)
Will the Circle Be Unbroken, Vol. 2 ♪♪♪ (Universal)

Blues

Alabama Blues 1927–1931 ♪♪♪½ (Yazoo)
The Copulatin' Blues ♪♪ (Jass Records)
Deep Blue: Rounder Blues Anthology ♪♪♪ (Rounder) Essential Blues ♪♪ (House of Blues)
Harmonica Masters ♪♪♪♪ (Yazoo)
Jackson Blues 1928–1938 ♪♪♪ (Yazoo)
Mama Let Me Lay It On You 1926–1936 ♪♪♪½ (Yazoo)
Masters of the Delta Blues: The Friends of Charlie Patton ♪♪♪½ (Yazoo) Memphis Jamboree 1927–1936 ♪♪♪ (Yazoo)
Memphis Town ♪♪ (Memphis Archives)
Mississippi Moaners 1927–1942 ♪♪♪½ (Yazoo)
News & the Blues, Tellin' It Like It Is ♪♪♪½ (Columbia)
Please Warm My Weiner ♪♪ (Yazoo)
Preachin' the Gospel—Holy Blues ♪♪ (Columbia)
Raunchy Business—Hot Nuts and Lollipops ♪♪ (Columbia)
St. Louis Blues 1927–1932 ♪♪♪½ (Yazoo)
St. Louis Blues 1929–1935: The Depression ♪♪♪½ (Yazoo)
String Bands (1926–1929) ♪♪♪½ (Document)
Texas Music, Vol. 1: Postwar Blues Combos ♪♪♪♪½ (Rhino) You're Gonna Miss Me ♪♪ (TELARC Blues)
Roots of Rap ♪♪♪ (Yazoo)

Box (or Multi-CD) Sets

The Alan Lomax Collection: Southern Journey ♪♪♪♪ (Rounder)
Anthology of American Folk Music ♪♪♪♪♪ (Smithsonian Folkways)
Before the Blues ♪♪♪♪ (Yazoo)
Billboard Top Country Hits: 1959–1990 ♪♪♪ (Rhino)
The Blues ♪♪♪♪ (Smithsonian Folkways)
Blues Masters ♪♪♪ (Rhino)
Classic Country Music ♪♪♪♪ (RCA/BMG)
Fifty Years of Bluegrass Hits ♪♪♪ (CMH)
Fifty Years of Country Music from Mercury, 1945–1995 ♪♪♪½ (Mercury)
From the Vaults: Decca Country Classics, 1934–1973 ♪♪♪♪ (MCA)
Prestige Folklore Years ♪♪♪ (Prestige/Folklore)
Roots and Blues: The Retrospective ♪♪♪♪ (Columbia) Sounds of the South ♪♪♪♪ (Atlantic)
The Sun Records Collection ♪♪♪♪½ (Rhino)
Troubadours of the Folk Era ♪♪♪ (Rhino)
White Country Blues, 1926–1938: A Lighter Shade of Blue ♪♪♪♪ (Columbia/Legacy)

8 6 8 compilation albums

Cajun/Zydeco

The Best of Louisiana Music ♪♪♪♪ (Rounder)
Bon Temp Rouler ♪♪♪ (Swallow)
Cajun Dance Hall Special ♪♪♪♪ (Rounder)
Cajun Dance Party: Fais Do-Do ♪♪♪♪ (Columbia/Legacy)
Cajun Fais Do-Do ♪♪♪½ (Arhoolie)
Cajun Gems ♪♪♪½ (Arhoolie)
Cajun Honky Tonk ♪♪♪½ (Arhoolie)
Cajun Music: The Early 1950s ♪♪♪½ (Arhoolie)
Cajun Music: The First Recordings ♪♪♪½ (Arhoolie) Cajun Music and Zydeco ♪♪♪♪ (Rounder)
Cajun Saturday Night ♪♪♪ (Swallow)
Cajun Social Music ♪♪♪♪ (Smithsonian Folkways)
Cajun Spice: Dance Music from South Louisiana ♪♪♪♪ (Rounder)
Cajun String Bands—The 1930s: Cajun Breakdown ♪♪♪ (Arhoolie)
Cajun: Vol. 1, Abbeville Breakdown, 1929–1939 ♪♪♪♪ (Columbia)
Folksongs of the Louisiana Acadians ♪♪♪½ (Arhoolie) Gran Prairie, Vol. 3 ♪♪♪♪½ (Country Music Foundation)
J'ai Ete Au Bal Vol. 1 ♪♪♪½ (Arhoolie)
J'ai Ete Au Bal Vol. 2 ♪♪♪½ (Arhoolie)
La Sacalaits Sont Pas Sale ♪♪♪ (Swallow)
Le Gran Mamou, Vol. 1 ♪♪♪♪½ (Country Music Foundation)
Louisiana Cajun from the Southwest Prairies, Vol. 1 ♪♪♪♪ (Rounder)
Louisiana Cajun from the Southwest Prairies, Vol. 2 ♪♪♪♪ (Rounder)
Louisiana Live from Mountain Stage ♪♪♪♪ (Blue Plate Music)
Louisiana Spice: 25 Years of Louisiana Music on Rounder Records ♪♪♪♪♪ (Rounder)
More Cajun Music and Zydeco ♪♪♪♪ (Rounder)
Pioneers of the Cajun Accordion ♪♪♪½ (Arhoolie) Raise Your Window, Vol. 2 ♪♪♪♪½ (Country Music Foundation) 21 Cajun Classics ♪♪♪ (Swallow)
Zydeco Champs ♪♪♪½ (Arhoolie)
Zydeco "The Early Years" ♪♪♪½ (Arhoolie)

Celtic

Ballinasloe Fair: Early Irish Music in America, 1920–1930 ♪♪♪ (Traditional Crossroads)
Brave Hearts: New Scots Music ♪♪♪ (Narada)
Celtic Angels ♪♪♪½ (Amiata)
Celtic Christmas III ♪♪♪♪½ (Windham Hill)
Celtic Dance ♪♪♪½ (Calvert)
The Celtic Fiddle Festival ♪♪♪ (Green Linnet)
Celtic Graces: A Best of Ireland ♪♪♪½ (Hemisphere)
Celtic Legacy ♪♪♪½ (Narada)
Celtic Love Songs ♪♪♪½ (Celtophile)
Celtic Moods ♪♪♪½ (Virgin)
Celtic Mouth Music ♪♪♪½ (Ellipsis Arts)
Celtic Music Live from Mountain Stage ♪♪♪½ (Blue Plate)
Celtic Odyssey ♪♪♪½ (Narada)
Celtic Planet ♪♪♪½ (Hearts of Space)
Celtic Portraits ♪♪♪½ (Green Hill)
Celtic Sessions ♪♪♪ (Gourd)
Celtic Spirit ♪♪♪½ (Narada)
Celtic Tales and Tongues ♪♪♪½ (Iago)
A Celtic Tapestry ♪♪♪♪½ (Shanachie)
A Celtic Tapestry, Vol. 2 ♪♪♪½ (Shanachie)
Celtic Treasure ♪♪♪ (Narada)
Celtic Twilight ♪♪♪½ (Hearts of Space)
Celtic Twilight 2 ♪♪♪½ (Hearts of Space)
Celtic Twilight 3—Lullabies ♪♪♪ (Hearts of Space)
Celtic Visions ♪♪♪½ (Green Hill)
Celtic Voices ♪♪♪½ (Green Hill)
Celtic Voices ♪♪♪½ (Narada)
Celtic Woman ♪♪♪½ (Celtic Woman)
Celtic Women in Music and Song ♪♪♪½ (Green Linnet)
The Coolin'—Classic Irish Airs & Laments from the Topic Catalogue ♪♪♪ (GlobeStyle) Dance of the Celts ♪♪♪½ (Narada)
Faces of the Harp ♪♪♪♪½ (Narada)
Fiddlesticks ♪♪ (Nimbus)
Folk'n'Hell ♪♪♪♪½ (EMI Hemisphere/Metro Blue)
From Galway to Dublin—Early Recordings of Irish Traditional Music ♪♪♪♪ (Rounder) Gaelic Roots ♪♪♪½ (Kells)
The Gentlemen Pipers—Classic Recordings of Irish Traditional Piping ♪♪♪ (GlobeStyle)
Green Linnet 20th Anniversary ♪♪♪ (Green Linnet)
Happy to Meet, Sorry to Part—Classic Recordings of Traditional Irish Dance Music ♪♪♪ (GlobeStyle)
Harpestry ♪♪♪½ (Philips)
Heart of the Celts ♪♪♪½ (Narada)
Holding Up Half the Sky: Voices of Celtic Women ♪♪♪ (Shanachie)
Hurry the Jug—Classic Recordings of Songs, Lilting & Storytelling in the Irish Tradition ♪♪♪ (GlobeStyle)
I'm Leaving Tipperary—Classic Irish Traditional Music Recorded in America in the '20s and '30s ♪♪♪ (GlobeStyle)
In the Smoke—Classic Traditional Irish Music Recorded in London in the '50s, '60s & '70s ♪♪♪ (GlobeStyle)
Ireland ♪♪♪♪ (World Network)
Ireland: Traditional Music of Today ♪♪♪½ (Auvidis-Unesco)
Irish Ballad Book ♪♪♪½ (Shanachie)
Irish Traditional Music ♪♪♪½ (ARC)
Jigs and Reels ♪♪♪½ (Celtophile)
The Jug of Punch ♪♪♪½ (Celtophile)
Legends of Ireland ♪♪♪½ (Rhino)
A Living Thing—Contemporary Classics of Traditional Irish Music ♪♪♪ (GlobeStyle) Maggie's Music Sampler ♪♪♪♪ (Maggie's Music)
Magic & Mystery—Magestic Music from Scotland and Ireland ♪♪♪♪ (Temple)
Milestones at the Garden—Irish Fiddle Masters from the 78RPM Era ♪♪♪♪ (Rounder)
The Music & Song of Greentrax ♪♪♪♪♪ (Greentrax)
My Love Is in America—The Boston College Irish Fiddle Festival ♪♪♪ (Green Linnet)
Piping Hot ♪♪♪½ (Celtophile)
Playing with Fire ♪♪♪½ (Celtophile)
Putting on Airs ♪♪♪ (Celtophile)
Rough Guide to Scottish Music (World Music Network) ♪♪♪♪½
The Rushy Mountains—Classic Music From Sliabh Luachra 1952–1977 ♪♪♪ (GlobeStyle) Season of Mists ♪♪♪½ (Celtophile)
Songs from the Heart ♪♪♪½ (Celtophile)
The Taste of Atlantic Canada ♪♪♪½ (Ground Swell)
There Was a Lady ♪♪♪½ (Celtophile)
Trad at Heart ♪♪♪½ (Dara)
Traditional Music from Cape Breton Island ♪♪♪ (Nimbus) Traditional Music of Ireland ♪♪♪½ (Celtophile)

Traditional Music of Scotland ♪♪♪½ (Celtophile)
Treasure of My Heart—Classic Recordings from the Topic Catalog of Irish Traditional Music ♪♪♪ (GlobeStyle)
The Wheels of the World—Early Irish American Music, Classic Recordings from the 1920s & '30s, Vols. 1 and 2 ♪♪♪♪ (Yazoo)
A Woman's Heart ♪♪♪ (Dara)
A Woman's Heart 2 ♪♪♪ (Dara)
A Woman's Love ♪♪♪ (Clo Iar–Chonnachta)
Women of the World—Celtic ♪♪♪ (Putamayo)

Children's

The Best of Country Sing the Best of Disney ♪♪♪ (Walt Disney)
A Child's Celebration of Christmas ♪♪♪½ (Rhino)
Country Music for Kids ♪♪♪½ (Walt Disney)
Daddies Sing Good Night ♪♪♪♪ (Sugar Hill)
'Til Their Eyes Shine . . . The Lullaby Album ♪♪♪ (Columbia)

Christmas

Alligator Stomp, Vol. 4: Cajun Christmas ♪♪♪ (Rhino)
An Americana Christmas ♪♪♪½ (Winter Harvest) Billboard Greatest Country Christmas Hits ♪♪♪♪♪ (Rhino)
Celtic Christmas ♪♪½ (Orby)
Celtic Christmas III ♪♪♪½ (Windham Hill)
A Child's Celebration of Christmas ♪♪½ (Rhino)
Christmas at Mountain Stage ♪♪♪ (Blue Plate Music)
Christmas for the '90s, Vol. 3 ♪♪♪ (Capitol)
Christmas on the Range ♪♪♪♪ (Capitol)
Christmas Time Back Home ♪♪½ (Rebel)
A Country Christmas Vol. V ♪♪½ (RCA)
A Giant Country Christmas ♪♪♪ (Giant)
Heart of Christmas: 12 Favorites by Today's Country Stars ♪♪½ (Sparrow) Hillbilly Holiday ♪♪♪♪½ (Rhino)
Must Be Santa: The Rounder Christmas Album ♪♪♪♪ (Rounder) Precious Child ♪♪ (Warner Bros.)
Star of Wonder ♪♪½ (Arista)
Sugar Plums: Holiday Treats from Sugar Hill ♪♪♪½ (Sugar Hill)
A Tejano Country Christmas ♪♪♪♪ (Arista/Texas)
Tinsel Tunes: More Holiday Treats from Sugar Hill ♪♪♪ (Sugar Hill)

Country Collections

All-Time Legends of Country Music ♪♪♪ (Columbia/Legacy)
Austin Country Nights ♪♪♪½ (Watermelon)
Classic Country Music ♪♪♪♪ (Smithsonian)
Deep in the Heart of Country ♪♪ (Drive)
Dr. Demento's Country Corn ♪♪♪½ (Rhino)
Golden Throats 3: Sweethearts of Rodeo Drive ♪½ (Rhino)
Hank Williams Songbook: 20 Songs by 11 Artists ♪♪♪♪♪ (Columbia/Legacy)
Hillbilly Boogie ♪♪♪ (Columbia/Legacy)
Hillbilly Fever! Vol. 1: Legends of Western Swing ♪♪♪♪½ (Rhino)
Hillbilly Fever! Vol. 2: Legends of Honky Tonk ♪♪♪♪ (Rhino) Hillbilly Fever! Vol. 3: Legends of Nashville ♪♪♪½ (Rhino) Hillbilly Fever! Vol. 4: Legends of the West Coast ♪♪♪ (Rhino) Hillbilly Fever! Vol. 5: Legends of Country Rock ♪♪♪♪ (Rhino)
Hillbilly Music, Thank God! ♪♪♪♪ (Capitol)
Memphis Ramble ♪♪♪♪ (Rhino)
Red Hot + Country ♪♪♪♪ (Mercury)
Rhythm, Country and Blues ♪♪♪ (MCA)
Threadgill's Supper Session ♪♪♪½ (Watermelon)
When You're Hot You're Country ♪♪ (Drive)

Cowboy

Back in the Saddle Again ♪♪♪♪♪ (New World)
Cattle Call: Early Cowboy Music and Its Roots ♪♪♪♪ (Rounder)
Cowboy Songs on Folkways ♪♪♪♪ (Smithsonian/Folkways)
Cowboy Super Hits ♪♪♪ (Columbia)
Don't Fence Me In: Western Music's Early Golden Era ♪♪♪½ (Rounder)
Home on the Range ♪♪♪ (Charly)
Howdy! 25 Hillbilly All-Time Greats ♪♪♪ (ASV)
Saddle Up! The Cowboy Renaissance ♪♪♪½ (Rounder)
Songs of the West ♪♪♪♪½ (four-CD box) (Rhino)
Songs of the West: Cowboy Classics ♪♪♪♪ (Rhino)
Songs of the West: Gene Autry and Roy Rogers ♪♪♪½ (Rhino) Songs of the West: Movie and Television Themes ♪♪♪♪ (Rhino) Songs of the West: Silver Screen Cowboys ♪♪♪ (Rhino)
Stampede! Western Music's Late Golden Era ♪♪♪½ (Rounder)
When I Was a Cowboy ♪♪♪♪ (Yazoo)

English

All through the Year ♪♪♪½ (Green Linnet)
Beat the Retreat: Songs of Richard Thompson ♪♪♪ (Capitol)
Circle Dance ♪♪♪½ (Green Linnet)
English Ballad Book ♪♪♪½ (Shanachie) Evolving Tradition ♪♪♪ (Mrs. Casey)
The Folk Collection 2 ♪♪♪½ (Topic)
Folk Heritage ♪♪♪ (Music Collection International) Folk Routes ♪♪♪♪ (Island)
Georgia on Our Mind ♪♪♪½ (DeepSea Records)
Hard Cash ♪♪♪ (Green Linnet)
Old English Melodies ♪♪½ (Green Hill)
New Electric Muse ♪♪♪♪♪ (Essential/Transatlantic) New Electric Muse II ♪♪♪♪♪ (Essential/Transatlantic) Troubadours of British Folk: Vol.1/Unearthing the Tradition (Rhino) ♪♪♪♪♪ Troubadours of British Folk: Vol.2/Folk into Rock ♪♪♪♪♪ (Rhino) Troubadours of British Folk: Vol. 3/An Evolving Tradition ♪♪♪♪♪ (Rhino)

General Folk

The Acoustic Edge ♪♪♪ (Rhino)
The Bob Dylan 30th Anniversary Celebration ♪♪♪♪ (Columbia)
Bring It on Home ♪♪♪½ (Legacy)
Christine Lavin Presents: Big Times in a Small Town—The Vineyard Tapes ♪♪♪ (Philo/Rounder)
Christine Lavin Presents: Laugh Tracks, Vol. 1 ♪♪♪ (Shanachie)
Christine Lavin Presents: Laugh Tracks, Vol. 2 ♪♪♪ (Shanachie)
Christine Lavin Presents: On a Winter's Night ♪♪♪½ (Philo/Rounder)

The Early Years: Kerrville 1972–1981 ♪♪♪½ (Silverwolf)
Folk Music at Newport, Vol. 1 ♪♪♪½ (Vanguard)
Freedom Is a Constant Struggle ♪♪♪♪½ (Folk Era) Greatest Folksingers of the Sixties ♪♪♪½ (Vanguard) Heritage ♪♪♪♪½ (Island)
Hills of Home: 25 Years of Folk Music on Rounder Records ♪♪♪♪ (Rounder) House on Fire: An Urban Folk Collection ♪♪♪ (Red House)
In Their Own Words, Vol. 1 ♪♪♪♪ (Razor & Tie)
Legacy: New Folk Music ♪♪♪♪½ (Windham Hill)
Legacy II: A Collection of Singer Songwriters ♪♪♪♪½ (High Street)
The Long Walk to Freedom Reunion Concert ♪♪♪♪½ (Revoltin in Records)
The Names behind the Artists, Vol. 1 ♪♪♪♪½ (Silver Eagle)
The Names behind the Artists, Vol. 2 ♪♪♪♪½ (Silver Eagle)
Pastures of Plenty—An Austin Celebration of Woody Guthrie ♪♪♪ (DejaDisc)
Philo So Far: The 20th Anniversary Folk Sampler ♪♪♪♪ (Philo)
Storytellers: Singers & Songwriters ♪♪♪½ (Warner Special Products)
When October Goes ♪♪♪♪½ (Philo/Rounder)

Gospel/Religious

Amazing Grace: A Country Salute to Gospel ♪♪♪ (Sparrow)
The Best of Bluegrass: Preachin', Prayin' and Singin' ♪♪♪ (Mercury)
Bluegrass from Heaven: The Essential Gospel Collection ♪♪♪ (CMH)
Common Ground: Country Songs of Faith, Love & Inspiration ♪♪♪½ (Epic)
Every Time I Feel the Spirit ♪♪♪ (Sugar Hill)
Favorite Sacred Song ♪♪♪ (King)
The Gospel Tradition: The Roots and Branches, Vol. 1 ♪♪♪♪ (Columbia/Legacy)
How Can I Keep from Singing? ♪♪♪♪ (Yazoo)
I Hear Music in the Air ♪♪♪♪½ (RCA)
Jubilation!—Great Gospel Performances ♪♪♪ (Rhino)
Jubilation! Vol. 3, Country Gospel ♪♪ (Rhino) Meeting in the Air ♪♪♪♪ (I Sing Behind the Plow)
Peace in the Valley ♪♪♪♪ (Arista)
Preachin' the Gospel—Holy Blues (Columbia)
Silent Witness ♪♪♪½ (New Haven)
The Social Harp ♪♪♪♪ (Rounder)
Something Got a Hold of Me: A Treasury of Sacred Music ♪♪♪♪♪ (RCA)
The Stained Glass Hour ♪♪♪♪½ (Rounder)
20 Bluegrass Originals: Hymns ♪♪♪½ (Deluxe)
Way Down Deep in My Soul ♪♪♪ (Sugar Hill)

Instrumental

Altamont: Black Stringband Music from the Library of Congress ♪♪♪♪♪ (Rounder)
The Banjos That Destroyed the World ♪♪ (CMH)
The Celtic Fiddle Festival ♪♪♪ (Green Linnet)
Echoes of the Ozarks, Vol. 1 ♪♪♪ (County)
Echoes of the Ozarks, Vol. 2 ♪♪♪ (County)
Faces of the Harp ♪♪♪½ (Narada)
Fiddlers of Eastern Prince Edwards Island ♪♪♪½ (Rounder) Fiddlers of Western Prince Edwards Island ♪♪♪½ (Rounder)
Flatpicking '97 ♪♪♪ (FGM)
The Great Dobro Sessions ♪♪♪♪ (Sugar Hill) Guitar Player Presents Legends of Country Guitar, Vols. 1 & 2 ♪♪♪♪♪ (Rhino)
Harpestry ♪♪♪½ (Philips)
Hats Off! A Tribute to Garth Brooks by Country Music's Hottest Pickers ♪½ (CMH)
Klezmer Music: Early Yiddish Instrumental Music 1908–1927 ♪♪♪½ (Arhoolie/Folklyric)
Minstrel Banjo Style ♪♪♪½ (Rounder)
Possum Up a Gum Stump ♪♪♪♪ (Alabama Traditions)
Playing with Fire ♪♪♪½ (Celtophile)
Rounder Fiddle ♪♪♪½ (Rounder)
Rounder Guitar ♪♪♪ (Rounder)
Rounder Old Time Music ♪♪♪½ (Rounder)
Rural String Bands of Tennessee ♪♪♪ (County)
Rural String Bands of Virginia ♪♪♪ (County)
Son of Rounder Banjo ♪♪♪♪ (Rounder)
South Texas Polka Party ♪♪♪½ (Arhoolie)
Traditional Fiddle Music of Kentucky—Along the Kentucky River ♪♪♪♪½ (Rounder)
Traditional Fiddle Music of Kentucky—Up the Ohio and Licking Rivers ♪♪♪♪½ (Rounder)
24 Fiddle Favorites ♪♪♪½ (Rural Rhythm)
The World's Greatest Country Fiddlers ♪♪ (CMH)

Klezmer

Itzhak Perlman: In the Fiddler's House ♪♪♪♪♪ (Angel)
Klezmania: Klezmer for the New Millenium ♪♪♪♪ (Shanachie) Klezmer Music: A Marriage of Heaven and Earth ♪♪♪♪♪ (Ellipsis Arts) Klezmer Pioneers ♪♪♪♪ (Rounder)

Live Recordings

The Best of Mountain Stage, Vol. 1 Live ♪♪♪♪ (Blue Plate Music)
The Best of Mountain Stage, Vol. 2 Live ♪♪♪♪ (Blue Plate Music)
The Best of Mountain Stage, Vol. 3 Live ♪♪♪½ (Blue Plate Music)
The Best of Mountain Stage, Vol. 4 Live ♪♪♪♪ (Blue Plate Music)
The Best of Mountain Stage, Vol. 5 Live ♪♪♪♪ (Blue Plate Music)
The Best of Mountain Stage, Vol. 6 Live ♪♪♪♪ (Blue Plate Music)
The Best of Mountain Stage, Vol. 7 Live ♪♪♪ (Blue Plate Music)
Celtic Music Live from Mountain Stage ♪♪♪ (Blue Plate)
Christmas at Mountain Stage ♪♪♪ (Blue Plate Music)
Folk Music at Newport, Vol. 1 ♪♪♪♪½ (Vanguard)
Live from Mountain Stage Rock ♪♪♪♪½ (Blue Plate Music)
Live from Mountain Stage, Vol. 8 ♪♪♪ (Blue Plate Music)
Louisiana Live from Mountain Stage ♪♪♪♪ (Blue Plate Music)
Nashville at Newport ♪♪♪♪½ (Vanguard)
Seedtime on the Cumberland ♪♪♪½ (June Appal)
The Sullivan Years: Country Classics ♪♪ (TVT)
Sunday Morning Sessions ♪♪♪ (Munich)
Texans Live from Mountain Stage ♪♪♪♪½ (Blue Plate Music)
Threadgill's Supper Session ♪♪♪♪½ (Watermelon)

Old Time

Altamont: Black Stringband Music from the Library of Congress ♪♪♪♪♪ (Rounder)
Are You from Dixie? Great Country Brother Teams of the 1930s ♪♪♪♪♪ (RCA Heritage Series)
The Bristol Sessions ♪♪♪♪♪ (Country Music Foundation)
Echoes of the Ozarks, Vol. 1 ♪♪♪ (County)
Echoes of the Ozarks, Vol. 2 ♪♪♪ (County)
Fair and Tender Ladies: Mountain Music Collection, Vol. 2 ♪♪♪ (CMH)
Fresh Oldtime String Band Music ♪♪♪ (Rounder)
High Atmosphere ♪♪♪♪ (Rounder)
Hills of Home: 25 Years of Rounder Records ♪♪♪♪ (Rounder) Hollerin' ♪♪♪ (Rounder)
Land of Yahoe ♪♪♪½ (Rounder)
Library of Congress Field Recordings ♪♪♪♪ (Rounder)
Minstrel Banjo Style ♪♪♪½ (Rounder)
Mountain Music of Kentucky ♪♪♪ (Smithsonian/Folkways)
The Music of Kentucky ♪♪♪½ (Yazoo)
The Music of Kentucky: Early American Rural Classics, 1927–1937, Vol. 1 ♪♪♪ (Yazoo)
The Music Never Stopped—Roots of the Grateful Dead ♪♪♪ (Shanachie)
The Music of Kentucky: Early American Rural Classics, 1927–1937, Vol. 2 ♪♪♪ (Yazoo)
Old Time Mountain Ballads ♪♪♪½ (County)
Old Time Music on the Air, Vol. 1 ♪♪♪♪ (Rounder)
Old Time Music on the Air, Vol. 2 ♪♪♪♪ (Rounder)
Possum Up a Gum Stump ♪♪♪♪ (Alabama Traditions)
Ragged but Right: Great Country String Bands of the 1930s ♪♪♪ (RCA)
Roots and Branches ♪♪♪ (JMP Records)
The Rose Grew around the Briar, Vol. 1 ♪♪♪½ (Yazoo)
The Rose Grew around the Briar, Vol. 2 ♪♪♪½ (Yazoo)
Rounder Fiddle ♪♪♪½ (Rounder)
Rounder Old Time Music ♪♪♪½ (Rounder)
Rural String Bands of Tennessee ♪♪♪ (County)
Rural String Bands of Virginia ♪♪♪ (County)
Seedtime on the Cumberland ♪♪♪½ (June Appal)
Something Got a Hold of Me ♪♪♪ (RCA/BMG)
Songs of the Civil War ♪♪♪ (Columbia)
Times Ain't What They Used to Be, Vol. 1 ♪♪♪½ (Yazoo)
Times Ain't What They Used to Be, Vol. 2 ♪♪♪½ (Yazoo)
Traditional Fiddle Music of Kentucky—Along the Kentucky River ♪♪♪½ (Rounder)
Traditional Fiddle Music of Kentucky—Up the Ohio and Licking Rivers ♪♪♪½ (Rounder)
A Tribute to the Appalachian String Band Music Festival at Clifftop, WV (Chubby Dragon) ♪♪♪½ Virginia Traditions—Native Virginia Ballads ♪♪½ (Global Village)
White Country Blues, 1926–1938: A Lighter Shade of Blue ♪♪♪♪ (Columbia/Legacy)
Wild and Reckless Men: Mountain Music Collection, Vol. 1 ♪♪♪♪ (CMH)
The Young Fogies ♪♪♪♪ (Rounder)
The Young Fogies, Vol. II ♪♪♪♪ (Rounder)

Record Label Compilations

Acoustic Disc: 100% Handmade Music ♪♪♪ (Acoustic Disc) Acoustic Disc: 100% Handmade Music, Vol. II ♪♪♪ (Acoustic Disc)
Camsco Music Sampler ♪♪♪ (Camsco)
Columbia Country Classics, Vol. 1: The Golden Age ♪♪♪♪♪ (Columbia)
Columbia Country Classics, Vol. 2: Honky Tonk Heroes ♪♪♪♪♪ (Columbia)
Columbia Country Classics, Vol. 3: Americana ♪♪♪♪ (Columbia)
Columbia Country Classics, Vol. 4: The Nashville Sound ♪♪♪♪ (Columbia)
Columbia Country Classics, Vol. 5: A New Tradition ♪♪♪ (Columbia)
Columbia Records Radio Hour, Vol. 1 ♪♪ (Columbia) Defrost Your Heart: Sun Country, Vol. 1 ♪♪♪ (AVI)
The Essential Series ♪♪♪♪ (RCA)
The Essential Series, Vol. II ♪♪♪♪ (RCA)
Fifty Years of Country Music from Mercury, 1945–1995 ♪♪♪½ (Mercury)
From the Vaults: Decca Country Classics, 1934–1973 ♪♪♪♪ (MCA)
Hand-Picked: Twenty-Five Years of Rounder Bluegrass ♪♪♪♪♪ (Rounder)
HighTone Records: The First 10 Years ♪♪♪½ (HighTone)
Hills of Home: Twenty-Five Years of Folk Music on Rounder Records ♪♪♪♪ (Rounder)
Louisiana Spice: 25 Years of Louisiana Music on Rounder Records (Rounder) ♪♪♪♪♪
Marimac Anthology ♪♪♪½ (Rounder)
Philo So Far: The 20th Anniversary Folk Sampler ♪♪♪♪ (Philo)
Roots and Branches ♪♪♪ (JMP Records)
The Sun Records Collection ♪♪♪♪½ (Rhino)
Time Is on Our Side: The DejaDisc Sampler ♪♪♪ (DejaDisc)
Top of the Hill Bluegrass: The Sugar Hill Collection ♪♪♪½ (Sugar Hill)
The Watermelon Sampler ♪♪♪½ (Watermelon)
A Wizmark Sampler 1986–1996 ♪♪½ (Wizmark)

Slack Key Guitar

Aloha—Hula Hawaiian Style ♪♪ (Cord International) Classic Collector Series—Vol. 7: The New Hawaiian Band ♪♪ (Cord International) Hapa Haole Hawaiian Hula Classics ♪♪ (Cord International) Hawaiian Slack Key Guitar Masters ♪♪♪½ (Dancing Cat)
Hawaiian Steel Guitar Classics ♪♪♪ (Arhoolie)
The History of Slack Key Guitar ♪♪½ (Cord International) Hula Hawaiian Style ♪♪ (Cord International) Ki Ho'alu Christmas ♪♪♪ (Dancing Cat)
Show Biz Hula Hawaiian Style ♪♪ (Cord International) Songs of the Hawaiian Cowboy (Na Mele O Paniolo) ♪♪♪½ (Warner Western)

Tejano/Tex-Mex

Conjunto! Texas-Mexican Border Music, Vol. I ♪♪♪ (Rounder)
Conjunto! Texas-Mexican Border Music, Vol. II ♪♪♪ (Rounder)
Conjunto! Texas-Mexican Border Music, Vol. III ♪♪♪ (Rounder)

Conjunto! Texas-Mexican Border Music, Vol. IV ♪♪♪ (Rounder)

Conjunto! Texas-Mexican Border Music, Vol. V: Polkas de Oro ♪♪♪ (Rounder)

Conjunto! Texas-Mexican Border Music, Vol. VI: Contrabando ♪♪♪ (Rounder)

A Tejano Country Christmas ♪♪♪♪ (Arista/Texas)

Tejano Roots: San Antonio Conjuntos in the 1950s ♪♪♪ (Arhoolie)

Western Swing

Hillbilly Fever ♪♪½ (Rhino)

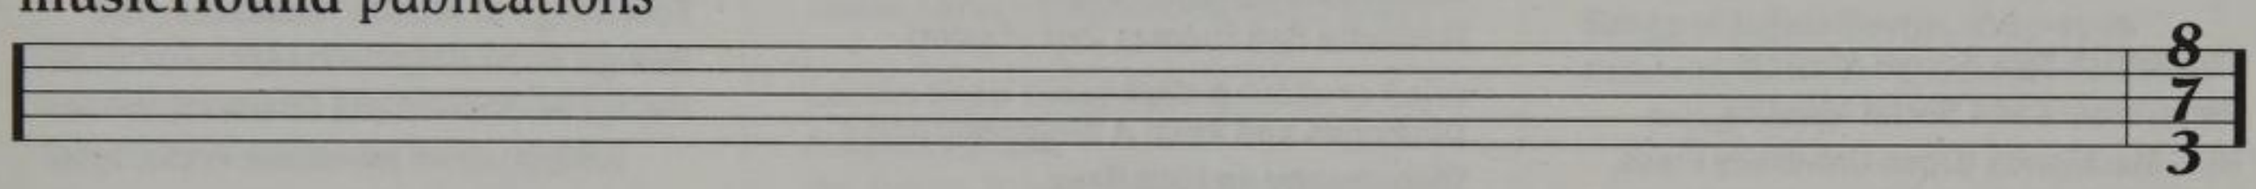
Hillbilly Jazz ♪♪♪½ (Flying Fish)

Honed on the Range, Vol. II: Contemporary Texas Swing ♪♪♪½ (Texas Monthly)

OKeh Western Swing ♪♪♪♪♪ (CBS Special Products)

Texas Music, Vol. 2: Western Swing & Honky Tonk ♪♪♪♪ (Rhino)

Under the Double Eagle ♪♪♪ (BMG)



Can't get enough information about folk music? Here are some books, magazines, newsletters, and catalogs you can check out for further information. Happy reading!

Books

African Banjo Echoes in Appalachia: A Study of Folk Traditions
Cecelia Conway (University of Tennessee Press, 1995)

African Roots (Traditional Black Music)
Jerry Silverman and Kenneth B. Clark (Chelsea House, 1994)

Aly Bain: Fiddler on the Loose
Alastair Clark (Mainstream Pub., 1994)

American Ballads and Folk Songs
John A. Lomax and Alan Lomax (Dover, 1994)

American Folk Tales and Songs, and Other Examples of English-American Tradition As Preserved in the Appalachian Mountains and Elsewhere in the United States
Chase Richard (Dover, 1971)

The American Song Treasury: 100 Favorites
Theodore Raph (Dover, 1989)

The American Songbag
Carl Sandburg and Garrison Keillor (Harcourt Brace, 1990)

And a Voice to Sing With: A Memoir
Joan Baez (1987, out of print)

Animal Folk Songs for Children: Traditional American Songs
Ruth Crawford Seeger (Linnet Books, 1993)

Appalachian Dulcimer Traditions (American Folk Music and Folk Musicians, No. 2)
Ralph Lee Smith (Scarecrow Press, 1997)

The Autoharp Book
Becky Blackley (Iad Pub., 1983)

Baby, Let Me Follow You Down: The Illustrated Story of the Cambridge Folk Years Eric Von Schmidt and Jim Rooney (University of Massachusetts Press, 1994)

The Ballad As Song
Betrand H. Bronson (University of California Press)

The Ballad Matrix: Personality, Milieu, and the Oral Tradition
William Bernard McCarthy (Indiana University Press, 1990)

The Ballad Mongers: Rise of the Modern Folk Song
Oscar Brand (Greenwood Publishing Group, 1979)

Ballad of an American: The Autobiography of Earl Robinson (American Folk Music and Musicians, No. 3)
Earl Robinson and Eric A. Gordon (Scarecrow Press, 1997)

Barrio Rhythm: Mexican American Music in Los Angeles
Steven Loza (University of Illinois Press, 1993)

Big Road Blues: Tradition and Creativity in the Folk Blues
David Evans (Da Capo Press, 1988)

Blackwell Guide to Recorded Country Music Bob Allen (Blackwell Pub., 1994)

Bluegrass: A History
Neil V. Rosenberg (University of Illinois Press, 1993)

Bluegrass: An Informal Guide
Richard D. Smith (A Cappella Books, 1995)

Bob Dylan: A Life in Stolen Moments Day by Day, 1941–1995
Clinton Heylin (Schirmer Books, 1996)

Bob Dylan: American Poet and Singer: An Annotated Bibliography and Study Guide of Sources and Background Materials, 1961–1991
Richard D. Wissolik (Scholars Bibliography Series, No. 2)

publications

Bob Dylan: Watching the River Flow—Observations on His Art-In-Progress, 1966–1995
Paul Williams (Entwhistle Books, 1996)

Bob Wills: Hubbin It
Ruth Sheldon and Charles R. Townsend (Vanderbilt University Press, 1995)

Bound for Glory
Woody Guthrie (New American Library Trade, 1995)

The British Folk Scene: Musical Performance and Social Identity
Niall MacKinnon (Open University Press, 1993)

Campfire Songs
Irene Maddox and Rosalyn Blankenship (Globe Pequot Press, 1994)

The Care and Feeding of the Autoharp
Becky Blackley (Iad Pub., 1989)

Carry It On! The Story of America's Working People in Song and Picture Pete Seeger and Bob Reiser (Sing Out! Publications, 1991)

Cash: The Autobiography
Johnny Cash and Patrick Carr (Harper San Francisco, 1997)

The Chieftains: The Authorized Biography
John Glatt (St. Martin's Press, 1997)

Circle of Song: Songs, Chants, and Dances for Ritual and Celebration
Kate Marks (Full Circle Press, 1994)

Country Music Revealed: True Stories of Boozin', Cheatin', Stealin', Tax Dodgin', and D-I-V-O-R-C-E
Randy Scott (Metro Books, 1995)

Cowboy Fiddler in Bob Wills' Band
Frankie McWhorter and John R. Erickson, with Lanny Fiel (University of North Texas Press, 1997)

The Crooked Stovepipe: Athapaskan Fiddle Music and Square Dancing in Northeast Alaska and Northwest Canada
Craig Mishler (University of Illinois Press, 1993)

The Day America's Music Went Bye
John L. Wilson (Americana Publishers)

Death of a Rebel: A Biography of Phil Ochs
Marc Eliot and Vin Scelsa (Citadel Press, 1994)

The Devil's Box: Masters of Southern Fiddling
Charles Wolfe and Mark O'Connor (Vanderbilt University Press, 1997)

Devil's Ditties: Being Stories of the Kentucky Mountain People Jeannette Bell Thomas (out of print)

Diamonds and Rust: A Biography and Discography on Joan Baez Joan Swanekamp (Pierian Press, 1979)

Dylan: World Gone Wrong
Bob Dylan (Music Sales Corporation, 1994)

Encyclopedia of Folk, Country & Western Music
Irwin Stambler (St. Martin's Press, 1984)

Everybody on the Truck: The Story of the Dillards
Lee Grant and Denver Pyle (Eggman Pub., 1995)

Farmhouse Fiddlers: Music and Dance Traditions in the Rural Midwest
Philip Martin (Midwest Traditions, 1995)

Fiddlin' Georgia Crazy: Fiddlin' John Carson, His Real World, and the World of His Songs
Gene Wiggins (University of Illinois Press, 1997)

Fiddling for Norway: Revival and Identity (Chicago Studies in Ethnomusicology)
Chris Goertzen (University of Chicago Press, 1997)

Flamenco: Gypsy Dance and Music from Andalusia Claus Schreiner (Amadeus Press, 1996)

Folk and Traditional Music of the Western Continents Bruno Nettl, Gerard Behaque, and Valerie Goertzen (Prentice Hall, 1989)

The Folk Banjo: A Documentary History
Dena J. Epstein (John Edwards Memorial Foundation)

Folk Music in America: A Reference Guide
Terry E. Miller (Garland Publishing, Inc., 1987)

Folk Music in the United States
Bruno Nett and Helen Myers (Wayne State University Press)

The Folk Music Sourcebook
Larry Sandberg and Dick Weissman (Da Capo Press, 1989)

Folk Songs of Middle Tennessee: The George Boswell Collection,
George W. Boswell and Charles K. Wolfe (University of Tennessee Press, 1996)

The Folk Songs of North America
Alan Lomax (Doubleday, 1975)

Folk Songs of the Southern Appalachians
Jean Ritchie (University Press of Kentucky, 1997)

Folk Songs of the Southern United States
Josiah H. Combs (University of Texas Press)

Folk Visions and Voices: Traditional Music and Song in North Georgia Art Rosenbaum and Margo Rosenbaum (University of Georgia Press, 1983)

Folksingers and Folksongs in America: A Handbook of Biography, Bibliography & Discography
Ray McKinley Lawless (Greenwood Publishing Group, 1981)

From Sea to Shining Sea: A Treasury of American Folklore and Folk Songs
Amy L. Cohn (Scholastic Trade, 1993)

Git Along, Little Dogies: Songs and Songmakers of the American West
John I. White and Austin E. Fife (University of Illinois Press, 1989)

Guerrilla Minstrels: John Lennon, Joe Hill, Woody Guthrie, and Bob Dylan Wayne Hampton (1986)

He Was Singin' This Song
Jim Bob Tinsley (University Press of Florida, 1982)

High Lonesome: The American Culture of Country Music
Cecelia Tichi (University of North Carolina Press, 1996)

How Can I Keep from Singing: Pete Seeger
David King Dunway (Da Capo Press, 1990)

In Every Style of Passion: The Works of Leonard Cohen
Jim Devlin (Omnibus Press, 1996)

In Tune with Tradition: Wisconsin Folk Musical Instruments
Robert T. Tesye (University of Wisconsin Press, 1998)

The Incompleat Folksinger
Pete Seeger and Jo Metcalf Schwartz (University of Nebraska Press, 1992)

Introducing American Folk Music
Christopher Lornell (WCB/McGraw-Hill, 1993)

Jane Hicks Gentry: A Singer among Singers
Betty N. Smith (University of Kentucky Press, 1998)

Jewish Music: Its Historical Development
Abraham Z. Idelsohn (Dover Publications, 1992)

Jimmie Rodgers: The Life and Times of America's Blue Yodeler (Music in American Life)
Nolan Porterfield (University of Illinois Press, 1992)

Joni Mitchell: Both Sides Now
Brian Hinton (Harvill Press, 1997)

Joni Mitchell: The Complete Poems and Lyrics
Joni Mitchell (Crown Publishers, 1997)

Judy Collins Anthology
Judy Collins and Frank Metis (Music Sales Corp., 1988)

A Harvest Saved: Francis O'Neill and Irish Music in Chicago Nicholas Carlan (Ossian Publications, 1997)

k. d. lang: An Illustrated Biography
David Bennahum (Omnibus Press, 1995)

Kentucky Country: Folk and Country Music of Kentucky
Charles K. Wolfe (University Press of Kentucky, 1996)

The King of Western Swing: Bob Wills Remembered
Rosetta Wills (Watson-Guptil Publications, 1988)

The Last Cavalier: The Life and Times of John A. Lomax, 1867–1948
Nolan Porterfield (University of Illinois Press, 1996)

Last Night's Fun: In and Out of Time with Irish Music Ciaran Carson (North Point Press, 1997)

Let the Good Times Roll: A Guide to Cajun & Zydeco Music
Pat Nyhan, Brian Rollins, David Babb, and Michael Doucet (Upbeat Books, 1988)

Lonesome Traveler: The Life of Lee Hays
Doris Willens (University of Nebraska Press, 1993)

Long Steel Rail: The Railroad in American Folksong Norm Cohen (University of Illinois Press, 1981)

Making People's Music: Meo Asch and Folkways Records
Peter D. Goldsmith (Smithsonian Institution Press, 1998)

A Mighty Hard Road: The Woody Guthrie Story
Henrietta Yurchenco (1970)

Minstrel of the Appalachians: The Story of Bascom Lamar Lunsford Loyal Jones (Appalachian Consortium Press)

Minstrels of the Dawn: The Folk-Protest Singer As a Cultural Hero
Jerome L. Rodnitzky (Nelson-Hall Company, 1976)

Morning Dew and Roses: Nuance, Metaphor, and Meaning in Folksongs (Folklore and Society)
Barre Toelken (University of Illinois Press, 1995)

Mountaineer Jamboree: Country Music in West Virginia
Ivan M. Tribe (University Press of Kentucky, 1996)

Music Festivals: From Bach to Blues
Tom Clynes (Visible Ink Press, 1996)

Music from the Heart: Compositions of a Folk Fiddler Colin Quigley (University of Georgia Press, 1995)

My Song Is My Weapon: People's Songs, American Communism, and the Politics of Culture, 1930–50 (Music in American Life)
Robbie Lieberman (University of Illinois Press, 1995)

Never without a Song: The Years and Songs of Jennie Devlin, 1865–1952
Katherine Newman (University of Illinois Press, 1995)

No Direction Home: The Life and Music of Bob Dylan
Robert Shelton (Da Capo Press, 1997)

Old Time Music Makers of New York State
Simon J. Bronner (Syracuse University Press, 1985)

1001 Banjos
Akira Tsumura (Kodansha, 1994)

Paddy Moloney and the Chieftains
Bill Meek (Quinlan Press, 1989)

Pastures of Plenty: A Self-Portrait
Woody Guthrie, Dave Marsh, and Harold Leventhal (1990, out of print)

Positively Bob Dylan: A Thirty-Year Discography, Concert, and Recording Session Guide, 1960–1991 Michael Krogsgaard (Popular Culture Ink, 1991)

Prairie Nights to Neon Lights
Joe Carr and Alan Munde (Texas Tech. University Press, 1995)

Ramblin' Rose: The Life and Career of Rose Maddox Jonny Whiteside (Vanderbilt University Press, 1997)

Rockin' the Boat: Mass Music and Mass Movements
Reebee Garofalo (South End Press, 1992)

Roll on Columbia: The Columbia River Collection Woody Guthrie and William Murlin (Sing Out Publications, 1991)

publications

San Antonio Rose: The Life and Music of Bob Wills
Charles R. Townsend (University of Illinois Press, 1986)

Scottish Fiddlers and Their Music
Mary Anne Alburger (1983, out of print)

Seeds of Man: An Experience Lived and Dreamed Woody Guthrie (University of Nebraska Press, 1995)

Shaker Music: A Manifestation of American Folk Culture
Harold E. Cook (Associated University Press, 1971)

Sing for Freedom: The Story of the Civil Rights Movement through Its Songs
Guy and Candie Carawan (Sing Out Publications, 1990)

Singing Cowboys and Musical Mountaineers: Southern Culture and the Roots of Country Music
Bill C. Malone (University of Georgia Press, 1994)

Singing Family of the Cumberlands
Jean Ritchie (University Press of Kentucky, 1988)

The Steel String Guitar: Its Construction, Origin, and Design
Donald Brosnac (Panjandrum Press, 1977)

The Stonemans: An Appalachian Family and the Music That Shaped Their Lives
Ivan M. Tribe (University of Illinois Press, 1993)

Streets of London: The Official Biography of Ralph McTell Chris Hockenhull (Northdown)

The Study of Folk Music in the Modern World
Philip V. Bohlman (Indiana University Press, 1988)

Take Me Home: An Autobiography
John Denver with Arthur Tobier (Harmony Books, 1994)

Ten Thousand Goddam Cattle: A History of the American Cowboy in Song, Story, and Verse Katie Lee (Katyd Books, 1985)

That Half-Barbaric Twang: The Banjo in American Popular Culture
Karen Linn (University of Illinois Press, 1994)

There but for Fortune: The Life of Phil Ochs
Michael Schumacher (Hyperion Press, 1996)

Tom Ashley, Sam McGee, Bukka White: Tennessee Traditional Singers
Thomas G. Burton (University of Tennessee Press, 1981)

Transforming Tradition: Folk Music Revivals Examined
Neil V. Rosenburg (University of Illinois Press, 1993)

Traveling the High Way Home: Ralph Stanley and the World of Traditional Bluegrass Music
John Wright (University of Illinois Press, 1993)

A Tribute to Woody Guthrie and Leadbelly
Will Schmid (Music Educators National Conference, 1990)

Truth Is Stranger Than Publicity: The Delmore Brothers
Alton Delmore and Charles K. Wolfe (Country Music Foundation, 1995)

Underground Harmonies: Music & Politics in the Subways of New York
Susie J. Tanenbaum (Cornell University Press, 1995)

Wasn't That a Time! Firsthand Accounts of the Folk Music Revival Ronald D. Cohen (Scarecrow Press, 1995)

When We Were Good: The Folk Music Revival
Robert S. Cantwell (Harvard University Press, 1996)

Where Have All the Flowers Gone: A Singer's Stories, Songs, Seeds, Robberies Pete Seeger (Sing Out Publications, 1997)

"The Whorehouse Bells Were Ringing" and Other Songs Cowboys Sing (Music in American Life)
Guy Logsdon (University of Illinois Press, 1995)

With Fiddle and Well-Rosined Bow: Old Time Fiddling in Alabama
Joyce H. Cauthen (1989)

Woody, Cisco, and Me: Seamen Three in the Merchant Marine (Music in American Life)
Jim Longhi (University of Illinois Press, 1997)

Woody Guthrie: American Balladeer (Unsung Americans)
Janelle Yates (Ward Hill Press, 1995)

Magazines

Acoustic Guitar
PO Box 767
San Anselmo, CA 94979-0767
(800) 827-6837

Acoustic Musician
Box 1349
New Market, VA 22844
(604) 374-3313
Editorial: (703) 740-4005
Subscriptions: (800) 679-7707
E-mail: acoustic.musician@netinterior.com

Autoharp Clearinghouse
PO Box 398
Chester, MD 21619

Autoharp Quarterly Stonehill Productions
PO Box 336
Manchester, WV 26056-0336
Phone or fax: (304) 387-0132 (Mary Ann Johnston)
E-mail: aharper@weir.net
Web site: http://www.fmp.com/aq/

Banjo Newsletter
PO Box 3418
Anapolis, MD 21403-0418
Editorial office: (508) 645-3648
Editorial E-mail: bnl@tiac.net
Subscription E-mail: bnl@annap.infi.net
Fax and overseas: (410) 263-6503
Web site: http://www.tiac.net/users/bnl/

Bluegrass Canada
#106-147 Victoria Street
Kamloops, BC V2C 1Z4, Canada
(604) 374-3313
Fax: (250) 374-3313

publications 8 7 7

Bluegrass Chronicle
PO Box 31557
San Francisco, CA 94131
(415) 585-8234 or (800) 746-TUNE
E-mail: bgchron@slip.net

Bluegrass Legacy
A Quarterly Publication of the International Bluegrass Music Museum 207 E. Second Street
Owensboro, KY 42303
(502) 926-7891

Bluegrass Now
PO Box 2020
Rolla, MO 65401
(573) 341-7336
Fax: (573) 341-3575

Bluegrass Unlimited, Inc.
PO Box 111
Broad Run, VA 20137
(800) 258-4727 or (540) 349-8181
Fax: (540) 341-0011
Web site: http://www.bluegrassmusic.com

Dirty Linen
PO Box 66600
Baltimore, MD 21239-6600
(410) 583-7973
Fax: (410) 337-6735
E-mail: office@dirtylinen.com
Web site: http://kiwi.futuris.net/linen/dirty.html

Dulcimer Players News
Madeline MacNeil
PO Box 2164
Winchester, VA 22601

Dulcimer Times
1513 Upcreek Road
Bidwell, OH 45164
(614) 388-6464
Fax: (614) 388-9510
E-mail: dulctimes@aol.com

Fast Folk
PO Box 938
Village Station
New York, NY 10014

Fiddlers Magazine
PO Box 125
Los Altos, CA 94023

Fingerstyle Guitar
John August Music
3645 Jeannine Dr., Ste. 208
Colorado Springs, CO 80917
Fax: (719) 637-3396

Five String Quarterly
8407 Loralinda Drive
Austin, TX 78753
(512) 836-8255
Fax: (512) 346-2599

Flatpicking Guitar
PO Box 51967
Pacific Grove, CA 93950
(408) 622-0789
Fax: (408) 622-0787
Web site: http://www.flatpick.com

Folk Roots Magazine
PO Box 337
London N4 1TW, England
(44-0) 181-340-9651
Fax: (44-0) 181-348-5626
E-mail: froots@froots.demon.co.uk
Web site: http://www.froots.demon.co.uk//

Irish Music Magazine
11 Clare S.
Dublin 2, Ireland
(353-0) 1-6624887
Fax: (353-0) 1-6624886
E-mail: irishmusic@mayo-ireland.ie

Jug Band Rag
13 Schaeffer Lane
Freehold, NJ 07728

The Mandocrucian's Digest
PO Box 3585
Winchester, VA 22604

The Old-Time Herald
PO Box 51812
Durham, NC 27717
(919) 416-9433
E-mail: agerrard@nando.net

Sing Out! Magazine
PO Box 5253
Bethlehem, PA 18015-0253
Web site: http://www.singout.org/

Newsletters

The Bluegrass Missourian 3209 South Ten Mile Dr.
Jefferson City, MO 65109
(573) 893-6969
Fax: (573) 893-7179
E-mail: amelia@mail.cscdata.net

Central Texas Bluegrass Bulletin 4604 Balcones Woods Dr.
Austin, TX 78759-5231
(512) 346-3261

Old-Time News
Friends of American Old-Time Music and Dance 184 Liverpool Road
Reading RG1 3PH, England

Reel Times
Austin Friends of Traditional Music
PO Box 49608
Austin, TX 23505

The Resonator
The Full Circle Music Society
PO Box 13213
Reading, PA 19612

Victory Review
PO Box 2254
Tacoma, WA 98401-2254

Women in Bluegrass Bulletin
PO Box 2498
Winchester, VA 22604
(800) 227-2357
Fax: (703) 877-2422

Catalogs

Andy's Front Hall
PO Box 307
Voorheesville, NY 12186
(518) 765-4193
Web site:
http://members.aol.com/fronthal/index.html

Captain Fiddle Publications
4 Elm Court
Newmarket, NH 03857
(603) 659-2658
Web site: http://www.tiac.net/users/cfiddle/

Celtic Cultures
RR 2, Box 164
Houghton Brook Rd.
Putney, VT 05346
(802) 387-KILT (5458)
Fax: (802) 387-4831
E-mail: celtic@sover.net

Earthshaking Percussion 127 D Glenwood Ave.
Atlanta, GA 30316
(404) 622-0707
Fax: (404) 624-3349

publications

Web site: http://www.earthshakingmusic.com

Elderly Instruments
1100 N. Washington
PO Box 14210
Lansing, MI 48901
(517) 372-7890

Homespun Tapes
Box 694
Woodstock, NY 12498-0694
(800) 338-2737

House of Musical Traditions, Inc.
7040 Carroll Ave.
Takoma Park, MD 20912
(301) 270-9090
Fax: (301) 270-3010
Web site: http://www.hmtrad.com/

Lark in the Morning
PO Box 1176
Mendocino, CA 95460
(707) 964-3762
Mail orders: (707) 964-5569
Web site: http://www.mhs.mendocino.k12.ca.us/MenComNet/Business/Retail/Larknet/

Mel Bay Publications, Inc
#4 Industrial Dr.
Pacific, MO 63069

Musicmaker's Kits, Inc.
PO Box 2117
Stillwater, MN 55082-3117
(612) 439-9120
Web Site: http://www.primenet.com/~musikit/

Folk music, it turns out, has a tremendous presence in cyberspace. Point your Web browser to these pages for more information on your favorite artists, folk instruments, and filking (and don't forget to check out the lyrics and music databases).

Artists

Altan
http://celtic.stanford.edu/artists/Altan.html

Arcady
http://celtic.stanford.edu/artists/Arcady.html

Frankie Armstrong
http://www.rootsworld.com/harbourtown/armstrong.html

Atwater-Donnelly
http://www.nyx.net/~gfitzger/ADHome.html

Austin Lounge Lizards
http://www.austinlizards.com/

Hoyt Axton
http://www.sixcats.com/axton/hoyt.htm

Bad Livers
http://www.hyperweb.com/badlivers/

Joan Baez
http://baez.woz.org/

Les Barker
http://www.compulink.co.uk/~ackroyd/welcome.htm

The Barra MacNeils
http://www.grassroots.ns.ca/~jandrea/projects/barra-macneil.html

Cathy Barton and Dave Para
http://www.mid-mo.net/dpara/

Battlefield Band
http://www.rootsworld.com/folklore/battle.html

Keola Beamer
http://www.kbeamer.com/

Dan Bern
http://flemtam.com/db.html

Lou and Peter Berryman
http://members.aol.com/berrymanp/index.html

Theo Bikel
http://www.galender.com/theo/

Francis Black
http://house-of-music.com/frances/index.shtml

Mary Black
http://www.mcs.com/~candre/mblack.html

Black 47
http://www.black47.com/

Luka Bloom
http://www.totalweb.co.uk/dweb/jan/jbloom.htm

Blue Rodeo
http://www.bluerodeo.com/

Eric Bogel
http://www.flemtam.com/eb.html

Karla Bonoff
http://www.bryndle.com/

Bob Bossin
http://www.island.net/~oldfolk/

Bothy Band
http://celtic.stanford.edu/artists/Bothy_Band.html

Brian Bowers
http://www.otrd.state.ok.us/bluegrass/bbowers.htm

Boys of the Lough
http://celtic.stanford.edu/artists/Boys_of_the_Lough.html

Billy Bragg
http://www.mindspring.com/~usul/billy-bragg.html

Oscar Brand
http://members.aol.com/OscrBrand/

Chuck Brodsky
http://songs.com/cb/

Greg Brown
http://flemtam.com/gb.html

Bob Brozman
http://www.well.com/user/wellvis/brozman.html

Jeff Buckley
http://www.jeffbuckley.com/

web sites

Tim Buckley
http://pantheon.cis.yale.edu/~bodoin/tbarchives.html

Jimmy Buffett
http://www.soasoas.com/

Kevin Burke
http://celtic.stanford.edu/artists/Kevin_Burke.html

The Burns Sisters Band http://204.255.183.201/web/Burns/

The Byrds
http://members.aol.com/byrdsonlne/byrdsstuff/byrds.htm

Glen Campbell
http://www.glencampbellshow.com/

Al and Emily Cantrell
http://www.hidwater.com/cantrells/

Capercaille
http://celtic.stanford.edu/artists/Capercaillie.html

Turlough Carolan
http://www.epix.net/~lesley/carolan.html

Mary Chapin Carpenter
http://www.music.sony.com/Music/Nashville/MCC/

Harry Chapin
http://www.littlejason.com/chapin/index.html http://oak.cc.conncoll.edu/~bgbie/chapin/

Tom Chapin
http://members.aol.com/chapinfo/tc/index.html

Tracy Chapman
http://oak.cc.conncoll.edu/~bgbie/chapin/
http://www.geocities.com/SunsetStrip/Palms/9541/

Cherish the Ladies
http://www.celtica.com/cherish/http://celtic.stanford.edu/artists/Cherish.html

Chesapeake
http://www.rootsworld.com/folklore/chesapeake.html

The Chieftains
http://www.escape.ca/~skinner/chieftains/chief.html

Clannad
http://www.empire.net/~whatmoug/clanhome.htm

Eric Clapton
http://www.geocities.com/SunsetStrip/Towers/8488/

Guy Clark
http://www.physitron.com/~topher/guyclark/

Bruce Cockburn
http://www.fish.com/music/bruce_cockburn/

Leonard Cohen
http://www.music.sony.com/Music/ArtistInfo/LeonardCohen/

Judy Collins
http://judycollins.com/

Mitzie Collins
http://www.webcom.com/niki/friends/mitzie.shtml

Shawn Colvin
http://www.music.sony.com/Music/ArtistInfo/ShawnColvin/

Rita Connelly
http://www.meteo.physik.uni-muenchen.de/theorie/paul/rita.html

Elizabeth Cotten
http://www.execpc.com/~henkle/fbindex/c/cotten_elizabeth.html

J.D. Crowe
http://www.banjo.com/BG/Profiles/JDCrowe.html

Phil Cunningham
http://www.philcunningham.com/index.htm

Catie Curtis
http://www.cgrg.ohio-state.edu/~kcizas/Catie_Curtis/

De Dannan
http://celtic.stanford.edu/artists/De_Dannan.html

The Delmore Brothers
http://www.alamhof.org/delmores.htm

John Denver
http://www.execpc.com/~henkle/fbindex/d/denver_john.html

Ani DiFranco
http://www.cc.columbia.edu/~marg/ani/

disappear fear
http://www.fish.com/music/disappear_fear/

Connie Dover
http://www.celticmusic.com//connie_dover/

Jerry Douglas
http://www.alternetcomm.com/moonlight/doug.html

Nick Drake
http://www.algonet.se/~iguana/DRAKE/DRAKE.html http://home4.swipnet.se/~w-44991/drake.html

Bob Dylan
http://www.bobdylan.com/

Fred Eaglesmith
http://www.panix.com/~tneff/eaglesmith/

Steve Earle
http://www.mcs.net/~lisa/EARLE/steve.htm

Cliff Eberhardt
http://www.cgrg.ohio-state.edu/~spencer/Cliff-Eberhardt/index.html

Jonathan Edwards
http://www.bicoastal.com/jedwards/index.html

Kat Eggleston
http://www.cgrg.ohio-state.edu/folkbook/artists/biographies/Kat_Eggleston/

Betty Elders
http://www.eden.com/BettyElders/

Electric Bonsai Band
http://members.aol.com/ytrecords/ebb.html

Joe Ely
http://www.ely.com/

Enya
http://sunsite.auc.dk/enya/

John Fahey
http://www.execpc.com/~henkle/fbindex/f/fahey_john.html

Fairport Convention
http://www.novpapyrus.com/fairport/

Stephen Fearing
http://www.interlog.com/~samy/fearing.htmll

web sites 881

Ferron
http://Ferronweb.com/

Five Chinese Brothers
http://www.cgrg.ohio-state.edu/folkbook/artists/biographies/Magpie/

Béla Fleck and the Flecktones http://www.flecktones.com/

David Folks
http://www.hidwater.com/folks/

Steve Forbert
http://www.dip.ee.uct.ac.za/~brendt/music/forbert/

Four Bitchin' Babes
http://songs.com/babes/

Bob Franke
http://web.cgrg.ohio-state.edu/folkbook/artists/biographies/bob-franke/

Annie Gallup
http://www.rahul.net/hrmusic/artists/agart.html

Beppe Gambetta
http://www.pangea.it/music/gambetta/

Dick Gaughan
http://www.dickalba.demon.co.uk/

Steve Gillette and Cindy Mangsen http://www.sover.net/~gillette/

Steve Goodman
http://www.hepcat.com/goodman/

John Gorka
http://www.windham.com/ourmusic/artist_pages/gorka.empty.byartist.html

Patty Griffin
http://www.hepcat.com/goodman/http://nw3.nai.net/~zigmont/

Grace Griffith
http://www.loworbit.com/grace/

Nanci Griffith
http://www.sover.net/~rschrull/ngriffith/gchpage.html
http://www.rahul.net/frankf/nanci.html
http://www.rahul.net/frankf/nanci.html

Steve Goodman
http://www.hepcat.com/goodman/glad.html

John Gorka
http://www.windham.com/artists/John_Gorka.html http://www.execpc.com/~henkle/fbindex/g/gorka_john.html

David Grisman
http://www.dawgnet.com.

Arlo Guthrie
http://www.arlo.net/

Woody Guthrie
http://www.artsci.wustl.edu/~davida/woody.html

John Hammond
http://www.teleport.com/~boydroid/blues/jhammond.htm

John Hartford
http://www.techpublishing.com/hartford/

Martin Hayes
http://celtic.stanford.edu/artists/Martin_Hayes.html

Michael Hedges
http://www.windham.com/ourmusic/artist_pages/hedges.empty.byartist.html

Carolyn Hester
http://www.execpc.com/~henkle/fbindex/h/hester_carolyn.html

Sara Hickman
http://www.tns.lcs.mit.edu/music/hickman/

Dan Hicks
http://www.ns.net/~chaler/hicks.html

Anne Hills
http://www.mcs.net/~jmurdock/anne/hills.html

Tish Hinojosa
http://www.mundotish.com/

Horse Flies
http://wm.simplenet.com/Horse_Flies/

Hot Rize
http://www.banjo.com/BG/Profiles/HotRize.html

House Band
http://celtic.stanford.edu/artists/House_Band.html

Walter Hyatt
http://songs.com/walter/

Janis Ian
http://songs.com/janisian http://www.nauticom.net/www/hyperguy/janis.html

Incredible String Band
http://dspace.dial.pipex.com/town/square/ac455/

Andy Irvine
http://celtic.stanford.edu/artists/Andy_Irvine.html

Bert Jansch
http://www.demon.co.uk/andys/bjindex.html

Connie Kaldor
http://web.cgrg.ohio-state.edu/folkbook/artists/biographies/connie-kaldor/

Kathy Kallick
http://www.banjo.com/Profiles/kallick.html

Lucy Kaplansky
http://web.cgrg.ohio-state.edu/folkbook/artists/biographies/Lucy-Kaplansky/

James Keelaghan
http://www.cadvision.com/davideo/keelo/jpk.htm

Pete and Maura Kennedy
http://henryl.jic.com/pmk/pmk.html

Kingston Trio
http://brugold.com/kitmain.html http://www.amdest.com/stars/Kingston.html

Klezmatics
http://www.aviv2.com/klezbio.html

Leo Kottke
http://www.windham.com/artists/Leo_Kottke.html

Allison Krauss and Union Station http://www.banjo.com/BG/Profiles/AlisonKrauss.html

Kris Kristofferson
http://www.wu-wien.ac.at/usr/h92/h9225291/kris/kris.html

Patty Larkin
http://windham.com/ourmusic/artist_pages/larkin.empty.byartist.html

web sites

Grit Laskin
http://www.interlog.com/~brc/artists/grit.htm

Christine Lavin
http://www.christinelavin.com/

Leadbelly
http://cycad.com/cgi-bin/Leadbelly/index.html

Laurie Lewis
http://www.banjo.com/Profiles/LaurieLewis.html

Gordon Lightfoot
http://www.mmlc.nwu.edu/~mfifer/lightfoot/index.html

Laura Love
http://www.rahul.net/hrmusic/artists/llvart.html

Lyle Lovett
http://asylum.apocalypse.org/pub/u/lakrahn/lovett/

Joel Mabus
http://songs.com/jmabus/

Ashley MacIsaac
http://www.webcom.com/~morandan/Music/MacIsaac/Ashley.html http://www.freenet.hamilton.on.ca/~aa343/ashley/

Dougie MacLean
http://www.dunkeld.co.uk/

Kate MacLeod
http://www.waterbug.com/macleod.html

Natalie MacMaster
http://www.NatalieMacMaster.com/

Madeline MacNeil
http://www.dpnews.com/roots.html

Tommy Makem
http://www.makem.com/tmbio.html http://www.primecd.com/5cb.htm

Makem Brothers
http://www.makem.com/mbbio.html

David Mallett
http://www.bicoastal.com/dmallett/

Mando Mafia
http://www.access.digex.net/~jmangin/mmafia.htm

David Massengill
http://www.plump.com/plump/#david

Liz Masterson and Sean Blackburn http://www.cowgirls.com/dream/liz-sean/

Kimberly M'Carver
http://www.phoenix.net/~nishimi/mcarver.html

Mary McCaslin
http://www.cruzio.com/~gpa/mary/index.html

Del McCoury Band
http://www.banjo.com/BG/Profiles/DelMcCoury.html

John McCutcheon
http://www.folkmusic.com/

Eileen McGann
http://www.canuck.com/~jscown/mcgann/index.html

Kate and Anna McGarrigle
http://www.mcgarrigles.com/

Loreena McKennitt
http://www.quinlanroad.com/

Don McLean
http://www.ozemail.com.au/~mclean/

Bill Miller
http://www5.pair.com/anative/http://www.execpc.com/~henkle/fbindex/m/miller_bill.html

Ed Miller
http://www.io.com/~edmiller/ed.html

Chad Mitchell Trio
http://www.edge.net/folkera/cmtrio/index.html

Joni Mitchell
http://www.JoniMitchell.com/http://members.aol.com/KyBoy1327/JoniMitchell.html

Hugh Moffatt
http://songs.com/hm/

Katy Moffatt
http://members.aol.com/klmoffatt/index.html

The Mollys
http://www.azstarnet.com/~sorenso/

Mick Moloney
http://www.geocities.com/BourbonStreet/3034/Mick.html

Bill Monroe
http://www.banjo.com/BG/Profiles/BillMonroe.html

Christy Moore
http://www.iol.ie/~pcassidy/christy.html

Moxy Früvous
http://www.fruvous.com/

Alan Munde
http://www.banjo.com/Profiles/MundeCarr.html

Lee Murdock
http://www.mcs.net/~jmurdock/lee/murdock.html

Holly Near
http://www.hollynear.com/

Carrie Newcomer
http://www.carrienewcomer.com/

The Nields
http://www.ntplx.net/~senft/nields/nwhomepa.html

Nightnoise
http://celtic.stanford.edu/artists/Nightnoise.html

No Strings Attached
http://www.bev.net/community/nsa/nsa.master.html

Northern Lights
http://www.bicoastal.com/nlights/index.html

Laura Nyro
http://LauraNyro.net/

Maura O'Connell
http://www.execpc.com/~henkle/fbindex/o/oconnell_maura.html

Odetta
http://www.ares1.com/pinemt/odetta1.htm

Old Blind Dogs
http://lummi.stanford.edu/users/b/r/brod/WWW/OBD/OldBlindDogs.html

David Olney
http://songs.com/davidolney/

Peter Ostroushko
http://www.rootsworld.com/smart/peter.html

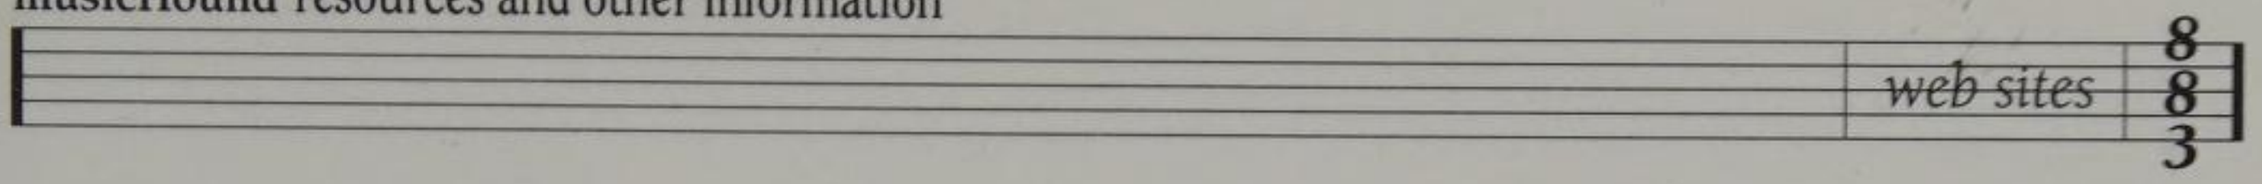
Niamh Parsons and the Loose Connections http://www.gpl.net/customers/LooseConnections/

Deb Pasternak
http://www.pasternak.com/



Tom Paxton
http://flemtam.com/tp.html

Pentangle
http://www.pavilion.co.uk/fdt/pent/

Ken Perlman
http://members.aol.com/kenperlman/homepage.htm

Peter, Paul and Mary http://www.downeast.net/ppm/

Utah Phillips
http://www.hidwater.com/utah/utahhome.html

Planxty
http://celtic.stanford.edu/artists/Planxty.html

The Pogues
http://www.pogues.com/

John Prine
http://www.ohboy.com/OBR_Artists.html http://www.geocities.com/Heartland/1985/prine.htm

Maddy Prior
http://www.sectorel.pt/gaudela/prior/

Rankin Family
http://www.chatsubo.com/rankins/home.html

Red Clay Ramblers
http://www.rounder.com/rounder/catalog/byartist/r/red_clay_ramblers/

Harvey Reid
http://www.woodpecker.com/

John Renbourne
http://www.rootsworld.com/folklore/renbourn.html

Kimmie Rhodes
http://www.kimmierhodes.com/

Jean Ritchie
http://members.aol.com/greenhays/page6.htm

Kim Robertson
http://www.eldalamberon.com/friends/kimrobertson.html

The Roches
http://www.roches.com/Roches/

Gamble Rogers
http://www.tallahassee.net/~gaussd/gamble.html

Garnet Rogers
http://www.daddyo.com/SnowGoose/index.html http://web.cgrg.ohio-state.edu/folkbook/artists/biographies/garnet-rogers/

Sally Rogers
http://www.teleport.com/~augustur/sallyrog.htm

Stan Rogers
http://www.summerfolk.org/srmain.htm

Tom Rush
http://tomrush.com/

Tom Russell
http://musicvil.com/

Buffy Sainte-Marie
http://130.63.218.180/~bsm/

Salamander Crossing
http://www.signature-sounds.com/salamand.html

Claudia Schmidt
http://www.ecmrecords.com/ecm/artists/62.html

Schooner Fare
http://www.maine.com/outergreen/schoonerfare/sfbio.html

Peggy Seeger
http://www.pegseeger.com/

Pete Seeger
http://ourworld.compuserve.com/homepages/JimCapaldi/

Seldom Scene
http://www.banjo.com/BG/Profiles/SeldomScene.html

Martin Sexton
http://www.martinsexton.com/

Sharon Shannon
http://celtic.stanford.edu/artists/Sharon_Shannon.html

Cosy Sheridan
http://www.hidwater.com/cosy/

Richard Shindell
http://www.folkartists.com/shindell/index.html

Michelle Shocked
http://www.shellshock.com/

Silly Wizard
http://www.rootsworld.com/harbourtown/silly_wizard.html

Simon and Garfunkel
http://www.connix.com/~rdrie/simon.html

Martin Simpson
http://www.iuma.com/Thunderbird/html/Simpson.html

Fred Small
http://www.jg.org/folk/artists/fredsmall/fred_small.html

Judy Small
http://www.netspace.net.au/~sdyson/welcome.html

Debi Smith
http://songs.com/debi

Michael Smith
http://www.mcs.net/~jmurdock/michael/smith.html

Chris Smither
http://www.intermarket.net/~stessa/smither/

Sons of the Never Wrong
http://www.sons.com/

Bill Staines
http://www.execpc.com/~henkle/fbindex/s/staines_bill.html

Steeleye Span
http://www.informatik.uni-hamburg.de/~zierke/steeleye.span/

Cat Stevens
http://www.catstevens.com/

Al Stewart
http://flying.fish.com/music/al_stewart/

Andy Stewart
http://nats-www.informatik.uni-hamburg.de/~weber/AndyMStewart/

John Stewart
http://stevens.cnchost.com/stewart/

Alan Stivell
http://celtic.stanford.edu/artists/Stivell.html

The Story (Jonatha Brooke) http://www.jonathabrooke.com/

June Tabor
http://flemtam.com/jt.html http://www.cgrg.ohio-state.edu/folkbook/artists/biographies/june-tabor/

web sites

Tamarack
http://www.sentex.net/~gormorse/tamarack.html

Tannahill Weavers
http://ourworld.compuserve.com/homepages/tannahill_weavers/

James Taylor
http://www.music.sony.com/Music/ArtistInfo/JamesTaylor/jt/index.html http://www.james-taylor.com/

Livingston Taylor
http://www.livtaylor.com/

Richard Thompson
http://www.alphalink.COM.AU/~sfy/RT/

Steve Tilston and Maggie Boyle http://ourworld.compuserve.com/homepages/tilston_boyle/

Trout Fishing in America
http://www.troutmusic.com/

Ian Tyson
http://www.nucleus.com/~cowboy/IanTyson.html

Uncle Bonsai
http://members.aol.com/ytrecords/ub.html

Jay Ungar and Molly Mason
http://members.aol.com/ungarmason/camp.html

Dave Van Ronk
http://www.rootsworld.com/folklore/vanronk.html

Townes Van Zandt
http://www.orst.edu/Dept/entomology/coopl/tvzindex.html

Suzanne Vega
http://www.vega.net/

Loudon Wainwright
http://world.std.com/~rmura/loudon/

Sloan Wainwright
http://www.ifolk.org/sloan/

Waterboys
http://celtic.stanford.edu/artists/Waterboys.html

Doc Watson
http://sunsite.unc.edu/doug/DocWat/DocWat.html http://www.rootsworld.com/folklore/doc.html

Gillian Welch
http://www.geffen.com/almo/gillian/

Cheryl Wheeler
http://www.cycad.com/cgi-bin/Cheryl_Wheeler/index.html

Erica Wheeler
http://www.cgrg.ohio-state.edu/folkbook/artists/biographies/Erica-Wheeler/

David Wilcox
http://www.davidwilcox.com/

Brooks Williams
http://www.eden.com/~cw/brooks.html

Dar Williams
http://www.panix.com/~tneff/dar/

Robin and Linda Williams
http://www.dn.net/williams/

Cris Williamson and Tret Fure http://www.cris-tret.com/

Robin Williamson
http://www.rootsworld.com/folklore/william.html

Kate Wolf
http://www.katewolf.com/

Wolfstone
http://www.highland-explorer.co.uk/wolfstone/halftail.htm

Neil Young
http://www.RepriseRec.com/NeilYoung/http://HyperRust.org/

General

American Folklife Center http://lcweb.loc.gov/folklife/afc.html

Appalachian Music and Arts http://www.whistlepig.com/

Appalachian Music Archives
http://www.pitt.edu/~gebanks/pers/oldtime.html

Ari Davidow's Klezmer Shack http://www.well.com/user/ari/klez/

Augusta Heritage Center
http://www.dne.wvnet.edu/augusta/home

Balkan Tunes
http://deepthought.armory.com/~cope/balkantunes/

Blue Highway
http://www.thebluehighway.com/

Blue Web
http://www.island.net/~blues/

Bluegrass Band
http://www.pgmusic.com/bluegras.htm

Brandywine Friends of Old Time Music http://www.sas.upenn.edu/~jlupton/bfotm.html

Ceolas Celtic Music Archive http://celtic.stanford.edu/ceolas.html

Fiddler's Green
http://www.det.mun.ca/staff/lyard/music.htm

Folk Alliance
http://www.hidwater.com/folkalliance/fahome.html

Folk Book: An Online Acoustic Music Establishment. http://www.folkmusic.org/

Folk Music Home Page http://www.jg.org/folk/

Folk Venue Database
http://www.hidwater.com/folkvenue/

Irish Traditional Music Archive http://www.itma.ie/home/itmae1.htm

Irish World Music Centre
http://www.ul.ie/~iwmc/HomePage.html

Karen Quick's Bluegrass Music Page http://www.best.com:80/~kquick/bg.html

King Laoghaire: The Home of Irish Ballads and Booze http://home2.swipnet.se/~w-27271/index.html

Klezmer Bands
http://www.well.com/user/ari/klez/contacts/klezbands.html#band.bow

Mining Co. Guide to Folk Music http:/miningco.com/

Music Database
http://www.cs.nott.ac.uk/Department/Staff/ef/database.html

web sites

Music Search
http://musicsearch.com

MusicWeb Ireland
http://www.musweb.com/

Northern Journey Online (Canadian Folk Music)
http://www.interlog.com/~njo/

Planet Bluegrass
http://www.csn.net:80/planet/

Old Songs, Inc.
http://www.crisny.org/not-for-profit/oldsongs/

Old Time Music
http://www.pitt.edu/~gebanks/pers/oldtime.html

Old Time Music Home Page http://www.geocities.com/~oldtimefiddler/

Old Time Music on the Web http://funnelweb.utcc.utk.edu/~tkoosman/jca/oldtime.html

Old Time Southern String Bands http://ils.unc.edu/barba/string/stringband.html

Renfro Valley Country Store http://www.renfrovalley.com/musicfrm.htm

Smithsonian Folkways
http://www.si.edu/folkways/

Southern Folklife Collection http://ils.unc.edu/barba/sfc.html

Tam Lin Web Site
http://cctr.umkc.edu/user/cgladish/tamlin.html

Web Music Resources on the Internet http://www.musweb.com/resources.html

Yet Another Digital Tradition Page http://underground.liquid.com/dtrad/

Magazines

Acoustic Guitar
http ://www.acguitar.com/

Acoustic Musician
http://www.netshop.net/~jesson/index.html

Banjo Newsletter
http://www2.gol.com/users/steve/f_banj.htm

Bluegrass Unlimited http://www.bluegrassmusic.com/

Blues Access
http://www.bluesaccess.com/ba_home.html

Celtic Music E-mag http://www.celticmusic.com/

Celtic Music on the Web http://www.celticmusic.com/magazine/11_16_97/index.html

Delta Snake: The Online Blues 'Zine http://www.island.net/~blues/snake.html

Dirty Linen
http://www.dirtynelson.com/linen/dirty.html

The Electric Harp Column http://www.harpcolumn.com/

Fast Folk
http://www.users.interport.net/~stevena/ff/fastfolk.html

Fingerstyle Guitar
http://fingerstyleguitar.com/

Flatpicking Guitar Online
http://www.flatpick.com/Pages/Main/FPGMO-MainPage.html

Folk Alliance Online Newsletter http://hidwater.com/folkalliance/fanews.html

Folk Harp Journal Index http://www.tns.lcs.mit.edu/harp/fhj/

Folk Music Digest
http://hidwater.com/fmd/fmd.html

Folkways Web Magazine
http:/www.si.edu/folkways/mag1.htm

FolkWorld
http://www.geocities.com/SunsetStrip/2030/indexe1.html

Heartsong: Resource Guide for Music of the Spirit http://heartsong.bandnet.com/

The Hornpipe: Folk Music in the Southern Regions http://www.hornpipe.com/hp/

Irish Music Magazine
http://www.mayo-ireland.ie/IrishMusic.htm

Jug Band Rag
http://heartsong.bandnet.com/

MandoZine
http://www.mandozine.com/

Mugwumps
http://www.mugwumps.com

North West Bluegrass News http://members.aol.com/uknwbn

Northern Journey Online
http://www.interlog.com/~njo/

Old Time Herald Online http://www.mindspring.com/~oth/

The Online Magazine of Roots and World Music http://www.rootsworld.com

Stirrings Folk Magazine
http://www.sommers.demon.co.uk/stirrings/stirr88/stirrwelcome.html

Trad@Harp
http://www.geocities.com/SunsetStrip/2030/indexe1.html

The Young Harpers Almanac http://baruk.zendo.com/almanac/

Festivals

Bob Berens' Festivals
http://oeonline.com/folk_fests/

Festival Finder
http://www.festivalfinder.com/

Venues

Dirty Linen Gig Guide
http://www.dirtynelson.com/linen/special/tour.html

Hidden Water Folk Venues http://www.hidwater.com/hwvenues.html

Musi-Cal Concert Pages http://concerts.calendar.com/

Music Alive
http://www.acousticmusic.com/

MIDI Pages

Ain't Whistlin' Dixie
http://www.csn.net:80/planet/

web sites

Autoharp Tunes
http://weber.u.washington.edu/~britell/whiskey.html

Kipp Doolan's Traditional Midi Tunes http://pluto.njcc.com/~kipp/

5-String Banjo
http://www2.gol.com/users/steve/f_banj.htm

Folk Music MIDI Page
http://www.epix.net/~lesley/folk.html

Folksongs and Ballads of the Appalachians and England http://www.netstrider.com/music/folkways/

The Jordan-O'Connell Memorial Celtic MIDI Archive
http://www.albany.net/~dowland/index.html

Songs of the British Isles http://www.netstrider.com/music/britisle/

Taylor's Traditional Tunebook http://www3.islandnet.com/~btaylor/homepage.htm

The Virtual Tunebook http://www.celticmusic.com/cgi-bin/~celticmusic/tunes.pl

The Wandering Whistler
http://www.geocities.com/~gmahan/

Lyrics and Music Databases

Australian Folk Songs http://www.chepd.mq.edu.au/boomerang/songnet/

Campfire Sing Along http://www.achilles.net/~cco/dir-cam.htm

Cantaria
http://chivalry.com/cantaria/

Civil War Songs
http://www.pcola.gulf.net/~vbraun/FlaStar/songs/index.html

Colin McArthur's Song Page http://www.rt66.com/~colin/songbook.htm

Country Lyrics
http://www.ae.utexas.edu/~stimpy/music/country/lyrics/

Country Music Lyrics
http://www.roughstock.com/cowpie/

Digital Tradition Folk Song Database www.deltablues.com/folksearch

Bob Dylan Lyrics
http://fciav3.bsd.uchicago.edu/~jrr/tbob/index.html

English Folk Songs
http://www.acronet.net/~robokopp/welsh.html

Folk Songs from Other Countries http://ingeb.org/

Folksong Index
http://acronet.net/~robokopp/folkindx.htm

Gaelic Song Index
http://chivalry.com/cantaria/

German Folk Songs
http://www.acronet.net/~robokopp/Volksong.html

The Gospel Music Archive http://subnet.virtual-pc.com/da567664/

Grendel's Lyric Archive
http://homepage.seas.upenn.edu/~avernon/lyrics.html

International Lyrics Server http://www.lyrics.ch/

Irish Folk Songs
http://www.acronet.net/~robokopp/irish.html

Irish Folksong Lyrics Collection http://www.cs.hut.fi/~zaphod/search

Ken McGirr's Scottish Song Lyrics http://www.smiley.cy.net/kmcgirr/

Music Database
http://www.cs.nott.ac.uk/Department/Staff/ef/database.html

Peter, Paul and Mary Lyrics http://www.downeast.net/ppm/nslist.html

John Prine Lyrics
http://www.geocities.com/Heartland/1985/lyrics.htm

Scottish Folk Songs
http://www.acronet.net/~robokopp/scottish.html

Scottish Song Lyrics
http://www.geocities.com/CapeCanaveral/1690/lyrics.html

Shanties and Sailor Songs http://www.acronet.net/~robokopp/shanty.html

Shanties and Sea Songs http://www.ucs.mun.ca/~andrew/shanty/

Welsh Folk Songs
http://www.acronet.net/~robokopp/welsh.html

Woody Gurthrie Lrics
http://www.artsci.wustl.edu/~davida/lyrics.html

Associations

Acoustic Northwest
http://www.isomedia.com/homes/mspittal/acoustic.html

Boston Bluegrass Union
http://www.bbu.org/

Bucks County Folk Song Society
http://pages.prodigy.com/bcfss/

Canada On-Line Musicians Association http://www.interlog.com/~cpreal/coma.html

Folk Federation of South Australia http://www.folk-sa.asn.au/

The Folklore Society of Greater Washington http://www.fsgw.org/

Greater New Haven Acoustic Music Society
http://revco.med.yale.edu/~robc_nhm/acoustic.html

Intermountain Acoustic Music Association http://www.xmission.com:80/~iama/

International Bluegrass Music Association http://www.ibma.org/IBMA/

Oklahoma City Traditional Music Association http://www.octma.org/

Roots Music
http://www.roots.force9.co.uk/

Santa Cruz Bluegrass Society http://www.infopoint.com/orgs/scbs/

Seattle Folklore Society http://www.seafolklore.org/

Tidewater Friends of Folk http://www.geocities.com/~tffm/

Filk

A Brief Guide to Filk http://www.izzy.net/~tomsmith/filkfaq.htm

Darn Near All the Filk on the Web http://www.dnaco.net/~mobrien/filk/filklink.html

Filking with Julia http://www.sff.net/people/Julia.West/filking.html

Filklore and Filklife Studies http://www.sccs.swarthmore.edu/org/swil/FILKS/Filklore.html

Interfilk Home Page http://www.lovesong.com/interfilk/

M.A.S.S.F.I.L.K.
http://pages.prodigy.com/keshlam/whatfilk.html

Nich Smith on Filk http://www.crc.ricoh.com/~steve/Doc/what-is-filk.html

Solomon Davidoff on Filk http://ernie.bgsu.edu/~sdavido/index10.html

SWIL Filkbooks
http://www.sccs.swarthmore.edu/org/swil/filks.html

Xenofilkia
http://www.starport.com/xeno/

Filk Labels

Dandelion Digital http://www.dandelion.com/

Firebird Arts and Music http://firebirdarts.com/

Pegasus Publishing
http://www.fastlane.net/homepages/pegasus/

Quicksilver Fantasies
http://www.nidlink.com/~quicksilver/

Random Factors Catalog http://sundry.hsc.usc.edu/random-factors/

Filk Groups

Black Book Band
http://www.sff.net/people/K-Mac/bwagon1.htm

The N'Early Music Consort http://www.geocities.com/Vienna/9229/

Ookla the Mok
http://www.infinet.com/~scoteder/otmfan/

Phoenix
http://www.altrion.org/phoenix/

Urban Tapestry
http://www.inkspot.com/ut/

Windbourne
http://www.windbourne.com/

Shape Note Singing

Fasola Homepage
http://medinfo.labmed.umn.edu/Docs/.www/fasola_homepage.html

Sacred Harp and Related Shape-Note Music Resources http://www.mcsr.olemiss.edu/~mudws/resource/

Sacred Harp Singing
http://www.mcsr.olemiss.edu/~mudws/harp.html

Shape Note Historical Background http://www.mit.edu:8001/people/ijs/sn/sn-hist.html

Appalachian Dulcimer

Cult of the Revived Dulcimer http://weber.u.washington.edu/~mkpb/dulchm.html

Jerry Rockwell's Mountain Dulcimer Home Page http://www.eurekanet.com/~jcrmusic/

Mountain Dulcimer Homepage http://www.ecnhs.org/dulcimer/dulcimer.html

Autoharps

Autoharp Page
http://www.autoharp.org/

Bagpipes

Bagpipe.com http://www.bagpiper.com/

The Bagpipe Web
http://pipes.tico.com/pipes/pipes.html

The Bagpiping Pages
http://www.lismor.co.uk/pipehome.html

Northumbrian Small Pipes http://www.nspipes.demon.co.uk/nsp/

The Pipers Corner
http://pw2.netcom.com/~crfowler/pcorner.htm

Uilleann Pipe Information List
http://www2.southwind.net/~karres/_music/_pipe/Uilleann.html

The Wonderful World of Bagpipes http://www.epas.utoronto.ca:8080/~sagrillo/bagpipes/windbag.html

Banjo

Banjo Tabluture and Bluegrass Information http://bluegrassbanjo.org/

The Classic Banjo Resource http://www.fas.harvard.edu/~rutkowsk/

The 5 String Banjo
http://www2.gol.com/users/steve/f_banj.htm

Gordon Banks' Old Time Music
http://www.pitt.edu/~gebanks/pers/oldtime.html

Introduction to Irish Banjo http://www.sirius.com/~ststones/banjo.htm

Irish Tenor Banjo
http://www.wwisp.com/~dwisely/table.html

Proteus' Irish Tenor Banjo Site http://www.geocities.com/Nashville/5055/

web sites

Bodhran

Bodhran
http://celtic.stanford.edu/instruments/bodhran/

Bouzouki

Han's Irish Bouzouki Homepage http://www.ice.el.utwente.nl:80/~han/bouzouki/

Concertina

Alabama Concertina Support Group http://hmi.homewood.net/tina.html

The Anglo Concertina
http://celtic.stanford.edu/instruments/bodhran/

Concertina FAQ
http://www.harbour.demon.co.uk/concerti.htm

Concertina! WWW Sites related to Concertinas http://funnelweb.utcc.utk.edu/~tkoosman/boxlinks.html

Don Nichols' Concerina Pages
http://www.d-and-d.com/dnichols/DoN.html

Noel Hill School of Concertina http://funnelweb.utcc.utk.edu/~tkoosman/nhics.html

Didgeridoo

Aboriginal Didjeridu
http://luff.latrobe.edu.au/~gengl1/didj.html

Dreamtime: The Didjeridu W3 Server http://www.nd.edu/~sborman/didjeridu/

Fiddle

The American Nykelharpa Association http://www.atmos.washington.edu/~brash/ana.html

Bowed Electricity
http://www.digitalrain.net/bowed/

Cape Breton Music & Entertainment www.CapeBretonNet.com/Music

Ceolas! The Fiddler's Companion http://celtic.stanford.edu/tunes/fc/

Chris Ricker's Fiddle Page http://tnt.vianet.on.ca/pages/rickere

The Fiddle Web
http://www.gpfn.sk.ca/culture/arts/fiddle/

Fiddle's Home Page
http://www.west.net/~psalazar/fiddpage.html

Fiddles! The Fiddle Page
http://www-openmap.bbn.com/users/gkeith/fiddles/Fiddle.html

Georgi's Home Page of the Fiddle
http://www-openmap.bbn.com/users/gkeith/fiddles/Fiddle.html

The Hardanger Fiddle Association of America http://www.lexianintl.org/sylte/hfaa.html

Larry Sanger's Donegal Fiddle Pages
http://www.geocities.com/Athens/6464/hmpg.html

Trente Sous Zero
www.qbc.clic.net/~thirtybe/agendaf.html

Guitar

Celtic/ British Isles Music For Finger Style Guitar http://plainfield.bypass.com/~arte/celtic.html

Hammered Dulcimer

The Kitchen Musician's Hammered Dulcimer Site http://members.aol.com/Kitchiegal/index.html/

The Nonesuch Dulcimer Club http://www.hillside.co.uk/nonsuch/

The Official Hammered Dulcimer Web Site http://www.rtpnet.org/~hdweb/misc/othrsite.html

Harp

Gaelic Harps & Harpers in Ireland & Scotland http://www.silcom.com/~vikman/isles/scriptorium/harps/harps.htm

The Harp Page
http://www.tns.lcs.mit.edu/harp/

Trad@Harp
http://www.mayo-ireland.ie/harp.htm

Hurdy-Gurdy

Alden and Cali Hackmann's Hurdy-Gurdy Page http://www.hurdygurdy.com/hg/hghome.html

A Brief History of the Hurdy-Gurdy http://www.mhs.mendocino.k12.ca.us:80/MenComNet/Business/Retail/Larknet/ArtHurdGurdyHistory

Hurdy-Gurdy WWW Page
http://chpco6.ch.unito.it/~ravera/ghironda.html

Matthew Szostak's Hurdy-Gurdy Page http://www.midcoast.com/~beechhil/vielle/

Lute

Guitar and Lute
http://www.albany.net/~dowland/index.html

The Lute Society of America http://www.cs.dartmouth.edu/~wbc/lsa/lsa.html

Wayne's Lute Page
http://www.cs.dartmouth.edu/~wbc/new/new_lute.html

Mandolin

Dawgnet home of David Grisman and Acoustic Disc
http://www.dawgnet.com/

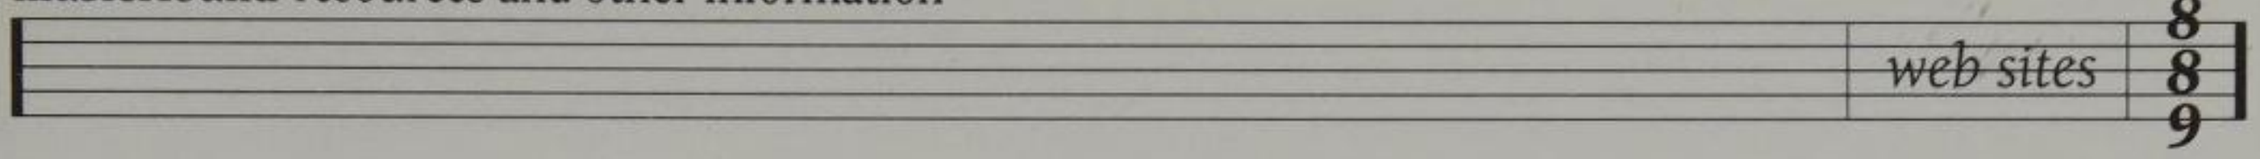
Mando Mark's Mondo Mando Page http://www.geocities.com/BourbonStreet/3648/

Mandolin Cafe
http://www.mandolincafe.com/



Mandolinking
http://www.btinternet.com/~mandolinking/

Pennywhistles and Tin Whistles

Ain't Whistlin' Dixie
http://www.csn.net:80/planet/

The Ceolas Tin Whistle Site http://celtic.stanford.edu/instruments/

Flutes and Pennywhistles http://www.mhs.mendocino.k12.ca.us/MenComNet/Business/Retail/Larknet/ArtFlutesWhist

Mike Simpson's Tin Whistle Site http://www.mindspring.com/~whistler/

Pennywhistle and Ocarina http://mothra.nts.uci.edu/~dhwalker/dixie/

Semi-Comprehensive Whistle Guide http://www.mindspring.com/~whistler/tutor/index.html

The Tin Whistle
http://members.aol.com/planetmac/whistle/whistle.html

The Tin Whistle Table
http://www.wwisp.com/~dwisely/table.html

The Wandering Whistler
http://www.geocities.com/~gmahan/

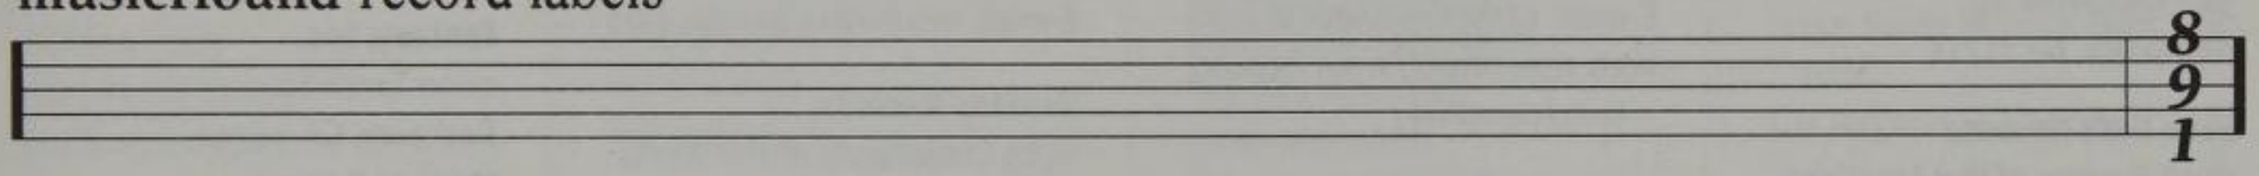
Whistle Tabluture Font http://www.netbistro.com/georgemusic/tab.html

Whistling Low
http://www.wwisp.com/~dwisely/table.html



The following record labels are just some of the labels that have substantial folk catalogs. You may want to contact them if you have questions regarding specific releases.

Accurate Records
PO Box 390115
Cambridge, MA 02139

Acorn Music
5332 College Ave., Ste. 101
Oakland, CA 94618-2805
(510) 655-9076
Fax: (510) 655-9096
E-mail: acorn@sirius.com

Acoustic Disc
PO Box 4143
San Rafael, CA 94913
(800) 221-DISC (3472)

Acoustic Music Records
1610 Crestview
Seal Beach, CA 90740

Adobe Records
PO Box W
Shallowater, TX 79363
(806) 873-3537
Fax: (806) 873-3542

Alacazam! Records
PO Box 429
Waterbury, VT 05676-0429
E-mail: listenup@silo-alcazar.com

Alcazar Records
PO Box 429
Waterbury, VT 05676-0429
(802) 244-7845
Fax: (802) 244-6128
E-mail: listenup@silo-alcazar.com

Alligator Records
PO Box 60234
Chicago, IL 60660
(773) 973-7736
Fax: (773) 973-2088
E-mail: info@allig.com

A&M Records
1416 N. LaBrea
Hollywood, CA 90028
(213) 469-2411
Fax: (213) 856-2600

A&M/Sleeping Giant Music 1345 Denison St.
Markham, ON L3R 5V2
Canada

American Gramaphone Records
9130 Mormon Bridge Rd.
Omaha, NE 68152
(402) 457-4341
Fax: (402) 457-4332

American Melody
PO Box 270
Guilford, CT 06437
(203) 457-0881
Fax: (203) 457-2085

Angel Records
810 Seventh Ave.
New York, NY 10019
(212) 603-8600
Fax: (212) 603-8648

Appleseed Recordings
PO Box 2593
West Chester, PA 19380
E-mail: folkradicl@aol.com

Arabica Records
2515 36th Ave. South
Minneapolis, MN 55406

Arhoolie Records
10341 San Pablo Ave.
El Cerrito, CA 94530 USA
(510) 525-7471
Fax: (510) 525-1204
E-mail: mail@arhoolie.com

Arista Records
6 W. 57th St.
New York, NY 10019
(212) 489-7400
Fax: (212) 830-2322

Asylum Records
1906 Acklen Ave.
Nashville, TN 37212
(615) 292-7990
Fax: (615) 292-8219

Atlantic Recording Corporation
1290 Avenue of the Americas
New York, NY 10104-0101
(212) 707-2000

Avalanche Records
12000 W. Pico Blvd., Ste. 201
Los Angeles, CA 90064
E-mail: avalanche@bonaire.com

Axiom Records
400 Lafayette St., 5th Fl.
New York, NY 10003

Azure Records
PO Box 38
Washington, VA 22747
(540) 987-3164
Fax: (540) 987-3166

Bar/None
PO Box 1704
Hoboken, NJ 07030
(201) 795-9424
Fax: (201) 795-5048

Beacon Records
8033 Sunset Blvd., Ste. 392
Los Angeles, CA 90046

BCN Records
PO Box 3129
Peabody, MA 01961

The Blackbird Recording
185 Franklin St., 5th Fl.
New York, NY 10013

Blind Pig Records
PO Box 2344
San Francisco, CA 94126
(415) 550-6484
Fax: (415) 550-6485
E-mail: blindpigs@aol.com

Blix Street Records
PO Box 1129
Burbank, CA 91507
E-mail: BlixSt.@aol.com

Blue Hen Records
PO Box 420586
San Francisco, CA 94142
E-mail: mc@bluehenrecords.com

Blue Jacket Entertainment Inc.
322 Hicksville Rd.
Bethpage, NY 11714

Blue Note Records
1290 Avenue of the Americas, 35th Fl.
New York, NY 10104
(212) 492-5300
Fax: (212) 492-5458

Blue Planet Records
PO Box 2074
Boulder, CO 80306
E-mail: planet@bluegrass.com

Blue Suit Records
PO Box 352707
Toledo, OH 43635

Blue Thumb Records
555 W. 57th St., 10th Fl.
New York, NY 10019
(212) 424-1000
Fax: (212) 424-1007

Bluestein Family Tapes & Records
4414 E. Alamos
Fresno, CA 93726

Bohemia Beat
1 Camp St.
Cambridge MA 02140
(617) 354-0700
Fax: (617) 491-1970

The Borealis Recording Company
67 Mowatt Ave., Ste. 233
Toronto, ON M6K 3E3 Canada
E-mail: brc@interlog.com

The Bottom Line Record Company
740 Broadway, 6th Fl.
New York, NY 10003

Brownstone Recordings
PO Box 60163
Worcester, MA 01606
(508) 853-9431

Buddah Records
1540 Broadway, 27th Fl.
New York, NY 10036

Campfire Records
1410 Ridge Creek Ln.
Bulverde, TX 78163
(210) 885-2488
Fax: (210) 828-0513
E-mail: campfire@hepcat.com
Web site: http://www.hepcat.com/campfire/

Capitol Nashville
3322 West End Ave.
Nashville, TN 37203
(615) 269-2000
Fax: (615) 269-2053

Capitol Records
1750 N. Vine St.
Hollywood, CA 90028-5274
(213) 462-6252

Chrysalis Records
645 Madison Ave.
New York, NY 10022-1010

Claddagh
1 Camp St.
Cambridge MA 02140
(617) 354-0700
Fax: (617) 491-1970

Claddagh Records
Dame House
Dame St.
Dublin 2 Ireland
E-mail: claddagh@crl.ie

Clean Cuts
1 Camp St.
Cambridge MA 02140
(617) 354-0700
Fax: (617) 491-1970

Columbia Records
550 Madison Ave.
New York, NY 10022
(212) 833-8000
Fax: (212) 833-7731

Compas Records
117 30th Ave. South
Nashville, TN 37212
(800) 757-2277

Country Music Foundation Records
4 Music Square East
Nashville, TN 37203
(615) 256-1639
Fax: (615) 255-2245

Culburnie Records
PO Box 219
Nevada City, CA 95959
(916) 292-4219
Fax: (916) 292-4352
E-mail: usinfo@culburnie.com

Cypress Records
1523 Crossroads of the World
Los Angeles, CA 90028

Daemon Records
PO Box 1207
Decatur, GA 30031

Dancing Cat Records
PO Box 639
Santa Cruz, CA 95061
(408) 429-5085
Fax: (408) 423-7057

Dancing Dog Music
PO Box 4427
Austin, TX 78765-4427
(512) 482-0132
Fax: (512) 482-0132
E-mail: mesa@eden.com

Daring
1 Camp St.
Cambridge, MA 02140
(617) 354-0700
Fax: (617) 491-1970

Earwig Music Co.
1818 W. Pratt Blvd.
Chicago, IL 60626
(773) 262-0278
Fax: (773) 262-0285

Elektra/Nonesuch Records
75 Rockefeller Plaza
New York, NY 10019
(212) 275-4000
Fax: (212) 956-2270

EMI Music Canada
3109 American Drive
Mississauga, ON L4V 1B2 Canada

Enigma/Retro
PO Box 3628
Culver City, CA 90232-3628

Epic
1801 Century Park West
Los Angeles, CA 90067

Falling Mountain Music
240 Bucher Run Ln.
Winchester, VA 22602
(540) 877-2505
Fax: (540) 877-1797
E-mail: fallmtn@mnsinc.com

Fantasy, Inc.
2600 Tenth St.
Berkeley, CA 94710
(510) 549-2500
Fax: (510) 486-2015

Fast Folk Musical Magazine
PO Box 938
Village Station
New York, NY 10014

FireAnt Records
2009 Ashland Ave.
Charlotte, NC 28205
E-mail: Fireants@aol.com

Fish Tail Records
PO Box 2561
Iowa City, IA 52244

Flying Fish Records
1 Camp St.
Cambridge MA 02140
(617) 354-0700
Fax: (617) 491-1970

Folk-Legacy Records
PO Box 1148
Sharon CT 06069
(800) 836-0901
Fax: (860) 364-1050
E-mail: folklegacy@snet.net
Web site: http://folklegacy.com/

Foxglove Records
PO Box 5262
Portland, OR 97208

Fretless
1 Camp St.
Cambridge, MA 02140
(617) 354-0700
Fax: (617) 491-1970

Front Hall Records
PO Box 307
Voorheesville, NY 12186

record labels 8 9 3

Gadfly Records
PO Box 5231
Burlington, VT 05402
(802) 865-2406
E-mail: gadfly1@aol.com

Geffen Records
9130 Sunset Blvd.
Los Angeles, CA 90069
(310) 278-9010
Fax: (310) 271-4358

A Gentle Wind
PO Box 3103
Albany, NY 12203
(518) 436-0391

Great American Music Hall 859 O'Farrell St.
San Francisco, CA 94109

Green Linnet/Xenophile Records
43 Beaver Brook Rd.
Danbury, CT 06810
(203) 730-0333
Fax: (203) 778-4443
E-mail: grnlinnet@aol.com

Gypsy Moth Records
PO Box 1285
New Haven, CT 06505

Harmonia Mundi USA
2037 Granville Ave.
Los Angeles, CA 90025
(310) 478-1311
Fax: (310) 996-1389

Heritage Records
Rt. 3 Box 290
Galax, VA 24333

Homespun Tapes
PO Box 694
Woodstock, NY 12498

Iona Records
27-29 Carnoustie Place
Scotland St.
Glasgow G5 8PH Scotland

June Appal
PO Box 743
Whitesburg, KY 41858

Kells Music
64 New Hyde Park Rd.
Garden City, NY 11530-3909
(800) 854-3746
Fax: (516) 354-7768
E-mail: kellmus@usa.pipelin.com

Knitting Factory Works
74 Leonard St.
New York, NY 10013
(212) 219-3006
Fax: (212) 219-3401

La Louisianne Records
PO Box 52131
Lafayette, LA 70505

Ladyslipper
PO Box 3124
Durham, NC 27715

Legacy International
PO Box 6999
Beverly Hills, CA 90212

Hal Leonard Publishing Corp.
PO Box 13819
Milwaukee, WI 53213

Lismor Recordings
S&I Music Store
27/29 Carnoustie Place
Glasgow G5 8P H
Scotland

Local Folkel Records
104 Catalpa Rd.
Rochester, NY 14617
(716) 544-0850

Maggie's Music
PO Box 4144
Annapolis, MD 21403
(410) 268-3394

Marimac Recordings, Inc
PO Box 447
Crown Pont, IN 46307
(800) 628-4507

MCA Records
70 Universal City Plaza
Universal City, CA 91608
(818) 777-4000
Fax: (818) 733-1407

MCA Nashville
60 Music Square E
Nashville, TN 37203-4325
(615) 244-8944
Fax: (615) 880-7410

Mercator/Caroline Records
114 W. 26th St.
New York, NY 10001

Mercury Records
825 Eighth Ave.
New York, NY 10019
(212) 333-8000
Fax: (212) 603-7650

Mesa/Bluemoon Recordings
9229 Sunset Blvd.
Los Angeles, CA 90069
(310) 205-7445
Fax: (310) 205-5911

Miramar Recordings
200 Second Ave. West
Seattle, WA 98119
(206) 284-4700
Fax: (206) 286-4433

Missouri State Old Time Fiddlers Association
PO Box 7423
Columbia, MO 65205

Mouthpiece Records
106 W. 49th St.
Minneapolis, MN 55409

Mrs. Ackroyd Records
PO Box 95
South District Office
Manchester M20 4LB
England

Mulligan Records
19 Stephen's Ln.
Upper Mount St.
Dublin 2 Ireland

Nonesuch Records
75 Rockefeller Plaza
New York, NY 10019

Northeastern Records
PO Box 3589
Saxonville, MA 01701-0605
(508) 788-7770
Fax: (508) 788-7771

Oh Boy Records
33 Music Square West, #102-B
Nashville, TN 37203
(615) 742-1250
Fax: (615) 742-1360
E-mail: ohboy@ohboy.com

Ossian
PO Box 84
Cork, Ireland

Out There Records
PO Box 543
Norman, OK 73070

Padraig Records
PO Box 22164
Lexington, KY 40522-2164
(606) 268-1718

Palmetto Records
71 Washington Place, #1A
New York, NY 10011

Parachute/Mercury/PolyGram
11150 Santa Monica Blvd, Ste. 1000
Los Angeles, CA 90025

Paradox Records
PO Box 4124
27 Mountain Blvd., Ste. 8
Warren, NJ 07060-0124

Phaeton
1 Camp St.
Cambridge MA 02140
(617) 354-0700
Fax: (617) 491-1970

Philo
1 Camp St.
Cambridge, MA 02140
(617) 354-0700
Fax: (617) 491-1970
E-mail: info@rounder.com

Pinecastle Records
5108 S. Orange Ave.
Orlando, FL 32809
(800) 473-7773
Fax: (407) 858-0007
E-mail: pinecast@inspace.net

RCA Records/BMG
1540 Broadway
Times Square
New York, NY 10036
(212) 930-4000

Red Biddy Records
P. O. Box 336
Dover, NH 03821-0336
(603) 742-8866

Red House Records
PO Box 4044
St. Paul, MN 55104
(800) 695-4687

Red Pajamas
33 Music Square West, Ste. 102-B

record labels

Nashville, TN 37203

Rego Irish Records and Tapes
64 New Hyde Park Rd.
Garden City, NY 11530
(516) 328-7800
Fax: (516) 354-7768

Reprise
3300 Warner Blvd.
Burbank, CA 91505-4694
(818) 846-9090
Fax: (818) 846-8474

Rhiannon Records
20 Montague Rd.
London E8 2HW England
E-mail: rhiannonrec@compuserve.com

Rhino Records
10635 Santa Monica Blvd.
Los Angeles, CA 90025
(310) 474-4778
Fax: (310) 441-6575

Rounder Records
1 Camp St.
Cambridge, MA 02140
(617) 354-0700
Fax: (617) 491-1970
E-mail: info@rounder.com

Schoolkids' Records
523 E. Liberty St.
Ann Arbor, MI 48104
(313) 994-8031
(800) 445-2361

Shanachie Entertainment Corp.
13 Laight St., 6th Fl.
New York, NY 10013
(212) 334-0284
Fax: (212) 334-5207

Small Dog A-Barkin'
PO Box 443
Madison, TN 37116

Smithsonian Folkways
955 L'Enfant Plz., Ste. 2600
Washington, DC 20560
(202) 287-3251
Fax: (202) 287-3699
E-mail: Folkways@aol.com

Stretchy Records
8238 Cohn
New Orleans, LA 70118
(504) 865-8455

Sugar Hill Records
PO Box 55300
Durham, NC 27717-5300
(919) 489 4349
Fax: (919) 489-6080

Temple Records
1 Camp St.
Cambridge MA 02140
(617) 354-0700
Fax: (617) 491-1970

Topaz Productions
PO Box 2725
Oakland, CA 94602
E-mail: HawkeyeH@aol.com

Tradition Rykodisc
Shetland Park
27 Congress St.
Salem, MA

Traditional Crossroads
PO Box 20320
Greeley Sq. St.
New York, NY 10001-9992
(800) 370-9812
E-mail: tradcross@aol.com

TriStar/Sony Music
550 Madison Ave.
New York, NY 10022-3211
(212) 337-5454
Fax: (212) 337-5453

Turquoise Records
PO Box 947
Highway 931
Whitesburg, KY 41858
(606) 633-0485
Fax: (606) 633-0493

Universe Records
PO Box 73
Kenmore, NY 14217

Vanguard Records Welk Record Group
1299 Ocean Ave.
Santa Monica, CA 90401
(310) 451-5727

Varrick Records
1 Camp St.
Cambridge MA 02140
(617) 354-0700
Fax: (617) 491-1970

Vestapol
1 Camp St.
Cambridge MA 02140
(617) 354-0700
Fax: (617) 491-1970

Warner Music Canada
1810 Birchmount Rd.
Scarborough, ON M1P 2H1
Canada

Warner/Reprise
3300 Warner Blvd.
Burbank, CA 91505-4694
(818) 846-9090
Fax: (818) 846-8474

Waterbug
PO Box 6605
Evanston, IL 60204
E-mail: info@waterbug.com

Windham Hill Group
PO Box 5501
Beverly Hills, CA 90211-2713
(800) 888-8544
E-mail: consumers@windham.com

Xenophile Records
43 Beaver Brook Rd.
Danbury, CT 06810
(203) 730-0333
Fax: (203) 730-0345

Yazoo Records
Shanachie Records
37 E Clinton St.
Newton, NJ 07860
(201) 579-7763
Fax: (201) 579-7083

Yellow Tail Records
9102 17th Ave. NE
Seattle, WA 98115-3212
(206) 527-3546

These are just some of the radio stations in the United States that feature some sort of folk music programming. Please be advised that folk music may make up only a small portion of the station's program schedule, and that radio formats often change like the weather. Your best bet would be to check the local radio listings in the cities below for more specific information.

Alabama

Auburn
WEGL (91.1 FM)

Tuscaloosa
WQPR (88.7 FM)
WUAL (91.5 FM)

Alaska

Juneau
KTOO (104.3 FM)

Arizona

Tucson
KXCI (91.3 FM)

Arkansas

Little Rock
KABF (88.3 FM)

California

Berkeley
KPFA (94.1 FM)

Cupertino
KKUP (91.5 FM)

Davis
KDVS (90.3 FM)

Fresno
KSJV (91.5 FM)

Nevada City
KVMR (89.5 FM)

North Hollywood
KPFK (90.7 FM)

Northridge
KCSN (88.5 FM)

Oakland KNEW (910 AM)

Pacific Grove
KAZU (90.3 FM)

Philo
KZYX (90.7 FM)

Rohnert Park
KRCB (91.1 FM)

Sacramento
KVMR (99.3 FM)

San Carlos
KBUD (88.1 FM)

San Francisco
KALW (91.7 FM)
KFLR (93.7 FM)

Santa Cruz
KSCU (103.3 FM)
KUSP (88.9 FM)
KZSC (88.1 FM)

Santa Monica
KCRW (89.9 FM)

Stockton
KUOP (91.3 FM)

Turlock
KCSS (91.9 FM)

Connecticut

Bridgeport
WPKN (89.5 FM)

Fairfield
WSHU (91.1 FM)

Hartford
WRTC (89.3 FM)

New Haven
WYBC (94.3 FM)

New London
WCNY (91.1 FM)

Sharon
WKZE (98.1 FM)

Storrs
WHUS (91.7 FM)

West Hartford
WWUH (91.3 FM)

West Haven
WNHU (88.7 FM)

Delaware

Newark
WVUD (91.3 FM)

District of Columbia

Washington
WAMU (88.5 FM)

Florida

Gainesville
WUFT (89.1 FM)

St. Augustine
WFCF (88.5 FM)

Tallahassee
WVFS (89.7 FM)

Tampa
WMNF (88.5 FM)

8 9 6 radio stations

Georgia

Athens
WUOG (90.5 FM)

Atlanta
WREK (91.1 FM)
WRFG (89.3 FM)

Valdosta
WVVS (90.9 FM)

Illinois

Carbondale
WSIU (91.9 FM)

Chicago
WFMT (98.7 FM)
WLUW (88.7 FM)

Evanston
WNUR (89.3 FM)

Springfield
WUIS (91.9 FM)

Indiana

Anderson
WAXT (96.7 FM)

Bloomington
WFHB (91.3 FM)

Elkhart
WVPE (88.1 FM)

Goshen
WGCS (91.1 FM)

Terre Haute
WMHD (90.5 FM)

Iowa

Cedar Falls
KUNI (90.9 FM)

Clinton
KROS (1340 AM)

Kansas

Garden City
KANZ (91.1 FM)
KZNA (90.5 FM)

Lawrence
KANU (91.5 FM)

North Newton
KBCU (88.1 FM)

Kentucky

Highland Heights
WNKU (89.7 FM)

Lexington
WRFL (88.1 FM)

Murray
WKMS (91.3 FM)

Whitesburg
WMMT (88.7 FM)

Louisiana

Baton Rouge
WRKF (89.3 FM)

Maine

Lewiston
WRBC (91.5 FM)

Maryland

Baltimore
WKHS (90.5 FM)

College Park
WMUC (88.1 FM)

Salisbury
WSCL (89.5 FM)

Towson
WTMD (89.7 FM)

Massachusetts

Amherst
WFCR (88.5 FM)
WMUA (91.1 FM)

Boston
WERS (88.9 FM)
WUMB (91.9 FM)

Framingham
WDJM (91.3 FM)

North Dartmouth
WSMU (91.1 FM)

Provincetown
WOMR (92.1 FM)

Springfield
WTCC (90.7 FM)

Waltham
WBRS (100.1 FM)

Williamstown
WJJW (91.1 FM)

Worcester
WCUW (91.3 FM)
WICN (90.5 FM)

Michigan

Ann Arbor
WCBN (88.3 FM)

Detroit
WDET (101.9 FM)

East Lansing
WDBM (88.9 FM)
WKAR (90.5 FM)

Minnesota

Duluth
KUMD (103.3 FM)

Grand Rapids
KAXE (91.7 FM)

Minneapolis
KFAI (90.3 FM)

Missouri

Cape Girardeau
KRCU (90.9 FM)

Columbia
KOPN (89.5 FM)

Fulton
KFAL (900 AM)

Rolla
KUMR (88.5 FM)

Springfield
KSMU (91.1 FM)

St. Charles
KCLC (89.1 FM)

St. Louis
KDHX (88.1 FM)

Montana

Great Falls
KGPR (89.9 FM)

Missoula
KGPR (89.9 FM)
KUFM (89.1 FM)

Nebraska

Lincoln
KZUM (89.3 FM)

Nevada

Las Vegas
KUNV (91.5 FM)

New Hampshire

Henniker
WNEC (91.7 FM)

New Jersey

East Orange
WFMU (91.1 FM)

Manahawkin
WYRS (90.7 FM)

Pemberton
WBZC (88.9 FM)

Teaneck
WFDU (89.1 FM)

Trenton
WTSR (91.3 FM)

New Mexico

Las Cruces
KRWG (90.7 FM)

New York

Fredonia
WCVF (88.9 FM)

Garden City
WBAU (90.3 FM)

Hyde Park
WHVW (950 AM)

Ithaca
WVBR (93.5 FM)

Poughkeepsie
WVKR (91.3 FM)

Rochester
WRUR (88.5 FM)
WWWG (1460 AM)

Saratoga Springs
WSPN (91.1 FM)

Syracuse
WCNY (91.3 FM)
WJNY (85.9 FM)
WUNY (90.9 FM)

North Carolina

Asheville
WCQS (88.1 FM)

Chapel Hill
WUNC (91.5 FM)

Durham
WXDU (88.7 FM)

Fayetteville
WFSS (91.9 FM)

Raleigh
WQDR (94.7 FM)

Ohio

Athens
WOUB (91.3 FM)

Cleveland
WRUW (91.1 FM)

Oberlin
WOBC (91.5 FM)

Owensville
WOBO (88.7 FM)

Wooster
WCWS (90.9 FM)

Xenia
WBZI (1500 AM)

Oregon

Eugene
KLCC (89.7 FM)
KRVM (91.9 FM)

Portland
KBOO (90.7 FM)

Pennsylvania

Allentown
WDIY (88.1 FM)

Philadelphia
WHYY (90.9 FM)
WXPN (88.5 FM)

State College
WPSU (91.5 FM)

South Carolina

Clemson
WSBF (88.1 FM)

Tennessee

Clinton
WDVX (89.9 FM)

Johnson City
WETS (89.5 FM)

Nashville
WPLN (90.3 FM)

Texas

Austin
KUT (90.5 FM)

College Station
KAMU (90.9 FM)
KEOS (89.1 FM)

El Paso
KTEP (88.5 FM)

Houston
KTRU (91.7 FM)

Huntsville
KSHU (90.5 FM)

San Antonio
KSYM (90.1 FM)

Utah

Moab
KZMU (89.7 FM)

Salt Lake City
KRCL (90.9 FM)

Vermont

Burlington
WRUV (90.1 FM)

Colchester
WVPR (107.9 FM)

Montpelier
WNCS (104.7 FM)

Plainfield
WGDR (91.1 FM)

Virginia

Charlottesville
WTJU (91.1 FM)

Harrisonburg
WMRA (90.7 FM)

Monterey
WVLS (89.7 FM)

Norfolk
WHRV (89.5 FM)

Orange
WJMA (96.7 FM)

Williamsburg
WCWM (90.7 FM)

Washington

Bellevue
KBCS (91.3 FM)

Gig Harbor
KGHP (89.3 FM)

Olympia
KAOS (89.3 FM)

Seattle
KUOW (94.9 FM)

West Virginia

Bethany
WVBC (88.1 FM)

Wisconsin

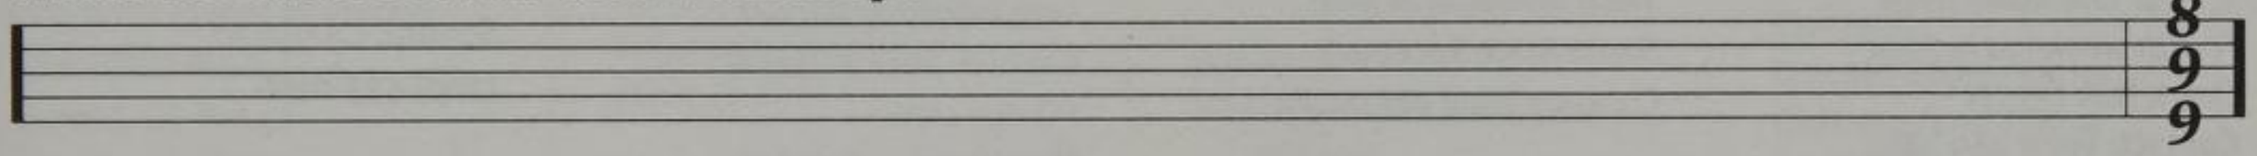
Madison
WORT (89.9 FM)

Milwaukee
WYMS (88.9 FM)

Wyoming

Casper
KVOC (1230 AM)

Douglas
KKTY (99.3 FM)



If you want to see some folk and roots music perfomed live, we suggest you check out some of these North American music festivals. We've also included a few workshops for the hands-on types.

UNITED STATES

Alabama

Huntsville
Once in a Blue Moon Dance Weekend
Memorial Day weekend
E-mail: mebanefamily@world-net.att.net

Huntsville
Annual State Fiddling and Bluegrass Convention
Third weekend in September
Cahaba Shriners Temple
Contact: (205) 859-4471

Huntsville
Mountain Dulcimer Festival
Third Sunday in September
Burritt Museum and Park
Contact: (205) 536-2882

Mentone
Birmingham Country Dance Society Old-Time Music & Dance Weekend
A weekend in August
Contact: Diane Weatherly
1452 Milner Crescent
Birmingham, AL 35205
(205) 939-0120
E-mail: dweather@uab.edu

Mobile
Deep South Dulcimer Festival
First weekend in November
Chickasabougue Park
Contact: (334) 633-7739

Alaska

Fairbanks
Fairbanks Winter Folk Festival
Second weekend in February
Wood Center, University of Alaska
Contact: (907) 488-0556

Fairbanks
Fairbanks Summer Folk Fest
Second or third weekend in June Moose Creek Pavilion
Contact: (907) 488-0556

Fairbanks
Athabascan Old-Time Fiddlers' Festival
First or second weekend in November Eagles Hall
Contact: (907) 452-1825

Juneau
Alaska Folk Festival
First or second weekend in April
Centennial Hall
Contact: (907) 789-0292

Skagway
International Folk Festival
Weekend in late May or early June First Presbyterian Church
Contact: (907) 983-2276

Arizona

Casa Grande
Arizona Old Time Fiddlers Jamboree
First weekend in January
Pinal County Fairgrounds
Contact: (520) 723-5242

Lake Havasy City
Sandpoint's Fiddlers' Jamboree
Weekend before Thanksgiving Day
Sandpoint Marina and RV Park
Contact: (520) 855-0549

Payson
State Championship Old Time Fiddlers' Contest
A weekend in late September
Payson Rodeo Grounds
Contact: (520) 474-5242

Phoenix
Phoenix Folk Traditions Acoustic Music Festival
A weekend in late March or early April Encanto Park
Contact: (602) 495-5458

Prescott
Sharlot Hall Museum Folk Music Festival
First weekend in October
Sharlot Hall Museum
Contact: (520) 445-3123

Scottsdale
US West National Festival of the West.
A weekend in March
Contact: PO Box 12966
Scottsdale, AZ 85267
(602) 996-4387

Tucson
Tucson Folk Festival
A weekend in late April or early May El Presidio Park
Contact: (520) 881-2016

Wickenburg
Four Corner States Bluegrass Festival and Fiddle Championship
Mid-November
Everett Bowman Rodeo Grounds
Contact: (520) 694-5479

Arkansas

Mountain View
Annual Arkansas Folk Festival
A weekend in April
Stone County Courthouse Square
Contact: (501) 269-3851

Mountain View
Tribute to Merle Travis & National Thumbpicking Guitar Championships Fourth weekend in May
Ozark Folk Center
Contact: (501) 269 3851

Mountain View
Old-Time Gathering on the Square
July 4
Stone County Courthouse Square
Contact: (501) 269-8068

Mountain View
Autoharp Jamboree
Second weekend in August
Ozark Folk Center
Contact: (501) 269-3851

Mountain View
Arkansas State Old Time Fiddle Championships
A weekend in September
Ozark Folk Center
Contact: (501) 269-3851

Mountain View
Fiddle and Dance Jamboree
Second weekend in October
Ozark Folk Center
Contact: (501) 269-3851

Mountain View
Bean Fest
Last weekend in October
Stone Mountain Courthouse Square
Contact: (501) 269-3851

California

Agoura
Topanga Banjo-Fiddle Contest, Dance & Folk Arts Festival Third Sunday in May Paramount Ranch, near Agoura
Contact: (818) 354-3795

Angels Camp
Annual Calaveras Celtic Faire
A weekend in March
Contact: PO Box 4541
Sonora, CA 95370
(209) 532-8375

Arcadia
Great American Irish Fair and Music Festival
Third weekend in June
Santa Anita Racetrack
Contact: (818) 985-2233

Berkeley
Berkeley Free Folk Festival
A weekend in May
Cedar & Bonita Streets, Berkeley
Contact: Jessica Bryan
1627 Grant Street, Apt. G
Berkeley, CA 94703
E-mail: Folkfest@sirius.com

Bishop
Mill Pond Traditional Music Festival
Third weekend in September
Mill Pond Park
Contact: (800) 874-0669

Booneville
Wild Iris Folk Festival
Memorial Day weekend
Mendocino County Fairgrounds
Contact: Wild Iris Productions
PO Box 262
Philo, CA 95466
(707) 895-2148

Calabasas
Summer Solstice Folk Music, Dance & Storytelling Festival
Fourth weekend in June
Sola University
Contact: (818) 342-7664

Felton
Saw Player's Picnic and Music Festival
Third Sunday in July Roaring Camp and Big Trees Train Depot
Contact: (510) 523-4649

Goleta
Annual Old-Time Fiddlers Convention
One day in October
Contact: Hilda Wenner
967 Garcia Rd
Santa Barbara, CA 93103
(805) 966-1191

Mendocino
Lark in the Morning Music Celebration
Late July/early August
Contact: Mickie Zekley
PO Box 1176
Mendocino, CA 95460
(707) 964-5569
E-mail: larkinam@larkinam.com

Mendocino Woodlands Balkan Music and Dance Workshop
Late June/early July
East European Folklife Center
Contact: PO Box 593
Nevada City, CA 95959
(530) 265-3020
E-mail: office@eefc.org

San Francisco
San Francisco Celtic Music & Arts Festival
A weekend in March
Contact: (415) 252-9994

San Rafael
Acoustic Guitar Festival
A week in August
Contact: PO Box 767
San Anselmo, CA 94979-0767
(415) 485-6946, ext. 628
E-mail: agfestival@stringletter.com

Santa Clarita
Cowboy Poetry and Music Festival
Last weekend in March
Gene Autry's Melody Ranch
Contact: (800) 305-0755

Sebastopol
Kate Wolf Memorial Music Festival
A weekend in June
Caswell Vineyards
Contact: (707) 829-7067

Yosemite
Strawberry Spring Music Festival
Five days in May
Contact: PO Box 565
Sonora, CA 95370
(209) 533-0191

Yosemite
Strawberry Fall Music Festival
A weekend in September
Contact: PO Box 565
Sonora, CA 95370
(209) 533-0190

Colorado

Denver
Colorado's Annual Mid-Winter Bluegrass Festival
A weekend in February
Northglenn Holiday Inn & Holidome
E-mail: bluegras@verinet.com

Lyons
RockyGrass: The Annual Rocky Mountain Bluegrass Festival
A weekend in late July
Contact: Planet Bluegrass
500 West Main
Lyons, CO 80540
(303) 449-6007
E-mail: planet@bluegrass.com

Lyons
Annual Rocky Mountain Folks Festival
A weekend in August
Contact: Planet Bluegrass
500 West Main
Lyons, CO 80540
(303) 449-6007
E-mail: planet@bluegrass.com

Pueblo
Annual Bluegrass on the River
Memorial Day weekend
Greenway & Nature Center
Contact: Greenway & Nature Center
5200 Nature Center Road
Pueblo, CO 81003
(719) 549-2414

Silverton
Silverton Jubilee Folk Music Festival
A weekend in June
Contact: Jane Legge
PO Box 185
Silverton, CO 81433

Telluride
Annual Telluride Bluegrass Festival
A weekend in June
Contact: Planet Bluegrass
500 West Main
Lyons, CO 80540
(303) 449-6007
E-mail: planet@bluegrass.com

Connecticut

Mystic
Sea Music Festival
Second weekend in June
Mystic Seaport Museum
Contact: (860) 572-0711

Preston
Strawberry Park Bluegrass Festival
First weekend in June
Strawberry Park (5 miles east of Norwich)
Contact: (860) 886-1944

Delaware

Harrington
Eastern Shore Bluegrass Association Festival
Third weekend in June
Delaware State Fairgrounds
Contact: (302) 492-1048

Florida

Dade City
Annual Florida Old-Time Music Championships
A weekend in April
Sertoma Youth Ranch
Contact: Jim Strictland 1848 Thistle Ct.
Wesley Chapel, FL 33543

Dade City
Annual Will McLean Folk Festival
Two days in April
Seroma Youth Ranch
E-mail: mlonghill@aol.com

Kissimmee
Annual Kissimmee Bluegrass Festival
A weekend in March
Silver Spurs Rodeo Grounds
Contact: PO Box 456
Orlando, FL 32802
(800) 473-7773

Live Oak
Annual Suwannee Springfest
A weekend in March
Spirit of the Suwannee Music Park
Contact: Magnolia Music and Events, Inc.
PO Box 51597
Jacksonville Beach, FL 32240-1597
(904) 249-7990
E-mail: BigCosmo@aol.com

St. Augustine
Annual Gamble Rogers Folk Festival
A weekend in May
St. Augustine Amphitheater
Contact: Jim Springfield
(904) 794-0222
E-mail: StoryBuff@aol.com

St. Petersburg
Florida State Fiddlers Convention
A weekend in October
Contact: Dea Browning
PO Box 713
Micanopy, FL 32677
E-mail: dea@afn.org

Georgia

Athens
North Georgia Folk Festival
First weekend in October
Sandy Creek Park
Contact: (706) 613-3620

Hiawassee
Georgia's Official State Fiddlers Convention
Ten days in mid-October
Contact: (706) 896-4191

Tifton
Folk Life Festival & Fiddlers' Jamboree
Fourth Saturday in April Georgia Agrirama Living History Museum
Contact: (912) 386-3344

Hawaii

Honolulu
Hawaiian Slack Key Guitar Festival
Third Sunday in August McCoy Pavilion
Contact: (808) 239-4336

Lihue (Kauai)
Hawaiian Slack Key Guitar Festival, Kauai Style
First Saturday in November Kauai Marriott Resort
Contact: (808) 239-4336

Idaho

Rexburg
Idaho International Folk Dance Festival
Last weekend in July through first weekend of August
Contact: (208) 356-5700

Weiser
National Old-Time Fiddlers Contest
A week in June
Weiser High School Gym
Contact: Layna Hafer
8 E. Idaho
Weiser, ID 83672

Illinois

Carbondale
Annual Southern Illinois Festival of Irish Music and Dance
Two days in April
Contact: Pat Eckert
Division of Continuing Education
Southern Illinois University
Carbondale, IL 62901
(618) 549-3090

Chicago
Annual Universtiy of Chicago Folk Festival
A weekend in February
Mandel Hall
Contact: U of C Folklore Society
PO Box 67
Faculty Exchange
Chicago, IL 60637

Chicago
Chicago Blues Festival
First weekend in June
Grant Park
Contact: (312) 744-3315

Chicago
Chicago Gospel Festival
Second weekend in June
Grant Park
Contact: (312) 744-3315

Chicago
Greater Chicago Jewish Folk Arts Festival
Second Sunday in June Cauldwell Woods
Contact: (847) 674-0344

Chicago
Chicago Highland Games and Scottish Festival
Third weekend in June
Grant Park
Contact: (800) 449-SCOT

Coal City
Coal City Storytelling Festival
Fourth weekend in May Coal City Public Library
Contact: (815) 634-4552

Decatur
World Championship Old-Time Piano Playing Contest
A weekend in May Contact: Judy Leschewski
PO Box 4714
Decatur, IL 62525

Downer's Grove
Downer's Grove Heritage Festival
Fourth weekend in June Downtown Downer's Grove
Contact: (630) 969-9720

Evanston
Midwest Anniversary Sacred Harp Singing Second Sunday in January
Contact: (773) 486-7400

Evanston
Evanston Ethnic Arts Festival
Third weekend in July
Dawes Park
Contact: (847) 491-0266

Freeport
Oakdale Music Festival
Second Sunday in July
Oakdale Nature Preserve
Contact: (815) 235-2812

Grayslake
Great Plains Folk Festival
First weekend in June
College of Lake County
Contact: 1605 Wilmette Ave.
Willmette, IL 60091
(847) 251-6618

Morris
Gebhard Woods Dulcimer Festival
Second weekend in July
Gebhard Woods State Park
Contact: H.A.N.D.S.
PO Box 59
Elmwood Park, IL 60635
(708) 456-6292
E-mail: hammerd@mcs.com

Oak Forest
Chicago Gaelic Park Irish Fest
Memorial Day weekend
Gaelic Park
Contact: (630) 892-8811

Palos Hills
Great Plains Folk Festival
Last weekend in April Moraine Valley Community College
Contact: (708) 251-6618

Poplar Grove
Blaine Folk Festival
Second Sunday in June
Blaine United Methodist Church
Contact: (815) 544-3616

Spring Grove
Illinois Storytelling Festival
Last full weekend in July Spring Grove Village Park
Contact: PO Box 507
Richmond, IL 60071
(815) 648-2039

Warrenville
Warrenville Folk Festival
Second weekend in July
Cearny Park
Contact: W.F.M.S.
PO Box 248
Warrenville, IL 60555
(630) 717-8495

Indiana

Battle Ground
Annual Indiana Fiddlers Gathering
A weekend in June
Contact: Kirk Hallman
PO Box 49
Battle Ground, IN 47920

Battle Ground
"Battleground" Indiana Fiddler's Gathering
Fourth weekend in June
Tippecanoe Battlefield
Contact: Indiana Fiddlers Gathering
PO Box 49
Battle Ground, IN 47920
(317) 567-4242

Bean Blossom
Bean Blossom Bluegrass Festival
Third weekend in June
Contact: (615) 868-3333

Indianapolis
Eagle Creek Folk Music Festival
Fourth weekend in June
Eagle Creek Park
Contact: Central Indiana Folk Music & Mountain Dulcimer Society
c/o Berard
1331 Blue Bird Dr
Greenfield, IN 46140
(317) 462-9681

Kendalville
Northern Indiana Bluegrass Association Bluegrass Festival
A weekend in May 4H Fairgrounds
Contact: Jim Winger 5043 Wapiti Ct.
Fort Wayne, IN 46804
(219) 432-4485
E-mail: jawinger@mixi.net

Petersburg
Indiana Fiddling & Picking Contest
First weekend in June
Prides Creek Park
Contact: Rothrock/OTMA
Rt. 1, PO Box 269D
Winslow, IN 47598
(812) 789-2518

Iowa

Avoca
Avoca Old-Time Country Music Contest & Festival
The six days preceding Labor Day Pottawattamie County Fairgrounds
Contact: (712) 784-3001

Des Moines
Traditional Music Weekend
First weekend in August Living History Farms
Contact: 2600 NW 11th St.
Urbandale, IA 50322
(515) 278-5286

Medora/Indianola
Hickory Hills Hoedown
Third Sunday in September
Hickory Hills Park
Contact: (515) 961-6169

Stratford
Bluegrass and Old-Time Country Music
Second weekend in July Stratford City Park
Contact: (515) 838-2311

Kansas

Gardner
Santa Fe Trails Bluegrass Festival
A weekend in May
Johnson County Fairgrounds
Contact: JCCC Box Office
Santa Fe Trails Bluegrass Festival
12345 College Blvd.
Overland Park, KS 66210
(913) 469-4445

Kingman
Ninnescah Valley Folk Festival
Second weekend in August
Riverside Park
Contact: Kansas Acoustic Arts Association
RR 2, PO Box 106
Kingman, KS 67068
(316) 532-3270

Lawrence
Kansas State Fiddling & Picking Championships
Last or second-to-last weekend in August South Park
Contact: (913) 841-7817

Overland Park
Prairie Dulcimer Festival
First weekend in June
Santa Fe Commons
Contact: Prairie Dulcimer Club
6741 Mackey St.
Overland Park, KS 66204
(913) 236-9289

Park City
Annual Park City Bluegrass Festival
Two days in May Contact: Park City Festivals
Park City, KS 67219
(316) 691-8178

Salina
Smoky Hill River Festival
Second weekend in June
Oakdale Park
Contact: Smoky Hill River Fest
PO Box 2181
Salina, KS 67402
(913) 826-7410

Winfield
Walnut Valley Festival & National Flatpicking Championships
A weekend in September
Cowley County Fairgrounds
Contact: Walnut Valley Association
PO Box 245

Winfield, KS 67156
(316) 221-3250

Kentucky

Benton
Southern Harmony Singing
Fourth Sunday in May Marshall County Courthouse
Contact: (502) 527 8616

Berea
Celebration of Traditional Music
A weekend in October
Berea College Campus
Contact: Gordon McKinney
Appalachian Center
CPO 2336
Berea College
Berea, KY 40404-23326
(606) 986-9341, ext.5140

Central City
Merle Travis Festival
The Saturday following Thanksgiving
Central City Elementary School
Contact: (502) 754-9603

Leitchfield
Official Kentucky State Championship Old-Time Fiddlers Contest
Two days in July
Rough River Dam State Resort Park
Contact: Brent Miller
PO Box 4042
Leitchfield, KY 42755

Louisville
Otter Creek Park Bluegrass Festival
Memorial Day weekend
Otter Creek Park
Contact: (502) 583-3577

Olive Hill
Mountain Memories Weekend
Two days in March
Carter Caves State Park
Contact: J.P. Fraley's Mountain Music Gathering
Carter Caves State Park
344 Caveland Dr.
Olive Hill, KY 41164
(606) 286-4411

Olive Hill
J.P. Fraley's Mountain Music Gathering
Six days in September
Carter Caves State Park
Contact: J.P. Fraley's Mountain Music Gathering
Carter Caves State Park
344 Caveland Dr
Olive Hill, KY 41164
(606) 286-4411

Owensboro
IBMA Bluegrass Fan Fest
Last full weekend in September English Park
Contact: (502) 684 9025

Pikeville
Hillbilly Days
Third weekend in April
Downtown Pikeville
Contact: (800) 844-7453

Pineville
Great American Dulcimer Convention
Fourth weekend in September
Pine Mountain State Resort
Contact: (606) 337-3066

Renfro Valley
Old Joe Clark Bluegrass Festival
First weekend in July
Contact: (800) 765-7464

Louisiana

Athens
Bluegrass Festival
First weekend in June
Home Place Acres
Contact: (318) 258-4943

Eunice
Acadiana Music Festival
Second Sunday after Easter Northwest Community Center Pavilion
Contact: (318) 457-3014

New Orleans
Annual New Orleans Jazz & Heritage Festival
Late April
Fair Grounds Race Course
Contact: PO Box 53407
New Orleans, LA 70151-3407

New Orleans
Louisiana Music Tour
Late April
Contact: Festival Tours International
15237 Sunset Blvd, Ste. 17
Pacific Palisades, CA 90272
(818) 346-5146
E-mail: festtours@aol.com

New Orleans
Celtic Nations Festival
A weekend in mid- or late October
Marconi Meadows
Contact: (504) 566-5011

Plaisance
Original Southwest Louisiana Zydeco Music Festival
A weekend in September
Contact: Southern Development Foundation 361 Sandoz
Opelousas, LA 70570

Maine

Bar Harbor
Downeast Dulcimer and Folk Harp Festival
First or second weekend in July Congregational Church
Contact: (207) 288-5653

Blandford
Blandford Fair Old Time Fiddlers Contest
One day in September
Contact: Chris Keenan
PO Box 3
Blandford, MA 01008

Brunswick
Thomas Point Beach Bluegrass Festival
Labor Day weekend
Thomas Point Beach
Contact: (207) 725-6009

Cambridge
Salty Dog Bluegrass Music Festival
Last weekend in August
Cambridge Festival Grounds
Contact: (207) 277-5624

East Benton/Waterville
Annual East Benton Fiddle Convention
One day in July
Contact: Shirley Littlefield
PO Box 215
Clinton, ME 04927-0215

Sidney
Blistered Fingers Family Bluegrass Music Festival
A weekend in June
Silver Spur Riding Club
Contact: Blistered Fingers Production
Greg Cormier
RFD #1, PO Box 7560
Waterville, ME 04901
(207) 873-6559
E-mail: blist-f@gwi.net

South Paris
The Record Family's Oxford County Bluegrass Festival
Third weekend in August
Rose-Beck Farm
Contact: 207 743 2905

Maryland

Friendsville
Friendsville Fiddle and Banjo Contest
Third Saturday in July Town Park
Contact: (301) 746-8194

Westminster
Deer Creek Fiddlers' Convention
Second Sunday in June
Contact: (800) 654-4645

Westminster
Common Ground: American Music and Arts Festival
A weekend in July
Carroll County Farm Museum
Contact: Common Ground on the Hill Western Maryland College
Westminster, MD 21157
(410) 857-2771
E-mail: cground@qis.net

904 festivals and workshops

Web site: http://www.commongroundonthehill.com/

Massachusetts

Boston
Gaelic Roots Music, Song and Dance Summer Festival
One week in June
Boston College
Contact: (617) 552-1490

Lowell
Lowell Folk Festival
Last full weekend in July
Downtown Lowell
Contact: (508) 970-5000

Natick
New England Folk Festival
The weekend after the third Monday in April Natick High School
Contact: (617) 354-1340

North Easton
Irish Festival
Second weekend in June
Stonehill College
Contact: (617) 323-3399

Michigan

Ann Arbor
Ann Arbor Folk Festival
One night in January Hill Auditorium, University of Michigan
Contact: Linda Siglen
Office of Major Events
University of Michigan
530 S. State St.
Ann Arbor, MI 48109
(734) 763-8587

Brethren
Spirit of the Woods Festival
Third Saturday in June Dickson Township Park
Contact: Spirit of the Woods
11171 Kerry Rd
Brethren, MI 49619
(616) 477-5381

Davison
Banjo-Rama
First Saturday in May Contact: (810) 687-1573

Evart
Evart Funfest—"Grand Daddy" of All Dulcimer Festivals
A weekend in July
Osceola County Fairgrounds

Grand Rapids
Annual Fiddlers Jamboree
Last weekend in April
Highland Middle School
Contact: (616) 361-3444

Harbor Springs
Blissfest
Second weekend in July
Contact: Blissfest
PO Box 441
Harbor Springs, MI 49740
(616) 348-2815

Hart
Original Michigan Fiddler's Jamboree
Fourth Saturday in June
Hart High School
Contact: Oceana Center Grange
1525 N. 112th Ave
Hart, MI 49420
(616) 873-4854

Hart
Michigan Womyn's Music Festival
Second week in August
Contact: WWWTMC
PO Box 22
Walhalla, MI 49458
(616) 757-4766

Jackson
Jackson Story Fest
Second weekend in May
Michigan Theater
Contact: Pamela Stillson
6007 Ann Arbor Rd
Jackson, MI 49201
(800) 245-5282

Jackson
Annual Southern Michigan Dulcimer Festival
A weekend in June
Western High School Community Arts Center
Contact: Warren Guiles
9575 Peach Ridge
Sparta, MI 49345
(616) 887-9436

Marquette
Hiawatha Traditional Music Festival
Fourth weekend in July Tourist Park
Contact: Hiawatha Music Co-Op
PO Box 414
Marquette, MI 49855
(906) 228-9500

Remus
Wheatland Dance Camp
Last weekend in May Contact: Wheatland Music Organization
PO Box 22
Remus, MI 49340
(517) 967-8879

Remus
Wheatland Traditional Music Festival
A weekend in September
Contact: Lola Tyler
PO Box 22
Remus, MI 49340

Rochester
May Play Day
Second Saturday in May University Presbyterian Church
Contact: Paint Creek Folklore Society
433 Sussex Fair
Rochester, MI 48309
(810) 375-2513

Ypsilanti
Frog Island Festival
Fourth weekend in June
Depot Town in Ypsilanti
Contact: Dave Siglin
Frog Island Fest
c/o The Ark
316 S. Main
Ann Arbor, MI 48104
(734) 761-1451

Minnesota

Bloomington
Summerfolk
Fourth Sunday in June Highland Hills Ski Area
Contact: (800) 695-4687

Collegeville
Swayed Pines Folk Festival
Last Saturday in April
St. Johns University
Contact: St. Johns University
Luke Hall
Collegeville, MN 56321
(612) 363-3249

Plymouth
The Winter Bluegrass Weekend
A weekend in March
Radisson Hotel and Conference Center
Contact: Minnesota Bluegrass & Old Time Music Associaiton (800) 635-3037

Two Harbors
Folk Festival
Third weekend in July
Contact: (218) 834-4898

Zimmerman
Minnesota Bluegrass & Old-Time Music Festival
Late July
Camp in the Woods Resort
Contact: Jed Malischke
PO Box 607
Spooner, MN 54801

Zimmerman
Minnesota Bluegrass & Old-Time Music Festival
First weekend in August
Camp in the Woods
Contact: MBOTMA
c/o Malischke
PO Box 480
Spooner, WI 54801
(715) 653-2479

Mississippi

Drew
Pops Staples Blues and Gospel Heritage Festival
First Saturday in June Downtown Drew
Contact: (601) 745-6576

Missouri

Arrow Rock
Boonslick Traditional Folk Festival
Second Saturday in September Old Schoolhouse Community Center
Contact: (816) 837-3231

Boonville
Big Muddy Folk Festival
First or second weekend in April Thespian Hall
Contact: (816) 882-7977

Branson
Silver Dollar City Music Festival
Mid-June
Silver Dollar City
Contact: Silver Dollar City
HRC 1, PO Box 791
Branson, MO 65616
(417) 338-8282

Kahoka
Kahoka Festival of Bluegrass Music
Second weekend in August
Clark County Fairgrounds in Kahoka
Contact: (573) 853-4344

Lawrenceburg
Old Time Fiddler's Jam and Contest
Two days in June
Synder's Music Park
Contact: Virginia Synder
1347 E. Broadmoor
Springfield, MO 65804

Lawrenceburg
Old Time Fiddler's Jam and Contest
Two days in December
Synder's Music Park
Contact: Virginia Synder
1347 E. Broadmoor
Springfield, MO 65804

St. Louis
Mississippi River Celtic Music Festival
A weekend in March
Contact: (314) 962-9192

St. Louis
St. Louis Storytelling Fest
First week in May Contact: University of Missouri
Attn: Becky Walstrom 8001 Natural Bridge Rd.
St. Louis, MO 63121
(314) 553-6914

Montana

Columbus
Musicians Festival
First full weekend in July Itch-Kep-Pe Park
Contact: (406) 322-4143

Elliston
Annual Fiddler's Association Fiddle Camp Early June
Contact: Jeanne Buckley
319 Old Divide Rd.
Roundup, MT 59072

Hamilton
Bitterroot Valley Bluegrass Festival
Second weekend in July
Ravalli County Fairgrounds
Contact: (406) 363-2400

Lincoln
Wilderness Bar Fiddlers Contest
Last weekend in August
The Wilderness Bar
Contact: (406) 362-9200

Polson
Montana State Fiddlers Contest
Fourth full weekend in July Flathead Lake, 35 miles north of Missoula
Contact: (406) 323-1198

Nebraska

Ainsworth
Annual National Country Music Festival
Second weekend in August
East City Park
Contact: (402) 387-2740

Elgin
Bluegrass Festival
Second-to-last weekend in August
The City Park
Contact: (402) 843-5307

Syracuse
Nebraska State Country Music Championship
Second weekend in June
Otoe County Fairgrounds
Contact: (402) 234-5277

Nevada

Elko
The Cowboy Poetry Gathering
Late January
Contact: Addison Wilhite, Hal Cannon
(702) 738-7508
Web site: http://www.westfolk.org

Fallon
Desert Oasis Bluegrass Festival
Second or third weekend in May Churchill County Fairgrounds
Contact: (702) 423-7733

Logandale
Bluegrass & Old Time Music Festival
Second weekend in October
Clark County Fairgrounds
Contact: (702) 564-5455

New Hampshire

Durham
Ralph Page Legacy Weekend
A weekend in January University of New Hampshire
Contact: NEFFA
1950 Massachusetts Ave.
Cambridge, MA 02140-2102
(617) 354-1340

Lincoln
Old-Time Fiddlers Contest
Last Saturday in June Hobo Junction Railroad Station
Contact: (603) 745-3563

Stark
Stark Fiddlers' Contest
Last Sunday in June
Whitcomb Field
Contact: (603) 636-1325

New Jersey

Bridgeton
Bridgeton Folk Festival
Second or third Saturday in June Donald Rainear Amphitheater at Sunset Lake
Contact: (609) 451-9280

Ocean Grove
Ocean Grove Irish & Scottish Music Fest & Fair Last Saturday in May Ocean Grove Auditorium
Contact: (610) 825-7268

Red Bank
Two River Folk Festival
A weekend in early October
Contact: Navesink River Environmental League
PO Box 6153
Fair Haven, NJ 07704 (732) 842-7164

Stanhope
Festival of the Andes
Third weekend in August
Waterloo Village
Contact: (201) 543-4496

New Mexico

Cloudcroft
Cloudcroft Bluegrass Festival
Fourth weekend in June
Contact: (505) 746-9351

Santa Fe
Sante Fe Banjo and Fiddle Contest
Last weekend in August/first weekend in September Sante Fe Rodeo Grounds
Contact: (505) 471-3462

Truth or Consequences International Fiesta Fiddle Contest
Last weekend in April

906 festivals and workshops

Truth or Consequences Convention Center
Contact: (505) 894-2847

Truth or Consequences
New Mexico Old-Time Fiddlers' State Championship
Third weekend in October
Truth or Consequences Convention Center
Contact: (505) 894-2847

New York

Altamont
Old Songs Festival of Traditional Music
Last full weekend in June Altamont Fairgrounds
Contact: (518) 765-2815

Binghamton
Cranberry Dulcimer Gathering
Fourth weekend in July
Unitarian Universalist Church
Contact: Ed Ware
1259 Fowler Pl.
Binghamton, NY 13903-6036
(607) 669-4653
E-mail: ed_ware@compuserve.com

Corning
World Folk Music Festival
Last weekend in July
Centerway Square
Contact: (607) 936-4647

Dutchess County
Annual Springtime Cajun Dance Festival
A weekend in May
Country Fare Antique and Arts Center
Contact: Bill Molloy
390 Beach Rd.
Poughquag, NY 12570
(914) 724-5270

Ellenville
Irish Traditional Music Extravaganza Late February
Nevele Grande Hotel
Contact: (800) 647-6000
E-mail: byrnes@mhonline.net

Hillsdale
Falcon Ridge Folk Festival
Fourth weekend in July Long Hill Farm
Contact: (860) 364-0366

Leeds
Old Ireland Traditional Music Festival
Weekend closest to Fourth of July Main Street
Contact: (518) 943-3736

South Fallsburg
Pines Bluegrass Festival
A weekend in March
Contact: Harry Grant
51 Main St.
Flanders, NJ 07836
(800) 367-4637

Stony Brook
Long Island Fiddle and Folk Music Festival Second Sunday in September
The Museum at Stony Brook
Contact: (516) 751-0066

Trumansburg
Finger Lakes Grassroots Festival of Music and Dance
Third weekend in July
Trumansburg Fairgrounds
Contact: (607) 387-5098

North Carolina

Asheville
Annual Mountain Dance & Folk Festival
A weekend in July
Contact: Stewart Cantor
PO Box 207
Barnardsville, NC 28709

Burnsville/Celo
Music in the Mountains Folk Festival Third Saturday in September
Toe River Campground
Contact: (704) 682-7215

Flat Rock
Black Mountain Music Festival
Memorial Day weekend
Camp Ton-a-wandah
Contact: PO Box 7585
Asheville, NC 28802
(704) 281-3382

Lake Junaluska
Smoky Mountain Folk Festival
Labor Day weekend
Stuart Auditorium
Contact: (704) 452-1688

Mars Hill
Annual Blue Ridge Old Time Week
A week in June
Mars Hill College
Contact: Scott Miller Center for Continuing Education
Mars Hill College
Mars Hill, NC 28754
(800) 582-3047

Sparta
Alleghany County Fiddler's Convention
A weekend in July
Alleghany Fairgrounds
Contact: Alleghany Co. Fiddler's Convention
PO Box 602
Sparta, NC 28675
(336) 372-2033
E-mail: fiddler@ls.net

Swannanoa
Swannanoa Gathering
July and August
Warren Wilson College
Contact: The Swannanoa Gathering
Warren Wilson College
PO Box 900
Asheville, NC 28816-9000
(704) 298-3324
E-mail: gathering@warren-wilson.edu

Union Grove
Ole Time Fiddlers & Bluegrass Festival
Memorial Day weekend
Fiddler's Grove Campground
Contact: Harper A. Van Hoy
PO Box 11
Union Grove, NC 28689

Waynesville
North Carolina International Folk Festival
11 days ending last Sunday of July
Contact: (704) 452-2997

Wilkesboro
Annual MerleFest
A weekend in April
Wilkes Community College
Contact: Ticket Center
(800) 343-7857

North Dakota

Hensler
Missouri River Bluegrass and Old-Time Music Festival
Labor Day weekend
Cross Ranch State Park
Contact: (701) 794-3731

West Fargo
Old-Time Fiddlers Contest and Jamboree
First weekend in July
The Demonstration Building in Bonanzaville
Contact: (701) 282-2822

Ohio

Akron
Cuyahoga Valley Heritage Fest
Third weekend in August
Cuyahoga Valley National Recreation Area Contact: John Reynolds
c/o National Park Service 15610 Vaughn Rd.
Brecksville, OH 44141
(216) 650-4636

Bath
Music in the Valley
Third weekend in July
Hale Farm & Village
Contact: Hale Farm & Village
PO Box 296
Bath, OH 44210
(216) 666-3711 or (800) 589-9703

Berea
Cleveland's Irish Cultural Festival
Fourth weekend in July
Berea Fairgrounds
Contact: Cleveland Irish Fest
14708 Westland Ave.
Cleveland, OH 44111
(216) 251-0711

Coshocton
Roscoe Village Dulcimer Days Festival and Competition
A weekend in May
Lake Park Pavillion
Contact: Cheryl Oswald
Roscoe Village Foundation
381 Hill Street
Coshocton, OH 43812

Coshocton
Old Time Music Festival
A weekend in Septemper
Roscoe Village
Contact: Cheryl Oswald
Roscoe Village Foundation
381 Hill St.
Coshocton, OH 43812

Kirtland Hills
Little Mountain Folk Festival
Last full weekend in July
Lake County History Center
Contact: Lake County Historical Society 8610 King Memorial Rd.
Mentor, OH 44060
(216) 255-8979

Lisbon
Dulci-More Festival
Memorial Day weekend
BSA Camp McKinley
Contact: Bill Schilling
984 Homewood Avenue
Salem, OH 44460-3816
(330) 332-4420
E-mail: ssssbill@aol.com

North Olmsted
Emerald City Folk Festival
Last weekend in August
Frostville Historical Village
Contact: Folknet
PO Box 21235
S. Euclid, OH 44121
(216) 382-6586

Oberlin
Ohio Scottish Games
Last weekend in June
Oberlin College
Contact: Scottish American Cultural Society of Ohio, Inc.
6050 Wilson Mills Rd.
Mayfield Village, OH 44143
(216) 442-2147

South Euclid
Neowilderness Hammered Dulcimer Festival
Second weekend in June
Cuyahoga National Recreation Area
Contact: Folknet
PO Box 21235
South Euclid, OH 44121
(216) 321-1284

Warren
Celtic Heritage Fair
Third weekend in July
City Hall Grounds
Contact: Celtic Heritage Fair
PO Box 128
Warren, OH 44482
(216) 856-3432

Oklahoma

Wagoner
Oklahoma State Fiddlers Convention
A weekend in February
Western Hills Lodge
Contact: Ginger King
7424 NW 29
Bethany, OK 73008

Oregon

Eugene
Willamette Valley Folk Festival
Third weekend in May University of Oregon
Contact: (541) 346-4373

Portland
Annual Pacific NW Sacred Harp Convention
A weekend in October
Sellwood Community Center
Contact: Karen Willard
15215 Tubbs Rd.
Buckley, OR 98321
E-mail: hallock@aa.net

Sumpter
North American Jew's Harp Festival
A weekend in August
Contact: The Jew's Harp Guild
Box 92
Sumpter, OR 97877
(541) 894-2345

Web site: http://www.cyberhighway.net/~mposs1/jhghp.html

Pennsylvania

Cooksburg
The Great Dulcimer Round-up
A weekend in September
Cook Forest Sawmill Center for the Arts
Contact: Felice Dugan
Sawmill Center for the Arts
PO Box 180
Cooksburg, PA 16217
(814) 927-6655

Gettysburg
Gettysburg Bluegrass Camporee
A weekend in May
Granite Hill Campground
Contact: Granite Hill Campground 3340 Fairfield Road Gettysburg, PA 17325
(714) 642-8749

Hamlin
Annual Fiddling Bear Festival
Labor Day weekend
Lake Genero Park
Contact: AFOTM
228 Cherry St.
Katonah, PA 10536
(914) 232-4657

King of Prussia
Greater Philadelphia Mid-Winter Scottish & Irish Music Festival and Fair
Second weekend in February
Valley Forge Convention Center
Contact: (610) 825-7268

New Holland
Spring Gulch Folk Festival
Weekend before Memorial Day Spring Gulch Resort Campground
Contact: (800) 255-5744

Newport
Mountain Laurel Autoharp Gathering
Fourth of July weekend
Contact: Limberjack Productions
18 Burd Rd.
Newport, PA 17074
E-mail: autoharp@pa.net

Philadelphia
Mummers String Band Show of Shows
Two weekends in March and April Civic Center
Contact: (215) 336-3050

Pittsburgh
Pittsburgh Folk Festival
Memorial Day weekend
David L. Lawrence Convention Center
Contact: (415) 281-4882

Pittsburgh
Pittsburgh Irish Festival
A weekend in September
Station Square
Contact: Pittsburgh Irish Festival
PO Box 81173
Pittsburgh, PA 15217
(412) 422-5642
E-mail: pghirishfest@juno.com

Schwenksville
Philadelphia Folk Festival
A weekend in August
Contact: Philadelphia Folksong Society
7113 Emlen St.
Philadelphia, PA 19119
(215) 242-0150

Wind Gap
Wind Gap Bluegrass Festival
A weekend in June
Mountain View Park
Contact: Harry Grant
51 Mail St.
Flanders, NJ 07836
(973) 584-2324

Rhode Island

Escoheag
Cajun & Bluegrass Music-Dance-Food Festival
Labor Day weekend
Stepping Stone Ranch

908 festivals and workshops

Contact: (401) 351-6312

South Carolina

Lancaster Carolina Legends Festival
A Saturday in May Andrew Jackson State Park
Contact: Arlan Schwoyer 300 Lyons Rd.
Lyons, SC 19536

Mountain Rest
Hillbilly Day
Fourth of July
Contact: (803) 638-6871

South Dakota

Canton
Annual Sioux River Folk Festival
Late July/early August
Newton Hills State Park
Contact: Gaynor Johnson
103 1/2 S. Main
Canton, SD 57013

Canton
Sioux River Folk Festival
First weekend in August
Newton Hills State Park
Contact: Newton Hills State Park
Canton, SD 57013
(605) 987-2582

Lake Norden
Old-Time Fiddler's Jamboree
Second Saturday in April Contact: Box 80
Lake Norden, SD 57248
(605) 785-3553

Rockerville
Black Hills Bluegrass Festival
Last full weekend in June Mystery Mountain Resort
Contact: (605) 394-4101

Yankton
Great Plains Old-Time Fiddlers Contest
Third weekend in September
Yankton 4-H Grounds
Contact: (605) 665-3636

Tennessee

Cosby
Cosby Dulcimer and Harp Festival
Second Friday in June Folklife Center of the Smokies
Contact: (423) 487-5543

Memphis
Memphis Dulcimer Festival
Last weekend in September
Idlewild Presbyterian Church
Contact: (901) 725-6976

Murfreesboro
Annual Uncle Dave Macon Days Festival
A weekend in July
Contact: Uncle Dave Macon Days Festival Committee
PO Box 5016
Murfreesboro, TN 37133
(615) 893-2361

Nashville
SPBGMA Bluegrass Awards & Competition
Late January/early February
Sheraton Music Center
Contact: SPBGMA Bluegrass Music Awards
Chuck Spearman
PO Box 271
Kirksville, MO 63501
(816) 665-7172

Smithville
Smithville Fiddlers Jamboree & Crafts Festival
Fourth of July weekend
On the Square
Contact: Smithville Jamboree
PO Box 83
Smithville, TN 37166
(615) 597-8500

Texas

Athens
Texas Fiddlers' Association Contest
First Thursday and Friday in May Courthouse Lawn
Contact: (903) 675-2325

Austin
Traditional Music Festival
A Saturday in mid-January
Dougherty Arts Center
Contact: (512) 454-9481

Austin
South by Southwest
A week in mid-March
Contact: PO Box 4999
Austin, TX 78765
(512) 467-7979
E-mail: sxsw@sxsw.com

Austin
Austin Acoustic Music Festival
Third weekend in November
Contact: (512) 499-8497

Canton
Texas State Bluegrass Festival
Fourth weekend in June
Trades Day Park
Contact: (903) 567-6004

Crockett
Annual World Championship Fiddlers & Pioneer Festival
A weekend in September
Contact: Houston County Chamber of Commerce
PO Box 307
Crockett, TX 75835
(409) 544-2359

Dallas
North Texas Irish Festival
A weekend in March
Fair Park (State Fairgrounds)
Contact: 4340 N. Central Expressway, Ste. 104 Dallas, TX 75206
(214) 821-4174

Dallas
Shamrock Music Festival
Weekend closest to St. Patrick's Day Art district
Contact: (214) 821-7494

Glen Rose
Lone Star State Dulcimer Festival
Mother's Day weekend
Oakdale Park
Contact: (817) 275-3872

Hallettsville
Texas State Championship Fiddlers Frolics
A weekend in April
Knights of Columbus Hall
Contact: Kenneth Henneke
(512) 798-5934

Kerrville
Kerrville Folk Festival
Last weekend in May, first three weekends in June Quiet Valley Ranch
Contact: (800) 435-8429

La Grange
Annual Slide Guitar Festival
Memorial Day weekend
Lafayette Country Fairgrounds
Contact: Taylor Mackey
Rt 1, Box 98
Penrose, NC 28766
(704) 884-4415
E-mail: slidetm@infoave.net

Meridan
John A. Lomax Gathering
Fourth Saturday in April
Meridan Texas Civic Center
Contact: (817) 435-2966

Mineola
Pickin' in the Pines
Third weekend in May
Contact: (903) 857-2253

Round Rock/Austin
Old Settlers' Bluegrass and Acoustic Music Festival
Last weekend in March
Old Settlers' Park
Contact: (512) 443-5001

San Antonio
San Antonio Folk Festival
First Saturday in October Mayan Jungle Garden of Karam's Mexican Restaurant
Contact: (210) 224-7239

Snyder
Legends of Texas Swing Reunion
Fourth week in June Scurry Center Coliseum
Contact: (405) 376-4939

Stamford
Texas Cowboy Reunion

festivals and workshops 909

Beginning of July
Contact: Texas Cowboy Reunion
PO Box 928
Stamford, TX 79553
(915) 773-3614

Turkey
Bob Wills Day
Last Saturday in April
Bob Wills Center
Contact: (806) 423-1033

Utah

Murray
Murray City Acoustic Festival
Labor Day
Murray City Park Ampitheater
Contact: (800) 453-1360
E-mail: iam@xmission.com
Web site: http:www.xmission.com/~iama

Park City
Founders Title Company Folk and Bluegrass Festival
Third weekend in August
Snow Park Lodge, Deer Valley Resort
Contact: (800) 453-1360
E-mail: iam@xmission.com
Web site: http: www.xmission.com/~iama

Salt Lake City
Wheeler Historic Farm Old Time Fiddlers Contest & Bluegrass Festival Last Friday and Saturday in June Wheeler Historic Farm
Contact: (801) 339-7664
E-mail: iam@xmission.com
Web site: http:www.xmission.com/~iama

Vermont

Barre
National Traditional Old-Time Fiddlers & Stepdancers Contest Third or fourth weekend in September Municipal Auditorium
Contact: (802) 879-1536

Burlington
Champlain Valley Summer Folk Festival
First weekend in August
Redstone Campus, University of Vermont
Contact: (802) 899-1111

Dover
Vermont's Green Mountain Irish Music Festival
First weekend in August
Mount Snow Ski Resort
Contact: (800) 245-7669

Hardwick
Old-Time Fiddler's Contest
Last Saturday in July Shepard's Field
Contact: (802) 472-6425

Virginia

Buena Vista
Annual Maury River Fiddlers Convention
A weekend in June
Glen Maury Park
Contact: Maury River Fiddlers Convention
PO Box 702
Buena Vista, VA 24416
(800) 555-8845

Galax
Old Fiddlers Convention
A week in August
Felts Park
Contact: Tom Jones
PO Box 655
Galax, VA 24333
(540) 236-3740

Hiltons
Carter Family Memorial Festival
Late July/early August
The Carter Fold
Contact: Janette Carter
PO Box 111
Hiltons, VA 24258
(540) 386-9480

Rocky Mount
Annual Festival in the Pines
A weekend in May
Tripple Creek Music Campground
Contact: Sterling T. Belcher
1185 Tripple Creek Rd.
Rocky Mount, VA 24151-6149
(540) 483-9839

Rocky Mount
Annual Part-Time International Blue Grass & Old-Time Competitions
A weekend in June
Tripple Creek Music Campground
Contact: Sterling T. Belcher
1185 Tripple Creek Rd.
Rocky Mount, VA 24151-6149
(540) 483-9839

Smithfield
Smithfield Folk Festival
Third weekend in October
Windsor Castle, on Virginia's Isle of Wight
Contact: (804) 357-3288

Syria
Graves' Mountain Festival of Music Weekend after Memorial Day
Graves' Mountain Lodge
Contact: (540) 923-4231

Washington

Port Townsend
Festival of American Fiddle Tunes
Late June/early July
Fort Worden State Park
Contact: (360) 385-3102

Port Townsend
Annual Indianola Hurdy-Gurdy Festival
A weekend in September
Fort Flagler State Park
Contact: Joanne Andrus
1511 SW 320 Court
Federal Way, WA 98023

Richland
Washington State Fiddle Contest
Second weekend in May Richland High School
Contact: (509) 586-2843

Seattle
Northwest Folklife Festival
Memorial Day weekend
Seattle Center
Contact: Northwest Folklife 305 Harrison St.
Seattle, WA 98109
(206) 684-7300

Tacoma
Wintergrass
Last weekend in February
Sheraton Hotel
Contact: (360) 871-7354

Tenino
Old Time Music Festival
Third weekend in March Tenino High School
Contact: (360) 264-4590

West Virginia

Clifftop
Appalachian String Band Music Festival
Late July/early August
Camp Washington Carver
Contact: Director, Camp Washington Carver HC 35, Box 5
Clifftop, WV 25831
(304) 637-1350

Elkins
Augusta Heritage Festival
A weekend in August
Davis & Elkins College
Contact: Gordon Blackley
Augusta Heritage Center
Davis & Elkins College
Elkins, WV 26241
(304) 637-1350

Elkins
Augusta Old Time Week and Fiddlers' Reunion
Mid- to late October
Davis & Elkins College
Contact: Gordon Blackley
Augusta Heritage Ctr.
Davis & Elkins College
Elkins, WV 26241
(304) 637-1350

Fairmont
Traditonal Music Weekend
A weekend in May
Pricketts Fort State Park
Contact: David Elkinton
Rt 3, Box 407

Fairmont, WV 26554
(800) CALL-WVA

Morgantown
Annual Worley Gardner Winter Music Festival
A weekend in February
South Junior High School in Morgantown
Contact: 1332 Cain Street
Morgantown, WV 36505
(304) 599-2540

Summersville
Music in the Mountains
Last full weekend in June Summersville Music Park
Contact: (304) 872-3145

Wisconsin

Allenton
Allenton Concertina Jamboree Festival
Labor Day weekend
Addison Town Hall
Contact: (414) 255-3454

Ashland
Ashland Fiddle Celebration
Fourth weekend in June
Alvord Theater, Northland College Contact: Chequamegon Folk Collective
Rt. 2, Box 52
Ashland, WI 54806
(715) 682-4199

Dodgeville
English Country Dance Weekend
Second weekend in April Folklore Village Farm
Contact: Folklore Village Farm
3210 Co. Hwy BB
Dodgeville, WI 53533
(608) 924-4000

La Crosse
Great River Traditional Music and Crafts Festival
Last weekend in August
Contact: Great River Fest
199 King Street
La Crosse, WI 54601
(608) 784-3033

Milwaukee
Gays Mills Folk Festival of Music and Dance
A weekend in May Contact: Tim Jenkins
Rt 2, Box 83
Gays Mills, Wisconsin 54631

Milwaukee
Milwaukee Irish Fest
Third weekend in August
Contact: Irish Festivals
515 Glenview Ave.
Milwaukee, WI 53213
(414) 476-3378

Shawano
Shawano Old-Time Music and Crafts Festival
Second weekend in August
Mielke Park
Contact: Shawano County Arts Council
PO Box 213
Shawano, WI 54166
(715) 526-2525

Wyoming

Alta
Grand Targhee Bluegrass Festival
Second weekend in August
Grand Targhee Ski and Summer Resort
Contact: (800) 827-4433

Douglas
High Plains Old Time Country Music Show and Contest Weekend in mid- to late April Douglass High School
Contact: (307) 358-9006

CANADA

British Columbia

Victoria
The Zimbabwean Music Festival
A weekend in late May Contact: 1921 Fernwood Rd.
Victoria, BC V8T 2Y6
(250) 384-1997
E-mail: zimfest@islandnet. com

Manitoba

Fergus
50th Anniversary Fergus Scottish Festival
Second week in August
Victoria Park
Contact: (519) 787-0099
E-mail: mjaitken@hookup.net

Winnepeg
Winnipeg Folk Festival
Second weekend in July Bird's Hill Provincial Park
Contact: 264 Tache Ave
Winnipeg, Manitoba R2H 1Z9
(204) 231-0096

New Brunswick

Miramichi
Canada's Irish Festival on the Miramichi
Third weekend in July
Lord Bearverbrook Arena
Contact: (506) 778-8810

Miramichi
Miramichi Folk Song Festival
First Monday in August
Lord Beaverbrook Theater
Contact: (506) 622-1780

Poley
Poley Mountain Music Festival
Second weekend in July
Poley Mountain Ski Area
Contact: (506) 652-5238

St. John
Festival by the Sea
Ten days in August beginning the Friday after New Brunswick Day Loyalist Plaza
Contact: (506) 632-0086

Newfoundland & Labrador

Burin
Burin Peninsula Festival of Folk Song and Dance
First weekend in July
Donald C. Jamieson Academy
Contact: (709) 891-1546

La Grand' Terre
Une Journée Dans L'Passe
Last Sunday in July Centre Scolaire at Communautaire Ste-Anne
Contact: (709) 642-5254

Mount Pearl
Newfoundland International Irish Festival
Second weekend in July
Contact: (709) 748-1002

St. John's
Newfoundland and Labrador Folk Festival
First weekend in August
Bannerman Park
Contact: (709) 576-8508

Nova Scotia

Cape Breton Island
Celtic Colours International Festival
Ten days in November
Cape Breton Island
Contact: 363 Charlotte St.
Sydney, Nova Scotia B1P 1E1
(902) 562-6700

Church Point
Festival Acadien de Clare
Second weekend in July
Contact: (902) 769-2152

Dartmouth
Maritime Old Time Fiddling Contest
Six days in July
Andrew High School Auditorium
Contact: James Delaney
PO Box 3037
Dartmouth East, Dartmouth
Nova Scotia B2W 4Y3
(902) 434-5466
Web site: http://fox.nstn.ca/~whebby

Lower Sackville
Down East Old Time Fiddling Contest
Fourth weekend in August
Sackville and District Community Arena
Contact: (902) 869-4141

Lunenburg
Lunenburg Folk Harbour Festival
Second weekend in August
Contact: (902) 634-3180

Mount Denson
Avon River Bluegrass and Old-time Music Festival
First weekend in June
Avon River Park
Contact: (902) 684-1046

St. Ann's
Festival of Scottish Fiddling
Third weekend in August
Gaelic College of Celtic Arts and Crafts
Contact: (902) 295-3411

St. Peter's
Stone Mountain Music Festival
First weekend in September
Contact: (902) 865-1715

Ontario

Barrie
Horseshoe Valley Folk Festival
Third weekend in April
Horseshoe Valley Resort
Contact: (905) 430-2529

Cambridge
Mill Race Festival of Traditional Folk Music
First Saturday in August
Contact: Mill Race Festival
PO Box 22148
Galt Centre Postal Station
Cambridge, ON N1R 8E3
(519) 622-0146

Clarendon
Blue Skies Music Festival
First weekend in August
Contact: Blue Skies
PO Box 2502
Clarendon, ON K0H 1J0
(613) 279-3260

Goderich
Celtic Roots Festival
Second weekend in August
Lions Harbour Park
Contact: Goderich Recreation Department
166 McDonald St.
Goderich, ON N7A 3N5
(519) 524-2125

Goderich
Earth, Air, Fire, & Water—Celtic Roots Festival
Second weekend in August
Contact: 20 Caledonia Tce
Goderich, ON N7A 2M8
(519) 524-8221

Guelph
Hillside Festival
Last weekend in July
Guelph Lake Conservation Area
Contact: 123 Woolrich, 3rd fl.
Guelph, ON N1H 3V1
(519) 763-6396

Hamilton
Earthsong Festival
First weekend in July
Princess Point Park
Contact: 401 Main St. W.
Hamilton, ON L8P 1K5
(519) 747-8765

Hamilton
Festival of Friends
Second weekend in August
Gage Park
Contact: 401 Main St. W.
Hamilton, ON L8P 1K5
(905) 525-6644

Kingston
All Folks Festival
Fourth weekend in July
Contact: Kingston Folk Festival Association
PO Box 1697
Kingston, ON K7L 5J8
E-mail: highi@qucdn.queensu.ca

London
Home County Folk Festival
Third weekend in July
Victoria Park
Contact: Home County Folk League
Grosvenor Lodge
1017 Western Rd.
London, ON N6G 1G5
(519) 645-2845

Ottawa
CKW Ottawa Folk Festival
A weekend in August
Britannia Park
Contact: CKW Ottawa Folk Festival
516 Unicentre
1125 ColonelByDe
Ottawa, ON K1S 5B6
(613) 520-2600

Owen Sound
Summerfolk Music & Craft Festival
A weekend in August
Kelso Beach Park
Contact: Georgian Bay Folk Society
PO Box 521
Owen Sound, ON N4K 5R1
(519) 371-2995

Pefferlaw
Eaglewood Earth Festival
Last weekend in August
Contact: 31 Helendale Ave.
Toronto, ON M4R 1C5
(416) 481-5506

Pentanguishene
Songs of Sail—Marine Heritage Festival
Last weekend in August
Contact: PO Box 298
Victoria Harbour, ON L0K 2A0
(705) 361-3084

Peterborough
Peterborough Folk Festival
Last weekend in August
Contact: PO Box 823
Peterborough, ON K9J 7A2
(705) 749-3157

Sudbury
Northern Lights Festival Boreal
Second weekend in July
Bell Park Amphitheatre by Ramsay Lake
Contact: PO Box 1236, Station B
Sudbury, ON P3E 4S7
(705) 674-5512

Toronto
Canadian Music Week
A weekend in March
Westin Harbour Castle
Contact: 5399 Elginton Avenue W, Ste. 301
Toronto, ON M9C 5K6
(416) 695-9236
E-mail: cmw@ican.net

Toronto
Mariposa Folk Festival
Second weekend in August
Toronto's Olympic Island
Contact: Mariposa Folk Foundation
60 Atlantic Ave., Ste. 107
Toronto, ON M6K 1X9
(416) 588-8371

Toronto
Ashkenaz . . . A Festival of Yiddish Culture Late August/early September Harbourfront Centre
Contact: Ashkenaz
642 King Street, Ste. 202
Toronto, ON M5V 1M7

WORKSHOPS

Alaska

Kings Lake
Alaska Midnight Sun Songwriters Camp
A weekend in June
Kings Lake Camp
Contact: PO Box 230873
Anchorage, AK 99523-0873
E-mail: mooseman@arctic.net

Arkansas

Mountain View
Ozark Folk Center Workshops Series
April through October
Ozark Folk Center
Contact: Elliott Hancock
PO Box 500
Mountain View, AR 72560 www.ozarkfolkcenter.com

California

Petaluma
Klezkamp West: The Yiddish Folkarts Program
A week in August
Walker Creek Ranch
Contact: Henry Sapoznik
430 W. 14th St. #514
New York, NY 10014

(212) 691-1272
E-mail: livetrads@aol.com

Colorado

Boulder
Pete Wernick's Banjo Camps
Early January (basic skills), mid-January (intermediate/advanced), mid-April (special session) Sandy Point Inn
Contact: Dr. Banjo 7930-C Oxford Rd.
Niwot, CO 80503
E-mail: PWernick1@aol.com

Lyons
RockyGrass Academy
Late July/early August
Contact: Planet Bluegrass
500 W. Main
Lyons, CO 80640
(303) 449-6007

Maryland

Dunkirk
Clawhammer Banjo Workshop with Ken Perlman
A Saturday in May Contact: The Capital Area Bluegrass and Old-Time Music Association Dave Schenkman
(301) 274-3441

New York

West Hurley
Ashokan Fiddle & Dance
Late June through mid-August
Contact: Ashokan Fiddle & Dance
987 Rt. 28A
West Hurley, NY 12491
(914) 338-2996
E-mail: ashokan@aol.com www.jayandmolly.com

North Carolina

Brasstown
John C. Campbell Folk School
Classes taught year-round
Contact: (800) 365-5724
Web site: http://www.grove.net/~jccfs/

Valle Crucis
The Jink & Diddle School of Scottish Fiddle
A week in July
Contact: Fiddletree Music Inc
11302 Avocet Dr.
Chesterfield, VA 23838-8945
Web site: http://members.aol.com/kitchenboy/jink/jink.html

Ohio

Oberlin
Ohio Scottish Arts School
Last week in June
Oberlin College
Contact: Scottish American Cultural Society of Ohio, Inc.
24209 Hedgewood
Westlake, OH 44145
(800) 636-3655

Tennessee

Maryville
Steve Kaufman's Mandolin Camp
Beginning of June
Maryville College
Contact: PO Box 1020
Alcoa, TN 37701
(800) FLATPIK
E-mail: Flatpik@compuserve.com

Maryville
Steve Kaufman's Flatpicking Camp
A week in June
Maryville College
Contact: PO Box 1020
Alcoa, TN 37701
(800) FLATPIK
E-mail: Flatpik@compuserve.com

Nashville
NashCamp—The Nasville Acoustic Music & Songwriting Camp
Two weeks in June
Contact: (615) 292-0967
E-mail: BabsLamb@aol.com

Washington

Port Townsend
Festival of American Fiddle Tunes
Late June/early July
Fort Worden State Park
Contact: (360) 385-3102

West Virginia

Elkins
Augusta Heritage Workshops
April through October
Contact: Gordon Blackley
Augusta Heritage Center
Davis & Elkins College
Elkins, WV 26241
(304) 637-1350

Ripley
West Virgina Old Time Week
A week in March
Contact: Cedar Lakes Craft Center
Ripley, WV 25271
(304) 372-7872

Wisconsin

East Troy Stringalong Weekend
A weekend in March
Camp Edwards Conference Center
Contact: Music Workshops
2851 N. Farwell
Milwaukee, WI 53211
annschmid@aol.com

Milwaukee
Milwaukee Irishfest Summer School
A week in August
Contact: The University of Wisconsin
Off-Campus Programs
PO Box 413
Milwaukee, WI 53201
(414) 229-5879

musicHound folk

Indexes

Five-Bone Album Index

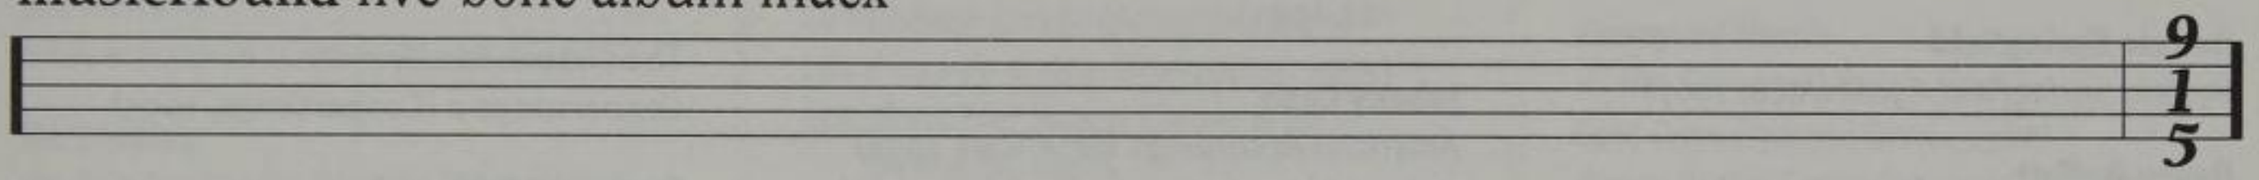
Band Member Index

Producer Index

Roots Index

Category Index

musicHound five-bone album index



The following albums achieved the highest rating possible—5 bones—from our discriminating MusicHound Folk writers. You can't miss with any of these recordings. (Note: Albums are listed under the name of the entry (or entries) in which they appear and are not necessarily albums by that individual artist or group. The album could be a compilation album, a film soundtrack, an album on which the artist or group appears as a guest, etc. Consult the artist or group's entry for specific information.)

Nathan Abshire
French Blues (Arhoolie, 1993)
Le Grand Mamou: A Cajun Music Anthology: The Historic Victor/Bluebird Sessions, 1928–1941 (Country Music Foundation, 1990)

Mose Allison
Allison Wonderland: The Mose Allison Anthology (Rhino, 1994)

Altan
Horse with a Heart (Green Linnet, 1989)

Alphonse "Bois Sec" Ardoin
The Ardoin Family Band with Dewey Balfa: A Couple of Cajuns (Sonet, 1987)
La Musique Creole (Arhoolie, 1997)
Les Blues du Bayou (Melodeon, 1967)

Amédée Ardoin
Cajun Music: Fais Do-Do (Columbia, 1994)
I'm Never Comin' Back: The Roots of Zydeco (Arhoolie, 1995)

Joan Armatrading
Greatest Hits (A&M, 1996)
Joan Armatrading (A&M, 1976)

Frankie Armstrong
Till the Grass O'ergrew the Corn (Fellside, 1996)

Clarence "Tom" Ashley
Anthology of American Folk Music (Folkways, 1952/Smithsonian/Folkways, 1997
The Original Folkways Recordings 1960–1962 (Smithsonian/Folkways, 1994)

Etta Baker
Instrumental Music of the Southern Appalachians (Tradition, 1956/Rykodisc, 1997)

Kenny Baker
Master Fiddler (County, 1993)

The Balfa Brothers
The Balfa Brothers Play Traditional Cajun Music, Vols. 1 & 2 (Swallow, 1987)

E.C. Ball and Orna Ball
E.C. Ball with Orna Ball (Rounder, 1996)
High Atmosphere (Rounder, 1995)

The Band
The Band (Capitol, 1969)
Moondog Matinee (Capitol, 1973)
Music from Big Pink (Capitol, 1968)
Rock of Ages (Capitol, 1972)

Mary Bergin
Feadoga Stain (Gael Linn, 1976/Shanachie, 1992)

Lou and Peter Berryman
Double Yodel (Cornbelt Records, 1995)

Tony Bird
Sorry Africa (Rounder, 1991)

Blind Blake
The Master of Ragtime Guitar: Essential Recordings (Indigo Records, 1996)

Michael Bloomfield
Highway 61 Revisited (Columbia, 1965)

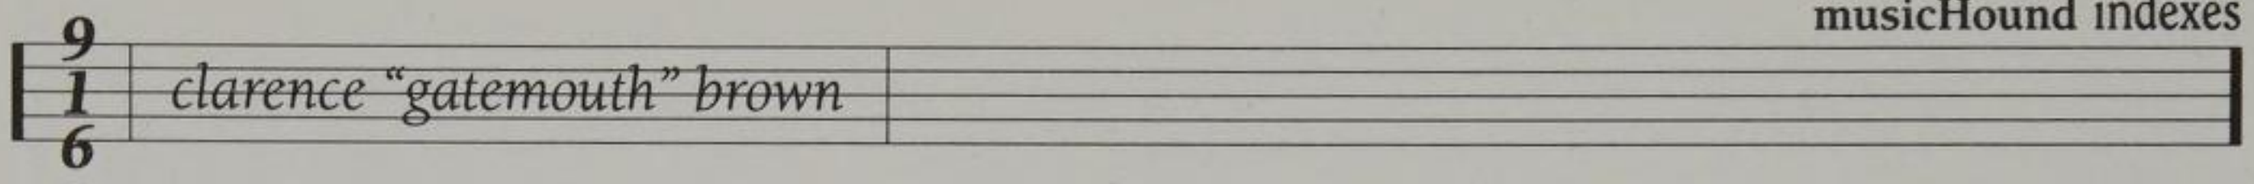
Dock Boggs
Country Blues (Revenant, 1998)

The Bothy Band
The Bothy Band 1975 (Mulligan, 1975/Green Linnet, 1983)
Old Hag You Have Killed Me (Mulligan, 1976/Green Linnet, 1982)

Robin Huw Bowen
Kiss of Fire (Fflach, 1992/Firebird, 1994)

Boys of the Lough
The Boys of the Lough

Big Bill Broonzy
Big Bill's Blues (Portrait)
Blues in the Mississippi Night (Rykodisc, 1990)
Good Time Tonight (Columbia/Legacy, 1990)



Clarence "Gatemouth" Brown
The Original Peacock Recordings (Rounder, 1990)

Milton Brown and the Musical Brownies
The Complete Recordings of the Father of Western Swing: Milton Brown and the Musical Brownies 1932–1937 (Texas Rose Records, 1995)

Paul Brown
Old Time, New Times (Rounder, 1994)

Buffalo Springfield
Buffalo Springfield Again (Atco, 1967)

Jimmy Buffett
All the Greatest Hits (Prism Leisure, 1994)
Songs You Know by Heart: Jimmy Buffett's Greatest Hit(s) (MCA, 1985)

Kevin Burke
Andy Irvine, Paul Brady (Mulligan, 1976/Green Linnet, 1981)

Paul Butterfield Blues Band
Better Days (Bearsville, 1973)
The Box Set (Elektra, 1998)
East West Live (Winner, 1997)
The Paul Butterfield Blues Band (Elektra, 1965)

The Byrds
The Byrds (Columbia, 1990)
Mr. Tambourine Man (Columbia, 1965)
Sweetheart of the Rodeo (Columbia, 1968)

The Camp Creek Boys
Old Time, New Times (Rounder, 1994)
Old Time String Band (County, 1967/County, 1997)

The Carter Family
Anchored in Love: Their Complete Victor Recordings 1927–1928 (Rounder, 1993)
Country Music Hall of Fame Series (MCA, 1991)
Give Me the Roses While I Live: Their Complete Victor Recordings 1932–1933 (Rounder, 1997)
My Clinch Mountain Home: Their Complete Victor Recordings 1928–1929 (Rounder, 1993)
Sunshine in the Shadows: Their Complete Victor Recordings 1931–1932 (Rounder, 1996)
20 of the Best of the Carter Family (RCA International, 1984)
When the Roses Bloom in Dixieland: Their Complete Victor Recordings 1929–1930 (Rounder, 1995) Worried Man Blues: Their Complete Victor Recordings 1930 (Rounder, 1995)

Jason Carter
A Deeper Shade of Blue (Rounder, 1993)

Martin Carthy
Life and Limb (Topic/Green Linnet, 1991)
The Martin Carthy Collection (Green Linnet, 1993)

Johnny Cash
American Recordings (American, 1994)
Columbia Records, 1958–1986 (Columbia, 1987)
The Essential Johnny Cash, 1955–1983 (Columbia/Legacy, 1992)
The Sun Years (Sun/Rhino, 1990)

Rosanne Cash
King's Record Shop (Columbia, 1988)

Clifton Chenier
60 Minutes with the King of Zydeco (Arhoolie, 1988)
Zydeco Dynamite: The Clifton Chenier Anthology (Rhino, 1993)

The Chestnut Grove Quartet
The Legendary Chestnut Grove Quartet (County, 1994)

The Chuck Wagon Gang
The Chuck Wagon Gang Columbia Historic Edition (Columbia, 1984)

Clannad
Dulaman (Blackbird, 1976/Shanachie, 1988)

Eric Clapton
Layla and Other Assorted Love Songs (Polydor, 1970)

Gene Clark
Mr. Tambourine Man (Columbia, 1965/1996)
Turn! Turn! Turn! (Columbia, 1965/1996)

Michael Coleman
Michael Coleman (Gael-Linn/Viva Voce, 1992)

Albert Collins
Complete Imperial Recordings (EMI, 1991)
Frostbite (Alligator, 1980)
Frozen Alive! (Alligator, 1981)

Shirley Collins
Etchingham Steam Band (Fledg'ling, 1995)
For As Many As Will (Topic, 1978/Hokey Pokey, 1993)
Love, Death and the Lady (EMI, 1974)
Morris On (Island, 1972/Hannibal)
No Roses (BBC, 1971/Mooncrest, 1991)

Stompin' Tom Connors
Bud the Spud (Capitol/EMI Canada, 1969)
A Proud Canadian (Capitol/EMI Canada, 1990)

The Copper Family
Coppersongs 2 (Coppersongs, 1995)

Cordelia's Dad
Comet (Omnium, 1995)

The Country Gentlemen
Country Songs Old and New (Smithsonian/Folkways, 1960) Folk Songs and Bluegrass (Smithsonian/Folkways, 1961)

Country Joe and the Fish
Electric Music for the Mind and Body (Vanguard, 1967)

Crosby, Stills and Nash
Deja Vu (Atlantic, 1970)

J.D. Crowe
J.D. Crowe & the New South (Rounder, 1975)

The Rev. Gary Davis
The Complete Early Recordings of the Reverend Gary Davis (Yazoo, 1994)
Pure Religion and Bad Company (Smithsonian/Folkways, 1991)

Iris DeMent
Infamous Angel (Rounder, 1992/Warner Bros., 1993)
My Life (Warner Bros., 1994)

Dead Can Dance
Spleen and Ideal (4AD, 1985)

Geno Delafose
That's What I'm Talking About! (Rounder, 1996)

John Delafose
Blues Stay Away from Me (Rounder, 1993)
Joe Pete Got Two Women (Arhoolie, 1988)

The Delmore Brothers
Brown's Ferry Blues (County, 1995)
Freight Train Boogie (Ace, 1993)

Sand Mountain Blues (County, 1986)
When They Let the Hammer Down (Bear Family, 1984)

Sandy Denny
The BBC Sessions 1971–73 (Strange Fruit, 1997)
Fotheringay (Island, 1970)
Sandy (Island, 1972)
Who Knows Where the Time Goes? (Island, 1985)

Joe Derrane
Irish Accordion (Copley Records, 1993)

Bo Diddley
Bo Diddley/Go Bo Diddley (Chess/MCA, 1996)
Bo Diddley: His Best (MCA/Chess, 1997)
The EP Collection (See for Miles, 1991)

Robin and Barry Dransfield
Up to Now (Free Reed, 1997)

The Dubliners
Original Dubliners 1966–1969 (EMI, 1993)

Bob Dylan
Blonde on Blonde (Columbia, 1966)
Blood on the Tracks (Columbia, 1975)
Highway 61 Revisited (Columbia, 1965)

The Eagles
Hotel California (Asylum, 1976)
Their Greatest Hits, 1971–1975 (Asylum, 1975)

Ensemble Galilei
Following the Moon (Dorian, 1994)

Enya
Watermark (Reprise, 1989)

Sleepy John Estes
I Ain't Gonna Be Worried No More, 1929–41 (Yazoo, 1992)

Everly Brothers
Cadence Classics: Their 20 Greatest Hits (Rhino, 1985)

Fairport Convention
House Full (Hannibal, 1986)
Liege and Lief (A&M, 1969)
Unhalfbricking (Hannibal, 1969)
What We Did on Our Holidays (Hannibal, 1968)

Joseph Falcon and Cleoma Breaux Falcon
Abbeville Breakdown (Columbia, 1990)
Cajun Dance Party: Fais Do Do (Columbia, 1994)
Cleoma B. Falcon: A Cajun Music Classic (Jadfel, 1983)

Figgy Duff
Figgy Duff: A Retrospective, 1974–1993 (Amber Music, 1995)

Red Foley
Country Music Hall of Fame (MCA, 1991)

Canray Fontenot
La Musique Creole (Arhoolie, 1997)
Les Blues du Bayou (Melodeon, 1965)
Louisiana Hot Sauce, Creole Style (Arhoolie, 1992)

Jesse Fuller
Jazz, Folk Songs, Spirituals & Blues (Good Time Jazz, 1958/Original Blues Classics, 1993)

Dick Gaughan
Handful of Earth (Green Linnet, 1981/1992)

Frankie Gavin
Frankie Goes to Town (The Bee's Knees, 1989/Green Linnet, 1991)
A Tribute to Joe Cooley (Gael-Linn, 1986)

Gibson Brothers Band
Spread Your Wings (Hay Holler, 1995)

Steve Gillette & Cindy Mangsen
Voices (Flying Fish, 1990)
Voices of Winter (Gadfly Records, 1997)

Jimmie Dale Gilmore
After Awhile (Elektra Nonesuch, 1991)

Steve Goodman
No Big Surprise (Red Pajamas, 1994)

Vern Gosdin
Chiseled in Stone (Columbia, 1987)

Grateful Dead
American Beauty (Warner Bros., 1970)
Two from the Vault (Grateful Dead Records, 1992) Workingman's Dead (Warner Bros., 1970)

Bruce Greene
Five Miles of Ellum Wood (BG Records, 1996)

Nanci Griffith
Last of the True Believers (Rounder/Philo, 1986)
One Fair Summer Evening (MCA, 1988)
Other Voices, Other Rooms (Elektra, 1993)

Woody Guthrie
Bound for Glory (Folkways, 1967)
Dust Bowl Ballads (Victor, 1940/Rounder, 1988)
Library of Congress Recordings (Rounder, 1988)

Hackberry Ramblers
Early Recordings: 1935–1948 (Old Timey, 1988)

Emmylou Harris
At the Ryman (Reprise, 1992)
Last Date (Warner Bros., 1982)
Roses in the Snow (Warner Bros., 1980)
Trio (Warner Bros., 1987)
Wrecking Ball (Asylum, 1995)

John Hartford
Mark Twang (Flying Fish, 1976)
Me Oh My, How the Time Does Fly (Flying Fish, 1987)

Ted Hawkins
Songs from Venice Beach (Evidence, 1995)

Hazel & Alice
Hazel & Alice (Rounder, 1973/1995)

Helicon
Highlands (Dorian, 1997)
Horizons: Traditional Music from around the World (Dorian Discovery, 1992)

Chris Hillman
Bakersfield Bound (Sugar Hill, 1996)

The Holy Modal Rounders
Have Moicy! (Rounder, 1976)

John Lee Hooker
The Real Folk Blues (Chess, 1966)
The Ultimate Collection (Rhino, 1991)

The Hoosier Hot Shots
Rural Rhythm 1935-1942 (Columbia/Legacy, 1992)

Lightnin' Hopkins
Blues Train (Mainstream, 1991)
The Complete Aladdin Sessions (EMI, 1991)
The Gold Star Sessions, Volume 1 (Arhoolie, 1990)
The Gold Star Sessions, Volume 2 (Arhoolie, 1990)
The Herald Recordings (Collectables, 1989)

The Herald Recordings, Volume 2 (Collectables, 1993)
Lightnin' Hopkins (Smithsonian/Folkways, 1990)
Lightnin' in New York (Candid, 1988)
Swarthmore Concert (Bluesville Prestige/Fantasy, 1993)
Texas Blues (Arhoolie, 1992)
Texas Blues (Arhoolie, 1994)

Hothouse Flowers
People (London, 1988)

Mississippi John Hurt
Avalon Blues: The Complete 1928 OKeh Recordings (Columbia/Legacy, 1996)

Ashley Hutchings
Battle of the Field (Island, 1976)
The Prospect Before Us (EMI/Harvest, 1976/Hannibal, 1996)
Rise Up Like the Sun (EMI/Harvest 1978)

Incredible String Band
The 5000 Spirits or the Layers of the Onion (Elektra, 1967/Hannibal, 1994)

Irish Tradition
The Corner House (Green Linnet, 1978)
Makin' the Rounds (Green Linnet, 1981)

Andy Irvine
Andy Irvine & Paul Brady (Mulligan, 1976/Green Linnet)

Burl Ives
Greatest Hits! (MCA, 1996)

Skip James
Complete Early Recordings (Yazoo, 1994)
She Lyin' (Genes, 1964/1993)

Bert Jansch
Bert Jansch (Transatlantic, 1965)
Bert Jansch/It Don't Bother Me (Essential, 1996)
The Best of Bert Jansch (Shanachie, 1980)

Tommy Jarrell
Old-Time Fiddling & Clawhammer Banjo (Heritage)
Rainbow Sign (County)
Sail Away Ladies (County, 1998)
Tommy & Fred: Best Fiddle-Banjo Duets Played by Tommy Jarrell & Fred Cockerham (County, 1992)

Blind Lemon Jefferson
Blind Lemon Jefferson (Milestone, 1992)
Blind Lemon Jefferson: Complete Works 1926–29 (Document, 1991)

Robert Johnson
King of the Delta Blues Singers (Columbia, 1961)
Robert Johnson: The Complete Recordings (Columbia, 1990)

Rickie Lee Jones
Rickie Lee Jones (Warner Bros., 1979)
Traffic from Paradise (Geffen, 1993)

Seán Keane
Contentment Is Wealth (Green Linnet, 1985)

Albert King
Born under a Bad Sign (Atlantic, 1967)

B.B. King
The Best of B.B. King, Volume I (Flair/Virgin, 1991) Live at the Regal (MCA, 1971)

Carole King
A Natural Woman: The Ode Collection 1968–1976 (Legacy, 1994)
Tapestry (Ode, 1971)

The Kingston Trio
The Capitol Years (Capitol, 1995)

John Kirkpatrick
Force of Habit (Omnium, 1996)
Plain Capers (Free Reed, 1976/Topic, 1996)
A Short History of John Kirkpatrick (Topic, 1994)

Leo Kottke
Six and Twelve-String Guitar (Takoma, 1969/Rhino 1994)

Alison Krauss
Now That I've Found You: A Collection (Rounder, 1995)

Doyle Lawson
Rock My Soul (Sugar Hill, 1981)

Eddie LeJeune
It's in the Blood (Rounder, 1991)

Iry LeJeune
Cajun's Greatest: The Definitive Collection (Ace, 1994)

Furry Lewis
Complete Recorded Works (1927–29) (Document, 1990)
Shake 'Em on Down (Fantasy, 1972)

Gordon Lightfoot
Gord's Gold (Warner/Reprise, 1975)

David Lindley
El Rayo-X (Asylum, 1981)

Mance Lipscomb
Texas Songster (Arhoolie, 1993)
Texas Songster Volume II: You Got to Reap What You Sow (Arhoolie, 1964, 1993)

Lonesome River Band
One Step Forward (Sugar Hill, 1996)

Louvin Brothers
Tragic Songs of Life (Capitol, 1996)
When I Stop Dreaming: The Best of the Louvin Brothers (Razor & Tie, 1995)

Love
Forever Changes (Elektra, 1967)

Lovin' Spoonful
Anthology (Rhino, 1990)

Dougie MacLean
Putamayo Presents the Dougie MacLean Collection (Putamayo, 1995)
Singing Land (Dunkeld Records, 1986)

Magical Strings
Crossing to Skellig (Flying Fish, 1990)
Islands Calling (Earthbeat! Records, 1996)

Jimmy Martin
Jimmy Martin & the Sunny Mountain Boys (Bear Family, 1994)
You Don't Know My Mind (Rounder, 1990)

The Del McCoury Band
Classic Bluegrass (Rebel, 1991)
A Deeper Shade of Blue (Rounder, 1993)

Mississippi Fred McDowell
The Blues Roll On (Atlantic, 1959)
Roots of the Blues (Atlantic, 1959)

Eileen McGann
Turn It Around (Dragonwing, 1991)

Kate & Anna McGarrigle
Dancer with Bruised Knees (Hannibal, 1977)

Dennis McGee
Cajun Music: Fais Do-Do (Columbia, 1994)
The Complete Recordings 1929–1930 (Yazoo, 1994)
La Vielle Musique Acadienne (Swallow, 1983)

Susan McKeown & the Chanting House
Bones (Sheila-na-Gig, 1995/1-800-PRIME-CD, 1996) Bushes and Briars (Alula, 1998)

Peter and Wendy (Alula, 1997)

Peter McLaughlin
The Oak and the Laurel (Rounder, 1995)
True Stories (Rounder, 1993)

Brian McNeill
The Back o' the North Wind (Greentrax, 1991)

Blind Willie McTell
Atlanta 12 String (Atlantic, 1991)
Blind Willie McTell: Complete Recorded Works (1927–35), Volumes I–III (Document, 1990)
The Definitive Blind Willie McTell (Columbia/Legacy, 1994)

Memphis Minnie
Hoodoo Lady (1933–37) (Columbia/Roots 'n' Blues, 1991)
I Ain't No Bad Gal 1941 (CBS/Portrait Masters, 1988)
Me and My Chauffeur 1935–46 (E.P.M. Blues Collection, 1997)

Roger Miller
King of the Road: The Genius of Roger Miller (Mercury, 1995)

Mississippi Sheiks
Stop and Listen (Yazoo, 1992)

Joni Mitchell
Blue (Reprise, 1971)
Court and Spark (Asylum, 1974)
Turbulent Indigo (Warner Bros., 1994)

Matt Molloy
Contentment Is Wealth (Green Linnet, 1985)
Matt Molloy (Green Linnet, 1976)
Stony Steps (Green Linnet, 1987)

The Mollys
Hat Trick (Apolkalips Now, 1997)

Bruce Molsky
Lost Boy (Rounder, 1996)

Bill Monroe & His Blue Grass Boys
Bill Monroe—Bluegrass 1950–1958 (Bear Family, 1989)
The Essential Bill Monroe & His Blue Grass Boys 1945–1949 (Columbia/Legacy, 1992)
Feast Here Tonight (RCA/Bluebird, 1975)
The Music of Bill Monroe from 1936 to 1994 (MCA, 1994) 16 Gems (Columbia, 1996)

Patsy Montana
Columbia Country Classics, Volume I: The Golden Age (Columbia, 1990)

Van Morrison
Astral Weeks (Warner Bros., 1968)
Moondance (Warner Bros., 1970)

Pete Morton
Courage, Love, and Grace (Harbourtown, 1996/Rounder, 1997)

Maria Muldaur
Maria Muldaur (Reprise, 1973/Warner Archives, 1993)

The Nashville Bluegrass Band
To Be His Child (Rounder, 1987)
Unleashed (Sugar Hill, 1996)
Waitin' for the Hard Times to Go (Sugar Hill, 1993)

Willie Nelson
Nite Life: Greatest Hits and Rare Tracks, 1959–1971 (Rhino, 1990)
Phases and Stages (Atlantic, 1974)
Red Headed Stranger (Columbia, 1975)
Revolutions of Time . . . the Journey (Columbia/Legacy, 1995)
Shotgun Willie (Atlantic, 1973)
Shotgun Willie/Phases and Stages (Mobile Fidelity Sound Lab, 1993) Who'll Buy My Memories? (The IRS Tapes) (Sony, 1991)

The New Lost City Ramblers
The New Lost City Ramblers, the Early Years, 1958–1962 (Smithsonian/Folkways, 1991)
The New Lost City Ramblers Volume II, 1963–1973: Out Standing in Their Field (Smithsonian/Folkways, 1993)

Maire Ni Chathasaigh
The New Strung Harp (Temple, 1985/1997)

The Nitty Gritty Dirt Band
Will the Circle Be Unbroken (Liberty, 1972)

Laura Nyro
The First Songs (Columbia, 1973)
New York Tendaberry (Columbia, 1969)

Mark O'Connor
Appalachia Waltz (Sony Classical, 1996)

Mary Margaret O'Hara
Miss America (Virgin, 1988/KOCH International, 1996)

Phil Ochs
Farewells & Fantasies (Elektra Traditions/Rhino, 1997)
In Concert (Elektra, 1966/Rhino, 1995)

Ossian
The Best of Ossian (Iona, 1994)
Borders (Iona, 1984)
When First I Went to Caledonia (Iona, 1988)

The Oyster Band
Ride (PolyGram, 1989)

Gabby Pahinui
The Gabby Pahinui Hawaiian Band, Volume 1 (Edsel, 1975/1987)

The Pahinui Brothers
The Gabby Pahinui Hawaiian Band, Volume 1 (Edsel, 1975/1987)

Gram Parsons
G.P./Grievous Angel (Reprise, 1990)

Charley Patton
King of the Delta Blues (Yazoo/Shanachie, 1991)

Pentangle
Basket of Light (Reprise/Transatlantic, 1969/Castle, 1996)
Cruel Sister (Reprise, 1971/Castle, 1996)
Sweet Child (Reprise, 1968/Castle, 1996)

Tommy Peoples
Matt Molloy, Paul Brady, Tommy Peoples (Mulligan, 1978/Green Linnet, 1985)

Peter, Paul & Mary
Eugene McCarthy for President—If You Love Your Country (1968)
In Concert (Warner Bros., 1964)
Peter, Paul, and Mary (Warner Bros., 1962)
Peter, Paul, and Mommy (Warner Bros., 1969)

Al Petteway
A Scottish Christmas (Maggie's Music, 1996)

Bruce U. "Utah" Phillips
Good Though! (Philo, 1973)
Heart Songs: The Old-Time Country Songs of Utah Phillips (Rounder, 1997)

Planxty
After the Break (Tara, 1979)
Planxty (Polydor, 1973/Shanachie, 1979)

Dirk Powell
Deux Voyages (Rounder, 1996)

John Prine
John Prine (Atlantic, 1971)
The Missing Years (Oh Boy, 1991)

Raffi
Singable Songs Collection (Rounder, 1996)

"Cheese" Read
Cajun House Party: C'ez Cheese (Arhoolie, 1994)
Folksongs of the Louisiana Acadians (Arhoolie, 1994)

Otis Redding
Live in Europe (Stax, 1967)
Otis Blue (Stax, 1965)
The Very Best of Otis Redding (Rhino, 1992)

Jean Redpath
Jean Redpath (Philo, 1975/1989)
Lowlands (Philo, 1994)
The Songs of Robert Burns, Volumes I and II (Philo, 1976, 1980/1996)

John Renbourn
John Renbourn and Bert Jansch (Cambra, 1985)
Sir John Alot of Merry England (Shanachie, 1992)

Don Reno & Red Smiley
Reno & Smiley & the Tennessee Cut-Ups, 1951–1959 (King, 1993)

Sue Richards
Hazel Grove (Maggie's Music, 1995)

Bonnie Rideout
Celtic Circles (Maggie's Music, 1994)
Kindred Spirits (Maggie's Music, 1996)
A Scottish Christmas (Maggie's Music, 1996)

Jimmie Rodgers
First Sessions, 1927–1928 (Rounder, 1990)

Aldus Roger
A Cajun Legend (La Louisiana, 1995)
Marie/Be Careful, You're Breaking My Heart (Swallow, c. 1966) Plays the French Music of South Louisiana (La Louisiana, 1995)

Stan Rogers
Fogarty's Cove (Fogarty's Cove Music, 1977)
Northwest Passage (Fogarty's Cove Music, 1981)

Linda Ronstadt
Heart like a Wheel (Capitol, 1974)
Prisoner in Disguise (Asylum, 1975)
Trio (Warner Bros., 1987)

Saffire—The Uppity Blues Women
The Alligator Records Christmas Collection (Alligator, 1992)

Maggie Sansone
A Scottish Christmas (Maggie's Music, 1996)

The Saw Doctors
All the Way from Tuam (Shamtown, 1992)

Helen Schneyer
Somber, Sacred & Silly (Straight Arrow, 1992)

Tracy Schwarz & Ginny Hawker
Deep Hollows and High Ridges (Marimac, 1995)

Mike Seeger
American Banjo Scruggs Style (Folkways, 1957)

Pete Seeger
A Link in the Chain (Columbia, 1996)
We Shall Overcome (Columbia, 1989)

Shooglenifty
A Whiskey Lass (Greentrax, 1996)

Jane Siberry
When I Was a Boy (Reprise, 1993)

Paul Siebel
Paul Siebel (Philo/Rounder, 1995)

Paul Simon
Graceland (Warner Bros., 1986)

Simon & Garfunkel
Bookends (Columbia, 1968)
Collected Works (Columbia, 1990)

Ricky Skaggs
Highways and Heartaches (Epic, 1982)

Patrick Sky
Songs That Made America Famous (Adelphi, 1997)

Bessie Smith
Bessie Smith (Time-Life, 1982)
The Complete Recordings, Volume II (Columbia/Legacy, 1991)
The Complete Recordings, Volume III (Columbia/Legacy, 1992)

Chirps Smith
Backside of Buncombe (Marimac, 1989)
The Volo Bogtrotters (Marimac, 1990)

Michael Smith
Michael Smith/Love Stories (Rounder, 1992)

Leo Soileau
Cajun String Bands: Cajun Breakdown (Arhoolie, 1997)
Pioneer Cajun Fiddler (1929–37) (Arhoolie, 1993)
Raise Yur Window—A Cajun Music Anthology, Volume II (CMF, 1994)

Sons of the Pioneers
Country Music Hall of Fame (MCA, 1991)

Bill Spence
The Hammered Dulcimer (Front Hall, 1990)

The Stanley Brothers
Angel Band: The Classic Mercury Recordings (Mercury, 1995, comp.)
The Complete Columbia Stanley Brothers (Columbia/Legacy, 1996)

Andy Statman
Between Heaven and Earth: Music of the Jewish Mystics (Shanachie, 1997)

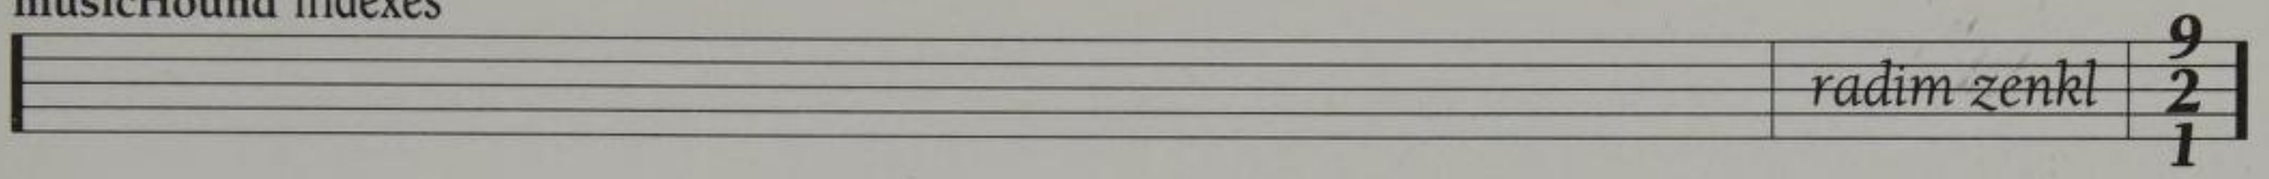
Jody Stecher & Kate Brislin
Heart Songs: The Old Time Country Songs of Utah Phillips (Rounder 1997)
A Song That Will Linger (Rounder, 1989)
Stay Awhile (Rounder 1995)

Steeleye Span
Please to See the King (B&C, 1971/Shanachie)
Silly Sisters (Chrysalis, 1976/Shanachie, 1988)

Cat Stevens
Classics—Volume 24 (A&M, 1987)
Tea for the Tillerman (A&M, 1971)

Andy M. Stewart
Dublin Lady (Green Linnet, 1987)

John Stewart
California Bloodlines/Willard Minus 2 (Bear Family, 1989)
The Phoenix Concerts—Live (Capitol, 1974/One Way, 1997)



Alan Stivell
70/95 ZOOM (Dreyfus, 1997)
Chemins de Terre (Mercury, 1973)

Don Stover
Lilly Brothers and Don Stover: Early Recordings (Rebel, 1991) Things in Life (Rounder, 1995)

Dave Swarbrick
Folk on 2 (Cooking Vinyl, 1996)
Smiddyburn/Flittin' (Raven, 1981/1996)
Swarbrick/Swarbrick II (Transatlantic, 1976–77/Castle, 1996)

June Tabor
Abyssinians (Topic, 1983)
Silly Sisters (Chrysalis, 1976)

James Talley
Got No Bread/Tryin' like the Devil (Bear Family, 1989)

Sonny Terry & Brownie McGhee
Brownie McGhee and Sonny Terry Sing (Smithsonian/Folkways, 1958/Rounder, 1990)

Rosetta Tharpe
Sister R. Tharpe (MCA, 1975)
Sister R. Tharpe (Rosetta, 1988)
Sister Rosetta Tharpe (Frémeaux & Associates, 1994)
Sister Rosetta Tharpe Complete Recorded Works (Document, 1995)

Henry "Ragtime Texas" Thomas
Henry Thomas 1927–29 (Document, 1991)
Texas Worried Blues (Yazoo, 1990)

Eric & Suzy Thompson
The Young Fogies (Rounder, 1994)

Richard Thompson
Shoot out the Lights (Hannibal, 1982)

Horace Trahan
Ossun Blues (Swallow, 1996)

Trian
Trian (Flying Fish, 1991)

Ernest Tubb
Country Music Hall of Fame (1991, MCA)

Townes Van Zandt
The Late Great Townes Van Zandt (Poppy, 1973/Rhino, 1994)
Live at the Old Quarter, Houston, Texas (Tomato, 1977)

Suzanne Vega
Suzanne Vega (A&M, 1985)

Tom Waits
Closing Time (Asylum, 1973)
Rain Dogs (Island, 1985)

Doug & Jack Wallin
Family Songs and Stories from the North Carolina Mountains (Smithsonian/Folkways, 1995)

Don Walser
Rolling Stone from Texas (Watermelon, 1994)

The Waterboys
Fisherman's Blues (Chrysalis, 1988)
This Is the Sea (Chrysalis, 1985)

Muddy Waters
Complete Plantation Recordings: The Historic 1941–42 Library of Congress Field Recordings (MCA/Chess, 1993)
Fathers and Sons (MCA/Chess, 1989)
His Best 1947–55 (MCA/Chess, 1997)
Muddy "Mississippi" Waters Live (CBS/Blue Sky, 1989)

Waterson:Carthy
Norma Waterson (Rykodisc, 1996)

Doc Watson
Bill Monroe and Doc Watson: Live Duet Recordings 1963–80 off the Record, Volume II (Smithsonian/Folkways, 1993)
Doc Watson and Clarence Ashley: The Original Folkways Recordings: 1960–62 (Smithsonian/Folkways, 1994)
The Doc Watson Family (Sugar Hill, 1994)
Doc Watson: The Vanguard Years (Vanguard, 1995)
The Watson Family (Smithsonian/Folkways, 1990)

Kitty Wells
Country Music Hall of Fame (MCA, 1991)

Camille West
Mother Tongue (Mother Tongue, 1995)

Bukka White
The Complete Bukka White (Columbia/Legacy, 1994) Legacy of the Blues (Sonet, 1969)

David Wilcox
Home Again,.for the First Time (A&M, 1991)
How Did You Find Me Here (A&M, 1989)

Robert Wilkins
The Original Rolling Stone (Yazoo, 1989)

Dar Williams
Mortal City (Razor & Tie, 1996)

Hank Williams
The Collectors' Edition (Mercury, 1987)
40 Greatest Hits (Polydor, 1978)
The Hits Volume I (Mercury, 1994)
The Hits Volume II (Mercury, 1995)
The Original Singles Collection . . . Plus (Polydor, 1990)

Lucinda Williams
Lucinda Williams (Rough Trade, 1988)

Bob Wills
Anthology, 1935–73 (Rhino, 1991)

Kate Wolf
Close to You (Kaleidoscope, 1981/Rhino, 1994)
Give Yourself to Love (Kaleidoscope, 1985/Rhino, 1994)
Gold in California (Kaleidoscope, 1986/Rhino, 1994)

Wolfstone
The Chase (Iona, 1992/Green Linnet, 1994)

Young Tradition
Galleries (Transatlantic, 1968)
The Holly Bears the Crown (Fledg'ling, 1969/1995)
No Relation (Transatlantic, 1977)

Neil Young
After the Gold Rush (Reprise, 1970)
Tonight's the Night (Reprise, 1975)

Radim Zenkl
Galactic Mandolin (Acoustic Disc, 1991)

Can't remember what band a certain musician or vocalist is in? Wondering if a person has been in more than one band? The Band Member Index will guide you to the appropriate entry (or entries).

Abernathy, Barry See IIIrd Tyme Out

Abrams, Rick See Piney Creek Weasels

Abshire, Nathan See The Balfa Brothers/Freres Balfa

Adams, Tom See Johnson Mountain Boys; The Lynn Morris Band

Adegbalola, Gaye See Saffire—The Uppity Blues Women

Agee, Stafford "Lil D" See The ReBirth Brass Band

Adler, Arni See Electric Bonsai Band/Uncle Bonsai

Aguillard, Janet Mott See Sundown Playboys/Lesa Cormier & the Sundown Playboys

Aharon, Michael See Trapezoid

Alesi, Tommy See Beausoleil

Alfred, Morten See The American Cafe Orchestra

Allcock, Martin See Fairport Convention

Allemond, Philip See Tasso

Allen, Johnny Ray See The subdudes

Allred, Rick See The Country Gentlemen

Ambler, Mark See Tom Robinson Band/Tom Robinson/Sector 27

Amedee, Steve See The subdudes

Amidon, Mary Alice See The Amidons

Amidon, Peter See The Amidons

Amidon, Sam See The Amidons

Amidon, Stefan See The Amidons

Amos, Bob See Front Range

Anders, Robin Adnan See Boiled in Lead

Anderson, Eric See Piney Creek Weasels

Anderson, Greg See Whirligig

Anderson, John See The Fugs

Anderson, Keith "Wolf" See The ReBirth Brass Band

Anderson, Peter See Whistlebinkies

Anderson, Shannon See Whirligig

Andrews, "Lil" Glenn See The ReBirth Brass Band

Andrews, Molly See Duck Baker and Molly Andrews

Anger, Darol See Psychograss

Anglin, Jack See Johnnie & Jack

Anton, Alan See Cowboy Junkies

Antonakos, Stephen B. See Five Chinese Brothers

Appino, Pat See Mill Run Dulcimer Band

Applin, Herb See Joe Val & the New England Bluegrass Boys

Arbo, Rani See Salamander Crossing

Ardoin, Chris See Chris Ardoin/Chris Ardoin and Double Clutchin'

Ardoin, Sean See Chris Ardoin/Chris Ardoin and Double Clutchin'

Arlin, Bobby See The Leaves

Armerding, Jake See Northern Lights

Armerding, Taylor See Northern Lights

Armitage, Dave See Blowzabella

Armstrong, Billy See Sons of the Pioneers

Armstrong, Paul See Country Joe and the Fish

Armstrong, Robert See The Cheap Suit Serenaders

Arnold, Jerome See Paul Butterfield Blues Band/Paul Butterfield's Better Days

Arthur, Danny See The Bing Brothers

Artzner, Greg See Magpie

Ashbrook, Karen See Ceoltoiri

Asher, Peter See Peter & Gordon

Atwater, Aubrey See Atwater-Donnelly

Audain, Courtney See Timbuk 3

August, Kent Perre See Zydeco Force

Auldridge, Mike See Chesapeake; The Seldom Scene

Austin, Kenneth See The ReBirth Brass Band

Austin, Tim See Lonesome River Band

B., Stevie See Tom Robinson Band/Tom Robinson/Sector 27

Babineaux, Murnell See Sundown Playboys/Lesa Cormier & the Sundown Playboys

Baggott, Ed See Red Mountain White Trash

Bailey, James See Country Ham

Bain, Aly See Boys of the Lough

Baird, Edward See Amazing Blondel

Baker, Kenny See Kenny Baker/Kenny Baker and Josh Graves

Baker, Duck See Duck Baker/Duck Baker and Molly Andrews

Baker, John Lee See Dry Branch Fire Squad

Baldassari, Butch See Lonesome Standard Time/Larry Cordle

Baldwin, Ken See Kentucky Standard Band

Balfa, Burkeman See The Balfa Brothers/Freres Balfa

Balfa, Christine See Balfa Toujours; Magnolia Sisters

Balfa, Dewey See The Balfa Brothers/Freres Balfa

Balfa, Freres See The Balfa Brothers/Freres Balfa

Balfa, Harry See The Balfa Brothers/Freres Balfa

Balfa, Rodney See The Balfa Brothers/Freres Balfa

Balfa, Tony See Balfa Toujours

Balfa, Will See The Balfa Brothers/Freres Balfa

Ball, E.C. See E.C. Ball and Orna Ball

Ball, Orna See E.C. Ball and Orna Ball

Ballard, Mary Anne See Baltimore Consort

Bankston, Emmett See Earl Johnson/Earl Johnson & His Dixie Entertainers/Earl Johnson & His Clodhoppers

Barber, Junior See Gibson Brothers Band

Barber, Mike See Gibson Brothers Band

Barenberg, Russ See Fiddle Fever

Barlow, Becky See Farmer's Daughters

Barlow, Bruce See Commander Cody & His Lost Planet Airmen

Barnes, Brian See Stoney Lonesome

Barnes, Danny See Bad Livers

Barnes, Jeffrey See Brave Combo

Barnes, Kevin See Stoney Lonesome

Barnes, Micah See The Nylons

Barnes, Peter See Bare Necessities

Barnwell, Ysaye Maria See Sweet Honey in the Rock

Barr, Ralph See The Nitty Gritty Dirt Band

Barrand, Tony See John Roberts & Tony Barrand

Barron, Oz See Northern Lights

Barron, Ronnie See Paul Butterfield Blues Band/Paul Butterfield's Better Days

Barthol, Bruce See Country Joe and the Fish

Barton, Cathy See Cathy Barton and Dave Para

Barwick, Kathy See The All Girl Boys

Bass, David See The Freight Hoppers

Battin, Skip See The Byrds; Flying Burrito Brothers

Battle, John See The Fairfield Four

Baucom, Terry See Boone Creek; IIIrd Tyme Out

Baxter, Dorothy See Good Ol' Persons

Bayne, Iain See Runrig

Beam, John See The Double Decker String Band

Beamer, Kapono See Keola Beamer/Keola and Kapono Beamer/Nona Beamer

Beamer, Keola See Keola Beamer/Keola and Kapono Beamer/Nona Beamer

Beamer, Nona See Keola Beamer/Keola and Kapono Beamer/Nona Beamer

Beck, Don See Flying Burrito Brothers

Beck, John See The Leaves

Beckley, Gerry See America

Bedford, Brian See Artisan

Bedford, Jacey See Artisan

Beland, John See Flying Burrito Brothers

Bell, Delia See Delia Bell and Bill Grant

Bell, Derek See The Chieftains

Bell, Richard See The Band

Bellamy, Peter See Young Tradition

Belland, Bruce See The Four Preps

Belzer, Bill See Uncle Tupelo/Wilco/Son Volt

Bence, Bob See Kendra Ward & Bob Bence

Benford, Mac See Mac Benford/Mac Benford and the Woodshed All-Stars

Bengtson, Rose See Ebin-Rose

Benson, Ray See Asleep at the Wheel

Benson, Wayne See IIIrd Tyme Out

Benzie, Ian F. See Old Blind Dogs

Berard, Al See Basin Brothers

Berg, Jeff See Free Hot Lunch!

Bergin, Mary See Mary Bergin/Dordan

Bergmann, Ken See Klezmorim

Berkstresser, Paul Reed See Country Ham

Berline, Byron See Flying Burrito Brothers

Berryman, Lou See Lou and Peter Berryman

Berryman, Peter See Lou and Peter Berryman

Bibey, Alan See IIIrd Tyme Out

Bing, Dave See The Bing Brothers

Bing, Mike See The Bing Brothers

Bing, Tim See The Bing Brothers

Bishop, Elvin See Paul Butterfield Blues Band/Paul Butterfield's Better Days

Black, Bobby See Commander Cody & His Lost Planet Airmen

Black, Frances See The Black Family/Shay, Michael, and Martin Black

Black, Jeremy See Mouth Music

Black, Martin See The Black Family/Shay, Michael, and Martin Black

Black, Mary See The Black Family/Shay, Michael, and Martin Black

Black, Michael See The Black Family/Shay, Michael, and Martin Black

Black, Shay See The Black Family/Shay, Michael, and Martin Black

Blackman, Tewee See Memphis Jug Band/Picaninny Jug Band/Jed Davenport & His Beale Street Jug Band

Blackmar, Jeanie McLerie See Bayou Seco/Bayou Eclectico

Blackwell, Kenny See The Laurel Canyon Ramblers

Blair, Warren See The Bluegrass Cardinals

Blake, Norman See Norman Blake/Norman & Nancy Blake/Norman Blake and Tony Rice

Blake, Nancy See Norman Blake/Norman & Nancy Blake/Norman Blake and Tony Rice

Blakey, Colin See The Waterboys

Blanchard, Keith See Basin Brothers

Blisard, John See The Bing Brothers

Bliss, Laurel See Cliff Perry & Laurel Bliss

Blizard, Ralph See Ralph Blizard/Ralph Blizard and the New Southern Ramblers

Bloomfield, Michael See Paul Butterfield Blues Band/Paul Butterfield's Better Days

Bohan, Gary See Klezmer Conservatory Band

Bok, Gordon See Bok, Muir & Trickett

Bolick, Bill See Blue Sky Boys

Bolick, Earl See Blue Sky Boys

Bolton, Adie See Ceolbeg

Bonnie Hearne See Bill & Bonnie Hearne

Boond, Peter See Ceolbeg

Boone, Steve See Lovin' Spoonful

Borella, Rick See Acousticats

Borowski, Johnny See Milton Brown and the Musical Brownies

Boulding, Pam See Magical Strings

Boulding, Phil See Magical Strings

Bourke, Ciaran See The Dubliners

Bovee, Bob See Bob Bovee and Gail Heil

Bowden, Richard See Austin Lounge Lizards

Bowman, Ronnie See The Bluegrass Cardinals; Lonesome River Band

Bradley, Alton See Golden Gate Quartet/Golden Gate Jubilee Quartet

Bradley, Carrie See Ed's Redeeming Qualities

Bradley, Paula See Rhythm Rats

Brady, Pat See Sons of the Pioneers

Brady, Paul See The Johnstons

Brasseaux, Dwayne See Basin Brothers

Breaux, Jimmy See Beausoleil

Brembley, Paul See Golden Gate Quartet/Golden Gate Jubilee Quartet

Brennan, Máire See Clannad

Bressler, Judy See Klezmer Conservatory Band

Brewer, Finley J. Sr. See Pap Brewer/Finley J. Brewer Sr.

Bridgeman, Noel See The Waterboys

Brigante, Merle See The Nitty Gritty Dirt Band

Bright, Fletcher See Fletcher Bright Fiddle Band

Bright, George See Fletcher Bright Fiddle Band

Brislin, Kate See Any Old Time String Band

Brock, Jesse See The Lynn Morris Band

Brooks, Jim See Ensemble Galilei

Brody, David See Klezmer Conservatory Band

Brooke, Jonatha See The Story

Brooks, Brian See The House Band

Brooks, Michael See The ReBirth Brass Band

Brooks, Orville See Golden Gate Quartet/Golden Gate Jubilee Quartet

Broughman, Joey See The Bing Brothers

Brousard, Kevin See Roy Carrier/Roy Carrier and the Night Rockers

Broussard, Herbert See Zydeco Force

Broussard, Jeffery See Zydeco Force

Broussard, Shelton See Zydeco Force

Brower, Cecil See Milton Brown and the Musical Brownies

Brown, Alison See Northern Lights

Brown, Derwood See Milton Brown and the Musical Brownies

Brown, J.H. See Herschel Brown/J.H. Brown

Brown, Milton See Milton Brown and the Musical Brownies

Browne, Jackson See The Nitty Gritty Dirt Band

Brozman, Bob See The Cheap Suit Serenaders

Bruner, Cliff See Milton Brown and the Musical Brownies

Bryant, Steve See Boone Creek

Bryson, Bill See The Bluegrass Cardinals; The Laurel Canyon Ramblers

Bub, Mike See Lonesome Standard Time/Larry Cordle; The Del McCoury Band/The McCoury Brothers/Ronnie & Rob McCoury

Buchanan, Buck See Milton Brown and the Musical Brownies

Buchanan, Jim See The Greenbriar Boys; Joe Val & the New England Bluegrass Boys

Buckhannon, Curtis See The Buckhannon Brothers

Buckhannon, Dennis See The Buckhannon Brothers

Buckner, Clay See Red Clay Ramblers

Bulla, Jenny Anne See Luke and Jenny Anne Bulla

Bulla, Luke See Luke and Jenny Anne Bulla

Bullock, Robin See Helicon

Bunnell, Dewey See America

Buono, Michael See The Nitty Gritty Dirt Band; Ranch Romance

Burke, Kevin See Patrick Street

Burleson, Jason See Blue Highway

Burns, Annie See The Burns Sisters

Burns, Bobby See Special Consensus

Burns, Jeannie See The Burns Sisters

Burns, Kenneth "Jethro" See Homer & Jethro

Burns, Marie See Mac Benford/Mac Benford and the Woodshed All-Stars; The Burns Sisters

Burse, Charlie See Memphis Jug Band/Picaninny Jug Band/Jed Davenport & His Beale Street Jug Band

Burton, Alice See Kentucky Standard Band

Burton, Barry "Byrd" See The Amazing Rhythm Aces

Bush, Roger See Flying Burrito Brothers; The Kentucky Colonels/The Country Boys

Bush, Sam See The New Grass Revival; Strength in Numbers

Buskin, David See David Buskin/Buskin and Batteau

Butler, Joe See Lovin' Spoonful

Butterfield, Paul See Paul Butterfield Blues Band/Paul Butterfield's Better Days

Butts, Wes See Sunshine Skiffle Band

Byrne, Chris See Black 47

Cable, John See The Nitty Gritty Dirt Band

Cahill, Greg See Special Consensus

Caldwell, Gayle See The New Christy Minstrels

Calhoun, Fred "Papa" See Milton Brown and the Musical Brownies

Callery, Phil See The Voice Squad

Calnan, Brian See Moving Hearts

Cameron, Duncan See The Amazing Rhythm Aces

Campbell, Eamonn See The Dubliners

Campbell, Terry See Mark Johnson/Mark Johnson & Clawgrass

Cannon, Hal See The Deseret String Band/The Bunkhouse Orchestra

Cannon, Sean See The Dubliners

Carageorge, Gerg See Klezmorim

Carbone, Pat See Front Range

Card, Hank See Austin Lounge Lizards

Carlisle, Bill See Bill Carlisle/Cliff Carlisle/The Carlisles

Carlisle, Cliff See Bill Carlisle/Cliff Carlisle/The Carlisles

Carpenter, Bob See The Nitty Gritty Dirt Band

Carrethers, Harold See The Fairfield Four

Carrethers, Rev. J.R. See The Fairfield Four

Carrethers, Rufus See The Fairfield Four

Carrier, Chubby See Chubby Carrier/Chubby Carrier and the Bayou Swamp Band

Carrier, Kevin See Roy Carrier/Roy Carrier and the Night Rockers

Carrier, Roy See Roy Carrier/Roy Carrier and the Night Rockers

Carrier, Troy Dickie See Roy Carrier/Roy Carrier and the Night Rockers

Carroll, Liz See Trian

Carson, Ken See Sons of the Pioneers

Carter, A.P. See The Carter Family/The Carter Sisters/Maybelle Carter

Carter, Anita See The Carter Family/The Carter Sisters/Maybelle Carter

Carter, Anna See The Chuck Wagon Gang

Carter, David "Dad" See The Chuck Wagon Gang

Carter, Dorretta See Hans Theessink/Blue Groove

Carter, Eddie See The Chuck Wagon Gang

Carter, Gil See Sunshine Skiffle Band

Carter, Helen See The Carter Family/The Carter Sisters/Maybelle Carter

Carter, Jason See The Del McCoury Band/The McCoury Brothers/Ronnie & Rob McCoury

Carter, Jim See The Chuck Wagon Gang

Carter, June See The Carter Family/The Carter Sisters/Maybelle Carter

Carter, Maybelle See The Carter Family/The Carter Sisters/Maybelle Carter

Carter, Rose See The Chuck Wagon Gang

Carter, Roy See The Chuck Wagon Gang

Carter, Ruth Ellen See The Chuck Wagon Gang

Carter, Sara See The Carter Family/The Carter Sisters/Maybelle Carter

Carter, Tom See The Deseret String Band/The Bunkhouse Orchestra

Carthy, Eliza See Eliza Carthy/Eliza Carthy and Nancy Kerr/Kings of Calicutt; Waterson:Carthy

Carthy, Martin See Waterson:Carthy; The Watersons

Carton, Davy See The Saw Doctors

Casady, Jack See Hot Tuna

Casel, Nitanju Bolade See Sweet Honey in the Rock

Cassidy, Dan See Sunshine Skiffle Band

Cattanach, Davy See Old Blind Dogs

Cauthen, Jim See Red Mountain White Trash

Cauthen, Joyce See Red Mountain White Trash

Cephas, John See Cephas & Wiggins

Chaisson, Mike See Chubby Carrier/Chubby Carrier and the Bayou Swamp Band

Chalfant, Dave See The Nields

Chambers, George See The Chambers Brothers

Chambers, Joe See The Chambers Brothers

Chambers, Lester See The Chambers Brothers

Chambers, Willie See The Chambers Brothers

Chancey, Tina See Hesperus

Chapman, Curt See J.D. Crowe/J.D. Crowe and the New South

Chapman, Mike See Balfa Toujours

Chapman, Tyrus See The ReBirth Brass Band

Chappell, Wes See No Strings Attached

Chastain, Laurie See Klezmorim

Chatmon, Lonnie See Mississippi Sheiks

Cherns, Richard See Runrig

Chevron, Philip See The Pogues

Chisholm, Duncan See Wolfstone

Chuckrow, Bob See Fletcher Bright Fiddle Band

Ciarlante, Randy See The Band

Cirimele, Carolyn See The All Girl Boys

Clancy, Bobby See The Clancy Brothers and Tommy Makem/Tommy Makem and Liam Clancy

Clancy, Liam See The Clancy Brothers and Tommy Makem/Tommy Makem and Liam Clancy

Clancy, Pat See The Clancy Brothers and Tommy Makem/Tommy Makem and Liam Clancy

Clancy, Tom See The Clancy Brothers and Tommy Makem/Tommy Makem and Liam Clancy

Clark, Don See The Four Preps

Clark, Gene See The Byrds

Clark, Jackie See The Nitty Gritty Dirt Band

Clark, Jenny See Battlefield Band

Clark, Roy See The Hee Haw Gospel Quartet

Clarke, Cyrus See Acousticats

Clarke, Jamie See The Pogues

Clarke, Michael See The Byrds; Flying Burrito Brothers

Claus, Jeff See The Horseflies/The Tompkins County Horseflies

Clem, Mike See Eddie from Ohio

Clifton, Verlin See The Camp Creek Boys

Clyde, Jeremy See Chad & Jeremy

Coakley, John See Boys of the Lough

Cobb, Ed See The Four Preps

Cockerham, Fred See The Camp Creek Boys

Cody, Commander (George Frayne) See Commander Cody & His Lost Planet Airmen

Coffman, Wanna See Milton Brown and the Musical Brownies

Cohen, David See Country Joe and the Fish

Cohen, John See The New Lost City Ramblers

Coleman, T. Michael See Chesapeake; The Seldom Scene

Collins, Dolly See Shirley Collins/Shirley and Dolly Collins/Etchingham Steam Band

Collins, Joe See Boiled Buzzards

Collins, Ronald See The Camp Creek Boys

Collins, Shirley See Shirley Collins/Shirley and Dolly Collins/Etchingham Steam Band

Colston, Maclaine See Eliza Carthy/Eliza Carthy and Nancy Kerr/Kings of Calicutt

Comeaux, Tommy See Basin Brothers; Beausoleil

Compton, Mike See The Nashville Bluegrass Band

Conley, Cabe See Boys from Indiana

Conneff, Kevin See The Chieftains

Connell, Dudley See Johnson Mountain Boys; Longview; The Seldom Scene

Connors, Marc See The Nylons

Conway, Gerry See Sandy Denny/Fotheringay; Pentangle

Cooley, Steve See The Dillards

Coombes, Rod See Stealers Wheel/Gerry Rafferty

Coomer, Ken See Uncle Tupelo/Wilco/Son Volt

Cooper, Dale T. "Stoney" See Wilma Lee & Stoney Cooper

Cooper, Paul See The Nylons

Cooper, Roger See The Bing Brothers

Cooper, Wilma Lee See Wilma Lee & Stoney Cooper

Corbett, Tom See Acousticats

Cordle, Larry See Lonesome Standard Time/Larry Cordle

Cormier, Danny See Sundown Playboys/Lesa Cormier & the Sundown Playboys

Cormier, Jacob See Sundown Playboys/Lesa Cormier & the Sundown Playboys

Cormier, Lesa See Sundown Playboys/Lesa Cormier & the Sundown Playboys

Cormier, Lionel See Sundown Playboys/Lesa Cormier & the Sundown Playboys

Cormier, Raymond See Sundown Playboys/Lesa Cormier & the Sundown Playboys

Corning, John See Free Hot Lunch!

Corwin, Andrew See The Foremen

Cotter, Debby See The All Girl Boys

Coulson, Leonard See The Deseret String Band/The Bunkhouse Orchestra

Coulter, David See The Pogues

Cowan, John See The New Grass Revival

Cox, Evelyn See The Cox Family

Cox, Jim See The Country Gentlemen

Cox Pagter, Judie See Country Ham

Cox, Sidney See The Cox Family

Cox, Suzanne See The Cox Family

Cox, Terry See Pentangle

Cox, Willard See The Cox Family

Crabtree, Lee See The Fugs

Craig, Shaun See Capercaillie

Crase, Noah See Boys from Indiana

Craven, Joe See Psychograss

Craver, Mike See Red Clay Ramblers

Creach, Papa John See Hot Tuna

Creed, Kyle See The Camp Creek Boys

Creeper, West Virginia See Commander Cody & His Lost Planet Airmen

Crofts, Dash See Seals & Crofts

Croker, Glen See Hackberry Ramblers

Crosbie, Malcolm See Shooglenifty

Crosby, David See The Byrds; Crosby, Stills and Nash/Crosby, Stills, Nash and Young/David Crosby/Crosby & Nash/Graham Nash/Stephen Stills

Crowder, Dave See Fuzzy Mountain String Band

Crowe, J.D. See J.D. Crowe/J.D. Crowe and the New South

Crowe, Josh See Josh Crowe and David McLaughlin

Crumb, Robert See The Cheap Suit Serenaders

Crumm, Chad See The Chicken Chokers

Cudek, Mark See Baltimore Consort; Hesperus

Cullen, Gerry See The Voice Squad

Cullis, "Doc" Ed See Fletcher Bright Fiddle Band

Cunningham, John See Silly Wizard

Cunningham, Phil See Silly Wizard

Currin, Sam See Fletcher Bright Fiddle Band

Curtis, Ken See Sons of the Pioneers

Cutting, Jennifer See The New St. George

D'Amato (Muldaur), Maria See Jim Kweskin & the Jug Band

Dalton, Erik See Flying Burrito Brothers

Daly, Jackie See Patrick Street

Danko, Rick See The Band

Darbone, Luderin See Hackberry Ramblers

Darby, Tom See Darby and Tarlton

Daring, Mason See Jeanie Stahl/Jeanie Stahl & Mason Daring

Darling, Erik See Rooftop Singers

Darriau, Matt See The Klezmatics; Whirligig

Darrow, Chris See The Nitty Gritty Dirt Band

Darvill, Benjamin See Crash Test Dummies

Daugherty, Jay Dee See The Waterboys

Dauphin, Jane See Boiled in Lead

Davenport, Billy See Paul Butterfield Blues Band/Paul Butterfield's Better Days

Davenport, Jed See Memphis Jug Band/Picaninny Jug Band/Jed Davenport & His Beale Street Jug Band

Davidson, George See Paul Butterfield Blues Band/Paul Butterfield's Better Days

Davis, Jeff See The Amazing Rhythm Aces

Davis, John See The Bluegrass Cardinals

Dawdy, Cheryl See The Chenille Sisters

Deaton, Lester See The Bluegrass Cardinals

Deaton, Ray See IIIrd Tyme Out

DeLancey, Dan See Linda Thomas & Dan DeLancey

Delmore, Alton See The Delmore Brothers

Delmore, Rabon See The Delmore Brothers

Demel, Sue See Sons of the Never Wrong

DeMeo, Pete See Five Chinese Brothers

Denny, Sandy See Sandy Denny/Fotheringay; Fairport Convention

Devitt, Sean See The Devlins

Devlin, Colin See The Devlins

Devlin, Peter See The Devlins

Devonie, Nova Karina See Ranch Romance

Dick, Bob See Front Range

Dickens, Hazel See Hazel & Alice/Hazel Dickens/Alice Gerrard; Strange Creek Singers

Dickerson, Lance See Commander Cody & His Lost Planet Airmen

Diehl, Marcia See Ensemble Galilei

Diesler, Conrad See Austin Lounge Lizards

Dillard, Doug See The Dillards

Dillard, Rodney See The Dillards

Dilleshaw, John See John "Seven Foot Dilly" Dilleshaw/Dilly & the Dill Pickles

Dilling, Steve See IIIrd Tyme Out

Dillon, Mary See Déanta

Dinn, Noel See Figgy Duff/Pamela Morgan

Dinwiddie, Gene See Paul Butterfield Blues Band/Paul Butterfield's Better Days

Dodge, Allan See The Cheap Suit Serenaders

Dodge, Peter See The Horseflies/The Tompkins County Horseflies

Doherty, Dennis See The Mamas & the Papas

Doherty, Pearse See The Saw Doctors

Domengeaux, Jimmy See Steve Riley & the Mamou Playboys

Donahue, Jerry See Sandy Denny/Fotheringay; Fairport Convention

Donald, Keith See Moving Hearts

Donaldson, Pat See Sandy Denny/Fotheringay

Donnelly, Elwood See Atwater-Donnelly

Donnelly, John See The Saw Doctors

Donoghue, Mike See The Chicken Chokers; Primitive Characters

Dorge, Michel See Crash Test Dummies

Dornfeld, Ruthie See The American Cafe Orchestra

Dorsey, Court See Bright Morning Star

Doss, Tommy See Sons of the Pioneers

Dott, Gerald See Incredible String Band

Doucet, David See Beausoleil

Doucet, Michael See Beausoleil; Savoy-Doucet Cajun Band

Douglas, Blair See Runrig

Douglas, Jerry See Boone Creek; J.D. Crowe/J.D. Crowe and the New South

Dover, Connie See Connie Dover/Scartaglen

Draheim, Sue See Any Old Time String Band

Dransfield, Barry See Robin and Barry Dransfield

Dransfield, Robin See Robin and Barry Dransfield

Drever, Ivan See Wolfstone

Drew, Ronnie See The Dubliners

Dudley, Juan See The New St. George

Duff, Marc See Capercaillie

Duffey, John See The Country Gentlemen; The Seldom Scene

Dugas, Kevin See Steve Riley & the Mamou Playboys

Dugger, Michael See Connie Dover/Scartaglen

Duhon, Edward See Hackberry Ramblers

Duisit, Lorraine See Tom Espinola and Lorraine Duisit; Trapezoid

Duncan, Glen See Lonesome Standard Time/Larry Cordle; Longview

Duncan, Stuart See The Nashville Bluegrass Band

Dunn, Bob See Milton Brown and the Musical Brownies

Duplechain, Corey See Chubby Carrier/Chubby Carrier and the Bayou Swamp Band

Dural, Rodney See Chubby Carrier/Chubby Carrier and the Bayou Swamp Band

Dvorin, Miriam See Klezmorim

Dyble, Judy See Fairport Convention

Eaglesham, Struan See Wolfstone

Eaglesham, Stuart See Wolfstone

Earhart, Billy III See The Amazing Rhythm Aces

East, Ernest See The Camp Creek Boys

Eaton, Nigel See Blowzabella

Echols, John See Love

Eden, Alan See Mr. Fox

Edmundson, Dave See Dry Branch Fire Squad

Egan, David See Filé

Egan, Joe See Stealers Wheel/Gerry Rafferty

Egan, Seamus See Solas

Ekstrom, Lisa See Martin Simpson/Martin & Jessica Ruby Simpson/Band of Angels

Eldridge, Ben See The Seldom Scene

Elliot, Cass See The Mamas & the Papas

Ellis, Dolan See The New Christy Minstrels

Ellis, Lance See Chubby Carrier/Chubby Carrier and the Bayou Swamp Band

Elmore, Rick See Klezmorim

Ely, Joe See The Flatlanders

Emerson, Bill See The Country Gentlemen

Enright, Pat See The Nashville Bluegrass Band

Epstein, Freyda See Freyda and Acoustic AttaTude; Trapezoid

Eriksen, Tim See Cordelia's Dad

Ernst, Richard See Mad Pudding

Ervin, Dick See Dry Branch Fire Squad

Espinola, Tom See Tom Espinola and Lorraine Duisit

Etheridge, Chris See Flying Burrito Brothers

Everly, Don See Everly Brothers

Everly, Phil See Everly Brothers

Fadden, Jimmie See The Nitty Gritty Dirt Band

Falcon, Cleoma Breaux See Joseph Falcon and Cleoma Breaux Falcon

Falcon, Joseph See Joseph Falcon and Cleoma Breaux Falcon

Fallon, Joe See The Chicken Chokers; Critton Hollow String Band

Falzarano, Michael See Hot Tuna

Fariña, Mimi See Richard and Mimi Fariña/Mimi Fariña

Fariña, Richard See Richard and Mimi Fariña/Mimi Fariña

Farlow, Billy C. See Commander Cody & His Lost Planet Airmen

Farnham, Tim See Salamander Crossing

Farr, Hugh See Sons of the Pioneers

Farr, Karl See Sons of the Pioneers

Farrar, Jay See Uncle Tupelo/Wilco/Son Volt

Farrell, Skip See The Hoosier Hot Shots

Faul, Don See Sundown Playboys/Lesa Cormier & the Sundown Playboys

Favre, Boris See Mad Pudding

Fay, Martin See The Chieftains

Fearnley, James See The Pogues

Feiten, Buzzy See Paul Butterfield Blues Band/Paul Butterfield's Better Days

Felder, Don See The Eagles

Ferguson, Jimmy See Irish Rovers

Ferris, Ed See Johnson Mountain Boys

Field, Jim See The Charles River Valley Boys

Fifield, Fraser See Old Blind Dogs

Finch, Carl See Brave Combo

Fineman, Alisa See Martin Simpson/Martin & Jessica Ruby Simpson/Band of Angels

Finer, Jem See The Pogues

Fingerett, Sally See Four Bitchin' Babes

Fink, Cathy See Cathy Fink and Marcy Marxer

Finlayson, Carry See Shooglenifty

Finley, Jamie See Red Mountain White Trash

Finn, Alec See De Danann/De Dannan

Fisher, Shug See Sons of the Pioneers

Flatt, Lester See Flatt & Scruggs; Bill Monroe & His Blue Grass Boys

Fleck, Béla See Béla Fleck/Béla Fleck and the Flecktones; The New Grass Revival; Strength in Numbers

Flick, Bob See The Brothers Four

Flippen, Benton See The Camp Creek Boys

Foglino, Paul See Five Chinese Brothers

Foley, Ged See Battlefield Band; The House Band; Patrick Street

Foley, Richard See The Brothers Four

Fontenot, Hadley See The Balfa Brothers/Freres Balfa

Forbes, Homer See The Forbes Family

Forbes, Jay See The Forbes Family

Forbes Roberts, Lisa See The Forbes Family

Forbes Slate, Lori See The Forbes Family

Ford, Mike See Moxy Früvous

Ford, Robert "Peg" See Golden Gate Quartet/Golden Gate Jubilee Quartet

Forssi, Ken See Love

Forster, Nick See Hot Rize/Red Knuckles & the Trailblazers

Foster, Murray See Moxy Früvous

Foster, Phil See Red Mountain White Trash

Fowler, Mark See Simple Gifts

Fox, Cheryl See Bright Morning Star

Fradon, Amy See Amy Fradon and Leslie Ritter/Amy Fradon

Fraley, Annadeene See J.P. and Annadeene Fraley

Fraley, J.P. See J.P. and Annadeene Fraley

Frank, Chris See Red Clay Ramblers

Frank, Cindy See disappear fear

Fraser, Alasdair See Skyedance

Fratar, Gail See Peter Kessler & Gail Fratar

Frazier, Joe See The Chad Mitchell Trio

Frazier, Keith "Bass Drum Shorty" See The ReBirth Brass Band

Frazier, Philip See The ReBirth Brass Band

Freeman, Isaac See The Fairfield Four

Freeman, Scott See Skeeter & the Skidmarks

French, Bob See Joe Val & the New England Bluegrass Boys

Frey, Glenn See The Eagles

Freya, Jo See Blowzabella

Fricker Tyson, Sylvia See Ian & Sylvia/Ian Tyson/The Great Speckled Bird/Sylvia Fricker Tyson

Fridley, Cary See The Freight Hoppers

Friend, Rick See Mando Mafia

Fulks, Robbie See Special Consensus

Furay, Richie See Buffalo Springfield

Gaar, John See Chubby Carrier/Chubby Carrier and the Bayou Swamp Band

Gabbard, Harley See Boys from Indiana

Gaddis, Earl See Bare Necessities

Gahagan, John See Battlefield Band

Gaiser, Robin See Mill Run Dulcimer Band

Gallier, Gary See Les & Gary Gallier

Gallier, Les See Les & Gary Gallier

Gammon, Vic See Shirley Collins/Shirley and Dolly Collins/Etchingham Steam Band

Garcia, Jerry See Grateful Dead

Gardner, Michael See The Nitty Gritty Dirt Band

Garfunkel, Art See Simon & Garfunkel

Garnier, D'Jalma See Filé

Garrett, Amos See Paul Butterfield Blues Band/Paul Butterfield's Better Days

Garth, Al See The Nitty Gritty Dirt Band

Gastineau, Charl Ann See Acousticats

Gaudreau, Jimmy See Chesapeake; The Country Gentlemen

Gavin, Frankie See De Danann/De Dannan

Gayheart, Willard See Skeeter & the Skidmarks

Gerrard, Alice See Hazel & Alice/Hazel Dickens/Alice Gerrard; Strange Creek Singers

Gerrard, Lisa See Dead Can Dance

Ghomeshi, Jian (formerly Jean) See Moxy Früvous

Gibbons, Mary See The All Girl Boys

Gibson, Eric See Gibson Brothers Band

Gibson, Greg See The Bing Brothers

Gibson, Leigh See Gibson Brothers Band

Gilbeau, Floyd "Gib" See Flying Burrito Brothers

Gilbert, John "Prince" See The ReBirth Brass Band

Giles, Ken See Bright Morning Star

Gill, Janis See Sweethearts of the Rodeo

Gillette, Steve See Steve Gillette & Cindy Mangsen

Gilmore, Jimmie Dale See The Flatlanders

Gilston, John See Incredible String Band

Giltinan, Bill See Mando Mafia

Ginyard, Julius Caleb "J.C." See Golden Gate Quartet/Golden Gate Jubilee Quartet

Gladwin, John David See Amazing Blondel

Glaser, Matt See Fiddle Fever

Gleason, Susan See Farmer's Daughters

Glover, Tony "Little Sun" See Koerner, Ray & Glover

Godchaux, Donna See Grateful Dead

Godchaux, Keith See Grateful Dead

Goggin, Martina See Mary Bergin/Dordan

Goldberg, Merryl See Klezmer Conservatory Band

Golding, Wes See Boone Creek

Goodall, Jim See Flying Burrito Brothers

Gordon, James See Tamarack

Gordon, Ralph See Freyda and Acoustic AttaTude; Trapezoid

Gottlieb, Lou See The Limeliters

Gotzmer, Kathleen See Mill Run Dulcimer Band

Graham, Len See Skylark

Graham, Randy See The Bluegrass Cardinals

Grant, Angus R. See Shooglenifty

Grant, Bill See Delia Bell and Bill Grant

Grant, Bob See Bad Livers

Grant, Pete See Incredible String Band

Grantham, Theodore See Milton Brown and the Musical Brownies

Graves, Josh See Kenny Baker and Josh Graves

Gray, David Julian See Klezmorim

Gray, Tom See The Seldom Scene

Greely, David See Steve Riley & the Mamou Playboys

Green, Gardner Ray See The ReBirth Brass Band

Green, Douglas B. (Ranger Doug) See Riders in the Sky

Greene, Richard See Muleskinner

Greenwood, Derek Dee See Chris Ardoin/Chris Ardoin and Double Clutchin'

Grier, David See Psychograss

Grier, Lamar See Strange Creek Singers

Griffin, A.C. "Eddie" See Golden Gate Quartet/Golden Gate Jubilee Quartet

Griffin, Mitch See Boiled in Lead

Grimwood, Keith See Trout Fishing in America

Grisman, David See Muleskinner

Grover, Sandy See Skeeter & the Skidmarks

Guard, Dave See The Kingston Trio

Guerin, John See The Byrds

Guillory, Ida See Queen Ida/Ida Guillory

Gullane, Roy See Tannahill Weavers

Gunning, John Francis See Country Joe and the Fish

Gutkin, Lisa See Whirligig

Guttmann, James See Klezmer Conservatory Band

Hébert, Donna See Rude Girls

Haensler, Mick See Big Blow and the Bushwackers

Hagberg, Neal See Neal & Leandra

Haley, Genny See Any Old Time String Band

Hall, Rachel See Simple Gifts

Hamilton, Mark See Klezmer Conservatory Band

Hamlett, Robert See The Fairfield Four

Hammond, Lorraine & Bennett See Lorraine (Lee) Hammond/Lorraine & Bennett Hammond/Solomon's Seal/Rick & Lorraine Lee

Hancock, Butch See The Flatlanders

Hancock, Tommy See The Flatlanders

Haney, Dave See Joe Val & the New England Bluegrass Boys

Hanna, Jeff See The Nitty Gritty Dirt Band

Hardie, Jonny See Old Blind Dogs

Hardy, Lyn See Rude Girls

Harlan, Evan See Klezmer Conservatory Band

Harness, Eddie See Eddie from Ohio

Harper, Iris See Milton Brown and the Musical Brownies

Harrigan, Katie See Ceolbeg

Harrington, Dick See Dick Harrington & Victoria Young

Harris, Evelyn Maria See Sweet Honey in the Rock

Harris, Princess See The Plaid Family

Harris, Ted See Paul Butterfield Blues Band/Paul Butterfield's Better Days

Harrison, John See The Watersons

Harrison, Nate See The Hoosier Hot Shots

Hart, Greg See Incredible String Band

Hart, Hattie See Memphis Jug Band/Picaninny Jug Band/Jed Davenport & His Beale Street Jug Band

Hart, Mickey See Grateful Dead

Hart, Tim See Steeleye Span

Hartgrove, Mike See IIIrd Tyme Out

Hassilev, Alex See The Limeliters

Hastings, Pete See No Strings Attached

Hathaway, Richard See The Nitty Gritty Dirt Band

Hawker, Ginny See Tracy Schwarz & Ginny Hawker

Haynes, Henry D. "Homer" See Homer & Jethro

Hayward, John See The Horseflies/The Tompkins County Horseflies

Hearne, Bill See Bill & Bonnie Hearne

Heidorn, Mike See Uncle Tupelo/Wilco/Son Volt

Heil, Gail See Bob Bovee and Gail Heil

Helberg, Dave See Five Chinese Brothers

Helm, Levon See The Band

Henderson, Lee "Red" See Earl Johnson/Earl Johnson & His Dixie Entertainers/Earl Johnson & His Clodhoppers

Henley, Don See The Eagles

Henrie, Doug See Mac Benford/Mac Benford and the Woodshed All-Stars

Henry, Bill See Northern Lights

Herald, John See The Greenbriar Boys; The Woodstock Mountain Revue

Hernandez, Bubba See Brave Combo

Heron, Mike See Incredible String Band

Herrick, Jack See Red Clay Ramblers

Herrmann, Joe See Critton Hollow String Band

Herrmann, John See Ralph Blizard/Ralph Blizard and the New Southern Ramblers

Herrmann, Sam See Critton Hollow String Band

Heyman, Preston See Tom Robinson Band/Tom Robinson/Sector 27

Hicks, Bill See Fuzzy Mountain String Band; Red Clay Ramblers

Hicks, Rod See Paul Butterfield Blues Band/Paul Butterfield's Better Days

Higginbotham, Darrell See Sundown Playboys/Lesa Cormier & the Sundown Playboys

Higginbotham, Linda See Brad Leftwich/Brad Leftwich & Linda Higginbotham

Hildebrand, John See Mad Pudding

Hill, James See The Fairfield Four

Hill, Joe Scott See Flying Burrito Brothers

Hillhouse, Andy See Mad Pudding

Hillman, Chris See The Byrds; Flying Burrito Brothers

Hinners, Gordy See Ralph Blizard/Ralph Blizard and the New Southern Ramblers

Hirsh, Chicken See Country Joe and the Fish

Hirshon, Karen See Simple Gifts

Hisey, John See Dry Branch Fire Squad

Hitchcock, Bob See The New St. George

Hitchcock, Robyn See Robyn Hitchcock/Robyn Hitchcock & the Egyptians

Hobbs, Evelyn Cox See The Cox Family

Hoeger, Hugh See Piney Creek Weasels

Holder, Ian See Shirley Collins/Shirley and Dolly Collins/Etchingham Steam Band

Holland, Bernie See Stealers Wheel/Gerry Rafferty

Holly, Kelvin See The Amazing Rhythm Aces

Holmes, Michael See Dervish

Holt, Aubrey See Boys from Indiana

Holt, Jerry See Boys from Indiana

Holt, Tom See Boys from Indiana

Holt, Tony See Boys from Indiana

Hood, Wallace See Irish Rovers

Hooker, Cecil See Trapezoid

Hooker, James See The Amazing Rhythm Aces

Hooven, Herb See Joe Val & the New England Bluegrass Boys

Horton, Jeff See Northern Lights

Houff, Terry See Mill Run Dulcimer Band

Hower, Dave See The Nields

Huber, Connie See The Chenille Sisters

Hudson, Garth See The Band

Hunt, Darryl See The Pogues

Hurd, Kimball See Martin Simpson/Martin & Jessica Ruby Simpson/Band of Angels

Hurwitz, Cheryl See Trapezoid

Hutchings, Ashley See Shirley Collins/Shirley and Dolly Collins/Etchingham Steam Band; Fairport Convention; Steeleye Span

Hutchinson, Trevor See The Waterboys

Hutton, Bruce See The Double Decker String Band; Hesperus

Hyman, Judy See The Horseflies/The Tompkins County Horseflies

Hymowitz, David See California Cajun Orchestra

Ibbotson, Jimmy See The Nitty Gritty Dirt Band

Ickes, Rob See Blue Highway

Idlet, Ezra See Trout Fishing in America

Inabnett, Marvin See The Four Preps

Ingram, Jack See Incredible String Band

Ingram, Wally See Timbuk 3

Irvine, Andy See Patrick Street; Planxty; Sweeney's Men

Irvine, Peter See Cordelia's Dad

Iviteky, Conrad See Shooglenifty

Jabbour, Alan See Hollow Rock String Band

Jackson, George See Ossian

Jackson, Kenny See Rhythm Rats

Jackson, Nancy See Red Mountain White Trash

Jackson, Roger See Robyn Hitchcock/Robyn Hitchcock & the Egyptians

Jackson, William See Ossian

James, Paul See Blowzabella

Jamison, Phil See Ralph Blizard/Ralph Blizard and the New Southern Ramblers

Jammer, Joe See Stealers Wheel/Gerry Rafferty

Jansch, Bert See Pentangle

Jayne, Mitch See The Dillards

Jeffries, Sam See Boys from Indiana

Johnson, Craig See The Double Decker String Band

Johnson, Earl See Earl Johnson/Earl Johnson & His Dixie Entertainers/Earl Johnson & His Clodhoppers

Johnson, Howard See The Fugs

Johnson, Jamie See Boys from Indiana

Johnson, Keith See Paul Butterfield Blues Band/Paul Butterfield's Better Days

Johnson, Mark See Mark Johnson/Mark Johnson & Clawgrass

Johnson, Michael See The Johnstons

Johnson, Nancy See Kentucky Standard Band

Johnson, Rome See Sons of the Pioneers

Johnson, Shirley Childress See Sweet Honey in the Rock

Johnson, Willie See Golden Gate Quartet/Golden Gate Jubilee Quartet

Johnston, Adrienne See The Johnstons

Johnston, Luci See The Johnstons

Johnston, Max See Uncle Tupelo/Wilco/Son Volt

Jones, Diane See Diane Jones and & King

Jones, Gordon See Silly Wizard

Jones, Grandpa See The Hee Haw Gospel Quartet

Jones, Jab See Memphis Jug Band/Picaninny Jug Band/Jed Davenport & His Beale Street Jug Band

Jones, John See The Oyster Band

Jones, Malcolm See Runrig

Jones, "Preacher" See The Fairfield Four

Jones, Tina Lisa See Trapezoid

Jordan, Cathy See Dervish

Jordan, Louis "Shuaka Shuaka" See The ReBirth Brass Band

Jorgensen, Hanne See The Freight Hoppers

Joyce, Jackie See Mouth Music

Justice, Kay See Ginny Hawker & Kay Justice

Kaapana, Ledward See Hui Ohana/Ledward Kaapana

Kaapana, Nedward See Hui Ohana/Ledward Kaapana

Kahlil, Aisha See Sweet Honey in the Rock

Kaiser (Chris Silver), Chris See Stoney Lonesome

Kallick, Kathy See Good Ol' Persons

Kane, Barry See The New Christy Minstrels

Kane, Kieran See Kieran Kane/The O'Kanes

Kane, Raymond See Ray Kane/Raymond Kane

Kane, Ron See The Deseret String Band/The Bunkhouse Orchestra

Kaplan, Selma See Rude Girls

Karpeles, Nancy See Ensemble Galilei

Kass, Ruth See Boiled Buzzards

Katz, Mike See Ceolbeg

Katz, Nancy See Ranch Romance

Kaukonen, Jorma See Hot Tuna

Keane, Sean See The Chieftains

Kearey, Ian "Chopper" See The Oyster Band

Kearney, Pete See The Fugs

Keenan, Brian See The Chambers Brothers

Keenan, David See Ranch Romance

Keith, Bill See Jim Kweskin & the Jug Band; Muleskinner; The Woodstock Mountain Revue

Kelley, Kevin See The Byrds

Kelliher, Jeff See Salamander Crossing

Kelly, Geoffrey See Spirit of the West

Kelly, Liam See Dervish

Kelly, Luke See The Dubliners

Kennedy, Maura See The Kennedys/Pete Kennedy/Pete & Maura Kennedy

Kennedy, Pete See The Kennedys/Pete Kennedy/Pete & Maura Kennedy

Keppeler, Ken See Bayou Seco/Bayou Eclectico

Kerr, Nancy See Eliza Carthy and Nancy Kerr

Kershaw, Doug See Doug Kershaw/Rusty & Doug

Kershaw, Rusty See Doug Kershaw/Rusty & Doug

Kessler, Josef See Boiled in Lead

Kessler, Peter See Peter Kessler & Gail Fratar

Kettering, Frank See The Hoosier Hot Shots

Kihn, Greg See Greg Kihn/The Greg Kihn Band

Kiker, Harry "Bill" See John "Seven Foot Dilly" Dilleshaw/Dilly & the Dill Pickles

Kilbride, Pat See Battlefield Band

Kilby, Trish See Farmer's Daughters

Kimball, Jennifer See The Story

King, Charlie See Bright Morning Star

King, Hubie See Diane Jones and & King

King, James See Longview

King, Tom See Cordelia's Dad

Kinsey, Andrew See Salamander Crossing

Kirchen, Bill See Commander Cody & His Lost Planet Airmen

Kirk, John See Mac Benford/Mac Benford and the Woodshed All-Stars

Kirkland, Michael See The Brothers Four

Kirtley, Peter See Pentangle

Kirwan, Larry See Black 47

Klein, Moondi See Chesapeake; The Seldom Scene

Kleinow, "Sneaky" Pete See Flying Burrito Brothers

Knight, Cheri See Blood Oranges/Cheri Knight/Wooden Leg/Beacon Hillbillies

Knuckles, Red See Hot Rize/Red Knuckles & the Trailblazers

Kobluk, Mike See The Chad Mitchell Trio

Koerner, "Spider" John See Koerner, Ray & Glover

Kolodner, Ken See Helicon

Kootch, Dan See The Fugs

Kovac, Paul See Critton Hollow String Band

Kovit, Paul See Whirligig

Krauss, Alison See Alison Krauss/Alison Krauss & Union Station

Kreutzmann, Bill See Grateful Dead

Kristen, Ashley See Electric Bonsai Band/Uncle Bonsai

Kropp, Mike See Northern Lights

Kuferberg, Tuli See The Fugs

Kunkel, Bruce See The Nitty Gritty Dirt Band

Kurvink, Molly See Tamarack

Kuykendall, Pete See The Country Gentlemen

Kweskin, Jim See Jim Kweskin & the Jug Band

LaBour, Fred (Too Slim) See Riders in the Sky

Lacy, Edwin See Skeeter & the Skidmarks

Lamb, Barbara See Ranch Romance

Lamble, Martin See Fairport Convention

Landes, Roger See Connie Dover/Scartaglen

Landry, Tray See Chubby Carrier/Chubby Carrier and the Bayou Swamp Band

Lane, Shawn See Blue Highway

Langford, William See Golden Gate Quartet/Golden Gate Jubilee Quartet

Lantz, Mike See Front Range

Laramie, Jeff See Free Hot Lunch!

Larkey, Charles See The Fugs

Larson, Glen See The Four Preps

LaRue, Custer See Baltimore Consort

Lathum, Billy Ray See The Dillards; The Kentucky Colonels/The Country Boys; The Laurel Canyon Ramblers

Lauber, Karl See Joe Val & the New England Bluegrass Boys

Lauber, Terry See The Brothers Four

Lavin, Christine See Four Bitchin' Babes

Lawrence, Trevor See Paul Butterfield Blues Band/Paul Butterfield's Better Days

Lawson, Doyle See The Country Gentlemen; J.D. Crowe/J.D. Crowe and the New South

Lax (Lee), Russell See The Oyster Band

Lay, Sam See Paul Butterfield Blues Band/Paul Butterfield's Better Days

Layne, Bert See The Skillet Lickers

Layton, Tom See Sunshine Skiffle Band

Le Maistre, Malcolm See Incredible String Band

Lea, Mary See Bare Necessities

Leadbetter, Phil See J.D. Crowe/J.D. Crowe and the New South

Leadon, Bernie See The Eagles; Flying Burrito Brothers; The Nitty Gritty Dirt Band

Leaf, Christopher See Klezmorim

Leahy, Larry See The Country Gentlemen

Leary, Vinnie See The Fugs

Ledbetter, Huddie See Leadbelly/Huddie Ledbetter

Ledet, Tammy See Chris Ardoin/Chris Ardoin and Double Clutchin'

Lee, Arthur See Love

Lee, Frank See The Freight Hoppers

Lee, Lorraine See Lorraine (Lee) Hammond/Lorraine & Bennett Hammond/Solomon's Seal/Rick & Lorraine Lee

Lee, Richard See The Fugs

Lee, Stan See Incredible String Band

Leet, Charlie See Dry Branch Fire Squad

Leet, Mary Jo See Dry Branch Fire Squad

Leftwich, Brad See Brad Leftwich/Brad Leftwich & Linda Higginbotham

LeJeune, Homer See Sundown Playboys/Lesa Cormier & the Sundown Playboys

Leone, Dan See Ed's Redeeming Qualities

Leone, Dom See Ed's Redeeming Qualities

Leonino, Terry See Magpie

Lesh, Phil See Grateful Dead

Leslie, Chris See Fairport Convention

LeSurf, Cathy See The Oyster Band

Levenson, Dan See Boiled Buzzards

Levenson, Eric See Joe Val & the New England Bluegrass Boys

Levy, Bertram See Hollow Rock String Band

Levy, Howard See Béla Fleck/Béla Fleck and the Flecktones

Lewis, Chris See The All Girl Boys

Lewis, Earlene See Saffire—The Uppity Blues Women

Lewis, Hambone See Memphis Jug Band/Picaninny Jug Band/Jed Davenport & His Beale Street Jug Band

Lewis, James Roy "Pop" See The Lewis Family

Lewis, Laurie See Good Ol' Persons

Lewis, Miggie See The Lewis Family

Lewis, Nada See Klezmorim

Lewis, Pauline "Mom" See The Lewis Family

Lewis, Roy "Little Roy" Jr. See The Lewis Family

Lewis, Travis See The Lewis Family

Lewis, Wallace See The Lewis Family

Libbea, Gene See The Nashville Bluegrass Band

Liberman, Lev See Klezmorim

Licht, David See The Klezmatics

Liebert, Billy See Sons of the Pioneers

Light, Stuart See Trapezoid

Lilly, Everett See Lilly Brothers/Lilly Brothers & Don Stover

Lilly, Everett A. See The Charles River Valley Boys

Lilly, John See Ralph Blizard/Ralph Blizard and the New Southern Ramblers

Lilly, Michell Burt "Bea" See Lilly Brothers/Lilly Brothers & Don Stover

Linden, Mick See Skyedance

Lindsey, Pink See John "Seven Foot Dilly" Dilleshaw/Dilly & the Dill Pickles

Lindsey, Raymond "Shorty" See John "Seven Foot Dilly" Dilleshaw/Dilly & the Dill Pickles

Liners, Bill See Stoney Lonesome

Liners, Kathleen See Stoney Lonesome

Linscott, Kevin See Klezmorim

Lipkis, Larry See Baltimore Consort

Little, Keith See Lonesome Standard Time/Larry Cordle

Littlefield, Ed Jr. See Marley's Ghost

Littleton, Linda See Simple Gifts

Loggins, Kenny See Loggins & Messina/Kenny Loggins

London, Frank See The Klezmatics

Lorimer, Roddy See The Waterboys

Lormand, Ward See Filé

Loughnane, Kathleen See Mary Bergin/Dordan

Louvin, Charlie Elzer See Louvin Brothers/Charlie Louvin

Louvin, Lonnie Ira See Louvin Brothers/Charlie Louvin

Lowe, Jez See Jez Lowe/Jez Lowe & the Bad Pennies

Lucas, Trevor See Sandy Denny/Fotheringay; Fairport Convention

Luck, Greg See The Bluegrass Cardinals; J.D. Crowe/J.D. Crowe and the New South

Luff, Ian See Blowzabella

Lundy, Jerry See Country Ham

Lunny, Dónal See The Bothy Band; Moving Hearts; Planxty

Lyman, Mel See Jim Kweskin & the Jug Band

Lynam, Ron See Front Range

Lynch, Bobby See The Dubliners

Lynch, Kirk See Connie Dover/Scartaglen

Lyons, Barry See Mr. Fox

MacArthur, Quee See Mouth Music

MacDonald, Barbara Kooyman See Timbuk 3

MacDonald, Calum See Runrig

MacDonald, Pat See Timbuk 3

MacDonald, Robert See Runrig

MacDonald, Rory See Runrig

MacGowan, Shane See The Pogues

Machlis, Paul See Skyedance

Mack, LeRoy See The Kentucky Colonels/The Country Boys

Macken, Niall See The Devlins

MacKenzie, Kate See Stoney Lonesome

MacKenzie, Wayne See Wolfstone

MacKintosh, James See Shooglenifty

MacLachlan, Joan See Capercaillie

Maclean, Bryan See Love

Macleod, Iain See Shooglenifty

MacLeod, Iain See The House Band

Macleod, Martin See Capercaillie

Macmaster, Mary See Sileas

MacNeil, Kyle See The Barra MacNeils

MacNeil, Lucy See The Barra MacNeils

MacNeil, Sheumas See The Barra MacNeils

MacNeil, Stewart See The Barra MacNeils

Madaio, Steve See Paul Butterfield Blues Band/Paul Butterfield's Better Days

Madden, Joanie See Cherish the Ladies

Maddox, Cal See The Maddox Brothers & Rose/Rose Maddox

Maddox, Cliff See The Maddox Brothers & Rose/Rose Maddox

Maddox, Colby See Special Consensus

Maddox, Don See The Maddox Brothers & Rose/Rose Maddox

Maddox, Fred See The Maddox Brothers & Rose/Rose Maddox

Maddox, Henry See The Maddox Brothers & Rose/Rose Maddox

Maddox, Rose See The Maddox Brothers & Rose/Rose Maddox

Magnie, John See The subdudes

Mairs, Vaughan See Mando Mafia

Makem, Tommy See The Clancy Brothers and Tommy Makem/Tommy Makem and Liam Clancy

Makintosh, James See Mouth Music

Mallery, Ajay "Grabby-Grab" See The ReBirth Brass Band

Mallory, M.D. See Country Ham

Malone, Tommy See The subdudes

Mangsen, Cindy See Steve Gillette & Cindy Mangsen

Manuel, Richard See The Band

Marchany, Randy See No Strings Attached

Marrella, John See Lovin' Spoonful

Marrone, Marty See Special Consensus

Marshall, Mike See Psychograss

Marshall, Pete See Mando Mafia

Martin, Bill See Red Mountain White Trash

Martin, Dewey See Buffalo Springfield

Martin, John See Ossian

Marxer, Marcy See Cathy Fink and Marcy Marxer

Mason, Bob See The Fugs

Mason, Molly See Fiddle Fever; Jay Ungar & Molly Mason

Massey, Andrew See Mr. Fox

Mastriani, Vic See The Nitty Gritty Dirt Band

Masuko, Taki See The Horseflies/The Tompkins County Horseflies

Matheson, Colin See Ceolbeg

Matheson, David See Moxy Früvous

Matheson, Karen See Capercaillie

Mattacks, Dave See Fairport Convention

Matthews, Iain See Fairport Convention

Maugh, Bugsy See Paul Butterfield Blues Band/Paul Butterfield's Better Days

Maund, Peter See Skyedance

Maynard, Bobby See Dry Branch Fire Squad

McCall, Dwight See Union Springs

McCann, Jim See The Dubliners

McCaslin, Mary See Jim Ringer/Jim Ringer & Mary McCaslin

McCauley, Cory See Tasso

McCauley, Lisa See Magnolia Sisters

McComiskey, Billy See Irish Tradition/Brendan Mulvihill & Billy McComiskey; Trian

McConnell, Cathal See Boys of the Lough

McCoury, Del See The Del McCoury Band/The McCoury Brothers/Ronnie & Rob McCoury

McCoury, Rob See The Del McCoury Band/The McCoury Brothers/Ronnie & Rob McCoury

McCoury, Ronnie See The Del McCoury Band/The McCoury Brothers/Ronnie & Rob McCoury

McCullough, Henry See Sweeney's Men

McCusker, John See Battlefield Band

McDade, Butch See The Amazing Rhythm Aces

McDonagh, Brian See Dervish

McDonagh, Johnny "Ringo" See De Danann/De Dannan

McDonald, Country Joe See Country Joe and the Fish

McDonough, Megon See Four Bitchin' Babes

McDowell, Wilcil See Irish Rovers

McEuen, John See The Nitty Gritty Dirt Band

McFarlane, Elaine "Spanky" See The Mamas & the Papas

McFarlane, Ronn See Baltimore Consort

McGee, Kirk See Sam & Kirk McGee/The Fruit Jar Drinkers/The Dixieliners

McGee, Sam See Sam & Kirk McGee/The Fruit Jar Drinkers/The Dixieliners

McGinley, Martin See Dervish

McGinnis, Joe See Union Springs

McGlynn, Arty See Patrick Street

McGuinn, Roger See The Byrds; The Chad Mitchell Trio

McGuire, Barry See The New Christy Minstrels

McIntosh, Andra Faye See Saffire—The Uppity Blues Women

McKenna, Barney See The Dubliners

McKenna, Christina "Licorice" See Incredible String Band

McKenna, Connie See Ceoltoiri

McKeown, Susan See Susan McKeown & the Chanting House/Susan McKeown & Lindsey Horner

McKeown, Kevin See Irish Rovers

McKernan, Ron "Pig Pen" See Grateful Dead

McLaughlin, David See Josh Crowe and David McLaughlin; Johnson Mountain Boys; The Lynn Morris Band

McMenemy, Jamie See Battlefield Band

McMichen, Clayton See The Skillet Lickers

McMillan, Buzzby See Old Blind Dogs

McMillan, Jerry See Lonesome River Band

McNally, James See The Pogues

McNeill, Brian See Battlefield Band

McPhail, Fran See The Voice Squad

McReynolds, Jesse See Jim & Jesse

McReynolds, Jim See Jim & Jesse

McShee, Jacqui See Pentangle

Mead, Whitt See Rhythm Rats

Meadows, Joe See Country Ham

Meisner, Randy See The Eagles

Melton, Barry See Country Joe and the Fish

Meltzer, Tom See Five Chinese Brothers

Memphis Minnie See Memphis Jug Band/Picaninny Jug Band/Jed Davenport & His Beale Street Jug Band

Mendelsohn, Barbara See Good Ol' Persons

Mensor, Bob See Sons of the Pioneers

Menton, Todd See Boiled in Lead

Merker, Meghan See The Deseret String Band/The Bunkhouse Orchestra

Messina, Jim See Buffalo Springfield; Loggins & Messina/Kenny Loggins

Metcalfe, Andy See Robyn Hitchcock/Robyn Hitchcock & the Egyptians

Miles, Chris See Northern Lights

Milheim, Keith See The Hoosier Hot Shots

Millar, George See Irish Rovers

Millar, Joe See Irish Rovers

Millar, Will See Irish Rovers

Miller, Drew See Boiled in Lead

Miller, Jackie See The New Christy Minstrels

Miller, Jo See Ranch Romance

Miller, Robin See Klezmer Conservatory Band

Mindel, Valerie See Any Old Time String Band

Mitchell, Chad See The Chad Mitchell Trio

Mitchell, Shane See Dervish

Moloney, Mick See The Johnstons

Moloney, Paddy See The Chieftains

Monroe, Bill See Bill Monroe & His Blue Grass Boys

Monroe, Charlie See Bill Monroe & His Blue Grass Boys

Monson, Ingrid See Klezmer Conservatory Band

Montana Slim See Wilf Carter/Montana Slim

Montoro, Barbara See Any Old Time String Band

Moore, Byrd See Earl Johnson/Earl Johnson & His Dixie Entertainers/Earl Johnson & His Clodhoppers

Moore, Christy See Moving Hearts; Planxty

Moore, Russell See IIIrd Tyme Out

Moran, Leo See The Saw Doctors

Morand, Grace See The Chenille Sisters

Morgan, Pamela See Figgy Duff/Pamela Morgan

Morgan, Tom See The Country Gentlemen; The Country Gentlemen

Morris, Dale See Sons of the Pioneers

Morris, Lynn See The Lynn Morris Band

Morrison, Claude See The Nylons

Morrissett, Paul See The Klezmatics

Morton, Robin See Boys of the Lough

Mosbaugh, Garth See The Nylons

Moscatiello, Lisa See The New St. George; Whirligig

Moynihan, Johnny See Arcady; Sweeney's Men

Muir, Ann Mayo See Bok, Muir & Trickett

Muldaur, Geoffrey See Paul Butterfield Blues Band/Paul Butterfield's Better Days; Jim Kweskin & the Jug Band

Muldaur, Maria See The Woodstock Mountain Revue

Mullarky, Pat See The Bing Brothers

Mullins, Joe See Longview

Mullins, Mike See Acousticats

Mullins, Paul See Boys from Indiana

Mulvihill, Brendan See Irish Tradition/Brendan Mulvihill & Billy McComiskey

Mumford, Eugene See Golden Gate Quartet/Golden Gate Jubilee Quartet

Munde, Al See Flying Burrito Brothers

Munro, Donnie See Runrig

Murphy, Julie See Eddie from Ohio

Myatt, John See Mr. Fox

Mydland, Brent See Grateful Dead

Naftalin, Mark See Paul Butterfield Blues Band/Paul Butterfield's Better Days

Nallie, Luther See Sons of the Pioneers

Nash, Graham See Crosby, Stills and Nash/Crosby, Stills, Nash and Young/David Crosby/Crosby & Nash/Graham Nash/Stephen Stills

Netsky, Hancus See Klezmer Conservatory Band

Netsky, Steve See Klezmer Conservatory Band

Newman, Chris See Boys of the Lough

Newman, Paul See Roy Carrier/Roy Carrier and the Night Rockers

Newton-Davis, Billy See The Nylons

Ní Mhaonaigh, Mairéad See Altan

Ní Uallacháin, Eithne See Lá Lugh

Nickerson, Charlie See Memphis Jug Band/Picaninny Jug Band/Jed Davenport & His Beale Street Jug Band

Nicol, Simon See Fairport Convention

Nield, David See The Nields

Nield, Katryna See The Nields

Nield, Nerissa See The Nields

Niemann, John See Stoney Lonesome

Nolan, Bob See Sons of the Pioneers

Norman, Chris See Baltimore Consort; Helicon; Skyedance

Norris, Fate See The Skillet Lickers

Nunley, Bill See The Chestnut Grove Quartet

Nunley, Jim See The Chestnut Grove Quartet

ó Brian, Garry See Skylark

O'Brien, Andy See Irish Tradition/Brendan Mulvihill & Billy McComiskey

O'Brien, Eoghan See Déanta

O'Brien, Kate See Déanta

O'Brien, Mollie See Tim O'Brien/Tim & Mollie O'Brien

O'Brien, Tim See Hot Rize/Red Knuckles & the Trailblazers; Tim O'Brien/Tim & Mollie O'Brien

O'Bryant, Alan See The Nashville Bluegrass Band

Oceans, Lucky See Asleep at the Wheel

O'Connell, Robbie See The Clancy Brothers and Tommy Makem/Tommy Makem and Liam Clancy

O'Connor, Gerry See Lá Lugh; Skylark

O'Connor, Máirtin See Skylark

O'Connor, Mark See Strength in Numbers

ó Domhnaill, Micheál See Nightnoise

O'Hara, Jamie See Kieran Kane/The O'Kanes

O'Leary, Christy See Boys of the Lough

Oliver, Kristine See Sweethearts of the Rodeo

Olsen, Andy See Stoney Lonesome

Olson, Eric See Fuzzy Mountain String Band

O' Maonlai, Liam See Hothouse Flowers

O'Neill, Eoin See Moving Hearts

Oorts, Paul See Simple Gifts

O'Riordan, Cait See The Pogues

Osborne, Bobby See The Osborne Brothers

Osborne, Hoyle See Jane Voss/Jane Voss & Hoyle Osborne

Osborne, Sonny See The Osborne Brothers

Oskay, Billy See Nightnoise

Oss, Cath See Cordelia's Dad

O'Sullivan, Jerry See Whirligig

O'Toole, Bill See Blowzabella

Overton, Aaron Chauncey "A.C." See Lauchlin Shaw & A.C. Overton

Owen, Blanton See Fuzzy Mountain String Band

Owen, Malcolm See Fuzzy Mountain String Band

Owen, Vickie See Fuzzy Mountain String Band

Owens, Buck See The Hee Haw Gospel Quartet

Owens, Henry See Golden Gate Quartet/Golden Gate Jubilee Quartet

Padgett, Woody See Mill Run Dulcimer Band

Pagter, Carl See Country Ham

Pahinui, Cyril See The Pahinui Brothers/Cyril Pahinui/James "Bla" Pahinui

Pahinui, James "Bla" See The Pahinui Brothers/Cyril Pahinui/James "Bla" Pahinui

Pahinui, Martin See The Pahinui Brothers/Cyril Pahinui/James "Bla" Pahinui

Paine, John See The Brothers Four

Paley, Tom See The New Lost City Ramblers

Palmer, Bruce See Buffalo Springfield

Palmer, Clive See Incredible String Band

Palmer, Sam See Blowzabella

Para, Dave See Cathy Barton and Dave Para

Parker, Christopher See Paul Butterfield Blues Band/Paul Butterfield's Better Days

Parker, Ebin See Ebin-Rose

Parker, Ian See Tom Robinson Band/Tom Robinson/Sector 27

Parket, Johnnie See Hackberry Ramblers

Parkinson, Chris See The House Band

Parks, Danny See The Amazing Rhythm Aces

Parks, Walter See The Nudes

Parmley, David See The Bluegrass Cardinals

Parmley, Don See The Bluegrass Cardinals

Parsons, Gene See The Byrds; Flying Burrito Brothers

Parsons, Gram See The Byrds; Flying Burrito Brothers

Paterson, Rod See Ceolbeg

Paton, Caroline See Sandy & Caroline Paton

Paton, Sandy See Sandy & Caroline Paton

Paulin, Roderick "Claude" See The ReBirth Brass Band

Paulsen, Pat See Smothers Brothers/Pat Paulsen

Pavao, Dennis See Hui Ohana/Ledward Kaapana

Peak, Leandra See Neal & Leandra

Pearson, Mark See The Brothers Four

Pearson, Tony See The Flatlanders

Pedersen, Herb See The Dillards; The Laurel Canyon Ramblers

Peek, Dan See America

Pegg, Bob See Mr. Fox

Pegg, Carole See Mr. Fox

Pegg, Dave See Fairport Convention

Perdue, Kelly See Mando Mafia

Perkins, Al See Flying Burrito Brothers

Perkins, Larry See Lonesome Standard Time/Larry Cordle

Perkins, Wilson "Lefty" See Milton Brown and the Musical Brownies

Perrodin, Gabriel Pandy Jr. See Chris Ardoin/Chris Ardoin and Double Clutchin'

Perrotta, Neno See Ed's Redeeming Qualities

Perry, Brendan See Dead Can Dance

Perry, Cliff See Cliff Perry & Laurel Bliss

Perry, Dale See Lonesome River Band

Perryman, Lloyd See Sons of the Pioneers

Petruccelli, Rico See The New St. George

Petteway, Al See The New St. George

Phelan, Mike See Marley's Ghost

Phillips, Barry See Martin Simpson/Martin & Jessica Ruby Simpson/Band of Angels

Phillips, Diana See Special Consensus

Phillips, Janis Lewis See The Lewis Family

Phillips, John See The Mamas & the Papas

Phillips, Lewis See The Lewis Family

Phillips, Mackenzie See The Mamas & the Papas

Phillips, Michelle See The Mamas & the Papas

Phillips, Todd See Good Ol' Persons; Psychograss

Piazza, Sammy See Hot Tuna

Pierce, Charlie See Memphis Jug Band/Picaninny Jug Band/Jed Davenport & His Beale Street Jug Band

Piggot, Charlie See De Danann/De Dannan

Piggott, Mike See Pentangle

Pilnick, Paul See Stealers Wheel/Gerry Rafferty

Pine, Ken See The Fugs

Pitt, Bill See Sunshine Skiffle Band

Pittman, Tom See Austin Lounge Lizards

Plehn, Don See Big Blow and the Bushwackers

Podell, Art See The New Christy Minstrels

Polk, Charlie See Memphis Jug Band/Picaninny Jug Band/Jed Davenport & His Beale Street Jug Band

Pollard, Randy See Union Springs

Ponder, Ed See Flying Burrito Brothers

Pons, Jim See The Leaves

Poole, Charlie See Charlie Poole/Charlie Poole & the North Carolina Ramblers

Porter, Ted See Big Blow and the Bushwackers

Portman-Smith, Nigel See Pentangle

Potter, Terry See Shirley Collins/Shirley and Dolly Collins/Etchingham Steam Band

Pottier, Steve See Sandy Rothman & Steve Pottier

Poullard, Danny See California Cajun Orchestra

Powell, Dirk See Balfa Toujours

Preston, Leroy See Asleep at the Wheel

Price, Kenny See The Hee Haw Gospel Quartet

Prichard, Lewis See Mando Mafia

Prior, Maddy See Steeleye Span

Prosser, Alan See The Oyster Band

Puckett, Riley See The Skillet Lickers

Putnam, Kit See Mill Run Dulcimer Band

Pyrtle, Keith See The Bluegrass Cardinals

Quesenberry, Jake See Country Ham

Quinton, Derek See Tom Robinson Band/Tom Robinson/Sector 27

Rabson, Ann See Saffire—The Uppity Blues Women

Rabson, Miriam See Klezmer Conservatory Band

Rafferty, Gerry See Stealers Wheel/Gerry Rafferty

Raine, Bethany See Good Ol' Persons

Rainwater, Cedric See Bill Monroe & His Blue Grass Boys

Rainwater, Dave See Piney Creek Weasels

Rainwater, Lonnie See Hackberry Ramblers

Ramey, Ben See Memphis Jug Band/Picaninny Jug Band/Jed Davenport & His Beale Street Jug Band

Ramos, Larry See The New Christy Minstrels

Ranger Doug (Douglas B. Green) See Riders in the Sky

Ranken, Andrew See The Pogues

Rankin, Carol Jean "Cookie" See The Rankin Family

Rankin, Heather See The Rankin Family

Rankin, Jimmy See The Rankin Family

Rankin, John Morris See The Rankin Family

Rankin, Raylene See The Rankin Family

Raskin, John See Klezmorim

Ratshin, Andrew See Electric Bonsai Band/Uncle Bonsai

Ray, "Snaker" Dave See Koerner, Ray & Glover

Ray, Amy See Indigo Girls

Read, Bob See Trapezoid

Reagon, Bernice Johnson See Sweet Honey in the Rock

Reed, Mitchell See Tasso

Reed, Roger See The Laurel Canyon Ramblers

Reid, Alan See Battlefield Band

Reid, Ellen See Crash Test Dummies

Reid, Lou See The Seldom Scene

Reidy, Jim See The Chicken Chokers; Primitive Characters

Reilly, Paddy See The Dubliners

Reiner, Robert See The Leaves

Reischman, John See Good Ol' Persons

Reisler, Paul See Trapezoid

Reiss, Scott See Hesperus

Reitz, Marv See Sunshine Skiffle Band

Renbourn, John See Pentangle

Reno, Don See Don Reno & Red Smiley

Resnick, Boo See Austin Lounge Lizards

Reynolds, Archie See The Chestnut Grove Quartet

Reynolds, John See Irish Rovers

Reynolds, Nick See The Kingston Trio

Rhodes, Kenny See The Foremen

Rice, Dave See Boiled Buzzards

Rice, Joseph See The Fairfield Four

Rice, Larry See Mark Johnson/Mark Johnson & Clawgrass

Rice, Ron See Mark Johnson/Mark Johnson & Clawgrass

Rice, Syl See The Flatlanders

Rice, Tony See Norman Blake and Tony Rice; J.D. Crowe/J.D. Crowe and the New South; Mark Johnson/Mark Johnson & Clawgrass

Rice, Wyatt See Mark Johnson/Mark Johnson & Clawgrass

Rich, Billy See Paul Butterfield Blues Band/Paul Butterfield's Better Days

Richards, Rusty See Sons of the Pioneers

Richards, Sue See Ceoltoiri; Ensemble Galilei

Richardson, Dave See Boys of the Lough

Richardson, "Jammin'" Al See The ReBirth Brass Band

Richmond, Fritz See The Charles River Valley Boys; Jim Kweskin & the Jug Band

Riddick, Clyde See Golden Gate Quartet/Golden Gate Jubilee Quartet

Rigler, Eric See Skyedance

Rigsby, Don See Lonesome River Band; Longview

Riley, Steve See Steve Riley & the Mamou Playboys

Ringer, Jim See Jim Ringer/Jim Ringer & Mary McCaslin

Rinzler, Ralph See The Greenbriar Boys

Rioux, Rocky See Piney Creek Weasels

Ritter, Leslie See Amy Fradon and Leslie Ritter/Amy Fradon

Rizzetta, Sam See Trapezoid

Robbins, Larry See Johnson Mountain Boys

Roberts, Brad See Crash Test Dummies

Roberts, Dan See Crash Test Dummies

Roberts, Joe See The Bing Brothers

Roberts, John See John Roberts & Tony Barrand

Roberts, Rick See Flying Burrito Brothers

Robertson, Robbie See The Band

Robie, Milton See Memphis Jug Band/Picaninny Jug Band/Jed Davenport & His Beale Street Jug Band

Robinson, Arnold See The Nylons

Robinson, Dave See Sunshine Skiffle Band

Robinson, Robby "Mann" See Zydeco Force

Robinson, Tom See Tom Robinson Band/Tom Robinson/Sector 27

Roche, Maggie See The Roches

Roche, Suzzy See The Roches

Roche, Terre See The Roches

Roe, Ray See The Chestnut Grove Quartet

Rogers, Kenny See The New Christy Minstrels

Romanoff, Chuck See Schooner Fare

Romanoff, Steve See Schooner Fare

Roper, Bruce See Sons of the Never Wrong

Rose, Billy See Lonesome Standard Time/Larry Cordle

Rose, Eric See The New St. George

Rose, Saul See Eliza Carthy/Eliza Carthy and Nancy Kerr/Kings of Calicutt

Rosenthal, Phil See The Seldom Scene

Ross, Billy See Ossian

Rossbach, John See Mac Benford/Mac Benford and the Woodshed All-Stars

Rothfield (Thompson), Suzy See Any Old Time String Band, Klezmorim

Rothman, Sandy See Sandy Rothman & Steve Pottier

Rouse, Don See Sunshine Skiffle Band

Rowan, Michaela See Mouth Music

Rowan, Peter See Muleskinner

Rowe, Tom See Schooner Fare

Rowland, Bruce See Fairport Convention

Rubin, Mark See Bad Livers

Ruffins, Kermit See The ReBirth Brass Band

Russell, Alistair See Battlefield Band

Russell, Bonnie See Russell Family

Russell, Dan See Dry Branch Fire Squad

Russell, Roscoe See Russell Family

Russell, Roy See Russell Family

Rutstein, Sonia See disappear fear

Ryan, Cathie See Cherish the Ladies

Ryan, Jimmy See Blood Oranges/Cheri Knight/Wooden Leg/Beacon Hillbillies

Ryan, Mark See Country Joe and the Fish

Sackett, Dick See Sunshine Skiffle Band

Saco, Javier Perez See Klezmer Conservatory Band

Saint, Stevie See Wolfstone

Salazar, Phil See Acousticats

Saliers, Emily See Indigo Girls

Salley, Roly See The Woodstock Mountain Revue

Sanborn, David See Paul Butterfield Blues Band/Paul Butterfield's Better Days

Sandefer, Martha See Trapezoid

Sanders, Bev See Jez Lowe/Jez Lowe & the Bad Pennies

Sanders, Ed See The Fugs

Sanders, Markie See Good Ol' Persons

Sanders, Ric See Fairport Convention

Sandmel, Ben See Hackberry Ramblers

Saperstone, Debby See Rude Girls

Sass, Jon See Hans Theessink/Blue Groove

Savoy, Ann See Magnolia Sisters; Savoy-Doucet Cajun Band

Savoy, Marc See The Balfa Brothers/Freres Balfa; Savoy-Doucet Cajun Band

Sawtelle, Charles See Hot Rize/Red Knuckles & the Trailblazers

Saxon, Steve See Klezmorim

Sayles, Jim See Country Ham

Scap, Mike See Hot Rize/Red Knuckles & the Trailblazers

Scarlet, Will See Hot Tuna

Schaefer, Robbie See Eddie from Ohio

Schmidt, Bill See The Double Decker String Band

Schmit, Timothy B. See The Eagles

Schwab, Jacqueline See Bare Necessities

Schwarz, Peter See Balfa Toujours; Steve Riley & the Mamou Playboys

Schwarz, Tracy See The New Lost City Ramblers; Tracy Schwarz & Ginny Hawker; Tracy Schwarz/Tracy Schwarz Cajun Trio; Strange Creek Singers

Schwimmer, Peter See Front Range

Scott, Mike See The Waterboys

Scruggs, Earl See Flatt & Scruggs; Bill Monroe & His Blue Grass Boys

Seals, Jim See Seals & Crofts

Sebastian, John See Lovin' Spoonful

Seddon, Patsy See Sileas

Seeger, Mike See The New Lost City Ramblers; Strange Creek Singers

Senauke, Alan See California Cajun Orchestra

Senders, Stefan See The Chicken Chokers

Settles, Walter See The Fairfield Four

Shabazz, Solomon "Nine" See The ReBirth Brass Band

Shadd, Allen See Mark Johnson/Mark Johnson & Clawgrass

Shade, Will See Memphis Jug Band/Picaninny Jug Band/Jed Davenport & His Beale Street Jug Band

Shane, Bob See The Kingston Trio

Shankerman, Janet See Incredible String Band

Shannon, Sharon See The Waterboys

Shaw, Charlie See Five Chinese Brothers

Shaw, Donald See Capercaillie

Shaw, Lauchlin See Lauchlin Shaw & A.C. Overton

Sheahan, John See The Dubliners

Shearin, Kevin See Filé

Shelasky, Paul See Good Ol' Persons

Shelasky, Sue See Good Ol' Persons

Shelor, Sammy See Lonesome River Band

Shezbie, Derrick "Khabuky" See The ReBirth Brass Band

Shove, Patty See Stoney Lonesome

Shrader, Erin See Ensemble Galilei

Shreve, Floyd See Hackberry Ramblers

Siggins, Bob See The Charles River Valley Boys; Jim Kweskin & the Jug Band

Siggins, Sam See California Cajun Orchestra

Signer, Ethan See The Charles River Valley Boys

Silvius, Paul See Joe Val & the New England Bluegrass Boys

Simon, Paul See Simon & Garfunkel

Simpkins, Ronnie See The Seldom Scene

Simpson, Bland See Red Clay Ramblers

Simpson, Jessica Ruby See Martin Simpson/Martin & Jessica Ruby Simpson/Band of Angels

Simpson, Martin See Martin Simpson/Martin & Jessica Ruby Simpson/Band of Angels

Simpson, Rose See Incredible String Band

Sinclair, Alex See Tamarack

Sinnott, Declan See Moving Hearts

Sizemore, Herschel See The Bluegrass Cardinals

Skaggs, Ricky See Boone Creek; J.D. Crowe/J.D. Crowe and the New South

Skelton, John See The House Band

Sklamberg, Lorin See The Klezmatics

Skuse, David See Klezmorim

Sloane, Bobby See The Kentucky Colonels/The Country Boys

Slye, Leonard See Sons of the Pioneers

Smiley, Red See Don Reno & Red Smiley

Smillie, Phil See Tannahill Weavers

Smith, Chip See Primitive Characters

Smith, Chip Taylor See The Chicken Chokers

Smith, Debi See Four Bitchin' Babes; Smith Sisters/Debi Smith

Smith, Grant See Klezmer Conservatory Band

Smith, Kenny See Lonesome River Band

Smith, Robin See Lonesome Standard Time/Larry Cordle

Smith, Russell See The Amazing Rhythm Aces

Smith, Tim See The Bluegrass Cardinals

Smothers, Dick See Smothers Brothers/Pat Paulsen

Smothers, Smokey See Paul Butterfield Blues Band/Paul Butterfield's Better Days

Smothers, Tom See Smothers Brothers/Pat Paulsen

Snodderly, Ed See The Brother Boys

Snyder, Stephen See Bright Morning Star

Sommerville, David See The Four Preps

Sonnier, Lennis See Hackberry Ramblers

Southards, Wayne See Lonesome Standard Time/Larry Cordle

Sparks, Randy See The New Christy Minstrels

Spencer, Hilary See Artisan

Spencer, Mark See Blood Oranges/Cheri Knight/Wooden Leg/Beacon Hillbillies

Spencer, Tim See Sons of the Pioneers

Spillane, Davy See Moving Hearts

Spriggins, Deuce See Sons of the Pioneers

Sproule, Daithi See Trian

St. Julien, Gerard Jr. See Roy Carrier/Roy Carrier and the Night Rockers

Stacy, Spider See The Pogues

Stafford, Tim See Blue Highway

Stahl, Ilene See Klezmer Conservatory Band

Stahl, Jeanie See Jeanie Stahl/Jeanie Stahl & Mason Daring

Stamper, Tom See Klezmorim

Stampfel, Peter See The Fugs; The Holy Modal Rounders

Standun, Dearbhaill See Mary Bergin/Dordan

Stanley, Carter See The Stanley Brothers

Stanley, Ralph See Ralph Stanley/Ralph Stanley & the Clinch Mountain Boys; The Stanley Brothers

Stark, Sandy See The Chicken Chokers; Primitive Characters

Starling, John See The Seldom Scene

Stearns, Rich See The Horseflies/The Tompkins County Horseflies

Stecher, Jody See Jody Stecher & Kate Brislin

Steele, Andrew See Stealers Wheel/Gerry Rafferty

Steele, Davy See Battlefield Band; Ceolbeg

Steeler, Bob See Hot Tuna

Steffey, Adam See Lonesome River Band

Stein, Andy See Commander Cody & His Lost Planet Airmen

Stemple, Adam See Boiled in Lead

Stenshoel, Dave See Boiled in Lead

Stephen, Amy See Mad Pudding

Stephens, Liz See Boiled Buzzards

Stephenson, Larry See The Bluegrass Cardinals

Stevens, Michael See Austin Lounge Lizards

Stevens, Peter See Filé

940 vol stevens

Stevens, Vol See Memphis Jug Band/Picaninny Jug Band/Jed Davenport & His Beale Street Jug Band

Steward, Reginald See The ReBirth Brass Band

Stewart, Andy M. See Silly Wizard

Stewart, Harvey See Sunshine Skiffle Band

Stewart, John See The Kingston Trio

Stewart, Ron See The Lynn Morris Band

Stewart, Wendy See Ceolbeg

Stills, Stephen See Buffalo Springfield; Crosby, Stills and Nash/Crosby, Stills, Nash and Young/David Crosby/Crosby & Nash/Graham Nash/Stephen Stills

Stinson, Henry See Sunshine Skiffle Band

Stirratt, John See Uncle Tupelo/Wilco/Son Volt

Stockard, Ocie See Milton Brown and the Musical Brownies

Stokes, JoAnn "Claire June" See Fuzzy Mountain String Band

Stokes, Lowe See The Skillet Lickers

Stoneman, Ernest See Ernest Stoneman/The Stoneman Family

Stoneman, Scott See The Kentucky Colonels/The Country Boys

Stookey, Noel "Paul" See Peter, Paul & Mary

Stover, Don See Lilly Brothers & Don Stover

Stover, Evan See Fiddle Fever

Stradling, Barnaby See Eliza Carthy/Eliza Carthy and Nancy Kerr/Kings of Calicutt

Street, Grant See Laurie Lewis & Grant Street

Strong, Tim See Union Springs

Strother, Paul See The Chicken Chokers; Primitive Characters

Stuart, Chad See Chad & Jeremy

Stuart, Michael See Love

Stuart, Mindy See Rooftop Singers

Stubbs, Eddie See Johnson Mountain Boys

Surgeoner, Billy See Jez Lowe/Jez Lowe & the Bad Pennies

Surgeoner, Bob See Jez Lowe/Jez Lowe & the Bad Pennies

Surrick, Carolyn Anderson See Ensemble Galilei

Sutherland, Pete See Mac Benford/Mac Benford and the Woodshed All-Stars

Sutphin, Paul See The Camp Creek Boys

Svanoe, Bill See Rooftop Singers

Svigals, Alicia See The Klezmatics

Swan, Martin See Mouth Music

Swarbrick, Dave See Fairport Convention

Swayne, Jon See Blowzabella

Sweeney, Paul See Austin Lounge Lizards

Sykes, Ernie See The Bluegrass Cardinals

Tamsula, Mark See Boiled Buzzards

Tarlton, Jimmie See Darby and Tarlton

Taylor, Brian "Dolphin" See Tom Robinson Band/Tom Robinson/Sector 27

Taylor, Chris See The Oyster Band

Taylor, Gary See Stealers Wheel/Gerry Rafferty

Taylor, Gil See The Hoosier Hot Shots

Taylor, Lynne See Rooftop Singers

Taylor, Marcia See Bright Morning Star

Taylor, Wayne See Blue Highway

Telfer, Ian See The Oyster Band

Terry, Kenneth See The ReBirth Brass Band

Tharp, Al See Beausoleil

Theessink, Hans See Hans Theessink/Blue Groove

Thelfa, Ali See Hans Theessink/Blue Groove

Theo, Lisa See Ranch Romance

Thistlethwaite, Anthony See The Waterboys

Thomas, Bob See No Strings Attached

Thomas, Jason See Mark Johnson/Mark Johnson & Clawgrass

Thomas, Linda See Linda Thomas & Dan DeLancey

Thomas, Neil See Five Chinese Brothers

Thomas, Raymond See Zydeco Force

Thomas, Suzanne See Dry Branch Fire Squad

Thomason, Ron See Dry Branch Fire Squad

Thompson, Bobbie See Fuzzy Mountain String Band; Hollow Rock String Band

Thompson, Danny See Pentangle

Thompson, Eric See California Cajun Orchestra; Eric & Suzy Thompson

Thompson, Les See The Nitty Gritty Dirt Band

Thompson, Linda See Richard Thompson/Linda Thompson/Richard & Linda Thompson

Thompson, Richard See Fairport Convention; Richard Thompson/Linda Thompson/Richard & Linda Thompson

Thompson, Suzy See California Cajun Orchestra; Eric & Suzy Thompson

Thompson, Tommy See Hollow Rock String Band; Red Clay Ramblers

Thorburn, Andy See Ceolbeg

Thornton, Donald See Klezmorim

Thurman, Lynn Cox See The Cox Family

Tichy, John See Commander Cody & His Lost Planet Airmen

Tidwell, Bob See Joe Val & the New England Bluegrass Boys

Timmins, Margo See Cowboy Junkies

Timmins, Michael See Cowboy Junkies

Timmins, Peter See Cowboy Junkies

Too Slim (Fred LaBour) See Riders in the Sky

Touchet, Wallace See Sundown Playboys/Lesa Cormier & the Sundown Playboys

Trainor, Kevin See Five Chinese Brothers

Traum, Artie See Happy Traum/Happy & Artie Traum; The Woodstock Mountain Revue

Traum, Happy See Happy Traum/Happy & Artie Traum; The Woodstock Mountain Revue

Travers, Fred See The Seldom Scene

Travers, Mary See Peter, Paul & Mary

Treat, Clarence See The New Christy Minstrels

Trickett, Ed See Bok, Muir & Trickett

Trietsch, Ken "Rudy" See The Hoosier Hot Shots

Trietsch, Paul "Hezzie" See The Hoosier Hot Shots

Trimble, Annie See Boiled Buzzards

Trischka, Tony See Psychograss

Tucker, James See Mark Johnson/Mark Johnson & Clawgrass

Tuckett, Jerry See Country Ham

Tweedy, Jeff See Uncle Tupelo/Wilco/Son Volt

Tyminski, Dan See Lonesome River Band

Tyson, Ian See Ian & Sylvia/Ian Tyson/The Great Speckled Bird/Sylvia Fricker Tyson

Tyson, Sylvia Fricker See Ian & Sylvia/Ian Tyson/The Great Speckled Bird/Sylvia Fricker Tyson

Ulrich, Peter See Dead Can Dance

Underwood, Richard See Johnson Mountain Boys

Ungar, Jay See Fiddle Fever; Jay Ungar & Molly Mason

Val, Joe See The Charles River Valley Boys; Joe Val & the New England Bluegrass Boys

Valdes, Tim See Trapezoid

Vallely, Cillian See Whirligig

Van Meter, Sally See Good Ol' Persons

Vasile, Bob See Freyda and Acoustic AttaTude

Verret, Errol See Basin Brothers; Beausoleil

Viator, Deborah Helen See Magnolia Sisters

Vickers, Bernie See The Watersons

Vidrine, Jane See Magnolia Sisters

Vidrine, Randy See Tasso

Vignaud, Robert See Beausoleil

Vigour, Pete See Trapezoid

Vincson, Walter See Mississippi Sheiks

Voss, Jane See Jane Voss/Jane Voss & Hoyle Osborne

Wakefield, Frank See The Greenbriar Boys

Walker, Nancy See Sons of the Never Wrong

Wallace, Bill See Mill Run Dulcimer Band

Waller, Charlie See The Country Gentlemen

Waller, Gordon See Peter & Gordon

Wallin, Doug See Doug & Jack Wallin

Wallin, Jack See Doug & Jack Wallin

Wallinger, Karl See The Waterboys

Walsh, Joe See The Eagles

Walters, Neal See Mill Run Dulcimer Band

Ward, Kendra See Kendra Ward & Bob Bence

Ward, Otto "Gabe" See The Hoosier Hot Shots

Ware, Billy See Beausoleil

Warnock, Clódagh See Déanta

Warren, Dale See Sons of the Pioneers

Warschauer, Jeff See Klezmer Conservatory Band

Wash, Ralph See Paul Butterfield Blues Band/Paul Butterfield's Better Days

Washart, Peter See Runrig

Waters, Wilson See The Fairfield Four

Waterson, Elaine (Lal) See The Watersons

Waterson, Mike See The Watersons

Waterson, Norma See Waterson:Carthy; The Watersons

Waterson, Rachel See The Watersons

Watkin, Ted See Big Blow and the Bushwackers

Watkins, Allen See Mark Johnson/Mark Johnson & Clawgrass

Watkins, Julius See The Fugs

Watson, Doc See Doc Watson/The Watson Family/Doc & Merle Watson

Watson, Jim See Red Clay Ramblers

Watson, Merle See Doc Watson/The Watson Family/Doc & Merle Watson

Wayne, Dallas See Special Consensus

Weaver, Ken See The Fugs

Webb, Darrell See J.D. Crowe/J.D. Crowe and the New South

Webb, Dean See The Dillards

Webb, Gale See The Chestnut Grove Quartet

Webb, Jim See Kentucky Standard Band

Weber, Steve See The Fugs; The Holy Modal Rounders

Webster, Duane See Front Range

Weider, Jim See The Band

Weil, Beth See Good Ol' Persons

Weinberger, Marvin See Klezmer Conservatory Band

Weiner, Sarah See Ensemble Galilei

Weir, Bob See Grateful Dead

Weisberger, Jon See Union Springs

Weissberg, Eric See The Greenbriar Boys

Weldon, Will See Memphis Jug Band/Picaninny Jug Band/Jed Davenport & His Beale Street Jug Band

Wells, Andi See Eliza Carthy/Eliza Carthy and Nancy Kerr/Kings of Calicutt

Werner, Joe See Hackberry Ramblers

Wernick, Pete See Hot Rize/Red Knuckles & the Trailblazers

Werts, Diana See The Plaid Family

Werts, Kelly See The Plaid Family

Wertz, Kenny See Flying Burrito Brothers

Wesson, Steve See The Flatlanders

West, Gary See Ceolbeg

Wheetman, Dan See Marley's Ghost

Whitaker, Gabe See The Laurel Canyon Ramblers

White, Anne Louise See Trapezoid

White, Bob See Country Ham

White, Buck See The Whites/Buck White & the Down Home Folks

White, Cheryl See The Whites/Buck White & the Down Home Folks

White, Clarence See The Byrds; The Kentucky Colonels/The Country Boys; Muleskinner

White, Eric See The Kentucky Colonels/The Country Boys

White, Helen See Farmer's Daughters

White, Ralph See Bad Livers

White, Roland See The Kentucky Colonels/The Country Boys; The Nashville Bluegrass Band

White, Sharon See The Whites/Buck White & the Down Home Folks

Whitley, Keith See J.D. Crowe/J.D. Crowe and the New South

Whitney, Doug See The Foremen

Whitstein, Charles See The Whitstein Brothers

Whitstein, Robert See The Whitstein Brothers

Whitted, Dennis See Paul Butterfield Blues Band/Paul Butterfield's Better Days

Whittemore, Tim See Big Blow and the Bushwackers

Wickham, Steve See The Waterboys

Wicklund, Brian See Stoney Lonesome

Wig, Chris See Boiled Buzzards

Wiggins, Phil See Cephas & Wiggins

Wilborn, Marshall See Longview; The Lynn Morris Band

Wilcox, Jon See Marley's Ghost

Wiley, Derek See The ReBirth Brass Band

Willborn, Marshall See Johnson Mountain Boys

Williams, Kirk See Austin Lounge Lizards

Williams, Linda See Robin & Linda Williams

Williams, Nathan See Nathan & the Zydeco Cha Chas/Nathan Williams

Williams, Polly Lewis See The Lewis Family

Williams, Robin See Robin & Linda Williams

Williams, Roger See Joe Val & the New England Bluegrass Boys

Williams, Tony See Stealers Wheel/Gerry Rafferty

Williamson, Robin See Incredible String Band

Wilson, Cam See Mad Pudding

Wilson, Dan See The Bing Brothers

Wilson, David See Kentucky Standard Band

Wilson, Orlandus See Golden Gate Quartet/Golden Gate Jubilee Quartet

Wilson, Philip See Paul Butterfield Blues Band/Paul Butterfield's Better Days

Wilson, Tim See Austin Lounge Lizards

Wimmer, Kevin See Balfa Toujours; Good Ol' Persons

Wincott, Terry See Amazing Blondel

Windsor, Morris See Robyn Hitchcock/Robyn Hitchcock & the Egyptians

Winter, Jonah See Ed's Redeeming Qualities

Winters, Stephanie See The Nudes

Wintour, Dave See Stealers Wheel/Gerry Rafferty

Wise, Chubby See Bill Monroe & His Blue Grass Boys

Wishnefsky, Brian See Klezmorim

Wisor, Jeff See Country Ham

Wolf, Bill See The Fugs

Wolf, Eugene See The Brother Boys

Wolfe, Bruno See Jim Kweskin & the Jug Band

Wood, Heather See Young Tradition

Wood, Royston See Young Tradition

Woods, Gay See Steeleye Span

Woods, Nick See The New Christy Minstrels

Woods, Terry See The Pogues; Steeleye Span; Sweeney's Men

Wooten, Roy "Future Man" See Béla Fleck/Béla Fleck and the Flecktones

Wooten, Victor Lemonte See Béla Fleck/Béla Fleck and the Flecktones

Wright, Clyde See Golden Gate Quartet/Golden Gate Jubilee Quartet

Wright, Johnnie See Johnnie & Jack

Wright, Norman See The Bluegrass Cardinals

Yager, Earl See Johnson Mountain Boys

Yanovsky, Zal See Lovin' Spoonful

Yarbrough, Glenn See The Limeliters

Yarrow, Peter See Peter, Paul & Mary

Yeaton, Paul See Trapezoid

Yellin, Bob See The Greenbriar Boys

Yester, Jerry See Lovin' Spoonful

Yester, Lena See Lovin' Spoonful

York, John See The Byrds

Young, Jimmy See The House Band

Young, Keith See Mill Run Dulcimer Band

Young, Neil See Buffalo Springfield; Crosby, Stills and Nash/Crosby, Stills, Nash and Young/David Crosby/Crosby & Nash/Graham Nash/Stephen Stills

Young, Victoria See Dick Harrington & Victoria Young

Youngson, Mop See Wolfstone

Zaffron, Dick See Fuzzy Mountain String Band

Zavala, Catherine See The Mollys

Zimmerman, Roy See The Foremen

Zwigoff, Terry See The Cheap Suit Serenaders

musicHound producer index

The Producer Index lists the albums in MusicHound Folk that have a producer noted for them. Under each producer's name is the name of the artist or group in whose entry the album can be found, followed by the album title. If an album is produced by more than one individual/group, the album name will be listed separately under the names of each of the producers. (Note: The entry in which the album can be found is not necessarily that of the artist or group whose album it is. The album could be a compilation album, a film soundtrack, an album on which the artist or group appears as a guest, etc. Consult the artist or group's entry for specific information.)

Herb Abrahamson
Blind Willie McTell, Atlanta 12 String

Rick Abrams
Piney Creek Weasels, Squirrel Heads and Gravy

Mark Abramson
Michael Bloomfield, East-West
Paul Butterfield Blues Band/Paul Butterfield's Better Days, East-West
Judy Collins, Fifth Album
Judy Collins, In My Life
Judy Collins, Judy Collins #3
Judy Collins, Whales & Nightingales
Judy Collins, Wildflowers
Phil Ochs, In Concert

William Ackerman
Scott Cossu, A Windham Hill Retrospective
Malcolm Dalglish, Jogging the Memory
Tom Espinola and Lorraine Duisit, Windham Hill Guitar Sampler
John Gorka, Jack's Crows
Michael Hedges, Breakfast in the Field
Patty Larkin, Tango

John Adams Artisan, Breathing Space

Nancy Adams
Morgan Sexton, Shady Grove

Paul Adams
Frankie Armstrong, Till the Grass O'ergrew the Corn
A.L. Lloyd, Classic A.L. Lloyd
Jez Lowe/Jez Lowe & the Bad Pennies, Tenterhooks

Terry Adams
Boozoo Chavis, Boozoo Chavis

Steve Addabbo
Eric Andersen, Ghosts Upon the Road
Shawn Colvin, Steady On
David Massengill, Coming up for Air
Richard Shindell, Sparrows Point
Suzanne Vega, Solitude Standing
Suzanne Vega, Suzanne Vega

Lou Adler
Carole King, A Natural Woman: The Ode Collection 1968–1976
Carole King, Tapestry

Rich Adler
Claire Lynch/The Front Porch String Band, Silver & Gold
David Mallett, Parallel Lives

John Aeto
Sonny Chillingworth, Sonny

Michael Aharon
Solas, When Juniper Sleeps

Brian Ahern
Emmylou Harris, Cimarron
Emmylou Harris, Last Date
Emmylou Harris, Roses in the Snow
George Jones, The Bradley Barn Sessions

Caroline Aiken
Caroline Aiken, Live at the Attic
Caroline Aiken, Live Bait

Howard and Ron Albert
Harry Chapin, Remember When the Music
Chris Hillman/The Desert Rose Band, Slippin' Away

Ray Alden
Balfa Toujours, The American Fogies, Volume 1
Bayou Seco/Bayou Eclectico, The American Fogies, Vol. 1
Roy Carrier/Roy Carrier and the Night Rockers, Offshore Blues and Zydeco
Tommy Jarrell, Tommy & Fred: Best Fiddle-Banjo Duets Played by Tommy Jarrell & Fred Cockerham
Horace Trahan, The American Fogies, Volume I

Mary Katherine Aldin
Richard and Mimi Fariña/Mimi Fariña, Folk Music at Newport, Part 1
The Kentucky Colonels/The Country Boys, Long Journey Home

The Kingston Trio, Live at Newport
Carol McComb, Folk Music Newport Part One
The New Lost City Ramblers, The New Lost City Ramblers & Friends
Rooftop Singers, The Best of the Rooftop Singers
Eric Von Schmidt, Blues with a Feeling, Part Two Doc Watson/The Watson Family/Doc & Merle Watson, Doc Watson: The Vanguard Years

Kavichandran Alexander
Ry Cooder, A Meeting by the River
Taj Mahal, Mumtaz Mahal

Morten Alfred
The American Cafe Orchestra, Egyptian Dominoes

Pat Alger
Pat Alger, True Love & Other Short Stories

Johnnie Allen
Joseph Falcon and Cleoma Breaux Falcon, Cleoma B. Falcon: A Cajun Music Classic

Terry Allen
Terry Allen, Amerasia
Terry Allen, Bloodlines
Terry Allen, Human Remains
Terry Allen, Lubbock (on Everything)
Terry Allen, Songs from Chippy

Kent Allyn
Cosy Sheridan, Quietly Led
Cosy Sheridan, Saturn Return

Peter Alsop
Peter Alsop, Chris Moos Holidays
Peter Alsop, Uniforms
Peter Alsop, Wha'D'Ya Wanna Do?

Altan
Altan, Blackwater
Altan, Island Angel
Altan, Runaway Sunday

Billy Altman
Golden Gate Quartet/Golden Gate Jubilee Quartet, I Hear Music in the Air!
Golden Gate Quartet/Golden Gate Jubilee Quartet, Travelin' Shoes
Bill Monroe & His Blue Grass Boys, Are You from Dixie? Great Country Brother Teams of the 1930s
Bill Monroe & His Blue Grass Boys, Bill Monroe & His Blue Grass Boys: Muleskinner Blues
Blind Alfred Reed, Something Got a Hold of Me: A Treasury of Sacred Music

Dave Alvin
Dave Alvin, Blue Blvd
Dave Alvin, Museum of Heart
Rosie Flores, Tulare Dust

Amazing Blondel
Amazing Blondel, Restoration

Eric "Roscoe" Ambel Blood Oranges/Cheri Knight/Wooden Leg/Beacon Hillbillies, The Crying Tree Blood Oranges/Cheri Knight/Wooden Leg/Beacon Hillbillies, The Knitter

The Amidons
The Amidons, This Longest Night—Songs of Christmas, Chanukah, and the Winter Solstice

David Anderle
Judy Collins, Who Knows Where the Time Goes

Chris Andersen
Magpie, Spoken in Love

Eric Andersen
Eric Andersen, Blue River
Eric Andersen, Ghosts Upon the Road

Dale Anderson
Ani DiFranco, Ani DiFranco

Greg Anderson
James Keane, With Friends Like These
Whirligig, The Wheel

Pete Anderson
Rosie Flores, A Honky Tonk Reprise
Steve Forbert, The American in Me
Michelle Shocked, Captain Swing
Michelle Shocked, Short Sharp Shocked

Molly Andrews
Duck Baker/Duck Baker and Molly Andrews, American Traditional

Darol Anger
Psychograss, Like Minds
Psychograss, Psychograss

David Anthony
Rooftop Singers, Border Town at Midnight

Scott Anthony
John Pinamonti, Tragico Magico

Clifford Antone
James Cotton, Mighty Long Time

Philip Antoniades
Barbara Kessler, Stranger to This Land

Scott Appel
Scott Appel, Glassfinger
Scott Appel, Nine of Swords

Lawrence Ardoin
Chris Ardoin/Chris Ardoin and Double Clutchin', Lick It Up!

Scott Ardoin
Savoy-Doucet Cajun Band, Now and Then

Rod Argent
Nanci Griffith, Late Night Grande Hotel

Joan Armatrading
Joan Armatrading, Hearts and Flowers

Frankie Armstrong
Frankie Armstrong, Till the Grass O'ergrew the Corn

Gary Arnold
Kate Jacobs, What about Regret

Greg Artzner
Magpie, Circle of Life
Magpie, Seed on the Prairie

Moses Asch
Leadbelly/Huddie Ledbetter, The Original Asch Recordings
The New Lost City Ramblers, The New Lost City Ramblers, the Early Years, 1958–1962

Karen Ashbrook
Karen Ashbrook, Knock on the Door

Roy Ashby
Ceolbeg, An Unfair Dance

Peter Asher
Linda Ronstadt, Hasten down the Wind
Linda Ronstadt, Heart like a Wheel
Linda Ronstadt, Mad Love
Linda Ronstadt, Prisoner in Disguise
James Taylor, James Taylor
James Taylor, J.T.
James Taylor, Sweet Baby James

Johan Asherton
Scott Appel, Songwriter

Audie Ashworth
J.J. Cale, Five
J.J. Cale, Naturally . . . J.J. Cale
J.J. Cale, Special Edition

Association Culture et Musique Irlandaises Frankie Gavin, Irlande

Chet Atkins
Chet Atkins, Galloping Guitar: The Early Years
Johnnie & Jack, Johnnie & Jack
Garrison Keillor, Garrison Keillor & the Hopeful Gospel Quartet

Dawn Atkinson
Scott Cossu, A Windham Hill Retrospective

Tom Espinola and Lorraine Duisit, Windham Hill Guitar Sampler
John Gorka, Jack's Crows
Nightnoise, Shadow of Time

Atwater-Donnelly
Atwater-Donnelly, Simple Sentences
Atwater-Donnelly, Where the Wild Birds Do Whistle

Lynn August
Lynn August, Lynn August: Creole Cruiser

Seth Austen
Carrie Crompton, Bach Dances
Carrie Crompton, Come Let Us Be Merry
Carrie Crompton, Girls and Boys, Come Out to Play
Madeline MacNeil, All through the Night
Madeline MacNeil, Heart's Ease
Madeline MacNeil, Lone Wild Bird
Madeline MacNeil, A Place Apart
Madeline MacNeil, Soon It's Going to Rain Simple Gifts, Other Places, Other Times

James Austin
Mose Allison, Allison Wonderland: The Mose Allison Anthology
Clifton Chenier, Zydeco Dynamite: The Clifton Chenier Anthology
Lefty Frizzell, The Best of Lefty Frizzell
John Lee Hooker, The Ultimate Collection
Leo Kottke, The Leo Kottke Anthology
Merle Travis, Best of Merle Travis
Bob Wills, Anthology, 1935–73

Judy Austin
Judy Austin, Country Radio
Judy Austin, Pickles and Wine

Ron Bach
Carol Thompson, Wild Swans

Judi Bachrach
Amy Fradon and Leslie Ritter/Amy Fradon, Flyin' on the Wings of Heaven

Bad Livers
Bad Livers, The Golden Years

Duck Baker
Duck Baker/Duck Baker and Molly Andrews, American Traditional

Butch Baldassari
Lonesome Standard Time/Larry Cordle, Old Town
Lonesome Standard Time/Larry Cordle, A Touch of the Past

Jeff Balding
Janis Ian, Breaking Silence

Balfa Toujours
Balfa Toujours, A Vielle Terre Haute

Matt Balitsaris
Frank Christian, From My Hands
Frank Christian, Somebody's Got to Do It

Earl Ball
Jo-El Sonnier, Cajun Life

Patrick Ball
Patrick Ball, Christmas Rose
Patrick Ball, Finnegans Wake
Patrick Ball, Fiona
Patrick Ball, Storyteller: Gwilan's Harp and Other Celtic Tales

The Band
The Band, Islands
The Band, Moondog Matinee
The Band, Rock of Ages
The Band, Stage Fright
Bob Dylan, Basement Tapes

Freeland Barbour
Sileas, Beating Harps
Sileas, Delighted with Harps

Bare Necessities
Bare Necessities, English Country Dances
Bare Necessities, Take a Dance

Russ Barenberg
Russ Barenberg, Moving Pictures
Russ Barenberg, Skip, Hop & Wobble
Jerry Douglas/Douglas, Barenberg & Meyer, Skip, Hop & Wobble

Craig Barker
Tish Hinojosa, Taos to Tennessee

Les Barker
Les Barker, A Cardi and Bloke

Danny Barnes Bad Livers, Horses in the Mines

Tina Louise Barr
Tina Louise Barr, Breakin' Tradition

Tony Barrand
John Roberts & Tony Barrand, Eat Bertha's Mussels
John Roberts & Tony Barrand, Hail Smiling Morn!
John Roberts & Tony Barrand, Mellow with Ale from the Horn
John Roberts & Tony Barrand, Nowell Sing We Clear Volume IV
John Roberts & Tony Barrand, A Present from the Gentlemen

Paul Barrett
Luka Bloom, The Acoustic Motorbike
Hothouse Flowers, Home

Daryn Barry
Figgy Duff/Pamela Morgan, Downstream

John Barry
Chad & Jeremy, Best of Chad & Jeremy

Steve Barry
Patty Griffin, Let Him Fly
Patty Griffin, Living with Ghosts

Fred Bartenstein
Mac Wiseman, Classic Bluegrass

Bill Barth
Skip James, She Lyin'

Geoff Bartley
Scott Alarik, Old Fashioned

Peter Bartok
The New Lost City Ramblers, The New Lost City Ramblers, the Early Years, 1958–1962

Cathy Barton
Cathy Barton and Dave Para, Ballad of the Boonslick
Cathy Barton and Dave Para, Johnny Whistletrigger
Cathy Barton and Dave Para, Movin' on Down the River
Cathy Barton and Dave Para, Rebel in the Woods

Basin Brothers
Basin Brothers, Dans la Louisiana

Ralph Bass
John Lee Hooker, The Real Folk Blues

Jim Bateman
Clarence "Gatemouth" Brown, Alright Again!
Clarence "Gatemouth" Brown, Gate Swings

Tom Bates
Pete Seeger, Pete

Milton Batiste
The ReBirth Brass Band, Do Whatcha Wanna

Robin Batteau
David Buskin/Buskin and Batteau, B&B
Mason Daring/Jeanie Stahl and Mason Daring, The Early Years
Jeanie Stahl/Jeanie Stahl & Mason Daring, The Early Years

Harold Battiste
Dr. John, Dr. John's Gumbo
Dr. John, Gris Gris

Rick Bauer
Peter Mulvey, Brother Rabbit Speaks

Beausoleil
Beausoleil, La Danse de la Vie

C. Roscoe Beck
Jennifer Warnes, Famous Blue Raincoat: The Songs of Leonard Cohen

Walter Becker
Rickie Lee Jones, Flying Cowboys

Barry Beckett
John Prine, Storm Windows

George Bedard
Dick Siegel, Tomorrow Morning

Brian Bedford
Artisan, Our Back Yard

Robert Bell
The Devlins, Drift

Bob Bellamy
Jerry Rockwell, American Architecture
Jerry Rockwell, As Silent Stars Go By Jerry Rockwell, Rise over Run

Peter Bellamy
Young Tradition, Both Sides Then

Bill Belmont
Country Joe and the Fish, Live! At the Fillmore West

Bob Bence
Kendra Ward & Bob Bence, Dulcimer Country
Kendra Ward & Bob Bence, The Hammered Dulcimer Christmas Sampler
Kendra Ward & Bob Bence, Some Glad Morning!
Kendra Ward & Bob Bence, Way Down Yonder

Mac Benford
Mac Benford/Mac Benford and the Woodshed All-Stars, 1/2 Century in C Mac Benford/Mac Benford and the Woodshed All-Stars, Willow

Al Bennett
Mary Jane Lamond, From the Land of the Trees (Bho Thír Nan Craobh)

Alex Bennett
Patrick Sky, Songs That Made America Famous

Richard Bennett
Steve Earle, I Feel Alright
Emmylou Harris, At the Ryman
Emmylou Harris, Cowgirl's Prayer
Bill Miller, Raven in the Snow
Bill Miller, The Red Road
Jo-El Sonnier, Come on Joe
Jo-El Sonnier, Have a Little Faith

Ray Benson
Asleep at the Wheel, Asleep at the Wheel: Tribute to the Music of Bob Wills and the Texas Playboys
Asleep at the Wheel, Collison Course Asleep at the Wheel, Greatest Hits (Live & Kickin')
Don Walser, Rolling Stone from Texas
Don Walser, Texas Top Hand

Pierre Bensusan
Pierre Bensusan, Musiques
Pierre Bensusan, Solilai
Pierre Bensusan, Spices

Al Berard Basin Brothers, Let's Get Cajun

Tony Berg
Ted Hawkins, The Next Hundred Years

Glenn Berger
Fiddle Fever, The Best of Fiddle Fever
Tom Rush, Tom Rush: New Year/Live at Symphony Hall

Mary Bergin
Mary Bergin/Dordan, Feadoga Stain 2

The Bergmann Brothers
Tina Bergmann, The Bergmann Brothers—Fine Artiste

Tina Bergmann
Tina Bergmann, Shady Grove

Steve Berkowitz
Jeff Buckley, Live at Sin-E

Steve Berlin
Dave Alvin, Romeo's Escape
Crash Test Dummies, The Ghosts That Haunt Me
Stephen Fearing, The Assassin's Apprentice
John Wesley Harding, Pett Levels: The Summer EP
Tish Hinojosa, Homeland
Leo Kottke, Great Big Boy

Byron Berline
Byron Berline, Fiddle & a Song
Byron Berline, Jumpin' the Strings

Jeff Berman
Frank Christian, From My Hands
Frank Christian, Somebody's Got to Do It

Danny Bernini disappear fear, Almost Chocolate

Peter Bernstein Jonathan Richman, Jonathan Sings!

Cindy Lee Berryhill
Cindy Lee Berryhill, Garage Orchestra
Cindy Lee Berryhill, Straight Outta Marysville

Lou and Peter Berryman
Lou and Peter Berryman, Cow Imagination
Lou and Peter Berryman, Double Yodel
Lou and Peter Berryman, No Relation Lou and Peter Berryman, We Don't Talk about That!
Lou and Peter Berryman, What, Again?!

Nick Bicât
De Danann/De Dannan, Song for Ireland

Michael Billingsley
Helen Schneyer, Somber, Sacred & Silly

Scott Billington
Chris Ardoin/Chris Ardoin and Double Clutchin', Gon' Be Jus' Fine
Clarence "Gatemouth" Brown, Alright Again!
Clarence "Gatemouth" Brown, The Original Peacock Recordings
Buckwheat Zydeco, Waitin' for My Ya-Ya
Geno Delafose, French Rockin' Boogie
Geno Delafose, Pere et Garcon Zydeco Geno Delafose, That's What I'm Talking About!
John Delafose, Blues Stay Away from Me
Beau Jocque, Beau Jocque & the Zydeco Hi-Rollers
Beau Jocque, Beau Jocque Boogie
Beau Jocque, Pick up on This!
Nathan & the Zydeco Cha Chas/Nathan Williams, Creole Crossroads
Nathan & the Zydeco Cha Chas/Nathan Williams, I'm a Zydeco Hog
Willis Prudhomme, Zydeco Live!, Volume II
Steve Riley & the Mamou Playboys, La Toussaint

Russ Birch
Alan Mager, Hear the Colors

Jeff Bird
Tamarack, The 15th Anniversary Concert
Tamarack, Frobisher Bay

Tony Bird
Tony Bird, Bird of Paradise
Tony Bird, Sorry Africa

Joni Bishop
Joni Bishop, Everyday Miracles
Joni Bishop, Threads

Piers Bishop
The Copper Family, Coppersongs 2

Roy Bittan disappear fear, Seed in the Sahara

Cary Black
Magical Strings, Islands Calling
Linda Waterfall, A Little Bit at a Time

Mary Black
The Black Family/Shay, Michael, and Martin Black, Time for Touching Home

Robin Black
June Tabor, Silly Sisters

Black Dog Productions
Bob Shank, At the Wednesday Night Waltz

Becky Blackley
Becky Blackley, The Flower of Loudoun County
Becky Blackley, Gathering the Harvest

Lee Blackwell
Tracy Schwarz/Tracy Schwarz Cajun Trio, Mes Amis!

Dean Blackwood
Dock Boggs, Country Blues

Gary Blair
Smothers Brothers/Pat Paulsen, Pat Paulsen for President

Ian Blake
Eric Bogle, Small Miracles

Norman Blake
Norman Blake/Norman & Nancy Blake/Norman Blake and Tony Rice, Blake & Rice
Norman Blake/Norman & Nancy Blake/Norman Blake and Tony Rice, The Norman and Nancy Blake Compact Disc
Norman Blake/Norman & Nancy Blake/Norman Blake and Tony Rice, Whiskey before Breakfast

Archie Bleyer
Everly Brothers, All They Had to Do Was Dream
Everly Brothers, Cadence Classics: Their 20 Greatest Hits

Blix Street
Grace Griffith, GRACE

Andy Bloch
The Roches, No Trespassing

Ron Block
The Forbes Family, In the Shadow of Your Wings

Rory Block
Rory Block, The Early Tapes 1975/1976
Rory Block, High Heeled Blues

Blood Oranges
Blood Oranges/Cheri Knight/Wooden Leg/Beacon Hillbillies, Corn River

Blue Highway
Blue Highway, It's a Long, Long Road
Blue Highway, Midnight Storm
Blue Highway, Wind to the West

The Bluegrass Association
Lyman Enloe, Fiddle Tunes I Recall

Dave Blume
Carolyn Hester, Warriors of the Rainbow

Richard Bock
The Kentucky Colonels/The Country Boys, Appalachian Swing!

Eric Bogle
Eric Bogle, I Wrote This Wee Song
Eric Bogle, Scraps of Paper

Thomas M. Bohrer Mitzie Collins, Scotland the Brave

Boiled in Lead
Boiled in Lead, From the Ladle to the Grave
Boiled in Lead, Old Lead

Gordon Bok
Cindy Kallet, Neighbors

Bill Bolick
Blue Sky Boys, In Concert, 1964

Bob Bollard
Harry Belafonte, Belafonte at Carnegie Hall
Odetta, Belafonte Returns to Carnegie Hall

Polly Bolton
Polly Bolton, Loveliest of Trees
Polly Bolton, Songs from a Cold Open Field
Polly Bolton, Woodbine and Ivy

Helen Bommarito
Martin Hayes, Martin Hayes

Christian Bonneau
Golden Gate Quartet/Golden Gate Jubilee Quartet, Golden Years (1949–1952)

Boone Creek
Boone Creek, Boone Creek

Laura Boosinger
Laura Boosinger, Sing It Yourself

Jimmy Borsdorf
Bayou Seco/Bayou Eclectico, Cactus Gumbo and Alligator Enchiladas

Rick Boston
Rickie Lee Jones, Ghostyhead

The Bothy Band
The Bothy Band, Afterhours

Bruce Botnick
Love, Forever Changes

Bob Bovee
Bob Bovee and Gail Heil, Rural Route 2

Dennis Bovell
Sharon Shannon, Mind the Gap

Jimmy Bowen
Jimmy Buffett, Last Mango in Paris

Bryan Bowers
Bryan Bowers, The View from Home

Ronnie Bowman
Lonesome River Band, Cold Virginia Night

Amos Box
Boiled in Lead, Old Lead

Joe Boyd
Billy Bragg, Workers Playtime
Sandy Denny/Fotheringay, Fotheringay
Nick Drake, Bryter Layter
Nick Drake, Five Leaves Left
Nick Drake, Fruit Tree
Nick Drake, Time of No Reply
Fairport Convention, House Full
Fairport Convention, Liege and Lief
Fairport Convention, What We Did on Our Holidays
Richard Greene/The Grass Is Greener, Muleskinner: A Potpourri of Bluegrass Jam
Ashley Hutchings/The Albion Band, Rise up like the Sun
Incredible String Band, The 5000 Spirits or the Layers of the Onion Incredible String Band, The Incredible String Band
Kate & Anna McGarrigle, Dancer with Bruised Knees
Kate & Anna McGarrigle, Kate & Anna McGarrigle
Maria Muldaur, Maria Muldaur
Maria Muldaur, Pottery Pie
Maria Muldaur, Waitress in a Donut Shop
Muleskinner, Muleskinner: A Potpourri of Bluegrass Jam
June Tabor, Some Other Time
Richard Thompson/Linda Thompson/Richard & Linda Thompson, Richard Thompson Live! (More or Less)

Richard Thompson/Linda Thompson/Richard & Linda Thompson, Shoot out the Lights

Maggie Boyle
Steve Tilston & Maggie Boyle, All under the Sun

Boys of the Lough
Boys of the Lough, The Boys of the Lough
Boys of the Lough, Farewell and Remember Me
Boys of the Lough, Live at Carnegie Hall
Boys of the Lough, Live at Passim
Boys of the Lough, Lochaber No More
Boys of the Lough, A Midwinter Night's Dream Boys of the Lough, The Piper's Broken Finger
Boys of the Lough, To Welcome Paddy Home

Owen Bradley
Burl Ives, Greatest Hits!
Johnnie & Jack, Johnnie & Jack
k.d. lang, Shadowland
Jimmy Martin, Jimmy Martin & the Sunny Mountain Boys
Bill Monroe & His Blue Grass Boys, Bill Monroe—Bluegrass 1950–1958
Bill Monroe & His Blue Grass Boys, Bill Monroe—Bluegrass 1959–1969

Sandy Bradley
Peter Ostroushko, First Generation

Harry Bradshaw
Michael Coleman, Michael Coleman

Paul Brady
Paul Brady, Full Moon
Paul Brady, Hard Station
Paul Brady, Songs and Crazy Dreams
Paul Brady, True for You
Seán Keane, Jig It in Style
Tommy Peoples, Matt Molloy, Paul Brady, Tommy Peoples

Tommy Peoples, Welcome Here Kind Stranger

Delaney Bramlett
Eric Clapton, Eric Clapton

Brave Combo
Brave Combo, Girl
Brave Combo, Group Dance Epidemic
Brave Combo, The Hokey Pokey
Brave Combo, Musical Varieties
Brave Combo, No, No, No, Cha Cha Cha Brave Combo, Polkas for a Gloomy World

Maire Breatnach
The Black Family/Shay, Michael, and Martin Black, What a Time

Gary Brewer
Pap Brewer/Finley J. Brewer Sr., Pap Brewer/Finley J. Brewer Sr. from Roan Mountain, TN

David Briggs
Tom Rush, The Best of Tom Rush
Neil Young, After the Gold Rush
Neil Young, Everybody Knows This Is Nowhere
Neil Young, Old Ways
Neil Young, Rust Never Sleeps
Neil Young, Tonight's the Night
Neil Young, Unplugged

Frank Briggs
Bukka White, The Complete Bukka White

Fletcher Bright Fiddle Band
Fletcher Bright Fiddle Band, The Fletcher Bright Fiddle Band

Bright Morning Star
Bright Morning Star, Sweet and Sour

Gary Bristol
Red Clay Ramblers, A Lie of the Mind

Robin Broadbank
Kevin Burke, Dear Old Erin's Isle—Irish Traditional Music from America
Liz Carroll, Dear Old Erin's Isle—Irish Traditional Music from America
Jerry Holland, Traditional Music from Cape Breton Island
Billy McComiskey, Dear Old Erin's Isle—Irish Traditional Music from America

Jerry Brock
The ReBirth Brass Band, Here to Stay

Chuck Brodsky
Chuck Brodsky, A Fingerpainter's Murals

Steve Brogden
Bill & Bonnie Hearne, Smilin'

Dave Brogren
Fred Eaglesmith, From the Paradise Motel

Bruce Bromberg
Dave Alvin, Blue Blvd
Dave Alvin, Museum of Heart
Ted Hawkins, Happy Hour
Ted Hawkins, Watch Your Step

David Bromberg
David Bromberg, David Bromberg
David Bromberg, How Late'll Ya Play 'Til
John Hartford, Aereo-Plane

Michael Brook
Mary Margaret O'Hara, Miss America
The Pogues, Waiting for Herb
Jane Siberry, When I Was a Boy

Ed Brooks
Marley's Ghost, Haunting Melodies
Marley's Ghost, Let de Groove Rise Up

Ernie Brooks
Elliot Murphy, Party Girl, Broken Poets

Michael Brooks
Golden Gate Quartet/Golden Gate Jubilee Quartet, Swing Down, Chariot Bessie Smith, Bessie Smith

Rich Brotherton
Ed Miller, At Home with the Exiles
Ed Miller, Border Background
Ed Miller, The Edinburgh Rambler
Ed Miller, Home and Away
Ed Miller, Scottish Voice

Stuart Brotman Klezmorim, Metropolis

Alex Broussard
Jo-El Sonnier, Cajun Life

John Broven
Iry LeJeune, Cajun's Greatest: The Definitive Collection

Michael Brovsky
Joe Ely, Hi-Res
Joe Ely, Musta Notta Gotta Lotta
Dave Van Ronk, Songs for Aging Children
Jerry Jeff Walker, The Best of Jerry Jeff Walker
Jerry Jeff Walker, A Man Must Carry On, Volume I
Jerry Jeff Walker, A Man Must Carry On, Volume II

Clarence "Gatemouth" Brown
Clarence "Gatemouth" Brown, The Original Peacock Recordings

Douglas Brown
Baltimore Consort, On the Banks of Helicon: Early Music of Scotland
Baltimore Consort, A Trip to Killburn: Playford Tunes and Their Ballads
Baltimore Consort, Tunes from the Attic
Chris Norman, Lullaby Journey
Carol Thompson, The Enchanted Isles

Ginger Brown
Pete Seeger, Pete Seeger's Family Concert

tom callahan 9 4 9

Greg Brown
Greg Brown, Songs of Innocence and Experience

Jim Brown
Pete Seeger, Pete Seeger's Family Concert

Paul Brown
Paul Brown, Old Time, New Times
Paul Brown, Way Down in North Carolina
The Double Decker String Band, Chasing Rainbows
Mike Seeger, Way down in North Carolina
Martin Simpson/Martin & Jessica Ruby Simpson/Band of Angels, A Cut Above

Steve Brown
The Pogues, Pogue Mahone

Tony Brown
Steve Earle, Guitar Town
Joe Ely, Love and Danger
Nanci Griffith, Lone Star State of Mind
Nanci Griffith, One Fair Summer Evening
Walter Hyatt/Uncle Walt's Band, Lyle Lovett and His Large Band
Robert Earl Keen Jr., Love and Danger
Lyle Lovett, Lyle Lovett
Lyle Lovett, Lyle Lovett and His Large Band
Lyle Lovett, Pontiac
Mac McAnally, Knots
Mac McAnally, Live and Learn
Todd Snider, Songs for the Daily Planet

Jackson Browne
Jackson Browne, "I'm Alive"
Jackson Browne, Late for the Sky
Jackson Browne, Running on Empty
David Lindley, El Rayo-X

Peter Browne
Séamus Ennis, The Return from Fingal

Bob Brozman
Bob Brozman, Kika Kila Meets Ki Hoalu
Bob Brozman, A Truckload of Blues

Stephen Bruton
Sue Foley, Big City Blues
Jimmie Dale Gilmore, After Awhile
Chris Smither, Up on the Lowdown

B.R.V. Productions, Inc.
Tom Rush, Tom Rush: New Year/Live at Symphony Hall

James Bryan
James Bryan, The First of May James Bryan, Lookout Blues

Billy Bryans
Raffi, Evergreen Everblue

Rachel Buchman
Rachel Buchman, Jewish Holiday Songs for Children
Rachel Buchman, Sing a Song of Seasons

Peter Buck
Uncle Tupelo/Wilco/Son Volt, March 16–20, 1992

The Buckhannon Brothers
The Buckhannon Brothers, The Buckhannon Brothers

Jeff Buckley
Jeff Buckley, Grace
Jeff Buckley, Live at Sin-E

Tim Buckley
Tim Buckley, Starsailor

Norton Buffalo
Roy Rogers, Travellin' Tracks

Jimmy Buffett
Jimmy Buffett, Songs You Know by Heart: Jimmy Buffett's Greatest Hit(s)

Karla Buhlman
Gene Autry, Gene Autry with the Legendary Singing Groups of the West
Gene Autry, The Singing Cowboy, Chapter One

Robin Bullock
Robin Bullock, Green Fields
Robin Bullock, Midnight Howl

Al Bunetta
Steve Goodman, Tribute to Steve Goodman

Jan Burda
Anne Hills, On This Day the Earth Shall Ring

John Burgess
Peter & Gordon, I Go to Pieces

Steve Burgh
David Bromberg, How Late'll Ya Play 'Til
Steve Forbert, Alive on Arrival Steve Forbert, Steve Forbert

Kevin Burke
Kevin Burke, Eavesdropper
Kevin Burke, Portland
Jackie Daly, Eavesdropper
Mark Nelson, After the Morning: Irish, Scottish, and American Fiddle Music for Dulcimer

Malcolm Burn
The Devlins, Drift

Bucks Burnett
Brave Combo, Girl

T-Bone Burnett
T-Bone Burnett, Trap Door
Bruce Cockburn, Nothing but a Burning Light Jimmie Dale Gilmore, Braver Newer World
Gillian Welch, Revival

Barry "Byrd" Burton
The Amazing Rhythm Aces, Stacked Deck

Kay Busbey
Kristen Hall, Real Life Stuff

Henry Bush
Albert King, I'll Play the Blues for You

Kate Bush
Alan Stivell, Again

Kristian Bush
Chuck Brodsky, Letters in the Dirt

Sam Bush
Sam Bush, Glamour & Grits
Chris Thile, Stealing Second

David Buskin
David Buskin/Buskin and Batteau, B&B

Larry Butler
Don McLean, Chain Lightning

Paul Butterfield
Paul Butterfield Blues Band/Paul Butterfield's Better Days, Better Days
Paul Butterfield Blues Band/Paul Butterfield's Better Days, It All Comes Back

Jean Buzelin
Memphis Minnie, Me and My Chauffeur 1935–46

Joseph Byrd
Ry Cooder, Jazz

Dennis Cahill
Martin Hayes, The Lonesome Touch

Greg Cahill
Special Consensus, Hey Y'All

Charles Caldarola
Tom Russell, Poor Man's Dream

J.J. Cale
J.J. Cale, Closer to You
J.J. Cale, Five
J.J. Cale, Number 10
J.J. Cale, Special Edition
John Hammond Jr., Trouble No More

John Cale
Jonathan Richman, Modern Lovers

Charlie Calello
Laura Nyro, Eli & the 13th Confession

Andrew Calhoun
Andrew Calhoun, Hope

Tom Callahan
Rod MacDonald, Circles in the Stream—Volume I

Virginia Callaway
David Holt, Stellaluna

Duncan Cameron
Alaska's Hobo Jim, Lost & Dyin' Breed

Bob Camp
Bob Gibson, Bob Gibson and Bob Camp at the Gate of Horn

Paul Campagne
Connie Kaldor, Small Cafe

Eamonn Campbell
The Dubliners, Celebration
The Dubliners, 30 Years a-Greying

Jeff Campbell
The New St. George, Hungry for Music: A Holiday Feast

Larry Campbell
Richard Shindell, Reunion Hill

Rosamund Campbell
Rosamund Campbell, A Tender Recollection

Troy Campbell
Jo Carol Pierce, Bad Girls Upset by the Truth

Fred Campeau
Elaine Purkey, Mountain Music, Mountain Struggle
Rhythm Rats, Pretty Crowing Chicken

Mitch Cantor
Cliff Eberhardt, The Greenwich Village Folk Festival: 1989–1990

Al and Emily Cantrell
Emily & Al Cantrell/The Cantrells, Dancing with the Miller's Daughter Emily & Al Cantrell/The Cantrells, Under a Southern Moon

Capercaillie
Capercaillie, Crosswinds
Capercaillie, Get Out

Arnold S. Caplin
Son House, Delta Blues
Skip James, Greatest of the Delta Blues Singers
Furry Lewis, When I Lay My Burden Down
Walt Michael, Light Our Way Along the Highway
Walt Michael, A Rumor in Their Own Time

Evan Carawan
Guy Carawan/The Carawan Family, Home Brew

Guy Carawan
Guy Carawan/The Carawan Family, Home Brew

David J. Card
Bill & Bonnie Hearne, Live at Poor David's Pub

Mark Andrew Cardiff
Stan Rogers, Home in Halifax

Bob Carlin
Bob Carlin, Banging and Sawing
Bob Carlin, The Fun of Open Discussion
Bob Carlin, Melodic Clawhammer Banjo
Marvin Gaster, Uncle Henry's Favorites
John Hartford, Wild Hog in the Red Brush and a Bunch of Others You Might Not Have Heard

Pete Carlson
Bob Brozman, A Truckload of Blues

Nick Carlton
Dana Cooper, Roughly Speaking

Danny Carnahan
Mark Nelson, Southern Light

Mary Chapin Carpenter
Mary Chapin Carpenter, Come On Come On
Mary Chapin Carpenter, Shootin' Straight in the Dark
Mary Chapin Carpenter, Stones in the Road

Janis Carper
Heidi Muller, Giving Back

Chubby Carrier
Chubby Carrier/Chubby Carrier and the Bayou Swamp Band, Dance All Night

David Carroll
Smothers Brothers/Pat Paulsen, Aesop's Fables—The Smothers Brothers Way Smothers Brothers/Pat Paulsen, Pat Paulsen—Live at the Ice House
Smothers Brothers/Pat Paulsen, Sibling Revelry

Liz Carroll
Liz Carroll, Liz Carroll
Trian, Trian
Trian, Trian II

Drew Carson
Lee Murdock, Fertile Ground

Gil Carter
Sunshine Skiffle Band, Beat It, Blow It, Strum It, Hum It

Jason Carter
Jason Carter, On the Move

Pat Carter
Steve Earle, Early Tracks

Russell Carter
Indigo Girls, 1200 Curfews

Eliza Carthy
Eliza Carthy/Eliza Carthy and Nancy Kerr/Kings of Calicutt, Heat Light & Sound

Paul Caruso
Les Sampou, Sweet Perfume

Ann Case
Ann and Phil Case, The Springtime of Life

Phil Case
Ann and Phil Case, The Springtime of Life

Mike Casey
Mike Casey, The Hourglass

Johnny Cash
Johnny Cash, Classic Cash

Rosanne Cash
Rosanne Cash, Interiors
Rosanne Cash, Ten Song Demo

Terry Cashman
Jim Croce, Photographs & Memories: His Greatest Hits
Jim Croce, You Don't Mess Around with Jim

Peter Casperson
Jonathan Edwards, Jonathan Edwards

The Chambers Brothers
The Chambers Brothers, The Chambers Brothers' Greatest Hits

Tina Chancey
Hesperus, Early American Roots

Jim Chapdelaine
Margo Hennebach, Big Love

Stephen Chapin
Harry Chapin, Dance Band on the Titanic
Harry Chapin, Harry Chapin Tribute

Tom Chapin
Tom Chapin, Doing Our Job

Tracy Chapman
Tracy Chapman, Matters of the Heart

Fred Charlie
Keith Frank, You'd Be Surprised

Sam Charters
Alphonse "Bois Sec" Ardoin, The Ardoin Family Band with Dewey Balfa: A Couple of Cajuns Country Joe and the Fish, Electric Music for the Mind and Body Country Joe and the Fish, I-Feel-Like-I'm-Fixin'-To-Die Rag
Rockin' Dopsie, Big Bad Zydeco
John Fahey, The Essential John Fahey
Canray Fontenot, The Cajuns Vol. 1
Buddy Guy, A Man and the Blues
Furry Lewis, Shake 'Em on Down

Dave Van Ronk, Hummin' to Myself
Eric Von Schmidt, Baby, Let Me Lay It on You

Chinga Chavin
Kinky Friedman, Old Testaments & New Revelations

John Chelew
Martin Carthy, Life and Limb
Waterson:Carthy, Norma Waterson

C.J. Chenier
C.J. Chenier, Hot Rod
C.J. Chenier, My Baby Don't Wear No Shoes

Ed Cherney
Jann Arden, Living under June

Chesapeake
Chesapeake, Full Sail

Leonard Chess
Bo Diddley, Bo Diddley: His Best
Muddy Waters, His Best 1947–55

Phil Chess
Bo Diddley, Bo Diddley: His Best

Kathy Chiavola
Kathy Chiavola, Kathy Chiavola

Chicken Chokers
The Chicken Chokers, Chokers and Flies
The Chicken Chokers, Shoot Your Radio

Edward Chmelewski
Chubby Carrier/Chubby Carrier and the Bayou Swamp Band, Dance All Night

Adrian Chornowol
Ian & Sylvia/Ian Tyson/The Great Speckled Bird/Sylvia Tyson Fricker, All the Good 'Uns
Ian Tyson, Cowboyography

Frank Christian
Frank Christian, Mister So and So

Cindy Church
Cindy Church, Just a Little Rain

Michael Cicone
Cindy Kallet, Only Human

Carolyn Cirimele
The All Girl Boys, Lookin' for Ida Rose

Liam Clancy
Etta Baker, Instrumental Music of the Southern Appalachians

Patrick Clancy
A.L. Lloyd, Blow Boys Blow

Eric Clapton
Eric Clapton, From the Cradle
Buddy Guy, Buddy Guy & Junior Wells Play the Blues

Guy Clark
Guy Clark, Boats to Build
Guy Clark, Dublin Blues
Guy Clark, Old Friends

Rick Clark
Leo Kottke, The Leo Kottke Anthology

Royce Clark
The Flatlanders, More a Legend Than a Band
Butch Hancock, Two Roads: Live in Australia

Cyrus Clarke
Acousticats, The Cat's Meow Acousticats, Down at Evangelina's

Paul Clayton
Etta Baker, Instrumental Music of the Southern Appalachians

Bettine Clemen
Kim Robertson, Love Song to a Planet

Jack Clement
The Carter Family/The Carter Sisters/Maybelle Carter, Wildwood Flower
Johnny Cash, The Sun Years
Johnny Cash, Water from the Wells of Home
Townes Van Zandt, At My Window
Townes Van Zandt, The Late Great Townes Van Zandt
Townes Van Zandt, Our Mother the Mountain

Vassar Clements
Vassar Clements, Crossing the Catskills
Vassar Clements, Vassar's Jazz

Bill Clifton
Bill Clifton, The Early Years, 1957–1958
Bill Clifton, River of Memories

Bobby Cochran
Adrian Legg, Waiting for a Dancer

Mike Cogan
Any Old Time String Band, Any Old Time String Band
Any Old Time String Band, I Bid You Goodnight
Jane Voss/Jane Voss & Hoyle Osborne, An Album of Songs

John Cohen
E.C. Ball and Orna Ball, High Atmosphere

Paul Cohen
Johnnie & Jack, Johnnie & Jack
Jimmy Martin, Jimmy Martin & the Sunny Mountain Boys
Bill Monroe & His Blue Grass Boys, Bill Monroe—Bluegrass 1950–1958

Lawrence Cohn
Amédée Ardoin, Cajun Music: Fais Do-Do
Gene Autry, Blues Singer 1929–1931: Booger Rooger Saturday Night
Bill Carlisle/Cliff Carlisle/The Carlisles, White Country Blues: 1926–1938, A Lighter Shade of Pale
The Clancy Brothers and Tommy Makem/Tommy Makem and Liam Clancy, Irish Drinking Songs
Joseph Falcon and Cleoma Breaux Falcon, Abbeville Breakdown
Joseph Falcon and Cleoma Breaux Falcon, Cajun Dance Party: Fais Do Do Mississippi John Hurt, Avalon Blues: The Complete 1928 OKeh Recordings Blind Willie Johnson, The Complete Willie Johnson
Taj Mahal, World Music
Dennis McGee, Cajun Music: Fais Do-Do
Blind Willie McTell, The Definitive Blind Willie McTell
Memphis Minnie, Hoodoo Lady (1933–37)
Bill Monroe & His Blue Grass Boys, 16 Gems
Bill Monroe & His Blue Grass Boys, The Essential Bill Monroe & His Blue Grass Boys 1945–1949
Pete Seeger, A Link in the Chain
Bessie Smith, The Complete Recordings, Volume I
Bessie Smith, The Complete Recordings, Volume II
Bessie Smith, The Complete Recordings, Volume III
Bessie Smith, The Complete Recordings, Volume IV
Bessie Smith, The Complete Recordings, Volume V: The Final Chapter

Paula Cole
Paula Cole, This Fire

Denardo Coleman
Timbuk 3, Edge of Allegiance

T. Michael Coleman Chesapeake, Docabilly
The Seldom Scene, Scene 20: 20th-Anniversary Concert
Doc Watson/The Watson Family/Doc & Merle Watson, Docabilly
Doc Watson/The Watson Family/Doc & Merle Watson, Remembering Merle

Pat Collier
Robyn Hitchcock/Robyn Hitchcock & the Egyptians, Fegmania!
The Oyster Band, The Shouting End of Life

Daniel Michael Collins
Liz Carroll, A Friend Indeed
Liz Carroll, Kiss Me Kate
Frankie Gavin, Traditional Music of Ireland
Tommy Peoples, The High Part of the Road
Tommy Peoples, The Iron Man

Judy Collins
Judy Collins, Forever . . . The Judy Collins Anthology

Mitzie Collins
Mitzie Collins, Sackett's Harbor

Peter Collins
Indigo Girls, Swamp Ophelia

Phil Collins
Eric Clapton, August
Eric Clapton, Behind the Sun

Christine Collister
Christine Collister, Blue Aconite
Clive Gregson & Christine Collister, Love Is a Strange Hotel

Susan Colson
Robin Flower, More Than Friends

Shawn Colvin
Shawn Colvin, Cover Girl
Shawn Colvin, Steady On
Lucy Kaplansky, The Tide

Mike Compton
David Grier, Climbing the Walls

Rita Connolly
Rita Connolly, Rita Connolly

Séamus Connolly
Liz Carroll, Gaelic Roots
Martin Hayes, Gaelic Roots
James Keane, Gaelic Roots

Stompin' Tom Connors
Stompin' Tom Connors, Believe in Your Country
Stompin' Tom Connors, Bud the Spud Stompin' Tom Connors, Dr. Stompin' Tom . . . Eh?
Stompin' Tom Connors, Fiddle and Song
Stompin' Tom Connors, Long Gone to the Yukon
Stompin' Tom Connors, More of the Stompin' Tom Phenomenon
Stompin' Tom Connors, My Stompin' Grounds
Stompin' Tom Connors, On Tragedy Trail
Stompin' Tom Connors, A Proud Canadian Stompin' Tom Connors, Stompin' Tom and the Hockey Song
Stompin' Tom Connors, Stompin' Tom Connors Meets Big Joe Mufferaw Stompin' Tom Connors, To It and At It

Joachim Cooder
Ry Cooder, Music by Ry Cooder

Ry Cooder
Ry Cooder, Bop Till You Drop
Ry Cooder, Chicken Skin Music
Ry Cooder, Crossroads
Ry Cooder, Get Rhythm
Ry Cooder, Jazz
Ry Cooder, Johnny Handsome
Ry Cooder, The Long Riders
Ry Cooder, Music by Ry Cooder
Ry Cooder, Paris, Texas
Ry Cooder, Ry Cooder
The Pahinui Brothers/Cyril Pahinui/James "Bla" Pahinui, The Pahinui Bros.

Rod Cook
Laura Love, Helvetica Bold

Chris Coole
Arnie Naiman & Chris Coole, Five Strings Attached with No Backing

Steven Cooney
Déanta, Déanta

Dana Cooper
Dana Cooper, Roughly Speaking

Daniel Cooper
Roger Miller, King of the Road: The Genius of Roger Miller

Cordelia's Dad
Cordelia's Dad, Comet
Cordelia's Dad, Cordelia's Dad
Cordelia's Dad, The Joy Fun Garden

Denny Cordell
Willis Alan Ramsey, Willis Alan Ramsey

Larry Cordle
Lonesome Standard Time/Larry Cordle, Larry Cordle, Glen Duncan & Lonesome Standard Time Lonesome Standard Time/Larry Cordle, Lonesome As It Gets

Stan Cornelius
Jimmy C. Newman, Jimmy C. Newman & Cajun Country
Jimmy C. Newman, More Cajun Music

Elvis Costello
The Pogues, Rum, Sodomy, and the Lash

James Cotton
James Cotton, High Compression

Tommy Couch
Mississippi Fred McDowell, I Do Not Play No Rock 'n' Roll

Phil Coulter
The Dubliners, 30 Years a-Greying
Andy Irvine, Planxty
Planxty, Cold Blow and the Rainy Night
Planxty, Planxty
Planxty, The Planxty Collection
Planxty, The Well below the Valley

Country Ham
Country Ham, Fiddle Instrumentals Featuring Joe Meadows Country Ham, I'll Be Leaving
Country Ham, Music for Clogging Country Ham, My Old Paint Mare
Country Ham, Songs of Mother and Home Country Ham, Sounds of Yesterday
Country Ham, Where the Mountain Laurel Blooms
Jimmie Davis, Country Music Hall of Fame
Red Foley, Country Music Hall of Fame
Grandpa Jones, Country Music Hall of Fame
Uncle Dave Macon, Country Music Hall of Fame
Blind Alfred Reed, The Bristol Sessions
Roy Rogers, Country Music Hall of Fame
Leo Soileau, Raise Yur Window—A Cajun Music Anthology, Volume II
Sons of the Pioneers, Country Music Hall of Fame
Ernest Tubb, Country Music Hall of Fame

Country Music Foundation
Nathan Abshire, Le Grand Mamou: A Cajun Music Anthology: The Historic Victor/Bluebird Sessions, 1928–1941

John Court
Michael Bloomfield, A Long Time Coming
Paul Butterfield Blues Band/Paul Butterfield's Better Days, The Resurrection of Pigboy Crabshaw
Peter, Paul & Mary, In Concert

Eric Cowell
Artisan, The Season of Holly and Ivy

Kenny Craddock
Robin and Barry Dransfield, Wings of the Sphinx

Dan Crary
Dan Crary, Guitar
Dan Crary, Lady's Fancy
Dan Crary, Take a Step Over

Crash Test Dummies
Crash Test Dummies, God Shuffled His Feet

Kerry Crawford
Bruce Cockburn, Stealing Fire
Jane Siberry, No Borders Here

Kevin Crawford
Kevin Crawford/The Moving Cloud/Grianan/Raise the Rafters, D Flute
Kevin Crawford/The Moving Cloud/Grianan/Raise the Rafters, Maiden Voyage
Tommy Peoples, Maiden Voyage

Seamus Creagh
Jackie Daly, Jackie Daly Agus Seamus Creagh

Gary Cristall
Frankie Armstrong, Let No One Deceive You: Songs of Bertholt Brecht

Critton Hollow String Band
Critton Hollow String Band, By and By

Jim Croce
Jim Croce, Faces I've Been

Andrew Cronshaw
June Tabor, Abyssinians
June Tabor, Aqaba

Lee Crooks
Free Hot Lunch!, Eat This
Free Hot Lunch!, Penguin Love

Steve Cropper
John Prine, Common Sense

David Crosby
The Byrds, Byrds
Crosby, Stills and Nash/Crosby, Stills, Nash and Young/David Crosby/Crosby & Nash/Graham Nash/Stephen Stills, If I Could Only Remember My Name

Crosby, Stills and Nash
Crosby, Stills and Nash/Crosby, Stills, Nash and Young/David Crosby/Crosby & Nash/Graham Nash/Stephen Stills, Crosby, Stills & Nash
Crosby, Stills and Nash/Crosby, Stills, Nash and Young/David Crosby/Crosby & Nash/Graham Nash/Stephen Stills, Live It Up

Crosby, Stills, Nash and Young
Crosby, Stills and Nash/Crosby, Stills, Nash and Young/David Crosby/Crosby & Nash/Graham Nash/Stephen Stills, 4 Way Street
Crosby, Stills and Nash/Crosby, Stills, Nash and Young/David Crosby/Crosby & Nash/Graham Nash/Stephen Stills, Deja Vu
Crosby, Stills and Nash/Crosby, Stills, Nash and Young/David Crosby/Crosby & Nash/Graham Nash/Stephen Stills, So Far

Mike Cross
Mike Cross, Carolina Sky
Mike Cross, Live & Kickin
Mike Cross, Solo at Midnight

J.D. Crowe
J.D. Crowe/J.D. Crowe and the New South, Flashback

Rodney Crowell
Rosanne Cash, King's Record Shop
Rosanne Cash, Right or Wrong
Rosanne Cash, Seven Year Ache

Lynn Cruise
Garrison Keillor, Lake Wobegon Days

Chick Crumpacker
Harry Belafonte, All-Time Greatest Hits Vol. 1–3

Tony Cuffe
Ossian, When First I Went to Caledonia

Cultural Center for Social Change Magpie, The Long Walk to Freedom Reunion Concert

Johnny Cunningham
Kevin Burke, The Celtic Fiddle Festival
Cherish the Ladies, New Day Dawning Cherish the Ladies, Out and About
Johnny Cunningham, The Celtic Fiddle Festival
Johnny Cunningham, Fair Warning
Johnny Cunningham, Peter and Wendy
Johnny Cunningham, The Soul of Christmas: A Celtic Music Celebration with Thomas Moore Cathie Ryan, Out and About
Fred Small, Everything Possible
Solas, Solas
Solas, Sunny Spells and Scattered Showers
Brooks Williams, Back to Mercy

Phil Cunningham
Altan, Horse with a Heart
Ceolbeg, Not the Bunnyhop
Phil Cunningham, Airs and Graces
Phil Cunningham, The Palomino Waltz
Phil Cunningham, The Pearl
Connie Dover/Scartaglen, If Ever I Return
Connie Dover/Scartaglen, Somebody
Connie Dover/Scartaglen, The Wishing Well
Silly Wizard, Live Wizardry
Andy M. Stewart, By the Hush
Wolfstone, The Chase
Wolfstone, Year of the Dog

John Curtis
Maria Sangiolo, Follow Your Own Road
Fred Small, Heart of the Appaloosa

P.J. Curtis
Altan, Harvest Storm
Altan, The Red Crow
Arcady, After the Ball
Kevin Crawford/The Moving Cloud/Grianan/Raise the Rafters, The Sanctuary Sessions
Dolores Keane, Broken Hearted I'll Wander
Skylark, All of It
Skylark, Skylark

Lou Curtiss
Roy Acuff, Roy Acuff & the Smoky Mountain Boys 1939–41
Roy Acuff, Roy Acuff: 1936–1939 "Steamboat Whistle Blues"

Michael Cuscuna
Buddy Guy, Buddy Guy & Junior Wells Play the Blues
Bonnie Raitt, Give It Up
Chris Smither, Don't It Drag On
Chris Smither, I'm a Stranger Too
Eric Von Schmidt, Second Right Third Row

Jennifer Cutting
The New St. George, High Tea

Pierre Daigle
Paul Daigle, Est-Ce Que Tu Pleur
Paul Daigle, Paul Daigle—Robert Elkins & Cajun Gold

Bruce Daigrepont
Bruce Daigrepont, Coeur Des Cajuns
Bruce Daigrepont, Stir Up the Roux

Pappy Daily
George Jones, George Jones Sings Bob Wills
George Jones, Homecoming in Heaven

Felicia Dale
Tom Lewis, Making Waves
Tom Lewis, Surfacing

Malcolm Dalglish
Malcolm Dalglish, Hymnody of Earth
Malcolm Dalglish, Jogging the Memory
Malcolm Dalglish, Pleasure

Jackie Daly
Kevin Burke, Eavesdropper
Jackie Daly, Eavesdropper
Jackie Daly, Jackie Daly Agus Seamus Creagh
Jackie Daly, Many's a Wild Night

Mark Dann
Jack Hardy, The Cauldron
Jack Hardy, The Collected Works: 1965–1995
Rod MacDonald, Bring on the Lion
Rod MacDonald, Highway to Nowhere
Rod MacDonald, The Man on the Ledge
Rod MacDonald, White Buffalo

Charles Bud Dant
Hui Ohana/Ledward Kaapana, Hawaiian Style Guitars

Mason Daring
Mason Daring/Jeanie Stahl & Mason Daring, The Early Years
Mason Daring/Jeanie Stahl & Mason Daring, Matewan
Les Sampou, Fall from Grace
Jeanie Stahl/Jeanie Stahl & Mason Daring, The Early Years
Jeanie Stahl/Jeanie Stahl & Mason Daring, Mysteries
Bill Staines, The First Million Miles
Bill Staines, Redbird's Wing
Bill Staines, Tracks and Trails

Pete Dauncey
The Bothy Band, Live in Concert

Shaun Davey
Rita Connolly, Rita Connolly
Rita Connolly, Valparaiso
Liam O'Flynn/Liam ó Floinn, The Brendan Voyage
Liam O'Flynn/Liam ó Floinn, The Given Note
Liam O'Flynn/Liam ó Floinn, Granuaile
Liam O'Flynn/Liam ó Floinn, Out to an Other Side
Liam O'Flynn/Liam ó Floinn, The Pilgrim
Liam O'Flynn/Liam ó Floinn, The Relief of Derry Symphony

Guy Davis
Guy Davis, Call Down the Thunder

Julie Davis
Julie Davis, Heart Full of Song
Julie Davis, Journey to the Fluted Mountain Julie Davis, Traveling Light

Bob Dawson
John Jennings, Buddy
John McCutcheon, Sprout Wings and Fly
The New St. George, High Tea

Julian Dawson
Julian Dawson, Move Over, Darling

Norman Dayron
Michael Bloomfield, Living in the Fast Lane

Hughes de Courson
Planxty, 2e Festival Pop' Celtic Kertalg 73

De Danann
De Danann/De Dannan, Ballroom
De Danann/De Dannan, Hibernian Rhapsody
De Danann/De Dannan, The Mist Covered Mountain
De Danann/De Dannan, Selected Jigs, Reels and Songs
De Danann/De Dannan, Song for Ireland
De Danann/De Dannan, The Star Spangled Molly

Alex de Grassi
Scott Cossu, Reunion

Roy Dea
Steve Earle, Early Tracks

Dead Can Dance
Dead Can Dance, Aion
Dead Can Dance, Dead Can Dance
Dead Can Dance, The Serpent's Egg
Dead Can Dance, Spleen and Ideal

Déanta
Déanta, Déanta

Conrad Deisler
Austin Lounge Lizards, The Highway Cafe of the Damned

Jerry Del Giudice
Chubby Carrier/Chubby Carrier and the Bayou Swamp Band, Dance All Night

Dan DeLancey
Linda Thomas & Dan DeLancey, Among Old Friends
Linda Thomas & Dan DeLancey, The Gathering Place
Linda Thomas & Dan DeLancey, Merry Christmas
Linda Thomas & Dan DeLancey, Music from the Heart
Linda Thomas & Dan DeLancey, Plain and Simple

John Delgatto
Steve Gillette & Cindy Mangsen, Alone . . . Direct
Doc Watson/The Watson Family/Doc & Merle Watson, The Doc Watson Family

Marco Delmar
Lisa Moscatiello, Innocent When You Dream

Gary Delorme
k.d. lang, a truly western experience

Al DeLory
Glen Campbell, By the Time I Get to Phoenix
Glen Campbell, Gentle on My Mind
Glen Campbell, Wichita Lineman

Peter Dempsey
Carson Robison, Home, Sweet Home on the Prairie

Paul Dengate
Robin and Barry Dransfield, Be Your Own Man

Sandy Denny
Sandy Denny/Fotheringay, The North Star Grassman and the Ravens

Ed Denson
Skip James, She Lyin'
Bukka White, 1963 Isn't 1962
Bukka White, Legacy of the Blues

Rich DePaolo
The Burns Sisters, Close to Home

Joe Derrane
Joe Derrane, Give Us Another
Joe Derrane, Return to Inis Mor

Deseret String Band
The Deseret String Band/The Bunkhouse Orchestra, UTAH: Songs of Statehood

Don DeVito
The Byrds, 20 Essential Tracks from the Boxed Set: 1965–1990
The Byrds, The Byrds

Guy DeVito Salamander Crossing, Salamander Crossing

Dave Dexter Jr.
Peter & Gordon, I Go to Pieces

Tom Diamant
Good Ol' Persons, Anywhere the Wind Blows
Good Ol' Persons, I Can't Stand to Ramble
Kate Wolf, Close to You
Kate Wolf, Give Yourself to Love

Hazel Dickens
Jimmy Martin, You Don't Know My Mind

Jim Dickinson
Ry Cooder, Into the Purple Valley

Jim Dickson
Flying Burrito Brothers, Burrito Deluxe
The Greenbriar Boys, Di'an & the Greenbriar Boy
Chris Hillman/The Desert Rose Band, The Hillmen
Chris Hillman/The Desert Rose Band, Morning Sky

Bo Diddley
Bo Diddley, Bo Diddley: His Best

Conrad Diesler
Austin Lounge Lizards, Live Bait
Austin Lounge Lizards, Small Minds

Ani DiFranco
Ani DiFranco, Ani DiFranco
Ani DiFranco, Like I Said
Ani DiFranco, Living in Clip
Ani DiFranco, Women in (E)motion
Bruce U. "Utah" Phillips, the past didn't go anywhere

Richard Digance
Dougie MacLean, Butterstone

Joe DiGiorgi
Tom Chapin, Doing Our Job

David DiGiuseppe
Mike Casey, The Hourglass

Rodney Dillard
The Dillards, There Is a Time: The Best of the Dillards 1963–1970

Dwight Diller
Dwight Diller, Harvest: West Virginia Mountain Music

Noel Dinn
Figgy Duff/Pamela Morgan, Downstream

Hilary Dirlam
Bruce Greene, Fiddler's Dozen
Bruce Greene, Vintage Fiddle Tunes

disappear fear
disappear fear, Live at the Bottom Line

Don Dixon
James McMurtry, Where'd You Hide the Body
Red Clay Ramblers, King Mackerel and the Blues Are Running Red Clay Ramblers, Unsophisticated Time

Djoum
Elliot Murphy, Selling the Gold

Richard Dodd
Clannad, Magical Ring
Steve Earle, I Feel Alright

Anne Dodson
Anne Dodson, Almost Grown
Anne Dodson, From Where I Sit

Craig Doerge
Crosby, Stills and Nash/Crosby, Stills, Nash and Young/David Crosby/Crosby & Nash/Graham Nash/Stephen Stills, Chippin' Away

Gerard Dole
The Balfa Brothers/Freres Balfa, J'ai Vu le Loup, le Renard et la Belette

Gabriel Donahue
James Keane, That's the Spirit

Lloyd Paul Donnelly
David Buskin/Buskin and Batteau, Heaven Is Free Tonight

Gabriel Donohue
Eileen Ivers, Eileen Ivers
Joanie Madden, A Whistle on the Wind

Gabrielle Donohue
Cathie Ryan, The Back Door

Dordan
Mary Bergin/Dordan, Jigs to the Moon
Mary Bergin/Dordan, The Night Before . . . A Celtic Christmas

Neil Dorfsman
Paul Brady, Songs and Crazy Dreams
Paul Brady, True for You

Bob D'Orleans
David Rea, By the Grace of God

Joel Dorn
Mose Allison, Allison Wonderland: The Mose Allison Anthology
Leon Redbone, Double Time

Ruthie Dornfeld
The American Cafe Orchestra, Egyptian Dominoes

Doug Dorschug
Guy Carawan/The Carawan Family, Home Brew

Craig Dory
Carol Thompson, The Enchanted Isles

Brian C. Doser
Chuck Brodsky, A Fingerpainter's Murals

Double Decker String Band
The Double Decker String Band, Giddyap Napoleon
The Double Decker String Band, Sentimental Songs & Old Time Melodies

David Doucet
David Doucet, Quand J'ai Parti

Michael Doucet
Beausoleil, Cajun Conja
Beausoleil, La Danse de la Vie
California Cajun Orchestra, Not Lonesome Anymore
David Doucet, Beau Solo
Jo-El Sonnier, Cajun Roots
Tasso, Viens à Ma Maison (Come to My House)

Alan Douglas
Albert King, Red House

Jerry Douglas
Russ Barenberg, Skip, Hop & Wobble
Roy Book Binder, Bookeroo!
The Brother Boys, Plow
Alison Brown, I've Got That Old Feeling
Jason Carter, The Cold Hard Facts
Jason Carter, A Deeper Shade of Blue
Jerry Douglas/Douglas, Barenberg & Meyer, Everything Is Gonna Work Out Fine
Jerry Douglas/Douglas, Barenberg & Meyer, The Great Dobro Sessions
Jerry Douglas/Douglas, Barenberg & Meyer, Skip, Hop & Wobble
Jerry Douglas/Douglas, Barenberg & Meyer, Slide Rule
Jerry Douglas/Douglas, Barenberg & Meyer, Under the Wire
Tony Furtado, Within Reach
The Del McCoury Band/The McCoury Brothers/Ronnie & Rob McCoury, Cold Hard Facts
Doris "D.L." Menard, Cajun Saturday Night
The Nashville Bluegrass Band, Unleashed
The Nashville Bluegrass Band, Waitin' for the Hard Times to Go
Tim O'Brien/Tim & Mollie O'Brien, Oh Boy! O'Boy
Maura O'Connell, Blue Is the Colour of Hope
Maura O'Connell, Stories
Sally Van Meter, All in Good Time
Sally Van Meter, The Great Dobro Sessions

Tom Dowd
Eric Clapton, 461 Ocean Boulevard
Eric Clapton, Layla and Other Assorted Love Songs
Buddy Guy, Buddy Guy & Junior Wells Play the Blues
Chris Hillman/The Desert Rose Band, Trouble in Paradise

Nick Drake
Nick Drake, Pink Moon

Pete Drake
Ernest Tubb, Ernest Tubb—The Last Sessions; All-Time Greatest Hits

Dan Drasin
Patrick Ball, The Music of Turlough O'Carolan
Patrick Ball, Secret Isles

R.N. Drevo
E.C. Ball and Orna Ball, E.C. Ball with Orna Ball

Frank Driggs
Woody Guthrie, Dust Bowl Ballads
Robert Johnson, King of the Delta Blues Singers
Robert Johnson, Robert Johnson: The Complete Recordings
Bill Monroe & His Blue Grass Boys, Feast Here Tonight

Joel Drone
Leon Redbone, On the Track

Dry Branch Fire Squad
Dry Branch Fire Squad, Live! At Last

Bob Duffey
Tom Waits, The Early Years
Tom Waits, The Early Years, Volume 2

John Duffey
The Country Gentlemen, Folk Songs and Bluegrass

Alan Duffy
Scott Appel, Brittle Days

Martha Duffy
Debby McClatchy, Light Years Away

Dan Duggan
Dan Duggan, Between the Seasons
Dan Duggan, Trillium Lane

Glen Duncan
Lonesome Standard Time/Larry Cordle, Larry Cordle, Glen Duncan & Lonesome Standard Time
Lonesome Standard Time/Larry Cordle, Lonesome As It Gets

Stuart Duncan
Tony Furtado, Full Circle
David Grier, Lone Soldier

John Dunford
De Danann/De Dannan, Anthem
Sharon Shannon, Mind the Gap
Sharon Shannon, Sharon Shannon
The Waterboys, Fisherman's Blues

Tom Durack
disappear fear, Live at the Bottom Line

Robert Duskis
Scott Cossu, A Windham Hill Retrospective

Bob Dyer
Cathy Barton and Dave Para, Johnny Whistletrigger
Cathy Barton and Dave Para, Rebel in the Woods

Bob Dylan
Bob Dylan, Basement Tapes
Bob Dylan, Blood on the Tracks

Sue Dyson
Judy Small, Global Village

Fred Eaglesmith
Fred Eaglesmith, Drive-In Movie

Steve Earle
Steve Earle, El Corazon

East Side Flash
Laura Love, Z Therapy

Jim Ebert
Magpie, Circle of Life
Al Petteway, The Waters and the Wild

Dave Edmunds
k.d. lang, Angel with a Lariat

Ed's Redeeming Qualities
Ed's Redeeming Qualities, At the Fish & Game Club
Ed's Redeeming Qualities, Big Grapefruit Clean-Up Job
Ed's Redeeming Qualities, More Bad Times

Don Edwards
Don Edwards, Saddle Songs

Esmond Edwards
Mose Allison, Middle Class White Boy

Jonathan Edwards
Cheryl Wheeler, Cheryl Wheeler
Cheryl Wheeler, Mrs. Pinocci's Guitar

Kenny Edwards
Karla Bonoff, Karla Bonoff
Karla Bonoff, Restless Nights

Seamus Egan
Cathie Ryan, Cathie Ryan
Solas, The Brothers McMullen: Original Motion Picture Soundtrack
Solas, Songlines
Solas, A Week in January
Solas, When Juniper Sleeps

Kevin Eggers
Townes Van Zandt, Our Mother the Mountain
Townes Van Zandt, Townes Van Zandt

Kat Eggleston
Andrew Calhoun, Hope
Kat Eggleston, Outside Eden
Kat Eggleston, Second Nature

Egyptians
Robyn Hitchcock/Robyn Hitchcock & the Egyptians, Globe of Frogs

Dan Einstein
Steve Goodman, Affordable Art
John Prine, John Prine Live

Jason Eklund
Jason Eklund, Jason Eklund
Jason Eklund, A Streamliner's Duet

Betty Elders
Betty Elders, After the Curtain
Betty Elders, Crayons
Betty Elders, Daddy's Coal
Betty Elders, Peaceful Existence

Chuck Eller
Tracy Schwarz/Tracy Schwarz Cajun Trio, Mes Amis!

Neenah Ellis
Bruce U. "Utah" Phillips, Legends of Folk

Tony Elman
Tony Elman, Winter Creek

Joe Ely
Terry Allen, Songs from Chippy
Joe Ely, Hi-Res
Joe Ely, Love and Danger
Joe Ely, Musta Notta Gotta Lotta
Robert Earl Keen Jr., Love and Danger

Bill Emerson
Mark Johnson/Mark Johnson & Clawgrass, Bridging the Gap

Jim Emrich
Kate Campbell, Songs from the Levee
Dan Crary, Take a Step Over

Enessay Music
No Strings Attached, Isles of Langerhans
No Strings Attached, Traditional Music of the Future

Tony Engle
Eliza Carthy/Eliza Carthy and Nancy Kerr/Kings of Calicutt, Heat Light & Sound
Shirley Collins/Shirley and Dolly Collins/Etchingham Steam Band, For As Many As Will Séamus Ennis, The Wandering Minstrel
Archie Fisher, Will Ye Gang, Love
Dick Gaughan, Coppers and Brass
A.L. Lloyd, The Bird in the Bush
A.L. Lloyd, English and Scottish Folk Ballads
Ewan MacColl, The Real MacColl
Waterson:Carthy, Common Tongue

Waterson:Carthy, Waterson:Carthy
The Watersons, For Pence and Spicy Ale

Lyman Enloe
Lyman Enloe, Fiddle Tunes I Recall

Séamus Ennis
Séamus Ennis, The Best of Irish Piping

Brian Eno
Jane Siberry, When I Was a Boy

Ellen Epstein
Cindy Kallet, Only Human

Howie Epstein
John Prine, The Missing Years

Wayne Erbsen
Wayne Erbsen, Southern Mountain Classics

Susie Erenrich
Magpie, The Long Walk to Freedom Reunion Concert

Ahmet Ertegun
Rockin' Dopsie, Louisiana Music
Buddy Guy, Buddy Guy & Junior Wells Play the Blues
Blind Willie McTell, Atlanta 12 String

Colin Escott
The Stanley Brothers, Angel Band: The Classic Mercury Recordings
Hank Williams, The Original Singles Collection . . . Plus

Tom Espinola
Tom Espinola and Lorraine Duisit, Feather River
Tom Espinola and Lorraine Duisit, Which Way Waltz

David Evans
Robert Wilkins, Remember Me

Jack Evans
Wendy Stewart, About Time 2

Todd Everett
Hoyt Axton, American Originals

Jeff Eyrich
T-Bone Burnett, Proof through the Night

John Fahey
Dock Boggs, Country Blues
John Fahey, The Essential John Fahey
Skip James, She Lyin'
Bukka White, 1963 Isn't 1962
Bukka White, Legacy of the Blues

Warren Fahey
A.L. Lloyd, The Old Bush Songs

Fairport Convention
Fairport Convention, Jewel in the Crown

Joe Falsia
Tim Buckley, Look at the Fool

Michael Falzarano Hot Tuna, Classic Hot Tuna Acoustic
Hot Tuna, Classic Hot Tuna Electric

Georgie Fame
Mose Allison, Tell Me Something

Farmer's Daughters
Farmer's Daughters, Farmer's Daughters

John Faulkner
Dolores Keane, Farewell to Eirinn
Dolores Keane, Sail óg Rua

Charlie Faurot
E.C. Ball and Orna Ball, E.C. Ball with the Friendly Gospel Singers
George Pegram, George Pegram

Bob Feldman
Greg Brown, Songs of Innocence and Experience
Prudence Johnson, Hi Fly
Prudence Johnson, Little Dreamer . . . Lullabies for Young and Old Sweet Honey in the Rock, Ben and Jerry's Newport Folk Festival: Turn of the Decade

Fennig's All-Stars
Bill Spence, Fennigmania
Bill Spence, The Hammered Dulcimer Returns!

Mike Fenton
Mike Fenton, The Best of Mike Fenton 1984–1996

Joe Ferry
Guy Davis, Call Down the Thunder

Fiddle Fever
Fiddle Fever, The Best of Fiddle Fever
Fiddle Fever, Fiddle Fever

R.S. Field
Mark Germino, Radartown

John Strawberry Fields
John Denver, Minneapolis Does Denver

Filé
Filé, La Vie Marron (The Runaway Life)

Carl Finch Trout Fishing in America, Mine!
Trout Fishing in America, Over the Limit

Sally Fingerett
Camille West, Gabby Road–Out of the Mouths of Babes: Life According to the Bitchin' Babes

Bob Finiz
Lovin' Spoonful, Revelation: Revolution '69

Cathy Fink
Critton Hollow String Band, By and By
Cathy Fink and Marcy Marxer, A Cathy and Marcy Collection for Kids
Si Kahn, Good Times and Bedtimes
Patsy Montana, The Cowboy's Sweetheart
Rude Girls, Rude Awakening

Alec Finn
De Danann/De Dannan, 1/2 Set in Harlem
De Danann/De Dannan, Anthem
De Danann/De Dannan, A Jacket of Batteries

Archie Fisher
The Clancy Brothers and Tommy Makem/Tommy Makem and Liam Clancy, The Makem and Clancy Collection
Silly Wizard, So Many Partings

Bob Fisher
Bob Wills, Anthology, 1935–73

Reggie Fisher
T-Bone Burnett, Trap Door
T-Bone Burnett, Truth Decay
T-Bone Burnett, When the Night Falls

Steve Fisher
Steve Fisher, A Boy's Life in Texas

Dan Fitzgerald
De Danann/De Dannan, A Jacket of Batteries
The Voice Squad, Good People All
The Voice Squad, Many the Foolish Youth

Five Chinese Brothers
Five Chinese Brothers, Let's Kill Saturday Night
Five Chinese Brothers, Singer Songwriter Beggarman Thief

Jonas Fjeld
Tom Russell, Poor Man's Dream

Béla Fleck
Stuart Duncan, Stuart Duncan
Maura O'Connell, Helpless Heart
Maura O'Connell, Just in Time
Béla Fleck/Béla Fleck and the Flecktones, Flight of the Cosmic Hippo Béla Fleck/Béla Fleck and the Flecktones, Tales from the Acoustic Planet

Joe Fleming
David Olney, Deeper Well

Robin Flower
Robin Flower, Babies with Glasses
Robin Flower, More Than Friends

Flying Burrito Brothers
Flying Burrito Brothers, The Gilded Palace of Sin

Kevin Flynn
Planxty, The Best of Planxty Live

Dan Fogelberg
Dan Fogelberg, High Country Snows
Dan Fogelberg, Windows and Walls
Magical Strings, River of Souls

Folk-Legacy
Cathy Barton and Dave Para, 'Twas on a Night Like This Cathy Barton and Dave Para, For All the Good People
Cathy Barton and Dave Para, On a Day Like Today
Cindy Kallet, Working on Wings to Fly

David Folks
David Folks, Refusing to View
David Folks, Roadside Park

Hannes Folterbauer
Blind Blake, Blind Blake: The Accompanist

Forbes Family
The Forbes Family, In the Shadow of Your Wings

Homer Forbes
The Forbes Family, Best of the Early Forbes Family

Ken Ford
Schooner Fare, The First 10 Years

Julia Fordham
Julia Fordham, Falling Forward

Peter Fornatale
Harry Chapin, The Bottom Line Encore Collection

John Forster
John Forster, Entering Marion
John Forster, Helium

Nick Forster
Kate MacKenzie, Age of Innocence
Kate MacKenzie, Let Them Talk
Marley's Ghost, Four Spacious Guys

Fred Foster
Kris Kristofferson, Me and Bobby McGee

Four Bitchin' Babes
Four Bitchin' Babes, Buy Me Bring Me Take Me: Don't Mess My Hair!!! Volume II
Christine Lavin, Buy Me Bring Me Take Me: Don't Mess My Hair!!! Volume II

Paul Fox
Sara Hickman, Necessary Angels
Victoria Williams, Loose

Michael Fracasso
Michael Fracasso, Love & Trust

Amy Fradon
Amy Fradon and Leslie Ritter/Amy Fradon, Flyin' on the Wings of Heaven

Ronald Frangipane
Chris Smither, I'm a Stranger Too

Keith Frank
Keith Frank, What's His Name?

Alasdair Fraser
Alasdair Fraser, The Driven Bow
Alasdair Fraser, The North Road

Scott Fraser
Kim Robertson, Treasures of the Celtic Harp
Joemy Wilson, Beatles on Hammered Dulcimer
Joemy Wilson, Carolan's Cottage
Joemy Wilson, Carolan's Cup
Joemy Wilson, Celtic Dreams
Joemy Wilson, Celtic Treasures
Joemy Wilson, Dargason: A Dulcimer Sampler
Joemy Wilson, Dulcimer Lullabies

Gail Fratar
Peter Kessler & Gail Fratar, Take Me Up

Free Hot Lunch!
Free Hot Lunch!, Penguin Love

Charles Freeland
The Country Gentlemen, Calling My Children Home

Ronnie Freeland
Johnson Mountain Boys, Blue Diamond
Magpie, Seed on the Prairie

Dave Freeman
The Camp Creek Boys, Old Time String Band
The Country Gentlemen, 25 Years
The Delmore Brothers, Sand Mountain Blues
Lilly Brothers/Lilly Brothers & Don Stover, Early Recordings

Ed Freeman
Don McLean, American Pie
Tom Rush, The Best of Tom Rush
Livingston Taylor, Echoes

Michael Freeman
Chubby Carrier/Chubby Carrier and the Bayou Swamp Band, Who Stole the Hot Sauce?

Gideon Freudmann
Gideon Freudmann, Adobe Dog House
Gideon Freudmann, Cellobotomy
Michael Hurley, WolfWays

Franklin Fried
The Chad Mitchell Trio, Slightly Irreverent

Ed Friedland
Michael Hurley, WolfWays

Barry Friedman
Michael Bloomfield, East-West
Paul Butterfield Blues Band/Paul Butterfield's Better Days, East-West

Kinky Friedman
Kinky Friedman, Kinky Friedman
Kinky Friedman, Lasso from El Paso
Kinky Friedman, Old Testaments & New Revelations

Robert Fripp
The Roches, Keep on Doing
The Roches, The Roches

Front Range
Front Range, Back to Red River
Front Range, The New Frontier
Front Range, One Beautiful Day

Mitchell Froom
Richard Thompson/Linda Thompson/Richard & Linda Thompson, Rumour and Sigh

Chris Frymire
Paul Geremia, Live from Uncle Sam's Backyard

Garth Fundis
The New Grass Revival, Hold to a Dream

Tret Fure
Tret Fure, Between the Covers
Tret Fure, Time Turns the Moon

Ron Furmanek
The Four Preps, The Four Preps

Gary Furniss
Figgy Duff/Pamela Morgan, Downstream
Figgy Duff/Pamela Morgan, Figgy Duff
Figgy Duff/Pamela Morgan, Weather out the Storm

Tony Furtado
Tony Furtado, Within Reach

Fuzzy Mountain String Band
Fuzzy Mountain String Band, Fuzzy Mountain String Band

Milt Gabler
Burl Ives, Funny Way of Laughin'
Burl Ives, Payin' My Dues Again
Burl Ives, Songs of the West

Pete Gage
Joan Armatrading, Back to the Night

Jon Gailmor
Jon Gailmor, Dirt!

Jim Gaines Luther Allison, Reckless Luther Allison, Soul Fixin' Man

Gary Gallier
Les & Gary Gallier, Crossed Roads
Les & Gary Gallier, Race to the Gate

Les and Gary Gallier Les & Gary Gallier, On the Wing

Annie Gallup
Annie Gallup, Backbone

Peter Gallway
Cliff Eberhardt, The Long Road
Cliff Eberhardt, Now You Are My Home
Cormac McCarthy, Picture Gallery Blues

Beppe Gambetta
Beppe Gambetta, Dialogs

Leon Gamble
Laura Nyro, Gonna Take a Miracle

Don Gant
Jimmy Buffett, Living and Dying in 3/4 Time

Val Garay
Joan Armatrading, The Key

Art Garfunkel
Art Garfunkel, Angel Clare
Simon & Garfunkel, Bookends
Simon & Garfunkel, Bridge over Troubled Water
Simon & Garfunkel, The Concert in Central Park

Terry Garthwaite
Robin Flower, Green Sneakers

Albert Garzon
Brenda Kahn, Goldfish Don't Talk Back

Dick Gaughan
Ceolbeg, Seeds to the Wind
Dick Gaughan, A Different Kind of Love Song
Dick Gaughan, Handful of Earth

Frankie Gavin
De Danann/De Dannan, 1/2 Set in Harlem
De Danann/De Dannan, Anthem
De Danann/De Dannan, A Jacket of Batteries
Frankie Gavin, Croch Suas é—Up and Away
Frankie Gavin, Frankie Goes to Town
Frankie Gavin, An Irish Christmas
Frankie Gavin, A Tribute to Joe Cooley

Don Gehman
Tracy Chapman, New Beginning
The subdudes, The subdudes

Heinz Geissler
Steve Young, Solo/Live

Gregg Geller
Flatt & Scruggs, The Complete Mercury Sessions
Tracy Nelson, The Best of Tracy Nelson/Mother Earth

Lowell George
Grateful Dead, Shakedown Street

Nina Gerber
Carol McComb, Tears into Laughter
Kristina Olsen, Hurry on Home
Kristina Olsen, Love, Kristina
Kate Wolf, The Wind Blows Wild

Paul Geremia
Paul Geremia, I Really Don't Mind Livin'/My Kinda Place

Michael Germaine
Planxty, The Best of Planxty Live

Birger Gesthuisen
David Lindley, World out of Time: Henry Kaiser and David Lindley in Madagascar
David Lindley, World out of Time Volume II: Henry Kaiser and David Lindley in Madagascar

Franck Giboni
Alan Stivell, A l'Olympia
Alan Stivell, Renaissance of the Celtic Harp

Bob Gibson
Bob Gibson, Bob Gibson and Bob Camp at the Gate of Horn
Tom Paxton, A Child's Christmas
Tom Paxton, Even a Gray Day
Tom Paxton, The Marvelous Toy and Other Gallimaufry Tom Paxton, The Very Best of Tom Paxton

Pete Gibson
Mississippi Fred McDowell, Standing at the Burying Ground

Steve Gibson
Michael Martin Murphey, Cowboy Songs
Red Steagall, Born to This Land

John Gilbert
Young Tradition, The Holly Bears the Crown

Earl Gill
The Dubliners, A Parcel of Rogues

Janis Gill
Sweethearts of the Rodeo, Beautiful Lies Sweethearts of the Rodeo, Rodeo Waltz

Lee Gillette
Jack Guthrie, Oklahoma Hills
Merle Travis, Folk Songs of the Hills

Steve Gillette
Steve Gillette & Cindy Mangsen, Light of the Day
Steve Gillette & Cindy Mangsen, Live in Concert

Jimmie Dale Gilmore
Jimmie Dale Gilmore, Two Roads: Live in Australia

Voyle Gilmore
The Kingston Trio, At Large
The Kingston Trio, The Capitol Years
The Kingston Trio, The Kingston Trio
The Kingston Trio, Live at the Hungry I
The Kingston Trio, New Frontier
The Kingston Trio, String Along

Paddy Glackin
Kevin Burke, An Fhidil Sraith II (The Fiddle, Volume II)
Martin Hayes, An Fhidil Sraith I (The Fiddle, Volume I)
Seán Keane, An Fhidil Sraith II (The Fiddle, Volume II)

Keith Glass
Jimmie Dale Gilmore, Two Roads: Live in Australia

Mick Glossop
The Waterboys, This Is the Sea

Anton Glovsky
Ewan MacColl, Classic Scots Ballads
Jean Ritchie, Carols for All Seasons

Jeffrey Gold
Phil Ochs, The War Is Over: The Best of Phil Ochs

Morris Goldberg
Tony Bird, Sorry Africa

Mark Goldenberg
Karla Bonoff, New World

960 jon goldsmith

Jon Goldsmith
Bruce Cockburn, Stealing Fire
Jane Siberry, No Borders Here

Thomas Goldsmith
David Olney, Deeper Well
David Olney, Roses

Jerry Goldstein
Tim Buckley, Greetings from LA

Kenneth S. Goldstein
The Rev. Gary Davis, Say No to the Devil
Bob Gibson, Joy Joy! The Young and Wonderful Bob Gibson: The Riverside Folklore Series Vol. I

Steve Goodman
Steve Goodman, Affordable Art
Steve Goodman, Santa Ana Winds
John Prine, Bruised Orange

Randy Goodrum
Michael Johnson, Departure

Dave Gordon
Charlie King, Food Phone Gas Lodging

James Gordon
Tamarack, The 15th Anniversary Concert

Emory Gordy Jr.
Steve Earle, Guitar Town
Jimmie Dale Gilmore, Spinning around the Sun

Al Gorgoni
Eric Andersen, More Hits from Tin Can Alley

Skip Gorman
Skip Gorman, Greener Prairie
Skip Gorman, Lonesome Prairie Love

Arthur Gorson
Tom Rush, The Circle Game

Vern Gosdin
Vern Gosdin, The Gospel Album
Vern Gosdin, Warning: Contains Country Music (The Great Ballads of Vern Gosdin)

Kieran Goss
Tommy Sands, Beyond the Shadows

Richard Gottehrer
Darden Smith, Little Victories
David Wilcox, Big Horizon

Joe Gracey
Butch Hancock, Diamond Hill
Butch Hancock, Firewater Seeks Its Own Level
Butch Hancock, West Texas Waltzes & Dust Blown Tractor Tunes
Kimmie Rhodes, West Texas Heaven

Royce Gracey
Butch Hancock, Yella Rose

Wayne Gracey
Butch Hancock, Cause of the Cactus

Benny Graeff
Tasso, 1929 and Back: Traditional Cajun Music
Tasso, Catch My Hat
Tasso, The Old Timey Way

Michael Graham
Carrie Newcomer, An Angel at My Shoulder

Bill Grant
Delia Bell and Bill Grant, Dreaming
Delia Bell and Bill Grant, A Few Dollars More

Charles "Bud" Grant
Irish Rovers, On the Shores of Americay

Dave Grant
Carol Elizabeth Jones & James Leva, Light Enough to Find My Way

John Grant disappear fear, Live at the Bottom Line

Grateful Dead
Grateful Dead, American Beauty Grateful Dead, Workingman's Dead

Nigel Gray
Paul Brady, Songs and Crazy Dreams

Rick Grech
Gram Parsons, G.P./Grievous Angel

Dan Green
Four Bitchin' Babes, Fax It, Charge It, Don't Ask Me What's for Dinner

Adam Greenberg
Don Pedi, The Hog Went through the Fence Yoke and All

Kenny Greenberg
Joan Baez, Gone from Danger

Bruce Greene
Bruce Greene, Fiddler's Dozen
Bruce Greene, Five Miles of Ellum Wood
Bruce Greene, Old Time Pickin'
Bruce Greene, Vintage Fiddle Tunes

Charles Greene
Buffalo Springfield, Buffalo Springfield

Richard Greene
Richard Greene/The Grass Is Greener, The Greene Fiddler
Richard Greene/The Grass Is Greener, Muleskinner: A Potpourri of Bluegrass Jam
Muleskinner, Muleskinner: A Potpourri of Bluegrass Jam

Manny Greenhill
Doc Watson/The Watson Family/Doc & Merle Watson, Old Timey Concert: Doc Watson, Clint Howard, and Fred Price

Mitch Greenhill
Robin Flower, 1st Dibs
Doc Watson/The Watson Family/Doc & Merle Watson, Watson Country: Doc and Merle Watson

Robin Williamson, Wheel of Fortune

Danny Greenspoon Spirit of the West, Save This House

Clive Gregson
Alison Brown, I Love This Town
Clive Gregson, Carousel of Noise
Clive Gregson, I Love This Town
Clive Gregson, People and Places
Clive Gregson, Welcome to the Workhouse
Clive Gregson & Christine Collister, A Change in the Weather
Clive Gregson & Christine Collister, The Last Word
Clive Gregson & Christine Collister, Love Is a Strange Hotel
Clive Gregson & Christine Collister, Welcome to the Workhouse

Adie Grey
Adie Grey, Brand New Old Time Music
Adie Grey, Grandpa's Advice

Charlie Grey
Frankie Armstrong, Ways of Seeing

Grianan
Kevin Crawford/The Moving Cloud/Grianan/Raise the Rafters, The Maid of Eirin

David Grier
Jason Carter, On the Move
David Grier, Climbing The Walls
David Grier, Freewheeling

Bill Griffin
Kate Wolf, Close to You
Kate Wolf, Looking Back at You

Rob Griffin
Beppe Gambetta, Good News from Home
Jerry Rockwell, American Architecture

Jerry Rockwell, As Silent Stars Go By

Grace Griffith
Grace Griffith, GRACE

Nanci Griffith
Nanci Griffith, Last of the True Believers
Nanci Griffith, Lone Star State of Mind
Nanci Griffith, One Fair Summer Evening

Nick Griffiths
The Barra MacNeils, The Question

David Grisman
Red Allen, Bluegrass Reunion
Red Allen, The Kitchen Tapes
Rudy Cipolla, Portrait of an American Original Rudy Cipolla, The World of Rudy Cipolla
Vassar Clements, Breakdown
Vassar Clements, That High Lonesome Sound
David Grisman, David Grisman Quintet
David Grisman, DGQ-20
David Grisman, Doc & Dawg
Homer & Jethro, Swing Low, Sweet Mandolin
Evan Marshall, Mandolin Magic
Peter Rowan, High Lonesome Sound
Andy Statman, Songs for Our Fathers
Frank Wakefield, The Kitchen Tapes
Radim Zenkl, Galactic Mandolin

Pieter Groenveld
Good Ol' Persons, Good n' Live
Si Kahn, In My Heart: Live in Holland

Don Grolnick
James Taylor, Best Live
James Taylor, (Live)
James Taylor, Never Die Young
James Taylor, New Moon Shine

Albert Grossman
Peter, Paul & Mary, Album 1700
Peter, Paul & Mary, In Concert
Peter, Paul & Mary, Peter, Paul, and Mary
Peter, Paul & Mary, See What Tomorrow Brings

Stefan Grossman
Duck Baker/Duck Baker and Molly Andrews, The Art of Fingerstyle Jazz Guitar
The Rev. Gary Davis, Blues & Ragtime
Sleepy John Estes, I Ain't Gonna Be Worried No More, 1929–41
Stefan Grossman, Black Melodies on a Clear Afternoon
Mississippi Sheiks, Stop and Listen
Happy Traum/Happy & Artie Traum, Buckets of Rain

Barry Gruber
Annie Gallup, Cause and Effect

Gryphon Quintet
Carol McComb, Undecided

Les and Gwen Gustafson-Zook Les Gustafson-Zook, Long Time Traveling

Buddy Guy
Buddy Guy, Live! The Real Deal

Bob Haddad
Beausoleil, Vintage Beausoleil

Joe Hadlock
Linda Waterfall, My Heart Sings

Ron Haffkine
Shel Silverstein, Songs and Stories

Neal Hagberg
Neal & Leandra, Accidental Dreams

Roy Halee
Art Garfunkel, Angel Clare
Laura Nyro, New York Tendaberry
The Roches, Nurds
Shel Silverstein, Freakin' at the Freakers Ball
Simon & Garfunkel, Bookends
Simon & Garfunkel, Bridge over Troubled Water
Simon & Garfunkel, The Concert in Central Park
Paul Simon, Hearts and Bones
Paul Simon, Paul Simon

Bill Hall
Albert Collins, Complete Imperial Recordings

Kristen Hall
Kristen Hall, Fact & Fiction
Kristen Hall, Real Life Stuff

Rachel Hall
Simple Gifts, Other Places, Other Times

Tom T. Hall
Tom T. Hall, Home Grown

Mark Hallman
Michael Fracasso, Return to Zero
Sara Hickman, Necessary Angels
Iain Matthews/Matthews Southern Comfort/Plainsong/Hamilton's Pool, The Dark Ride
Iain Matthews/Matthews Southern Comfort/Plainsong/Hamilton's Pool, Skeleton Keys Iain Matthews/Matthews Southern Comfort/Plainsong/Hamilton's Pool, Walking a Changing Line
Eric Taylor, Eric Taylor

Bill Halverson
Crosby, Stills and Nash/Crosby, Stills, Nash and Young/David Crosby/Crosby & Nash/Graham Nash/Stephen Stills, So Far
Crosby, Stills and Nash/Crosby, Stills, Nash and Young/David Crosby/Crosby & Nash/Graham Nash/Stephen Stills, Stephen Stills
Flaco Jimenez, Flaco Jimenez
Flaco Jimenez, Partners
Jo-El Sonnier, Come on Joe
Jo-El Sonnier, Have a Little Faith

Dave Hamilton
Cindy Church, Love on the Range

Diane Hamilton
Etta Baker, Instrumental Music of the Southern Appalachians

Stuart Hamilton Mouth Music, Mo-Di

John Hammond
Bob Dylan, The Freewheelin' Bob Dylan
John Hammond Jr., Found True Love
Carolyn Hester, Carolyn Hester
Pete Seeger, American Industrial Folk Ballads
Pete Seeger, We Shall Overcome

Lee Hammond
Tim Buckley, Dream Letter: Live in London, 1968

Lorraine & Bennett Hammond Lorraine (Lee) Hammond/Lorraine & Bennett Hammond/Solomon's Seal/Rick & Lorraine Lee, Peace on Earth

Butch Hancock
Jimmie Dale Gilmore, Two Roads: Live in Australia
Butch Hancock, Cause of the Cactus
Butch Hancock, Diamond Hill
Butch Hancock, Firewater Seeks Its Own Level
Butch Hancock, No Two Alike Tape of the Month Club
Butch Hancock, West Texas Waltzes & Dust Blown Tractor Tunes
Butch Hancock, Yella Rose

Beryl Handler
Leon Redbone, From Branch to Branch
Leon Redbone, Live
Leon Redbone, No Regrets
Leon Redbone, Red to Blue

Matt Haney
Tracy Schwarz/Tracy Schwarz Cajun Trio, Mes Amis!

Barry Hansen
John Fahey, The Essential John Fahey

Andrew Hardin
Katy Moffatt, Walkin' on the Moon
Tom Russell, Hurricane Season
Tom Russell, Poor Man's Dream

Brian Hardin
Ray Wylie Hubbard, Dangerous Spirits
Ray Wylie Hubbard, Loco Gringo's Lament

John Wesley Harding
John Wesley Harding, Dynablob
John Wesley Harding, God Made Me Do It: The Christmas EP
John Wesley Harding, John Wesley Harding's New Deal

Mike Hardwick
Michael Fracasso, Love & Trust

Jack Hardy
Jack Hardy, The Cauldron
Jack Hardy, The Collected Works: 1965–1995

Bill Harley
Bill Harley, Big Big World
Bill Harley, I'm Gonna Let It Shine—A Gathering of Voices for Freedom
Bill Harley, Sitting on My Hands
Bill Harley, Wacka Wacka Woo & Other Stuff
Sally Rogers, I'm Gonna Let It Shine

Chris Harley
Wolfstone, The Half Tail

Ben Harper
Ben Harper, Fight for Your Mind
Ben Harper, Welcome to the Cruel World

Dick Harrington
Dick Harrington & Victoria Young, Long Journey
Dick Harrington & Victoria Young, Lover's Return

Emmylou Harris
Delia Bell and Bill Grant, Delia Bell
Emmylou Harris, The Ballad of Sally Rose

Michael Harris
Cindy Lee Berryhill, Garage Orchestra
Cindy Lee Berryhill, Straight Outta Marysville

Peter Harris
Boys of the Lough, Farewell and Remember Me
Boys of the Lough, Live at Carnegie Hall
Boys of the Lough, To Welcome Paddy Home

Reggie Harris
Magpie, Spoken in Love

Brian Harrison
Robin and Barry Dransfield, The Fiddler's Dream

Jerry Harrison
Crash Test Dummies, God Shuffled His Feet

John Harrod
Roger Cooper, Going Back to Old Kentucky

John Hartford
Bob Carlin, The Fun of Open Discussion
Owen "Snake" Chapman, Up in Chapman's Hollow
Ed Haley, Forked Deer—Volume 1
John Hartford, Wild Hog in the Red Brush and a Bunch of Others You Might Not Have Heard

Chris Harvey
Les Barker, Gnus and Roses
Les Barker, Oranges and Lemmings
Les Barker, Some Love

Richie Havens
Richie Havens, Richie Havens Sings the Beatles and Bob Dylan

Ginny Hawker
Ginny Hawker & Kay Justice, Come All You Tenderhearted
Tracy Schwarz & Ginny Hawker, Deep Hollows and High Ridges

Kerry Hay
Gibson Brothers Band, Long Forgotten Dream
Gibson Brothers Band, Spread Your Wings
Lilly Brothers/Lilly Brothers & Don Stover, Live at Hillbilly Ranch
Piney Creek Weasels, Squirrel Heads and Gravy
Joseph "Butch" Robins, Grounded-Centered-Focused
Skeeter & the Skidmarks, Alternate Roots
Skeeter & the Skidmarks, Hubbin' It
Don Stover, The Lilly Brothers and Don Stover: Live at Hillbilly Ranch

Martin Hayes
Martin Hayes, The Lonesome Touch
Martin Hayes, Martin Hayes
Martin Hayes, The Tulla Ceili Band: A Celebration of 50 Years
Martin Hayes, Under the Moon

Walter Haynes
Bill Monroe & His Blue Grass Boys, Bill Monroe—Bluegrass 1970–1979

Chip Hayward
Linda Waterfall, My Heart Sings

Hazel & Alice
Hazel & Alice/Hazel Dickens/Alice Gerrard, Hazel & Alice

Dan Healy
Grateful Dead, Shakedown Street

Mark Heard
Pierce Pettis, Tinseltown
Tom Prasada-Rao, Incoming

Bill & Bonnie Hearne
Bill & Bonnie Hearne, New Mexico Rain
Bill & Bonnie Hearne, Smilin'

Michael Hearne
Bill & Bonnie Hearne, New Mexico Rain
Tish Hinojosa, Taos to Tennessee

Michael Hedges
Michael Hedges, Live on the Double Planet
Michael Hedges, Taproot

Don Heffington
Tammy Rogers, In the Red

Beth Heidelberg
Judy Austin, Pickles and Wine

Gail Heil
Bob Bovee and Gail Heil, Rural Route 2

Steve Heinke
Linda Waterfall, Body English

Helicon
Helicon, Horizons: Traditional Music from around the World
Helicon, The Titan

Steven Heller
Laura Boosinger, My Carolina Home
David Holt, Grandfather's Greatest Hits
David Holt, I Got a Bullfrog: Folksongs for the Fun of It
David Holt, Stellaluna

Neal Hellman
Neal Hellman, Oktober Country

Patrick Henderson
Maria Muldaur, Open Your Eyes

Wayne Henderson
Steve Kaufman, Not Much Work for Saturday

Margo Hennebach
Margo Hennebach, Big Love
Margo Hennebach, Michaelean

Nat Hentoff
Lightnin' Hopkins, Lightnin' in New York

Priscilla Herdman
Steve Gillette & Cindy Mangsen, Voices of Winter
Priscilla Herdman, Darkness into Light
Anne Hills, Voices of Winter

Heritage Records
Mike Fenton, The Best of Mike Fenton 1984–1996

Amy Herot
Eric Andersen, Stages: The Lost Album
Taj Mahal, Rising Sons Featuring Taj Mahal and Ry Cooder

Jack Herrick
Red Clay Ramblers, A Lie of the Mind
Red Clay Ramblers, Rambler

Bob Herring
Rafe Stefanini, Old Paint

Dennis Herring
Timbuk 3, Eden Alley
Timbuk 3, Greetings from Timbuk 3

Joe Herrmann
Critton Hollow String Band, Cowboys and Indians

John Herrmann
The Freight Hoppers, Where'd You Come from, Where'd You Go?
Dirk Powell, Dirk Powell and John Herrmann

Carl Hession
Joe Derrane, Return to Inis Mor
Frankie Gavin, An Irish Christmas

Jack Heyrman
Greg Kihn/The Greg Kihn Band, Mutiny

Sara Hickman
Sara Hickman, Necessary Angels
Sara Hickman, Shortstop

George B. Hicks
Klezmer Conservatory Band, Dancing in the Aisles
Klezmer Conservatory Band, Live! The 13th Anniversary Album

Linda Higginbotham
Brad Leftwich/Brad Leftwich & Linda Higginbotham, No One to Bring Home Tonight

Jim Higgins
The Saw Doctors, Same Oul' Town

Highwoods String Band
Mac Benford/Mac Benford and the Woodshed All-Stars, Feed Your Babies Onions

John Hill
Bill Staines, Going to the West

John & Laurie Hill
Eric Taylor, Shameless Love

Laurie Hill
Bill Staines, Going to the West

Noel Hill
Noel Hill, Irish Concertina

Tommy Hill
Bill Carlisle/Cliff Carlisle/The Carlisles, No Help Wanted

Steve Hillage
Robyn Hitchcock/Robyn Hitchcock & the Egyptians, Gravy Deco

Chris Hillman
Crosby, Stills and Nash/Crosby, Stills, Nash and Young/David Crosby/Crosby & Nash/Graham Nash/Stephen Stills, Manassas

Anne Hills
Steve Gillette & Cindy Mangsen, Voices of Winter
Anne Hills, Angle of the Light
Anne Hills, Never Grow Old
Anne Hills, On This Day the Earth Shall Ring
Anne Hills, Voices of Winter
Anne Hills, Woman of a Calm Heart
Michael Smith, Michael, Margaret, Pat, and Kate Michael Smith, Michael Smith/Love Stories
Michael Smith, Time

Gordy Hinners
Ralph Blizard/Ralph Blizard and the New Southern Ramblers, Southern Ramble

Tish Hinojosa
Tish Hinojosa, Culture Swing
Tish Hinojosa, Frontejas
Tish Hinojosa, Taos to Tennessee

Robyn Hitchcock
Robyn Hitchcock/Robyn Hitchcock & the Egyptians, Element of Light
Robyn Hitchcock/Robyn Hitchcock & the Egyptians, I Often Dream of Trains Robyn Hitchcock/Robyn Hitchcock & the Egyptians, Moss Elixir

Hank Hoffman
Melanie, Candles in the Rain

John Hoke
John Stewart, Bullets in the Hourglass

Mr. Hokey
Christine Collister, The World Is a Wonderful Place: The Songs of Richard Thompson

Gene Holder
Freedy Johnston, Unlucky

Lee Holdridge
John Denver, Earth Songs

Jerry Holland
Jerry Holland, The Fiddlesticks Collection
Hamish Moore, Stepping on the Bridge

Hollow Rock String Band
Hollow Rock String Band, Traditional Dance Tunes

Peter Holsapple
Robin Holcomb, Robin Holcomb

Aubrey Holt
Boys from Indiana, Touchin Home

David Holt
David Holt, Stellaluna

Jac Holzman
Judy Collins, Fifth Album
Judy Collins, Golden Apples of the Sun
Judy Collins, In My Life
Judy Collins, Judy Collins #3
Judy Collins, Maid of Constant Sorrow
Phil Ochs, All the News That's Fit to Sing
Phil Ochs, I Ain't Marching Anymore
Phil Ochs, In Concert

Alex Hooper
Mississippi Fred McDowell, Standing at the Burying Ground

Tom Horan
James Keane, Atlantic Wave

Ric Hordinski
David Wilcox, Turning Point

Lois Hornbostel
Lois Hornbostel, Dulcimer Enchantment

Lois Hornbostel, Dulcimer Jubilee

Lindsey Horner
Susan McKeown & the Chanting House/Susan McKeown & Lindsey Horner, Through the Bitter Frost and Snow

Ray Horricks Davey Graham, Folk Blues and All Points in Between

Wayne Horvitz
Robin Holcomb, Robin Holcomb
Robin Holcomb, Rockabye

Thomas Hoskins
Mississippi John Hurt, Avalon Blues 1963
Mississippi John Hurt, Worried Blues

Hot Rize
Hot Rize/Red Knuckles & the Trailblazers, Take It Home
Hot Rize/Red Knuckles & the Trailblazers, Untold Stories

House Band
The House Band, Another Setting
The House Band, Groundwork
The House Band, The House Band
The House Band, Pacific

Serge Hovey
Jean Redpath, The Songs of Robert Burns, Volumes I and II

James Newton Howard
Rickie Lee Jones, The Magazine
Randy Newman, Land of Dreams

Mark Howard
Laura Boosinger, Sing It Yourself

Steve Howard
Robin Huw Bowen, Hunting the Hedgehog
Robin Huw Bowen, The Sweet Harp of My Land

Bones Howe
Michelle Shocked, Kind Hearted Woman
Tom Waits, Anthology of Tom Waits
Tom Waits, One from the Heart
Tom Waits, Small Change

Bill Howell
Stan Rogers, Poetic Justice

Mike Howlett
Joan Armatrading, Secret Secrets

Ray Wylie Hubbard
Ray Wylie Hubbard, Lost Train of Thought

Kenny Huff
Laura Nyro, Gonna Take a Miracle

Graeme Hughes
Dougie MacLean, Indigenous
Dougie MacLean, Marching Mystery
Dougie MacLean, Riof
Dougie MacLean, The Search
Dougie MacLean, Sunset Song
Dougie MacLean, Tribute

Gilles Hugo
Klezmorim, Jazz Babies of the Ukraine

Dakota Dave Hull
Debby McClatchy, Someday Cafe

Thomas Hurst
Jez Lowe/Jez Lowe & the Bad Pennies, Galloways

Ashley Hutchings
Polly Bolton, No Going Back
Ashley Hutchings/The Albion Band, The Prospect before Us
Ashley Hutchings/The Albion Band, Twangin' n' a-Traddin

Terry Huval
Kristi Guillory, La Dance des Ancetres
Kristi Guillory, Reveille: The New Cajun Generation
Horace Trahan, Ossun Blues
Horace Trahan, Reveille: The New Cajun Generation

Bob Hyde
The Byrds, Never Before

Janis Ian
Janis Ian, Breaking Silence

Bruce Iglauer
Albert Collins, Frostbite
Albert Collins, Frozen Alive!
Albert Collins, Live in Japan
James Cotton, Harp Attack!
James Cotton, High Compression
Saffire—The Uppity Blues Women, Old, New, Borrowed, and Blue
Saffire—The Uppity Blues Women, Saffire—The Uppity Blues Women

Indigo Girls
Indigo Girls, 1200 Curfews

Bill Inglot
Tim Buckley, Dream Letter: Live in London, 1968
George Jones, The Best of George Jones
The Limeliters, Troubadours of the Folk Era Volume III
Peter & Gordon, The Best of Peter and Gordon
Smothers Brothers/Pat Paulsen, Sibling Revelry

Jimmy Iovine
Tracy Chapman, Matters of the Heart

Irish Rovers
Irish Rovers, The Irish Rovers' Gems

Chad Irschick
Natalie MacMaster, No Boundaries
The Rankin Family, North Country
The Rankin Family, The Rankin Family

Bob Irwin
The Byrds, The Byrds
The Byrds, 20 Essential Tracks from the Boxed Set: 1965-1990
Chad & Jeremy, Painted Dayglow Smile
Gene Clark, Mr. Tambourine Man
Gene Clark, Turn! Turn! Turn!
John Denver, The Best of John Denver Live
John Denver, The Wildlife Concert
Flatt & Scruggs, The Essential Flatt & Scruggs: 'Tis Sweet to Be Remembered
Taj Mahal, Rising Sons Featuring Taj Mahal and Ry Cooder

Ken Irwin
Delia Bell and Bill Grant, Dreaming
Delia Bell and Bill Grant, A Few Dollars More
Blue Sky Boys, The Blue Sky Boys
Blue Sky Boys, In Concert, 1964
Paul Brown, Old Time, New Times
Jason Carter, Ain't God Good
Dry Branch Fire Squad, Live! At Last
Dry Branch Fire Squad, Long Journey
Johnson Mountain Boys, Blue Diamond
James King, Lonesome & Then Some
Eddie LeJeune, Cajun Soul
Eddie LeJeune, It's in the Blood
Eddie LeJeune, Le Trio Cadien
Longview, Longview
Jimmy Martin, You Don't Know My Mind
Kimberly M'Carver, Breathe the Moonlight
Kimberly M'Carver, Inherited Road
Doris "D.L." Menard, Le Trio Cadien
Doris "D.L." Menard, No Matter Where You Are, There You At
Jimmy C. Newman, The Alligator Man
The Whitstein Brothers, Rose of My Heart

The Whitstein Brothers, Sweet Harmony

Eileen Ivers
Eileen Ivers, Eileen Ivers
Eileen Ivers, Wild Blue

Ilene Ivers
Cathie Ryan, The Back Door

Clayton Ivey
Mac McAnally, Mac McAnally

Cy Jack
Whistlebinkies, Anniversary
Whistlebinkies, Inner Sound
Whistlebinkies, Pipers of Distinction: Robert Wallace

Al Jackson Jr.
Albert King, Born under a Bad Sign
Albert King, Live Wire/Blues Power
Albert King, Thursday Night in San Francisco
Albert King, Wednesday Night in San Francisco
Otis Redding, Good to Me

Carl Jackson
Carl Jackson, Spring Training
Jim & Jesse, Music among Friends

Kate Jacobs
Kate Jacobs, What about Regret

Erik Jacobsen
Tim Hardin, Hang on to a Dream: The Verve Recordings
Lovin' Spoonful, Anthology
Lovin' Spoonful, Best of the Lovin' Spoonful Lovin' Spoonful, Best of the Lovin' Spoonful Volume II
Lovin' Spoonful, Daydream
Lovin' Spoonful, Do You Believe in Magic?
Lovin' Spoonful, Hums of the Lovin' Spoonful Lovin' Spoonful, Tarzana Kid

Bob Jaffe
Bill Harley, Lunchroom Tales: A Natural History of the Cafetorium

Doug Jaffe
Jon Gailmor, Dirt!

Bob James
Loggins & Messina/Kenny Loggins, Nightwatch

Paul James
Blowzabella, Vanilla
Debby McClatchy, Radio Land

Nick Jameson
Paul Butterfield Blues Band/Paul Butterfield's Better Days, It All Comes Back

Phil Jamison
Ralph Blizard/Ralph Blizard and the New Southern Ramblers, Southern Ramble

Rick Jarrard
Harry Nilsson, Harry

Felton Jarvis
John Hartford, Earthwords and Music

S. Jarvis
Commander Cody & His Lost Planet Airmen, Sleazy Roadside Stories

John Jennings
Beausoleil, La Danse de la Vie
Mary Chapin Carpenter, Come On Come On
Mary Chapin Carpenter, Shootin' Straight in the Dark
Mary Chapin Carpenter, Stones in the Road
John Jennings, Buddy
Bill Morrissey, Inside
The Rankin Family, Endless Seasons
Smith Sisters/Debi Smith, In My Dreams

Michael Jerling
Michael Jerling, My Evil Twin
Michael Jerling, New Suit of Clothes

Peter Jesperson
Jack Logan, Bulk
Jack Logan, Mood Elevator

Jim & Jesse
Jim & Jesse, In the Tradition

Flaco Jimenez
Flaco Jimenez, Buena Suerte, Senorita

Glyn Johns
Joan Armatrading, Joan Armatrading
Eric Clapton, Slowhand
The Eagles, Desperado
The Eagles, Their Greatest Hits, 1971–1975
The subdudes, Annunciation

Johnson Mountain Boys
Johnson Mountain Boys, Blue Diamond

Howard Johnson
The Pahinui Brothers/Cyril Pahinui/James "Bla" Pahinui, Mana

Mark Johnson
Mark Johnson/Mark Johnson & Clawgrass, Clawgrass

Matt Johnson
Hank Williams, Hanky Panky

Michael Johnson
Michael Johnson, Departure
Michael Johnson, Then & Now

Prudence Johnson
Prudence Johnson, Prudence Johnson Sings the Songs of Greg Brown

Roger Johnson
Jason Eklund, A Streamliner's Duet

Bob Johnston
Michael Bloomfield, Highway 61 Revisited
Johnny Cash, At Folsom Prison/At San Quentin
Leonard Cohen, Songs from a Room
Leonard Cohen, Songs of Love and Hate
Bob Dylan, Blonde on Blonde
Bob Dylan, Dylan
Bob Dylan, Highway 61 Revisited
Dan Hicks, Dan Hicks & His Hot Licks

Michael Martin Murphey, Geronimo's Cadillac
Simon & Garfunkel, Parsley, Sage, Rosemary and Thyme
Simon & Garfunkel, Sounds of Silence

Stanley Johnston
Crosby, Stills and Nash/Crosby, Stills, Nash and Young/David Crosby/Crosby & Nash/Graham Nash/Stephen Stills, Chippin' Away
Crosby, Stills and Nash/Crosby, Stills, Nash and Young/David Crosby/Crosby & Nash/Graham Nash/Stephen Stills, Live It Up

Allen Jones
Albert King, I'll Play the Blues for You

Booker T. Jones
Willie Nelson, Pretty Paper

Carl Jones
James Bryan, Two Pictures

Carol Elizabeth Jones
Carol Elizabeth Jones & James Leva, Light Enough to Find My Way

Casey Jones
Albert Collins, Frostbite

Diane Jones
Diane Jones and & King, There Are No Rules

Frank Jones
Jim & Jesse, Jim & Jesse: Bluegrass and More

Gordon Jones
Frankie Armstrong, The Fair Moon Rejoices
Sara Grey, Sara
Pete Morton, Courage, Love, and Grace
Pete Morton, Frivolous Love
Pete Morton, Mad World Blues

Kenny Jones
Billy Bragg, Back to Basics
Billy Bragg, Talking with the Taxman about Poetry

Rickie Lee Jones
Rickie Lee Jones, Ghostyhead
Rickie Lee Jones, The Magazine
Rickie Lee Jones, Traffic from Paradise

Robert John Jones
Vern Gosdin, The Gospel Album
Vern Gosdin, Warning: Contains Country Music (The Great Ballads of Vern Gosdin)

Glen Jordan
Tom Rush, Work in Progress

John Jordan
Michael Hurley, WolfWays

Nathan Joseph
The Dubliners, Complete Dubliners
The Dubliners, The Definitive Transatlantic Collection
Bert Jansch, The Best of Bert Jansch
The Johnstons, The Johnstons/The Barleycorn
John Renbourn, Sir John Alot of Merry England
Young Tradition, The Young Tradition/So Cheerfully Round

Laurence Juber
Al Stewart, Between the Wars

Kay Justice
Ginny Hawker & Kay Justice, Come All You Tenderhearted

Shel Kagen
Lightnin' Hopkins, Swarthmore Concert

Brenda Kahn
Brenda Kahn, 60-Second Critic

Jesse M. Kahn
Si Kahn, In My Heart: Live in Holland

David Kahne
Shawn Colvin, Cover Girl
Brenda Kahn, Epiphany in Brooklyn

George Kahumoku Jr.
George Kahumoku Jr., Drenched by Music

Henry Kaiser
David Lindley, World out of Time: Henry Kaiser and David Lindley in Madagascar
David Lindley, World out of Time Volume II: Henry Kaiser and David Lindley in Madagascar

Kaleidoscope
Kate Wolf, Gold in California

Cindy Kallet
Cindy Kallet, Dreaming down a Quiet Line
Cindy Kallet, Neighbors
Cindy Kallet, Only Human
Cindy Kallet, Working on Wings to Fly

Kathy Kallick
Kathy Kallick, Use a Napkin (Not Your Mom)

Karen Kane
The Chicken Chokers, Chokers and Flies
The Chicken Chokers, Shoot Your Radio

Kieran Kane
Kieran Kane/The O'Kanes, Dead Reckoning
Kieran Kane/The O'Kanes, The O'Kanes
Tammy Rogers, In the Red

Bruce Kaplan
E.C. Ball and Orna Ball, E.C. Ball with Orna Ball

Mike Kappus
John Hammond Jr., Trouble No More

Ellen Karas
Greg Brown, Friend of Mine
Bill Morrissey, Bill Morrissey
Bill Morrissey, Friend of Mine
Bill Morrissey, Night Train

Elizabeth Karlin Odetta, Movin' On

Mark Karney
Lee Murdock, Fertile Ground
Lee Murdock, Freshwater Highway

Matthew King Kaufman
Jonathan Richman, Back in Your Life

Steve Kaufman
Wayne Henderson, Not Much Work for Saturday
Steve Kaufman, Bullet Train
Steve Kaufman, Not Much Work for Saturday

Jorma Kaukonen
Hot Tuna, Burgers
Hot Tuna, First Pull up, Then Pull Down

Lenny Kaye
Suzanne Vega, Solitude Standing
Suzanne Vega, Suzanne Vega

Thomas Jefferson Kaye Gene Clark, No Other

Mark "Kaz" Kazanoff
Bob Margolin, Down in the Alley
Bob Margolin, My Blues & My Guitar

Brian Keane
Joanie Madden, Song of the Irish Whistle

Dolores Keane
Dolores Keane, Farewell to Eirinn
Dolores Keane, Sail óg Rua

James Keane
James Keane, That's the Spirit

John Keane
Vic Chesnutt, Is the Actor Happy?
Cowboy Junkies, Lay It Down
Indigo Girls, Strange Fire

Seán Keane
Seán Keane, The Fire Aflame
Seán Keane, Jig It in Style
Seán Keane, Seán Keane
Liam O'Flynn/Liam ó Floinn, The Fire Aflame

Orrin Keepnews
Bob Gibson, Joy Joy! The Young and Wonderful Bob Gibson: The Riverside Folklore Series Vol. I
Blind Lemon Jefferson, Blind Lemon Jefferson

Garrison Keillor
Garrison Keillor, Comedy Theater

Shane Keister
Rockin' Dopsie, Louisiana Music

Ben Keith
Neil Young, Harvest Moon
Neil Young, Old Ways

Keith Keller
The ReBirth Brass Band, Rollin'
The subdudes, Annunciation

Chris Kelly
Union Springs, Next Train Headed South

Paul Kelly
Paul Kelly, Comedy

Kelly Keneipp
Jack Logan, Mood Elevator

Jerry Kennedy
Jim & Jesse, Jim & Jesse: Bluegrass and More
Roger Miller, Golden Hits
Roger Miller, The Return of Roger Miller
Roger Miller, Roger and Out
Roger Miller, Words and Music by Roger Miller

Pete Kennedy
The Kennedys/Pete Kennedy/Pete & Maura Kennedy, Life Is Large
The Kennedys/Pete Kennedy/Pete & Maura Kennedy, River of Fallen Stars

Ray Kennedy
Steve Earle, El Corazon
Steve Earle, I Feel Alright

Paul Kennerley
Emmylou Harris, The Ballad of Sally Rose

David Kenny
The House Band, Groundwork
The House Band, The House Band
The House Band, Pacific

Don Kent
Sleepy John Estes, I Ain't Gonna Be Worried No More, 1929–41
Mississippi Sheiks, Stop and Listen

Kentucky Standard Band
Kentucky Standard Band, Angels of Mercy

Ken Keppeler
Bayou Seco/Bayou Eclectico, Cactus Gumbo and Alligator Enchiladas
Bayou Seco/Bayou Eclectico, Following in the Tune Prints
Bayou Seco/Bayou Eclectico, Songs of New Mexico and Beyond

David Kershenbaum
Joan Baez, Diamonds and Rust
Tracy Chapman, Tracy Chapman
Catie Curtis, Truth from Lies
Sara Hickman, Shortstop
Cat Stevens, Izitso

Barbara Kessler
Barbara Kessler, Stranger to This Land

Peter Kessler
Peter Kessler & Gail Fratar, Take Me Up

Liv Khalsa
Kim Robertson, Celtic Christmas II
Kim Robertson, Crimson Collection Volumes I and II
Kim Robertson, Crimson Collection Volumes IV and V
Kim Robertson, Crimson Collection Volumes VI and VII
Kim Robertson, Joy! Joy! Joy!
Kim Robertson, Wind Shadows II

Jamie Kidd
k.d. lang, a truly western experience

Michael Kieffer
Milton Brown and the Musical Brownies, The Complete Recordings of the Father of Western Swing: Milton Brown and the Musical Brownies 1932–1937

Lionel Kilberg
Kate Wolf, Breezes

Eric Kilburn
Ken Perlman, Island Boy

Buddy Killen
Vassar Clements, Superbow

Kevin Killen
Paula Cole, Harbinger

Jim Kimball
Mitzie Collins, Sackett's Harbor

Ian Kimmer
Clannad, Rogha: The Best of Clannad

Dave Kincaid
Ed Pettersen, Desperate Times

Michael Kind
David Folks, Refusing to View

Hubie King
Diane Jones and & King, There Are No Rules

Leslie D. Kippel
Frank Wakefield, Frank Wakefield and the Good Old Boys

John Kirkpatrick
John Kirkpatrick, Force of Habit
John Kirkpatrick, Plain Capers

Larry Kirwin
Black 47, Fire of Freedom
Black 47, Green Suede Shoes

Gary Klein
Judy Collins, Hard Times for Lovers

Larry Klein
Julia Fordham, Falling Forward
Joni Mitchell, Chalk Mark in a Rain Storm
Joni Mitchell, Turbulent Indigo

Klezmorim
Klezmorim, First Recordings 1976–78

Moogy Klingman
Rod MacDonald, No Commercial Traffic

Randy Knapp
Magpie, Live at the Dunham Inn

Mark Knopfler
Chet Atkins, Neck and Neck
Randy Newman, Land of Dreams

Lester Koenig
Jesse Fuller, Jazz, Folk Songs, Spirituals & Blues
Jesse Fuller, San Francisco Bay Blues

Robert Koester
Luther Allison, Love Me Mama
Sleepy John Estes, Broke and Hungry
Sleepy John Estes, Electric Sleep

Walt Koken
Walt Koken, Banjonique
Walt Koken, Hei-wa Hoedown

Paul Kolderie
Blood Oranges/Cheri Knight/Wooden Leg/Beacon Hillbillies, Corn River
Uncle Tupelo/Wilco/Son Volt, No Depression
Uncle Tupelo/Wilco/Son Volt, Still Feel Gone

Bill Kollar
John Gorka, Land of the Bottom Line
Christine Lavin, Good Thing He Can't Read My Mind

Fred Koller
Fred Koller, Songs from the Night Before
Fred Koller, Where the Fast Lane Ends

Ken Kolodner
Ken Kolodner, Daybreak
Chris Norman, Daybreak

Glen Kolotkin
Jonathan Richman, Back in Your Life

Al Kooper
Michael Bloomfield, The Live Adventures of Michael Bloomfield and Al Kooper Michael Bloomfield, Super Session

Michael Koppelman Moxy Früvous, Wood

Kornbread
Michael Hurley, Snockgrass

Frank Kornelussen
Nick Drake, Time of No Reply
Fairport Convention, House Full

Donna A. Korones
Ronnie Gilbert, Love Will Find a Way
Ronnie Gilbert, The Train Still Runs
Holly Near, This Train Still Runs

Danny Kortchmar
Freedy Johnston, Never Home
David Lindley, Mr. Dave
James Taylor, New Moon Shine

Leo Kottke
Leo Kottke, Six and Twelve-String Guitar

Paul Kovac
Carol Elizabeth Jones & James Leva, Light Enough to Find My Way

Reed Krack
Jake Krack, How 'bout That

Eddie Kramer
Buddy Guy, Live! The Real Deal
Carly Simon, Carly Simon

Craig Krampf disappear fear, disappear fear

Uwe Kranner
Paul Geremia, Gamblin' Woman Blues
Paul Geremia, Self Portrait in Blues

Miles Krassen
Liz Carroll, Irish Traditional Instrumental Music from Chicago, Vol. 2

Alison Krauss
The Cox Family, Just When You're Thinking It's Over

Alison Krauss & Union Station
Alison Krauss/Alison Krauss & Union Station, Every Time You Say Goodbye
Alison Krauss/Alison Krauss & Union Station, I Know Who Holds Tomorrow
Mark Simos, So Long So Wrong

Viktor Krauss
Michael Johnson, Then & Now

Louis Krieg
Bruce U. "Utah" Phillips, Good Though

Murray Krugman
Caroline Aiken, Butler Field

Russ Kunkel
Jimmy Buffett, Banana Wind
Clannad, Sirius

Doug Kupper
Lui Collins, Stone by Stone

Pete Kuykendall
The Country Gentlemen, Folk Session Inside
The Country Gentlemen, Folk Songs and Bluegrass

Greg Ladanyi
Clannad, Sirius
David Lindley, El Rayo-X
David Lindley, Mr. Dave
David Lindley, Win This Record

Jimmy LaFave
Jimmy LaFave, Buffalo Return to the Plains
Jimmy LaFave, Highway Trance

Kenny Laguna
Jonathan Richman, Back in Your Life

Tim Lake
Tim Lake, Jazz with Bluegrass & Blues
Tim Lake, Only in the Movies

Bruce Lampcov
Hank Williams, Hanky Panky

Jon Landau
Jackson Browne, The Pretender
Livingston Taylor, Echoes

Richard Landis
Roy Rogers, Tribute

Bill Landow
Les Gustafson-Zook, Great Hymns

Hollis Landrum
Hollis Landrum, Some Enchanted Evening
Hollis Landrum, Songs of the Vicksburg Siege
Hollis Landrum, Swing Dulcimer

k.d. lang
k.d. lang, a truly western experience
k.d. lang, Absolute Torch and Twang
k.d. lang, Ingenue

David Lange
Annie Gallup, Backbone

Clive Langer
Hothouse Flowers, Home
Hothouse Flowers, People

Peter Langston
Mark Simos, Race the River Jordan

Daniel Lanois
Emmylou Harris, Wrecking Ball
Hothouse Flowers, Home

Patty Larkin
Patty Larkin, I'm Fine
Patty Larkin, Perishable Fruit
Patty Larkin, Strangers World
Patty Larkin, Tango

Grey Larsen
Jake Krack, How 'bout That
Pete Sutherland, Poor Man's Dream

Custer LaRue
Chris Norman, Lullaby Journey

Grit Laskin
Grit Laskin, A Few Simple Words

Stephen LaVere
Robert Johnson, Robert Johnson: The Complete Recordings

Lee Lavergne
Roy Carrier/Roy Carrier and the Night Rockers, Zydeco Strokin' Sheryl Cormier, La Reine de Musique Cadjine (Queen of Cajun Music)
Sheryl Cormier, Sheryl Cormier and Cajun Sounds
Keith Frank, Let's Dance: Preston Frank and His Zydeco Family Band

Christine Lavin
Four Bitchin' Babes, Laugh Tracks
Christine Lavin, Another Woman's Man
Christine Lavin, Attainable Love
Cheryl Wheeler, Christine Lavin Presents: Laugh Tracks, Volume I

Don Law
Jim & Jesse, Jim & Jesse: Bluegrass and More
Robert Johnson, King of the Delta Blues Singers
Robert Johnson, Robert Johnson: The Complete Recordings

Pete Lawrence
Michelle Shocked, The Texas Campfire Tapes

Doyle Lawson
Doyle Lawson/Quicksilver, Heaven's Joy Awaits (A Cappella Quartets)
Doyle Lawson/Quicksilver, I'll Wonder Back Someday
Doyle Lawson/Quicksilver, Never Walk Away
Doyle Lawson/Quicksilver, Rock My Soul
Doyle Lawson/Quicksilver, There's a Light Guiding Me

Gwenn Le Goarnic
Planxty, 2e Festival Pop' Celtic Kertalg 73

Bill Leader
Bert Jansch, Bert Jansch/It Don't Bother Me
Mr. Fox, Mr. Fox/The Gipsy
Planxty, Prosperous
John Renbourn, John Renbourn and Bert Jansch
Stealers Wheel/Gerry Rafferty, Gerry Rafferty
Sweeney's Men, Time Was Never Here 1968–69
Young Tradition, Galleries

Arthur Lee
Love, Forever Changes
Love, Four Sail

Dick Lee
Hamish Moore, The Bee's Knees

Brad Leftwich
Brad Leftwich/Brad Leftwich & Linda Higginbotham, No One to Bring Home Tonight

Kyle Lehning
Cheryl Wheeler, Circles and Arrows

Jerry Leiber
Stealers Wheel/Gerry Rafferty, Ferguslie Park
Stealers Wheel/Gerry Rafferty, Stealers Wheel

Greg Leisz
Dave Alvin, King of California

Eddie LeJeune
Doris "D.L." Menard, Le Trio Cadien

Charlie Lennon
Frankie Gavin, Croch Suas é—Up and Away

Josh Leo
Dana Cooper, Miracle Mile
Jo-El Sonnier, Have a Little Faith

John Leonard
Dave Burland, Benchmark
Dave Burland, His Master's Choice: The Songs of Richard Thompson

Terry Leonino
Magpie, Circle of Life
Magpie, Seed on the Prairie
Magpie, Spoken in Love

Philippe Lerichomme
Alan Stivell, E Langonned

Stewart Lerman
Julian Dawson, Move Over, Darling
Julian Dawson, Travel On
The Roches, A Dove
Darden Smith, Deep Fantastic Blue

Jeffrey Lesser
Lynn Miles, Slightly Haunted
Darden Smith, Little Victories
Loudon Wainwright III, Career Moves
Loudon Wainwright III, Grown Man
David Wilcox, Big Horizon

James Leva
Carol Elizabeth Jones & James Leva, Light Enough to Find My Way

Bill Levenson
Eric Clapton, Crossroads

Dan Levenson
Boiled Buzzards, Early Bird Special
Boiled Buzzards, Fine Dining

Harold Leventhal
Pete Seeger, Pete Seeger's Family Concert

John Leventhal
Rosanne Cash, Ten Song Demo
Shawn Colvin, Steady On
Patty Larkin, Strangers World
Kimmie Rhodes, West Texas Heaven
Loudon Wainwright III, Little Ship

Duke Levine
Ellis Paul, Stories

Stewart Levine
Dr. John, Goin' Back to New Orleans

Bertram Levy
Peter Ostroushko, First Generation

Ron Levy
Ann Peebles, Full Time Love
The ReBirth Brass Band, Feel like Funkin' It Up
The ReBirth Brass Band, Re-Birth Kickin' It Live
The ReBirth Brass Band, Take It to the Street

George Lewis
The Chicken Chokers, Chokers and Flies

Laurie Lewis
Laurie Lewis/Grant Street, The Oak & the Laurel
Laurie Lewis/Grant Street, True Stories
Peter McLaughlin, Cliffs of Vermilion
Peter McLaughlin, The Oak and the Laurel
Peter McLaughlin, True Stories
Scott Nygaard, No Hurry
Mark Simos, The Oak and the Laurel
Erica Wheeler, The Harvest

Marty Lewis
Dan Fogelberg, High Country Snows
Tom Robinson Band/Tom Robinson/Sector 27, The Secret Policeman's Ball

Tom Lewis
Tom Lewis, Sea-Dog, See Dog!

Henry Lewy
The Dillards, The Fantastic Expedition of Dillard and Clark
Flying Burrito Brothers, Burrito Deluxe
Flying Burrito Brothers, The Gilded Palace of Sin
Neil Young, Harvest

Gordon Lightfoot
Gordon Lightfoot, Endless Wire
Gordon Lightfoot, Summertime Dream

Steve Lillywhite
Joan Armatrading, The Key
The Pogues, If I Should Fall from Grace with God
The Pogues, Peace and Love
Tom Robinson Band/Tom Robinson/Sector 27, Sector 27

Carsten Linde
De Danann/De Dannan, Selected Jigs, Reels and Songs
Dick Gaughan, A Different Kind of Love Song
Dolores Keane, Farewell to Eirinn

Colin Linden
Stephen Fearing, Industrial Lullaby
Colin Linden, South at Eight North at Nine
Hans Theessink/Blue Groove, Call Me
Brooks Williams, Back to Mercy

David Lindley
David Lindley, Mr. Dave
David Lindley, Win This Record

Mark Linett
Dave Alvin, The Pleasure Barons Live in Las Vegas
Dave Alvin, Romeo's Escape

Tommy LiPuma
Dr. John, In a Sentimental Mood
Dan Hicks, Striking It Rich
Dan Hicks, Where's the Money
Dave Mason, Alone Together
Dave Mason, The Best of Dave Mason
Dave Mason, Dave Mason Is Alive
Dave Mason, Headkeeper
Randy Newman, Land of Dreams

Scott Litt
Indigo Girls, Indigo Girls

Little Village
Ry Cooder, Little Village

Linda Littleton
Simple Gifts, Other Places, Other Times
Simple Gifts, A Place Just Right

A.L. Lloyd
Anne Briggs, Classic Anne Briggs: The Complete Topic Recordings

Jim Lockhart
Dervish, The Boys of Sligo

Vaughn Lofstead
Debby McClatchy, Off to California

Guy Logsdon
Cisco Houston, The Folkways Years, 1944–1961

Alan Lomax
Woody Guthrie, Library of Congress Recordings
Leadbelly/Huddie Ledbetter, The Library of Congress Recordings Mississippi Fred McDowell, The Blues Roll On Mississippi Fred McDowell, Roots of the Blues
Muddy Waters, Complete Plantation Recordings: The Historic 1941–42 Library of Congress Field Recordings

John Lomax III
David Schnaufer, Dulcimer Player Deluxe
David Schnaufer, Dulcimer Sessions

Frank London
Boiled in Lead, Antler Dance
Boiled in Lead, Fück the Circus

Lonesome River Band
Lonesome River Band, Carrying the Tradition

Lonesome River Band, Cold Virginia Night
Lonesome River Band, Old Country Town
Lonesome River Band, One Step Forward

Lonesome Standard Time
Lonesome Standard Time/Larry Cordle, Mighty Lonesome

Donna Long
Irish Tradition/Brendan Mulvihill & Billy McComiskey, The Steeplechase

Larry Long
Larry Long, Living in a Rich Man's World

Longview
Longview, Longview

Michael Lorant
Indigo Girls, Jesus Christ Superstar: A Resurrection

Michael Lord
Laura Love, Pangea
Ranch Romance, Blue Blazes
Ranch Romance, Western Dream

Jack Lothrop
Doc Watson/The Watson Family/Doc & Merle Watson, Good Deal! Doc Watson in Nashville

John Love
Raffi, Raffi on Broadway: A Family Concert

Laura Love
Laura Love, Helvetica Bold
Laura Love, Octoroon
Laura Love, Pangea

Lyle Lovett
Walter Hyatt/Uncle Walt's Band, King Tears
Walter Hyatt/Uncle Walt's Band, Lyle Lovett and His Large Band
Lyle Lovett, I Love Everybody
Lyle Lovett, Joshua Judges Ruth
Lyle Lovett, Lyle Lovett
Lyle Lovett, Lyle Lovett and His Large Band
Lyle Lovett, Pontiac
Lyle Lovett, The Road to Ensenada

Trevor Lucas
Sandy Denny/Fotheringay, Sandy

Gef Lucena
Robin Huw Bowen, Harp Music of Wales

John Lumsdaine
Eric & Suzy Thompson, Adam and Eve Had the Blues

Dónal Lunny
Altan, Altan
Altan, The First Ten Years, 1986–1995
The Bothy Band, The Bothy Band 1975
The Bothy Band, Celtic Folkweave
The Bothy Band, Old Hag You Have Killed Me
The Bothy Band, Out of the Wind Into the Sun
Kevin Burke, Andy Irvine, Paul Brady
Kevin Burke, If the Cap Fits
Capercaillie, Get Out
Capercaillie, Sidewaulk
Clannad, Clannad 2
De Danann/De Dannan, De Danann
Frankie Gavin, Rainy Sundays . . . Windy Dreams . . .
Andy Irvine, Andy Irvine & Paul Brady
Donal Lunny, Donal Lunny
Matt Molloy, Matt Molloy
Matt Molloy, Stony Steps
Christy Moore, The Christy Moore Collection 1981–1991
Moving Hearts, Moving Hearts
Liam O'Flynn/Liam ó Floinn, Celtic Folkweave
Liam O'Flynn/Liam ó Floinn, Liam O'Flynn
Liam O'Flynn/Liam ó Floinn, The Seville Suite
Tommy Peoples, Matt Molloy, Paul Brady, Tommy Peoples
Tommy Peoples, Welcome Here Kind Stranger
Planxty, After the Break
Planxty, High Kings of Tara
Planxty, The Woman I Loved So Well
Planxty, Words and Music
Sharon Shannon, Each Little Thing
Patrick Street, Patrick Street

Manus Lunny
Andy M. Stewart, Dublin Lady

Bob Lurie
Buffy Sainte-Marie, I'm Gonna Be a Country Girl Again

Claire Lynch
Claire Lynch/The Front Porch String Band, Silver & Gold

Jeff Lynne
Randy Newman, Land of Dreams

Gary Lyons Grateful Dead, Go to Heaven

Robert S. Lyons
Michael Miles, Counterpoint

Joel Mabus
Joel Mabus, Fairies and Fools
Joel Mabus, The Naked Truth
Joel Mabus, Promised Land

Graham Maby
Freedy Johnston, Can You Fly

MacArthur Family
Margaret MacArthur, MacArthur Road
Margaret MacArthur, Them Stars

Margaret MacArthur
Margaret MacArthur, Vermont Heritage Songs

Grant MacAvoy
Susan Werner, Midwestern Saturday Night

Larry MacBride
Elaine Purkey, Mountain Music, Mountain Struggle
Chirps Smith, Midwestern Harvest

James MacCafferty
Eugene O'Donnell, The Foggy Dew

Neill & Calum MacColl Ewan MacColl, Black and White

Laurel MacDonald
Mary Jane Lamond, Suas e!

Paul MacDonald
Jerry Holland, The Fiddlesticks Collection
Natalie MacMaster, A Compilation

Rod MacDonald
Rod MacDonald, Bring on the Lion
Rod MacDonald, Highway to Nowhere
Rod MacDonald, The Man on the Ledge
Rod MacDonald, White Buffalo

Páraic MacDonnchadha
Kevin Crawford/The Moving Cloud/Grianan/Raise the Rafters, Maiden Voyage
Tommy Peoples, Maiden Voyage

Teo Macero
The Clancy Brothers and Tommy Makem/Tommy Makem and Liam Clancy, Home Boys Home Simon & Garfunkel, The Graduate

Allister MacGillavry
Buddy MacMaster, Judique on the Floor

Paul Machlis
Alasdair Fraser, The North Road

Dave MacIsaac
Jerry Holland, Master Cape Breton Fiddler
Natalie MacMaster, Fit As a Fiddle

Dave MacKenzie
Adie Grey, Brand New Old Time Music
Adie Grey, Grandpa's Advice

James MacKintosh
Shooglenifty, Live at Selwyn Hall

Dougie MacLean
Dougie MacLean, Fiddle
Dougie MacLean, Indigenous
Dougie MacLean, Marching Mystery
Dougie MacLean, Real Estate
Dougie MacLean, Riof
Dougie MacLean, The Search
Dougie MacLean, Singing Land
Dougie MacLean, Sunset Song
Dougie MacLean, Tribute
Dougie MacLean, Whitewash

Jennifer MacLean
Dougie MacLean, Fiddle
Dougie MacLean, Marching Mystery
Dougie MacLean, Real Estate
Dougie MacLean, Riof
Dougie MacLean, Singing Land
Dougie MacLean, Tribute
Dougie MacLean, Whitewash

Don MacLeod
John Fahey, The John Fahey Christmas Album

Iain Macleod
Shooglenifty, Live at Selwyn Hall

Buddy MacMaster
Buddy MacMaster, Glencoe Hall

Séamus MacMathúna
Tommy Peoples, Tommy Peoples

Madeline MacNeil
Madeline MacNeil, Strawberry Fair

Avril MacRory
Paul Brady, Live for Ireland

Joanie Madden
Joanie Madden, A Whistle on the Wind

Alan F. Mager
Alan Mager, The Fairhaired Boy
Alan Mager, Hear the Colors

David Magill
Bill & Bonnie Hearne, New Mexico Rain

Taj Mahal
Taj Mahal, Shake Sugaree—Taj Mahal Sings and Plays for Children
Taj Mahal, Taj's Blues

Brent Maher
Michael Johnson, Wings

Ian Maidman
Paul Brady, Songs and Crazy Dreams

Lloyd Maines
Terry Allen, Bloodlines
Terry Allen, Human Remains
Richard Buckner, Bloomed
Ray Wylie Hubbard, Dangerous Spirits
Ray Wylie Hubbard, Loco Gringo's Lament
Robert Earl Keen Jr., No. 2 Live Dinner
James McMurtry, It Had to Happen
Jerry Jeff Walker, Christmas Gonzo Style

Cathie Malach
Amy Fradon and Leslie Ritter/Amy Fradon, Delphys: Ocean Born

Alain Mallet
The Story, The Angel in the House

David Mallett
David Mallett, Parallel Lives

Jim Malloy
Townes Van Zandt, Our Mother the Mountain
Townes Van Zandt, Townes Van Zandt

David Maloney
Becky Blackley, Gathering the Harvest

Mando Mafia
Mando Mafia, Mando Liniment
Mando Mafia, Take Two

Cindy Mangsen
Steve Gillette & Cindy Mangsen, Light of the Day
Steve Gillette & Cindy Mangsen, Live in Concert
Steve Gillette & Cindy Mangsen, Long Time Traveling
Steve Gillette & Cindy Mangsen, Settle Down
Steve Gillette & Cindy Mangsen, Voices of Winter
Anne Hills, Never Grow Old
Anne Hills, Voices of Winter

Owsley Manier
Mark Germino, Rank & File

Peter Mann
The Nylons, Run for Cover

Terry Manning
Furry Lewis, Fourth and Beale

Cary Mansfield
Gene Autry, Gene Autry with the Legendary Singing Groups of the West
Gene Autry, The Singing Cowboy, Chapter One

Pierre Marchand
The Devlins, Waiting
Sarah McLachlan, Fumbling towards Ecstasy
Sarah McLachlan, Solace

Pathé Marconi
Golden Gate Quartet/Golden Gate Jubilee Quartet, The Very Best of the Golden Gate Quartet

Tom Mardikes
Connie Dover/Scartaglen, Last Night's Fun

Arif Mardin
Steve Goodman, Somebody Else's Troubles
John Prine, John Prine

Bob Margolin
Bob Margolin, Down in the Alley
Bob Margolin, My Blues & My Guitar

Bob Marin
Golden Gate Quartet/Golden Gate Jubilee Quartet, Meet Me at the Golden Gate

Tony Markellis
Michael Jerling, My Evil Twin
Michael Jerling, New Suit of Clothes
Camille West, Mother Tongue

Larry Marks
Flying Burrito Brothers, The Gilded Palace of Sin
Phil Ochs, Pleasures of the Harbor
Phil Ochs, Rehearsals for Retirement
Phil Ochs, Tape from California

Marley's Ghost
Marley's Ghost, Haunting Melodies
Marley's Ghost, How Can I Keep from Singing
Marley's Ghost, Let de Groove Rise Up

Jerry Marotta Kristen Hall, Be Careful What You Wish For ...
Barbara Kessler, Notion
Ellis Paul, A Carnival of Voices

Michael Marra
Hamish Moore, Farewell to Decorum

Bob Marsh
E.C. Ball and Orna Ball, E.C. Ball with Orna Ball

Evan Marshall
Evan Marshall, Evan Marshall Is the Lone Arranger

Mike Marshall
Tony Elman, Earth Tones
Tony Furtado, Within Reach
Beppe Gambetta, Good News from Home
Laurie Lewis/Grant Street, True Stories
Peter McLaughlin, True Stories
Psychograss, Like Minds
Psychograss, Psychograss

George Martin
Richard Greene/The Grass Is Greener, Seatrain

Grady Martin
Kimmie Rhodes, Just One Love

Jim Martin
Jenny Allinder, Jenny Allinder
The Bing Brothers, Just for the Sake of It
Dave Bing, Dave Bing
Dave Bing, Sugar in My Coffee
Alan Freeman, The Mountain Dulcimer
Kendra Ward & Bob Bence, Dulcimer Country
Kendra Ward & Bob Bence, The Hammered Dulcimer Christmas Sampler
Kendra Ward & Bob Bence, Some Glad Morning!
Kendra Ward & Bob Bence, Way Down Yonder

Neil Martin
Déanta, Ready for the Storm
Déanta, Whisper of a Secret

Pat Martin
No Strings Attached, Dulcimer Dimensions
No Strings Attached, Take Five

Wayne Martin
Etta Baker, One-Dime Blues
Lauchlin Shaw & A.C. Overton, Sally with the Run-down Shoes
Doug & Jack Wallin, Family Songs and Stories from the North Carolina Mountains

Elane Martone
Maria Muldaur, Fanning the Flames

Eugene Martynec
Bruce Cockburn, Bruce Cockburn

Marcy Marxer
Cathy Fink and Marcy Marxer, A Cathy and Marcy Collection for Kids

Dave Mason
Dave Mason, Alone Together
Dave Mason, The Best of Dave Mason
Dave Mason, Dave Mason Is Alive
Dave Mason, Headkeeper

Jim Mason
Peter, Paul & Mary, Paul and . . .

Molly Mason
Jay Ungar & Molly Mason, Brother's Keeper
Jay Ungar & Molly Mason, The Lover's Waltz

Phillip Mason
Madeline MacNeil, Strawberry Fair

George Massenburg
Lyle Lovett, Joshua Judges Ruth
Linda Ronstadt, Trio
James Taylor, (Live)
James Taylor, Best Live

Brian Masterson
Altan, Blackwater
Altan, Island Angel
Seán Keane, Contentment Is Wealth
Seán Keane, Jig It in Style
Seán Keane, Seán Keane
Matt Molloy, Contentment Is Wealth
Planxty, The Woman I Loved So Well

Niall Mathewson
Old Blind Dogs, Five
Old Blind Dogs, Legacy

Ed Mattau Peter, Paul & Mary, Paul and . . .

Iain Matthews
Iain Matthews/Matthews Southern Comfort/Plainsong/Hamilton's Pool, The Soul of Many Places: The Elektra Years, 1972–1974
Eric Taylor, Eric Taylor

Scott Matthews
John Wesley Harding, Pett Levels: The Summer EP

Susan Maule
Grace Griffith, Siren Song

Elliott Mazer
Malcolm Dalglish, Jogging the Memory
Neil Young, Everybody's Rockin'
Neil Young, Harvest
Neil Young, Old Ways

Mac McAnally
Mac McAnally, Knots
Mac McAnally, Live and Learn

Larry McBride
Geoff Seitz, Fine as Frog's Hair
Geoff Seitz, Timely Old Tunes and Beyond

Robin McBride
Gamble Rogers, Gamble Rogers Live: The Warm Way Home
Gamble Rogers, Sorry Is as Sorry Does

Nancy McCallion
The Mollys, This Is My Round
The Mollys, Tidings of Comfort and Joy

Gordon McCann
Lonnie Robertson, Lonnie's Breakdown!
Fred Stoneking, Saddle Old Spike: Fiddle Music from Missouri

Jimmy McCarthy
De Danann/De Dannan, A Jacket of Batteries

Pat McCarthy
Hothouse Flowers, Home
David Wilcox, How Did You Find Me Here

Paul McCartney
Mary Hopkin, Post Card

Mary McCaslin
Mary McCaslin, Way out West
Jim Ringer/Jim Ringer & Mary McCaslin, The Best of Jim Ringer: The Band of Jesse James

Debby McClatchy
Debby McClatchy, Lady Luck
Debby McClatchy, 'Til the Good Times Come
Debby McClatchy, Apples in Winter

Doug McClement
Moxy Früvous, Bargainville

John McClure
Garrison Keillor, Garrison Keillor/Frederica Von Stade: Songs of the Cat
Garrison Keillor, Now It's Christmas Time
Peter, Paul & Mary, Peter, Paul, and Mommy Too

Don McCollister
Chuck Brodsky, Letters in the Dirt
Kristen Hall, Fact & Fiction

Carol McComb
Carol McComb, Tears into Laughter

Billy McComiskey
Irish Tradition/Brendan Mulvihill & Billy McComiskey, Makin' the Rounds
Billy McComiskey, Makin' the Rounds
Trian, Trian
Trian, Trian II

Ronnie McCoury
Jason Carter, The Cold Hard Facts
Jason Carter, A Deeper Shade of Blue
Jason Carter, On the Move
Jason Carter, Ronnie & Rob McCoury
The Del McCoury Band/The McCoury Brothers/Ronnie & Rob McCoury, Cold Hard Facts
The Del McCoury Band/The McCoury Brothers/Ronnie & Rob McCoury, A Deeper Shade of Blue
The Del McCoury Band/The McCoury Brothers/Ronnie & Rob McCoury, Ronnie & Rob McCoury

Larry McCullough
Liz Carroll, Irish Traditional Instrumental Music from Chicago, Vol. 2

John McCusker
Kate Rusby, Kate Rusby & Kathryn Roberts

John McCutcheon
Tom Chapin, Doing Our Job
John McCutcheon, Sprout Wings and Fly

Drew McDaniel
Sam Rizzetta, Together at Last

Brian McDonagh
Dervish, At the End of the Day
Dervish, Harmony Hill
Dervish, Live in Palma Dervish, Playing with Fire

Johnny McDonough
Arcady, Many Happy Returns

Bill McElroy
No Strings Attached, Bellinzona
No Strings Attached, Blue Roses
No Strings Attached, Coffee at Midnight
No Strings Attached, Take Five
Red Clay Ramblers, Merchants Lunch
Bonnie Rideout, Kindred Spirits
Trapezoid, Trapezoid: Another Country

William E. McEuen
The Nitty Gritty Dirt Band, Uncle Charlie and His Dog Teddy
The Nitty Gritty Dirt Band, Will the Circle Be Unbroken

Eleanor McEvoy
Eleanor McEvoy, What's Following Me?

T.J. McFarland
Don Walser, Rolling Stone from Texas
Don Walser, Texas Top Hand

Ronn McFarlane
Chris Norman, Beauty of the North
Chris Norman, Man with the Wooden Flute

Eileen McGann
Eileen McGann, Journeys
Eileen McGann, Turn It Around
Eileen McGann, Two Thousand Years of Christmas

David McGinley
Mike Cross, Carolina Sky
Mike Cross, Live & Kickin

Andy McGloin
Eric Bogle, I Wrote this Wee Song
Eric Bogle, Mirrors
Eric Bogle, Voices in the Wilderness

Arty McGlynn
De Danann/De Dannan, 1/2 Set in Harlem
Matt Molloy, Music at Matt Molloy's

Andy McKaie
B.B. King, King of the Blues

Peter McKeel
Jackson C. Frank, Blues Run the Game

Al McKenney
Bruce U. "Utah" Phillips, Good Though!

Loreena McKennitt
Loreena McKennitt, The Book of Secrets
Loreena McKennitt, The Mask and Mirror
Loreena McKennitt, The Visit

Susan McKeown
Susan McKeown & the Chanting House/Susan McKeown & Lindsey Horner, Bushes and Briars
Susan McKeown & the Chanting House/Susan McKeown & Lindsey Horner, Through the Bitter Frost and Snow

Ed McKuen
The Nields, The Folk Next Door
The Nields, Honey, Hide the Banjo! It's the Folk Next Door Again

Nancy McLaughlin
Josh Crowe and David McLaughlin, Going Back

Zan McLeod
Grace Griffith, Beyond the Horizon

Jeanie McLerie
Bayou Seco/Bayou Eclectico, Cactus Gumbo and Alligator Enchiladas
Bayou Seco/Bayou Eclectico, Following in the Tune Prints
Bayou Seco/Bayou Eclectico, Songs of New Mexico and Beyond

Alastair McMillan
Altan, Runaway Sunday

Brian McNeill
Eric Bogle, The Emigrant and the Exile
Brian McNeill, The Back o' the North Wind
Brian McNeill, The Busker and the Devil's Only Daughter Brian McNeill, Horses for Courses
Brian McNeill, Monksgate
Brian McNeill, No Gods
Brian McNeill, Stage by Stage

Guthrie Meade
Wilson Douglas, The Right Hand Fork of Rush's Creek
J.P. and Annadeene Fraley, Wild Rose of the Mountain
Buddy Thomas, Kitty Puss

Chic Medley
Mouth Music, Mouth Music
Mouth Music, Shorelife

Hank Medress
Harry Chapin, The Bottom Line Encore Collection

Glen Meisner
Natalie MacMaster, Fit as a Fiddle

Martin Meissonnier
Alan Stivell, Brian Boru

Robert Meitus
Carrie Newcomer, My Father's Only Son

Mel Bay Publications
Rosamund Campbell, The Parlour Dulcimer
Rosamund Campbell, The Victorian Dulcimer

Terry Melcher
The Byrds, Mr. Tambourine Man
Gene Clark, Mr. Tambourine Man
Gene Clark, Turn! Turn! Turn!
Ry Cooder, Rising Sons

Mike Melford
Vassar Clements, Crossing the Catskills
John Hartford, Mark Twang
John Hartford, Nobody Knows What You Do
Bob Shank, Crossing Devil's Bridge
Bob Shank, Fresh Produce

John Mellencamp
James McMurtry, Too Long in the Wasteland

D.L. Menard
Doris "D.L." Menard, No Matter Where You Are, There You At

Steve Mendell
James Talley, Got No Bread/Tryin' like the Devil

Lewis Merenstein
Van Morrison, Astral Weeks

Scott Merritt
Fred Eaglesmith, Drive-In Movie
Fred Eaglesmith, Lipstick Lies & Gasoline
Fred Eaglesmith, Things Is Changin'

Jim Messina
Loggins & Messina/Kenny Loggins, Sittin' In

Metamora
Malcolm Dalglish, Metamora

Andy Metcalfe
Robyn Hitchcock/Robyn Hitchcock & the Egyptians, Element of Light

Blake Mevis
Vern Gosdin, Warning: Contains Country Music (The Great Ballads of Vern Gosdin)

Edgar Meyer
Russ Barenberg, Skip, Hop, & Wobble
Jerry Douglas/Douglas, Barenberg & Meyer, Skip, Hop & Wobble
Mark O'Connor, Appalachia Waltz

Richard Meyer
Richard Meyer, The Good Life!
Richard Meyer, Laughing/Scared
Richard Meyer, A Letter from the Open Sky

Walt Michael
Walt Michael, Music for the Hammered Dulcimer/Bermudaful Walt Michael, Smoky Mountain Gospel

Lynn Miles
Lynn Miles, Chalk This One up to the Moon

Michael J. Miles
Michael Miles, American Bach
Michael Miles, Counterpoint

Mill Run Dulcimer Band
Mill Run Dulcimer Band, Long Time Traveling
Mill Run Dulcimer Band, You've Been a Friend to Me

Robin Millar
Tom Robinson Band/Tom Robinson/Sector 27, Hope and Glory

Buddy Miller
Buddy Miller, Poison Love
Buddy Miller, Your Love and Other Lies

Jo Miller
Ranch Romance, Blue Blazes

John Miller
Bob Franke, For Real
Cliff Perry & Laurel Bliss, Old Pal

Mark Miller
David Schnaufer, Dulcimer Player Deluxe
David Schnaufer, Dulcimer Sessions

Mark Alan Miller
Cordelia's Dad, Comet

Martin Miller
Klezmer Conservatory Band, Oy Chanukah!

Russ Miller
Trapezoid, Cool of the Day

Steven Miller
The Nields, Mortal City
Dar Williams, Mortal City

Alain Millet
Vance Gilbert, Edgewise

Paul Mills
Stan Rogers, Between the Breaks . . . Live
Stan Rogers, Fogarty's Cove
Stan Rogers, From Fresh Water
Stan Rogers, Northwest Passage
Stan Rogers, Turnaround

David Miner
T-Bone Burnett, T Bone Burnett
Pierce Pettis, Making Light of It

H. Thorp Minister III
Ted Hawkins, Dock of the Bay: The Venice Beach Tapes
Ted Hawkins, On the Boardwalk: The Venice Beach Tapes
Ted Hawkins, Songs from Venice Beach

Ben Mink
k.d. lang, Absolute Torch and Twang
k.d. lang, Ingenue

Joey Miskulin
Don Edwards, Songs of the Trail
Waddie Mitchell, The Bard and the Balladeer: Live from Cowtown
Waddie Mitchell, Buckaroo Poet
Waddie Mitchell, Lone Driftin' Rider
Michael Martin Murphey, Cowboy Songs III: Rhymes of the Renegades

Missouri Old Time Fiddler's Association Lyman Enloe, Rugged Road

Grant Mitchell
Julia Fordham, Porcelain

Joni Mitchell
Joni Mitchell, Blue
Joni Mitchell, Chalk Mark in a Rain Storm
Joni Mitchell, Court and Spark
Joni Mitchell, For the Roses
Joni Mitchell, The Hissing of Summer Lawns
Joni Mitchell, Ladies of the Canyon
Joni Mitchell, Turbulent Indigo

Willie Mitchell
Ann Peebles, Ann Peebles's Greatest Hits
Ann Peebles, The Best of the Hi Records Years
Ann Peebles, I Can't Stand the Rain
Ann Peebles, If This Is Heaven

Hugh Moffatt
Katy Moffatt, Dance Me Outside

Katy Moffatt
Katy Moffatt, Dance Me Outside
Katy Moffatt, Evangeline Motel
Katy Moffatt, Walkin' on the Moon

Tom Moffatt
Keola Beamer/Keola and Kapono Beamer/Nona Beamer, Pure Hawaiian Magic Hui Ohana/Ledward Kaapana, Live—Tahiti Come on Over
Hui Ohana/Ledward Kaapana, Live—Tahiti Come on Over

Frazier Mohawk
"Spider" John Koerner, Running, Jumping, Standing Still

Jackie Mollet
Deb Pasternak, Trust Me, I'm Soulful

Matt Molloy
Seán Keane, The Fire Aflame
Matt Molloy, Matt Molloy
Matt Molloy, Music at Matt Molloy's
Liam O'Flynn/Liam ó Floinn, The Fire Aflame

Mollys
The Mollys, Hat Trick
The Mollys, Wankin' out West

Kevin Moloney
Eleanor McEvoy, What's Following Me?
The Nields, Gotta Get over Greta

Mick Moloney
Liz Carroll, Cherish the Ladies: Irish Women Musicians in America
Liz Carroll, Ed Reavy
Liz Carroll, Fathers and Daughters from Cherish the Ladies Cherish the Ladies, The Back Door
Cherish the Ladies, Cherish the Ladies Irish Tradition/Brendan Mulvihill & Billy McComiskey, The Corner House
Irish Tradition/Brendan Mulvihill & Billy McComiskey, Makin' the Rounds Eileen Ivers, Fresh Takes
James Keane, Irish Traditional Instrumental Music from the East Coast of America, Volume I
James Keane, The Rights of Man: The Concert for Joseph Doherty
James Keane, Roll away the Reel World
Seán Keane, Roll away the Reel World
Billy McComiskey, Ed Reavy

Billy McComiskey, Irish Traditional Instrumental Music from the East Coast of America, Volume I
Billy McComiskey, Makin' the Rounds
Mick Moloney, Killkelly
Mick Moloney, Live in Concert
Mick Moloney, Mick Moloney with Eugene O'Donnell
Mick Moloney, There Were Roses
Mick Moloney, Uncommon Bonds
Eugene O'Donnell, 3 Way Street
Eugene O'Donnell, Slow Airs & Set Dances
Eugene O'Donnell, Uncommon Bonds
Solas, The Brothers McMullen: Original Motion Picture Soundtrack
Solas, Three Way Street
Solas, Traditional Music of Ireland
Solas, A Week in January
John Whelan, Fresh Takes

Paddy Moloney
Derek Bell, Carolan's Favourite
Derek Bell, Carolan's Receipt
The Chieftains, Another Country
The Chieftains, The Long Black Veil
Seán Keane, Gusty's Frolicks
Van Morrison, Irish Heartbeat

Bruce Molsky
Bruce Molsky, Bruce Molsky and Big Hoedown
Bruce Molsky, Lost Boy

Buddy Mondlock
Buddy Mondlock, On the Line

Country Dick Montana
Dave Alvin, The Pleasure Barons Live in Las Vegas

Bob Montgomery
Vern Gosdin, Chiseled in Stone

Gerry Mooney
Charlie King, Old Dreams and New Nightmares

Pat Mooney
Tamarack, Frobisher Bay

Christy Moore
Christy Moore, The Christy Moore Collection 1981–1991
Christy Moore, Live at the Point

Hamish Moore
Hamish Moore, The Bee's Knees

Peter Moore
Cowboy Junkies, Caution Horses
Cowboy Junkies, The Trinity Session

Vincent Moos
Johnny Cunningham, Fair Warning

Pamela Morgan
Figgy Duff/Pamela Morgan, Downstream
Figgy Duff/Pamela Morgan, Figgy Duff: A Retrospective, 1974–1993

Robert Morgan
The Clancy Brothers and Tommy Makem/Tommy Makem and Liam Clancy, In Person at Carnegie Hall
The Clancy Brothers and Tommy Makem/Tommy Makem and Liam Clancy, A Spontaneous Concert Performance

J. Morgantini
Rosetta Tharpe, Live at the Hot Club de France

Gurf Morlix
Butch Hancock, Eats Away the Night
Lucinda Williams, Lucinda Williams
Lucinda Williams, Sweet Old World

Lynn Morris
The Lynn Morris Band, Mama's Hand

Lynn Morris Band
The Lynn Morris Band, The Lynn Morris Band

Van Morrison
Mose Allison, Tell Me Something
Van Morrison, His Band and the Street Choir
Van Morrison, Hymns to the Silence
Van Morrison, Inarticulate Speech of the Heart
Van Morrison, Irish Heartbeat
Van Morrison, Moondance
Van Morrison, A Night in San Francisco
Van Morrison, St. Dominic's Preview
Van Morrison, Too Long in Exile

Bill Morrissey
Bill Morrissey, Bill Morrissey

Iain Morrow
Capercaillie, Get Out

Robin Morton Battlefield Band, Anthem for the Common Man Battlefield Band, Home Ground
Battlefield Band, Home Is Where the Van Is Battlefield Band, Quiet Days
Battlefield Band, There's a Buzz
Alison Kinnaird, The Quiet Tradition
Alison Kinnaird, The Scottish Harp
Brian McNeill, Sidetracks
Brian McNeill, Unstrung Hero
Maire Ni Chathasaigh, The New Strung Harp

Garth Mosbaugh
The Nylons, Fabric of Life

The Moving Cloud
Kevin Crawford/The Moving Cloud/Grianan/Raise the Rafters, The Moving Cloud

Moxy Früvous
Moxy Früvous, The B Album
Moxy Früvous, Bargainville
Moxy Früvous, Wood
Moxy Früvous, You Will Go to the Moon

Karen Mueller
Karen Mueller, Autoharp Gourmet
Karen Mueller, Clarity

Robert Mugge
Ray Kane/Raymond Kane, Master of the Slack Key Guitar

Geoff Muldaur
Paul Butterfield Blues Band/Paul Butterfield's Better Days, Better Days
Paul Butterfield Blues Band/Paul Butterfield's Better Days, It All Comes Back

Maria Muldaur
Maria Muldaur, Fanning the Flames
Maria Muldaur, Jazzabelle

Heidi Muller
Heidi Muller, Giving Back

Tim Mulligan
Neil Young, Rust Never Sleeps

Peter Mulvey
Peter Mulvey, Brother Rabbit Speaks
Peter Mulvey, Rain
Peter Mulvey, Rapture

Brendan Mulvihill
Irish Tradition/Brendan Mulvihill & Billy McComiskey, The Steeplechase

Alan Munde
Alan Munde, Blue Ridge Express
Alan Munde, Windy Days and Dusty Skies

Mark Miller Mundy
Marianne Faithfull, Broken English

Bill Murata
Hui Ohana/Ledward Kaapana, Hawaiian Style Guitars
Hui Ohana/Ledward Kaapana, Hawaiian-Style Guitars

Lee Murdock
Lee Murdock, Fertile Ground
Lee Murdock, Freshwater Highway

Michael Martin Murphey
Don Edwards, Songs of the Trail
Waddie Mitchell, The Bard and the Balladeer: Live from Cowtown
Waddie Mitchell, Lone Driftin' Rider
Michael Martin Murphey, Cowboy Songs
Michael Martin Murphey, Cowboy Songs III: Rhymes of the Renegades

Barry Murphy
Séamus Ennis, Irish Music in London Pubs

Elliot Murphy
Elliot Murphy, Going through Something: The Best of Elliott Murphy
Elliot Murphy, Party Girl, Broken Poets
Elliot Murphy, Selling the Gold

Hugh Murphy
Paul Brady, Hard Station
Paul Brady, Songs and Crazy Dreams
Stealers Wheel/Gerry Rafferty, Can I Have My Money Back
Stealers Wheel/Gerry Rafferty, City to City

Willie Murphy
Boiled in Lead, From the Ladle to the Grave

Martin Murray
Kevin Crawford/The Moving Cloud/Grianan/Raise the Rafters, The Maid of Eirin
Kevin Crawford/The Moving Cloud/Grianan/Raise the Rafters, Raise the Rafters
Matt Molloy, Music at Matt Molloy's

Robert Musso
The Klezmatics, Possessed

Hijaz "Hank" Mustapha Boiled in Lead, Orb

Laila Nabulsi
Todd Snider, Fear and Loathing in Las Vegas

Mark Naftalin
Paul Butterfield Blues Band/Paul Butterfield's Better Days, East West Live
Paul Butterfield Blues Band/Paul Butterfield's Better Days, Strawberry Jam

John Nagy
John Hammond Jr., John Hammond Live
The Holy Modal Rounders, Have Moicy!
Michael Hurley, Have Moicy!
Chris Smither, Another Way to Find You

Arnie Naiman
Arnie Naiman & Chris Coole, Five Strings Attached with No Backing

Graham Nash
Crosby, Stills and Nash/Crosby, Stills, Nash and Young/David Crosby/Crosby & Nash/Graham Nash/Stephen Stills, CSN
Steve Gillette & Cindy Mangsen, A Little Warmth

Syd Nathan
Johnnie & Jack, Johnnie & Jack

Holly Near
Holly Near, Singer in the Storm
Holly Near, With a Song in My Heart

Dave Neiman
Steve Schneider, The Door to Christmas

Ken Nelson
Jim & Jesse, Jim & Jesse

Mark Nelson
Mark Nelson, Autumn

Michael Nesmith
Iain Matthews/Matthews Southern Comfort/Plainsong/Hamilton's Pool, The Soul of Many Places: The Elektra Years, 1972–1974
Michael Nesmith, The Newer Stuff
Michael Nesmith, The Older Stuff; The Best of the Early Years

Hankus Netsky
Klezmer Conservatory Band, Dancing in the Aisles
Klezmer Conservatory Band, Live! The 13th Anniversary Album

Steve Netsky
Rachel Buchman, Jewish Holiday Songs for Children
Rachel Buchman, Sing a Song of Seasons

Bob Neuwirth
Vince Bell, Phoenix

Richard Nevins
Liz Carroll, A Friend Indeed
Liz Carroll, Kiss Me Kate
Michael Coleman, The Wheels of the World
Sleepy John Estes, I Ain't Gonna Be Worried No More, 1929–41
Frankie Gavin, Traditional Music of Ireland
Dennis McGee, The Complete Recordings 1929–1930
Mississippi Sheiks, Stop and Listen
Tommy Peoples, The High Part of the Road
Tommy Peoples, The Iron Man
Washington Phillips, I Am Born to Preach the Gospel: The Complete Recorded Works of Washington Phillips
Blind Alfred Reed, The Rose Grew 'round the Briar: Early American Rural Love Songs—Volumes I and II
Russell Family, Mountain Music Galax Style
Henry "Ragtime Texas" Thomas, Texas Worried Blues
Robert Wilkins, The Original Rolling Stone

Carrie Newcomer
Carrie Newcomer, An Angel at My Shoulder
Carrie Newcomer, Visions and Dreams

Norman Newell
Peter & Gordon, I Go to Pieces

Jimmy C. Newman
Jimmy C. Newman, The Alligator Man
Jimmy C. Newman, Whatever Boils Your Crawfish

Abby Newton
Steve Gillette & Cindy Mangsen, Voices
Priscilla Herdman, Darkness into Light
Anne Hills, Voices
Rude Girls, Mixed Messages
Steve Schneider, Tuesday's Child

Chris Nicholson
Eric Bogle, Scraps of Paper

David Nichtern
Maria Muldaur, Sweet and Slow

Simon Nicol
Ashley Hutchings/The Albion Band, The Prospect before Us

Paul Nienhaus
Ann and Phil Case, The Springtime of Life

Nightnoise
Nightnoise, At the End of the Evening
Nightnoise, A Different Shore
Nightnoise, Shadow of Time

Harry Nilsson
Harry Nilsson, Harry
Harry Nilsson, Son of Dracula

Jack Nitzsche
Neil Young, Harvest

Eithne NíUallacháin
Lá Lugh, Brighid's Kiss
Lá Lugh, La Lugh

No Strings Attached
No Strings Attached, Bellinzona
No Strings Attached, Blue Roses
No Strings Attached, Coffee at Midnight
No Strings Attached, Dulcimer Dimensions

Paddy Noonan
Joe Derrane, Irish Accordion
Joe Derrane, Joe Derrane and Jerry O' Brien: Accordion Duets
James Keane, Atlantic Wave
James Keane, Sweet and Traditional Music of Ireland

Chris Norman
Ken Kolodner, Daybreak
Chris Norman, Beauty of the North
Chris Norman, Daybreak
Chris Norman, Lullaby Journey

Jim Ed Norman
Michael Martin Murphey, The Best of Michael Martin Murphey
Mark O'Connor, The New Nashville Cats

Neil Norman
Queen Ida/Ida Guillory, Band on Tour
Queen Ida/Ida Guillory, Cookin' with Queen Ida

Tom North
Irish Rovers, On the Shores of Americay

Northampton Harmony
Cordelia's Dad, The Hookes' Regular Sing

Northern Lights
Northern Lights, Living in the City
Northern Lights, Take You to the Sky

Billy Novick
Billy Novick, The New Pennywhistle Album
Billy Novick, Raisin' the Rent
Billy Novick, These n' That n' Those

Lisa Null
Debby McClatchy, Apples in Winter
Debby McClatchy, Debby McClatchy with the Red Clay Ramblers
Debby McClatchy, Lady Luck

Jim Nunally
The All Girl Boys, Heart's Desire

Steve Nye
Clannad, Macalla

Scott Nygaard
Scott Nygaard, Dreamer's Waltz
Scott Nygaard, No Hurry
Linda Waterfall, Everything Looks Different

Laura Nyro
Laura Nyro, Eli & the 13th Confession
Laura Nyro, Mother's Spiritual
Laura Nyro, New York Tendaberry

Ron Oates
Vern Gosdin, Warning: Contains Country Music (The Great Ballads of Vern Gosdin)

Gerry O'Beirne
Kevin Burke, Promenade
Kevin Burke, Up Close
Patrick Street, Irish Times
Andy M. Stewart, Donegal Rain
Andy M. Stewart, Man in the Moon

Peter O'bleness
Garrison Keillor, Comedy Theater

Garry ó Briain
James Keane, With Friends Like These
Skylark, Raining Bicycles

Brendan O'Brien
Pete Droge, Find a Door
Pete Droge, Necktie Second

Derek O'Brien
Sue Foley, Young Girl Blues

Steve O'Brien
Fred Koller, Songs from the Night Before
Fred Koller, Where the Fast Lane Ends

Tim O'Brien
Balfa Toujours, Deux Voyages
The Chambers Brothers, The Chambers Brothers' Greatest Hits
Tim O'Brien/Tim & Mollie O'Brien, Away out on the Mountain
Dirk Powell, Deux Voyages
Dirk Powell, If I Go Ten Thousand Miles
Ranch Romance, Flip City

Ric Ocasek
Black 47, Fire of Freedom

Megan Lee Ochs
Phil Ochs, Farewells & Fantasies

Michael Ochs
Phil Ochs, Farewells & Fantasies
Phil Ochs, There but for Fortune
Phil Ochs, A Toast to Those Who Are Gone

Phil Ochs
Phil Ochs, Gunfight at Carnegie Hall

Gerry O'Connor
Lá Lugh, Brighid's Kiss
Lá Lugh, La Lugh

Mark O'Connor
Evan Marshall, Mandolin Unlimited
Mark O'Connor, Appalachia Waltz
Mark O'Connor, The Fiddle Concerto
Mark O'Connor, Heroes
Mark O'Connor, The New Nashville Cats

David O'Dell
Wilson Douglas, Hot from the Kitchen
Frank George, The Cedar Point String Band
Frank George, Reflections of the Past

Mícheál ó Domhnaill
The Bothy Band, The Bothy Band 1975
The Bothy Band, Old Hag You Have Killed Me
The Bothy Band, Out of the Wind Into the Sun
Kevin Burke, Portland
Kevin Burke, Promenade
Noel Hill, Noel Hill & Tony Linnane
Matt Molloy, Matt Molloy
Nightnoise, Something of Time

Eugene O'Donnell
Eugene O'Donnell, The Foggy Dew

Liam O'Flynn
Seán Keane, The Fire Aflame
Liam O'Flynn/Liam ó Floinn, The Fire Aflame

Jamie O'Hara
Kieran Kane/The O'Kanes, The O'Kanes

Mary Margaret O'Hara
Mary Margaret O'Hara, Christmas E.P.
Mary Margaret O'Hara, Miss America

Michael O'hEidhin
Mary Bergin/Dordan, Feadoga Stain

Milton Okun
John Denver, An Evening with John Denver
John Denver, Rocky Mountain High
Irish Rovers, On the Shores of Americay
The Chad Mitchell Trio, At the Bitter End
Laura Nyro, The First Songs
Peter, Paul & Mary, Album 1700

Old Blind Dogs
Old Blind Dogs, Five
Old Blind Dogs, Legacy

Old Time Music on the Radio Bayou Seco/Bayou Eclectico, Old Time Music on the Air, Vol. 2

Julia Olin
Irish Tradition/Brendan Mulvihill & Billy McComiskey, The Morning Dew

Keith Olsen Grateful Dead, Terrapin Station

Lee Olson
The Fairfield Four, I Couldn't Hear Nobody Pray
The Fairfield Four, Standing in the Safety Zone

Seamus O'Neill
Dolores Keane, Farewell to Eirinn

Paul Oorts
Steve Schneider, Momentum
Simple Gifts, A Place Just Right

Brendan O'Regan
Sharon Shannon, Ceol Tigh Neachtain

Hoyle Osborne
Jane Voss/Jane Voss & Hoyle Osborne, Get to the Heart
Jane Voss/Jane Voss & Hoyle Osborne, Pullin' Through
Jane Voss/Jane Voss & Hoyle Osborne, Sparkle and Shine

Sonny Osborne
The Osborne Brothers, Once More, Volumes I & II
Chubby Wise, An American Original

Billy Oskay
Alasdair Fraser, The North Road
Nightnoise, Something of Time

Ossian
Ossian, The Best of Ossian
Ossian, Borders
Ossian, The Carrying Stream
Ossian, Seal Song
Ossian, St. Kilda Wedding

Peter Ostroushko
Peter Ostroushko, Buddies of Swing
Peter Ostroushko, Pilgrims on the Heart Road

Mícheál O'Súilleabháin
Kevin Burke, Dear Old Erin's Isle—Irish Traditional Music from America
Kevin Burke, My Love is in America—The Boston College Irish Fiddle Festival
Liz Carroll, Dear Old Erin's Isle: Irish Traditional Music from America
Liz Carroll, My Love Is in America: The Boston College Irish Fiddle Festival
Martin Hayes, My Love Is in America: The Boston College Irish Fiddle Festival
Jerry Holland, Traditional Music from Cape Breton Island
Billy McComiskey, Dear Old Erin's Isle—Irish Traditional Music from America

Otter Slide Studios
Bob Shank, Hammer Dulcimer Solos

John Overton
Elizabeth Cotten, Live

Oyster Band
The Oyster Band, Freedom and Rain
The Oyster Band, Little Rock to Leipzig
June Tabor, Freedom and Rain

Kindle Paces
Neil Young, After the Gold Rush

Gary Pacheco
Bill Carlisle/Cliff Carlisle/The Carlisles, White Country Blues: 1926–1938, A Lighter Shade of Pale

Gary Paczosa
Michael Johnson, Then & Now

Hugh Padgham
Julia Fordham, Porcelain

Andy Paley
John Wesley Harding, Here Comes the Groom
John Wesley Harding, Pett Levels: The Summer EP

Tom Paley
The Foremen, Folk Heroes
The Foremen, What's Left?

Phil Palmer
Paul Brady, Full Moon
Paul Brady, Songs and Crazy Dreams

Panini
The Pahinui Brothers/Cyril Pahinui/James "Bla" Pahinui, The Baggy Pahinui Hawaiian Band, Volume 1
Gabby Pahinui, The Gabby Pahinui Hawaiian Band, Volume 1

Felix Pappalardi
David Rea, Maverick Child

Dave Para
Cathy Barton and Dave Para, Ballad of the Boonslick
Cathy Barton and Dave Para, Johnny Whistletrigger
Cathy Barton and Dave Para, Movin' on Down the River
Cathy Barton and Dave Para, Rebel in the Woods

G. Parker
Rod MacDonald, No Commercial Traffic

Van Dyke Parks
Ry Cooder, Ry Cooder
Randy Newman, Lonely at the Top
Randy Newman, Randy Newman
Phil Ochs, Greatest Hits

Walter Parks
The Nudes, The Nudes
The Nudes, Velvet Sofa

Gram Parsons
Gram Parsons, G.P./Grievous Angel

Johnny Parth
Blind Blake, Complete Recorded Works in Chronological Order, Vols. 1–4
Herschel Brown/J.H. Brown, Herschel Brown 1928–1929
John "Seven Foot Dilly" Dilleshaw/Dilly & the Dill Pickles, John Dilleshaw (Seven Foot Dilly) Complete Recorded Works in Chronological Order, 1929–1930
Blind Lemon Jefferson, Blind Lemon Jefferson: Complete Works 1926–29
Furry Lewis, Complete Record Works (1927–29)
Blind Willie McTell, Blind Willie McTell: Complete Recorded Works (1927–35), Volumes I–III
Memphis Jug Band/Picaninny Jug Band/Jed Davenport & His Beale Street Jug Band, Complete Recorded Works, Volume III (1930)
Memphis Minnie, Memphis Minnie & Kansas Joe—1929–34 Recordings in Chronological Order, Volumes I–IV
Mississippi Sheiks, Complete Recorded Works Volumes I–IV
Rosetta Tharpe, Sister Rosetta Tharpe Complete Recorded Works
Henry "Ragtime Texas" Thomas, Henry Thomas 1927–29

Bruce Jay Paskow
Annie Gallup, Cause and Effect

Tim Patalan
Brenda Kahn, Destination Anywhere

Johnny Pate
B.B. King, Live at the Regal

Sandy Paton
Bok, Muir & Trickett, And So Will We Yet
Bok, Muir & Trickett, Bok, Muir & Trickett: The First 15 Years, Vol. I

Bok, Muir & Trickett, Bok, Muir & Trickett: The First 15 Years, Vol. II
Archie Fisher, The Man with a Rhyme
Cindy Kallet, Cindy Kallet II
Ed Miller, At Home with the Exiles

Sandy and Caroline Paton
Sara Grey, Five Days Singing, Volumes I and II
Sandy & Caroline Paton, Sandy and Caroline Paton
John Roberts & Tony Barrand, Dark Ships in the Forest

Patrick Street
Patrick Street, Corner Boys
Patrick Street, Irish Times
Patrick Street, Made in Cork
Patrick Street, No.2 Patrick Street

Beverly Patterson
Doug & Jack Wallin, Family Songs and Stories from the North Carolina Mountains

Daniel Patterson
Doug & Jack Wallin, Family Songs and Stories from the North Carolina Mountains

Curtis Paul
Gayla Drake Paul, Gayla Drake Paul
Gayla Drake Paul, How Can I Keep from Singing? Works for Solo Guitar Gayla Drake Paul, Waiting for the Spark

Brian Paulson
Uncle Tupelo/Wilco/Son Volt, Anodyne
Uncle Tupelo/Wilco/Son Volt, Trace

Gary S. Paxton
Vern Gosdin, Warning: Contains Country Music (The Great Ballads of Vern Gosdin)

Tom Paxton
Tom Paxton, Paxton Primer

Leandra Peak
Neal & Leandra, Accidental Dreams

Paul Pearcy
Dick Siegel, Angels Aweigh

Ed Pearl
The Kentucky Colonels/The Country Boys, Appalachian Swing!

Herb Pedersen
The Dillards, Homecoming and Family Reunion
The Dillards, There Is a Time: The Best of the Dillards 1963–1970
Chris Hillman/The Desert Rose Band, Bakersfield Bound
The Laurel Canyon Ramblers, Blue Rambler 2
The Laurel Canyon Ramblers, Rambler's Blues

Don Pedi
Don Pedi, The Hog Went through the Fence Yoke and All

Ralph Peer
Jimmie Rodgers, America's Blue Yodeler, 1930–1931
Jimmie Rodgers, First Sessions, 1927–1928
Jimmie Rodgers, Jimmie Rodgers

Nigel Pegrum
Dougie MacLean, C.R.M.
Dougie MacLean, Caledonia
Dougie MacLean, On a Wing and a Prayer
Dougie MacLean, The Plant Life Years
Dougie MacLean, Snaigow

Gail Pellet
Bernice Johnson Reagon, The Songs Are Free

Eric Peltoniemi
Prudence Johnson, Little Dreamer . . . Lullabies for Young and Old
"Spider" John Koerner, Raised by Humans
Claudia Schmidt, Essential Tension

Fred Pement
Don Stover, The Lilly Brothers and Don Stover: Live at Hillbilly Ranch

Ron Penix
Cathy Barton and Dave Para, Reflections on the Carter Family

Don Pennington
James Keelaghan, My Skies
James Keelaghan, A Recent Future

Ray Pennington
Grandpa Jones, Grandpa Jones Live
The Whites/Buck White & the Down Home Folks, Give a Little Back

Greg Penny
k.d. lang, Absolute Torch and Twang
k.d. lang, Ingenue
Maura O'Connell, A Real Life Story

Pentangle
Pentangle, Open the Door

Al Perkins
Chris Hillman/The Desert Rose Band, Desert Rose

Larry Perkins
Lonesome Standard Time/Larry Cordle, A Touch of the Past

Ken Perlman
Ken Perlman, Island Boy
Ken Perlman, Melodic Clawhammer Banjo

Nick Perls
Blind Blake, Ragtime Guitar's Foremost Fingerpicker
The Cheap Suit Serenaders, R. Crumb and his Cheap Suit Serenaders Mississippi John Hurt, 1928 Sessions

Richard Perry
Harry Nilsson, Nilsson Schmilsson
Carly Simon, No Secrets

Peter, Paul and Mary
Peter, Paul & Mary, Children
Peter, Paul & Mary, Eugene McCarthy for President—If You Love Your Country

Billy Peterson
Larry Long, Run for Freedom, Sweet Thunder

Scott Petito
Amy Fradon and Leslie Ritter/Amy Fradon, Take Me Home
Anne Hills, Angle of the Light
Artie Traum, Letters from Joubee
Happy Traum/Happy & Artie Traum, The Test of Time
Diane Zeigler, Sting of the Honeybee

Rob Petruccelli
The New St. George, High Tea

Al Petteway
Al Petteway, Caledon Wood
Al Petteway, The Waters and the Wild

Nance Pettit
David Wilcox, East Asheville Hardware

Kelly Joe Phelps
Kelly Joe Phelps, Lead Me On

Jerry Phillips
John Prine, Pink Cadillac

Knox Phillips
John Prine, Pink Cadillac

Todd Phillips
Matt Flinner, The View from Here
Kathy Kallick, Matters of the Heart
Todd Phillips, Timeframe
Todd Phillips, True Life Blues: The Music of Bill Monroe

Don Pierce
Bill Clifton, The Early Years, 1957–1958

Johnny Pierce
Kate Campbell, Moonpie Dreams
Kate Campbell, Songs from the Levee

John Pilla
Kevin Burke, Last of the Brooklyn Cowboys
Arlo Guthrie, All over the World
Arlo Guthrie, Amigo
Arlo Guthrie, Outlasting the Blues
Arlo Guthrie, Together in Concert

Charlie Pilzer
Ceoltoiri, Silver Apples of the Moon
Ceoltoiri, Women of Ireland
Ensemble Galilei, Ancient Noels
Ensemble Galilei, Following the Moon
Ensemble Galilei, The Mystic and the Muse
Sue Richards, Hazel Grove
Sue Richards, Morning Aire
Bonnie Rideout, Celtic Circles
Maggie Sansone, Ancient Noels
Maggie Sansone, Dance upon the Shore
Maggie Sansone, A Scottish Christmas

John Pinamonti
John Pinamonti, Tragico Magico

Piney Creek Weasels
Piney Creek Weasels, Go Long Mule
Piney Creek Weasels, Squirrel Heads and Gravy

William Pint
Tom Lewis, Making Waves
Tom Lewis, Sea-Dog, See Dog!
Tom Lewis, Surfacing

Dave Pirner
Brenda Kahn, 60-Second Critic

Tony Platt
Young Tradition, No Relation

Neely Plumb
The Limeliters, Tonight: In Person
The Limeliters, Two Classic Albums from the Limeliters Glenn Yarbrough, Baby the Rain Must Fall

J.P. Plunier
Ben Harper, Fight for Your Mind
Ben Harper, Welcome to the Cruel World

Mr. Pokey
Christine Collister, The World Is a Wonderful Place: The Songs of Richard Thompson

Andy Polon
Ken Perlman, Clawhammer Banjo and Fingerstyle Guitar Solos

Bob Porter
Mose Allison, The Best of Mose Allison

John Porter
Billy Bragg, Talking with the Taxman about Poetry
Buddy Guy, Damn Right, I've Got the Blues
Buddy Guy, Feels like Rain
Taj Mahal, Phantom Blues
Keb' Mo', Just like You
Keb' Mo', Keb' Mo'

Ted Porter
Big Blow and the Bushwackers, Off Kilter: A Celtic Outerlude

Barry Poss
Tommy Jarrell, Sail away Ladies
Chris Thile, Tinsel Tunes
Doc Watson/The Watson Family/Doc & Merle Watson, Riding the Midnight Train

Steve Pottier
Sandy Rothman & Steve Pottier, Bluegrass Guitar Duets

Dirk Powell
Dirk Powell, Dirk Powell and John Herrmann

Timothy R. Powell
Indigo Girls, Back on the Bus Y'All

Stephen Powers
Gamble Rogers, The Lord Gives Me Grace, the Devil Gives Me Style

Tom Prasada-Rao
Tom Prasada-Rao, Hear You Laughing

Precision Audio
Les Gustafson-Zook, Great Hymns

Mark Prentice
The Fairfield Four, I Couldn't Hear Nobody Pray

Bill Price
The Waterboys, Dream Harder

Primitive Characters
Primitive Characters, The Leavin's

Ian Prince
The Nylons, Fabric of Life

John Prine
John Prine, Aimless Love
John Prine, John Prine Live

Maddy Prior
June Tabor, Silly Sisters

Sidney Prosen
Johnnie & Jack, Johnnie & Jack

Daniel Protheroe
Marley's Ghost, How Can I Keep from Singing

Keith Proud
Kathryn Tickell, On Kielder Side

Gerry Putnam
Cosy Sheridan, Saturn Return

Norbert Putnam
Jimmy Buffett, Changes in Latitudes, Changes in Attitudes
Dan Fogelberg, Home Free

Bill Quinn
Lightnin' Hopkins, The Gold Star Sessions, Volume 1
Lightnin' Hopkins, The Gold Star Sessions, Volume 2
Lightnin' Hopkins, Texas Blues

Frank Quintini
Jo Carol Pierce, Bad Girls Upset by the Truth

Carol Rachou
Aldus Roger, A Cajun Legend
Aldus Roger, Plays the French Music of South Louisiana
Sundown Playboys/Lesa Cormier & the Sundown Playboys, Saturday Night Cajun Music
Lawrence Walker, Tribute to the Late Great Lawrence Walker

David Rachou
Filé, La Vie Marron (The Runaway Life)

Radio France
Frankie Gavin, Irlande

Gerry Rafferty
Stealers Wheel/Gerry Rafferty, Can I Have My Money Back
Stealers Wheel/Gerry Rafferty, City to City

Raffi
Raffi, Baby Beluga
Raffi, Evergreen Everblue
Raffi, Raffi's Christmas Album
Raffi, Singable Songs Collection

George Rains
Sue Foley, Young Girl Blues

Bonnie Raitt
Bonnie Raitt, Luck of the Draw

Kenny Ralph
The Saw Doctors, Same Oul' Town

Phil Ramone
Art Garfunkel, Watermark
Peter, Paul & Mary, LifeLines
Raffi, Raffi on Broadway: A Family Concert
Paul Simon, Live Rhymin'
Simon & Garfunkel, The Concert in Central Park

Bo Ramsey
Greg Brown, Down in There

Willis Alan Ramsey
Willis Alan Ramsey, Willis Alan Ramsey

Ranch Romance
Ranch Romance, Western Dream

Teddy Randazzo
Keola Beamer/Keola and Kapono Beamer/Nona Beamer, Honolulu City Lights

Paul Rangell
Bayou Seco/Bayou Eclectico, Cactus Gumbo and Alligator Enchiladas

Rankin Family
The Rankin Family, Endless Seasons

Steve Rashid
Andrew Calhoun, Hope
Kat Eggleston, Outside Eden
Kat Eggleston, Second Nature

Steve Rathe
The New Lost City Ramblers, New Lost City Ramblers' 20th Anniversary Concert

Andrew Ratshin
Electric Bonsai Band/Uncle Bonsai, But I'm Happy Now
Electric Bonsai Band/Uncle Bonsai, The Inessential Uncle Bonsai
Electric Bonsai Band/Uncle Bonsai, Lounging in the Belly of the Beast Electric Bonsai Band/Uncle Bonsai, 20 Seconds of Pleasure

Philippe Rault
Mose Allison, Lesson in Living

John Ravenhall
The Oyster Band, Deserters
June Tabor, Angel Tiger

David Rea
David Rea, Brass Ring
David Rea, By the Grace of God
David Rea, Slewfoot

Bob Read
Karen Ashbrook, Hills of Erin
Sally Rogers, Generations

Bernice Johnson Reagon
Bernice Johnson Reagon, River of Life/Harmony: One
Bernice Johnson Reagon, Voices of the Civil Rights Movement: Black American Freedom Songs 1960–1966

Toshi Reagon
Bernice Johnson Reagon, River of Life/Harmony: One
Toshi Reagon, Justice
Toshi Reagon, Kindness

Mac Rebennack
Dr. John, Trippin' Live

Rebirth Jazz Band
The ReBirth Brass Band, Here to Stay

Red Clay Ramblers
Red Clay Ramblers, Merchants Lunch

Red Mountain White Trash
Red Mountain White Trash, Fire in the Dumpster

Leon Redbone
Leon Redbone, From Branch to Branch
Leon Redbone, Live
Leon Redbone, No Regrets
Leon Redbone, Red to Blue

Jean Redpath
Jean Redpath, Lowlands

Greg Reely
Sarah McLachlan, Touch

Jan Reichow
Altan, Ireland
De Danann/De Dannan, Ireland
Frankie Gavin, Ireland

Gary Reid
Joel Mabus, Fairies and Fools
Sally Rogers, The Unclaimed Pint

Gary B. Reid
Kenny Baker/Kenny Baker and Josh Graves, Master Fiddler
The Chestnut Grove Quartet, The Legendary Chestnut Grove Quartet
Darby and Tarlton, On the Banks of a Lonely River
The Delmore Brothers, Brown's Ferry Blues
Jim Eanes, Classic Bluegrass
Brad Leftwich/Brad Leftwich & Linda Higginbotham, Say, Old Man
Uncle Dave Macon, Travelin' down the Road
Bill Monroe & His Blue Grass Boys, In the Pines
Don Reno & Red Smiley, Reno & Smiley & the Tennessee Cut-Ups, 1951–1959
Larry Sparks, Classic Bluegrass
Ernest Stoneman/The Stoneman Family, Edison Recordings—28
Mac Wiseman, Early Dot Recordings, Volume III

Pete Reiniger
The Double Decker String Band, Chasing Rainbows

Paul Reisler
John McCutcheon, Howjadoo!
John McCutcheon, Water from Another Time
John McCutcheon, Winter Solstice
Sally Rogers, Generations
Trapezoid, Cool of the Day
Trapezoid, Long Time down This Road

Scott Reiss
Hesperus, Early American Roots

Rosetta Reitz
Rosetta Tharpe, Sister R. Tharpe

Renegades
Carol Elizabeth Jones & James Leva, I Need to Find

Manny Rettinger
Bayou Seco/Bayou Eclectico, Following in the Tune Prints
Bayou Seco/Bayou Eclectico, Songs of New Mexico and Beyond

Allen Reynolds
Asleep at the Wheel, Asleep at the Wheel: Tribute to the Music of Bob Wills and the Texas Playboys
Emmylou Harris, At the Ryman
Emmylou Harris, Cowgirl's Prayer
Kathy Mattea, A Collection of Hits
Kathy Mattea, Walk the Way the Wind Blows

Debbie Reynolds
Carol Thompson, The Peacock's Feather

Ron Rhoads Jr.
The Forbes Family, I'll Look to Him

Kimmie Rhodes
Kimmie Rhodes, West Texas Heaven

Rhythm Rats
Rhythm Rats, I Believe I'll Go Back Home
Rhythm Rats, Pretty Crowing Chicken

Peter Rice
Alan Stivell, Live in Dublin

Tony Rice
Tony Rice, Mar West
Tony Rice, Tony Rice Sings and Plays Bluegrass

Zachary Richard
Zachary Richard, Looking Back
Zachary Richard, Women in the Room

Cameron Riddle
Flaco Jimenez, Buena Suerte, Senorita

Bonnie Rideout
Bonnie Rideout, Kindred Spirits

Don Rigsby
Lonesome River Band, A Vision

Doug Riley
Ian & Sylvia/Ian Tyson/The Great Speckled Bird/Sylvia Tyson Fricker, All the Good 'Uns

Jim Ringer
Jim Ringer/Jim Ringer & Mary McCaslin, The Best of Jim Ringer: The Band of Jesse James

Ralph Rinzler
Clarence "Tom" Ashley, The Original Folkways Recordings 1960–1962
The Balfa Brothers/Freres Balfa, Louisiana Cajun French Music from the Southwest Prairies: Vol. 1, 1964–1967
Séamus Ennis, Irish Music in London Pubs
Bill Monroe & His Blue Grass Boys, Live Duet Recordings 1963–1980—Off the Record, Volume II
Bill Monroe & His Blue Grass Boys, Live Recordings 1965–69: Off the Record, Volume I Doc Watson/The Watson Family/Doc & Merle Watson, Bill Monroe and Doc Watson: Live Duet Recordings 1963–80—Off the Record, Volume II
Doc Watson/The Watson Family/Doc & Merle Watson, Doc Watson and Clarence Ashley: The Original Folkways Recordings: 1960–62
Doc Watson/The Watson Family/Doc & Merle Watson, The Watson Family

Pete Ritzema
June Tabor, June Tabor: The Peel Sessions

Chris Rival
Deb Pasternak, More

John Rivers
Dead Can Dance, Dead Can Dance
Dead Can Dance, The Serpent's Egg
Dead Can Dance, Spleen and Ideal

Carrie Rizzetta
Sam Rizzetta, In the Garden

Sam Rizzetta
Sam Rizzetta, Bucks and Does
Sam Rizzetta, In the Garden

Terry Robb
John Fahey, The John Fahey Christmas Album

Sandy Roberton
Iain Matthews/Matthews Southern Comfort/Plainsong/Hamilton's Pool, The Soul of Many Places: The Elektra Years, 1972–1974
Steeleye Span, Please to See the King

John Roberts
John Roberts & Tony Barrand, Eat Bertha's Mussels
John Roberts & Tony Barrand, Hail Smiling Morn!
John Roberts & Tony Barrand, Mellow with Ale from the Horn
John Roberts & Tony Barrand, Nowell Sing We Clear Volume IV
John Roberts & Tony Barrand, A Present from the Gentlemen

Robin Roberts
Séamus Ennis, The Bonny Bunch of Roses

Steve Roberts
Mark Germino, Rank & File

Steve Robertshaw
Dave Burland, His Master's Choice: The Songs of Richard Thompson

Kim Robertson
Kim Robertson, Love Song to a Planet

Robbie Robertson
Jesse Winchester, Jesse Winchester

Duke Robillard
John Hammond Jr., Found True Love

Butch Robins
Joseph "Butch" Robins, The Fifth Child
Joseph "Butch" Robins, Fragments of My Imagination
Joseph "Butch" Robins, Grounded–Centered–Focused

Andy Robinson
Happy Traum/Happy & Artie Traum, Buckets of Rain

Robby "Mann" Robinson
Zydeco Force, It's La La Time
Zydeco Force, Zydeco Push

Tom Robinson
Tom Robinson Band/Tom Robinson/Sector 27, Hope and Glory

Roches
The Roches, No Trespassing

Jerry Rockwell
Jerry Rockwell, Favorite American Folktunes

Garnet Rogers
Archie Fisher, Sunsets I've Galloped Into Garnet Rogers, At a High Window
Garnet Rogers, Garnet Rogers
Garnet Rogers, Night Drive
Garnet Rogers, The Outside Track
Garnet Rogers, Small Victories
Garnet Rogers, Speaking Softly in the Dark Garnet Rogers, Summer Lightning—Live

Lelan Rogers
Lightnin' Hopkins, Free Form Patterns

Roy Rogers
Ramblin' Jack Elliott, Friends of Mine
John Lee Hooker, The Healer
Bonnie Raitt, The Healer
Roy Rogers, Chops Not Chaps
Roy Rogers, Rhythm and Groove
Roy Rogers, Slide Zone
Roy Rogers, Travellin' Tracks

Sally Rogers
Sally Rogers, The Unclaimed Pint
Sally Rogers, We'll Pass Them On Sally Rogers, What Can One Little Person Do?

Tammy Rogers
Tammy Rogers, In the Red
Tammy Rogers, Tammy Rogers

Valerie Rogers
Grit Laskin, Unmasked

Linda Ronstadt
David Lindley, Very Greasy

James K. Rooney
Eric Von Schmidt, Second Right Third Row

Jim Rooney
Pat Alger, Seeds
Pat Alger, True Love & Other Short Stories
Iris DeMent, Infamous Angel
Iris DeMent, My Life
Steve Gillette & Cindy Mangsen, The Ways of the World
David Grier, Freewheeling
Nanci Griffith, Last of the True Believers
Nanci Griffith, Other Voices, Other Rooms
Bill & Bonnie Hearne, Diamonds in the Rough
Ian & Sylvia/Ian Tyson/The Great Speckled Bird/Sylvia Tyson Fricker, All the Good 'Uns
Robert Earl Keen Jr., West Textures
David Olney, Roses
Tom Paxton, Live for the Record
John Prine, Aimless Love
John Prine, John Prine Live
Peter Rowan, Bluegrass Boy
Barry & Holly Tashian, Ready for Love

Townes Van Zandt, At My Window
Jerry Jeff Walker, Live at Gruene Hall

Fred Rose
Hank Williams, 40 Greatest Hits

Kim Rosen
Amy Fradon and Leslie Ritter/Amy Fradon, Delphys: Ocean Born

Stuart Rosenberg
Anne Hills, Woman of a Calm Heart

Gene Rosenthal
Roy Book Binder, Travelin' Man
Mississippi John Hurt, Memorial Anthology
Bob Shank, At the Wednesday Night Waltz

Hilton Rosenthal
The Horseflies/The Tompkins County Horseflies, Gravity Dance

Steve Rosenthal
Four Bitchin' Babes, Buy Me Bring Me Take Me: Don't Mess My Hair!!! Volume 2
Christine Lavin, Buy Me Bring Me Take Me: Don't Mess My Hair!!! Volume II
Christine Lavin, Please Don't Make Me Too Happy
Cheryl Wheeler, Christine Lavin Presents: Laugh Tracks, Volume I

Neil Ross
Phil Cunningham, Airs and Graces

John Rossbach
Ken Perlman, Island Boy

Kevin Roth
Kevin Roth, The Mountain Dulcimer Instrumental Album
Kevin Roth, Mountain Dulcimer Instrumental Album, Volume II: The First Few Words
Kevin Roth, Now I Lay Me down to Sleep
Kevin Roth, Searching for Angels
Kevin Roth, Train Songs and Other Tracks

Adam Rothberg
The Nields, The Honesty Room
Dar Williams, The Honesty Room

Paul Rothchild
Michael Bloomfield, East-West
Michael Bloomfield, The Lost Sessions
Paul Butterfield Blues Band/Paul Butterfield's Better Days, East-West
Paul Butterfield Blues Band/Paul Butterfield's Better Days, The Lost Sessions
Paul Butterfield Blues Band/Paul Butterfield's Better Days, The Paul Butterfield Blues Band
The Charles River Valley Boys, Beatle Country
The Charles River Valley Boys, Charles River Valley Boys
Lovin' Spoonful, John B. Sebastian
Bonnie Raitt, Home Plate

Sandy Rothman
Sandy Rothman & Steve Pottier, Bluegrass Guitar Duets

Jay Round
Cathy Barton and Dave Para, Reflections on the Carter Family

The Rounder Collective
E.C. Ball and Orna Ball, Fathers Have a Home Sweet Home

Brent Rowan
Kate Wallace, Kate Wallace

Peter Rowan
Peter Rowan, Bluegrass Boy

Bruce Rowland
Dave Swarbrick, Swarbrick/Swarbrick II

Dan Rowles
Garrison Keillor, Lake Wobegon USA

Tom Rozum
Laurie Lewis/Grant Street, The Oak & the Laurel
Peter McLaughlin, The Oak and the Laurel
Mark Simos, The Oak and the Laurel

Rick Rubin
Johnny Cash, American Recordings

David Rubinson
The Chambers Brothers, The Chambers Brothers' Greatest Hits
Taj Mahal, Giant Step/De Old Folks at Home
Taj Mahal, Taj's Blues

Thomas Ruf
Luther Allison, Where Have You Been? Live in Montreux 1976–94

Rick Ruggieri
Carolyn Hester, Warriors of the Rainbow

John W. Rumble
Bill Monroe & His Blue Grass Boys, The Music of Bill Monroe from 1936 to 1994

Todd Rundgren
Tom Robinson Band/Tom Robinson/Sector 27, TRB Two

Runrig
Runrig, Maral

Tom Rush
Tom Rush, The Best of Tom Rush

Tom Russell
Rosie Flores, Tulare Dust
Katy Moffatt, Evangeline Motel
Tom Russell, Cowboy Real
Tom Russell, Hillbilly Voodoo
Tom Russell, Hurricane Season
Tom Russell, Poor Man's Dream

Tony Russell
Archie Fisher, Will Ye Gang, Love

Sonia Rutstein
disappear fear, Almost Chocolate

Dennis Ryan
Jerry Holland, Master Cape Breton Fiddler

Nicky Ryan
Altan, Ceol Aduaidh
Altan, Mná na héireann (Women of Ireland)
Clannad, Clannad in Concert
Clannad, Dulaman
De Danann/De Dannan, Selected Jigs, Reels and Songs
De Danann/De Dannan, The Star Spangled Molly
Enya, The Celts
Enya, Christmas EP
Enya, Enya Collection
Enya, Frog Prince Soundtrack
Enya, The Memory of Trees
Enya, Oiche Chiun (Silent Night)
Enya, Paint the Sky with Stars: The Best of Enya
Enya, Shepherd Moon
Enya, Watermark

Saffire
Saffire—The Uppity Blues Women, Old, New, Borrowed, and Blue
Saffire—The Uppity Blues Women, Saffire, the Uppity Blues Women

Sampler Records
Mitzie Collins, Be Thou My Vision

Les Sampou
Les Sampou, Sweet Perfume

Dave Samuelson
Kenny Baker/Kenny Baker and Josh Graves, The Puritan

Paul Samwell-Smith
Amazing Blondel, Fantasia Lindum
Mark Germino, London Town & Barnyard Remedies

victor sanders

The Roches, Seductive Reasoning
Carly Simon, Anticipation
Cat Stevens, Tea for the Tillerman Cat Stevens, Teaser and the Firecat

Victor Sanders
Buddy Mondlock, On the Line
Sons of the Never Wrong, Three Good Reasons

Ben Sandmel
Hackberry Ramblers, Deep Water

Colum Sands
Tommy Sands, Beyond the Shadows
Tommy Sands, Singing of the Times

Tommy Sands
Tommy Sands, Beyond the Shadows
Tommy Sands, The Heart's a Wonder

Maria Sangiolo
Maria Sangiolo, Follow Your Own Road

Anton Sanko
Lucy Kaplansky, Flesh and Bone
Suzanne Vega, Days of Open Hand

Nicholas Sansano
Peter Mulvey, Deep Blue

Maggie Sansone
Ensemble Galilei, Music in the Great Hall
Al Petteway, A Scottish Christmas
Sue Richards, Grey-Eyed Morn

Akira Satake
Susan McKeown & the Chanting House/Susan McKeown & Lindsey Horner, Bushes and Briars
Susan McKeown & the Chanting House/Susan McKeown & Lindsey Horner, Peter and Wendy

Art Satherly
Molly O'Day, Molly O'Day & the Cumberland Mountain Folks
Sons of the Pioneers, Columbia Historic Edition

Fernando Saunders
Susan Werner, Last of the Good Straight Girls

Mark Saunders
Margo Hennebach, Big Love

Savoy-Doucet Cajun Band
Savoy-Doucet Cajun Band, Two-Step d' Amédée

Saw Doctors
The Saw Doctors, Same Oul' Town

Charles Sawtelle
Front Range, Back to Red River
Front Range, The New Frontier
Kate MacLeod, Constant Emotion
Kate MacLeod, Trying to Get It Right

Scartaglen
Connie Dover/Scartaglen, The Middle Path
Connie Dover/Scartaglen, Scartaglen

Mark Schatz
Critton Hollow String Band, Cowboys and Indians
Special Consensus, Strong Enough to Bend

Elliot Scheiner
Jimmy Buffett, Feeding Frenzy
Jimmy Buffett, Off to See the Lizard

Peter Schekeryk
Melanie, Gather Me

John Scherf
Neal & Leandra, Accidental Dreams
Neal & Leandra, Hearts and Hammers
Neal & Leandra, Old Love

Bob Scherl
Mississippi John Hurt, The Best of Mississippi John Hurt

Claudia Schmidt
Claudia Schmidt, It Looks Fine from Here

Al Schmitt
Jackson Browne, Late for the Sky
Hot Tuna, Hot Tuna

Rocky Schnaars
Kate Wallace, Kate Wallace

David Schnaufer
David Schnaufer, Dulcimer Sessions

Steve Schneider
Steve Schneider, The Door to Christmas
Steve Schneider, Momentum

Helen Schneyer
Helen Schneyer, Somber, Sacred & Silly

Christian Scholze
Altan, Ireland
De Danann/De Dannan, Ireland
Frankie Gavin, Ireland

Dave Schramm
Cordelia's Dad, How Can I Sleep?

Kevin Schramm
The Mollys, Welt the Floor!

Bill Schubart
Mary McCaslin, Way out West

Geoffrey Schulman
Phil Ochs, The War Is Over: The Best of Phil Ochs

John Schumann
Eric Bogle, Something of Value

Tracy Schwarz
Tracy Schwarz/Tracy Schwarz Cajun Trio, Mes Amis!
Tracy Schwarz/Tracy Schwarz Cajun Trio, Souvenirs
Tracy Schwarz & Ginny Hawker, Deep Hollows and High Ridges

Darrell Scott
Darrell Scott, Aloha from Nashville

Hammond Scott
Lynn August, Lynn August: Creole Cruiser
Lynn August, Sauce Piquante
Buckwheat Zydeco, 100% Fortified Zydeco
Maria Muldaur, Louisiana Love Call

Jim Scott
Zachary Richard, Women in the Room

Mike Scott
The Saw Doctors, If This Is Rock & Roll, I Want My Old Job Back
The Waterboys, Best of the Waterboys
The Waterboys, Dream Harder
The Waterboys, Fisherman's Blues
The Waterboys, A Pagan Place
The Waterboys, The Secret Life of the Waterboys
The Waterboys, This Is the Sea

Nauman S. Scott
Buckwheat Zydeco, 100% Fortified Zydeco

Neil Scott
Dick Siegel, Snap!

Randy Scruggs
Iris DeMent, The Way I Should Be

John Sebastian
Rory Block, High Heeled Blues
Lovin' Spoonful, I Want My Roots
Lovin' Spoonful, Tarzana Kid

Louis Sedmark
Ian & Sylvia/Ian Tyson/The Great Speckled Bird/Sylvia Tyson Fricker, All the Good 'Uns

Anthony Seeger
Leadbelly/Huddie Ledbetter, Last Sessions

Mike Seeger
Paul Brown, Way Down in North Carolina
Elizabeth Cotten, Freight Train and Other North Carolina Folk Songs and Tunes
The Country Gentlemen, Country Songs Old and New Hazel & Alice/Hazel Dickens/Alice Gerrard, Get Acquainted Waltz
Lilly Brothers/Lilly Brothers & Don Stover, Folk Songs from the Southern Mountains
The New Lost City Ramblers, The New Lost City Ramblers, the Early Years, 1958–1962
Leslie Riddle, Step by Step
Mike Seeger, Get Acquainted Waltz
Mike Seeger, Solo: Old-Time Country Music
Mike Seeger, Third Annual Farewell Reunion
Mike Seeger, Way Down in North Carolina
Strange Creek Singers, Get Acquainted Waltz

David Seitz
Hugh Blumenfeld, Bonfonded
Hugh Blumenfeld, Wasson's Money
Hugh Blumenfeld, The Strong in Spirit
Annie Sellick, Courage My Love
Margo Hennebach, Michoacan
Susan McKeown & the Chanting House/Susan McKeown & Lindsey Horner, Through the Bitter Frost and Snow
The Nields, The Honesty Room
Richard Shindell, Sparrows Point
Dar Williams, The Honesty Room

Geoff Seitz
Geoff Seitz, The Good Old Days Are Here

Matthew Seligman
Robyn Hitchcock, Robyn Hitchcock & the Egyptians, Groovy Decoy

Alan Senauke
Kathy Kallick, Use a Napkin (Not Your Mom)

Declan Sennott
Mary Black, Babes in the Woods

Larry Serafini
Dan Duggan, Between the Seasons

Linda Severt
Laura Love, Helvetica Bold

Martin Sexton
Martin Sexton, In the Journey

Bob Shad
Lightnin' Hopkins, Blues from Sonny Terry & Brownie McGhee, Hometown Blues

Bob Shank
Bob Shank, Hammer Dulcimer Solos

Jamshied Sharifi
Susan McKeown & the Chanting House/Susan McKeown & Lindsey Horner, Buckets and Briars

Ian Shaw
Paul Robeson, The Peace Arch Concerts

Del Shell
Robin Huw Bowen, The Sweet Harp of My Land

Sammy Shelor
Lonesome River Band, Leaving Rail

Louie Shelton
Seals & Crofts, Summer Breeze

Cory Sheridan
Cory Sheridan, Quietly Led Cory Sheridan, Saturn Return

Judith Sherman
Robin Holcomb, Little Three

Billy Sherrill
Jim & Jesse, Jim & Jesse: Bluegrass and More
George Jones, Ladies' Choice

Richard Shindell
Richard Shindell, Sparrows Point

Witt Shingle
The Pahinui Brothers/Cyril Pahinui/James "Bla" Pahinui, The Pahinui Bros.

Michelle Shocked
Alison Brown, Arkansas Traveler
Red Clay Ramblers, Arkansas Traveler

Steve Sholes
Chet Atkins, Galloping Guitar: The Early Years
Johnnie & Jack, Johnnie & Jack
Jimmy Martin, Jimmy Martin & the Sunny Mountain Boys

Grant Showbiz
Billy Bragg, Don't Try This at Home
Billy Bragg, The Internationale

Eddie Shuler
Bonsoir Travis, The Lake Charles Atomic Bomb (Original Goldband Recordings)
Iry Lejeune, Cajun's Greatest: The Definitive Collection
Iry Lejeune, The Legendary Iry Lejeune

Bob Shumaker
California Cajun Orchestra, Nonc Adam Two-Step
Eric & Suzy Thompson, Nonc Adam Two-Step

Dick Shurman
Albert Collins, Frostbite
Albert Collins, Frozen Alive!

Jane Siberry
Jane Siberry, Bound by the Beauty
Jane Siberry, No Borders Here
Jane Siberry, When I Was a Boy

Ben Sidran
Mose Allison, Tell Me Something

Dick Siegel
Dick Siegel, Angels Aweigh
Dick Siegel, Dick Siegel Live
Dick Siegel, Snap!
Dick Siegel, Tomorrow Morning

Peter K. Siegel
Red Allen, The Kitchen Tapes
The Charles River Valley Boys, Beatle Country
Hazel & Alice/Hazel Dickens/Alice Gerrard, Pioneering Women of Bluegrass Peter Rowan, The Great American Eagle Tragedy
Paul Siebel, Paul Siebel
Joseph Spence, Kneelin' down inside the Gate: The Great Rhyming Singers of the Bahamas
Joseph Spence, The Spring of Sixty-Five
Frank Wakefield, The Kitchen Tapes

Steve Siegfried
The Pahinui Brothers/Cyril Pahinui/James "Bla" Pahinui, The Pahinui Bros.

Larry Sifel
Al Petteway, The Waters and the Wild

Chris Silagyi
Dave Alvin, Blue Blvd
Dave Alvin, Museum of Heart

Silly Wizard
Silly Wizard, The Best of Silly Wizard
Silly Wizard, Caledonia's Hardy Sons
Silly Wizard, So Many Partings

Harry Silverstein
Jimmy Martin, Jimmy Martin & the Sunny Mountain Boys

Bill Monroe & His Blue Grass Boys, Bill Monroe—Bluegrass 1959–1969
Bill Monroe & His Blue Grass Boys, Bill Monroe—Bluegrass 1970–1979

Sidney Simien
Rockin Sidney, My Toot Toot
Rockin Sidney, My Zydeco Shoes Got the Zydeco Blues

John Simon
The Band, The Band
The Band, Music from Big Pink
Leonard Cohen, Songs of Leonard Cohen
Steve Forbert, Jackrabbit Slim

Paul Simon
Jackson C. Frank, Blues Run the Game
The Roches, Seductive Reasoning
Paul Simon, Graceland
Paul Simon, Hearts and Bones
Paul Simon, Paul Simon
Paul Simon, Still Crazy after All These Years
Simon & Garfunkel, Bookends
Simon & Garfunkel, Bridge over Troubled Water
Simon & Garfunkel, The Concert in Central Park

Mark Simos
Mark Simos, Race the River Jordan

Simple Gifts
Simple Gifts, Down by the Sally Gardens

Martin Simpson
Martin Simpson/Martin & Jessica Ruby Simpson/Band of Angels, Cool and Unusual

Shelby S. Singleton Jr.
The Flatlanders, Unplugged

Declan Sinnott
The Black Family/Shay, Michael, and Martin Black, The Black Family
The Black Family/Shay, Michael, and Martin Black, Time for Touching Home
Mary Black, Collected

Ricky Skaggs
Ricky Skaggs, Bluegrass Rules
Ricky Skaggs, Highways and Heartaches
Ricky Skaggs, Waitin' for the Sun to Shine

Patrick Sky
Séamus Ennis, Forty Years of Irish Piping Mississippi John Hurt, Today!
Eugene O'Donnell, Mick Moloney with Eugene O'Donnell
Patrick Sky, Songs That Made America Famous

Skyedance
Skyedance, Way out to Hope Street

Skylark
Skylark, Light and Shade

Sean Slade
Uncle Tupelo/Wilco/Son Volt, No Depression
Uncle Tupelo/Wilco/Son Volt, Still Feel Gone

Rob Smaling
The Dubliners, Live in Carre, Amsterdam

Fred Small
Fred Small, Heart of the Appaloosa

Jackie Small
Mary Bergin/Dordan, Irish Traditional and Baroque Frankie Gavin, Croch Suas é—Up and Away

Judy Small
Judy Small, The Best of the '80s
Judy Small, Second Wind

Arthur Smith
Mac Wiseman, The Mac Wiseman Story

Betty Smith
Betty Smith, Both Sides, Then and Now
Betty Smith, Psaltery Concert

Debi Smith
Smith Sisters/Debi Smith, A Canary's Song
Camille West, Gabby Road–Out of the Mouths of Babes: Life According to the Bitchin' Babes

Harry Smith
The Fugs, The Fugs First Album
The Fugs, The Fugs Second Album

Jerry Read Smith
Jerry Read Smith, Heartdance
Jerry Read Smith, Homecoming
Jerry Read Smith, The Stray-away Child
David Wilcox, The Nightshift Watchman

Kenny Smith
Lonesome River Band, Studebaker

Lynn "Chirps" Smith
Chirps Smith, Midwestern Harvest

Megan Smith
Smith Sisters/Debi Smith, A Canary's Song

Russell Smith
The Amazing Rhythm Aces, Out of the Blue
The Amazing Rhythm Aces, Ride Again
Alaska's Hobo Jim, Thunderfoot
Alaska's Hobo Jim, Where Legends Are Born

Steuart Smith
Shawn Colvin, Cover Girl
Julian Dawson, Move Over, Darling
Julian Dawson, Travel On

Taylor "Chip" Smith
Primitive Characters, The Leavin's

Dick Smothers
Smothers Brothers/Pat Paulsen, Sibling Revelry

Tom Smothers
Smothers Brothers/Pat Paulsen, Sibling Revelry

Steve Smulian
Bill Staines, Bridges

Ed Snodderly
The Brother Boys, Presley's Grocery

Don Snyder
Sylvia Woods, The Harp of Brandiswhiere: A Suite for Celtic Harp
Sylvia Woods, Three Harps for Christmas
Sylvia Woods, 3 Harps for Christmas Volume II

John Snyder
Clarence "Gatemouth" Brown, Gate Swings
James Cotton, Living the Blues
Maria Muldaur, Fanning the Flames

Floyd Soileau
The Balfa Brothers/Freres Balfa, The Balfa Brothers Play Traditional Cajun Music, Vols. 1 & 2
Boozoo Chavis, Zydeco Trail Ride
Keith Frank, What's His Name?
Keith Frank, You'd Be Suprized
Dennis McGee, La Vielle Musique Acadienne
Doris "D.L." Menard, Cajun Memories
Willis Prudhomme, Willis Prudhomme and Zydeco Express
Aldus Roger, Marie/Be Careful, You're Breaking My Heart
Rockin Sidney, Rockin' Sydney and His Dukes: They Call Me Rockin' Sundown Playboys/Lesa Cormier & the Sundown Playboys, Hier Et Aujourd'hui Sundown Playboys/Lesa Cormier & the Sundown Playboys, Saturday Night Special/Valse de Soliel Coucher
Tasso, The Old Timey Way

J. Steven Soles
Steve Young, Switchblades of Love

Jon Solins
Bill Harley, I'm Gonna Let It Shine—A Gathering of Voices for Freedom

Pete Solley
Steve Forbert, Little Stevie Orbit

Arnie Solomon
Wayne Henderson, Rugby Guitar

Maynard Solomon
Joan Baez, The First Ten Years
Joan Baez, Joan Baez 5
Richard and Mimi Fariña/Mimi Fariña, Best Of Richard and Mimi Fariña/Mimi Fariña, Memories
John Hammond Jr., The Best of John Hammond
Jim Kweskin & the Jug Band, Greatest Hits
Paul Robeson, The Essential Paul Robeson
Buffy Sainte-Marie, I'm Gonna Be a Country Girl Again

Solomon's Seal
Lorraine (Lee) Hammond/Lorraine & Bennett Hammond/Solomon's Seal/Rick & Lorraine Lee, The Old Road

Son Volt
Uncle Tupelo/Wilco/Son Volt, Trace

Jo-El Sonnier
Jo-El Sonnier, Cajun Pride

Sons of the Never Wrong
Sons of the Never Wrong, Three Good Reasons

Karen Sorensen
Chic Street Man, Beau-ti-ful
Chic Street Man, Everybody Be Yo'self
Chic Street Man, Guns Away

Rosalie Sorrels
Rosalie Sorrels, Report from Grimes Creek
Rosalie Sorrels, Then Came the Children

Larry Sparks
Larry Sparks, The Rock I Stand On Larry Sparks, Silver Reflections
Larry Sparks, Sings Hank Williams

Mark Spector
Tom Rush, The Best of Tom Rush

Bill Spence
John Roberts & Tony Barrand, Mellow with Ale from the Horn
Bill Spence, Fennigmania
Bill Spence, The Hammered Dulcimer
Bill Spence, The Hammered Dulcimer Strikes Again

Mark Spencer
Blood Oranges/Cheri Knight/Wooden Leg/Beacon Hillbillies, Wooden Leg

Buddy Spicher
Boys from Indiana, Touchin Home

Richard Spottswood
Alphonse "Bois Sec" Ardoin, Les Blues du Bayou
Michael Coleman, From Galway to Dublin
Michael Coleman, Milestone at the Garden
Canray Fontenot, Les Blues du Bayou
Mississippi John Hurt, Avalon Blues 1963
Mississippi John Hurt, Worried Blues

Daithi Sproule
Liz Carroll, Liz Carroll
Trian, Trian
Trian, Trian II

Gregory Squires
Sally Rogers, Laments & Dances

Wes Stace
John Wesley Harding, It Happened One Night

Jeanie Stahl
Mason Daring/Jeanie Stahl and Mason Daring, The Early Years
Jeanie Stahl/Jeanie Stahl & Mason Daring, The Early Years

Peter Stampfel
The Holy Modal Rounders, The Holy Modal Rounders

Roebuck Staples
Pops Staples, Peace to the Neighborhood

John Starling
Carl Jackson, Spring Training

Ringo Starr
Harry Nilsson, Son of Dracula

Andy Statman
Andy Statman, Songs for Our Fathers

Jody Stecher
California Cajun Orchestra, Nonc Adam Two-Step
California Cajun Orchestra, Not Lonesome Anymore
Alasdair Fraser, The Driven Bow
Katy Moffatt, Kate Brislin & Katy Moffatt
Joseph Spence, The Spring of Sixty-Five
Jody Stecher & Kate Brislin, Blue Lightning
Jody Stecher & Kate Brislin, Going up on the Mountain
Jody Stecher & Kate Brislin, Heart Songs: The Old Time Country Songs of Utah Phillips
Jody Stecher & Kate Brislin, Our Town
Jody Stecher & Kate Brislin, A Song That Will Linger
Jody Stecher & Kate Brislin, Stay Awhile
Eric & Suzy Thompson, Nonc Adam Two-Step
Eric & Suzy Thompson, Not Lonesome Anymore

Allan Steckler
Roy Rogers, Peace in the Valley

Steeleye Span
Steeleye Span, Storm Force Ten

Tom Steenbergen
The Dubliners, Live in Carre, Amsterdam

Rafe Stefanini
Rafe Stefanini, Old Paint

Adam Stemple
Boiled in Lead, Songs from the Gypsy

Tom Stern
Don Reno & Red Smiley, Family & Friends

Cat Stevens
Cat Stevens, Foreigner
Cat Stevens, Izitso

Al Stewart
Al Stewart, Between the Wars

Andy M. Stewart
Andy M. Stewart, Dublin Lady

Gary Stewart
Phil Ochs, Farewells & Fantasies

Jim Stewart
Otis Redding, Live in Europe
Otis Redding, Otis Blue

John Stewart
John Stewart, Airdream Believer
John Stewart, Bullets in the Hourglass
John Stewart, Dream Babies Go Hollywood
John Stewart, The Last Campaign
John Stewart, Neon Beach
John Stewart, Secret Tapes '86

Michael Stewart
John Stewart, Lonesome Picker Rides Again
John Stewart, Sunstorm

Don Stiernberg
Homer & Jethro, Swing Low, Sweet Mandolin

Stephen Stills
Crosby, Stills and Nash/Crosby, Stills, Nash and Young/David Crosby/Crosby & Nash/Graham Nash/Stephen Stills, Long May You Run
Crosby, Stills and Nash/Crosby, Stills, Nash and Young/David Crosby/Crosby & Nash/Graham Nash/Stephen Stills, Manassas
Crosby, Stills and Nash/Crosby, Stills, Nash and Young/David Crosby/Crosby & Nash/Graham Nash/Stephen Stills, Stephen Stills
Chris Hillman/The Desert Rose Band, Manassas

Harry Stinson
Kieran Kane/The O'Kanes, Dead Reckoning
Kieran Kane/The O'Kanes, A Night of Reckoning
Tammy Rogers, Tammy Rogers
Kevin Welch, Life down Here on Earth
Kevin Welch, A Night of Reckoning

Michael Stipe
Vic Chesnutt, West of Rome

Alan Stivell
Alan Stivell, 70/95 ZOOM
Alan Stivell, Again
Alan Stivell, Live in Dublin
Alan Stivell, The Mist of Avalon

Mike Stoller
Stealers Wheel/Gerry Rafferty, Ferguslie Park
Stealers Wheel/Gerry Rafferty, Stealers Wheel

Stone Soup
Carrie Newcomer, Long Fields
Carrie Newcomer, October Nights

Brian Stone
Buffalo Springfield, Buffalo Springfield

Ed Stone
Ani DiFranco, Like I Said

Stoney Lonesome
Stoney Lonesome, Blue Heartache
Stoney Lonesome, Lonesome Tonight

Noel Paul Stookey
David Mallett, Inches & Miles 1977–1980

Dan Storper
Dougie MacLean, Putamayo Presents the Dougie MacLean Collection

Don Stover
Don Stover, Things in Life

Chris Strachwitz
Nathan Abshire, French Blues
Any Old Time String Band, Any Old Time String Band
Any Old Time String Band, I Bid You Goodnight
Alphonse "Bois Sec" Ardoin, La Musique Creole
Amédée Ardoin, I'm Never Comin' Back: The Roots of Zydeco
Amédée Ardoin, Louisiana Cajun Music, Vol. 6: Amade Ardoin: The First Black Zydeco Recording Artist
California Cajun Orchestra, Cajun Jam Session
California Cajun Orchestra, Not Lonesome Anymore
Bill Carlisle/Cliff Carlisle/The Carlisles, Blues Yodeling and Steel Guitar Wizard
C.J. Chenier, My Baby Don't Wear No Shoes
Clifton Chenier, 60 Minutes with the King of Zydeco
Harry Choates, Fiddle King of Cajun Swing
John Delafose, Joe Pete Got Two Women
David Doucet, Beau Solo
David Doucet, Master of the Folk Violin
Canray Fontenot, Louisiana Hot Sauce, Creole Style
Hackberry Ramblers, Early Recordings: 1935–1948
Hackberry Ramblers, Jolie Blonde
Hazel & Alice/Hazel Dickens/Alice Gerrard, Get Acquainted Waltz
Lightnin' Hopkins, The Gold Star Sessions, Volume 1
Lightnin' Hopkins, The Gold Star Sessions, Volume 2
Lightnin' Hopkins, Texas Blues
Klezmorim, First Recordings 1976–78
Furry Lewis, Mississippi Delta Blues Jam, Volume I
Mance Lipscomb, Texas Blues Guitar
Mance Lipscomb, Texas Songster
Mance Lipscomb, Texas Songster Volume II: You Got to Reap What You Sow
The Maddox Brothers & Rose/Rose Maddox, America's Most Colorful Hillbilly Band—Their Original Recordings 1946–1951
The Maddox Brothers & Rose/Rose Maddox, Maddox Brothers & Rose, Volume II
The Maddox Brothers & Rose/Rose Maddox, On the Air: The 1940s
Magnolia Sisters, Prends Courage
Mississippi Fred McDowell, Good Morning Little School Girl
Mississippi Fred McDowell, Mississippi Delta Blues
Mississippi Fred McDowell, This Ain't No Rock 'n' Roll
Doris "D.L." Menard, Under the Green Oak Tree
"Cheese" Read, Cajun House Party: C'ez Cheese
"Cheese" Read, Folksongs of the Louisiana Acadians
The ReBirth Brass Band, Here to Stay
Savoy-Doucet Cajun Band, Cajun Jam Session
Savoy-Doucet Cajun Band, Home Music with Spirits
Savoy-Doucet Cajun Band, Live! At the Dance
Savoy-Doucet Cajun Band, Two-Step d'Amédée
Mike Seeger, Get Acquainted Waltz
Leo Soileau, Cajun String Bands: Cajun Breakdown
Leo Soileau, Pioneer Cajun Fiddler (1929–37)
Strange Creek Singers, Get Acquainted Waltz
Lawrence Walker, Cajun Honky Tonk
Bukka White, Sky Songs

Syd Straw
Syd Straw, Surprise
Syd Straw, War and Peace

Streamline Productions BMI
Karen Mueller, Clarity

Chic Street Man
Chic Street Man, Beau-ti-ful
Chic Street Man, Everybody Be Yo'self
Chic Street Man, Guns Away

Strength in Numbers
Strength in Numbers, The Telluride Sessions

Strings & Things
Tina Bergmann, Going to Boston
Tina Bergmann, Just Because

Philip Strong
Mary Jane Lamond, Suas e!

Chad Stuart
Chad & Jeremy, Chad Stuart and Jeremy Clyde

Bill Stunt
Lynn Miles, Chalk This One up to the Moon

Carolyn H. Sturgill
Pap Brewer/Finley J. Brewer Sr., Pap Brewer/Finley J. Brewer Sr. from Roan Mountain, TN

Hugh Sturgill
Tim Lake, Same Old Roadside Inn

The subdudes
The subdudes, Annunciation

Kazunori Sugiyama
Duck Baker/Duck Baker and Molly Andrews, Spinning Coin

Carolyn Surrick
Ensemble Galilei, Music in the Great Hall

Jim Sutherland
Les Barker, The Stones of Callanish
Shooglenifty, Venus in Tweeds
Shooglenifty, A Whiskey Lass
Sileas, Play on Light
Whistlebinkies, A Wanton Fling

Pete Sutherland
The Amidons, I'll Never Forget
Mike Casey, The Pleasures of Hope Steve Gillette & Cindy Mangsen, Songlines
Ken Perlman, Island Boy
Jerry Rockwell, The Blackbird and the Beggarman
Carla Sciaky, The Awakening
Carla Sciaky, Spin the Weaver's Song
Carla Sciaky, The Undertow
Pete Sutherland, Eight Miles from Town
Pete Sutherland, Mountain Hornpipe
Pete Sutherland, Poor Man's Dream

Kirk Sutphin
Kirk Sutphin, Fiddlin' Around
Kirk Sutphin, Old Hollow String Band

Glenn Sutton
Jim & Jesse, Jim & Jesse: Bluegrass and More

Matthew Sutton
Boys of the Lough, Live at Carnegie Hall

Martin Swan
Mouth Music, Mo-Di
Mouth Music, Mouth Music
Mouth Music, Shorelife

Mike Swinson
Jim Eanes, Heart of the South

John Switzer
Vance Gilbert, Fugitives
Jane Siberry, Bound by the Beauty
Jane Siberry, No Borders Here

Matt Szostak
Anne Dodson, Almost Grown
Anne Dodson, From Where I Sit

Bill Szymczyk
The Eagles, One of These Nights
The Eagles, Their Greatest Hits, 1971–1975
B.B. King, Completely Well

Garry Tallent
The Burns Sisters, In This World
Julian Dawson, Travel On

James Talley
James Talley, "The Road to Torreon: Photographs of New Mexico Villages" by Cavalliere Ketchum, songs by James Talley
James Talley, Blackjack Choir/Ain't It Somethin'
James Talley, Got No Bread/Tryin' like the Devil

Shel Talmy Pentangle, Basket of Light
Pentangle, Cruel Sister
Pentangle, Sweet Child

Tamarack
Tamarack, Leaving Inverarden
Tamarack, On the Grand: The Story of a River Tamarack, The Tamarack Collection

John Tams
Ashley Hutchings/The Albion Band, Rise up like the Sun

Chaim Tannenbaum
Loudon Wainwright III, More Love Songs

Tasso
Tasso, 1929 and Back: Traditional Cajun Music

Dallas Taylor
Crosby, Stills and Nash/Crosby, Stills, Nash and Young/David Crosby/Crosby & Nash/Graham Nash/Stephen Stills, Manassas

Eric Taylor
Eric Taylor, Shameless Love

Tut Taylor
Jerry Douglas/Douglas, Barenberg & Meyer, The Great Dobro Sessions
Sally Van Meter, The Great Dobro Sessions

Ted Templeman
Van Morrison, St. Dominic's Preview

Ray Templeton
Nathan Abshire, The Legendary Jay Miller Sessions

Jon ten Broek
Les Gustafson-Zook, Cascade Noel
Les Gustafson-Zook, Gather at the River

Phil Tennant
The Saw Doctors, All the Way from Tuam
The Saw Doctors, If This Is Rock & Roll, I Want My Old Job Back
The Saw Doctors, Same Oul' Town

Joe Terry
The Roches, No Trespassing

Al Tharp
Beausoleil, Cajun Conja
David Doucet, Quand J'ai Parti
Steve Riley & the Mamou Playboys, Trace of Time

Hans Theessink
Hans Theessink/Blue Groove, Call Me

Bob Thiele
Memphis Minnie, I Ain't No Bad Gal 1941

IIIrd Tyme Out
IIIrd Tyme Out, Letter to Home
IIIrd Tyme Out, Puttin' New Roots Down

Bob Thomas
Sara Grey, Sara

Chris Thomas
Tom Robinson Band/Tom Robinson/Sector 27, Power in the Darkness

Graham Thomas
Carrie Newcomer, Visions and Dreams

Linda Thomas
Linda Thomas & Dan DeLancey, Among Old Friends
Linda Thomas & Dan DeLancey, The Gathering Place
Linda Thomas & Dan DeLancey, Merry Christmas
Linda Thomas & Dan DeLancey, Music from the Heart
Linda Thomas & Dan DeLancey, Plain and Simple

Richard Thomas
Carrie Newcomer, Long Fields
Carrie Newcomer, October Nights
Carrie Newcomer, Visions and Dreams

Bobby Thompson
Jim & Jesse, The Jim & Jesse Story

D. Clinton Thompson
Jonathan Richman, Jonathan Goes Country

Eric Thompson
Eric & Suzy Thompson, Bluegrass Guitar

Eric and Suzy Thompson
Eric & Suzy Thompson, Adam and Eve Had the Blues

Mike Thompson
Steeleye Span, Storm Force Ten

Peter Thompson
Good Ol' Persons, Good n' Live

Richard Thompson
Sandy Denny/Fotheringay, The North Star Grassman and the Ravens
Richard Thompson/Linda Thompson/Richard & Linda Thompson, I Want to See the Bright Lights Tonight
Loudon Wainwright III, I'm Alright
Loudon Wainwright III, More Love Songs

Suzy Thompson
California Cajun Orchestra, Not Lonesome Anymore
Eric & Suzy Thompson, Nonc Adam Two-Step
Eric & Suzy Thompson, Not Lonesome Anymore

Alan Thorne
Paul Kelly, Comedy

Rick Thum
Rick Thum, Hammered Fiddle Tunes
Rick Thum, A Reason to Dance

Scott Thurston
Jackson Browne, "I'm Alive"

Kathryn Tickell
Kathryn Tickell, The Gathering

Steve Tilston
Steve Tilston & Maggie Boyle, All under the Sun

Timbuk 3
Timbuk 3, Edge of Allegiance
Timbuk 3, Espace Ornano
Timbuk 3, Looks like Dark to Me

Michael Timmins
Cowboy Junkies, Black Eyed Man
Cowboy Junkies, Caution Horses
Cowboy Junkies, Lay It Down

Nathan Tinkham
Cindy Church, Just a Little Rain
Cindy Church, Love on the Range

Russ Titelman
Eric Clapton, From the Cradle
Ry Cooder, Paradise and Lunch
Rickie Lee Jones, Pirates
Rickie Lee Jones, Rickie Lee Jones
Randy Newman, Good Old Boys
Randy Newman, Lonely at the Top
Randy Newman, Sail Away
Randy Newman, Trouble in Paradise
Paul Simon, Hearts and Bones
James Taylor, Gorilla

Gerry Tolman
Crosby, Stills and Nash/Crosby, Stills, Nash and Young/David Crosby/Crosby & Nash/Graham Nash/Stephen Stills, CSN

Brennan Totten
Jonathan Richman, Having a Party with Jonathan Richman Jonathan Richman, Jonathan Richman

Jack Tottle
Jim Eanes, The Early Days Of Bluegrass, Volume 4

Allen Toussaint
Dr. John, In the Right Place

Pete Townshend
John Lee Hooker, The Iron Man

Trapezoid
Trapezoid, Trapezoid: Another Country

Stephen Traub
Moxy Früvous, You Will Go to the Moon

Artie Traum
Priscilla Herdman, Seasons of Change
Happy Traum/Happy & Artie Traum, The Test of Time
The Woodstock Mountain Revue, Mud Acres: Music among Friends
The Woodstock Mountain Revue, Music from Mud Acres
Diane Zeigler, Sting of the Honeybee

Happy Traum
Paul Siebel, Woodstock Mountains
Happy Traum/Happy & Artie Traum, Buckets of Rain
The Woodstock Mountain Revue, Mud Acres: Music among Friends
The Woodstock Mountain Revue, Music from Mud Acres

Mark Trehus
Koerner, Ray & Glover, One Foot in the Groove

Tom Treumuth
Figgy Duff/Pamela Morgan, After the Tempest
Figgy Duff/Pamela Morgan, Figgy Duff
Figgy Duff/Pamela Morgan, Weather out the Storm

Didier Tricard
Buddy Guy, Alone and Acoustic
Buddy Guy, Stone Crazy

Trillium
Margaret MacArthur, The Sun She Rises
Margaret MacArthur, Wild Flowers

Jean Trouillet
Altan, Ireland
De Danann/De Dannan, Ireland
Frankie Gavin, Ireland

Susan Trump
Lois Hornbostel, Masters of the Mountain Dulcimer
Mark Nelson, Masters of the Mountain Dulcimer
Betty Smith, Masters of the Mountain Dulcimer
Susan Trump, Masters of the Mountain Dulcimer
Susan Trump, Tree of Life
Susan Trump, What the Hill People Say

Cecil Tuck
Smothers Brothers/Pat Paulsen, Pat Paulsen for President

Steve Turner Moving Hearts, Live Hearts

Steve Tveit
disappear fear, Live at the Bottom Line

Jeff Tweedy
Uncle Tupelo/Wilco/Son Volt, Being There

Ian Tyson
Ian & Sylvia/Ian Tyson/The Great Speckled Bird/Sylvia Tyson Fricker, All the Good 'Uns
Ian Tyson, Ian Tyson
Ian Tyson, Old Corrals and Sagebrush

Lou Ukelson
Mac Wiseman, Classic Bluegrass

Uncle Bonsai
Electric Bonsai Band/Uncle Bonsai, The Inessential Uncle Bonsai
Electric Bonsai Band/Uncle Bonsai, Myn and Wymyn

Jay Ungar
Jay Ungar & Molly Mason, Brother's Keeper
Jay Ungar & Molly Mason, The Lover's Waltz

Union Springs
Jason Carter, Help Me, Lord
Union Springs, Help Me, Lord
Union Springs, Next Train Headed South

Bill Usher
The Horseflies/The Tompkins County Horseflies, Human Fly

Gary Usher
The Byrds, The Notorious Byrd Brothers
The Byrds, Sweetheart of the Rodeo
The Byrds, Younger Than Yesterday

Chad & Jeremy, Of Cabbages and Kings

Michael Utley
Jimmy Buffett, Feeding Frenzy
Todd Snider, Songs for the Daily Planet

Guy Van Duser
Billy Novick, The New Penny-whistle Album
Billy Novick, Raisin' the Rent
Billy Novick, These n' That n' Those
Guy Van Duser, American Finger-Style Guitar
Guy Van Duser, Stride Guitar

Guido van Rijn
Washington Phillips, Denomination Blues

Dave Van Ronk
Dave Van Ronk, Sunday Street

Townes Van Zandt
Townes Van Zandt, Rear View Mirror

Peter Van-Hooke
Nanci Griffith, Late Night Grande Hotel

Philippe Varlet
Michael Coleman, From Galway to Dublin
Michael Coleman, Milestone at the Garden
Joe Derrane, Irish Accordion
Joe Derrane, Joe Derrane and Jerry O' Brien: Accordion Duets

David Vaught
Tammy Rogers, In the Red

Suzanne Vega
Suzanne Vega, Days of Open Hand

Trevor Veitch
Tom Rush, Work in Progress

Garry Velletri
Robert Earl Keen Jr., A Bigger Piece of Sky
Robert Earl Keen Jr., Gringo Honeymoon

Nick Venet
Glen Campbell, Big Bluegrass Special
Glen Campbell, By the Time I Get to Phoenix
Fred Neil, Fred Neil
John Stewart, California Bloodlines/Willard Minus 2
John Stewart, The Phoenix Concerts—Live

Mike Vernon
Eric Clapton, John Mayall's Bluesbreakers

Norman Verso
Hothouse Flowers, Home

Butch Vig
Freedy Johnston, This Perfect World

Julian Vignoles
Séamus Ennis, The Séamus Ennis Story

Johanan Vigoda
Richie Havens, Mixed Bag
Richie Havens, Mixed Bag II

Tony Visconti
Mary Hopkin, Earth Song/Ocean Song

Joe Vitale
Crosby, Stills and Nash/Crosby, Stills, Nash and Young/David Crosby/Crosby & Nash/Graham Nash/Stephen Stills, Live It Up

Jimmy Vivino
Lovin' Spoonful, I Want My Roots

Eric Von Schmidt
Eric Von Schmidt, Baby, Let Me Lay It on You

Chris von Sneidern
John Wesley Harding, John Wesley Harding's New Deal

Bil VornDick
Alison Brown, I've Got That Old Feeling

Luke and Jenny Anne Bulla, Luke and Jenny Anne Bulla
Vassar Clements, Grass Routes
Judith Edelman, Perfect World
Claire Lynch/The Front Porch String Band, Friends for a Lifetime
Claire Lynch/The Front Porch String Band, Moonlighter
Mad Pudding, Rattle on the Stovepipe
Northern Lights, Take You to the Sky

Jane Voss
Jane Voss/Jane Voss & Hoyle Osborne, An Album of Songs
Jane Voss/Jane Voss & Hoyle Osborne, Get to the Heart
Jane Voss/Jane Voss & Hoyle Osborne, Pullin' Through
Jane Voss/Jane Voss & Hoyle Osborne, Sparkle and Shine

Clark Vreeland
The subdudes, Primitive Streak

Stephen Wade
Tony Ellis, Dixie Banner
Tony Ellis, Farewell My Home

Loudon Wainwright III
Loudon Wainwright III, Career Moves
Loudon Wainwright III, Grown Man
Loudon Wainwright III, I'm Alright
Loudon Wainwright III, Little Ship
Loudon Wainwright III, A Live One
Loudon Wainwright III, More Love Songs

Tom Waits
Tom Waits, Rain Dogs
Tom Waits, Swordfishtrombones

Dusty Wakeman
Lucinda Williams, Sweet Old World

Wendy Waldman
The New Grass Revival, Friday Night in America

Dennis Walker
Ted Hawkins, Happy Hour
Ted Hawkins, Watch Your Step

Jerry Jeff Walker
Jerry Jeff Walker, Christmas Gonzo Style
Jerry Jeff Walker, Live at Gruene Hall

Andy Wallace
Jeff Buckley, Grace
Will Keys, Masters of the Banjo

Kate Wallace
Kate Wallace, Kate Wallace

Shaun Wallace
Lá Lugh, Brighid's Kiss

Joe Walsh
Albert King, Red House

David Walters
Helicon, Walking Stones: A Celtic Sojourn
Ken Kolodner, Walking Stones
Chris Norman, Highlands
Carol Thompson, Carolan's Welcome

Matt Walters
Leadbelly/Huddie Ledbetter, Last Sessions

Michael Wanchic
James McMurtry, Candyland

Wandering Ramblers
Dirk Powell, Rambling and Wandering

Greg Ward
Dick Siegel, Tomorrow Morning

Kendra Ward
Kendra Ward & Bob Bence, Dulcimer Country
Kendra Ward & Bob Bence, The Hammered Dulcimer Christmas Sampler
Kendra Ward & Bob Bence, Some Glad Morning!
Kendra Ward & Bob Bence, Way Down Yonder

John Ware
Steve Gillette & Cindy Mangsen, Back on the Street Again

Jennifer Warnes
Jennifer Warnes, Famous Blue Raincoat: The Songs of Leonard Cohen

Lenny Waronker
Kevin Burke, Last of the Brooklyn Cowboys
Ry Cooder, Into the Purple Valley
Ry Cooder, Paradise and Lunch
Arlo Guthrie, All over the World
Rickie Lee Jones, Pirates
Rickie Lee Jones, Rickie Lee Jones
Gordon Lightfoot, Don Quixote
Gordon Lightfoot, Endless Wire
Gordon Lightfoot, If You Could Read My Mind
Gordon Lightfoot, Summertime Dream
Maria Muldaur, Maria Muldaur
Maria Muldaur, Sweet Harmony
Maria Muldaur, Waitress in a Donut Shop
Randy Newman, Good Old Boys
Randy Newman, Lonely at the Top
Randy Newman, Randy Newman
Randy Newman, Sail Away
Randy Newman, Trouble in Paradise
Paul Simon, Hearts and Bones
James Taylor, Gorilla

Rich Warren
Anne Hills, Woman of a Calm Heart

Don Was
Robert Earl Keen Jr., The Road Goes on Forever
Willie Nelson, Across the Borderline
Bonnie Raitt, Luck of the Draw
Bonnie Raitt, Nine Lives

Linda Waterfall
Heidi Muller, Cassiopeia
Heidi Muller, Matters of the Heart
Linda Waterfall, Body English
Linda Waterfall, Everything Looks Different
Linda Waterfall, A Little Bit at a Time
Linda Waterfall, My Heart Sings

Rick Watson
Cosy Sheridan, Quietly Led

Duncan Watt
Barbara Kessler, Notion

Neil Wayne
John Kirkpatrick, Plain Capers

David Weber
Malcolm Dalglish, Hymnody of Earth
Malcolm Dalglish, Pleasure

Steve Weber
The Holy Modal Rounders, The Holy Modal Rounders

Joe Weed
Neal Hellman, Dream of the Manatee

Reinoud Weidema
The Dubliners, Live in Carre, Amsterdam

Bob Weinstock
Mose Allison, Greatest Hits
Mose Allison, Local Color

Bob Weir
David Rea, Slewfoot

Richard Weize
The Delmore Brothers, When They Let the Hammer Down
Johnnie & Jack, Johnnie & Jack with Kitty Wells at KWKH
The Maddox Brothers & Rose/Rose Maddox, Rockin' Rollin' Maddox Brothers & Rose Mac Wiseman, Teenage Hangout

Kevin Welch
Kevin Welch, Life down Here on Earth

Pete Welding
Lightnin' Hopkins, The Complete Aladdin Sessions
Mississippi Fred McDowell, Amazing Grace
Mississippi Fred McDowell, My Home Is in the Delta Sonny Terry & Brownie McGhee, Whoopin' the Blues: The Capitol Recordings, 1947–50

Melanie Wells
David Schnaufer, Dulcimer Player Deluxe
David Schnaufer, Dulcimer Sessions

Pete Wernick
Chris Thile, Leading Off

Mark Wessell
Northern Lights, Living in the City

Garry West
Alison Brown, I Love this Town
Alison Brown, Look Left
Alison Brown, Out of the Blue
Alison Brown, Quartet
Clive Gregson, I Love This Town
Leslie Tucker, In This Room

Tommy West
Jim Croce, Photographs & Memories: His Greatest Hits
Jim Croce, You Don't Mess Around with Jim

Jerry Wexler
Dr. John, Dr. John's Gumbo
Willie Nelson, Phases and Stages

Cheryl Wheeler
Cheryl Wheeler, Mrs. Pinocci's Guitar

Dan Wheetman
Marley's Ghost, Honey Be There

Bill Whelan
Andy Irvine, Rude Awakening
Liam O'Flynn/Liam ó Floinn, The Seville Suite
Patrick Street, All in Good Time

John Whelan
John Whelan, Celtic Crossroads
John Whelan, Celtic Reflections: Misty-Eyed Morning
John Whelan, From the Heart

Whistlebinkies
Whistlebinkies, Anniversary
Whistlebinkies, Inner Sound

Amy White
Al Petteway, Caledon Wood

D. Gregory White
Owen "Snake" Chapman, Fiddle Ditty

Geri White
Mark Nelson, December's Hearth

Tom White
Mark Nelson, December's Hearth

Ken Whiteley
John Hammond Jr., Nobody but You
Grit Laskin, A Few Simple Words
Tom Lewis, Tinker Tailor Soldier Singer
Raffi, Baby Beluga
Raffi, Raffi's Christmas Album
Raffi, Singable Songs Collection

Lou Whitney
Jonathan Richman, Jonathan Goes Country

Wiggy
Billy Bragg, The Internationale

David Wilcox
David Wilcox, East Asheville Hardware
David Wilcox, Turning Point

Miles Wilkinson
Guy Clark, Boats to Build
Guy Clark, Dublin Blues
Guy Clark, Old Friends

Steve Wilkison
Elliot Murphy, Going through Something: The Best of Elliott Murphy

Billy Williams
Walter Hyatt/Uncle Walt's Band, Lyle Lovett and His Large Band
Lyle Lovett, I Love Everybody
Lyle Lovett, Joshua Judges Ruth
Lyle Lovett, Lyle Lovett and His Large Band
Lyle Lovett, The Road to Ensenada

Brooks Williams
Salamander Crossing, Passion Train
Maria Sangiolo, Eyes of the World
Dar Williams, The Honesty Room

Dar Williams
The Nields, The Honesty Room
Dar Williams, The Honesty Room

Don Williams
Don Williams, An Evening with Don Williams: Best of Live

Fred Williams
Wayne Henderson, Guitar Pickin' with Herb Key

Lesley Williams
Etta Baker, One-Dime Blues

Lucinda Williams
Lucinda Williams, Lucinda Williams
Lucinda Williams, Sweet Old World

Margaret Williams
Gabby Pahinui, Two Slack-Key Guitars

Mark Williams
Carrie Newcomer, My Father's Only Son

Mike Williams
Bill & Bonnie Hearne, Smilin'

Ray Williams
Eliza Carthy/Eliza Carthy and Nancy Kerr/Kings of Calicutt, Heat Light & Sound

Cris Williamson
Tret Fure, Between the Covers
Cris Williamson, The Changer and the Changed
Cris Williamson, Circle of Friends: Cris Live

Robin Williamson
Robin Williamson, Celtic Harp Airs and Dance Tunes
Robin Williamson, Legacy of the Scottish Harpers, Volume I
Robin Williamson, Legacy of the Scottish Harpers, Volume II
Robin Williamson, Ten of Songs

Earl Willis
Townes Van Zandt, Live at the Old Quarter, Houston, Texas

Alan Wilson Son House, Death Letter Blues

Dale Wilson
Ted Hawkins, Happy Hour

Darleen Wilson
The Chenille Sisters, True to Life
Lui Collins, Moondancer
Catie Curtis, From Years to Hours
Catie Curtis, Truth from Lies
Bob Franke, In This Night
Charlie King, Two Good Arms
Patty Larkin, I'm Fine
Cosy Sheridan, One Sure Thing

Jim Wilson
The Flatlanders, Unplugged

Joe Wilson
Cephas & Wiggins, Cool Down
Irish Tradition/Brendan Mulvihill & Billy McComiskey, The Morning Dew
Will Keys, A Banjo Original
Will Keys, Masters of the Banjo
Kirk Sutphin, Old Roots and New Branches

Joemy Wilson
Kim Robertson, Treasures of the Celtic Harp
Joemy Wilson, Beatles on Hammered Dulcimer
Joemy Wilson, Carolan's Cottage
Joemy Wilson, Carolan's Cup
Joemy Wilson, Celtic Dreams
Joemy Wilson, Celtic Treasures
Joemy Wilson, Dargason: A Dulcimer Sampler
Joemy Wilson, Dulcimer Lullabies

Joseph Wilson
Hank Williams, The Legend of Hank Williams

Mark Wilson
Owen "Snake" Chapman, Up in Chapman's Hollow
Roger Cooper, Going Back to Old Kentucky
Wilson Douglas, The Right Hand Fork of Rush's Creek
J.P. and Annadeene Fraley, Maysville
J.P. and Annadeene Fraley, Wild Rose of the Mountain
Lonnie Robertson, Lonnie's Breakdown!
Fred Stoneking, Saddle Old Spike: Fiddle Music from Missouri
Buddy Thomas, Kitty Puss

Red Wilson
Bruce Greene, Old Time Pickin'

Tom Wilson
Country Joe and the Fish, C.J. Fish
Bob Dylan, Another Side of Bob Dylan
Bob Dylan, Bringing It All Back Home
Bob Dylan, Highway 61 Revisited
Bob Dylan, The Times They Are A-Changin'

Wally Wilson
Joan Baez, Gone from Danger

Jesse Winchester
Jesse Winchester, Humour Me
Jesse Winchester, Learn to Love It

Alan Winstanley
Hothouse Flowers, Home
Hothouse Flowers, People

George Winston
Keola Beamer/Keola and Kapono Beamer/Nona Beamer, Mauna Kea: White Mountain Journal
Keola Beamer/Keola and Kapono Beamer/Nona Beamer, Moe'Uhane Kika (Takes from the Dream Guitar)
Keola Beamer/Keola and Kapono Beamer/Nona Beamer, Wooden Boat
Bob Brozman, Kika Kila Meets Ki Hoalu
Sonny Chillingworth, Sonny Solo
Hui Ohana/Ledward Kaapana, Led Live Solo
George Kahumoku Jr., Drenched by Music
Moses Kahumoku, Ho' okupu ("The Gift")
Rev. Dennis Kamakahi, Pua'ena ("Glow Brightly")
Ray Kane/Raymond Kane, Punahele
Ozzie Kotani, Kani Ki Ho'alu ("The Sound of Slack Key")
George Kuo, Aloha No Na Kupuna–"Love for the Elders"
George Kuo, Hawaiian Touch
Leonard Kwan, Ke'ala's Mele
The Pahinui Brothers/Cyril Pahinui/James "Bla" Pahinui, Mana
The Pahinui Brothers/Cyril Pahinui/James "Bla" Pahinui, Six- and 12-String Slack-Key

Johnny Winter
Sonny Terry & Brownie McGhee, Whoopin'
Muddy Waters, Muddy "Mississippi" Waters Live

Paul Winter
Pete Seeger, Pete

Stephanie Winters
The Nudes, The Nudes
The Nudes, Velvet Sofa

Ben Wisch
David Wilcox, Home Again, for the First Time

Joe Wissert
Gordon Lightfoot, If You Could Read My Mind

Ben Wittman
The Story, The Angel in the House
The Story, Grace in Gravity

Billy Wolf
Chesapeake, Full Sail
Eddie from Ohio, Actually Not Eddie from Ohio, Big Noise
Eddie from Ohio, I Rode Fido Home
Smith Sisters/Debi Smith, A Canary's Song

Kate Wolf
Kate Wolf, Give Yourself to Love

Tom "T-Bone" Wolk Eileen Ivers, Wild Blue

Thom Wolke
Guy Davis, Stomp Down Rider

Brian Wood
Bill Staines, Just Play One More Tune
Bill Staines, Looking for the Wind

Jeffrey Wood
Luka Bloom, Riverside

John Wood
Shirley Collins/Shirley and Dolly Collins/Etchingham Steam Band, Morris On Sandy Denny/Fotheringay, The North Star Grassman and the Ravens
Clive Gregson, Welcome to the Workhouse
Ashley Hutchings/The Albion Band, Battle of the Field
Richard Thompson/Linda Thompson/Richard & Linda Thompson, I Want to See the Bright Lights Tonight,
Loudon Wainwright III, A Live One
Whistlebinkies, Anniversary

Royston Wood
Young Tradition, No Relation

Terry Woodford
Mac McAnally, Mac McAnally

Sylvia Woods
Sylvia Woods, The Harp of Brandiswhiere: A Suite for Celtic Harp

John Work
Muddy Waters, Complete Plantation Recordings: The Historic 1941–42 Library of Congress Field Recordings

Paul Worley
Chris Hillman/The Desert Rose Band, The Desert Rose Band

Jim Wray
Zachary Richard, Snake Bite Love

Samantha Wright
Rosalie Sorrels, The Long Memory

Tryp Wyeth
Ebin-Rose, Down to Tryp's
Ebin-Rose, Mr. Boot
Ebin-Rose, Seems So Childlike
Ebin-Rose, Through the Wires

Peter Yarrow
Peter, Paul & Mary, Peter, Paul, and Mommy Too

Kevin Yatarola
Eileen Ivers, So Far: The Eileen Ivers Collection, 1979–1995

Douglas Yeager
Richie Havens, Richie Havens Sings the Beatles and Bob Dylan

Jerry Yester
Tom Waits, Anthology of Tom Waits
Tom Waits, Closing Time

York/Pala
Buffalo Springfield, Buffalo Springfield Again

Brian Young
Runrig, Maral

Carol Young
Shawn Colvin, Live '88

Chip Young
Joe Ely, Honky Tonk Masquerade

Dave Young
The Oyster Band, Little Rock to Leipzig
The Oyster Band, Ride

Jesse Colin Young
Jesse Colin Young, The Best of Jesse Colin Young: The Solo Years

Neil Young
Neil Young, After the Gold Rush
Neil Young, Everybody Knows This Is Nowhere
Neil Young, Everybody's Rockin'
Neil Young, Harvest
Neil Young, Harvest Moon
Neil Young, Old Ways
Neil Young, Rust Never Sleeps
Neil Young, Tonight's the Night

Victoria Young
Dick Harrington & Victoria Young, Long Journey
Dick Harrington & Victoria Young, Lover's Return

Robert W. Zachary Jr.
Paul Siebel, Jack-Knife Gypsy
Paul Siebel, Paul Siebel

Jeff Zaraya
Ian & Sylvia/Ian Tyson/The Great Speckled Bird/Sylvia Tyson Fricker, Live at Newport
Tom Paxton, Heroes

Catherine Zavala
The Mollys, This Is My Round
The Mollys, Tidings of Comfort and Joy

Hector Zazou
Jane Siberry, Songs from the Cold Seas

Radim Zenkl
Radim Zenkl, Galactic Mandolin

Jimi Zhivago
Susan McKeown & the Chanting House/Susan McKeown & Lindsey Horner, Bones

Gus Ziesing
Michael Hurley, WolfWays

John Zollman
Silly Wizard, Caledonia's Hardy Sons

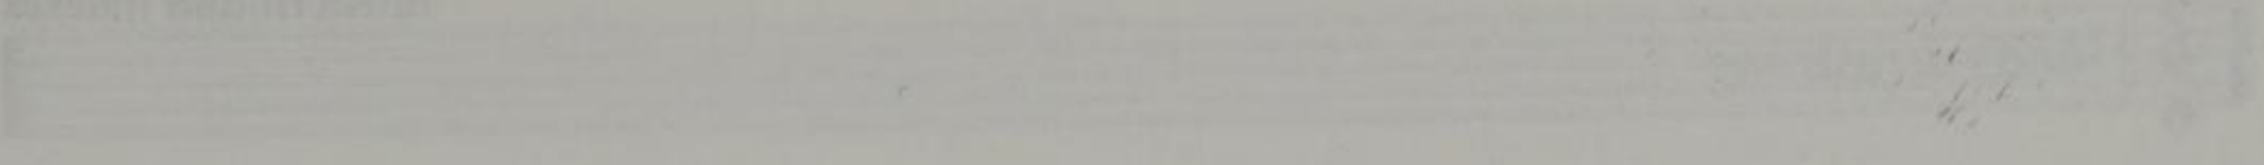
John Zorn
Duck Baker/Duck Baker and Molly Andrews, Spinning Coin

musicHound roots index



Which artists or groups have had the most influence on the acts included in MusicHound Folk*? The Roots Index will help you find out. Under each artist or group's name—not necessarily a folk act—are listed the acts found in* MusicHound Folk that were influenced by that artist or group. By the way, Bob Dylan is the influence champ: he appears in the ⏪ section of a whopping 50 artists or groups.

Nathan Abshire
Paul Daigle
Eddie LeJeune
Iry LeJeune
Savoy-Doucet Cajun Band
Tracy Schwarz
Horace Trahan

Will Ackerman
Artie Traum

Roy Acuff
Wilma Lee & Stoney Cooper
J.P. and Annadeene Fraley
George Jones
Jimmy Martin
Ian Tyson
Hank Williams

Cecil Adams
Garrison Keillor

Sheila Adams
Laura Boosinger

Doc Addington
Ralph Blizard

Garfield Akers
Robert Wilkins

Alba
Ossian

Texas Alexander
Lightnin' Hopkins

Pat Alger
Artie Traum

Rex Allen
Don Edwards
Red Steagall

Terry Allen
Jo Carol Pierce

Mose Allison
Gideon Freudmann
Van Morrison

Allman Brothers Band
Brooks Williams

Almanac Singers
Ronnie Gilbert

Altan
Lá Lugh
Whirligig

Gene Ammons
Paul Butterfield Blues Band

Tori Amos
Paula Cole

Eric Andersen
Jackson Browne
Jack Logan

Alistair Anderson
Kathryn Tickell

Laurie Anderson
Ed's Redeeming Qualities
Jane Siberry

Pink Anderson
Roy Book Binder
Paul Geremia

Tom Anderson
Boys of the Lough
Kathryn Tickell

Julie Andrews
Mary Hopkin

The Andrews Sisters
Artisan
The Chenille Sisters
Dan Hicks
Moxy Früvous

Anglin Brothers
Johnnie & Jack

The Animals
The Chambers Brothers

Dave Apollon
Evan Marshall
Radim Zenkl

Arcady
Lá Lugh

Alphonse "Bois Sec" Ardoin
Nathan Abshire
Chris Ardoin
Boozoo Chavis
John Delafose
Keith Frank
Beau Jocque

Amédée Ardoin
Nathan Abshire
Alphonse "Bois Sec" Ardoin
Lynn August
Beausoleil
Buckwheat Zydeco
Boozoo Chavis
Clifton Chenier
Geno Delafose
John Delafose
Rockin' Dopsie
Canray Fontenot
Beau Jocque
Eddie LeJeune
Iry LeJeune
Queen Ida
Savoy-Doucet Cajun Band
Jo-El Sonnier
Tasso

Joan Armatrading
Luka Bloom
Tracy Chapman
Sloan Wainwright

9 9 6 louis armstrong

Louis Armstrong
Leon Redbone
Martin Sexton

Tom Armstrong
Liam O'Flynn

Eddy Arnold
Don Walser

Herman Arnspiger
Milton Brown and the Musical Brownies

Clarence Ashley
Bascom Lamar Lunsford

Chet Atkins
Russ Barenberg
J.J. Cale
Robin Kessinger
Leo Kottke
Evan Marshall
Guy Van Duser

Will Atkinson
Kathryn Tickell

Mike Auldridge
Jerry Douglas
Sally Van Meter

Gene Autry
Patsy Montana
Willie Nelson
Riders in the Sky
Tex Ritter
Roy Rogers
Red Steagall
Ian Tyson

Aztec Two-Step
David Buskin
Jeanie Stahl

B-52s
Sons of the Never Wrong

Johann Sebastian Bach
Karen Ashbrook
Scott Cossu
Dead Can Dance
Michael Miles

Burt Bacharach
Harry Nilsson

Joan Baez
Tracy Chapman
Judy Collins
Bob Dylan
Kat Eggleston
Marianne Faithfull
Ferron
Steve Gillette & Cindy Mangsen
Margo Hennebach
Priscilla Herdman
Tish Hinojosa
Janis Ian
Cindy Kallet
Koerner, Ray & Glover
Carol McComb
Melanie
Holly Near
Laura Nyro
Kristina Olsen
Phranc
Bonnie Raitt
Buffy Sainte-Marie
Tommy Sands
Maria Sangiolo
Carla Sciaky
Linda Waterfall

Christian Bailey
Walt Michael

Aly Bain
Johnny Cunningham

Chet Baker
Paula Cole

Janita Baker
Hollis Landrum

Kenny Baker
James Bryan

Dewey Balfa
Balfa Toujours
Basin Brothers
Beausoleil
California Cajun Orchestra
Magnolia Sisters
Dirk Powell
Steve Riley & the Mamou Playboys
Savoy-Doucet Cajun Band
Eric & Suzy Thompson

The Balfa Brothers
Any Old Time String Band
Karen Ashbrook
Balfa Toujours
Basin Brothers
Bayou Seco
David Doucet
Doris "D.L." Menard
Jimmy C. Newman
Steve Riley & the Mamou Playboys
Tracy Schwarz
Tasso
Horace Trahan

The Band
Eric Clapton
Fairport Convention
Robin Holcomb
Colin Linden
James McMurtry
Moving Hearts
Red Clay Ramblers
Mark Simos
The subdudes
Jesse Winchester
The Woodstock Mountain Revue

Jacob do Bandolim
Rudy Cipolla

Joe Bane
Kevin Crawford

Bobby Bare
Jerry Jeff Walker

Bare Necessities
Carrie Crompton

Russ Barenberg
Scott Nygaard
Jay Ungar & Molly Mason

Syd Barrett
Robyn Hitchcock

Béla Bartok
Baltimore Consort

Cathy Barton
Rick Thum

Battlefield Band
The House Band
Ossian
Runrig
Wolfstone

Bauhaus
Dead Can Dance

The Beach Boys
Tina Louise Barr
Free Hot Lunch!
Art Garfunkel
Harry Nilsson
Phranc
Paul Simon
Simon & Garfunkel

Beale Street Sheiks
Memphis Jug Band
Memphis Minnie

Keola Beamer
Ozzie Kotani
Magical Strings

The Beatles
Artisan
Lou and Peter Berryman
Buffalo Springfield
The Byrds
Mary Chapin Carpenter
Gene Clark
Dana Cooper
Scott Cossu
Crosby, Stills & Nash
Julian Dawson
Donovan
Nick Drake
The Eagles
Gideon Freudmann
Richie Havens
Walter Hyatt
Freedy Johnston
The Kennedys
The Mamas & the Papas
Dave Mason
The Nields
Harry Nilsson
The Nylons
Peter Rowan
Steve Schneider
Martin Sexton
Michael Smith
Stealers Wheel
James Taylor
The Waterboys
Jesse Colin Young

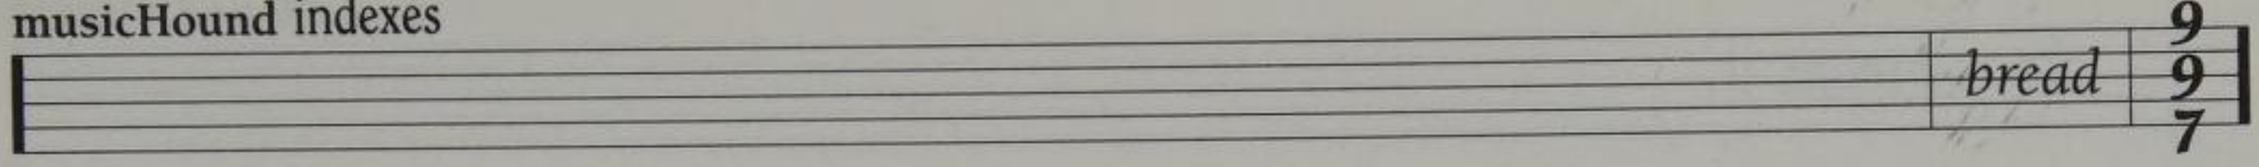
BeauSoleil
Filé

Noah Beavers
Chirps Smith

Sidney Bechet
Billy Novick

Schloimke Beckerman
The Klezmatics

Bee Gees
Moxy Früvous



Bob & Evelyn Beers
Sara Grey

The Beers Family
The Amidons
Betty Smith

Ludwig van Beethoven
Scott Cossu
Love

Harry Belafonte
Odetta

Adrian Belew
The Nields

Derek Bell
Patrick Ball
Ken Kolodner
Joemy Wilson

Peter Bellamy
Tom Lewis
John Roberts & Tony Barrand

Lola Beltran
Linda Ronstadt

Mac Benford
Walt Koken

Willie P. Bennett
Stephen Fearing
Garnet Rogers

Emile Benoit
Figgy Duff

Pierre Bensusan
Carol McComb
Gayla Drake Paul

Bergmann Brothers
The Plaid Family

Byron Berline
Stuart Duncan

Elmer Bernstein
Steve Schneider

Chuck Berry
Dave Alvin
The Band
Steve Forbert
John Prine
Jonathan Richman

Peter & Lu Berryman
Camille West

Carroll Best
Laura Boosinger

Dickie Betts
Brooks Williams

Big Brother and the Holding Company
Country Joe and the Fish

Big Star
Freedy Johnston

Theodore Bikel
Rachel Buchman

The Billys
Big Blow and the Bushwackers

Dave Bing
Diane Jones and & King

Mary Black
Atwater-Donnelly
Grace Griffith
Eleanor McEvoy
Susan McKeown & the Chanting House

Ben Black Bear
Kevin Locke

Black Flag
Uncle Tupelo

Scrapper Blackwell
Paul Geremia

Blackwood Brothers
The Hee Haw Gospel Quartet

Blind Blake
Roy Book Binder
Cephas & Wiggins
John Jackson
Blind Willie McTell
Leon Redbone
Joseph Spence
Josh White

Norman Blake
Fletcher Bright Fiddle Band
Robin Bullock
Tom Espinola and Lorraine Duisit
Alan Freeman
Kate MacLeod

Bobby "Blue" Bland
The Band
Paul Butterfield Blues Band

James Bland
Paul Robeson

Nick Blanton
Karen Ashbrook

Blaze X
The Saw Doctors

Bagad Bleimor
Alan Stivell

Rory Block
Caroline Aiken
Keb' Mo'
Les Sampou

Blowzabella
The House Band

Blue Sky Boys
The Chestnut Grove Quartet
The Delmore Brothers
Vern Gosdin
Dick Harrington & Victoria Young
Ginny Hawker & Kay Justice
Lilly Brothers
Louvin Brothers
Cliff Perry & Laurel Bliss
The Whitstein Brothers
Mac Wiseman

The Blue Sky Boys
The Buckhannon Brothers

Bluegrass Album Band
Longview

Bob & Ray
Garrison Keillor

Dock Boggs
Mike Seeger

Scott Bohanna
Muddy Waters

Gordon Bok
Scott Alarik
Anne Dodson

Karla Bonoff
Ferron

Bonzo Dog Band
The Foremen
Free Hot Lunch!

James Booker
Dr. John

Booker T & the MGs
The Band
Black 47

The Boomtown Rats
Luka Bloom

Victor Borge
Steve Schneider

The Boswell Sisters
The Chenille Sisters
Magpie

The Bothy Band
Altan
Karen Ashbrook
Clannad
Déanta
Dervish
Matt Flinner
Mando Mafia
Moving Hearts
Karen Mueller
Patrick Street
Jerry Read Smith
Wolfstone

Chris Bouchillon
Herschel Brown

Bryan Bowers
Les Gustafson-Zook
Alan Mager
Karen Mueller

Charlie Bowman
Will Keys

The Boxtops
The Amazing Rhythm Aces

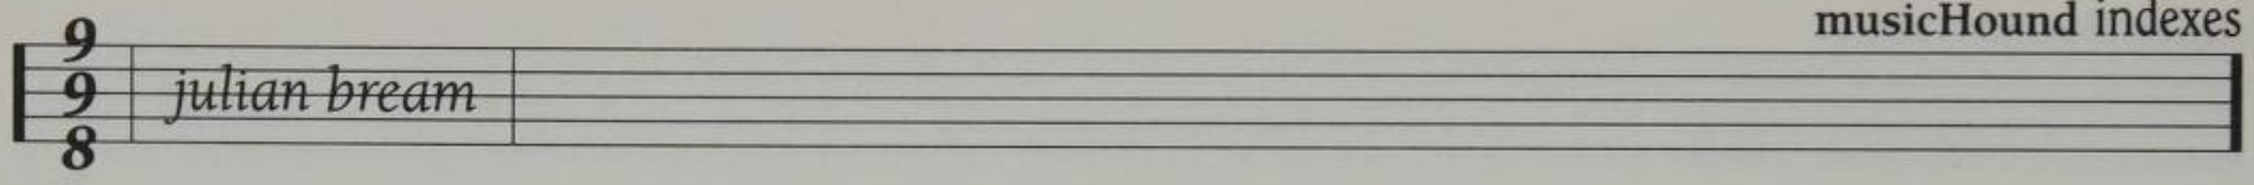
Boys of the Lough
Connie Dover
Marley's Ghost
Silly Wizard

Skara Brae
The Bothy Band

Oscar Brand
David Rea

Naftuly Brandwein
The Klezmatics
Klezmorim

Bread
John Denver
Loggins & Messina



Julian Bream
John Fahey

Bertolt Brecht
Patrick Sky

Jacques Brel
Leonard Cohen

Fannie Brice
Mary Hopkin

Anne Briggs
Sandy Denny
Kate Rusby
June Tabor

Chuck Brodsky
Michael McNevin

Sonny Brogan
James Keane

David Bromberg
Kristina Olsen

Big Bill Broonzy
Guy Davis
Dick Gaughan
Steve Goodman
John Renbourn
Chic Street Man
Rosetta Tharpe
Hans Theessink
Bukka White

Brothers Four
The Limeliters

Charles Brown
Mose Allison

Clarence "Gatemouth" Brown
Albert Collins
B.B. King

Greg Brown
Catie Curtis
Jon Gailmor
Garnet Rogers

James Brown
The Chambers Brothers
Van Morrison

Milton Brown
Bob Wills

Willie Brown
Sleepy John Estes
Son House
Robert Johnson

Willow Brown
Albert Collins

Garech Browne
Whistlebinkies

Jackson Browne
America
Dan Fogelberg
Dougie MacLean
Diane Zeigler

Bob Brozman
Kelly Joe Phelps

Lenny Bruce
Patrick Sky

James Bryan
Jenny Allinder
Fletcher Bright Fiddle Band
Red Mountain White Trash

Tim Buckley
Scott Appel
Jeff Buckley
Nick Drake

Buckwheat Zydeco
Lynn August
C.J. Chenier
Nathan & the Zydeco Cha Chas

Jimmy Buffett
Free Hot Lunch!

Sonny Burgess
Dave Alvin

Joe Burke
Billy McComiskey

Kevin Burke
Jenny Allinder

Solomon Burke
Van Morrison
Otis Redding

Dave Burland
Kate Rusby

Jethro Burns
Steve Goodman
Radim Zenkl

Robert Burns
Jean Redpath

Burns Sisters
Smith Sisters

Howie Bursen
Ken Perlman

James Burton
David Lindley

Kate Bush
Margo Hennebach
Jane Siberry

Sam Bush
Tina Louise Barr
Tom Espinola and Lorraine Duisit
Kentucky Standard Band
Darrell Scott

Anner Bylsma
Ensemble Galilei

The Byrds
Buffalo Springfield
The Eagles
Fairport Convention
Flying Burrito Brothers
Vern Gosdin
The Kennedys
Love
The Nitty Gritty Dirt Band
Gram Parsons
Sweethearts of the Rodeo
Neil Young

David Byrne
Mouth Music

Martin Byrne
Liz Carroll

Cache Valley Drifters
Acousticats

John Cage
David Folks

J.J. Cale
Eric Clapton

Cab Calloway
Bo Diddley

Isla Cameron
Anne Briggs

Camp Creek Boys
Benton Flippen

Ian Campbell
Pentangle
Dave Swarbrick

Jean Campbell
Alison Kinnaird
Wendy Stewart

Sarah Elizabeth Campbell
Sara Hickman

Vincent Campbell
Tommy Peoples

Gus Cannon's Jug Stompers
The Grateful Dead
Jim Kweskin & the Jug Band
Furry Lewis
Memphis Jug Band
Sunshine Skiffle Band

Paddy Canny
Martin Hayes

Capercaillie
Ceolbeg
Mad Pudding
Shooglenifty

Bob Carlin
Walt Koken

Bonnie Carol
Lois Hornbostel

Carolan
The Chieftains

French Carpenter
Wilson Douglas

Mary Chapin Carpenter
Kate Campbell
John Jennings
Carrie Newcomer
The Rankin Family
Kate Wallace

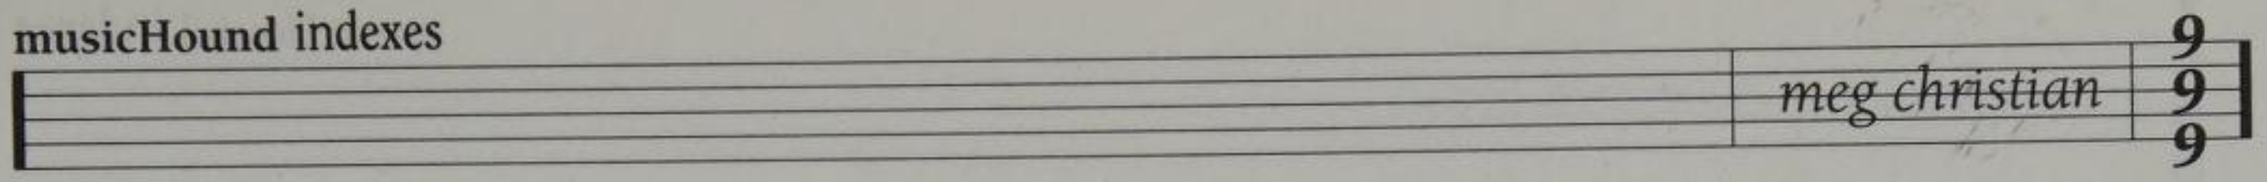
Roy Carrier
Chubby Carrier
Willis Prudhomme

Kevin Carroll
Liz Carroll

Liz Carroll
Cherish the Ladies

Fiddlin' John Carson
Frank Hutchison
Earl Johnson
The Skillet Lickers

Bo Carter
Roy Book Binder



Carlene Carter
Mary Chapin Carpenter

Floyd Carter
Tom T. Hall

June Carter Cash
Bill & Bonnie Hearne

Maybelle Carter
Joan Baez
Tina Louise Barr
Becky Blackley
Julie Davis
Wayne Henderson
Riley Puckett

Wilf Carter
Stompin' Tom Connors
Mac Wiseman

The Carter Family
Any Old Time String Band
Judy Austin
E.C. Ball and Orna Ball
Mac Benford
Ralph Blizard
Bryan Bowers
Ann and Phil Case
Johnny Cash
The Chuck Wagon Gang
Bill Clifton
Country Ham
Wayne Erbsen
Farmer's Daughters
Mike Fenton
The Freight Hoppers
Ronnie Gilbert
Woody Guthrie
Dick Harrington & Victoria Young
Emmylou Harris
Hazel & Alice
Carol McComb
Kate & Anna McGarrigle
Mill Run Dulcimer Band
Bill Monroe & His Blue Grass Boys
The New Lost City Ramblers
The Nitty Gritty Dirt Band
Cliff Perry & Laurel Bliss
Bruce U. "Utah" Phillips
John Prine
Red Clay Ramblers
Harvey Reid
Rhythm Rats
Strange Creek Singers
Jody Stecher & Kate Brislin
Jane Voss
Gillian Welch
Kitty Wells
Hank Williams

Martin Carthy
Pierre Bensusan
Eliza Carthy
Steve Gillette & Cindy Mangsen
Michael Hedges
Christy Moore
Mark Simos
Martin Simpson
Dave Swarbrick
Tamarack
Brooks Williams

Martin Carthy & Dave Swarbrick
Robin and Barry Dransfield

Cascades
Dan Fogelberg

Bobby Casey
Kevin Burke

Johnny Cash
Richard Buckner
Rosanne Cash
Guy Clark
Mark Germino
Butch Hancock
Bill & Bonnie Hearne
Robert Earl Keen Jr.
Don McLean
James McMurtry

Rosanne Cash
Mary Chapin Carpenter
Darden Smith
Lucinda Williams

The Cass County Boys
Spade Cooley

Con Cassidy
Altan

Joe Cassidy
Tommy Peoples

Celtic Thunder
Solas

Ceoltóirí Cualann
The Bothy Band
The Chieftains
Seán Keane
Planxty

Raymond Chandler
Kinky Friedman

Tom Chapin
Raffi

George "Doc" Chapman
Owen "Snake" Chapman

Marshall Chapman
k.d. lang

Tracy Chapman
Patty Griffin
Jewel
Keb' Mo'
Cheryl Wheeler

Charlatans
Dan Hicks

Bobby Charles
Paul Butterfield Blues Band

Ray Charles
Mose Allison
Walter Hyatt
Lyle Lovett
Taj Mahal
Van Morrison
Bernice Johnson Reagon
Martin Sexton
Tom Waits

Charles River Valley Boys
Joe Val & the New England Bluegrass Boys

Sam Charters
"Spider" John Koerner

Bo Chatmon
Mississippi Sheiks

Henderson Chatmon
Mississippi Sheiks

Sam Chatmon
Mississippi Sheiks

Boozoo Chavis
Buckwheat Zydeco
Roy Carrier
Rockin' Dopsie
Keith Frank
Queen Ida

Clifton Chenier
Lynn August
Buckwheat Zydeco
Chubby Carrier
Roy Carrier
C.J. Chenier
Geno Delafose
Rockin' Dopsie
David Lindley
Nathan & the Zydeco Cha Chas
Queen Ida
Rockin Sidney
Zydeco Force

Cherish the Ladies
Solas

The Chieftains
Big Blow and the Bushwackers
Boys of the Lough
Carrie Crompton
Mike Cross
Déanta
Ashley MacIsaac
Magical Strings
The Pogues
Alan Stivell
Sweeney's Men
The Waterboys
Whistlebinkies
Joemy Wilson

Chiffons
The Nylons

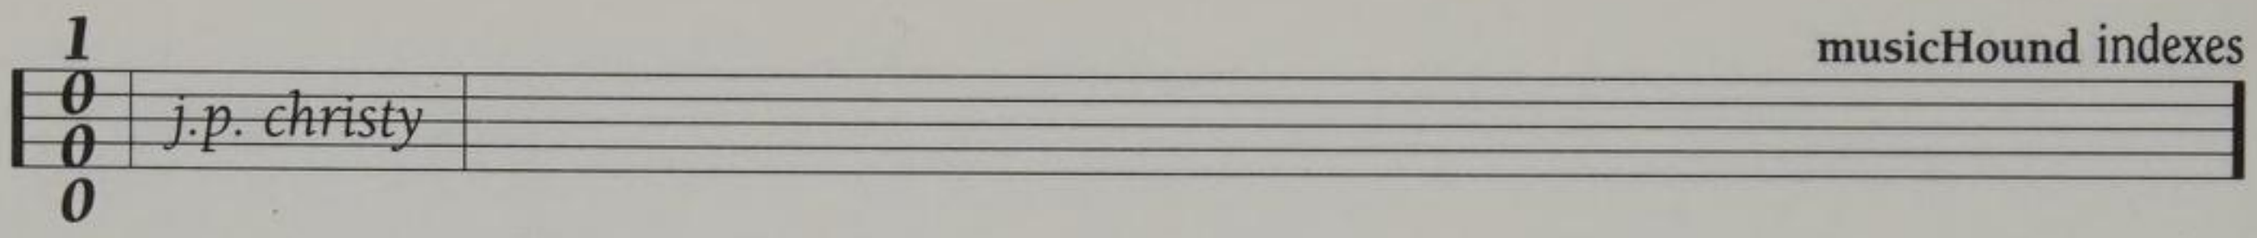
Sonny Chillingworth
Keola Beamer
Moses Kahumoku
George Kahumoku Jr.
Rev. Dennis Kamakahi
Ray Kane
Ozzie Kotani
Leonard Kwan
Hui Ohana
Gabby Pahinui
The Pahinui Brothers

Angus Chisolm
Jerry Holland
Buddy MacMaster

Harry Choates
Hackberry Ramblers
Doris "D.L." Menard
"Cheese" Read
Savoy-Doucet Cajun Band

Charlie Christian
Ry Cooder

Meg Christian
Cris Williamson



J.P. Christy
Paul Robeson

Christy Minstrels
The Brothers Four

Chuck Wagon Gang
The Cox Family

Clan Alba
Ceolbeg

Willie Clancy
Mary Bergin
Noel Hill
James Keane
Seán Keane
Mick Moloney
Liam O'Flynn

Clancy Brothers & Tommy Makem
The Chieftains
The Dubliners
Irish Rovers
The Johnstons
Mick Moloney
Christy Moore
The Pogues
Tommy Sands
Sweeney's Men

Clannad
Altan
Déanta
Enya
The Rankin Family

Eric Clapton
Bob Margolin
Dave Mason
The subdudes

Guy Clark
Jason Eklund
Steve Fisher
Lyle Lovett
Kimberly M'Carver
David Olney
Darrell Scott
Michelle Shocked
Darden Smith
Eric Taylor
Jerry Jeff Walker
Kevin Welch

Roy Clark
Leo Kottke

The Clash
Blood Oranges
Billy Bragg
Brenda Kahn
The Oyster Band
Uncle Tupelo

Johnny Clegg
Tony Bird
Loreena McKennitt

Samuel Clemens
John Hartford

Vassar Clements
Emily & Al Cantrell
Mark O'Connor

Bill Clifton
Mike Fenton

Cripple Cleve Cline
Walt Michael

Patsy Cline
Blood Oranges
Cowboy Junkies
Rosie Flores
Butch Hancock
Carolyn Hester
k.d. lang
Ranch Romance
Linda Ronstadt

Harlan Coble
Hollow Rock String Band

Eddie Cochran
Mike Fenton

Bruce Cockburn
Stephen Fearing
Dan Fogelberg
Carrie Newcomer
Pierce Pettis
Tom Prasada-Rao
The Story

Joe Cocker
Jennifer Warnes

Fred Cockerham
Paul Brown
Bob Carlin
Fuzzy Mountain String Band
Carol Elizabeth Jones & James Leva
Dirk Powell
Rafe Stefanini

Pete Coe
Jez Lowe

Fr. Charlie Coen
Noel Hill

Jack Coen
Mike Casey
Irish Tradition
Joanie Madden
Billy McComiskey
Carol Thompson

Leonard Cohen
Jackson Browne
Crash Test Dummies
Ebin-Rose
David Mallett
Peter Mulvey
Laura Nyro
Tamarack
Timbuk 3
Jennifer Warnes

Nat King Cole
Harry Belafonte

Michael Coleman
Kevin Burke
Matt Molloy
Eugene O'Donnell

Judy Collins
Lui Collins
Kat Eggleston
Nanci Griffith
Priscilla Herdman
Madeline MacNeil
Laura Nyro
Maria Sangiolo
Carly Simon

Kathleen Collins
Ken Perlman

Christine Collister
Adie Grey

Bob Coltman
Debby McClatchy

John Coltrane
Tim Buckley
The Byrds
Love
Joni Mitchell
Todd Phillips

Shawn Colvin
Vance Gilbert
Barbara Kessler
Keb' Mo'

P.J. Conlon
Joe Derrane

Billy Connoll
Les Barker

Seamus Connolly
John Whelan

Contraband
Ossian

Ry Cooder
The Cheap Suit Serenaders
David Lindley
The Pahinui Brothers
Brooks Williams

Harry Cook
A.L. Lloyd

Peter Cook
Les Barker

Sam Cooke
Cliff Eberhardt
Art Garfunkel
Richie Havens
Ted Hawkins
Van Morrison
Ann Peebles
Otis Redding

Blackie Cool
Sam Rizzetta

Joe Cooley
Arcady
James Keane

The Coon Creek Girls
Cathy Fink and Marcy Marxer

Wilma Lee Cooper
Country Ham
Hazel & Alice

Aaron Copland
Baltimore Consort

Jim Copper (Bob's father)
The Copper Family

The Copper Family
Robin and Barry Dransfield
John Roberts & Tony Barrand
Steeleye Span

The Voice Squad
Waterson:Carthy
The Watersons
Young Tradition

Sean Corcoran
The Johnstons

Sheryl Cormier
Kristi Guillory

Bill Cosby
Vance Gilbert

Elvis Costello
Dan Bern
Billy Bragg
Clive Gregson
John Wesley Harding
Brenda Kahn
Jack Logan

Elizabeth Cotten
Etta Baker
Woody Guthrie
Mike Seeger
Peggy Seeger

James Cotton
Paul Butterfield Blues Band
Koerner, Ray & Glover

Count Basie
Asleep at the Wheel

Counting Crows
The Nields

Country Cooking
Tony Trischka

Country Gazette
Byron Berline
The Laurel Canyon Ramblers
The Nashville Bluegrass Band
The New Grass Revival

Country Gentlemen
Boone Creek
J.D. Crowe
Doyle Lawson
The Seldom Scene

The Cowboy Junkies
Luka Bloom
Richard Buckner

Ida Cox
Jane Voss

Cranberries
The Nields

Dan Crary
Steve Kaufman

Virgil Craven
David Holt
Lauchlin Shaw & A.C. Overton

Homer Crawford
Dock Boggs

Papa John Creach
Keb' Mo'

Kyle Creed
Fuzzy Mountain String Band
Piney Creek Weasels
Rafe Stefanini

Lonnie Crosbie
Hollow Rock String Band

Bing Crosby
Mary Hopkin
Leon Redbone

Crosby, Stills & Nash
Joni Mitchell
Seals & Crofts

Crosby, Stills, Nash & Young
America

Sheryl Crow
Jewel

J.D. Crowe & the New South
Boone Creek
Tim Lake
Lonesome River Band
Union Springs

Rodney Crowell
Rosanne Cash

Cumberland Three
John Stewart

Johnny Cunningham
Susan McKeown & the Chanting House

Phil Cunningham
Connie Dover
Steve Schneider

Paddy Curley
Michael Coleman

Alex Currie
Hamish Moore

King Curtis
David Lindley

Ted Daffan
Lefty Frizzell

Paul Daigle
Sheryl Cormier
Kristi Guillory

Malcolm Dalglish
Dan Duggan
No Strings Attached
Maggie Sansone
Jerry Read Smith

Vernon Dalhart
E.C. Ball and Orna Ball
Bascom Lamar Lunsford
Blind Alfred Reed
Carson Robison

Barbara Dane
Robin Flower

Rick Danko
Paul Butterfield Blues Band

Bobby Darin
Richard Meyer

Clyde Davenport
Red Mountain White Trash

Shaun Davey
Rita Connolly

Joel Davidson
Uncle Dave Macon

Miles Davis
Tim Buckley
Matt Flinner
Pentangle

Rev. Gary Davis
Rory Block
Roy Book Binder
David Bromberg
Country Joe and the Fish
Guy Davis
Stefan Grossman
Hot Tuna
Janis Ian
Larry Johnson
Leo Kottke
Lovin' Spoonful
Dave Van Ronk

Spencer Davis
Tret Fure

De Danann
Arcady

Patrick Street
Jerry Read Smith

Alex de Grassi
Artie Traum

Claude Debussy
Enya

Oscar Degrenia
Lorraine (Lee) Hammond

Del Lords
Ed Pettersen

John Delafose
Willis Prudhomme
Zydeco Force

The Delmore Brothers
Josh Crowe and David McLaughlin
Jim & Jesse
Peter Kessler & Gail Fratar
Louvin Brothers

Iris DeMent
Kate Campbell

Sandy Denny
Scott Appel
Mary Black
Polly Bolton
Christine Collister
Clive Gregson & Christine Collister
Susan McKeown & the Chanting House

John Denver
Sara Hickman
David Mallett
Peter, Paul & Mary

Desert Rose Band
The Laurel Canyon Ramblers

Al Dexter
Jack Guthrie

Alex di Grassi
Al Petteway

Hazel Dickens
The Lynn Morris Band
Elaine Purkey

Hazel Dickens & Alice Gerrard
Ann and Phil Case
Tracy Schwarz & Ginny Hawker

Jimmy Dickens
Glen Campbell

Bo Diddley
Greg Kihn
Van Morrison

Ani DiFranco
Atwater-Donnelly
Dan Bern

The Dildines
The Amidons

Doug Dillard Band
Kathy Chiavola

Dillards
The Laurel Canyon Ramblers
Muleskinner

Dwight Diller
Cordelia's Dad
Diane Jones & Hubie King
Arnie Naiman & Chris Coole

John Dilleshaw
Herschel Brown

Dion
Ed Pettersen

Dirty Dozen Brass Band
The ReBirth Brass Band

The Dixie Hummingbirds
The Fairfield Four

Dixieland Jug Blowers
Memphis Jug Band

Don Dixon
Dana Cooper
Julian Dawson

Willie Dixon
Mose Allison
John Lee Hooker
Colin Linden
Saffire—The Uppity Blues Women
Pete Seeger

DNA
Suzanne Vega

Bonnie Dobson
Carla Sciaky

John Doherty
Altan

Fats Domino
Taj Mahal
Randy Newman

Don & Dewey
Paul Butterfield Blues Band

Donovan
Mary Hopkin
Incredible String Band
Al Stewart

Bev Doolittle
Kimberly M'Carver

Rev. Thomas Dorsey
Red Foley

Thomas A. Dorsey
The Fairfield Four

Albert d'Ossche
Neal Hellman

Michael Doucet
Tasso

Doug & Jack &Wallin
Carol Elizabeth Jones & James Leva

Jerry Douglas
Sally Van Meter

Wilson Douglas
Dwight Diller

Patrick Doyle
The Rankin Family

Nick Drake
Scott Appel
Vic Chesnutt
Ebin-Rose
David Folks
Clive Gregson & Christine Collister
Jack Hardy
Gayla Drake Paul
Richard Thompson
David Wilcox

Robin & Barry Dransfield
Kate Rusby

Dubliners
Irish Rovers
The Johnstons
Mick Moloney
The Pogues
Sweeney's Men

Dave Dudley
Commander Cody & His Lost Planet Airmen

Lorraine Duisit
Freyda and Acoustic AttaTude

Bob Dylan
Eric Andersen
Joan Baez
Dan Bern
Paul Brady
Chuck Brodsky
David Bromberg
Tim Buckley
T-Bone Burnett
The Byrds
Emily & Al Cantrell
Mary Chapin Carpenter
Tom Chapin
Frank Christian
Gene Clark
Bruce Cockburn
Leonard Cohen
Scott Cossu
Crosby, Stills and Nash
Sandy Denny disappear fear
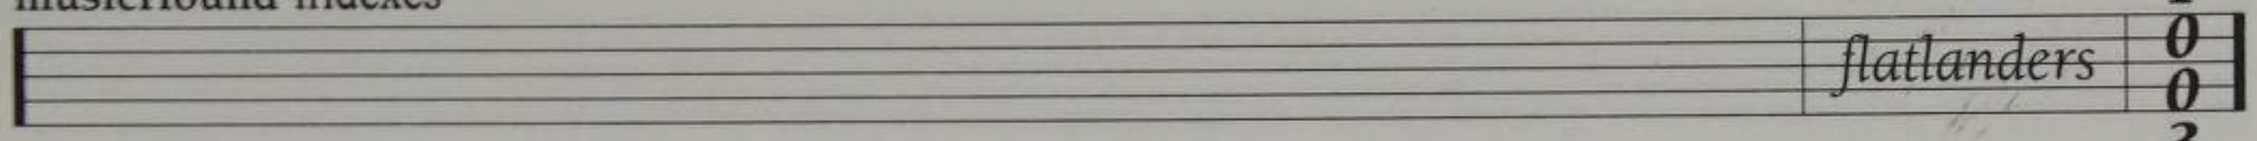
Donovan
Nick Drake
Pete Droge
Fred Eaglesmith
Steve Earle
Cliff Eberhardt
Jason Eklund
Fairport Convention
Steve Forbert
Michael Fracasso
Jackson C. Frank
Mark Germino
Steve Goodman
Grateful Dead
Butch Hancock
Tim Hardin
John Wesley Harding
Jack Hardy
Richie Havens
Tish Hinojosa
Robyn Hitchcock
Alaska's Hobo Jim
Ian & Sylvia
Indigo Girls
Michael Jerling
Paul Kelly
Greg Kihn
Koerner, Ray & Glover
Kris Kristofferson
Jimmy LaFave
Patty Larkin
Larry Long
Rod MacDonald
Marley's Ghost
David Massengill
Eleanor McEvoy
James McMurtry
Ralph McTell
Richard Meyer
Van Morrison
Pete Morton
Peter Mulvey
Elliot Murphy
Michael Nesmith
Laura Nyro
Ellis Paul
Peter, Paul & Mary
Tom Prasada-Rao
John Prine
Willis Alan Ramsey
Tom Robinson Band
Tom Russell
Buffy Sainte-Marie
Richard Shindell
Paul Siebel
Dick Siegel
Paul Simon
Simon & Garfunkel
Todd Snider
Cat Stevens
Al Stewart
James Taylor
Richard Thompson
Happy Traum
Townes Van Zandt
Loudon Wainwright III
The Waterboys
Don Williams
Lucinda Williams
Jesse Winchester
The Woodstock Mountain Revue
Jesse Colin Young
Neil Young
Steve Young

The Eagles
America
Kevin Welch

Steve Earle
Mark Germino
Todd Snider

Easy Club
Sileas



Cliff Eberhardt
Hugh Blumenfeld

Duane Eddy
David Lindley

Dave Edmunds
Tina Louise Barr

Edward II
Shooglenifty

Mark Eitzel
Jack Logan

The Electric Bonsai Band
Eddie from Ohio

Danny Elfman's "Mystic Knights of the Oingo Boingo" Klezmorim

Duke Ellington
Klezmorim
Billy Novick

Ramblin' Jack Elliott
The Greenbriar Boys
Peter, Paul & Mary
Loudon Wainwright III

Big Chief Ellis
Cephas & Wiggins

Joe Ely
Robert Earl Keen Jr.

Enemy Orchard
Black 47

Lyman Enloe
Fred Stoneking

Lymon Enloe
Primitive Characters

James Ennis (Séamus Mac Aonghusa)
Séamus Ennis

Seamus Ennis
Derek Bell
Mary Bergin
Andy Irvine
Christy Moore
Liam O'Flynn

Brian Eno
Mouth Music
Jane Siberry

Kevin Enoch
Boiled Buzzards

Ensemble Galilei
Hesperus

Enya
Mouth Music

Sleepy John Estes
Memphis Jug Band
Josh White Jr.

Melissa Etheridge
Patty Griffin

Bill Evans
Steve Schneider

Ike Everly
Merle Travis

The Everly Brothers
The Brother Boys
Buffalo Springfield
Rosanne Cash
Chad & Jeremy
Crosby, Stills and Nash
Josh Crowe and David McLaughlin
The Eagles
Marianne Faithfull
Mike Fenton
The Mamas & the Papas
Peter & Gordon
Paul Simon
Simon & Garfunkel
Stealers Wheel
Sweethearts of the Rodeo
Trout Fishing in America
Young Tradition

John Fahey
Harvey Reid

Paddy Fahy
Kevin Burke
Martin Hayes

Fairfield Four
The Nashville Bluegrass Band

Fairport Convention
Boiled in Lead
Polly Bolton
Robin and Barry Dransfield
Figgy Duff
Ashley Hutchings
Incredible String Band
The New St. George
The Oyster Band
Runrig
Spirit of the West
Steeleye Span
Tamarack
Whirligig

Marianne Faithfull
Mary Hopkin
Mary Margaret O'Hara

Cleoma Breaux Falcon
David Doucet
Kristi Guillory
Magnolia Sisters
Savoy-Doucet Cajun Band

Joe Falcon
Amédée Ardoin
Jo-El Sonnier

Joe Falcon & Cleoma Breaux
Lawrence Walker

Famous Bluejay Singers
Golden Gate Quartet

Mimi and Richard Fariña
Judy Collins
Cindy Kallet

Richard Fariña
Alan Freeman
Greg Kihn
Mark Nelson
Don Pedi
Jerry Rockwell
Kevin Roth
Trapezoid

Jim Farthing
Frank George

Fat Meat Boys
The Chicken Chokers

Tuba Fats & the Chosen Few
The ReBirth Brass Band

John Henry Faulk
Garrison Keillor

William Faulkner
Tom Russell

Fendermen
David Lindley

Mike Fenton
Alan Mager

Willie Fernie
Alasdair Fraser

Ferron
Stephen Fearing
Connie Kaldor
James Keelaghan
Erica Wheeler

Betty Mae Fikes
Bernice Johnson Reagon

Cathy Fink
Bill Harley

Alec Finn
Robin Bullock

Fred Finn & Peter Horan
Matt Molloy

Archie Fisher
Eric Bogle
Brian McNeill
Ed Miller
Old Blind Dogs
Garnet Rogers
Andy M. Stewart

Fisk Jubilee Singers
The Fairfield Four

Ella Fitzgerald
Judy Austin
Richard Meyer

Winston "Scotty" Fitzgerald
Jerry Holland
Buddy MacMaster

Five Blind Boys of Alabama
The Fairfield Four

Five Hand Reel
Runrig

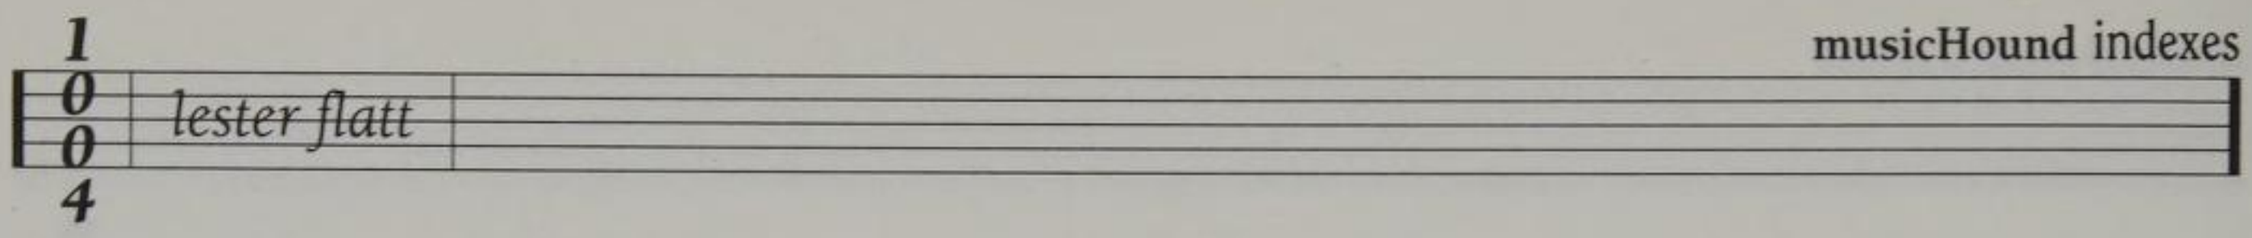
Mike Flanagan (of the Flanagan Brothers)
Joe Derrane

The Flanagan Brothers
De Danann
Frankie Gavin
Mick Moloney

Helen Flanders
Lorraine (Lee) Hammond
Margaret MacArthur

Flanders & Swann
Chad & Jeremy

Flatlanders
Bill & Bonnie Hearne



Lester Flatt
Gibson Brothers Band
Jon Sholle

Flatt & Scruggs
Boys from Indiana
The Charles River Valley Boys
The Dillards
Robin and Barry Dransfield
John Hartford
Chris Hillman
Peter Kessler & Gail Fratar
The Laurel Canyon Ramblers
The Lewis Family
Lonesome Standard Time
Special Consensus
Ralph Stanley
Mason Williams

Béla Fleck
Alison Brown
Matt Flinner
Freyda and Acoustic AttaTude
Strength in Numbers

Chuck Fleming
Johnny Cunningham

Benton Flippen
Paul Brown
The Chicken Chokers
Primitive Characters

Russell Fluharty
Madeline MacNeil
Sam Rizzetta
Bob Shank

Dan Fogelberg
Sara Hickman
Bill Miller
Diane Zeigler

Canray Fontenot
Chris Ardoin
Beausoleil
California Cajun Orchestra
John Delafose
Queen Ida
Savoy-Doucet Cajun Band

Richard Fool Bull
Kevin Locke

Steve Forbert
Hugh Blumenfeld
Michael Fracasso
David Massengill

Robert Force
Neal Hellman

Howdy Forrester
Chubby Wise

Stephen Foster
Rosamund Campbell
Robin Holcomb
Randy Newman
Pete Seeger
Jay Ungar & Molly Mason

Foster & Lloyd
Kieran Kane

Fotheringay
Susan McKeown & the Chanting House

The Four Freshmen
The Four Preps

Fourgone Conclusions
The American Cafe Orchestra

J.P. Fraley
Farmer's Daughters
Alan Freeman
Buddy Thomas

Erik Frandsen
Frank Christian

Bob Franke
Garnet Rogers

Aretha Franklin
Judy Austin
Laura Nyro
Ann Peebles

Alasdair Fraser
Karen Ashbrook

Iain Fraser
Alasdair Fraser

Freedom Singers
Bernice Johnson Reagon
Sweet Honey in the Rock

Sylvia Fricker
Julie Davis

Lefty Frizzell
Alaska's Hobo Jim
George Jones
Willie Nelson
John Pinamonti
Jim Ringer
James Talley

Alain Froment
Skyedance

Fugazi
Ani DiFranco

Darley Fulks
Bruce Greene

Blind Boy Fuller
Etta Baker
Roy Book Binder
Cephas & Wiggins
The Rev. Gary Davis
Sleepy John Estes
John Jackson
Sonny Terry & Brownie McGhee

Jesse Fuller
John Jackson

Tom Fuller
Brad Leftwich

Lowell Fulson
Clifton Chenier

Peter Gabriel
Paula Cole
Loreena McKennitt
Jane Siberry

Vincenzo Galilei
Ensemble Galilei

Les Gallier
Hollis Landrum

James Galway
Chris Norman

Houston Galyean
Tommy Jarrell

James Gannon
Michael Coleman

Vin Garbutt
Artisan

Jerry Garcia
Peter Rowan

Bobby Gardiner
Billy McComiskey

Worley Gardner
Sam Rizzetta
Kendra Ward & Bob Bence

Art Garfunkel
Jackson C. Frank

Judy Garland
Art Garfunkel

Richard Gary
Sue Richards

Marvin Gaster
Piney Creek Weasels

Gateway Singers
The Kingston Trio

Dick Gaughan
Eric Bogle
Ceolbeg
Jez Lowe
Brian McNeill
Runrig

Marvin Gaye
The Band
Paul Butterfield Blues Band

The J. Geils Band
Tret Fure

The Genial Hawaiians
Bob Brozman

Bobbie Gentry
Kate Campbell
Kimmie Rhodes

George & Ira Gershwin
Randy Newman
Harry Nilsson
Tom Waits

Stan Getz
Ensemble Galilei

Bob Gibson
Bob Franke
Steve Goodman
Phil Ochs
Claudia Schmidt
Michael Smith

Don Gibson
Kenny Baker

Ronnie Gilbert
Janis Ian
Holly Near
Rude Girls
Peggy Seeger
Judy Small
Cris Williamson

Dizzy Gillespie
Joni Mitchell
Jay Ungar & Molly Mason

Tony Gilmore
Lyman Enloe

Johnny Gimble
Emily & Al Cantrell
Mark O'Connor

Alan Ginsberg
The Fugs

Matt Glaser
Jay Ungar & Molly Mason

Henry Glover
Paul Butterfield Blues Band

Goadec Sisters
Alan Stivell

Arthur Godfrey
Garrison Keillor

Golden Gate Quartet
Marley's Ghost

Arlo Good Bear
Kevin Locke

Good Ol' Persons
The All Girl Boys
Kathy Kallick

Benny Goodman
Billy Novick

Steve Goodman
Chuck Brodsky
Bob Franke
Claudia Schmidt

John Gorka
Catie Curtis
Pierce Pettis
Richard Shindell

Johnny Gorman
Michael Coleman

Michael Gorman
Kevin Burke

Gosdin Brothers
Chris Hillman

Davey Graham
Duck Baker
Pierre Bensusan
Martin Carthy
Jack Hardy
Andy Irvine
Bert Jansch
Pentangle

John Renbourn

Grant Street String Band
The All Girl Boys

Stephane Grappelli
Acousticats
Mark O'Connor

The Grateful Dead
Eddie from Ohio
Walter Hyatt
Marley's Ghost
Sons of the Never Wrong

Josh Graves
Jerry Douglas
Sally Van Meter

G.B. Grayson
Bob Bovee and Gail Heil
Pap Brewer

Grayson & Whittier
Earl Johnson

Al Green
Lyle Lovett

Eli Green
Mississippi Fred McDowell

Green Fields of America
Trian

Greenbrier Boys
Frank Wakefield
The Woodstock Mountain Revue

Bruce Greene
Don Pedi

Clive Gregson & Christine Collister
Leslie Tucker

Nanci Griffith
The Black Family
Kate Campbell
Iris DeMent
Betty Elders
John Gorka
Kate Jacobs
Kimberly M'Carver
Kathy Mattea
Kate Rusby
Darden Smith
Bill Staines
The Story
Susan Werner

Erica Wheeler

David Grisman
Alison Brown
Tony Elman
Tom Espinola and Lorraine Duisit
Matt Flinner
Mando Mafia
Evan Marshall
Mike Marshall
Peter Ostroushko
Todd Phillips
Psychograss
Strength in Numbers
Radim Zenkl

Stefan Grossman
Rory Block

Dave Guard
John Stewart

Rufus Guinchard
Figgy Duff

Mark Gunther
Chirps Smith

Arlo Guthrie
Dan Bern
Jon Gailmor

Woody Guthrie
Eric Andersen
Dan Bern
Billy Bragg
Oscar Brand
Rachel Buchman
Country Joe and the Fish
Ani DiFranco
Lonnie Donegan
Bob Dylan
Steve Earle
Jason Eklund
Ramblin' Jack Elliott
Richard and Mimi Fariña
Jon Gailmor
Dick Gaughan
Steve Goodman
John Gorka
Arlo Guthrie
Butch Hancock
Dick Harrington & Victoria Young
Alaska's Hobo Jim
Cisco Houston
Andy Irvine
Burl Ives

Ella Jenkins
Si Kahn
Charlie King
"Spider" John Koerner
Gordon Lightfoot
Larry Long
The Chad Mitchell Trio
Bill Morrissey
Fred Neil
Phil Ochs
Ellis Paul
Tom Paxton
Bruce U. "Utah" Phillips
Elaine Purkey
Willis Alan Ramsey
Jim Ringer
Tom Rush
Helen Schneyer
Pete Seeger
Michelle Shocked
Fred Small
James Talley
Townes Van Zandt
Josh White
Glenn Yarbrough

Buddy Guy
Ry Cooder
Keb' Mo'

Hackberry Ramblers
Harry Choates
Filé
"Cheese" Read
Leo Soileau

Merle Haggard
Dave Alvin
Asleep at the Wheel
The Byrds
Five Chinese Brothers
Butch Hancock
Gram Parsons
Tom Russell
Uncle Tupelo

Ed Hale
Rick Thum

Ed Haley
Owen "Snake" Chapman
Wilson Douglas
J.P. and Annadeene Fraley
Bruce Molsky
Pete Sutherland
Buddy Thomas

Kenny Hall
Mark Nelson

Roy Hall
Jim Eanes

Wendell Hall
Carson Robison

Dana Hamilton
Scott Jackson
Rick Thum

John Hammond Jr.
Cephas & Wiggins
Keb' Mo'

Burl Hammons
Dave Bing
The Bing Brothers

Sherman Hammons
Dave Bing
The Bing Brothers

The Hammons Family
Dwight Diller

Butch Hancock
Jimmy LaFave

W.C. Handy
Furry Lewis

Harambee Singer
Bernice Johnson Reagon

Tim Hardin
Nick Drake

Jack Hardy
Hugh Blumenfeld
Frank Christian
Cliff Eberhardt
Michael Jerling
David Massengill

Slim Harpo
Van Morrison

Jean Harriman
Sue Richards

Earl Harris
Charley Patton

Emmylou Harris
Kate Campbell
Rosanne Cash
Kathy Chiavola
Cindy Church
Iris DeMent
Betty Elders
Amy Fradon and Leslie Ritter
Gibson Brothers Band
Alison Krauss
Claire Lynch
Kate MacKenzie
Kimmie Rhodes
Cathie Ryan
David Schnaufer
Jane Siberry
Ricky Skaggs
Barry & Holly Tashian
The Whites
Lucinda Williams

Phil Harris
Asleep at the Wheel

Garry Harrison
Chirps Smith

Bill Harte
James Keane

John Hartford
Austin Lounge Lizards
Fletcher Bright Fiddle Band
Joel Mabus

Roy Harvey
Riley Puckett

Richie Havens
Cliff Eberhardt
Ben Harper
David Wilcox

James Clarence Hay
Dirk Powell

P.J. Hayes
Martin Hayes

William Shakespeare Hayes
Rosamund Campbell

Lee Hays
Pete Seeger

Hazel & Alice
Emmylou Harris
Ginny Hawker & Kay Justice
Strange Creek Singers

John Healy
Trian

Joe Heaney
Cathie Ryan
Robin Williamson

Mark Heard
Pierce Pettis

Michael Hedges
Adrian Legg

Jascha Heifetz
Evan Marshall

Helicon
Simple Gifts
Skyedance

Neal Hellman
Mike Casey
Lois Hornbostel

Sid Hemphill
Mississippi Fred McDowell

Hamish Henderson
Ed Miller

Jimi Hendrix
Eric Clapton
Ry Cooder
Dave Mason
Richard Thompson

Clarence "Frogman" Henry
The Band

Mike Heron
Robin Williamson

Sam Herrmann
Madeline MacNeil

Carolyn Hester
Betty Elders
Nanci Griffith
Maria Sangiolo

John Hiatt
Dan Bern
Paul Kelly
James McMurtry

Hickory Wind
Boiled in Lead

Bobby Hicks
Jason Carter

Dan Hicks
Gideon Freudmann

Dan Hicks and His Hot Licks
The Chenille Sisters

High Country
Good Ol' Persons

Highwoods String Band
Boiled Buzzards
The Chicken Chokers
Critton Hollow String Band
The Horseflies
Primitive Characters
Skeeter & the Skidmarks

Joe Hill
Si Kahn
Charlie King
Larry Long

Paddy Hill
Noel Hill

The Hillmen
The Bluegrass Cardinals

Robyn Hitchcock
Ed's Redeeming Qualities

Adolf Hofner
Bob Wills

Billie Holiday
Mary Black
Rickie Lee Jones
Magpie
Maria Muldaur
Jane Voss

Jerry Holland
Natalie MacMaster

The Hollies
Stealers Wheel

Tony Hollins
John Lee Hooker

The Hollow Rock String Band
Fuzzy Mountain String Band

Buddy Holly
Terry Allen
T-Bone Burnett
Joe Ely
Marianne Faithfull
Michael Fracasso
Jimmie Dale Gilmore
Greg Kihn
The Nitty Gritty Dirt Band

Joe Holmes
Skylark

David Holt
Laura Boosinger

Holy Modal Rounders
Michael Hurley

Homer and Jethro
Austin Lounge Lizards

Earl Hooker
Sue Foley
Roy Rogers

John Lee Hooker
Mississippi Fred McDowell
Van Morrison
Bonnie Raitt
Chic Street Man

Hoosier Hotshots
The Maddox Brothers & Rose

Joel Hopkins
Lightnin' Hopkins

Lightnin' Hopkins
John Fahey
John Hammond Jr.
Eric Taylor
Townes Van Zandt

Lena Horne
Harry Belafonte

Zelphia and Myles Horton
Guy Carawan

Hot Rize
Emily & Al Cantrell
Front Range
Northern Lights
Tim O'Brien

Hotmud Family
Critton Hollow String Band

Son House
Rory Block
Michael Bloomfield
Big Bill Broonzy
Sleepy John Estes
Jesse Fuller
Paul Geremia
Stefan Grossman
Skip James
Robert Johnson
Koerner, Ray & Glover
Muddy Waters

House Band
Simple Gifts

Cisco Houston
Gordon Bok
Richard and Mimi Fariña
Sandy & Caroline Paton

Howlin' Wolf
Paul Butterfield Blues Band
Bonnie Raitt

Jim Hudson
Rick Thum

Jimmy Hueston
Tommy Peoples

Mississippi John Hurt
Rory Block
Roy Book Binder
Mike Cross
Bob Franke
Paul Geremia
Stefan Grossman
Hot Tuna
Frank Hutchison
"Spider" John Koerner
Lovin' Spoonful
Chris Smither
Happy Traum
Dave Van Ronk
Josh White Jr.

Ashley Hutchings
Blowzabella
John Kirkpatrick

Joe Hutton
Kathryn Tickell

Janis Ian
Judy Austin
Carrie Newcomer
Cosy Sheridan

Ian & Sylvia
Cindy Church
Steve Gillette & Cindy Mangsen
Neal & Leandra

The Impressions
The Band

Incredible String Band
Steve Schneider

Indigo Girls
Kristen Hall

International Submarine Band
Barry & Holly Tashian

The Irish Tradition
Karen Ashbrook
Helicon
Lisa Moscatiello
Solas
Trian

Andy Irvine
Atwater-Donnelly
Tom Espinola and Lorraine Duisit
Donal Lunny

Bill Irwin
Malcolm Dalglish

Atta Isaacs
Gabby Pahinui

Eileen Ivers
Simple Gifts

Burl Ives
Theodore "Theo" Bikel
Bok, Muir & Trickett
Oscar Brand
The Brothers Four
Cindy Kallet
Sandy & Caroline Paton

Charles Ives
Baltimore Consort
Robin Holcomb

Aunt Molly Jackson
Robin Flower
Elaine Purkey

Jim Jackson
Memphis Minnie
Charley Patton
Robert Wilkins

Mahalia Jackson
Odetta
Ann Peebles

Papa Charlie Jackson
Big Bill Broonzy

Tommy Jackson
James Bryan

Wanda Jackson
Rosie Flores

Jackson Five
Laura Love

David James
Karen Ashbrook

Elmore James
Michael Bloomfield
Ry Cooder

Skip James
Paul Geremia
Stefan Grossman

"Spider" John Koerner
Koerner, Ray & Glover

Bert Jansch
Pierre Bensusan
Ebin-Rose
Dick Gaughan
John Renbourn
Brooks Williams

Victor Jara
Magpie

Al Jarreau
Martin Sexton

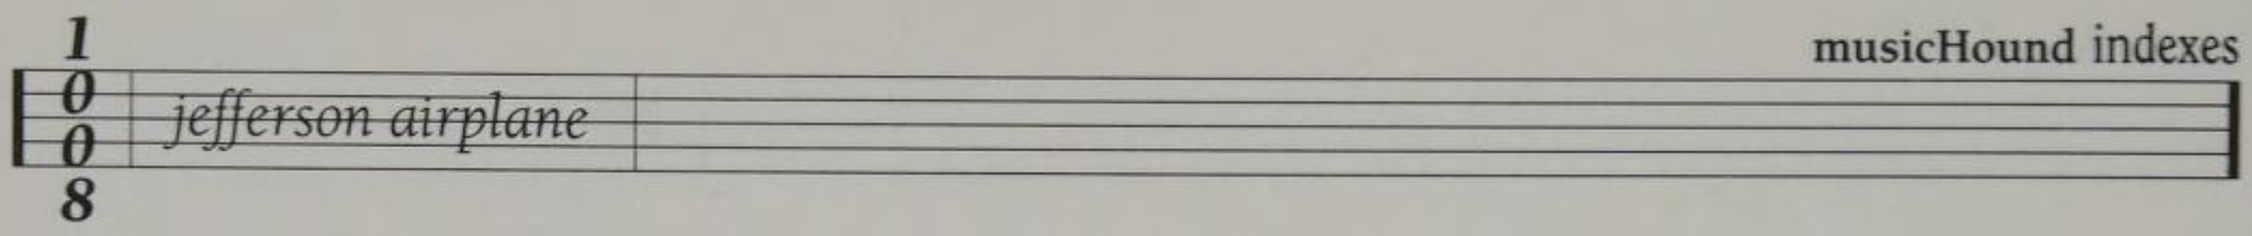
Ben Jarrell
Tommy Jarrell

Tommy Jarrell
Boiled Buzzards
Paul Brown
The Camp Creek Boys
Bob Carlin
The Chicken Chokers
Tony Ellis
Wayne Erbsen
Fuzzy Mountain String Band
Carol Elizabeth Jones & James Leva
Brad Leftwich
Bruce Molsky
Dirk Powell
Primitive Characters
Rhythm Rats
Mike Seeger
Pete Sutherland
Kirk Sutphin

Keith Jarrett
Steve Schneider

Jason & the Scorchers
Blood Oranges

Blind Lemon Jefferson
Big Bill Broonzy
The Rev. Gary Davis
Ted Hawkins
Roscoe Holcomb
John Lee Hooker
Lightnin' Hopkins
B.B. King
Leadbelly
Mance Lipscomb
Mississippi Fred McDowell
Charley Patton
Josh White



Jefferson Airplane
Fairport Convention
Steeleye Span

Ella Jenkins
Peter Alsop
Rachel Buchman

Jean Simmons Jennings
David Schnaufer

Waylon Jennings
Hoyt Axton
Ray Wylie Hubbard
Robert Earl Keen Jr.

Joan Jett
Tret Fure

John Hill Jewett
Rosamund Campbell

Jim & Jesse
Gibson Brothers Band
Carl Jackson

Santiago Jimenez
Flaco Jimenez

Joan of Arc
Jo Carol Pierce

Beau Jocque
Chris Ardoin
Keith Frank

Dr. John
Dick Siegel

Elton John
Amy Fradon and Leslie Ritter

Johnnie & Jack
Kitty Wells

Johnny & the Pirates
Van Morrison

Blind Willie Johnson
Washington Phillips

Crow Johnson
Joni Bishop

Elliott Johnson
Bayou Seco

Lonnie Johnson
Lightnin' Hopkins
Robert Johnson
B.B. King

Robert Johnson
Rory Block
Big Bill Broonzy
Bob Brozman
Guy Davis
Sleepy John Estes
John Fahey
John Hammond Jr.
Richie Havens
Ted Hawkins
John Lee Hooker
Michael Jerling
Taj Mahal
Mississippi Fred McDowell
Keb' Mo'
Kelly Joe Phelps
David Rea
Muddy Waters
Lucinda Williams

Tommy Johnson
Rory Block
Sleepy John Estes
Skip James
Robert Johnson
Mississippi Sheiks

Johnson Mountain Boys
The Lynn Morris Band

Johnstons
Mick Moloney

Jolly Boys
Magical Strings

Bessie Jones
Bernice Johnson Reagon

Casey Jones
Lyman Enloe

George Jones
Five Chinese Brothers
Dirk Powell

Grandpa Jones
The Holy Modal Rounders

Grandpa and Ramona Jones
Cathy Barton and Dave Para

Marti Jones
Dana Cooper

Nic Jones
Kate Rusby

Rickie Lee Jones
Ani DiFranco
Deb Pasternak

Suzanne Vega

Spike Jones & His City Slickers
The Hoosier Hot Shots
Tom Waits

Janis Joplin
Tracy Nelson

Charlie Jordan
Memphis Jug Band

Louis Jordan
Clarence "Gatemouth" Brown
Clifton Chenier
Bo Diddley

Steve Jordan
The Mollys

Ledward Kaapana
Moses Kahumoku
George Kahumoku Jr.

Si Kahn
John McCutcheon

Rev. Dennis Kamakahi
George Kuo

Raymond Kane
Moses Kahumoku
George Kahumoku Jr.
Rev. Dennis Kamakahi
George Kuo
Mark Nelson

Moussa Kanoute
Magical Strings

Steve Kaufman
Linda Thomas & Dan DeLancey

Singh Kaur
Kim Robertson

Ron Kavana
The Black Family

Danny Kaye
Ella Jenkins

Dolores Keane
Grace Griffith
Lisa Moscatiello
Maura O'Connell
Cathie Ryan
Skylark

Rita Keane
Dolores Keane

Sarah Keane
Dolores Keane

Salif Keita
Sileas

Bill Keith
Tony Trischka

Luke Kelley
Dick Gaughan

Frank Kelly
Tommy Peoples

Patrick Kelly
Seán Keane

Kentucky Colonels
The Laurel Canyon Ramblers
The Nashville Bluegrass Band
The New Grass Revival

Jack Kerouac
Cindy Lee Berryhill
Richard and Mimi Fariña

Barney Kessel
Glen Campbell

Clark Kessinger
Robin Kessinger
Mando Mafia
Buddy Thomas

Kessinger Brothers
Lonnie Robertson

Chaka Khan
The Story

Nusrat Fateh Ali Khan
Jeff Buckley

Kids in the Hall
Moxy Früvous

Killbilly
Bad Livers

Louis Killen
Gordon Bok
Tom Lewis

Paddy Killoran
Kevin Burke
Eugene O'Donnell

John Kimmel
Joe Derrane

Bradley Kincaid
Blue Sky Boys
Red Foley
Mac Wiseman

Albert King
Michael Bloomfield
Eric Clapton
Buddy Guy

B.B. King
Michael Bloomfield
Paul Butterfield Blues Band
Buddy Guy
Albert King

Carole King
Rickie Lee Jones
Lynn Miles
Laura Nyro
Carly Simon
James Taylor

Earl King
The subdudes

Freddie King
Luther Allison
Eric Clapton
Bob Margolin

King Crimson
Amazing Blondel
Al Stewart

Kingston Trio
America
Bright Morning Star
The Foremen
The Four Preps
The Limeliters
Lee Murdock
The New Christy Minstrels
The Chad Mitchell Trio
Rooftop Singers
Schooner Fare
Paul Simon
Simon & Garfunkel
Smothers Brothers
John Stewart

Kinks
Tom Robinson Band

Alison Kinnaird
Sileas
Wendy Stewart

John Kirkpatrick
Blowzabella

The Plaid Family

Dorothy Knauss
Carol Thompson

Walt Koken
Michael Miles
Ken Perlman

Fred Koller
Four Bitchin' Babes

Ken Kolodner
Rick Thum

Alexis Korner
Van Morrison

Kornog
The House Band

Leo Kottke
Scott Appel
Michael Hedges
Peter Mulvey
Harvey Reid

Ernie Kovacs
Michael Nesmith

Kraftwerk
The Devlins

Alison Krauss
Blue Highway
Alison Brown
Luke and Jenny Anne Bulla
Tammy Rogers
Chris Thile

Miriam Kressyn
Klezmer Conservatory Band

Kris Kristofferson
Pat Alger
T-Bone Burnett
Ray Wylie Hubbard
James McMurtry

Virginia Kron
Kim Robertson

Leon S. Kurzer
Rooftop Singers

Leonard Kwan
Moses Kahumoku
George Kahumoku Jr.
Rev. Dennis Kamakahi

Jim Kweskin's Jug Band
Lou and Peter Berryman

The Cheap Suit Serenaders
The Nitty Gritty Dirt Band
Timbuk 3

Labelle
Laura Nyro

Bill Lamey
Jerry Holland
Buddy MacMaster

John Landry
Marley's Ghost

k.d. lang
Phranc

Daniel Lanois
Jane Siberry

Sheila Larchet-Cuthbert
Derek Bell

Patty Larkin
Peter Mulvey

Jim Lauderdale
Buddy Miller

Christine Lavin
Electric Bonsai Band
John Forster
Four Bitchin' Babes
Camille West
Cheryl Wheeler

Doyle Lawson & Quicksilver
Blue Highway
IIIrd Tyme Out

Izeb Laza
Clifton Chenier

Le Hot Club de France
Dan Hicks

Leadbelly
Lou and Peter Berryman
Theodore "Theo" Bikel
Gordon Bok
Oscar Brand
Tim Buckley
Leonard Cohen
Lonnie Donegan
Bob Dylan
John Fahey
Jesse Fuller
Paul Geremia
Richie Havens
John Jackson
"Spider" John Koerner

Van Morrison
Bill Morrissey
The New Christy Minstrels
Sandy & Caroline Paton
Pete Seeger
Sonny Terry & Brownie McGhee
Hans Theessink
Eric Von Schmidt
Josh White
Josh White Jr.

Vorris "Shorty" LeBlanc
Jo-El Sonnier

Led Zeppelin
Toshi Reagon

Lilly May Ledford
Molly O'Day

Brenda Lee
Rosie Flores

Dick Lee
Hamish Moore

Wilma Lee & Stoney Cooper
Delia Bell and Bill Grant
Johnnie & Jack

Scott LeFaro
Hot Tuna

Brad Leftwich
Jake Krack
Red Mountain White Trash

Rush Leftwich
Brad Leftwich

Tom Lehrer
John Forster
Rude Girls
Shel Silverstein

Eric Leinsdorf
Malcolm Dalglish

Iry LeJeune
Bruce Daigrepont
Doug Kershaw
Eddie LeJeune
Doris "D.L." Menard
Savoy-Doucet Cajun Band
Jo-El Sonnier
Horace Trahan

John Lennon
Robyn Hitchcock
Rod MacDonald

Lettermen Seals & Crofts

Furry Lewis
Memphis Jug Band
Memphis Minnie

Jerry Lee Lewis
John Prine

Shari Lewis
Kevin Roth

Laurie Lewis & Grant Street
Tony Furtado

Joe Liggins
Dr. John

Urg Light
Will Keys

Light Crust Doughboys
Milton Brown and the Musical Brownies

Gordon Lightfoot
Bruce Cockburn
Jim Croce
Grit Laskin
David Mallett
Eileen McGann
Ralph McTell
The Nudes
Peter, Paul & Mary
Harvey Reid
Jeanie Stahl
Bill Staines
Tamarack

Lilly Brothers
Joe Val & the New England Bluegrass Boys

The Limeliters
Bright Morning Star
The Foremen
Schooner Fare

The Limeliters
The Four Preps
The Chad Mitchell Trio

David Lindley
Kelly Joe Phelps
Martin Simpson

Mance Lipscomb
Guy Davis
Stefan Grossman
Kristina Olsen

Little Feat
Tret Fure

Little Richard
Bob Dylan
Harry Nilsson
Otis Redding

Little Walter
Paul Butterfield Blues Band

A.L. Lloyd
Frankie Armstrong
Anne Briggs
Martin Carthy
Bert Jansch
John Roberts & Tony Barrand
The New St. George

Ernest Lloyd
A.L. Lloyd

Frank Loesser
Loudon Wainwright III

Ar Log
Robin Huw Bowen

Jack Logan
Vic Chesnutt

Alan Lomax
Helen Schneyer

Alan & John Lomax
Margaret MacArthur
Eric Von Schmidt

John Lomax
Wayne Erbsen

Professor Longhair
Clifton Chenier
Dr. John

Los Lobos
The Mollys

The Louvin Brothers
The Brother Boys
Johnny Cash
Josh Crowe and David McLaughlin
The Eagles
Everly Brothers
Gibson Brothers Band
Emmylou Harris
Jim & Jesse
Red Clay Ramblers
Tracy Schwarz & Ginny Hawker

Uncle Tupelo
The Whitstein Brothers

Lyle Lovett
John Jennings
Robert Earl Keen Jr.
Deb Pasternak

The Lovin' Spoonful
Free Hot Lunch!

Charlie Lowe
Tommy Jarrell

Jez Lowe
The Black Family

Lulubelle & Scotty
Molly O'Day

Phil Lumpkin
A.L. Lloyd

Emmett Lundy
Red Mountain White Trash

Ted Lundy
James King

Donal Lunny
The Johnstons

Bascom Lamar Lunsford
Marvin Gaster
Grandpa Jones
Betty Smith

Claire Lynch
The Forbes Family

Mac & Bob
Blue Sky Boys

Macalla
Altan

Margaret MacArthur
Mark Nelson

Ewan MacColl
Frankie Armstrong
Eric Bogle
Dave Burland
Andrew Calhoun
The Dubliners
Archie Fisher
Tom Lewis
Christy Moore
Sandy & Caroline Paton
Young Tradition

Alan MacDonald
Tannahill Weavers

Rod MacDonald
Hugh Blumenfeld

Sir John A. MacDonald
Stompin' Tom Connors

Paul Machlis
Alasdair Fraser

Ashley MacIsaac
Mary Jane Lamond

Dougie MacLean
Atwater-Donnelly
Silly Wizard

Morag MacLeod
Sileas

Buddy MacMaster
The Barra MacNeils
Alasdair Fraser
Natalie MacMaster
Hamish Moore
Skyedance

Natalie MacMaster
Simple Gifts

Adam MacNaughton
Ed Miller

Maddie MacNeil
Susan Trump

Madeline MacNeil
Tony Elman

Flora MacNeill
Capercaillie

Uncle Dave Macon
Clarence "Tom" Ashley
Pap Brewer
Bill Carlisle
The Cheap Suit Serenaders
The Chicken Chokers
The Double Decker String Band
The Freight Hoppers
Homer & Jethro
Earl Johnson
Grandpa Jones
Peter Kessler & Gail Fratar
Sam & Kirk McGee
George Pegram
Primitive Characters
Pete Seeger

Lauchlin Shaw & A.C. Overton
Stringbean

Joe Madden
Joanie Madden

Rose Maddox
Country Ham
Carolyn Hester

Mary Magdalene
Jo Carol Pierce

Magic Sam
Luther Allison

Magical Strings
Ceoltoiri

Magpie
Freyda and Acoustic AttaTude

Wade Mainer
Pap Brewer

Wade Mainer and Zeke Morris
The Chestnut Grove Quartet

Sarah Makem
The Clancy Brothers and Tommy Makem

Steve Mann
Duck Baker

Roger Manning
Brenda Kahn

Nicholas Markey
Séamus Ennis

Bob Marley
Ben Harper
Marley's Ghost
Toshi Reagon

Vaughn Marley
Hollow Rock String Band

Beryl Marriott
Dave Swarbrick

Marshall Family
The Forbes Family

Benny Martin
Jason Carter

Jimmy Martin
Red Allen
J.D. Crowe
Doyle Lawson

The Osborne Brothers

Marcus Martin
Rafe Stefanini

Sara Martin
Dock Boggs

Martin & Lewis
Smothers Brothers

John Martyn
Stephen Fearing
Michael Hedges
Garnet Rogers
David Wilcox

Marcy Marxer
Bill Harley

Hugh Masakela
Tony Bird

Iain Matthews
Ebin-Rose

Curtis Mayfield
Ben Harper
Ted Hawkins

Curtis Mayfield & the Impressions
Van Morrison

Taylor McBaine
Cathy Barton and Dave Para

Mary McCabe
Séamus Ennis

Jim McCall
Union Springs

Paul McCartney
Peter & Gordon

Mary McCaslin
Kate MacLeod

"Haywire Mac" McClintock
Bruce U. "Utah" Phillips

Ewan McColl
Dick Gaughan
Bert Jansch

John McCutcheon
No Strings Attached
Jerry Read Smith

P.J. McDermott
Michael Coleman

Mississippi Fred McDowell
Ry Cooder
Stefan Grossman
Koerner, Ray & Glover
Washington Phillips
Bonnie Raitt

Red River Dave McEnery
The Greenbriar Boys

Reba McEntire
Elaine Purkey

John McEuen
Mark Johnson

Andy McGann
Irish Tradition
Ken Perlman

Kate & Anna McGarrigle
The Burns Sisters
The Roches

Dennis McGee
Alphonse "Bois Sec" Ardoin
Amédée Ardoin
The Balfa Brothers
Balfa Toujours
Bayou Seco
Harry Choates
Joseph Falcon and Cleoma Breaux Falcon
Canray Fontenot
Hackberry Ramblers
"Cheese" Read
Savoy-Doucet Cajun Band
Leo Soileau
Tasso
Eric & Suzy Thompson

Sam McGee
Frank Hutchison

Sam & Kirk McGee
Uncle Dave Macon

Brownie McGhee
Cephas & Wiggins
Artie Traum
Happy Traum
Dave Van Ronk

Frazer McGlen & His Scottish Country Dance Band
Dougie MacLean

Arty McGlynn
Robin Bullock

Sean McGlynn
Billy McComiskey
Trian

John McGreevy
Liz Carroll

Johnny McGreevy
Trian

Roger McGuinn
T-Bone Burnett
Rod MacDonald

Tom McHaile
Mary Bergin

Ellen McIlwaine
Les Sampou

Antoinette McKenna
Maire Ni Chathasaigh

John McKenna
De Danann
Frankie Gavin

Loreena McKennitt
Atwater-Donnelly

Clayton "Pappy" McMichen
Darby and Tarlton
Ed Haley

Clayton McMichen & His Georgia Wildcats
The Skillet Lickers

Ralph McTell
Andrew Calhoun

"Blind" Willie McTell
Roy Book Binder
Guy Davis
Paul Geremia
Leslie Riddle

Melanie
Catie Curtis

John Mellencamp
James McMurtry
Todd Snider

Jacob Melton
Russell Family

Raymond Melton
Russell Family

Memphis Jug Band
Lou and Peter Berryman

Memphis Minnie
Sue Foley
Mance Lipscomb
Judy Roderick
Rosetta Tharpe

Memphis/Muscle Shoals
Flying Burrito Brothers

D.L. Menard
Basin Brothers
David Doucet
Steve Riley & the Mamou Playboys

Metamora
Helicon

Richard Meyer
Hugh Blumenfeld

Walt Michael
Scott Jackson
No Strings Attached
Linda Thomas & Dan De-Lancey

Miko
Noel Hill

Betsy Miller
Ewan MacColl

Emmett Miller
Jesse Fuller
Leon Redbone

Rodney Miller
The American Cafe Orchestra

Roger Miller
Lou and Peter Berryman
Glen Campbell
Tom T. Hall
Bill Staines

Ross Miller
Hollow Rock String Band

Mills Brothers
Golden Gate Quartet

Gerry Milnes
Diane Jones and & King

Charles Mingus
Davey Graham
Bert Jansch
Joni Mitchell
Pentangle

The Miracles
The Band

Mississippi Sheiks
Jesse Fuller
Leon Redbone

Howie Mitchell
Bok, Muir & Trickett
Neal Hellman
Bill Spence

Joni Mitchell
Scott Appel
Joan Armatrading
Luka Bloom
Polly Bolton
Mary Chapin Carpenter
Rosanne Cash
Tracy Chapman
Lui Collins
Shawn Colvin
Rita Connolly
Iris DeMent
Sandy Denny
Ani DiFranco
disappear fear
Nick Drake
Ebin-Rose
David Folks
Julia Fordham
Amy Fradon and Leslie Ritter
Annie Gallup
Margo Hennebach
Robin Holcomb
Rickie Lee Jones
Cindy Kallet
Lucy Kaplansky
Patty Larkin
Christine Lavin
Dougie MacLean
Mary McCaslin
Kate& Anna McGarrigle
Lynn Miles
Laura Nyro
Deb Pasternak
Gayla Drake Paul
David Rea
Toshi Reagon
Maria Sangiolo
Jane Siberry
Carly Simon
The Story
Suzanne Vega
Sloan Wainwright
Linda Waterfall
Paula Joy Welter
David Wilcox

Chad Mitchell Trio
Bright Morning Star
The Foremen
Schooner Fare

Tau Moe
Bob Brozman

Matt Molloy
Kevin Crawford
Chris Norman

Mick Moloney
Cherish the Ladies
Donal Lunny
The Mollys

Sean Moloney
Mike Casey

Bill Monroe
Red Allen
Bad Livers
Kenny Baker
Delia Bell and Bill Grant
Byron Berline
Bryan Bowers
Boys from Indiana
David Bromberg
Sam Bush
The Camp Creek Boys
Vassar Clements
The Country Gentlemen
The Cox Family
Flatt & Scruggs
Richard Greene
David Grisman
Bill & Bonnie Hearne
Johnson Mountain Boys
Alison Krauss
Lonesome Standard Time
Mike Marshall
Jimmy Martin
The Del McCoury Band
Walt Michael
Muleskinner
Northern Lights
The Osborne Brothers
Peter Ostroushko
George Pegram
Todd Phillips
Psychograss
Don Reno & Red Smiley
Joseph "Butch" Robins
Peter Rowan
Salamander Crossing
Ricky Skaggs
Special Consensus
Ralph Stanley

The Stanley Brothers
Andy Statman
Stoney Lonesome
Chris Thile
Linda Thomas & Dan De-Lancey
Frank Wakefield
Chubby Wise

Bill Monroe & His Bluegrass Boys
The Dillards
Fiddle Fever
The Kentucky Colonels
The Laurel Canyon Ramblers

The Monroe Brothers
The Buckhannon Brothers
The Lilly Brothers
Cliff Perry & Laurel Bliss
Doc Watson

Patsy Montana
Cathy Fink and Marcy Marxer
The Maddox Brothers & Rose

Wes Montgomery
Richard Thompson

Monty Python
The Foremen

Clyde Moody
Jim Eanes

Kermit Moody
Cathy Barton and Dave Para

Moody Blues
Amazing Blondel

Christy Moore
The Johnstons
Donal Lunny
The Mollys

Hamish Moore
Skyedance

James Morrison
De Danann
Frankie Gavin
Matt Molloy
Eugene O'Donnell

Van Morrison
Paul Brady
Steve Fisher
Marley's Ghost
Richard Thompson
The Waterboys

Bill Morrissey
Córmac McCarthy
Ellis Paul
Erica Wheeler

Jelly Roll Morton
Billy Novick
Leon Redbone

Motörhead
Bad Livers

Motown
Joni Mitchell

Mound City Blue Blowers
Sunshine Skiffle Band

Mouth Music
Mary Jane Lamond
Shooglenifty

Moving Hearts
Mad Pudding
Shooglenifty

Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart
Joemy Wilson

Mr. Fox
Ashley Hutchings
Steeleye Span

Maria Muldaur
Prudence Johnson
Kate& Anna McGarrigle

Muleskinner
The All Girl Boys

Martin Mulhaire
Billy McComiskey

Brendan Mulkere
John Whelan

Ron Mullenex
Diane Jones and & King

Moon Mullican
Commander Cody & His Lost Planet Airmen

Brendan Mulvihill
Eileen Ivers
Natalie MacMaster

Martin Mulvihill
Irish Tradition
Eileen Ivers

Elliott Murphey
Greg Kihn

Michael Martin Murphey
Don Edwards
Waddie Mitchell

Dennis Murphy & Julia Clifford
Jackie Daly

Joe Murtagh
Mark Simos

Musica Reservata
Baltimore Consort

Na h-Oganaich
Capercaillie

Nashville Bluegrass Band
Blue Highway

Holly Near
Ferron
Connie Kaldor
Judy Small
Cris Williamson

Eleanor Neary
Liz Carroll

Fred Neil
Crosby, Stills and Nash
Lovin' Spoonful

Rick Nelson
The Mamas & the Papas

Tracy Nelson
Katy Moffatt

Willie Nelson
Guy Clark
Jimmie Dale Gilmore
Butch Hancock
Bill & Bonnie Hearne
Ray Wylie Hubbard

Aaron Neville
Vance Gilbert

Neville Brothers
The subdudes

New Christy Minstrels
The Byrds
John Denver
Seals & Crofts

New Grass Revival
Acousticats
Sam Bush
Tim O'Brien
Maura O'Connell
Strength in Numbers

The New Lost City Ramblers
Any Old Time String Band
Mac Benford
Bob Bovee and Gail Heil
Bryan Bowers
Country Ham
The Double Decker String Band
Rhythm Rats
Strange Creek Singers

New Shades of Grass
The Seldom Scene

New York Dolls
Phranc

Mickey Newbury
Townes Van Zandt

Newgrass Revival
Joel Mabus

Jimmy C. Newman
Zachary Richard

Randy Newman
Vince Bell
T-Bone Burnett
Rickie Lee Jones
Lyle Lovett
Mac McAnally
James McMurtry
Harry Nilsson
David Olney
Trout Fishing in America
Tom Waits

Maire Ni Chatasaigh
Sue Richards

Roger Nicholson
Blowzabella

Robert Nighthawk
Luther Allison
Roy Rogers

John Jacob Niles
Rosalie Sorrels

Ken Nordine
Tom Waits

Cari Norris
Atwater-Donnelly

NY Pro Musica
Baltimore Consort

Laura Nyro
Karla Bonoff
Rickie Lee Jones
Laura Love
Lynn Miles
Carly Simon
Sloan Wainwright

Philip O'Beirne
Michael Coleman

Ann O'Brien
Déanta

Paddy O'Brien
Irish Tradition
John Whelan

Tim O'Brien
Judith Edelman

Tim & Mollie O'Brien
Hot Rize

Turlough O'Carolan
Patrick Ball
Trapezoid

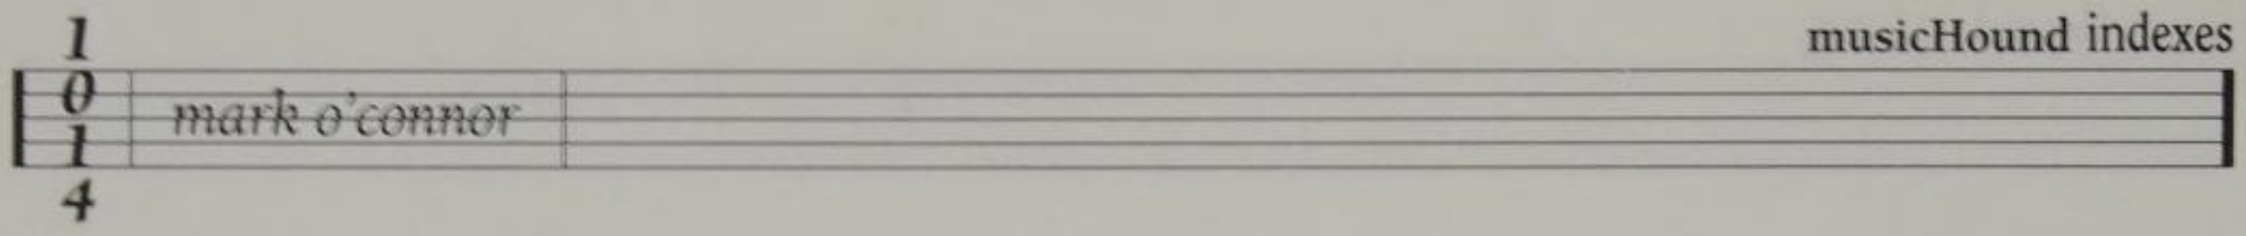
Rory Dall O'Cathain
Jay Ungar & Molly Mason

Phil Ochs
Eric Bogle
Jackson Browne
Harry Chapin
disappear fear
Anne Dodson
The Foremen
Tim Hardin
John Wesley Harding
Mary Hopkin
Brenda Kahn
Si Kahn
Charlie King
Rod MacDonald
Magpie
Fred Small

Maura O'Connell
Christine Collister
Prudence Johnson
Leslie Tucker
Susan Werner

Flannery O'Connor
Lucinda Williams

Mairtin O'Connor
Sharon Shannon



Mark O'Connor
Luke and Jenny Anne Bulla
Stuart Duncan
Steve Kaufman
Tammy Rogers

October Project
Sloan Wainwright

Lee O'Daniel & the Light Crust Doughboys
James Talley

Molly O'Day
Wilma Lee & Stoney Cooper
Dry Branch Fire Squad
Jane Voss

Odetta
Joan Armatrading
Melanie
Bonnie Raitt
Bernice Johnson Reagon
Judy Small
Sweet Honey in the Rock

Eugene O'Donnell
Eileen Ivers

Padraig O'Keefe
Jackie Daly

Johnny O'Leary
Jackie Daly

Proinsias ó Maonaigh
Altan

Oisín
Dervish

Roy Orbison
Rosanne Cash
Jimmie Dale Gilmore
Ted Hawkins
k.d. lang

Oregon
Scott Cossu

Sean O'Riada
Alan Stivell
Joemy Wilson

Cleofes Ortiz
Bayou Seco

Sonny Osborne
Joseph "Butch" Robins

Over the Rhine
Sloan Wainwright

Herman Overton
Lauchlin Shaw & A.C. Overton

Buck Owens
Gibson Brothers Band
Emmylou Harris

Pace Jubilee Singers
Washington Phillips

Patti Page
Mary Hopkin

Gabby Pahinui
Keola Beamer
Sonny Chillingworth
Hui Ohana
Moses Kahumoku
George Kahumoku Jr.
Rev. Dennis Kamakahi
Ray Kane
George Kuo
David Lindley
Hui Ohana
The Pahinui Brothers

Jim Paine
Stan Rogers

Zack Paine
Tommy Jarrell

Tom Paley
Tom Chapin

Charlie Parker
Paul Butterfield Blues Band
Marianne Faithfull
Bela Fleck

Chet Parker
Sam Rizzetta

Graham Parker
Paul Kelly
Greg Kihn

Van Dyke Parks
T-Bone Burnett
Harry Nilsson

Alan Parson Project
Al Stewart

Gram Parsons
Richard Buckner
The Eagles
Five Chinese Brothers
Emmylou Harris
Willis Alan Ramsey
Tom Russell

David Schnaufer
Uncle Tupelo
Kevin Welch

Dolly Parton
Kate Jacobs
Alison Krauss
Maria Muldaur

Sandy & Caroline Paton
Sally Rogers

Charley Patton
Rory Block
Jesse Fuller
Son House
Skip James
Robert Johnson
Mississippi Fred McDowell
Tommy Peoples
Bukka White

Les Paul
Chet Atkins

Tom Paxton
Peter Alsop
Eric Bogle
John Denver
Anne Dodson
The Foremen
Bob Franke
Nanci Griffith
Jack Hardy
Ian & Sylvia
Si Kahn
Cindy Kallet
Charlie King
Joel Mabus
Peter, Paul & Mary
Raffi
Fred Small

Pearls Before Swine
Gideon Freudmann

Herb Pedersen
Mark Johnson

Penguin Cafe Orchestra
Gideon Freudmann

Pentangle
Polly Bolton
Clannad
Incredible String Band
Kentucky Standard Band
Susan McKeown & the Chanting House
The Oyster Band

People's International Silver String Band
Boiled in Lead

Matt Peoples
Tommy Peoples

Tommy Peoples
Altan
Sharon Shannon

Carl Perkins
Mark Germino
Butch Hancock
Leo Kottke

Pinetop Perkins
Saffire—The Uppity Blues Women

Peter & Gordon
Iain Matthews

Peter, Paul & Mary
Bok, Muir & Trickett
David Buskin
Emily & Al Cantrell
Chad & Jeremy
Eddie from Ohio
Ian & Sylvia
Christine Lavin
Madeline MacNeil
David Mallett
Neal & Leandra
Rooftop Singers
Paul Simon
Simon & Garfunkel
Sons of the Never Wrong
Paula Joy Welter

Tom Petty
Pete Droge

Bruce "Utah" Phillips
Jody Stecher & Kate Brislin
Kate Wolf

Wilson Pickett
The Chambers Brothers
Ted Hawkins

Pindar Family
Any Old Time String Band

Pioneers
David Lindley

Plank Road
The Chicken Chokers

Planxty
Altan
Arcady
The Bothy Band
Déanta
De Danann
Dervish
Connie Dover
Moving Hearts
Ossian
Patrick Street
Silly Wizard
Wolfstone

Poco
America
Loggins & Messina
Sweethearts of the Rodeo

The Pogues
Black 47
The Mollys

The Police
The Horseflies

Doc Pomus
Carole King

Charlie Poole
The Double Decker String Band
The Holy Modal Rounders
Bascom Lamar Lunsford
Leslie Riddle
Kirk Sutphin

Charlie Poole & the North Carolina Ramblers
The Charles River Valley Boys
Red Clay Ramblers

Cole Porter
Harry Nilsson

Dirk Powell
Will Keys

Bob Prater
Roger Cooper

Vicky Pratt-Keating
Freyda and Acoustic AttaTude

Elvis Presley
Hoyt Axton
Bob Dylan
Butch Hancock
Phil Ochs
Gram Parsons
Linda Ronstadt
Townes Van Zandt

Lee Monroe Presnell
Cordelia's Dad

The Pretenders
Brenda Kahn

Primitive Baptist Hymnal
Ginny Hawker & Kay Justice
Tracy Schwarz & Ginny Hawker

Christine Primrose
Capercaillie

John Prine
Vince Bell
Dan Bern
Chuck Brodsky
Greg Brown
T-Bone Burnett
Cowboy Junkies
Steve Fisher
Alaska's Hobo Jim
Kieran Kane
Mac McAnally
James McMurtry
David Olney
Kristina Olsen
Jennifer Warnes
Susan Werner

Maddy Prior
Connie Dover

Riley Puckett
E.C. Ball and Orna Ball
Darby and Tarlton
John "Seven Foot Dilly" Dilleshaw
The Double Decker String Band
Jimmie Rodgers

Fred Punahoa
Hui Ohana

Frank Quinn
Joe Derrane

R.E.M.
Vic Chesnutt
Crash Test Dummies
Indigo Girls
Eleanor McEvoy

Rafael Rabello
Steve Schneider

Gerry Rafferty
Julian Dawson

Mike Rafferty
Joanie Madden

Ma Rainey
Memphis Jug Band
Judy Roderick
Bessie Smith

Bonnie Raitt
Caroline Aiken
Mary Black
Catie Curtis
Amy Fradon and Leslie Ritter
Keb' Mo'
Katy Moffatt
Les Sampou
The subdudes
Erica Wheeler
Lucinda Williams

Boo Boo Ramey
The Bing Brothers

The Ramones
Cordelia's Dad

Rank & File
Blood Oranges

The Rankin Family
The Barra MacNeils

Raspberries
Freedy Johnston

Byard Ray
Laura Boosinger

Wallace "Cheese" Read
Harry Choates
Magnolia Sisters
Eric & Suzy Thompson

Seymour Rechtzeit
Klezmer Conservatory Band

The Red Clay Ramblers
The Freight Hoppers
Debby McClatchy

Tampa Red
Ry Cooder
Memphis Jug Band

Otis Redding
The Chambers Brothers
Julian Dawson
Ted Hawkins

Jean Redpath
Steve Gillette & Cindy Mangsen

Henry Reed
Hollow Rock String Band
Arnie Naiman & Chris Coole

Jimmy Reed
Grateful Dead
John Hammond Jr.
Albert King
John Pinamonti

Lou Reed
Cowboy Junkies
Brenda Kahn
Greg Kihn
Elliot Murphy

Ola Belle Reed
Ann and Phil Case
George Pegram

Goebel Reeves
Bruce U. "Utah" Phillips

Harvey Reid
Becky Blackley

Django Reinhardt
Glen Campbell
Walter Hyatt
B.B. King
Jon Sholle

Relativity
Nightnoise

John Renbourn
Carrie Crompton
Nick Drake
Carol McComb
Al Petteway
Steve Tilston & Maggie Boyle
Brooks Williams

Don Reno
Tony Ellis
Sandy Rothman & Steve Pottier

Reno & Smiley
Peter Kessler & Gail Fratar

Malvina Reynolds
Peter Alsop
Lui Collins
Pete Seeger

Django Rheinhardt
Richard Thompson

Rice Brothers
Mark Johnson

Tony Rice
Beppe Gambetta
Chesapeake
David Grier
Mike Marshall
Peter McLaughlin
Karen Mueller

Don Rich
Gibson Brothers Band

Zachary Richard
Filé

Nansi Richards
Robin Huw Bowen

Kim Richey
Kate Wallace

Jonathan Richman
Cindy Lee Berryhill
Ed's Redeeming Qualities

Almeda Riddle
Bob Bovee and Gail Heil

Bonnie Rideout
Maggie Sansone

Riders of the Purple Sage Spade Cooley

Steve Riley
Balfa Toujours

Paul Rishell
Les Sampou

Jean Ritchie
Atwater-Donnelly
Mitzie Collins
Shirley Collins
Lorraine (Lee) Hammond
Priscilla Herdman
Anne Hills
Kate MacLeod
Heidi Muller
Sandy & Caroline Paton
Sally Rogers
Kevin Roth
Claudia Schmidt
Peggy Seeger
Michelle Shocked
Rosalie Sorrels
Trapezoid
Susan Trump

The Ritchie Family
Jean Ritchie

Sam Rizzetta
Bob Shank

Marty Robbins
Bill & Bonnie Hearne
Mary McCaslin
Ian Tyson

Doc Roberts
The Chicken Chokers
Buddy Thomas

Eck Robertson
Skip Gorman
The New Lost City Ramblers

Jeannie Robertson
Ewan MacColl
Jean Redpath
Sandy & Caroline Paton

Kim Robertson
Sue Richards

Lonnie Robertson
Fred Stoneking

Paul Robeson
Guy Carawan
Ronnie Gilbert
Bernice Johnson Reagon
Sweet Honey in the Rock

Carson Robison
Blind Alfred Reed
Roy Rogers

Carson Robison & the Pioneers
Sons of the Pioneers

The Roches
The Chenille Sisters
Electric Bonsai Band
Moxy Früvous
Sons of the Never Wrong

Martin Rochford
Kevin Burke
Kevin Crawford

Rockin' Dopsie
Chubby Carrier
Roy Carrier
C.J. Chenier
Zydeco Force

Rockin Sidney
Nathan & the Zydeco Cha Chas

Jerry Rockwell
Les & Gary Gallier

Jimmie Rodgers
Gene Autry
E.C. Ball and Orna Ball
Big Bill Broonzy
Bill Carlisle
Wilf Carter
Johnny Cash
Jimmie Davis
The Delmore Brothers
Ed's Redeeming Qualities
The Flatlanders
Steve Forbert
Lefty Frizzell
Jesse Fuller
Jimmie Dale Gilmore
Butch Hancock
Burl Ives
Grandpa Jones
Bill Monroe & His Blue Grass Boys
Bruce U. "Utah" Phillips
Leon Redbone
Jim Ringer
Paul Siebel
Sons of the Pioneers
James Talley
Happy Traum
Ernest Tubb
Don Walser

Aunty Vickie I'i Rodrigues
Sonny Chillingworth

Aldus Roger
Basin Brothers
Sheryl Cormier
Paul Daigle
Bruce Daigrepont
Zachary Richard
Sundown Playboys

Gamble Rogers
Jimmy Buffett

Garnet Rogers
Stan Rogers

Roy Rogers
Michael Martin Murphey
Tex Ritter
Michael Smith

Stan Rogers
Andrew Calhoun
John Gorka
Priscilla Herdman
James Keelaghan
Grit Laskin
Mad Pudding
Cormac McCarthy
Eileen McGann
Lee Murdock
Garnet Rogers
Sally Rogers

The Rolling Stones
Ry Cooder
Five Chinese Brothers
Grateful Dead

Ronettes
Melanie

Linda Ronstadt
Kathy Chiavola
Amy Fradon and Leslie Ritter
Tish Hinojosa
Claire Lynch
Maura O'Connell
Leslie Tucker

George Frederick Root
Rosamund Campbell

Diana Ross
Amy Fradon and Leslie Ritter

Peter Rowan
Northern Lights

Leo Rowsome
Liam O'Flynn

Michael Rugg
Neal Hellman

Junior Ruggles
Dave Bing
The Bing Brothers

Todd Rundgren
Tom Robinson Band

Runrig
Wolfstone

Otis Rush
Paul Butterfield Blues Band
Buddy Guy

Tom Rush
David Buskin
Mike Cross

Mason Daring
Emmylou Harris
David Rea

Bonnie Russell
David Schnaufer

Kelly Russell
Stan Rogers

Robert Rutland
Robin Kessinger

Sacred Harp Hymnal
Cordelia's Dad

The Marquis de Sade
Patrick Sky

Mort Sahl
Smothers Brothers

Doug Sahm
Kinky Friedman

Buffey Sainte-Marie
Pete Morton

Phil Salazar Band
Acousticats

John Salyer
Bruce Greene
Bruce Molsky
Red Mountain White Trash

Magic Sam
Buddy Guy

Sam the Sham and the Pharoahs
David Lindley

Harvey Sampson
Frank George

Mary Wallin Sands
Doug & Jack Wallin

Sands Family
Tommy Sands

Maggie Sansone
Ceoltoiri

Erik Satie
Enya

Marc Savoy
Geno Delafose
Doris "D.L." Menard

Marc and Ann Savoy
Balfa Toujours

Savoy Doucet Cajun Band
Kristi Guillory
Steve Riley & the Mamou Playboys

Eric Von Schmidt
Chris Smither

David Schnaufer
Les & Gary Gallier
Kentucky Standard Band

Eric Schoenberg
Duck Baker

Marty Schuman
June Maugery

Abe Schwartz Orchestra
Klezmorim

Tracy Schwartz
Balfa Toujours
California Cajun Orchestra
Steve Riley & the Mamou Playboys

Earl Scruggs
Tony Ellis
Bela Fleck
Carl Jackson
Tim Lake
Lonesome River Band
Alan Munde
Don Reno & Red Smiley
Joseph "Butch" Robins
Don Stover
Livingston Taylor

Seachtar
The Bothy Band

Seatrain
Richard Greene

Charles Seeger
Peggy Seeger

Mike Seeger
Becky Blackley
Bryan Bowers
Alan Mager
Carol McComb
Arnie Naiman & Chris Coole

Peggy Seeger
Adie Grey
Sally Rogers

Pete Seeger
Peter Alsop

Lou and Peter Berryman
Theodore "Theo" Bikel
Gordon Bok
Bok, Muir & Trickett
Oscar Brand
Bright Morning Star
Rachel Buchman
Guy Carawan
Harry Chapin
Tom Chapin
Jon Gailmor
Bob Gibson
Arlo Guthrie
Chris Hillman
Ella Jenkins
Si Kahn
Cindy Kallet
Charlie King
The Kingston Trio
Koerner, Ray & Glover
Grit Laskin
Larry Long
David Mallett
Don McLean
Michael Miles
Bill Morrissey
Holly Near
Fred Neil
The New Christy Minstrels
Odetta
Sandy & Caroline Paton
Tom Paxton
Peter, Paul & Mary
David Rea
Bernice Johnson Reagon
Stan Rogers
Tommy Sands
Helen Schneyer
Schooner Fare
Peggy Seeger
Paul Simon
Simon & Garfunkel
Fred Small
Bill Staines
Sweet Honey in the Rock
Glenn Yarbrough

Ruth Crawford Seeger
Peggy Seeger

Bob Seger
Sweethearts of the Rodeo

Andres Segovia
Carrie Crompton
Mason Williams

The Seldom Scene
Chesapeake
Northern Lights
Salamander Crossing

Serendipity Singers
Gamble Rogers

Robert W. Service
Debby McClatchy

Sex Pistols
Mary Jane Lamond
Phranc

Jimmy Shand
Phil Cunningham

L. Shankar
Mark O'Connor

Ravi Shankar
The Byrds
Martin Carthy

Joe Shannon
Liz Carroll

Shape Note Singing
The Chestnut Grove Quartet

Cecil Sharp
Ashley Hutchings

Billy Joe Shaver
Kevin Welch

Colin Shaw
Lauchlin Shaw & A.C. Overton

Shegui
The House Band

Jean Shepherd
Garrison Keillor

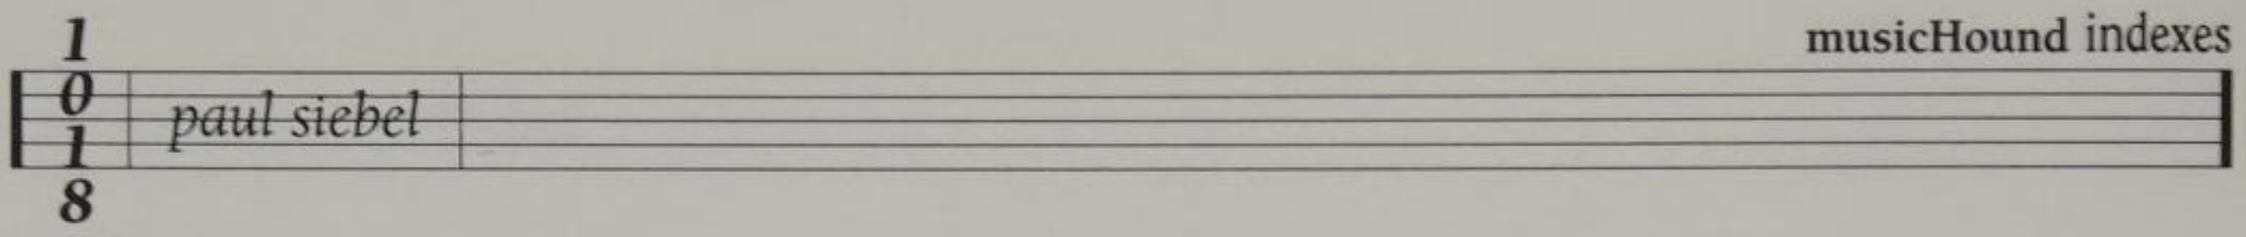
Richard Shindell
Michael McNevin

Shirelles
The Nylons

Michelle Shocked
Luka Bloom
Brenda Kahn

George Shuffler
Sandy Rothman & Steve Pottier
Larry Sparks

Mort Shuman
Carole King



Paul Siebel
Jack Hardy

Sileas
Ensemble Galilei
Sue Richards

Silly Wizard
Battlefield Band
Ceolbeg
Connie Dover
Mad Pudding
Nightnoise
Andy M. Stewart
Wolfstone

Shel Silverstein
Bob Gibson
Trout Fishing in America

Simmons Family
Mill Run Dulcimer Band

Paul Simon
Jim Croce
Mason Daring
Jackson C. Frank
Annie Gallup
Jack Hardy
James Keelaghan
Patty Larkin
Richard Meyer
Buddy Mondlock
Cat Stevens

Simon & Garfunkel
Indigo Girls
Loggins & Messina
Iain Matthews
The Nudes
The Roches
Jeanie Stahl
James Taylor

Nina Simone
Julia Fordham

Frank Sinatra
Tom Waits

Sisters of Mercy
Dead Can Dance

Sixteen Ninety-One
The Bothy Band

Ricky Skaggs
Chesapeake
Gibson Brothers Band
Union Springs

Skara Brae
Trian

Skillet Lickers
Mac Benford
Marvin Gaster
Piney Creek Weasels
Lonnie Robertson

The Skillet Lickers
The Freight Hoppers

Scott Skinner
Old Blind Dogs

Guitar Slim
Buddy Guy

Sly & the Family Stone
Laura Love

Luke Smathers
Laura Boosinger

Quay Smathers
Laura Boosinger

Arthur Smith
Owen "Snake" Chapman
Lyman Enloe

Bessie Smith
Blind Lemon Jefferson
Brenda Kahn
Maria Muldaur
Tracy Nelson
Judy Roderick
Jane Voss

Fiddlin' Arthur Smith
Benton Flippen
Tommy Jackson

Glenn Smith
Alan Freeman
Jake Krack

Huey "Piano" Smith
Dr. John
David Lindley

Mamie Smith
Blind Lemon Jefferson

Michael Smith
David Folks

Patti Smith
Cindy Lee Berryhill
Mary Margaret O'Hara
The Waterboys

Ralph Lee Smith
Madeline MacNeil

Smokey Valley Boys
Benton Flippen

The Smothers Brothers
The Foremen

Hank Snow
Stompin' Tom Connors
Paul Siebel

Kilby Snow
Mike Seeger

Phoebe Snow
Cheryl Wheeler

Leo Soileau
The Balfa Brothers
Joseph Falcon and Cleoma Breaux Falcon
Hackberry Ramblers
"Cheese" Read

Sons of the Pioneers
Gene Autry
Emily & Al Cantrell

Sons of Hawaii
Rev. Dennis Kamakahi
Patsy Montana
Ranch Romance
Riders in the Sky

Rosalee Sorrels
Kate Wolf

J.D. Souther
Kevin Welch

Otis Spann
Mose Allison

Larry Sparks
Sandy Rothman & Steve Pottier

Benny Spellman
Jimmy Buffett

Bill Spence
Cathy Barton and Dave Para
Mitzie Collins
Scott Jackson
Walt Michael
No Strings Attached
Steve Schneider

Joseph Spence
Brooks Williams

Davy Spillane
Tannahill Weavers

Spirit of the West
Mad Pudding

Carl Sprague
Skip Gorman
David Holt

Dusty Springfield
Melanie

Bruce Springsteen
Dan Bern
Black 47
Cowboy Junkies
Iris DeMent
Steve Earle
Cliff Eberhardt
Mark Germino
Patty Griffin
Greg Kihn
Fred Koller
James McMurtry
Ed Pettersen
Runrig
Todd Snider
The Waterboys

Squeeze
Freedy Johnston

Bill Staines
Mason Daring
Nanci Griffith
Mill Run Dulcimer Band

Art Stamper
Jason Carter
Will Keys

Hiram Stamper
Bruce Greene

Peter Stampfel
Michael Hurley

Carter Stanley
Larry Sparks

Ralph Stanley
Bad Livers
Dry Branch Fire Squad
Flatt & Scruggs
Marley's Ghost
Ricky Skaggs

The Stanley Brothers
Delia Bell and Bill Grant
Bill Clifton
The Country Gentlemen
Judith Edelman
Everly Brothers

Front Range
Dick Harrington & Victoria Young
Hazel & Alice
James King
Lonesome River Band
Longview
Stoney Lonesome
Gillian Welch

Lisa Stansfield
Julia Fordham

John Starling
Marley's Ghost

Statesmen
The Hee Haw Gospel Quartet

Andy Statman
Tom Espinola and Lorraine Duisit

Red Steagall
Don Edwards
Waddie Mitchell

George Steele
Dave Bing

Steeleye Span
Robin and Barry Dransfield
Figgy Duff
Ashley Hutchings
Incredible String Band
Jerry Rockwell
Tamarack
The New St. George

Steely Dan
Rickie Lee Jones

Gertrude Stein
k.d. lang

Bunt Stephens
Rafe Stefanini

Cat Stevens
Jim Croce
Dougie MacLean
Carly Simon

BW Stevenson
Steve Fisher

Al Stewart
James Keelaghan
Buddy Mondlock

Alice Stewart
Julie Davis

Andy Stewart
Atwater-Donnelly
Ceolbeg

Belle Stewart
Ewan MacColl

Lucy Stewart
Andy M. Stewart

Wendy Stewart
Sue Richards

Stephen Stills
Dave Mason

Alan Stivell
Patrick Ball
Robin Huw Bowen
Sileas
Sylvia Woods

Frank Stokes
Memphis Minnie

Stone Poneys
Karla Bonoff

Ernest V. "Pop" Stoneman
Darby and Tarlton

Scotty Stoneman
Vassar Clements
Richard Greene

Stoney Lonesome
Kate MacKenzie

Carl Story
Delia Bell and Bill Grant

Don Stover
Mark Johnson

Evan Stover
Jay Ungar & Molly Mason

Norma Stover
Don Stover

Igor Stravinsky
Baltimore Consort
Leo Kottke

Stringbean
John Hartford

Stripling Brothers
Primitive Characters

Uncle Dave Sturgill
Piney Creek Weasels

The Stylistics
Amy Fradon and Leslie Ritter

Sugarbeat
Tony Furtado

Dan Sullivan's Shamrock Band
De Danann

Sundown Playboys
Sheryl Cormier
Aldus Roger

Loy Swaggert
Tina Bergmann

Dave Swarbrick
Sandy Denny

Sweeney's Men
The Bothy Band
Planxty

Sweet
Toshi Reagon

Sweethearts of the Rodeo
The Burns Sisters

June Tabor
Kate Rusby

Taj Mahal
Cephas & Wiggins
Ry Cooder
Ben Harper
Keb' Mo'

Talking Heads
Crash Test Dummies
Timbuk 3

Tampa Red
Bukka White

Jock Tamson's Bairns
Ossian

Tannahill Weavers
Battlefield Band
Runrig

Gid Tanner & His Skillet Lickers
Darby and Tarlton
Fiddle Fever
Earl Johnson
Sam & Kirk McGee

Tapezoid
No Strings Attached

Dave Tarras
The Klezmatics
Klezmorim
Andy Statman

Barry & Holly Tashian
Neal & Leandra

Art Tatum
Mose Allison

Cyril Tawney
Tom Lewis

Alex Taylor
Livingston Taylor

Buddy Taylor
Robert Wilkins

James Taylor
America
Jim Croce
Catie Curtis
John Denver
Steve Fisher
Dan Fogelberg
Michael Johnson
Dougie MacLean
Mac McAnally
Joni Mitchell
Buddy Mondlock
Raffi
Carly Simon
Livingston Taylor
Diane Zeigler

Koko Taylor
Saffire—The Uppity Blues Women

Livingston Taylor
Greg Greenway

Willy Taylor
Kathryn Tickell

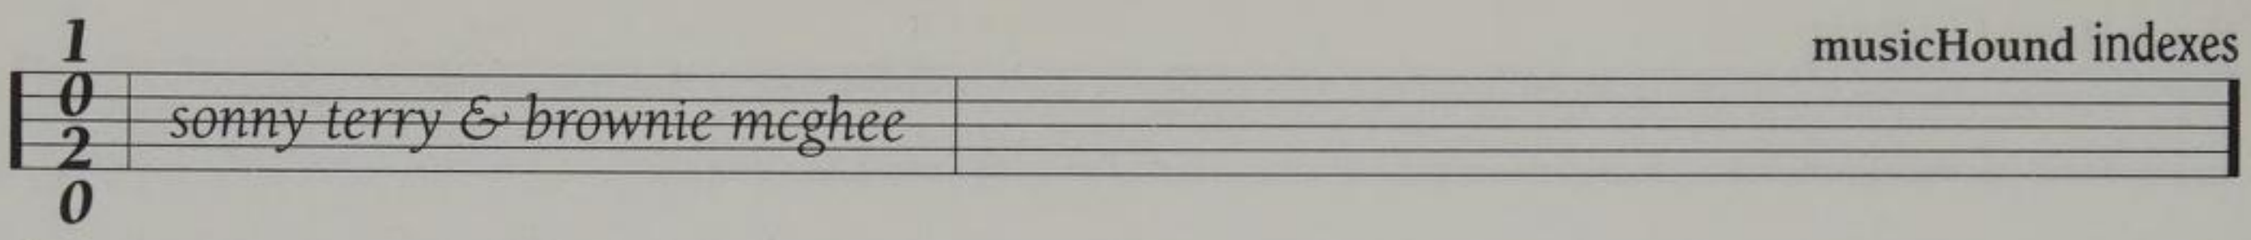
Julie Taymour
Malcolm Dalglish

Terry Teahan
Liz Carroll

Shirley Temple
Mary Hopkin

Tenneva Ramblers
Jimmie Rodgers

Alfred Lord Tennyson
Loreena McKennitt



Sonny Terry & Brownie McGhee
Cephas & Wiggins
Chic Street Man
Koerner, Ray & Glover
"Spider" John Koerner
Van Morrison

Them
Black 47

They Might Be Giants
Big Blow and the Bushwackers

Art Thieme
Scott Alarik
Joel Mabus
Sally Rogers

Buddy Thomas
Roger Cooper

Carla Thomas
Bernice Johnson Reagon

Hociel Thomas
Eric & Suzy Thompson

Irma Thomas
Jimmy Buffett

Linda Thomas & Dan DeLancey
The Plaid Family

Benny Thomasson
Mark O'Connor

Hank Thompson
Ernest Tubb

Linda Thompson
Polly Bolton

Richard Thompson
Scott Appel
Dave Burland
Ebin-Rose
Judith Edelman
Stephen Fearing
David Folks
Clive Gregson
The Kennedys
Jez Lowe
Tom Prasada-Rao

Richard & Linda Thompson
Clive Gregson & Christine Collister
Martin Simpson
Steve Tilston & Maggie Boyle

Big Mama Thornton
Toshi Reagon
Saffire—The Uppity Blues Women

Willa Mae Thornton
Tracy Nelson

Mike Tickell
Kathryn Tickell

Floyd Tillman
Willie Nelson

Timbuk 3
Sons of the Never Wrong

Mark Tindle
Hollis Landrum

C.A. Tindley
Washington Phillips

Toots & the Maytals
Marley's Ghost

Touchstone
Nightnoise

Patsy Touhey
Séamus Ennis
Frankie Gavin
Skylark

Trapezoid
Tony Elman
Tom Espinola and Lorraine Duisit
Freyda and Acoustic AttaTude
Helicon
Kentucky Standard Band
Ken Kolodner
John McCutcheon

Merle Travis
Chet Atkins
E.C. Ball and Orna Ball
Jesse Fuller
Steve Gillette & Cindy Mangsen
Michael Nesmith
Gamble Rogers
Tom Russell
Frank Wakefield
Doc Watson

Ed Trickett
Sara Grey

Jimmy Triplett
Jake Krack

Tony Trischka
Alison Brown
Bela Fleck

Ernest Tubb
Lefty Frizzell
Jack Guthrie

Marshall Tucker
Brooks Williams

Jethro Tull
Nightnoise

Tulla Ceili Band
Martin Hayes
Mick Moloney

Big Joe Turner
Dave Alvin

Bill Turner
John "Seven Foot Dilly" Dilleshaw

Dr. John Turner
Bonnie Rideout

Gil "Jellyroll" Turner
Kate Wolf

Ike & Tina Turner
Bernice Johnson Reagon

Karen Tweed
Sharon Shannon

Two Nice Girls
Phranc

T. Texas Tyler
Bruce U. "Utah" Phillips

Ian Tyson
David Rea
Tamarack

Sylvia Tyson
Anne Hills
Connie Kaldor

Lao Tzu
Loreena McKennitt

U2
The Devlins
Hothouse Flowers

Ukulele Ike
The Cheap Suit Serenaders

Undertones
The Saw Doctors

Paul Van Arsdale
Mitzie Collins
Dan Duggan
John McCutcheon
Bob Shank

Sterl Van Arsdale
Dan Duggan

George Van Eps
Guy Van Duser

Dave Van Ronk
Annie Gallup
Bill & Bonnie Hearne
Brenda Kahn
Koerner, Ray & Glover
Christine Lavin
Peter, Paul & Mary
David Rea
Paul Siebel

Townes Van Zandt
Vince Bell
Guy Clark
Cowboy Junkies
Steve Earle
Jason Eklund
Ray Wylie Hubbard
Robert Earl Keen Jr.
Jimmy LaFave
Lyle Lovett
David Olney
John Pinamonti
Richard Shindell
Eric Taylor
Jerry Jeff Walker
Gillian Welch

Edgar Varese
Michael Hedges

Sarah Vaughan
Judy Austin
Lisa Moscatiello

Suzanne Vega
Luka Bloom
Shawn Colvin
Lucy Kaplansky
Barbara Kessler

Jean-Michel Veillon
Mike Casey

Velvet Underground
Elliot Murphy
Jonathan Richman

Ventures
David Lindley
Phranc
Jonathan Richman

Vern & Ray
Good Ol' Persons

The Violent Femmes
Richard Buckner

Vivaldi
Bare Necessities

Eric Von Schmidt
Greg Kihn
Tom Rush

Loudon Wainwright III
Dan Bern
Christine Lavin

Tom Waits
Dan Bern
Lou and Peter Berryman
Greg Brown
Shawn Colvin
Fred Koller
Peter Mulvey
Suzanne Vega

Frank Wakefield
David Grisman

Jimmy Wakely
Spade Cooley

Charlie Walden
Geoff Seitz

Wendy Waldman
Karla Bonoff

Jerry Jeff Walker
Jimmy Buffett
Guy Clark
Jonathan Edwards
Ray Wylie Hubbard
Michael Martin Murphey

Lawrence Walker
The Balfa Brothers
Balfa Toujours
Basin Brothers
Paul Daigle
Aldus Roger Tracy Schwarz
Jo-El Sonnier
Sundown Playboys

T-Bone Walker
Michael Bloomfield
Clarence "Gatemouth" Brown
Albert Collins
Buddy Guy
Albert King
B.B. King
Jon Sholle

Willie Walker
The Rev. Gary Davis
John Jackson

Gusty Wallace
Bruce Greene

Sippie Wallace
Bonnie Raitt

Fats Waller
Larry Johnson
Red Clay Ramblers
Jeanie Stahl

Berzilla Wallin
Doug & Jack Wallin

Lee Wallin
Doug & Jack Wallin

Little Walter
James Cotton

Bob Walters
Geoff Seitz

Fields and Wade Ward
Paul Brown

Kenneth Ward
Kendra Ward & Bob Bence

Patrick Ward
Séamus Ennis

Warrior River Boys
Johnson Mountain Boys

Washboard Sam
Jim Kweskin & the Jug Band

Isidore "Tuts" Washington
Dr. John

Waterboys
Hothouse Flowers
Peter Mulvey
The Saw Doctors

Linda Waterfall
Heidi Muller

Muddy Waters
Mose Allison
Michael Bloomfield
Paul Butterfield Blues Band
James Cotton
Buddy Guy
Richie Havens
Bob Margolin
Van Morrison
Bonnie Raitt
Timbuk 3

Lal Waterson
June Tabor

The Watersons
Eliza Carthy
Martin Carthy
Robin and Barry Dransfield
Fairport Convention
Jez Lowe
John Roberts & Tony Barrand
Kate Rusby
Steeleye Span
The Voice Squad

Doc Watson
Russ Barenberg
Norman Blake
Dan Crary
Mike Cross
Mike Fenton
Beppe Gambetta
Steve Gillette & Cindy Mangsen
Wayne Henderson
Kathy Kallick
Steve Kaufman
The Kentucky Colonels
Koerner, Ray & Glover
Joel Mabus
Peter McLaughlin
Richard Meyer
Tony Rice
Gamble Rogers
Sandy Rothman & Steve Pottier
Linda Thomas & Dan DeLancey
Guy Van Duser

Doc & Merle Watson
Smith Sisters

Merle Watson
Tony Rice

Alan Watts
Jimmie Dale Gilmore

Curley Weaver
Blind Willie McTell

The Weavers
Bright Morning Star
The Brothers Four
The Clancy Brothers and Tommy Makem
Bruce Cockburn
Bob Dylan
David Folks
Nanci Griffith
Chris Hillman
The Kingston Trio
The Limeliters
Laura Love
Lovin' Spoonful
The Mamas & the Papas
Lee Murdock
The Nitty Gritty Dirt Band
Peter, Paul & Mary
Schooner Fare
Paul Simon
Simon & Garfunkel
Smothers Brothers

Jimmy Webb
Vic Chesnutt
Freedy Johnston
Iain Matthews

Casey B. Weldon
Memphis Minnie

Junior Wells
Buddy Guy

Kitty Wells
Iris DeMent
Carolyn Hester
Jane Voss

Pete Wernick
Hot Rize

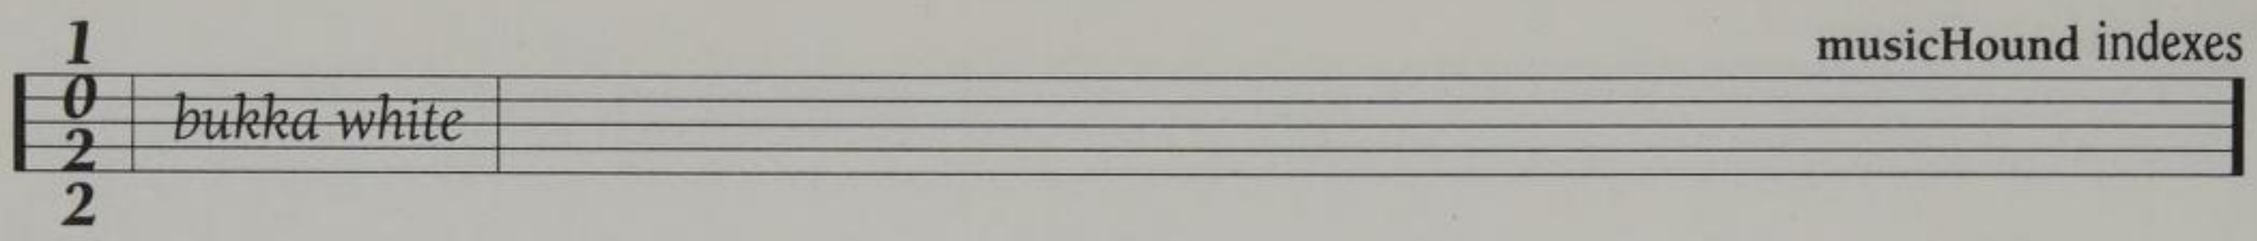
Hedy West
Sara Grey

Cheryl Wheeler
Four Bitchin' Babes
Cosy Sheridan

Jim Wheeler
Dave Bing
The Bing Brothers

Whistlebinkies
Silly Wizard

Whistler Jug Band
Memphis Jug Band



Bukka White
Mike Cross
Jesse Fuller

Clarence White
Dan Crary
Beppe Gambetta
David Grier
Peter McLaughlin
Scott Nygaard
Tony Rice
Sandy Rothman & Steve Pottier
Eric & Suzy Thompson

Jim White
Dock Boggs

Josh White
Steve Goodman
Davey Graham
Sonny Terry & Brownie McGhee
Josh White Jr.

Whites
The Burns Sisters

Slim Whitman
Don Walser

Who
The Nields
Tom Robinson Band

The Wilburn Brothers
The Brother Boys

David Wilcox
Greg Greenway
Pierce Pettis

Wild Asparagus
The American Cafe Orchestra

Wild Tchoupitoulas
The subdudes

George Wilkerson
Tommy Jackson

Robert Wilkins
Memphis Minnie

Bert Williams
Paul Robeson

Big Joe Williams
Koerner, Ray & Glover

Don Williams
Pat Alger

Hank Williams
Terry Allen
Dave Alvin
Eric Andersen
Leonard Cohen
Cowboy Junkies
Bob Dylan
The Eagles
Joe Ely
The Flatlanders
Flying Burrito Brothers
Jimmie Dale Gilmore
Steve Goodman
Clive Gregson & Christine Collister
Chris Hillman
Alaska's Hobo Jim
Michael Jerling
George Jones
Kris Kristofferson
John D. Loudermilk
Marley's Ghost
Doris "D.L." Menard
Roger Miller
Bill Morrissey
Harry Nilsson
Gram Parsons
John Prine
Cathie Ryan
Paul Siebel
Rosalie Sorrels
James Talley
Townes Van Zandt
Don Williams
Steve Young

Victoria Williams
Annie Gallup

Cris Williamson
Ferron

John Lee "Sonny Boy" Williamson
James Cotton
Paul Butterfield Blues Band
Sonny Terry & Brownie McGhee
Van Morrison

Sonny Boy Williamson II
Mose Allison

Bob Wills
Asleep at the Wheel
Tina Louise Barr
Milton Brown and the Musical Brownies
Harry Choates
Commander Cody & His Lost Planet Airmen
Steve Goodman
Alaska's Hobo Jim
Walter Hyatt
Marley's Ghost
Roger Miller

Bob Wills & His Texas Playboys
Acousticats
Fiddle Fever
Kinky Friedman
James Talley
Don Walser

Jackie Wilson
Van Morrison

Mari Wilson
Julia Fordham

Teddy Wilson
Guy Van Duser

Willie Wilson
Son House

Jesse Winchester
Marley's Ghost

Melvin Wine
Jake Krack
Rhythm Rats

Mary Wings
Robin Flower

Neil Winston
Mississippi Sheiks

Paul Winter
Scott Cossu
Pete Seeger

"Chubby" Wise
Jason Carter
Stuart Duncan

Mac Wiseman
The Cox Family
Flatt & Scruggs
Gibson Brothers Band

Silly Wizard
Old Blind Dogs

Howlin' Wolf
Taj Mahal

Kate Wolf
Acousticats
Kat Eggleston
Kimberly M'Carver
Leslie Tucker

Hally Wood
Sandy & Caroline Paton

Sylvia Woods
Robin Williamson

The Woodstock Mountain Revue
Fiddle Fever

Sheb Wooley
Roger Miller

XIT
Bill Miller

X-Ray Spex
Brenda Kahn

XTC
Crash Test Dummies
Freedy Johnston

Yankee Ingenuity
The American Cafe Orchestra

Grainne Yeats
Maire Ni Chathasaigh

William Butler Yeats
Carly Simon

Yellow Magic Orchestra
David Lindley

Dwight Yoakam
Richard Buckner
Connie Dover

Neil Young
Pete Droge
Fred Eaglesmith
Stephen Fearing
Amy Fradon and Leslie Ritter
Ben Harper
Bill Miller
Tamarack
Uncle Tupelo

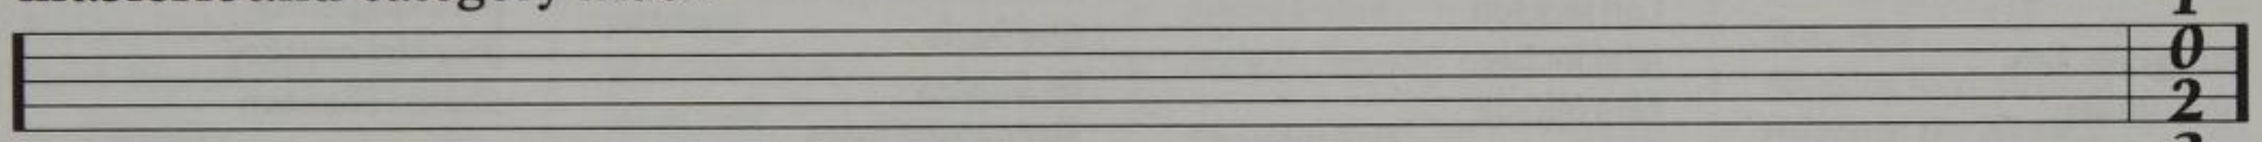
Young Olympia Brass Band
The ReBirth Brass Band

Young Tradition
Shirley Collins
Steeleye Span
The Watersons

Frank Zappa
Austin Lounge Lizards
The Foremen
Psychograss

Roxanne Ziegler
Mitzie Collins

musicHound category index



The Category Index represents an array of categories put together to suggest some of the many groupings under which folk music and folk acts can be classified. The Hound welcomes your additions to the existing categories in this index and also invites you to send in your own funny, sarcastic, prolific, poignant, or exciting ideas for brand new categories.

A Cappella
The Nylons
Voice Squad

All Dry
Bayou Seco

All Wet
Atwater-Donnelly
Dock Boggs
Tim Lake
Mill Run Dulcimer Band
Salamander Crossing
Waterboys/Mike Scott
Muddy Waters
Watersons
Kitty Wells

All in the Family
Amidons
Basin Brothers
Bing Brothers
Black Family
Blue Sky Boys
Brothers Four
Buckhannon Brothers
Burns Sisters
Carter Family
Chenille Sisters
Clancy Brothers and Tommy Makem
Copper Family
Cox Family
Delmore Brothers
Dillards
Everly Brothers
Five Chinese Brothers
Forbes Family
Gibson Brothers
Jim and Jesse
Grandpa Jones
Lewis Family
Lilly Brothers
Louvin Brothers
Maddox Brothers and Rose
Magnolia Sisters
Mamas and the Papas
Kate and Anna McGarrigle
The Nields
Osborne Brothers
Pahinui Brothers
Plaid Family
Rankin Family
Russell Family
Smith Sisters
Sons of the Never Wrong
Sons of the Pioneers
Stanley Brothers
Staple Singers/Pop Staples
Whitstein Brothers

And Now for Something Completely Different Brave Combo
Cheap Suit Serenaders
Gideon Freudman
Dan Hicks and His Hot Licks
Jim Jugband Kweskin
Waddie Mitchell
Sunshine Skiffle Band

And Very Funny
Les Barker
Lou and Peter Berryman
Mike Cross
Four Bitchin' Babes
Kinky Friedman
Holy Modal Rounders
Michael Hurley
Garrison Keillor
Christine Lavin
Shel Silverstein
Smothers Brothers
Cheryl Wheeler

Aptly Named
David Buskin
David Folks

At Sea
Hesperus
Schooner Fare

Autoharp
Judy Austin
Tina Louise Barr
Becky Blackley
Bryan Bowers
Tom Chapin
Bill Clifton
Julie Davis
Mike Fenton
Les Gustafson-Zook
Alan Mager
June Maugery
Karen Mueller
Harvey Reid
Ernest "Pop" Stoneman

Bathroom Fixtures
Basin Brothers
Dr. John
Canray Fontenot
Ernest Tubb

Bible-Toting Viennese Psychiatrists
Gideon Freudman

Blasts from the Past
Eric Andersen
Joan Baez
Harry Belafonte
Theo Bikel
Brothers Four
John Denver
Tim Hardin
Richie Havens
Carolyn Hester
Holy Modal Rounders
Kingston Trio
Limeliters/Glen Yarbrough
Mamas and the Papas
Melanie

Chad Mitchell Trio
Fred Neil
New Christy Minstrels
Peter and Gordon
Paul Robeson
Judy Roderick
Rooftop Singers
Seals and Crofts
Patrick Sky
Smothers Brothers
Cat Stevens
Glen Yarbrough

Bluegrass Acts
Acousticats
All Girl Boys
Blue Highway
Bluegrass Cardinals
Boone Creek
Boys from Indiana
Charles River Valley Boys
Chesapeake
Country Gentlemen
Dillards
Dry Branch Fire Squad
Flatt and Scruggs
Front Range
Gibson Brothers
Good Old Persons
Greenbriar Boys
Hot Rize
Jim and Jesse
Johnson Mountain Boys
Kentucky Colonels
Alison Krauss
Laurel Canyon Ramblers/Herb Pederson
Doyle Lawson and Quicksilver
Laurie Lewis
Lewis Family
Lilly Brothers
Lonesome River Band
Lonesome Standard Time
Longview
Jimmy Martin
Del McCoury
Bill Monroe
Lynn Morris/The Lynn Morris Band
Muleskinner
Nashville Bluegrass Band
New Grass Revival
Northern Lights
Osborne Brothers
Psychograss
Don Reno and Red Smiley
Salamander Crossing
Seldom Scene
Special Consensus
Stanley Brothers
Stoney Lonesome
Union Springs
The Whites

Bluegrass Banjo Players
Alison Brown
J.D. Crowe
Béla Fleck
Tony Furtado
Carl Jackson
John McEuen
Alan Munde
Don Reno and Red Smiley
Butch Robins
Don Stover
Tony Trischka

Bluegrass Fiddlers
Kenny Baker
Byron Berline
Luke Bulla and Jenny Anne
Jason Carter
Vassar Clements
Stuart Duncan
Richard Greene
Tommy Jackson
Alison Krauss
Laurie Lewis
Tim O'Brien
Mark O'Connor
Chubby Wise

Bluegrass Patriarchs
Flatt and Scruggs
Jimmy Martin
Bill Monroe
Ralph Stanley

Bluegrass Vocalists
Harley "Red" Allen
Bill Clifton
Jim Eanes
James King
Jimmy Martin
Bill Monroe
Tim O'Brien
Peter Rowan
Larry Sparks
Ralph Stanley
Mac Wiseman

Blues Legends
Luther Allison
Mose Allison
Pink Anderson
Blind Blake
Rory Block
Michael Bloomfield
Roy Book Binder
Big Bill Broonzy
Clarence "Gatemouth" Brown
Paul Butterfield Blues Band
John Cephas and Phil Wiggins
Eric Clapton
Albert Collins
Ry Cooder
James Cotton
Reverend Gary Davis
Guy Davis
Bo Diddley
Sleepy John Estes
Sue Foley
Jesse Fuller
Buddy Guy
John Hammond
Ted Hawkins
John Lee Hooker
Lightnin' Hopkins
Hot Tuna
Son House
Mississippi John Hurt
John Jackson
Skip James
Blind Lemon Jefferson
Blind Willie Johnson
Larry Johnson
Robert Johnson
Albert King
B.B. King
Ray and Glover Koerner
Leadbelly
Furry Lewis
Mance Lipscomb
Taj Mahal
Steady Rollin' Bob Margolin
Fred McDowell
Blind Willie McTell
Memphis Minnie
Mississippi Sheiks
Charley Patton
Roy Rogers
Bessie Smith
Joseph Spence
Sonny Terry and Brownie McGhee
Henry Thomas
Muddy Waters
Bukka White
Josh White
Robert Wilkins

Body Parts
Figgy Duff
Adrian Legg
Gordon Lightfoot
Mouth Music
Moving Hearts
Rick Thum

Bouzouki
Andy Irvine

Box Players
Jackie Daly
Joe Derrane
John Kirkpatrick
Billy McComiskey
Sharon Shannon

The Buck Stops Here
Rachel Buchman
Buckhannon Brothers
Jeff Buckley
Richard Buckner
Johnny Cash
Rosanne Cash
Jez Lowe/The Bad Pennies
Phranc

Cajun/Zydeco
Nathan Abshire
Alphonse "Bois Sec" Ardoin
Amédée Ardoin
Chris Ardoin
Lynn August
Balfa Brothers
Balfa Toujours
Basin Brothers
Beausoleil
Buckwheat Zydeco
California Cajun Orchestra
Chubby Carrier
Roy Carrier
Boozoo Chavis
C.J. Chenier
Clifton Chenier
Harry Choates
Sheryl Cormier
Paul Daigle
Bruce Daigrepont
Geno Delafose
John Delafose
Rockin' Dopsie
David Doucet
Joe Falcon and Cleoma Breaux
Filé
Canray Fontenot
Keith Frank
Kristi Guillory
Hackberry Ramblers
Beau Jocque

Doug Kershaw
Eddie LeJeune
Iry LeJeune
Magnolia Sisters
Dennis McGee
D.L. Menard
Nathan and the Zydeco Cha Chas
Jimmy C. Newman
Willis Prudhomme
Queen Ida
Wallace Cheese Read
Zachary Richard
Steve Riley and the Mamou Playboys
Aldus Roger
Mark Savoy/Savoy-Doucet Cajun Band
Tracy Schwarz/Tracy Schwarz Cajun Trio
Rockin' Sidney
Leo Soileau
Jo-El Sonnier
Sundown Playboys
Tasso
Horace Trahan
Lawrence Walker
Zydeco Force

Celtic Bands
Altan
Arcady
Barra MacNeils
Battlefield Band
Black Family
Bothy Band
Boys of the Lough
Capercaillie
Ceolbeg
Ceoltoiri
Cherish the Ladies
Chieftains
Clannad
De Dannan
Déanta
Dervish
Dubliners
Figgy Duff
Helicon
House Band
Irish Rovers
Irish Tradition
Johnstons
Moving Hearts
New St. George
Nightnoise
Ossian
Patrick Street
Planxty
The Pogues
Rankin Family
Runrig
Shooglenifty
Silly Wizard
Skyedance
Skylark
Solas
Tannahill Weavers
Trian
Whirligig
Whistlebinkies
Wolfstone

Celtic Banjo Players
Mick Moloney

Celtic Fiddlers
Jenny Allinder
Kevin Burke
Liz Carroll
Michael Coleman
John Cunningham
Alasdair Fraser
Frankie Gavin
Martin Hayes
Jerry Holland
Eileen Ivers
Ashley MacIsaac
Buddy MacMaster
Natalie MacMaster
Eugene O'Donnell
Tommy Peoples
Bonnie Rideout

Celtic Harp
Patrick Ball
Derek Bell
Robert Huw Bowen
Ceoltoiri
Alison Kinnaird
Magical Strings
Mary O'Hara
Sue Richards
Kim Robertson
Sileas
Alan Stivell
Carol Thompson
Robin Williamson
Sylvia Woods

Celtic Pipers
Liam O'Flynn
Kathryn Tickell

Celtic Songbirds
Mary Black
Rita Connolly
Connie Dover
Enya
Dolores Keane
Eleanor McEvoy
Loreena McKennitt
Lisa Moscatiello
Maire Ni Chathasigh
Maura O'Connell
Jean Redpath

Celtic Troubadors
Archie Fisher
Andy M. Stewart

Chamber Folk
Amazing Blondel
Pentangle

Checkmate
Joni Bishop
Albert King
B.B. King
Carole King
Charlie King
James King
Queen Ida

Colorful
Harley "Red" Allen
Amazing Blondel
Pink Anderson
Mary Black
Black Family
Black 47
Becky Blackley
Blood Oranges
Blue Highway
Blue Sky Boys
Bluegrass Cardinals
Alison Brown
Clarence "Gatemouth" Brown
Greg Brown
Herschel Brown
Milton Brown
Paul Brown
Jackson Browne
Golden Gate Quartet
Greenbriar Boys
Bruce Greene
Richard Greene
Greg Greenway
Adie Grey
Sara Grey
Indigo Girls
Red Foley
Blind Lemon Jefferson
Limeliters/Glen Yarbrough
Plaid Family
Red Clay Ramblers
Red Mountain White Trash
Leon Redbone
Otis Redding
Jean Redpath

Contra Bands
American Cafe Orchestra
Bare Necessities

Country Crossovers
Pat Alger
Terry Allen
Amazing Rhythm Aces
Asleep at the Wheel
Chet Atkins
Austin Lounge Lizards
Hoyt Axton
Delia Bell and Bill Grant
Joni Bishop
Blasters
Brother Boys
Glen Campbell
Mary Chapin Carpenter
Rosanne Cash
Vic Chesnutt
Kathy Chiavola
Cindy Church
Guy Clark
Commander Cody and His Lost Planet Airmen
Stompin' Tom Connors
Iris DeMent
Steve Earle
Joe Ely
Flatlanders
Rosie Flores
Flying Burrito Brothers
Kinky Friedman
Jimmie Dale Gilmore
Vern Gosdin
Tom T. Hall
Butch Hancock
John Wesley Harding
Emmylou Harris
Chris Hillman/Desert Rose Band
Tish Hinojosa
Hobo Jim
Ray Wylie Hubbard
George Jones
Kieran Kane
Robert Earl Keen
Fred Koller
Kris Kristofferson
John D. Loudermilk
Lyle Lovett

Kathy Mattea
James McMurtry
Buddy Miller
Roger Miller
Michael Martin Murphy
Willie Nelson
Gram Parsons
Ed Pettersen
Ricky Skaggs
James Talley
Ian Tyson
Don Williams
Steve Young

Country Legends
Roy Acuff
Gene Autry
Blue Sky Boys
Milton Brown
Bill Carlisle/Cliff Carlisle
Wilf Carter/Montana Slim
Carter Family
Johnny Cash
Chuck Wagon Gang
Spade Cooley
Wilma Lee and Stoney Cooper
Darby and Tarlton
Jimmie Davis
Delmore Brothers
John "Seven Foot Dilly" Dilleshaw
Red Foley
Lefty Frizzell
Homer and Jethro
Hoosier Hot Shots
Frank Hutchison
Johnnie and Jack
Grandpa Jones
Louvin Brothers
Uncle Dave Macon
Maddox Brothers and Rose
Sam and Kirk McGee
Emmitt Miller
Patsy Montana
Molly O'Day
Charlie Poole
Riley Puckett
Tex Ritter
Carson Robison and His Pioneers
Jimmie Rodgers
Sons of the Pioneers
Stringbean, a.k.a. David Akeman
Merle Travis
Ernest Tubb
Kitty Wells
Hank Williams
Bob Wills

Denominational
Joni Bishop
Frank Christian
Cindy Church
Mike Cross
Marianne Faithfull
Holy Modal Rounders
Gram Parsons
Buffy Sainte-Marie

Didgeridoo
Big Blow and the Bushwhackers

Divas
Polly Bolton
Tracy Chapman
Judy Collins
Marianne Faithfull
Ronnie Gilbert
Emmylou Harris
Kathy Mattea
Maria Muldaur
Holly Near
Tracy Nelson
Helen Schneyer
Rosalie Sorrels
Jennifer Warnes

Dobro
Jerry Douglas
Sally Van Meter

Duos
Atwater-Donnelly
E.C. and Orna Ball
Cathy Barton and Dave Para
Delia Bell and Bill Grant
Lou and Peter Berryman
Norman and Nancy Blake
Blue Sky Boys
Bob Bovee and Gail Heil
Brother Boys
Buckhannon Brothers
Luke and Jenny Anne Bulla
Emily and Al Cantrell
Bill Carlisle/Cliff Carlisle
Ann and Phil Case
Chad & Jeremy
Wilma Lee and Stoney Cooper
Josh Crowe & David McLaughlin
Darby and Tarlton
Delmore Brothers
disappear fear
Barry Dransfield/Robin Dransfield
Joe Falcon and Cleoma Breaux
Cathy Fink and Marcy Marxer
Amy Fradon and Leslie Ritter
J.P. and Annadeene Fraley
Gary and Les Gallier
Steve Gillette and Cindy Mangsen
Clive Gregson and Christine Collister
Dick Harrington and Victoria Young Ginny Hawker and Kay Justice
Hazel and Alice
Bill and Bonnie Hearne
Homer and Jethro
Ian & Sylvia
Johnnie and Jack
Carol Elizabeth Jones and James Leva
Diane Jones and Hubie King
Pete and Maura Kennedy
Peter Kessler and Gail Fratar
La Lugh
Lorraine Lee and Bennett Hammond
Leftwich and Higginbotham Loggins and Messina
Louvin Brothers
Magpie
Kate and Anna McGarrigle
Sam and Kirk McGee
Mouth Music
Arnie Naiman and Chris Coole
Neal and Leandra
Sandy and Caroline Paton
Cliff Perry and Laurel Bliss
Peter and Gordon
Jim Ringer and Mary McCaslin
John Roberts and Tony Barrand
Kate Rusby and Kathryn Roberts
Tracy Schwarz & Ginny Hawker
Seals and Crofts
Smith Sisters
Smothers Brothers
Jody Stecher and Kate Brislin
The Story
Barry and Holly Tashian
Eric and Suzy Thompson
Steve Tilston and Maggie Boyle
Jay Ungar and Molly Mason
Whitstein Brothers
Robin and Linda Williams

Early Music
Baltimore Consort
Ensemble Galilei
Hesperus

English Fiddlers
Eliza Carthy
Dave Swarbrick

English Traditional Vocalists
Frankie Armstrong
Anne Briggs
Dave Burland
Martin Carthy
Shirley Collins
Copper Family
A.L. Lloyd
Ewan MacColl
June Tabor
Watersons
Young Tradition

Feel the Heat
Boiled Buzzards
Boiled in Lead
Oscar Brand
Dry Branch Fire Squad
Lightnin' Hopkins
Hot Rize
Hot Tuna
Hothouse Flowers
Larry Sparks
Don Stover

Flora
Luka Bloom
Michael Bloomfield
Hugh Blumenfeld
Bryan Bowers
Sam Bush
Vic Chesnutt
Ebin-Rose
Rosie Flores
Robin Flower
Michael Hedges
Hothouse Flowers
The Leaves
Lilly Brothers
Magnolia Sisters
Holly Near
New Grass Revival
Phil Ochs
Sylvia Woods

Flute
Kevin Locke
Matt Molloy

Chris Norman

Folk Legends
Joan Baez
Harry Belafonte
Theo Bikel
Oscar Brand
Brothers Four
Judy Collins
John Denver
Lonnie Donegan
Donovan
Bob Dylan
Rambling Jack Elliott
Four Preps
Art Garfunkel
Bob Gibson
Ronnie Gilbert
Steve Goodman
Arlo Guthrie
Woody Guthrie
Cisco Houston
Ian & Sylvia
Burl Ives
Kingston Trio
Gordon Lightfoot
Limeliters/Glen Yarbrough
Joni Mitchell
Phil Ochs
Odetta
Tom Paxton
Peter, Paul and Mary
Bruce U. "Utah" Phillips
Tom Rush
Buffy Sainte-Marie
Pete Seeger
Simon and Garfunkel
Dave Van Ronk
Glen Yarbrough

Folk Rock
America
Joan Armatrading
Artisan
Blood Oranges
Luka Bloom
Blowzabella
Boiled in Lead
Polly Bolton
Billy Bragg
Tim Buckley
The Byrds
Chad & Jeremy
Christine Collister
Shawn Colvin
Crash Test Dummies
Dead Can Dance
Sandy Denny
Fairport Convention
Marianne Faithfull
Jackson C. Frank
Clive Gregson
Hothouse Flowers
Incredible String Band
Indigo Girls
Laura Love
Jez Lowe/The Bad Pennies
The Mollys
Mr. Fox/Bob Pegg
Oyster Band
Steeleye Span
Syd Straw
Waterboys/Mike Scott

Food for Thought
Scott Appel
Cindy Lee Berryhill
Lou and Peter Berryman
Buckwheat Zydeco
Jimmy Buffett
T-Bone Burnett
Paul Butterfield Blues Band
Chuck Wagon Gang
Country Ham
Country Joe and the Fish
Figgy Duff
Filé
Flying Burrito Brothers
Free Hot Lunch
Hackberry Ramblers
Hot Rize
Hot Tuna
Blind Lemon Jefferson
Wallace Cheese Read
Tony Rice
Stringbean, a.k.a. David Akeman
Sweet Honey in the Rock

Gospel Greats
E.C. and Orna Ball
Chestnut Grove Quartet
Chuck Wagon Gang
Fairfield Four
Forbes Family
Golden Gate Quartet
Hee Haw Gospel Quartet
Doyle Lawson and Quicksilver
Lewis Family
Washington Phillips
Staple Singers/Pop Staples
Sweet Honey in the Rock
Sister Rosetta Tharpe
IIIrd Tyme Out

Guitar Wizards
Scott Appel
Chet Atkins
Duck Baker
Etta Baker
Russ Barenberg
Pierre Bensusan
Norman Blake
Blind Blake
Rory Block
Michael Bloomfield
Roy Book Binder
David Bromberg
Big Bill Broonzy
Clarence "Gatemouth" Brown
Bob Brozman
John Cephas and Phil Wiggins
Eric Clapton
Albert Collins
Ry Cooder
Elizabeth Cotten
Dan Crary
Guy Davis
Reverend Gary Davis
Bo Diddley
Nick Drake
John Fahey
Sue Foley
Beppe Gambetta
Dick Gaughan
Paul Geremia
Davey Graham
David Grier
Stefan Grossman
John Hammond
Michael Hedges
Wayne Henderson
John Lee Hooker
Lightnin' Hopkins
Hot Tuna
Son House
Mississippi John Hurt
John Jackson
Skip James
Bert Jansch
Blind Lemon Jefferson
John Jennings
Blind Willie Johnson
Larry Johnson
Robert Johnson
Steve Kaufman
Pete Kennedy
Robin Kessinger
Albert King
B.B. King
Leo Kottke
Leadbelly
Adrian Legg
Mance Lipscomb
Joel Mabus
Fred McDowell
Peter McLaughlin
Scott Nygaard
Mark O'Connor
Charley Patton
Gayla Drake Paul
Al Petteway
Leon Redbone
Harvey Reid
John Renbourn
Tony Rice
Roy Rogers
Sandy Rothman & Steve Pottier
Martin Simpson
Chris Smither
Larry Sparks
Joseph Spence
Hans Theessink
Eric and Suzy Thompson
Richard Thompson
Artie Traum
Happy Traum
Merle Travis
Guy Van Duser
Doc Watson
Brooks Williams

Hammered Dulcimer
Karen Ashbrook
Cathy Barton and Dave Para
Tina Bergmann
Guy Carawan
Ceoltoiri
Mitzie Collins
Carrie Crompton
Malcolm Dalglish
Dan Duggan
Tony Elman
Scott Jackson
Ken Kolodner
Maddie MacNeil
Magical Strings
John McCutcheon
Walt Michael
No Strings Attached
Sam Rizzetta
Maggie Sansone
Steve Schneider
Bob Shank
Jerry Read Smith
Bill Spence
Linda Thomas and Dan DeLancey

Rick Thum
Trapezoid
Kendra Ward/Bob Bence
Joemy Wilson

Healthy
Elaine Purkey
Moving Hearts

Healthy (not!)
Bad Livers
Caroline Aiken
Fiddle Fever
Dead Can Dance
Mississippi John Hurt

Huh?
Asleep at the Wheel
Dead Can Dance
Ed's Redeeming Qualities
Five Chinese Brothers
Moxy Früvous
Nudes
Phranc
Rude Girls
Shooglenifty
Sons of the Never Wrong
Chic Street Man

Hyperbole
Amazing Blondel
Amazing Rhythm Aces
Incredible String Band

I Can See You!
Keola Beamer
Fletcher Bright
Bright Morning Star
Sunshine Skiffle Band

Irish Pipers
Seamus Ennis

Klezmer
Klezmatics
Klezmer Conservatory Band
Klezmorim
Andy Statman

The Ladies of Bluegrass
All Girl Boys
Kathy Kallick
Alison Krauss
Laurie Lewis
Claire Lynch
Kate MacKenzie

Mandolin Greats
Buckhannon Brothers
Sam Bush
Rudy Cipolla
Tom Espinola and Lorraine Duisit
Skip Gorman
David Grisman
Jim and Jesse
Mando Mafia
Evan Marshall
Mike Marshall
Tim O'Brien
Peter Ostroushko
Andy Statman
Chris Thile
Joe Val
Frank Wakefield
Radim Zenkl

Mentally Disturbed
Iris DeMent
Benton Flippen
Joanie Madden
Psychograss
Strange Creek Singers

Modern Day Cowboys
Gene Autry
Don Edwards
Waddie Mitchell
Michael Martin Murphy
Riders in the Sky

Mountain Dulcimer
Atwater/Donnelly
Rosamund Campbell
Mike Casey
Richard and Mimi Fariña
Alan Freeman
Gary and Les Gallier
Adie Grey
Lorraine Lee and Bennett Hammond
Neal Hellman
Lois Hornbostel
Kentucky Standard Band
Hollis Landrum
Margaret MacArthur
Maddie MacNeil
David Massengill
Mill Run Dulcimer Band
Heidi Muller
Mark Nelson
Don Pedi
Jean Ritchie
Jerry Rockwell
Sally Rogers
Kevin Roth
Russell Family
David Schnaufer
Betty Smith
Susan Trump

Needs to Eat Less
Big Bill Broonzy
Chubby Carrier
Chubby Wise

Needs to Eat More
Flaco Jimenez
Don McLean
Fred Small
Judy Small

Not So Colorful
Ralph Blizard
Bukka White
Josh White
Josh White Jr.
The Whites

Old Time Bands
Any Old Time Stringband
Bayou Seco
Bing Brothers
Boiled Buzzards
Camp Creek Boys
Chicken Chokers
Country Ham
Critton Hollow
Deseret String Band
Double Decker String Band
Farmer's Daughters
Freight Hoppers
Fuzzy Mountain String Band
Hollow Rock String Band
Horseflies
Mill Run Dulcimer Band
New Lost City Ramblers
Piney Creek Weasels
Primitive Characters
Red Clay Ramblers
Red Mountain White Trash
Rhythm Rats
Skeeter and the Skidmarks
Skillet Lickers
Strange Creek Singers

Old Time Banjo Players
Clarence (Tom) Ashley
Cathy Barton and Dave Para
Mac Benford
Dock Boggs
Laura Boosinger
Pap Brewer
Paul Brown
Bob Carlin
Dwight Diller
Tony Ellis
Wayne Erbsen
Cathy Fink/Cathy Fink and Marcy Marxer
Marvin Gaster
Frank George
Sara Grey
Roscoe Holcomb
David Holt
Mark Johnson
Diane Jones and Hubie King
Grandpa Jones
Will Keys
Walt Koken
Bascom Lamar Lunsford
Joel Mabus
Uncle Dave Macon
Michael Miles
Arnie Naiman and Chris Coole
George Pegram
Ken Perlman
Mike Seeger
Morgan Sextons

Old Time Fiddlers
Dave Bing
Ralph Blizard
Fletcher Bright
James Bryan
Snake Chapman
Roger Cooper
Wilson Douglas
Lyman Enloe
Benton Flippen
J.P. Fraley/J.P. and Annadeene
Skip Gorman
Bruce Greene
Ed Haley
John Hartford
Tommy Jarrell
Earl Johnson
Jake Krack
Brad Leftwich/Leftwich and Higginbotham
Bruce Molsky
Dirk Powell
Lonnie Robertson
Geoff Seitz
Mark Simos
Lynn "Chirps" Smith
Rafe Stefanini
Fred Stoneking
Pete Sutherland
Kirk Sutphin
Buddy Thomas

On the Map
America
American Cafe Orchestra

Arcady
Dan Bern
Boys from Indiana
Cache Valley Drifters
Charles River Valley Boys
Chesapeake
Critton Hollow
John Denver
Connie Dover
Dubliners
Eddie from Ohio
Joe Ely
Five Chinese Brothers
Front Range
Annie Gallup
Golden Gate Quartet
John Hartford
Jerry Holland
Hoosier Hot Shots
Cisco Houston
Mississippi John Hurt
Kentucky Colonels
Kentucky Standard Band
Kingston Trio
Laurel Canyon Ramblers
Uncle Dave Macon
Taj Mahal
Memphis Jug Band
Memphis Minnie
Mississippi Sheiks
Patsy Montana
Nashville Bluegrass Band
Patrick Street
Bruce U. "Utah" Phillips
Washington Phillips
Piney Creek Weasels
Don Reno & Red Smiley
Strange Creek Singers
Union Springs
Woodstock Mountains Revue

Professional Artisan
Dock Boggs
Roy Book Binder
Pap Brewer
Mary Chapin Carpenter
Chieftains
Crash Test Dummies
Foremen
John Forster
Ben Harper
Hobo Jim
John Lee Hooker
Albert King
B.B. King
Carole King
Charlie King
James King
Mando Mafia
Mike Marshall
Dave Mason
Bill Miller
Buddy Miller
Ed Miller
Emmitt Miller
Roger Miller
Muleskinner
Queen Ida
Saw Doctors
Skillet Lickers
Doc Watson

Real Gems
Jewel
Garnet Rogers
Saffire

Rock Crossover
The Band
Cindy Lee Berryhill
Black 47
Karla Bonoff
Brave Combo
Jeff Buckley
Buffalo Springfield
Jimmy Buffett
T-Bone Burnett
J.J. Cale
Bruce Cockburn
Cordelia's Dad
Country Joe and the Fish
Cowboy Junkies
Crosby, Still, Nash and Young
The Eagles
Everly Brothers
Dan Fogelberg
The Fugs
Grateful Dead
Dan Hicks and His Hot Licks
Rickie Lee Jones
Carole King
k.d. lang
The Leaves
Loggins and Messina/Kenny Loggins
Lovin' Spoonful
Sarah McLachlan
Tracy Nelson
Michael Nesmith
Harry Nilsson
Kelly Joe Phelps
Bonnie Raitt
Otis Redding
Linda Ronstadt
The subdudes
Uncle Tupelo/Son Volt/Wilco
Jesse Winchester
Jesse Colin Young
Neil Young

Should Get Together
Will Keys and Kevin Locke Grit Laskin and Tommy Sands

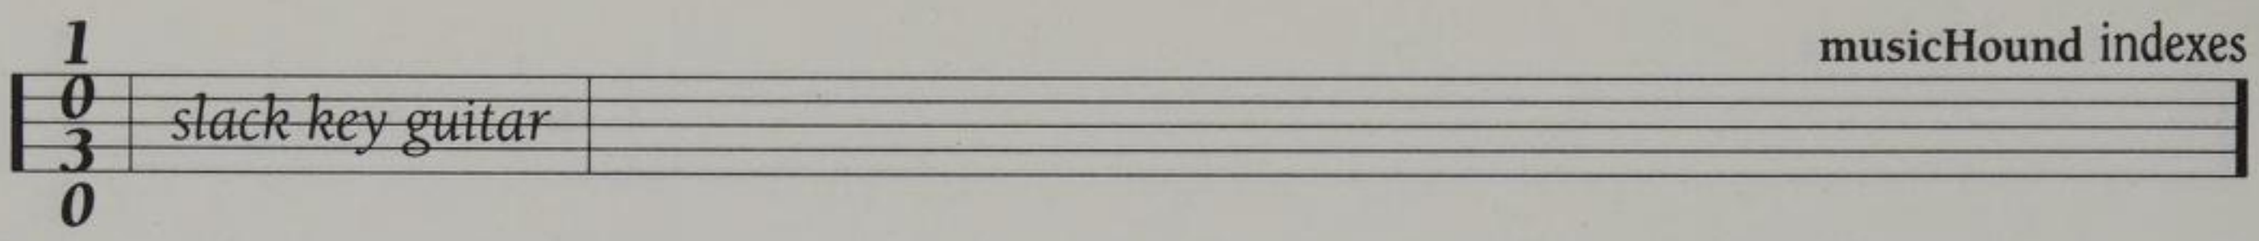
Singer-Songwriters
Eric Andersen
Dan Bern
Tony Bird
Eric Bogle
Billy Bragg
Chuck Brodsky
Greg Brown
Jackson Browne
Andrew Calhoun
Guy Carawan
Harry Chapin
Tom Chapin
Mary Chapin Carpenter
Tracy Chapman
Guy Clark
Leonard Cohen
Lui Collins
Jim Croce
Catie Curtis
Julian Dawson
Ani DiFranco
Anne Dodson
Bob Dylan
Fred Eaglesmith
Cliff Eberhardt
Kat Eggleston
Jason Eklund
Betty Elders
Stephen Fearing
Ferron
Steve Forbert
Bob Franke
Tret Fure
Jon Gailmor
Annie Gallup
Steve Goodman
John Gorka
Greg Greenway
Patty Griffin
Grace Griffith
Nanci Griffith
Kristin Hall
Tim Hardin
Jack Hardy
Bill Harley
John Hartford
Margo Hennebach
Sara Hickman
Anne Hills
Janis Ian
Michael Jerling
Jewel
Si Kahn
Cindy Kallet
Lucy Kaplansky
James Keelaghan
Kris Kristofferson
Patty Larkin
Christine Lavin
Larry Long
Rod MacDonald
Dougie MacLean
Kate MacLeod
David Mallett
David Massengill
Kimberly M'Carver
Joni Mitchell
Katy Moffatt
Buddy Mondlock
Bill Morrissey
Pete Morton
Peter Mulvey
Lee Murdock
Elliott Murphy
Carrie Newcomer
Randy Newman
Laura Nyro
Phil Ochs
David Olney
Kristina Olsen
Deb Pasternak
Ellis Paul
Pierce Pettis
Bruce U. "Utah" Phillips
Tom Prasada-Rao
John Prine
Willis Alan Ramsey
David Rea
Gamble Rogers
Garnet Rogers
Stan Rogers
Les Sampou
Tommy Sands
Maria Sangiolo
Claudia Schmidt
Carla Sciaky
Martin Sexton
Cosy Sheridan
Richard Shindell
Michelle Shocked
Jon Sholle
Jane Siberry
Paul Siebel
Dick Siegel



Paul Simon
Fred Small
Judy Small
Darden Smith
Michael Smith
Rosalie Sorrels
Jeanie Stahl
Bill Staines
James Taylor
Livingston Taylor
Townes Van Zandt
Suzanne Vega
Eric Von Schmidt
Jane Voss
Loudon Wainwright
Sloan Wainwright
Jerry Jeff Walker
Kate Wallace
Linda Waterfall
Gillian Welch
Paula Joy Welter
Susan Werner
Camille West
Cheryl Wheeler
Erica Wheeler
David Wilcox
Dar Williams
Lucinda Williams
Victoria Williams
Cris Williamson
Kate Wolf

Slack Key Guitar
Keola Beamer
Sonny Chillingworth
Hui Ohana
George Kahumoku
Moses Kahumoku
Rev. Dennis Kamakahi
Raymond Kane
Ozzie Kotani
George Kuo
Leonard Kwan
Gabby Pahinui
Pahinui Brothers

Tactile Sensations
Kinky Friedman
Fuzzy Mountain String Band
Furry Lewis

Tejano
Flaco Jimenez

That's Amore
Amazing Rhythm Aces
Love
Laura Love
Lyle Lovett
Lovin' Spoonful
Nightnoise
Ranch Romance
Sweethearts of the Rodeo

Tin Whistle
Mary Bergin
Joanie Madden

Topographical Features
Noel Hill
Anne Hills
Patrick Sky

Travelling People
Freight Hoppers
Hobo Jim

Unclothed?
Bare Necessities
Mason Daring
John Lee Hooker
Nudes
Buffy Sainte-Marie

Weather Phenomena
Lightnin' Hopkins

Western Swing
Milton Brown
Bob Wills

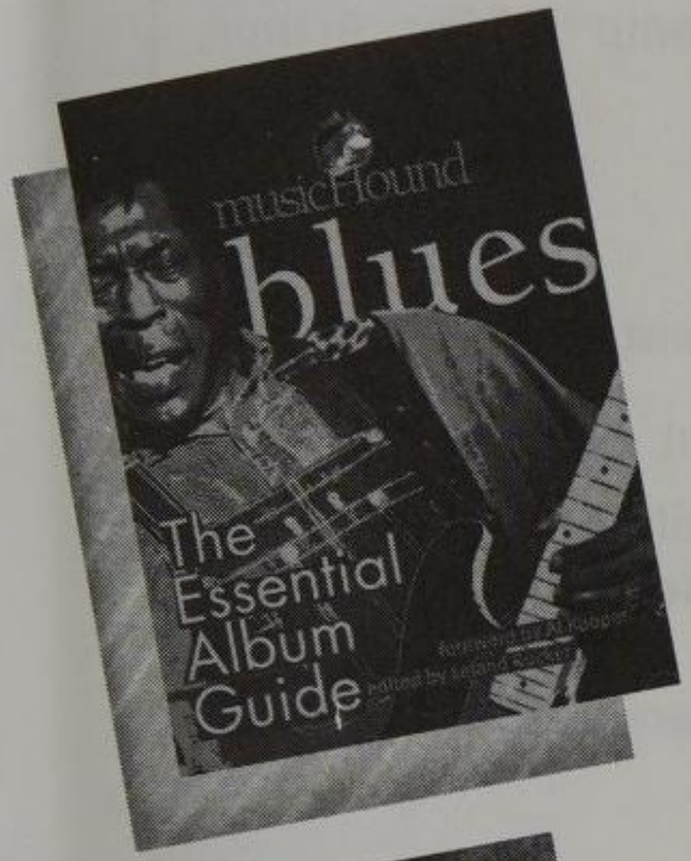
What's That Sound?
Vince Bell
Delia Bell & Bill Grant
Jim Ringer

Where's the Restroom?
Kristin Hall
Tom T. Hall
Rooftop Singers

Who's Driving?
Asleep at the Wheel
Judy Austin
Keola Beamer
Crosby, Stills, Nash and Young
Bill Harley
Van Morrison
Cheryl Wheeler
Erica Wheeler

Wild Things
Acousticats
Duck Baker
Tony Bird
Bluegrass Cardinals
Boiled Buzzards
Buffalo Springfield
The Byrds
Snake Chapman
Chicken Chokers
Country Joe and the Fish
J.D. Crowe
Nick Drake
The Eagles
Joe Falcon and Cleoma Breaux
Patty Griffin
Horseflies
Hot Tuna
Spider John Koerner
Magpie
Mr. Fox/Bob Pegg
Old Blind Dogs
Oyster Band
Primitive Characters
Rhythm Rats
Butch Robins
The Roches
Salamander Crossing
Seals and Crofts
Skylark
Cat Stevens
Trout Fishing in America
Kitty Wells
Kate Wolf
Wolfstone

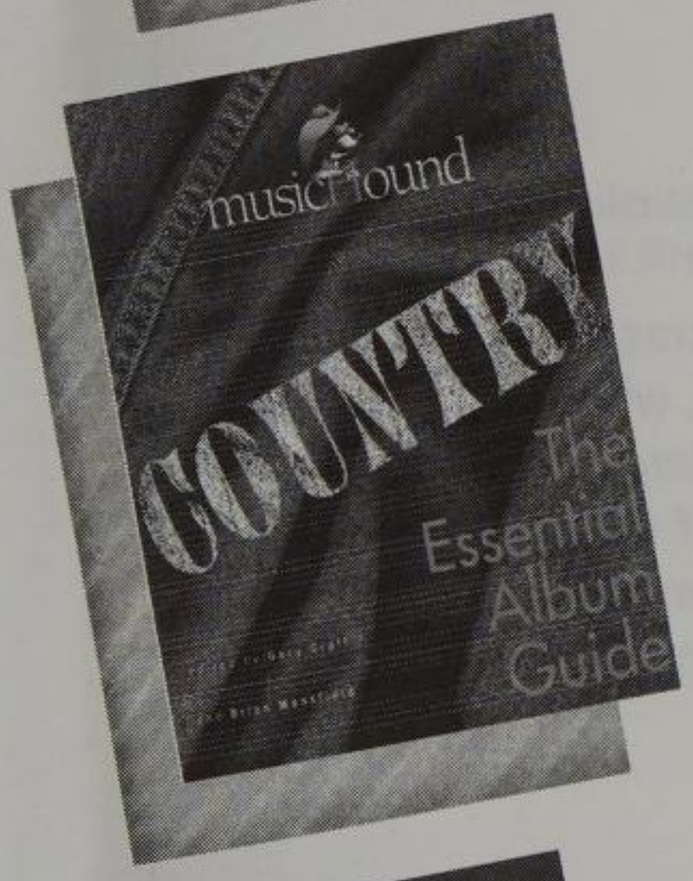
Attention, Music Lovers:
We've got what you need



MUSICHOUND™ BLUES
The Essential Album Guide

Finally, an easy way to learn about the people who sing the blues. In this extensive guide, you'll discover 600 essays, 100 amazing photos and thousands of recording reviews on hot blues artists. Get hip to the distinctive sounds of Mississippi, East Texas, Chicago, New Orleans and the West Coast. Leland Rucker and a team of experts will show you the way to all this and more in this comprehensive guide to performers of acoustic and electric blues. And you'll enjoy listening to the free sampler CD from the House of Blues, too.

Leland Rucker • 1998 • Paperback with music CD • 511 pages
ISBN 1-57859-030-2



MUSICHOUND™ COUNTRY
The Essential Album Guide

Kick up your heels and read about some of the hottest country stars around with MusicHound Country. Open the pages of this colossal guide and discover biographies, reviews and recommendations on nearly 1,000 individual artists and groups. With Brian Mansfield and Gary Graff leading the way, we'll tell you what to buy – and why. You'll enjoy listening to the complimentary CD sampler from Mercury Nashville featuring Kathy Mattea, Harley Allen, Kim Richey and John and Audrey Wiggins.

Brian Mansfield and Gary Graff • 1997 • Paperback with music CD • 642 pages
ISBN 1-57859-006-X

MUSIC FESTIVALS
From Bach to Blues

If you're planning a vacation or simply want to find a music festival close to home, let music-loving travel hound Tom Clynes be your guide. Discover more than 1,000 music festivals from New England to the West Coast and from Nova Scotia to British Columbia with this guide to some of the biggest and best festivals around.

Tom Clynes • 1996 • Paperback • 632 pages
ISBN 0-7876-0823-8

Available at fine bookstores everywhere, or in the U.S. call 1-800-776-6265

VISIBLE INK PRESS

FREE MUSIC from Rounder Records

You'll Get No More of Me

Hazel Dickens

(Hazel Dickens/Happy Valley Music, BMI)
From A Few Old Memories (ROUN 11529)

Hazel says she came across the line "you get no more of me" in a 17th-century poem. The phrase jumped out at her, and she later wrote this song around it. She explains that in some relationships, even after one person leaves, they continue to take, and often end up taking much more than they leave behind.

Shortening Bread

The Freight Hoppers

(traditional)
From Waiting on the Gravy Train (ROUN 0433)

"'Shortnin' Bread' has been a popular melody in the south for longer than anybody can remember. This version was influenced mainly by Georgia string bands who were recording in the 1920s."—bandmember Frank Lee

J'ai Vu le Loup, le Renard et la Belette

Balfa Toujours

(traditional, arranged by Dewey Balfa)
From Deux Voyages (ROUN 6071)

The Balfa Brothers "Cajunized" this track after hearing it performed in virtually every small community they visited in France in the early 1970s. Here, Christine Balfa and band perform the song from their debut Rounder recording.

Reel Béatrice

Natalie MacMaster

(traditional)
From No Boundaries (ROUN 7023)

This track features two reels—"Béatrice (Oggi Nevica)," which Natalie learned from Baltimore fiddler Jesse Smith, and "Seán sa Chéo," a well-known Irish reel that she learned from Cheticamp fiddler Arthur Muise.

75 Septembers

Cheryl Wheeler

(Cheryl Wheeler/Amachrist Music—Penrod & Higgins Music, ASCAP)
From Driving Home (PHIL 1152)

From Cheryl's 1993 Philo debut, this track was written for her father's 75th birthday. It features guitarist John Jennings, as well as backing vocals from Mary Chapin Carpenter and Jonathan Edwards.

These Cold Fingers

Bill Morrissey

(Bill Morrissey/Dry Fly Music, BMI)
From Standing Eight (PHIL 1123)

This is the closing track on Bill's third album, Standing Eight, which was hailed as a masterpiece by Rolling Stone and introduced him to legions of new fans. The song, with Morrissey's trademark slice-of-life grittiness and pathos, lingers long after the final notes.

Common Bond

The Kennedys

(Pete & Maura Kennedy/1998 Cherry Log Music/Cherry River Music, BMI)
From Angel Fire (PHIL 1211)

"Written during a teaching residency at Manhattanville College, this song was inspired by the writings of playwright and Czech president, Václav Havel, probably the only world leader who really is an unashamed idealist. We can dig that."
—Pete & Maura Kennedy

Cover photo of Pete Seeger ©UPI/Corbis-Bettmann

folk

"Look up artists you know and love, follow their influences and inspirations back and forth. It won't be long before it becomes impossible to explain folk music with a single artist or style again. And not much longer before you'll be giddy with all the possibilities."

—Mark D. Moss,

Sing Out!* magazine

Music/Folk/CD Guides
ISBN 1-57859-037-X
$24.95 U.S.

It's finally here! The only comprehensive guide to folk music available today.

Whether you're a serious fan of folk music or just starting your collection, MusicHound™ Folk is sure to satisfy. You'll appreciate unabashed reviews and sound advice on what to buy and what to avoid.

And in classic MusicHound style, all 1,200 profiles are packed with interesting facts and strong opinions. Read about folk legends and lesser-known—but equally talented—performers. The Hound examines traditional American folk music as well as Cajun, Celtic, alternative folk, English, old time, bluegrass and much more. Artists include:

Altan • Beausoleil • Dan Bern • Billy Bragg • Greg Brown • Mary Chapin Carpenter • Tracy Chapman • Cherish the Ladies • Leonard Cohen • Judy Collins • Shawn Colvin • Ry Cooder • Bob Dylan • Fred Eaglesmith • Steve Earle • Fairport Convention • Steve Goodman • John Gorka • Nanci Griffith • Martin Hayes • Michael Hedges • Kingston Trio • The Klezmatics • Patty Larkin • Christine Lavin • Gordon Lightfoot • Kate and Anna McGarrigle • Bill Miller • Christy Moore • Phil Ochs • Patrick Street • Tom Paxton • John Prine • Gamble Rogers • Stan Rogers • Pete Seeger • Michael Smith • Solas • Jay Ungar and Molly Mason • Townes Van Zandt • Loudon Wainwright III • Dar Williams and more than 1,100 additional artists!

Check out the resource section packed with information on folk music publications, Web sites, record labels, radio stations and festivals. Listen to the free sampler CD from Rounder Records, a world premier folk label.

Neal Walters has been a folk music performer, teacher and collector for nearly 30 years. He writes a review column for the Dulcimer Player's News and recently co-published 30 Old Time Songs for Mountain Dulcimer and Autoharp.

Brian Mansfield is the co-editor of Visible Ink's MusicHound™ Country. His work also appears in USA Today, Country America and other publications.

MUSICHOUND MEANS NEVER SINGING THE "CAN'T-BELIEVE-I-BOUGHT-THAT-CD BLUES" AGAIN.

FREE CD sampler from ROUNDER RECORDS

MUSICHOUND FOLK: TH 32727 781.62